The J. F. Davis Drug Company.

The wholesale drug business owned by the J. F. Davis Drug Company was commenced about the year 1844 by Drs. Shackelford and Andrew Crichton, on Front Street, below Jefferson. Here they did business until about the year 1849, when they moved to 123 West Front Street, where they and their successors have conducted business ever since. Daniel R. Spry was employed by them as clerk in 1851. In 1856 Andrew Crichton sold out to Mr. Spry, and the firm name was known as Shackelford and Spry. In 1861 Mr. Spry sold out to Shackelford & Son, who composed the firm until 1867, when they sold out to the firm of Bartram, Jones & Company, which conducted the business until April, 1869, when J. W. Ricker bought out all partners except Mr. David Jones. The firm then became Ricker & Jones. They continued the business until August, 1873, when Mr. Ricker sold out to Dr. J. F. Davis, and the firm became Davis & Jones until the fall of 1876. Then Dr. Davis bought Mr. Jones out and became sole owner and conducted the business successfully until July 12, 1895, when he organized a stock company, known as the J. F. Davis Drug Company. The incorporators were: Dr. J. F. Davis, J. J. Brandel, William Brandel, J. H. Holman, and W. K. Dupre, who were elected Directors of the firm for one year, and they elected the following officers: J. F. Davis, President and General Manager; J. J. Brandel, Vice President; J. H. Holman, Secretary and Treasurer. They held these offices until March 10, 1900, when Dr. Davis sold out. Simon Labold was elected Director in place of Dr. Davis, and the following officers were then chosen: W. K. Dupre, President; William Brandel, Vice President; J. J. Brandel, General Manager. J. H. Holman remained as Secretary and Treasurer. J. H. Holman died July 8, 1901, and W. K. Dupre took his place. On August 5, 1901, J. J. Brandel, William Brandel, S. Labold, J. W. Bannon, and W. K. Dupre were elected as Directors, and they elected the following officers: J. J. Brandel, President and General Manager; William Brandel, Vice President, and W. K. Dupre, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Gilbert Grocery Company.

The wholesale grocery business was established originally in 1832 by Martin B. Gilbert, who opened up at 167 West Front Street. He conducted the business until his death in November 1887. A month later the firm of M. B. Gilbert & Co. was organized, composed of M. B. Gilbert, George Appel and George A. Goodman. Messrs. Appel and Goodman themselves began at the bottom. Mr. Appel entered the house in May, 1878. Mr. Goodman followed him in April, 1881. Mr. Appel filled every position in the house. In 1883 he became the book-keeper and credit man. On the death of Mr. Gilbert, he took his place, and is the head of the business. Mr. Goodman has filled every position in the house from the lowest, until now he is the Assistant Manager. In November, 1890, the Company bought out and succeeded in the business of Damarin & Co., one of the oldest firms in Ohio. Then it moved to 199, 201 and 203 West Front Street. From there it removed in 1898 to 50, 52 and 54 West Second Street, into a four-story building, erected expressly for its own use, with all the modern facilities for the transaction of business. It is sixty feet front by one hundred and twenty-three feet deep. The officers of the Company are: George Appel, President; George A. Goodman, Vice President; John Bauer, Secretary. The Directors are: W. M. Briggs, Mrs. M. B. Gilbert, George Appel and George A. Goodman. It was incorporated January 1, 1900.

MANUFACTORIES.

As there were no newspapers published in Portsmouth prior to August 5, 1818, any manufacturing before that time was a matter of tradition.

The following list is made up from the newspapers of the town and city:

Those advertising in 1818 were: Benjamin Melcher and Peter Kehoe, boot and shoe makers; Parker and McCloud, carriage and wagon makers; Josiah Shackford, Daniel Corson, Wilson Gates, George Clark, John H. Thornton, James Abbott and A. G. Sergeant, flour mills, and James Salisbury, saddler and harness maker.

There were two shoe factories in Portsmouth at this time, and they used two hundred thousand boxes per year. Yeager & Anderson established their flour mills in Portsmouth.

March 30, 1887, the Spring Lane Distillery Company began business, with a capital stock of $50,000.

SHOE FACTORIES.

The Drew-Selby Company.

This company is successor to the firm of Drew, Selby and Company, which was organized January 1, 1880. It was composed of Irving Drew, George D. Selby and Bernard Damon. The capital was small originally. The members of the firm saved their salaries and put in outside means as their business grew and required increase. The Company began manufacturing in the Huston Stone Front, on Second Street. In the first year the Company had 50 people employed and turned out 100 pairs of misses' and women's shoes per day. The next move was to the northeast corner of Third and Gay Streets, in 1881. The Company put in the first power plant in Portsmouth for the manufacture of shoes. Before that all the machines were operated by foot or hand power. Bernard Damon retired from the firm in 1883. The firm remained at Third and Gay for ten years, until 1891. The building on Third and Gay was leased of G. B. Millar. The firm erected a factory at Seventh and John Streets, 100 by 165, exclusive of boiler-room, two stories high. An addition was made in 1895, covering 78 by 127 feet, three stories and basement. In 1898 the original plant was raised one story and a new part added, 50 by 150, three stories and basement. In 1897 and 1899, Drew, Selby & Company erected for the Excelsior Shoe Company a building 50 by 245, four stories and basement and furnishes power, light and heat to them. The firm name has not changed, but the following members, J. M. Graham, William W. Gates, Jr., and Pearl E. Selby, were admitted as members of the firm in 1892, and have since remained. The Company is now doing a business of over $2,000,000 annually. The first year it was $70,000. The capital is ample to handle the business in the most economical and practical way. The number of persons employed is 1,400. The weekly pay is $12,000, including the workmen, office force and salesmen. The firm claims its output is the largest of any factory, selling its entire product directly to the retail dealer. The members of this firm claim that their uniform success and steady progress has been due most largely to maintaining the same proportionate cost and the same selling prices to all on their goods and treating all customers alike. The firm has grown until its business is the largest manufacturing or mercantile which has ever been established in Portsmouth.

The Drew-Selby Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio, succeeded Drew, Selby & Company, the firm, on April 14, 1902. The authorized capital of the new firm is $1,000,000. The paid-up capital stock is $700,000. There was a satisfactory adjustment of the interests of Irving Drew and George D. Selby, whereby George D. Selby acquired a controlling interest and became President and General Manager of the Company, with Irving Drew as First Vice President. The other officers and Directors of the Company are: S. P. Selby, Second Vice President; Mark W. Selby, Secretary; Jared J. Rardin, Treasurer; P. E. Selby, Superintendent, and with James W. Bannon, Director, constitute the Board of Directors.

The Excelsior Shoe Company

was organized March, 1889. The first officers were: F. D. Euth, President; W. G. Williams, Vice President; A. T. Holcomb, Secretary; J. E. Williams, General Manager and Treasurer. The original and authorized capital of the Company was $10,000. The present paid-up capital stock is $150,000. It employs 800 persons, who turn out 2,500 pair of men's, boys' and youths' shoes per day. It does an annual business of over $1,000,000, and its weekly pay-roll averages $5,000. The present officers are: D. C. Davies, President; W. G. Williams, Vice President; D. C. Williams, Secretary and Treasurer; J. E. Williams, Manager. Its plant is located on Findlay and Gallia Streets.

The Heer Shoe Company

was organized in May, 1897. The first officers were: Tracy B. Johnson, President; John Jones, Vice President; Chris. Heer, Secretary Treasurer and General Manager. The original and authorized capital was $20,000. The present paid-up capital is $100,000. This Company employs between 350 and 400 persons, and makes 2,000 pairs of shoes per day. They make ladies' and misses' medium and fine shoes. The weekly pay-roll averages from $2,500 to $3,000. The present officers are: Chris. Heer, President and General Manager; L. D. York, Vice President, and H. W. Heer, Secretary and Treasurer. It does an annual business of $500,000. Its plant is situated on Tenth and Lincoln Streets and Hutchins Avenue.

The Portsmouth Shoe Company

was organized in March, 1898. The original and authorized capital was $25,000. The first officers were: F. V. Knauss, President; B. F. Richardson, Vice President; George M. Appel, Treasurer, and C. F. Kendall, Secretary. The present officers are: F. V. Knauss, President; A. T. Holcomb, Vice President; George M. Appel, Treasurer, and C. F. Kendall, Secretary. The present capital, paid-up, is $25,000. The 175 persons employed turn out 900 pairs of infants', children's and misses' shoes per day. The average weekly pay-roll is $900. This Company does an annual business of $200,000. Its plant is located at 127 West Front Street.

The Irving Drew Company

This company is the successor to the Star Shoe Company, which was organized January 16, 1894, succeeding to the business of Titus, Heer and Company, which firm had commenced to manufacture children's shoes in May of the previous year, in what was known as the Gaylor Rolling Mill Store Building, near the corner of Washington and Front Streets. Those composing the firm of Titus, Heer & Company were Dr. A. Titus, Mrs. M. A. Titus, S. O.

Tim and Chris Heer. They had purchased the outfit for making children's shoes from J. S. Sear & Company as the latter business had grown so large they were willing to dispose of this branch of it.

The first Directors of The Star Shoe Company were: J. J. Rardin, President; S. O. Titt, Secretary-Treasurer and General Manager; Charles E. Vice President; A. Titt and Irving Brown. These, with Mrs. M. A. Titt and George D. Selby, were the stockholders.

The Company continued to do business in the same place till the summer or fall of 1896, when it purchased the Padan Brothers' plant, 107 West Front Street and moved into it, which they have enlarged and have been doing a large increased business.

When the firm of Drew, Selby & Company was changed into a corporation, in April, 1902, Mr. Irving Drew sold enough of his stock to give Mr. George D. Selby a controlling interest, and has since been less active in the management of The Drew-Selby Company, although still holding a large financial interest there.

Mr. Drew at once purchased The Star Shoe Company, changed its name to The Irving Drew Company, and became its President, with W. S. Kennedy, Vice President; R. I. Drew, Secretary, and W. W. Gates, Jr., Treasurer, who, with L. T. Spencer, compose the Board of Directors and are the present owners of the business which they are reorganizing to produce another line of ladies' shoes, for which Portsmouth has become so well known, and in which the President of this Company, Irving Drew, has been so prominently and successfully connected.

RELICS OF BARBARISM.

Fugitive Slave Notices.

These were usually headed "Runaway Slaves," and had a rough cut of a Negro, with a stick across his shoulder and a bundle at the end of the stick, in the act of running. The bloodhounds and the human dogs, who made a business of hunting the poor creatures, were not inserted in the picture. The following notices are all of the kind, thank God, which ever appeared in the Portsmouth newspapers.

Scioto being a border county, left the curse of slavery overshadowing it. The fugitive slaves were advertised in the Portsmouth papers. The first newspaper in Scioto County appeared on August 5, 1818.

The first notice of a runaway slave appeared in the Scioto Telegraph, of April 4, 1820. Thomas B. King advertised a runaway Negro from his place four miles above Portsmouth. The slave's name was Gabriel, and he was twenty-one years of age. A reward of $50 was offered.

On June 22, 1826, Tignal Wommick advertised a Negro man named Daniel, and a description was given.

On December 14, 1826, Joseph George and James Bailey advertised three negro men, Jack, Peter and Nelson, and gave a description of each. A reward of $300 was offered.

On January, 1828, John Aills, by John Halbert, offered $20 reward for two Negroes, one a woman, Hannah, aged twenty-five years, and her son; six years of age. "They were at the McCoy's Tavern, at Portsmouth, last evening" states the advertisement.

August 25, 1831, H. Blake offered a reward of $50 for a negro boy, Edward Ringo, 18 years of age, escaped from the Greenup Iron Works.

December 22, 1832, H. Blake & Co. offered a reward of $50 for a negro man named Isaac, six feet four inches high, a light mulatto, thirty-five years old. The reward was to be given if confined in the Portsmouth or Chillicothe jail.

On November 18, 1836, $50 reward was offered by James Martin for a negro man named William Scott. The claimant was James Martin, of Saline County, Missouri.

On May 20, 1837, $100 reward was offered for a negro man, Jim, who was twenty-five years old, six feet high, and could read and write. The advertisement was signed John Todd.

August 28, 1837, Anderson Woodford, a negro man twenty years of age, broke jail at Paris, Kentucky. Fifty dollars reward was offered for him by Shreve, Pauli & Co.

September 3, 1846, Nat Morton advertised a black boy, Sam, nineteen years of age, five feet nine inches high, who had but one eye. One hundred dollars reward was offered.

January 16, 1852, John Wollman, of Catlettsburg, Kentucky, offered $100 reward for a negro man, Ben, thirty years of age, and five feet ten inches high etc.

The last three of these odious advertisements appeared January 2, 1855. One hundred dollars reward for George, the property of Mrs. Hannah Parker. He was twenty years of age and five feet seven inches high. The notice was signed by Moses McCoy, Greenup, Kentucky, whom, it appears, was a minister of the Christian Church, and a man of the highest character.

A Black Friday.

On January 21, 1830, all the colored people in Portsmouth were forcibly deported from the town. They were not only warned out, but they were driven out. They were forced to leave their homes and belongings.

Between one hundred and two hundred householders had signed a paper to the effect that they would not employ any black person who had not complied with the law.

The town authorities had been worked up to the point of agreeing to enforce the savage and brutal "Black Laws" of Ohio. The law referred to had been passed January 19, 1804 (Chase, Volume 1, 393). It forbade any black or mulatto person to reside in the State unless they had a certificate from the Clerk of the Court that they were free.

Any one was forbidden to hire or employ any black or mulatto person without such certificate, under penalty of $10 to $50, one-half of which went to the informer and other half to the State.

Under the law of January 25, 1807 (Chase, Volume 1, 556), no black or mulatto person was allowed to settle in the State without giving bond in $500 for good behavior and against becoming a township charge. If such bond was not given, it was the duty of the Overseer of the Poor, of the respective townships to drive them out. The harboring, employing or concealing of a Negro who had not given such a bond was $100 penalty, one-half to the informer and one half to the great State of Ohio. The same law forbade a Negro to be a witness against a white person.

Just think of it! There were over one hundred men in Portsmouth, in 1830, who determined to enforce these laws, and who did enforce them, and then attended the great Fourth of July celebration on July 4, 1831, listened to all the crimes imputed to poor, old, silly, crazy George III., and then thanked God they had never done anything as bad as that, when they had on the previous January 21, 1830, done much worse.

The editor does not know the names of the one hundred or two hundred householders in Portsmouth who signed that infamous paper, and hopes he may never know, and that the paper is destroyed. It was not published in the newspapers of that time.

As near as we can now determine, eighty black people were deported by the town authorities in 1830.

A Slave Coffle.

In about 1834 this incident occurred on the public landing, in the town of Portsmouth. It was related by Col. William E. Gilmore, of Chillicothe, Ohio, then a boy, ten years of age, on a visit to Portsmouth:

He was on the river bank and a flatboat had just landed. His attention was arrested by loud and angry cursing, accompanied by blows. Boylike, he went near to the collection of people and saw three negro men, handcuffed and tied to a rope, one negro woman and four negro men tied to a rope, but not handcuffed, and five negro girls, from twelve to fifteen years of age, following and carrying large and heavy bundles on their heads. Three white men were in charge of the party. One of a respectable appearance carried a double-barreled shotgun. The other two were the usual ruffians and white brutes who accompanied processions of this character. They each carried a horse pistol and a black-snake whip. One of the white brutes, in human form, was cruelly beating one of the handcuffed negroes over the head with the butt end of his black-snake whip, accompanying each blow with an oath. This proceeded until the one decent appearing white man in charge stopped it, saying, "That is enough this time, but if you catch him at it again, knock his damned head in," and, turning to a negro who was alongside of the one beaten, but was not one of the coffe, said, "If I catch any of you free negroes talking to my gang I will put a load of buckshot into your black hides."

This slave coffe was confined in the Portsmouth Jail that night, and until they could proceed further down the river on a boat.

This scene occurred in the beautiful, intelligent, refined and cultured city of Portsmouth only sixty-seven years since. It was all done with the sanction of the law, the organic law of the land. It occurred with the passive consent of all the citizens, and without a protest or objection. Such a scene did not occur only once. It occurred frequently, and our forefathers tolerated it as one of the compromises of the Constitution until the institution was wiped out by the blood of their sons.

THE FIRST CONVEYANCE OF LOTS.

1. The First recorded conveyance in the city of Portsmouth, Scioto County, Ohio, is that of Henry Massie, the original proprietor, to James Gilkenson. This deed reads, as did all the early deeds, "This indenture made between Henry Massie, of Scioto County, Ohio, and James Gilkenson, of the same county." The consideration was one dollar, and conveyed Lot 79, where the Tracy Shoe House now stands. The deed was made October 27, 1806. There are no witnesses to it, and the acknowledgement was made before Alexander Curran, Recorder of Scioto County. Mr. Massie had entered the lots on which Portsmouth was founded on the 29th of March, 1801, but he had never obtained a patent for them until August 4, 1806, consequently, all his sales of lots in Portsmouth, prior to the issue of the patent, were by title bond; and it seems he did not begin to make deeds until the 27th of October, 1806. No doubt, he then visited Portsmouth for that purpose and stopped at the hotel of John Brown, and a number of conveyances are acknowledged before John Brown, Justice of the Peace.

2. On the same date, October 27, 1806, Massie made a deed of indenture to Samuel Salladay. The consideration was left blank. There are no witnesses, and it was acknowledged before John Brown, Justice of the Peace.

3. On the same day he sold Outlot No. 9, near the corner of Sixth and Washington Streets, to John Gilkenson. The consideration was left blank. John Brown, Justice of the Peace, took the acknowledgement. No doubt, Gilkenson and Salladay had rendered Massie services in the laying out of the town, and the deeds were made to pay for services rendered.

4. On the same day, Massie deeded Inlot No. 272, on the south side of Second Street, east of the first alley above Scioto Street, to William Jones, the first school teacher in Portsmouth. The consideration recited was one dollar; but in reality the deed was given for services in carrying the chain in surveying the lots, when Portsmouth was surveyed prior to April, 1803. There were no witnesses to this deed, and John Brown, Justice of the Peace, took the acknowledgement.

The first four conveyances noted recite Massie to be of Scioto County.

5. On the same day, October 27, 1806, Massie conveyed Inlot No. 16 to Francis Adams, on Front Street, east of Market, where Rainey's blacksmith shop now is. Massie recites himself to be of Ross County, and the consideration is one dollar.

6. On the same day, he conveyed to Henry Sheeley for one dollar inlot No. 259 on the northwest corner of Second and Massie streets. John Brown, Justice of the Peace, took the acknowledgement, but there were no witnesses. In this Massie states himself to be of Ross County.

7. On the same day he conveyed to John McConnell inlot No. 49, on the northeast corner of Court and Front streets, now the residence of B. Augustine. The consideration was one dollar. There were no witnesses, and John Brown was the Justice of the Peace who took the acknowledgement.

8. On October 28, 1806, Henry Massie, of Ross County, for $35.00, conveyed inlot No. 34, where the Adams Express Company was so long located, now owned by the estate of Daniel McFarland, to Alexander Curran. Just after the recording of this deed is found the plat of Portsmouth, Ohio, made by Massie in 1807, in which he vacated all the inlots north of the tier, facing Second street on the north side.

9. On May 18, 1807, Henry Massie, of Ross County, conveyed inlot 17 to Josiah Shackford for $50.00. The lot is now occupied by the Portsmouth Shoe Company. No doubt he had contracted this lot to Shackford as early as 1803.

10. On May 9, 1807, Massie conveyed to Samuel Finley inlot No. 1, on the southeast corner of Front and Market streets, now occupied by the McDowell building. The consideration was $50.00; and John Hull, Justice of the Peace, of Ross County, took the acknowledgement.

The foregoing embrace the first ten conveyances made by Henry Massie in the City of Portsmouth of record in the Recorder's office of Scioto County.

On November 28, 1807, Henry Sheeley conveyed to William Huston inlot No. 20 on Third Street, now owned by the Spry family, and one walnut bureau. This was conditioned to hold Huston harmless on a certain bond, wherein Hugh Sloan was plaintiff and Henry Sheeley was defendant. The witnesses to this deed were Elizabeth Curran and Alexander Curran. John Brown, Justice of the Peace, took the acknowledgment.

All of the conveyances before recited cover whole lots, and all of the inlots conveyed were 82½ feet front by 132 feet deep. The outlots were three acres.

TOWN AND CITY ELECTIONS.

On Monday, March 15, 1816, Thomas Waller, John R. Turner and William Lodwick were the new Councilmen elected. No record of this vote has been preserved, and hereafter where no figures of the vote are given none were preserved.

On March 16, 1817, John Brown, Sr., David Gharky and William Lodwick were elected Councilmen.

On the proper day in March, 1818, no election was held, and afterward, on the 8th day of April, 1818, the six Councilmen holding over elected Nathan K. Clough, William Kendall and John Brown, Jr., Councilmen.

On March 18, 1819, Thomas Waller, William Lodwick and John R. Turner were elected Councilmen, but the fact is merely recorded.

On March 13, 1820, David Gharky, Jacob Noel and Jacob Clingman were elected Councilmen for three years.

On March 12, 1821, the election was held at the Courthouse. William Kendall, Samuel Gunn and Nathan K. Clough were elected Councilmen. There is no record of any other meetings of Council until March 11, 1822. At this time three Councilmen were elected, as was required. There were no contests. William Lodwick had 44 votes, Daniel Corwine had 40 and James B. Prescott 22, and all were declared elected.

On March 10, 1823, at the charter election of the town, Samuel M. Tracy, John Noel and Murtaugh Kehoe were elected.

On the 8th of March, 1824, there was an election held at the Courthouse between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., and three Councilmen were elected. There seemed to be no opposition. Samuel Gunn had 13 votes, Wilson Gates had 13 and Jacob Clingman had 12, and all were declared elected.

On March 14, 1825, at the corporation election for Councilmen, Ebenezer Corwine received 37 votes, William Oldfield 22 and Samuel G. Jones 20, and all were declared elected.

In the spring of 1826, the electors of the city of Portsmouth were afflicted with that tired feeling which we read about in patent medicine advertisements, and there was no election. They forgot it, or did not care sufficiently about it to attend to it.

On May 12, 1826, the hold-over members of Council elected Samuel M. Tracy, John Noel and Giles S. B. Hempstead as Councilmen.

On March 12, 1827, at the charter election, Samuel Gunn had 41 votes, Col. John McDonald 27 and James Lodwick 23. This was the first appearance of

Mr. James Lodwick in municipal affairs. He held some municipal office from that time until his death. Col. John McDonald is the author of "McDonald's Sketches," and has a separate sketch herein, as has each of the other three.

In March, 1828, there was no corporation election called or held, and on April 4, 1828, the Council elected Kennedy Lodwick, John R. Turner and William Oldfield to succeed themselves.

On March 9, 1829, John Noel, Giles S. B. Hempstead and Samuel Tracy were elected members of Council for three years.

On March 8, 1830, Jacob P. Noel, George D. H. Wilcoxon and Nathaniel W. Andrews were elected Councilmen.

On March 17, 1831, Wilson Gates, Ezra Osborne and Silas W. Cole were elected.

On March 12, 1832, Samuel M. Tracy, Giles S. B. Hempstead and William V. Peck were elected.

At the election in 1833, held on March 1, John Noel, Isaac Noel and Moses Gregory were elected Councilmen.

On March 10, 1834, Wilson Gates, Silas Cole and Havillah Gunn were elected Councilmen.

On March 9, 1835, Conrad Overturf, Mathias Ross and Peter Kinney were elected.

On March 4, 1836, R. H. Tomlin, William Waller and John R. Turner were elected Councilmen.

On March, 3, 1837, C. A. M. Damarin and Moses Gregory were elected.

On March 15, 1839, the corporation election was held by wards. N. W. Andrews was elected in the First Ward, James Lodwick and John R. Turner in the Second Ward, and John Musser in the Third Ward.

In 1840, at the city election, Edward Hamilton was re-elected Mayor, Lewis C. Parker was elected Marshal and J. V. Robinson Treasurer. The Councilmen elected were David Gharky, First Ward; Joseph Riggs, Second Ward; Moses Gregory, Third Ward.

On April 2, 1841, there was one Councilman to be elected in the First Ward, but there were two contestants. James Lodwick had 33 votes, and was elected; Thomas Lawson had 20 votes. In the Second Ward there were two Councilmen to be elected. Washington Kinney had 67 votes and Samuel J. Huston had 57 votes, and both were elected. In the Third Ward there was no election held.

On March 14, 1842, at the corporation election, Thomas Lawson had his ambition gratified. He was elected as Councilman from the First Ward without opposition. George Corwin was elected for one year from the Second Ward, and Octavius Hall for two years and Dudley Day for three years from the Third Ward.

On March 15, 1843, J. L. McVey was elected Councilman for one year, and John L. Ward for three years from the First Ward. In the Second Ward Henry Buchanan was elected for one year, Peter Kinney for two years and Edward Hamilton for three years. In the Third Ward Moses Gregory was elected. His term was not specified, but the time should have been three years.

On March 15, 1844, was the time when the town disgraced itself by electing R. H. Tomlin Mayor over Col. O. F. Moore. Tomlin had 177 votes and Col. Moore had 146. It does not appear who were elected Councilmen for this year.

On March 12, 1845, Ralph St. John was elected Town Marshal. It does not appear who were elected Councilmen.

On March 10, 1846, at the corporation election for Mayor, George Johnson had 266 votes, Isaac Kirby had 88 and R. H. Tomlin 1 vote. For Treasurer, James Lodwick had 178 votes, William Kendall had 171, John Row had 1. For Marshal, John Squires had 120 votes, R. B. Alfred 118 and Valentine Littlejohn 140.

The only record for the town election for March 8, 1847, is that John Squires was elected Town Marshal, 312 votes being cast.

At the March election, 1848, George Johnson was elected Mayor for two years. He had 372 votes, and William B. Camden had 15. James Lodwick was elected Treasurer for two years. He had 317 votes. John Squires was elected Marshal. He had 212 votes and no opposition. The names of the Councilmen are not given.

At the election March 12, 1849, John Squires was elected Town Marshal. No figures were given.

On March 11, 1850, Ben Ramsey was elected Mayor. John Squires was elected Marshal, and James Lodwick Treasurer. No figures of this vote are given.

On April 7, 1851, the following are the votes for Mayor: Benjamin Ramsey, 261 votes; James M. Ashley, 201; William Oldfield, 97. For Marshal: John Squires had no opposition. For Treasurer, George Johnson had 295 votes and John Renshaw had 256 votes. William Hall, Samuel Cole and Richard Lloyd were elected School Trustees. Here again the city made a grievous mistake. Ashley, disgusted with the want of appreciation, left and went to Toledo, where he made a national reputation. Ramsey, who was noted for naught but laziness, left the town in 1857, and oblivion has claimed him.

On April 5, 1852, at the corporation election, William Oldfield had 387 votes for Mayor and Cornelius McCoy 203. John Squires was elected Marshal without opposition. The vote on the other city offices are not given.

On April 11, 1853, the corporation election was held, but the result in vote is not given.

In 1854, no record of the election has been preserved.

In 1855, the election was an exciting one. There were two tickets, the American Reform ticket and the People's ticket. The American Reform ticket won, and the vote was as follows: For Mayor, John R. Turner had 508 votes; C. McCoy, 267; majority, 241 votes. Marshal, S. H. Boynton had 462 votes; Nelson Vigus, 317; majority, 145. Treasurer, William L. Wood had 502 votes. W. H. Huston, 284; majority, 218. Wharf-master, Thomas Burt had 505 votes, Thomas S. Currie, 283; majority, 222. Street Commissioner, Jordan Vigus, 411 votes; Robert Lewis, 368; majority, 43. Solicitor, George Turner had 460 votes; George Johnson had 320; majority, 140. Clerk of the Market, James Green had 458 votes; Conrad Baker had 207; majority, 251. Francis Cleveland was elected Councilman in the First Ward, the only candidate on the People's ticket who was elected.

There is no record of the election of 1856 to be found.

In the election of 1857, there were two tickets in the field, the Democratic ticket and the Independent. The following is a statement of the vote and the majority: Democrat, Mayor, Joseph Van Meter, 635; Independent, Jacob P. Noel, 145; majority, 490. For Marshal, Democrat, Nelson Vigus, 339; Independent, John H. J. Fryer, 290; majority, 249. For Treasurer, S. J. Huston, Democrat, 503; Independent, William Wood, 302; majority, 201. For City Solicitor, W. A. Hutchins, Democrat, 532; Independent, Henry A. Towne, 292; majority, 240.

In 1853, the candidates for Mayor were Adam Kerr, who received 309 votes, and William E. Williams, who received 280 votes. For Marshal, Nelson Vigus received 491 votes and Timothy Sullivan received 449 votes. For Treasurer, S. J. Huston received 348 and John L. Ward 483 votes. The Democrats were defeated and the Independents elected.

In 1859, the city election, there were three candidates for Mayor. Adam Kerr had 632 votes, T. J. Graham had 246 and Oliver Wood had 135 votes. For Marshal, Timothy Sullivan had 571 votes; Joseph B. Watson had 238 votes. For Street Commissioner, Nelson Vigus had 124 votes, Calvin S. Stephens 33. For City Treasurer, George Wilhelm received 588 votes and J. W. Collings 422, and W. A. Hutchins, for City Solicitor, had no opposition, and received 701 votes.

In 1860, at the city election, there were three candidates for Marshal. Timothy Sullivan had 591 votes, C. Simpson, 316; J. W. Smith, 88. For Treasurer, George Wilhelm received 542 votes; Henry Lloyd, 337; Richard Goodheart, 112.

In 1861, at the city election, for Mayor Adam Kerr received 677 votes Joseph Ashton, 425. Martin Crain, for City Solicitor had no opposition. For City Treasurer, George H. Gaffey had 583 votes; John Fawn, 531. For Marshal, there were five candidates, and the vote was as follows; Jerry Hall, 407; George W. White, 310; Uriah White, 242; Caleb Sprague, 104; Jacob Loughry, 57. For City Treasurer, there were four candidates. George Wilhelm had 543 votes; T. W. Hunter, 392; John Miller, 116; J. S. T. Vincent, 92. For Wharfmaster, there were three candidates. John N. Lodwick had 624 votes; William S. McColm, 419; John Thompson, 74. For street Commissioner, Major C. F. Reiniger had 384 votes; C. E. Rose, 218; Jordan Vigus, 168, and A. Hurt had 108 votes.

In 1862, for City Treasurer, Horace L. Chapman had 584 votes; John H. Bentley had 309. For Marshal, there were four candidates. Nelson Vigus had 527 votes; T. W. Williams, 271; James Hannahs, 71; Azel Glover, 4. There were two candidates for Wharfmaster. John N. Lodwick had 476 votes; Thomas T. Yeager had 419. For Street Commissioner, there were four candidates. Charles E. Rose had 510; Philip Hummell, 260; John Wheeler, 95; C. W. Wilson, 20.

In 1863, there were two candidates for Mayor. Adam Kerr received 555 votes; John L. Ward, 445. For Marshal, George W. White, Democrat, received 583 votes; Azel Glover, Independent, 402. For Wharfmaster, S. H. Shannon had 487 votes and Thomas T. Yeager 506. For Street Commissioner, Charles E. Rose, Democrat, had 589, and Stephen Edmunds, Union, had 381. For City Solicitor, J. W. Collings, Democrat, had 538; Henry A. Towne, Union, 433.

In 1864, at the city election, Azel Glover was the Republican candidate for Marshal against Frank Wear, Democrat. Glover received 493 votes and Wear 486. For Street Commissioner, Thomas Law, Republican, had 512 votes, and Charles E. Rose, Democrat, had 472. For Wharfmaster Thomas T. Yeager, Republican, had 619 votes, and D. S. Hall 365.

In 1865, at the city election, Adam Kerr, Democrat, received 468 votes for Mayor; John Wilson, Republican, 546; Joseph Legler, 9. For Marshal, Wm. H. Miller received 408 votes; Calvin J. Stephens, 508; John Andrews, 98. For Wharfmaster, John M. Lynn, Democrat, received 497 votes; Thomas T. Yeager, Republican, 573. For Street Commissioner, Thomas Sanders, Democrat, had 408 votes; William W. Jones, Republican, had 536. For City Solicitor, Robert N. Spry, Republican, had 551 votes; George H. Gaffey, Democrat, 468 votes.

The foregoing is the best resume of the city elections for the first fifty years of the existence of the town and city of Portsmouth. From that time on the newspapers were published regularly, and abstracts of the elections can be found in the bound volumes, and for this reason the publications of the city elections from 1865 to the present time will not be given.

The editor begs leave to call attention to the fact that the records of elections are only preserved on loose sheets of paper, and are destroyed from time to time, and the only method of preservation of the records of elections is through the bound volumes of the newspapers. There ought to be a State law requiring the city to keep a record of all elections and figures in the city election should be recorded and permanently preserved.

EARLY REMINISCENCES OF CITY AND COUNTY.

John Hatch introduced the first dray in Portsmouth. He lived on the east corner of Front and Market Streets, in a stone house, part of which was used as a jail until 1835. The jail had one dungeon and one upper room.

William Huston, Thomas Morgan and Uriah Barber were owners and commanders of keel boats. They went to Chillicothe and Circleville when the Scioto was high. They poled and warped their boats. Sanders Darby made the poles and oars.

John Brown's well was used until 1836, when a horse backed into it, and it was filled up.

The above appeared in the Portsmouth Times of September 19, 1868, under the name of "Shelawoy," who was John Gharky. "Scioto," who wrote about the same time, was Moses Gregory.

October 2, 1868—The Times: Thomas Morgan was the first wheelwright in Portsmouth.

John Simpson, father of James Simpson, was one of the first carpenters in Portsmouth. He had sons, Thomas, William and James, and daughters. His father taught school in Portsmouth in an early day. A log school house, two stories, was built on the site of the present Second School house, and it blew down. It was rebuilt one story after the storm. Richard Morecraft taught there as well as Simpson. He also taught etiquette. Joseph Wheeler taught school at Fourth and Market Streets.

Crane's Defeat was a point on the Scioto about a mile above Portsmouth, where a keel boatman named Crane attempted to take up a keel boat against a heavy current. He was poleing the boat and lost control of her, and she struck a rock and sank. Hence Crane's Defeat.

November 21, 1868—"Shelaway" (John Gharky), in The Times, says: The first cabin was built in Portsmouth in 1795.

Aaron Kinney established the first tannery in Portsmouth.

John Hatch had the first dray in Portsmouth.

Union Township was divided in 1812. Portsmouth was in it prior to that. David Gharky landed in Portsmouth in 1799.

Stephen Smith had the first ferry across the Scioto in 1805.

William Duprey kept the first ferry over the Ohio River at Portsmouth. He used a flatboat 40 feet long and 15 feet wide. Afterward he used horse power.

The first steamboat in the county was built by William Lodwick at George Herod's. The first keelboat in Portsmouth was built by Ben and John Masters. Samuel Montgomery, father of Robert Montgomery, was the first skiff builder.

John H. Thornton dug a public well in 1813, in lot No. 31. It was on Front Street in the center of Market Street.

January 2, 1869, in the Scioto Times, Moses Gregory says: The first steamboat was built by William Lodwick and was named the "Scioto Valley." She had side wheels, a single engine, and was high pressure. She was finished in the summer of 1824.

In 1829 Richard Lloyd was on Front Street, the first alley west of Massie, and afterward opened a coffee house where J. P. Wilhelm formerly had his saddle shop. In those days all groceries and dry goods houses sold liquors, and all customers were treated to whiskey and sugar.

James Lodwick had a general store. He carried on a bakery in his cellar and made soap and candles.

Colonel Peter Kinney kept a grocery and bakery where the Massie, now the Legler, House stands. Ezra Osborn would come in and lunch. Colonel Kinney kept an account of his meals and charged two cents each. When the bill was presented, amounting to several dollars, the luncheon ceased.

In 1815 there was a rivalry between Alexandria and Portsmouth as to which was best, but a flood determined it in favor of Portsmouth.

In 1819 John Smith, who was born near Boston, Mass., in 1779, and died in Portsmouth, Ohio, on July 28, 1821, the father of L. P. N. Smith, built a two-story brick where the McDowell Building now stands, but did not finish it.

From 1814 to 1820 the Scioto was navigated by keelboats. Corn was ten cents per bushel, and Isaac Johnson paid for his farm in corn at that rate.

John F. Smith kept a ferry at the mouth of the Scioto.

The Barr addition was Esquire John Brown's farm. He sold it to William Lodwick.

In 1824 the voters for Jackson for President in Portsmouth were: S. J. Huston, Aaron Kinney, Martin Funk, William Lawson, Uriah Barber, Hugh Cook and James Lodwick; no others.

Henry Sheeley was the first tailor in Portsmouth. He located on Front and Massie Streets. He opened his shop in the year 1805. He failed to get support, as each family made its own garments, and had to give up the business. He built a house and undertook to keep hotel. He sold his house and lot in the spring of 1807 to William Swords, who kept the first saddle and harness shop in Portsmouth.

July 28, 1878.—John B. Clingman was visiting in Portsmouth. His father, George W. Clingman, removed from Northumberland County, Pennsylvania to Portsmouth in 1804. He was a brother of Mrs. Aaron Kinney. The family removed in 1805 to Clingman's Hill, now the Mrs. Zaph property. At that time there was not a store, gristmill or bushel of wheat in the county, so Mr. Clingman says. His father sent to Pittsburg for a coffee mill, tea kettle and skillet. The people lived on hominy and game. A pen was built at Third and Market to trap wild turkeys. In 1825 and 1827 he collected the taxes of Scioto County, and rode to Columbus on horseback to settle with the State Treasurer. On May 1, 1828, he married Miss Sarah P. Turner, daughter of John R. Turner. He removed to Illinois in 1840, and at this date was in his seventy-sixth year.

January 14, 1879, a deer which swam the Ohio at Lawson's Run from Kentucky was shot and killed by Ambrose Heidelberg.

In November, 1833, George H. Gharky built a box on a flatboat bottom and loaded it with goods for Cincinnati merchants. He made four trips down and three back, pushing and pulling the boat along shore and tying up at night. She carried eleven tons. On her last trip he sold her for $75, or twice what she cost. Captain William Ripley was chief engineer, cook, bottle washer and mud clerk. He was a good boy to work, but once fell overboard and took the chills as a result. The dry goods Mr. Gharky handled were shipped from New York to Cleveland, and from there to Portsmouth by canal.

March 29, 1885, a series of pioneer reminiscences is begun on this date in the Portsmouth Tribune. This was No. 5. No. 4 is in the same of March 4, 1885; No. 2 in February 18, 1885; No. 1 in February 11, 1885, and No. 6 in April 15, 1885.

April 29, 1885.—In this issue of the Tribune George Ball writes a letter from California. He says in 1837 Colonel Kinney kept a livery stable in Portsmouth; that Robert Lucas' wife was Friendly Summer, a sister of Henry Summer, of Wheelersburg; of Mrs. Charles Boynton, of Mrs. Dr. Ruinels and Mrs. Robert S. Wynn.

Joseph Riggs & Co. kept a store where the Biggs House now stands. Conway & Avery had an office just above where Riggs' store stood. They afterward built Pig Iron Corner. Mr. Conway was prompt pay above everything. He would pay his men without being asked.

James Davis had three children; one daughter married a son of C. O. Tracy, and another a son of A. Bentley. He also had a son, John. He thought Samuel Tracy the ablest lawyer ever in Portsmouth. In the same article he related one of C. O. Tracy's anecdotes.

November 21, 1803.—Thomas Waller, Justice of the Peace of Union Township, fined John Meirs, a school teacher of the township, $2 for using two profane oaths. James Norris was a complainant.

Uriah Barber was bound over to keep the peace on complaint of Joseph Lucas.

May 4, 1804.—Nathan Glover, a hatter, was given two days' work on the roads for swearing. He died in 1823.

Thomas Waller's Justice of the Peace docket:

William Bennett swore in the presence of the Justice of the Peace, and was fined fifty cents.

Thomas Waller in one of his account books gave the prices of his wearing apparel. His hat cost $7.26; stockings, $2.10 per pair; shoes, $1.32; pewter buckles, $3.04; bandana handkerchief, $1.45.

In 1801 calico was from 84 cents to $1.32 per yard; gingham, $1.56; ticking, $1.08 per yard; linen handkerchiefs, $1.44; cotton hose, $2.52; worsted, $2.10, and raw silk, $4.32 per pair.

John Quincy Adams visited Portsmouth in 1843. It was arranged to have him stop off the "Ben Franklin No. 6" and make a brief address. The schools were given a half holiday. The scholars were formed in procession and marched to Bigelow Chapel, on Second Street. It was about 4 p. m. when he arrived in the church. A cannon on the boat announced his coming. Mr. Adams made an address in the chapel and shook hands with each of the school children as they passed out. He left the chapel in the rain and was escorted to the boat with a brass band and a procession. The boat fired her cannon opposite Court Street.

September 10, 1887.—John Gharky in The Times:

William Carey was elected Sheriff in 1824. He was a candidate for re-election in 1826, but died just before the election. Moses Gregory defeated Washington Clingman for the office.

The sons of four or five of the principal citizens stole bee hives and Samuel M. Tracy prosecuted them. Their fathers and friends brought out Ransom Odle against him and ran him for Prosecuting Attorney. He made a living by digging roots for the druggists, and he sometimes preached on the streets.

June 2, 1888.—Times: James Emmitt brought the first canal boat to Portsmouth in the fall of 1832. It was called the "Governor Worthington." It came only to the Union Mills, as that was before the canal was opened for traffic.

November 30, 1889.—In 1825 squirrels were so plentiful they were a nuisance and a curse. Hunts were made to destroy them. Usually a day was set apart and everybody went. The party was divided into two sides and captains chosen. Each captain selected a man till all were chosen. Then each party tried to kill the most squirrels. At a fixed hour the two sides met and compared their game. In the grand hunt, in 1825, William Dailey was captain of one side and Colonel John McDonald, author of "McDonald's Sketches," of the other. When the sides met and compared notes they were even, but one hunter on the Dailey side was out. It was Washington Kinney. He was hailed and reported one black squirrel. That gave the championship to the Dailey side. That night they had a great feast in a frame building, where the Biggs House now stands, and egg-nogg was free.

December 14, 1889.—The Gaylord Rolling Mill was built in 1832 by Glover, Noel & Company. It was the first west of Pittsburg. John Glover, John Noel, ——— Greenough, Basil Waring and others were in the firm. Thomas Lewis, father of T. C. Lewis, who lived at Third and Washington Streets, was the contractor. He came from Fayette County, Pennsylvania. The castings were made by William Maddock at the old foundry at the corner of Fourth and Chillicothe Streets. Henry Westwood, Sr., and Henry Westwood, Jr., were the first two rollers. Thomas Thomas was the first heater. The mill not only made bar iron, but nails as well. The engine was put up by Brenneman, a Pittsburg man. When the flywheel was started, being made on sections of wood and iron, it flew to pieces, but no one was hurt. The company failed in 1837, and Thomas Gaylord, then of Maysville, Kentucky, bought it. He gave for it a lot of mountain land in Pennsylvania, a stock of queensware at Maysville, and a four-horse wagon load of maps of the United States. He paid no money, because he had none. Mr. Gaylord was a plunger, with any amount of nerve, and never hesitated at a venture. The purchasers of the land he traded brought suit to annul the contract, on the ground that the lands were worthless, but the suit came to nothing. Afterward the lands were found to be in the oil belt, and were very valuable, but their value was not discovered until after Gaylord's purchasers had parted with them. Thomas G. Gaylord greatly improved the mill. New boilers were put in. The old-fashioned knobbling furnaces gave place to the modern puddling furnaces, and the hammers gave way to rolls. In 1889 Thomas G. Gaylord gave his son, Thomas Gaylord, a resident of Louisville, a one-fourth interest, and promised him another fourth as soon as he could pay for it, which he soon did. Benjamin B. Gaylord, a cousin of Thomas G., was taken into the concern, and soon made his personality felt. He developed wonderful talents for the business, and under his management it prospered as it has never before or since. Mr. Gaylord took the contract to make gunboat iron during the war, and made a great deal of money at it. When Benjamin B. Gaylord's health began to fail Jared B. Green was put in charge, and he made inferior iron, and the concern went into bankruptcy. After Mr. Green's failure Mr. Lewis, of Pittsburg; John G. Peebles, John T. Terry and J. Scott Peebles ran the mill for a while.

The first towboat which ever passed Portsmouth was the "Condor," built by the Pomeroy Coal Company, in 1835. This was the first steamboat on the Ohio River used for towing coal. Pittsburg coal was not sent down the Ohio River by steamboats until 1845. The "Walter Forward" was the first steamboat to tow coal from Pittsburg.

Doctor George B. Crane located at Lucasville, Ohio, in 1832. He paid $1.50 a week for board and stable room. He bought a horse of a son of Doctor Waller for $50. He bought corn for his horse at 62½ cents per barrel, five bushels to the barrel. Corn was then eight cents per bushel, in quantities. When he rode to Portsmouth his dinner and horse feed cost him 37½ cents. A Doctor Kendall was then in Concord (Wheelersburg). He left in 1833, and Doctor Crane located there. Doctor Belnap was at Franklin Furnace, but was dissipated. He was an excellent physician and a good friend to Doctor Crane, but killed himself by the drink habit. Doctor Crane lived in Wheelersburg, or Concord, from November, 1833, to November, 1835.

THE OHIO RIVER.

On November 8, 1839, the Ohio River was very low and had been for a month.

On March 19, 1846, the river was at the top of its banks.

On April 22, 1846, the Ohio was four feet at the stage.

On June 4, 1840, it was measured by B. F. Conway, R. Arthurs and J. Murfin. The following are its measurements: From the curbstone to the water's edge, 256 feet; water's edge to water's edge, 990 feet; water's edge to the foot of the Kentucky bank, 162 feet; from the foot to the top of the Kentucky bank, 30 feet. This made a total of 1438 feet.

On February 5, 1855, it was measured by B. F. Conway, J. Tetlow and J. Hurd: From the curb to the water's edge, 312 feet; water's edge to water's edge, 1031 feet; from the water's edge to the foot of the Kentucky bank, 192 feet; from the foot to the top of the Kentucky bank, 36 feet. Total, 1573 feet.

Difference in wash of banks, 135 feet.

On February 11, 1857, the river had been closed with ice for some weeks. The ice gave way and began to run.

On February 21, 1859, the river was 52 feet above low water. Some facts: Pittsburg to Cairo, 520 miles; slope on north side, 140 miles wide; on the south side, 200 miles wide; 70,000 square miles drained on the north and 100,000 on the south. The valley of the Allegheny, 30,000 square miles drained. Kanawha River rises on the western slope of Blue Ridge and cuts through the Alleghenies. Winter floods usually forty to forty-eight feet above low water. May floods usually thirty to thirty-five feet above low water. Extraordinary floods are fifty to sixty feet above low water. On April 15, 1815, river was fifty-eight feet above low water. February, 1832, it was sixty-three feet. December, 1847, it was sixty-two feet. The highest land in Portsmouth is sixty-eight feet above low water, averaging 60 feet. Seventy feet may be considered the highest possible rise, with one chance in a thousand above that.

At this date, February 21, 1859, 21,000,000 cubic feet of water, weighing 500,000 tons, and moving with the energy of 100,000-horse power, was passing Portsmouth. Current at flood, four miles an hour; at low water, two miles an hour. Fall from Pittsburg to Portsmouth, 400 feet, or five inches to the mile. Marietta to Portsmouth, six inches to the mile; Portsmouth to Cincinnati, four inches. Low water at Portsmouth is ninety-eight feet below Marietta, ninety-six feet below Lake Erie and 432 feet above the sea level.

February 18, 1860, Judge Collings had a watercraft law for collection of claims passed.

September 23, 1859, wharfboat was being completed by Croker & Roxby. It was for Captain J. N. Lodwick.

October 2, 1861, there was a sudden rise in the Ohio, twenty-four feet in twenty-four hours. The corn in the bottoms was destroyed.

January 22, 1862, the river was three to five feet deep in Slabtown, in the Gaylord Mill and over parts of Third Street.

July 6, 1864, very heavy ice was running and navigation about closed.

January 27, 1864, the river opened up.

May 25, 1864, the Scioto bottoms were covered with water, three to ten feet, for one week.

December 21, 1864, Yeager & McColm had a new wharfboat.

January 8, 1865, the river was full of floating ice, and there was skating on the backwaters.

March 8, 1865, Mill Street was submerged. Also, the south side of Third Street.

May 3, 1865, Mr. Hunt's new ferry boat began to run.

February 2, 1867, the Ohio River was closed by ice from the last of December, 1866, to this date.

December 30, 1876, the river was closed up with ice at Portsmouth.

January 9, 1877, the ice broke and at once gorged again below town.

January 3, 1879, the river was closed with ice. Teams were crossing on the ice.

January 11, 1879, the river opened. Many barges were lost.

January 6, 1881, the ice broke at Portsmouth. Losses, $30,000, among which was the S. B., "Eldorado."

The Bonanza Bar.

Charles Barton, J. F. Towell, Philip Kelley, Sam Reed and William Kinney are responsible for it. They owned the land from Funk's Gut to the sawmill. The river was cutting their land from the Gut to the sawmill, and they drove piling between those points to protect themselves. There had been no bar there before that. The current, changed by the piling, piled up sand and gravel on the Kentucky side. In the summer of 1876 the bar had begun to make itself felt in extreme low water. The Bonanza came up on her first trip. The water was rather low for a boat of her size, but she came up light all right. When ready to leave she wanted to show off. From time immemorial Portsmouth boats on their first trips had steamed above town and then steamed down past the town under full head of steam to show off. The Bonanza went up with full steam and flags flying, intending on her return to astonish the natives. Before her pilots were aware she had climbed on top of the Bonanza Bar, and raised herself out of the water. This was a revelation to her pilots. The Bonanza pilots were strangers to it, though those of the up-river "dinkies" knew it. The boat was full of passengers. She puffed and groaned and wallowed around on the bar a day and a half before she got off, and came back to the wharfboat as meek as a lamb, and slipped away without any noise or ceremony. Ever since then the bar has been known as "Bonanza Bar."

BRIDGES AT THE MOUTH OF THE SCIOTO RIVER.

The First Bridge.

The first bridge was built after 1832 at the mouth of the Scioto at "Pop Corn Point." It was built by a private company. It had three piers and two abutments. It was a toll bridge and kept by Isaiah Clark, father of Josiah Clark. Pop Corn Point is made ground, and was made to ascend and descend from the end of the bridge. A spring flood came up and covered the floor, and one night it fell. It had been up only a few months.

The Second Bridge.

In July, 1846, the New York Company was building a bridge over the Scioto River at "Pop Corn Point." It was completed August 6, 1849. It was 666 feet long, 20 feet wide and 16½ feet high. It had a stone abutment at each end and three stone piers between the abutments. It had a trestle at the west end. It was a toll bridge. Soon after it was completed a storm blew the whole thing into the river, and the New York Company was discouraged and did not build again.

The Third Bridge.

was built by a company called the Portsmouth Bridge Company. It was built across the Scioto River at the point of the present bridge. The county spent $5000 to make the elevated road from the east end of the bridge to Union Mills. Of this $70 was paid to Joseph Riggs for engineering. An act authorizing the bridge was passed March 28, 1857, Vol. 54, Page 254. The County Commissioners were authorized by this act to establish a county road on the towing path of the Ohio Canal, for two miles north from the east end of the bridge. The top of the towpath of the canal was to be twenty-five feet wide. Jefferson W. Glidden, Daniel A. Glidden, Lucien N. Robinson, Wells A. Hutchins and E. P. Gray were in the company, known as the Portsmouth Bridge Company. The special act required the freight to and from the canal should pass free, until a different provision should be made by law. The bridge company was to receive $600 per year from the canal, or rather from the State.

On November 7, 1859, the pier at the Portsmouth end fell, and the whole structure was precipitated in the river. Two men were on the bridge when it fell. Their names were William Shawley and Stephen Smith. At 8 o'clock that morning it was discovered that the pier was in danger, but it did not fall for three hours. These men had started across the bridge twice, and the third time the bridge fell, and they were engulfed. This made the third bridge which went down near this place.

The citizens of Portsmouth subscribed $5300 toward rebuilding this bridge, and the citizens of the West Side gave $6000.

On February 22, 1860, Stephen Smith's body was found near Buena Vista, and William Shawley's body was found near Vanceburg. They had been in the water three months.

The Fourth Bridge.

On November 24, 1860, the new suspension bridge was completed, and T. M. Lynn ran a hack to Union Mills. Max J. Becker came to Portsmouth as engineer to rebuild the bridge and put the south pier on high ground, and it stood, and is standing today. As a reward he was appointed Postmaster on April 17, 1861, and held that office until January 14, 1863. This bridge was soon afterward bought from George Davis on July 8, 1873. George Davis sold this bridge to the county for $45,000. Long before that he had bought up all the other interests in it, and owned all the stock of the company. The Commissioners purchased under the act of March 3, 1869, as amended May 7, 1869, Ohio Laws, Vol. 66, Page 338.

May 24, 1884, the Suspension Bridge fell at 11:30 a. m. Four yoke of oxen with a wagon load of stone, weighing four or five tons, came on the bridge. Charles Barr was the driver. At the middle of the bridge he stopped and sent two yoke of oxen across. Mrs. Charles Fulwiler, of Union Mills; her son Sam, aged six years; her daughter Zella, three, and Earl, her baby in arms, were going over. The upper cable parted, and that in an instant threw all the weight on the lower, and it parted. The mother and three children, as well as Barr and the oxen, were thrown sixty feet below in the wreck. The little girl was killed by the fall, the babe fell out of the mother's arms and was drowned. The mother and boy and Barr were rescued.

After the fall of the Suspension Bridge, in 1884, the county determined not to rebuild it, but build a pier bridge. Scioto County undertook to rebuild the bridge and the contract was let to the Canton Bridge Company. The middle span of the bridge fell on January 2, 1885. The moving out of the ice took away the false work before the superstructure could be secured on the piers. It was impossible to rest the span on the piers before the ice took out the false work. The loss of $5,000 fell on the Canton Bridge Company. The total cost of the entire bridge was $28,466.40. That is the present bridge across the Scioto River at its mouth.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

December 2, 1874, there was a company formed of which Arthur C. Davis was Captain, and John W. Kinney was First Lieutenant. It was called "The Scioto Greys."

March 15, 1875, "The Kinney Guards" were organized. John W. Kinney was Captain and Hiram Brown was First Lieutenant. William Waller was First Sergeant and Frank F. Varner was Second Sergeant. The company had twenty-seven members, and it was to be Infantry and Artillery. Colonel Kinney had purchased a howitzer for it. The same now stands in the Soldiers' lot in the cemetery.

There was an organization called the "Gaylord Guards." The Captain was Arthur Davis.

May 5, 1875, "The German Light Guards" were organized. The Captain was Charles F. Best, the First Lieutenant was William Koblens, and the Second Lieutenant, F. A. Stearns. "The Gaylord Light Guards" had three rows of buttons on their suits. The High School Cadets had a company. "The Kinney Guards" had received their arms. They had three rows of buttons on their dress coats.

May 19, 1875, "The High School Cadets" changed their name to "The Davis Cadets," for George Davis.

May 28, 1875, "The Kinney Guards" had a fancy drill. At its close a fine flag was presented to the company. Miss Nan Musser made the presentation. Then a fine sword was presented to the Captain, John W. Kinney. It had two scabbards and a reversible belt, for parade and undress occasions. It was a complete surprise to him, and cost over $50.00. Then there was a dance in which Captain Kinney led with Miss Nan Musser. Will Fryer was Drum Major; William Waller, First Sergeant; F. F. Varner, a Sergeant; Huston Varner, a Marker; Masters Julian, McBryan and Weatherwax, drummers; Theodore Brushart, fifer. At 11 P. M. a supper was served by John Cooper.

June 7, 1875, "The Gaylord Guards" had a reception. Ed Burke was Drum Major. Frank Ross, Charles Tracy and James Drouillard, drummers. The reception was followed by a dance.

June 23, 1875, Captain R. A. Starkey was made Major of the companies of military in Portsmouth.

September 24, 1875, "The Kinney Guards" gave an exhibition drill. Colonel P. Kinney, Captain A. C. Thompson and Dr. D. McBriar were on the stage. The company drilled an hour and a half, and then remarks were made by Colonel P. Kinney, Captain A. C. Thompson and Dr. D. McBriar. The visitors were then served with supper, and then the "Guards" and their friends, and then there was a dance.

October 13, 1875, "The Gaylord Guards" visited Chillicothe and were entertained by the "Campbell Guards." The following is the roster of the Gaylords who went to Chillicothe: Captain A. C. Davis, Lieutenant L. B. Smith. Men: William Crichton, F. W. Robinson, Percy Miller, William C. Silcox, William Starks, J. C. Singer, Augustus O. Bing, Henry H. Brushart, J. H. White, E. G. Gibbs, G. H. Gharky, C. Maddock, F. Royse, A. Clare, Frank Glover, Thomas Overturf, C. Masters, Sam Johnson, Ed Kinney, Charles E. Jewell, Charles Kinney, J. Herrell, Van Cole, Eg Gates, Charles Glidden, Maury Pursell, Alexander Robinson, James Connell, Ed R. Burke, Charles McFarland, Ira Crull, F. Ross, W. Smith, Charles Tracy and James Drouillard. A number of lady visitors went along and there was a banquet. W. Edgar Evans made the welcome address. Dan J. Ryan responded. The banquet was followed by a dance. Captain John W. Kinney and Ensign Foote Hall, of the Kinney Guards, were along. General Turley and wife, Mrs. Captain Davis, Jennie Tewksbury, Rhoda and Ivy Nichols, Josie Kinney, Ang. Sanford, Harry Robinson, Frank Hall, Dan McFarland, Dan J. Ryan and Harry Kinney were along. Frank White and Sam Turner, colored, had charge of the baggage. Captain McKee received the company in Chillicothe. Both "Gaylord" and "Kinney Guards" were parading at times, on the streets of Portsmouth with a brass band.

November 3, 1875, "The Gaylord Guards" and the "German" Company rented Richardson's Hall for an armory.

May 10, 1876, the "Kinney Guards" had minstrels. The object was to save money to visit the Centennial.

December 22, 1880, the Tribune published the roll of a company of Home Guards organized in 1861, in April. They were known as the "Silver Grays." The following are the names and ages of some of them when enlisted. Those marked deceased, were so, prior to December 22, 1880. None were enlisted under 45 years:

In 1860 the "Young Men's Rifle Company" in Portsmouth was organized. They had a gray uniform with gold lace and a black braid, frock coat and French cap. They had small rifles with spring bayonets. They had white cross belts with an eagle clasp. The company was independent. E. N. Hope was Captain; Henry R. Tracy, First Lieutenant; Matt Wall, Second Lieutenant, and D. R. Spry, Third Lieutenant. The third floor of the Masonic Building was used as an armory. There Colonel Allen, a West Pointer and Superintendent of the Schools, drilled the company. The following were members of the company, copied from the books of Daniel R. Spry, Ensign:

James M. Brown, Charles M. Burr, James V. Bryson, Eustace H. Ball, Thomas P. Brown, George Bell, A. M. Cunningham, Samuel A. Currie, William T. Cook, T. J. Cochran, James Culbertson, David Elick, Lewis Terry, W. Foote Hall, James Huston, Thomas W. Kinney, John W. Lewis, James Molster, Gaylord B. Norton, George Oldfield, Joseph G. Reed, C. J. January 2, 1892, a new military company organized in Portsmouth. Ninety young men signed the roll. January 9, 1892, Charles W. Blair was elected Captain; Charles E. Hard, First Lieutenant. The new company became Company H, Fourteenth Ohio National Guards. January 3, 1892, Samuel G. McCulloch was elected Second Lieutenant. See article on Spanish War.

Company K, Seventh Infantry, Ohio National Guard.

This company was organized July 7, 1902. It was mustered in for the period of five years. It went into service with the regiment at Camp William McKinley, near Newark, Ohio, on August 4, 1902, and remained in Camp of Instruction eight days. The Fourth, Fifth and Eighth Regiments were in the same camp at the same time. The following is a roster of the company:

THE CRUSADE.

January 21, 1874, John Jones, the plumber, held a prayer meeting in Dutch Mike's saloon. Rev. Stanley, John McDowell, D. J. Johnson and David Ford were present. After the meeting Mike was persuaded to empty his liquor in the street. Several ladies were present.

March 3, 1874, meeting at the Presbyterian Church in regard to temperance. Rev. Ketchum, Presbyterian; Rev. Stanley, Methodist, and Rev. James, Baptist, were the speakers.

March 9, 1874, temperance meeting at the Sixth Street M. E. Church. N. W. Evans, John McDowell and W. B. Grice made report as a committee. Rev. Byers delivered an address. A committee of two women and one layman from each church appointed.

March 8, 1874, Sunday, Rev. I. N. Stanger delivered a sermon on temperance.

March 15, 1874, Rev. Ketchum, at the Presbyterian Church, delivered a sermon on temperance. There were men's prayer meetings in the morning in the Presbyterian Church, and women's prayer meetings in the afternoon, and mass meetings Thursday evening in All Saint's Church. Rev. Manley, Judge Crain, John McDowell, D. S. Johnson, Rev. Stanger and Rev. Ketchum took part. A committee of twelve ladies visited the saloons, wholesale houses and drug stores. There were public meetings almost every day.

PIONEER SKETCHES.

John Clinton Ashley

was born May 14, 1800, in Norfolk, Virginia. His father was Rev. Benjamin Ashley, a Baptist minister, ordained by the Portsmouth, Virginia, Association in 1803. His grandfather was William Ashley, who was master's mate in the State Navy of Virginia, during the Revolutionary War. These were all descended from Captain John Ashley of London, England, whose name appears in the second charter to the Virginia Colony in 1609, and whose descendants came to Jamestown, Virginia, in 1635.

The subject of this sketch received a good common school education. At the age of seventeen he removed to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he entered as an apprentice in the bookbinding business. After completing his apprenticeship, he continued in the business as a journeyman till the spring of 1826. He was very religious in his nature, and gave much time to the study of the scripture and to religious work. He became a member of the Disciples (Campbellite) Church, and was one of the eight persons who organized the first Disciples Church in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1817. He decided to follow in the footsteps of his father, and devoted all his spare time in studying for the ministry. In 1820, he married Miss Mary Ann Kirkpatrick, of Alleghany City, Pennsylvania, (who was also one of the eight persons who assisted in organizing the first Disciples Church in Pittsburg,) a young lady of Scotch-Irish descent, born October 25, 1800, died October 26, 1861, and was buried in the cemetery near Masterston, Monroe County, Ohio, by the side of her daughter Mary. She was a devoted wife and mother and in every sense of the word a help to her husband. In the spring of 1826, he removed with his wife and three children to Portsmouth, Ohio, and established a bookbinding business on what is known as the McDowell Corner. In 1831, he established the first soap and candle manufactory in Portsmouth, in which he was passably successful. At that time candles were made by the "dipping" process. In 1830, he was present and assisted in organizing the Scioto County Bible Society, and was one of a committee of three to draft by-laws for the government of the Society. In 1837, John C. Ashley was a candidate for County Assessor on the Democratic ticket and was second in the race. Azel Glover, who was elected had 234 votes and Ashley 154.

In 1837, he was elected a Justice of the Peace for Wayne Township; and also served two years as a Trustee of the Township. He continued his studies for the ministry, studying particularly the Greek language, which materially assisted him in his work. He preached at "McCoy's," about 4 miles north-east of Portsmouth, at "Elijah Musgrove's," about six miles above Portsmouth; also in a church at the mouth of the Little Scioto river. In 1842, he decided to give all of his time to the ministry, and received letters of ordination as an elder and evangelist. His work until 1850, was in Meigs, Athens, Washington and Monroe Counties, in south-eastern Ohio, where he established a number of churches, teaching school and lecturing on temperance during the winter months. In 1850, he removed to Illinois, where he continued his ministerial work in the section of country from Carmi to Walnut Hill, where he died in August, 1855, and was buried in the little church yard cemetery about one mile south-east of Walnut Hill. He had eight children, five sons and three daughters, viz:

James M., has a sketch in this volume. John K., born in Pittsburg, July 4, 1824, studied medicine with Doctor Carpenter in Athens, Ohio, practiced in Masterston, in Monroe County, till 1852. He moved to Illinois in that year, and practiced his profession in Wayne City, and other towns in that vicinity, and is now, (1902), practicing his profession in Fairfield, Illinois. Benjamin, was born in Pittsburg in January, 1826. He learned the baking and candy making business in Cincinnati, Ohio, and established a business in that line in McConnellsville, Ohio, where he died in 1847. William was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1828; learned the cigar business in St. Louis; served in the Mexican War, and was a U. S. deputy surveyor in Colorado from 1861 to 1880. He is now (1902) living on a farm near Hope, Idaho. Mary Jane was born in Portsmouth in 1831, died and was buried near Masterston, Monroe County, Ohio, in 1849. Eli M. was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, May 28, 1833, was educated at the Western Liberal Institute at Marietta, Ohio; engaged in the drug business in Toledo, Ohio, from 1854 to 1861; removed to Colorado, arriving in Denver June 17, 1861; was chief clerk of the U. S. Surveyor General's office in Colorado for seventeen years, was President of the Denver Board of Education in 1875, was President of the Chamber of Commerce in 1887, was Chairman of the Republican State Committee in 1891 and 1892. In 1886, he organized the Western Chemical Company, and was elected its President, which position he holds to the present time (1902). John Clinton Ashley was severely strict and conscientious in his ways. His religion was of the old-fashioned sort, and he appeared particularly to believe in the adage, "spare the rod and spoil the child," in his manner of bringing up his children, and while conscientious and unselfish, would now be thought extremely strict. Financially he was always in moderate circumstances, and not very successful. He was in every sense of the word a "self-made man", was a "born teacher" and very successful in teaching school, in preaching and in temperance work. He gave the greater part of his life to the cause of Christ, "preaching the word", and baptising in "His name," and surely deserved the plaudit of "Well done, good and faithful servant."

John S. Baccus.

About the year 1805, the paternal grandmother of our subject, a widow then living in Pennsylvania, sold her little home in the Monongahela hills, and with the proceeds in her pocket, set out for the wilderness of Scioto County. She came down the Ohio river with a few others, bringing her horse and a light outfit, with which, after her arrival here, she made a journey on horseback to the Government Land Office in Chillicothe, Ohio, and entered Section 23 in Porter Township. This Section, consisting mostly of alluvial Pine Creek bottom lands above Wheelersburg, she divided between her four sons: Peter, Michael, Christian and James, the father of our subject. Here, James who married Nancy Smith, settled in 1806 and reared a large family. Elizabeth, his daughter married Jesse Alford, and went West. Catharine, another daughter of James, married Lemuel Cadot and reared a large family near Chaffin's Mill. Susan, the third daughter married William Finton. Sarah A., the fourth daughter married Rev. James M. Kelley, now living in Ironton, Ohio. Celinda, the fifth daughter married Martin Beeson, and went to Metropolis, Illinois. Samuel, a son died in this county. Isaiah, another son, moved to Massac County, Illinois. John S., the subject of this sketch, was born in 1811, and lived and died on his farm near Wheelersburg in 1897. The Baccus family, like all others of that period who remained here, possessed the true pioneer spirit. Their wants were of the simplest and they knew how to do with a little. The fact that stores were not accessible; that they were compelled to make everything they required, huts, furniture, wearing apparel, bedding, leather, sugar, salt, meal, wooden ploughs and brush harrows; that there were no markets and practically no money except what they had brought with them, developed a spirit of self-reliant helpfulness of which the present generation can have no adequate conception. When a mill was erected in a pioneer neighborhood, it was an occasion for great rejoicing. The opening of salt works at Kanawha led to the forming of small caravans with camping outfits and pack-mules, which came from great distances to lay in a supply of this great necessary of life. Every man and every woman was a fabricant of necessity, there being almost no division of labor in those sparsely settled communities, whereby one might be a carpenter, another a shoemaker, a third a butcher and so on for the others. Hence everyone had a practical, many sided training bearing directly on the amelioration of the hard conditions, the scanty resources of pioneer life. Such were the experiences that fell to the Baccus family in common with other pioneers, and through this many sided training the subject of our sketch came up. Being endowed with ingenuity and a quick mechanical eye, he early picked up a knowledge of carpentry which he pursued exclusively for a few years, and was of practical benefit to him all through life. He could make anything he needed in wood-work, from erecting houses to stocking plows, repairing wagons or fashioning a gun stock. Stone-cutting, bricklaying, harness-making, and innumerable things which usually call for expert skill he could neatly accomplish in less time often than the trained mechanic. His powers of endurance and capacity for turning out work were phenomenal. He sometimes had trouble to hire help because when working at his usual pace, men thought he was rushing them. One thing he never learned was the art of tanning, for when a small boy he was installed in a new pair of domestic buckskin trousers and these having got thoroughly wet by a fall in a creek, he never forgot the sorry plight in which the shrunken trousers placed him, and his early disgust for domestic leather clung to him. In 1836 he married Miss Emily Vincent of the French Grant and soon afterward moved to his Dogwood Ridge farm, then covered with heavy timber. He borrowed money at ten per cent to make a start and then began clearing and improving. He began with a horse and cart, but supplemented this outfit with a yoke of cattle. After paying off his first and only loan, he rigidly avoided debt, and in a few years began to have a bank account. His plan of life was to buy nothing that he could produce, but to always have something to sell. His motto was, "Keep what you've got, then get a little more." In the days before the dog nuisance prevented farmers from keeping sheep, he would have his wool product spun in the house, which his wife would knit into stockings, and in the Spring sometimes sell fifty pairs at a time, the output of industrious fingers during the long winter evenings. And so he continued to work and clear land and improve his farm, which in the meantime became a model of neatness and productiveness. He took pride in sending nothing to market but the best. His wheat must be the cleanest, his ears of corn the largest, his hay the greenest and brightest, his butter the yellowest and sweetest that could be produced. And for fifty years he toiled and prospered, a conspicuous example in his neighborhood of what can be achieved in this land of opportunities, by ambition, industry, economy and a tenacious holding on to a chosen calling. The dominating element in his character was his concentration of energy to the accomplishment of the matter in hand, whatever that might be. He would hardly rest day or night till the undertaking was in shape to be satisfactorily completed. This trait was uppermost and controlling in every situation, even in arranging some pleasure excursion. Of temperate habits, strong will, honorable principles, honest to the last cent in dealing, of strong convictions, just as positive and immovable when mistaken as when right, a good story teller, with a grain of conceit that was sometimes amusing, such was John Baccus, a fine example of the kind of stuff which the sturdy pioneers of early days were made of.

was born in 1761, in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. In 1778, he enlisted in the Revolutionary War and the official record of his service will be found under the title of Revolutionary Soldiers. While he was out serving in the militia during the Revolution, the Indians surrounded his father's cabin, killed him and his family and burned the cabin.

In 1780, he was married in Pennsylvania to Barbara Clingman, daughter of John Michael Clingman. The children born of this marriage were: Hannah, born February 10, 1783; John, February 23, 1785; Samuel, July 5, 1787; Joseph, October 6, 1789; Nathaniel, May 17, 1792; Nancy, March 23, 1794; Isaac, July 12, 1796. They were all born in Philadelphia. August 10, 1806, he landed at the mouth of Little Scioto and from there went on to Oldtown, where he resided till Portsmouth was laid out in 1803. His son, James was born March 16, 1798. Washington and Mary, twins, were born June 2, 1803, the first twin children ever born in Portsmouth. His son John was eighteen years old when Portsmouth was surveyed off in lots and carried a chain for Henry Massie, who gave him a lot for his services. John traded it off for a pair of boots. Massie offered Uriah Barber a lot in Portsmouth, if he would build on it and conduct a hotel. He accepted the offer and built a two story hewed log house and it was furnished and occupied before June 2, 1803, the date of the birth of his twin children, Washington and Mary. This house was built on lot No. 279, corner of Front and Scioto streets. It had a shingle roof and oak and clay chimneys. The National Hotel was afterwards built on the same site. On November 21, 1803, on complaint of Judge Joseph Lucas, Uriah Barber was bound over by Thomas Waller, Justice of the Peace, to keep the peace.

On December 10, 1806, he married Rachel Beard and the issue of this marriage were: Sarah, born July 15, 1808; Maria, March 5, 1811; Michael, February 13, 1813; William E., August 17, 1817; Nancy, February 4, 1820; Laura, November 22, 1822; Joseph, November 25, 1824. Major Barber and both of his wives believed in the eleventh commandment to multiply and replenish the earth and the result of it is, that one can hardly throw a stone in the city of Portsmouth now without hitting one of his descendants. He made considerable money in keel boating and purchased 50 acres of land, then outside of Portsmouth, but now in it, and built him a home on the site of the George Ball residence, now occupied by Mr. Halderman. While he visited Chillicothe, he became acquainted with Thomas Scott. He had one fault which we will tell, even if he has been dead 55 years. He was too easy about putting his name on the notes of others. He endorsed for Scott and lost most of it, but not all of his property. He became a Major in the Militia and hence his title was such. In 1809, he was a trustee of Wayne Township. He was out in the general call in 1812, but in what rank we are not advised. He was a Jacksonian Democrat in 1824, but afterwards became a Whig. He was elected Coroner in 1812, and served most of the time until 1837. In the election of 1820, when elected, he had 411 votes. Ebenezer Corwine, 213; and H. Sumner, 68. In the election of 1825, he had 140 votes and Ruloff Whitney 15. In 1827, he had 487, all the votes cast. In 1829, he had 559 votes, no others cast. In 1831, the votes on this office stood Barber 360, David Enslow, 147; Samuel Gould, 88. In 1837, he had 351 votes and William Jones, 210.

When he lost his fifty acres of land, now the Glover and Damarin addition, he bought some land east of Lawson, now adjoining Martin Funk, and died there. He died Friday, June 26, 1846, and was buried in the Kinney graveyard the following Sunday, with the honors of war. One thousand people were present. Colonel Peter Kinney, then a militia Captain, with his Company, conducted the military ceremonies of the funeral and three volleys were fired over his grave. This was the first military funeral in Portsmouth. We have expressly refrained from mentioning his descendants, who are all respectable good people, because we could not spare the space necessary in this book. Many of them will be mentioned in their own sketches.

Joseph Brant, Senior,

was the son of Christian Brant and Elizabeth Ritter, both from Germany who came to Columbiana County, Ohio, in 1804, from Pennsylvania. Here our subject was born January 13, 1813, and raised until he was nineteen, when his parents brought him to Scioto County. His father was a mill wright and was very ingenious. His father died in 1836 and his mother died in 1865, aged 97 years. She had recollections of the Revolutionary War. Joseph, Senior, was the first clerk of Valley Township and was a Jacksonian Democrat.

He was married in 1836 to Mary Vannort, by whom he had two children: Robert, deceased, and Mary Elizabeth, wife of Theodore Appel of Clifford, O. The first wife died in 1838 and he was married again to Susan Wilson, August 14, 1862, by whom he had eight children, as follows: William A., resident of Chillicothe, Missouri, was a soldier in the 33rd O. V. I. and was wounded in the battle of Resaca; Catherine, deceased, married Isaac Williams; George W. resides at May, Woodward County, Oklahoma; David, married Josephine McNeal and lives near Lucasville; Sarah C., married Frank Winter; Thomas J. resides at Haddam, Kansas, a farmer and married; Rachel J., married Benjamin Yeager and lives at Lucasville; and Joseph H., a merchant at Lucasville, who has a sketch herein.

Joseph Brant, senior, was a farmer most of his life. He owned a small farm of hill land and several lots in Lucasville. At one time, in the forties he bought the old tavern at Lucasville and conducted it for ten years. At the time he bought this tavern, it was the chief distributing point, in Lucasville, for whiskey and other intoxicating drinks, when Lucasville was seeing its "wild and woolly" days for which it had gained quite a notoriety throughout the lower Scioto Valley. The sale of drinks was stopped when Mr. Brant took charge and immediately, the morals of Lucasville began to improve and have continued to improve up to this day, when not a drop of liquor can be bought; and it is largely a community of Christian and law-abiding people. In the latter years of our subject's life, he lived in retirement and died October, 1893. He was a man of low stature, weighing about 200 pounds and seldom was troubled with ill health. He inherited his father's ingenious nature and could work with any kind of tools and sometimes tinkered at blacksmithing and woodworking, as a matter of pastime and accommodation to his neighbors. He was liberal to a fault, not seeming to appreciate the value of money and was always ready to assist his neighbors, always refusing compensation. As a companion he was entertaining. His observations and anecdotes were always interesting. He had a fund of stories and reminiscences which seemed exhaustless and when he and his old cronies got together to swap stories, it was an enjoyable time to all the listeners. All they had to do was sit still and be entertained, and no one had to be requested to be present or to keep order. Uncle Joe's stories never lacked spice or humor. Since his death, he has had no successor in this direction, and Lucasville has been more of a serious place.

Lyttleton Bradford

was born in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1796, the son of Ezra Bradford and Sarah Curtis, his wife. Ezra Bradford was the owner of a plantation and slaves near Norfolk, but had a conscience. He thought that slavery was wrong, freed his slaves and removed to Ohio in 1805. He purchased 300 acres of land on Turkey Creek and remained there until his death. His son, Lyttleton, succeeded to his father's land. He married Abigail Samson, daughter of David Samson, one of the early settlers. They had six sons and three daughters, of whom three sons still survive. They are Ezra, William and Henry. Lyttleton died in Scioto County, on the land his father had purchased. He named the Post Office, at Friendship, and the land he formerly owned is now owned by George Vaughters, Leonidas Pyles and Alex. Cole. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Jean Baptist Bertrand

was the last male survivor of the French emigrants. He was born in 1761, in Champagne, east of Paris. He was left an orphan when a child. In his childhood, he was a verger and bell ringer at one of the French churches. He had a good education as compared with his fellow emigrants. While he was one of the French Colony in 1790, he did not cross the ocean with the emigrants. He drew lot 10 of the First French Grant, but on the record his name is entered as Jean Baptist Berthone, when it should read Bertrand. Lot 10 was patented to him by his correct name. He also purchased lot 10 French Grant of Michael Mazure on the 31st of July, 1804, for the consideration of $434.00. The deed recites that Michael Mazure was one of those who had drawn one of the ninety-two lots of the first French Grant. Our subject became a miller at Gallipolis. One day when he was required to be absent from the mill, he employed a substitute. On that day, the Indians made a raid and killed his friend, and his friend's body was found mangled in the grass when Bertrand returned.

He lived alone in the Grant until he was about 40 years-of age, when he went back to Gallipolis and brought him a young wife. She died January 11, 1827. His eldest son John, was born in 1804, and the others were Julie, Felicite, Henry, Rosalie and William. In 1811, he built a large brick residence on his lot 10. Monsieur Bertrand was one of the industrious enterprising and energetic Frenchmen. His farm was covered with apple trees and peach trees, from which he distilled the fruit. He was very jolly in his nature, was always courteous and in a good humor. He uniformly greeted his friends with a low bow and a pleasant smile. It was a great pleasure for him to sit up all night over his cups with his French associates, very often to the annoyance of his family. He was one of the best gardeners in the Grant. In the language of Artemus Ward, gardening was his forte. In the latter years of his life, he would work in the garden of mornings till 9 or 10 o'clock, and read the remainder of the day. In all his long life he never learned to speak English. He was one of the few Frenchmen who had fixed religious beliefs and views. He was an earnest Catholic, and never retired without saying one or more of the prayers which he had learned as a child. He succeeded in all his business affairs. He was temperate and regular in his habits; and was not off his feet until six weeks before his death. He died March 21, 1855, in his ninety-fourth year.

Major John Belli.

John Belli was a citizen of the world. His father was a Frenchman, his mother a native of Holland, and he was born in Liverpool, England, in 1760. He received a good education in England, and in military school. When he came of age, he was in Amsterdam, Holland, and received his coming of age papers from the estates of Holland and West Friesland. When he conceived the idea of coming to the United States, he was in Paris, France. He had been studying about the United States and had become filled with the extreme Republican notions of that time. In the theory of government, he was a rabid republican; in his own personal relations, he was an aristocrat, though he was hardly conscious of the fact. So he procured a letter of recommendation from the American Minister, John Jay, who, in his letter, described him as a young man worthy of trust. He came over with Mr. Francis Bowers, of Chester, a merchant who was bringing over goods. His letters of introduction were to Mr. Josiah Watson, of Alexandria, Va. He came alone, without any members of his family, and landed at Alexandria, Va. in May 1782, which was then an important seaport. He engaged in business there, first as a clerk, and afterwards as a merchant, and remained there until the spring of 1790, a period of eight years. Of his life in Alexandria, we have no account, but he formed a number of valuable and important acquaintances in that time, among whom were Col. Alexander Parker and Gen. George Washington.

In October, 1791, Gen. Knox, then Secretary of War, sent him to the Northwest Territory on public business. What his functions were does not clearly appear, but they were of a confidential character.

On April 18, 1792, when he was in the Northwest Territory, President George Washington sent him a commission as Deputy Quartermaster on the General Staff of Wayne's Legion. This commission is in the hands of John Delf Gregory, his grandson, at Fountain, Kentucky. It is on parchment, illustrated, and bears the original signature of President Washington and Secretary of War, Henry Knox. The commission does not state his rank, but it uses that of Major, hence his title. He went by way of Pittsburgh, then called Fort Pitt, and down the Ohio River to Fort Washington. Gen. Knox gave him a letter, dated September 20, 1791, directed to the Deputy Quartermaster at Fort Pitt, stating that he was to have transportation down the Ohio River, as he was on public business of great importance. He went direct to Fort Washington, where it appears he was stationed until the time of Wayne's expedition against the Indians.

There is preserved a list of the Quartermaster's stores he had on hand at Fort Washington, November 1st, 1782. Mr. Gregory also has in his possession a letter addressed to Major John Delf from Gen. Anthony Wayne, in answer to one of May 30, 1794, preceding. He tells the Major that he is glad he has been successful in purchasing cattle; that 200 per march will be required, independent of accident; that he must forward those on hand by first escort. That he has three weeks' supply for the Legion, nor can he think of advancing with less than 200 or 300 cattle, which would not be more than ten weeks' supply, should they all arrive safe. He stated that the wagons would set out from Fort Jefferson the next morning for Fort Washington under a good escort, commanded by Major Hughes and they were not to be delayed at Fort Washington more than forty-eight hours, to be loaded with tents, intrenching tools and axes. Also he was to send such hospital and ordinance stores as he had been provided with, together with all the hunting shirts, or shirts and tools that were in his possession. Also, that his own private stores were to be forwarded under a select guard, which he will request Major Hughes to furnish from his department.

He was directed to use as many private teams as could be obtained which, with the use of the water transport, when a favorable rise should occur in the Miami, would enable him to forward the grain to Fort Hamilton, which the Quartermaster General had required. He was not to lose a moment in mounting the dragoons and furnishing all the necessary accoutrements. He was also to be furnished with $2,000 in specie, and $8,000 in good bank bills to be replaced by his department. He was told that every arrangement would be made by his department for a forward move by the first of July. He wished the Major every success in his purchase and supplies of every nature, in the line of his department and signed himself, "I am, sir, your most ob'dt humble serv't, Ant'y Wayne."

As soon as the expedition was successful, Major Belli, went east and settled his accounts with the department. He returned with some $5,000 and bought one thousand acres of land at the mouth of Turkey Creek and placed a man named Wright upon it, who cleared up a part of it, built a log house and planted an orchard. This was the first settlement in Scioto County, though the historian, James Keyes, disputes it, and says the first settlement was near Sciotoville, by the Bonsers and Burts.

He laid out the town of Alexandria, at the mouth of the Scioto River and gave it the name of Alexandria, for that city in Virginia, where he had first landed in this country, and had spent eight years. He spent considerable time in and about Alexandria, N. W. Territory, as the agent of Col. Alexander Parker, for whom he located much land in Scioto County. In Septemehr, 1797, he was appointed Recorder of Adams County, and held the office until October, 1803. He was a Justice of the Peace for Adams County, appointed by the Judges of the General Court, April 28, 1801, and his commission is in existence.

It seems he spent a great part of his time in Kentucky. He evidently did not and could not attend personally to the duties of the office of Recorder of Adams County.

On the twenty-first of March, 1800, he concluded some very important business in Kentucky, for on that date, he was married to Miss Cynthia Harrison, a cousin of Gen. Wm. Henry Harrison. Her father, Samuel Harrison, was a prominent man in Kentucky, and a large slave holder. He owned the site of the town of Cynthiana, Ky., and laid it out. He named it for his twin daughters, Cynthia and Anna, born just before the town was platted. On his marriage, Major John Belli moved to his land at the mouth of Turkey Creek. He named his home, "Belvidere," and kept a carriage and horses and traveled in style. In every county of the territory, there was a Colonel of the Militia and a Major. Nathaniel Massie was the Colonel of the Adams County Militia and John Belli, the Major.

On August 29, 1804, he was commissioned by Edward Tiffin, Governor of Ohio, Major of the Second Battalion, Second Regiment, First Brigade, Second Division Ohio Militia.

During the time that the town of Washington was flourishing as the county seat of Adams County, Major Belli was not there much of the time. When he was absent it is not known who attended to the duties of his office as Recorder, but very likely it was General Darlington, who was always ready to do anything to accommodate his neighbors.

Major Belli had five children—four daughters and a son. His daughter, Eliza, was born December 3, 1809. She married Moses Gregory, October 20, 1826. Her son, John Belli Gregory, who was a citizen of Scioto County for many years, at one time member of the Board of Public Works in this State, and afterwards its Engineer, resided at Fontana, Ky., and kindly loaned the editor of this work the papers of Major Belli. His son, Hiram D. Gregory, is a lawyer at Covington, Ky. His daughter, Hattie, is the widow of Ariel Barney, and resides in New York City.

Major Belli, after 1803, devoted his whole time to the improvement of his land on Turkey Creek, though he was a land owner in many places. He at one time owned a large tract near New Hope, in Brown County. In 1806, he built him a large two-story frame house on his land at the mouth of Turkey Creek, but did not live to enjoy it. In October, 1809, he was taken with one of those fevers against which it seems the pioneers could not contend, and he died and was buried on the river bank near his home. His widow continued to reside there until 1838, when her home, built by the Major in 1806, was accidentally destroyed by fire. She removed to Illinois, where she died in 1848. In 1865 the Major's grave was washed by the river, and Mr. Gregory had his remains exhumed and reinterred in the cemetery at Friendship. A picture of the Major is in the possession of Mr. Gregory. It represents him with powdered wig and a Continental coat faced with red. A cut from this picture appears herein.

Major Belli was a gentlemen of the old school. He never changed his dress from the style during the Revolution. While he lived among backwoodsmen, he always had his wig and queue, wore a cocked hat, coat with facings, waist coat, knee breeches, stockings and shoe buckles. His queue was carefully braided and tied with a ribbon, and this was his style of dress at all times.

While he believed himself to be a Republican, as the term was understood in his time, he had pride enough for all the aristocrats in the neighborhood. He was a disbeliever in slavery, and it is thought his location in the Northwest Territory and his maintenance of his residence here was on account of his repugnance to that peculiar institution. His wife's slaves were brought to Ohio and freed, and this through his influence. He was the agent of Colonel Alexander Parker and General Thomas Parker in making their location in the Virginia Military District.

Colonel Alexander Parker owned Survey 455 on Pond Run—1,000 acres. Survey 475 at the mouth of Turkey Creek, was the property of John Belli. Survey 408, on which Alexandria was located, was for 900 acres, and entered for Colonel Alexander Parker, of Frederick County, Virginia.

Samuel Clingman Briggs

was born near Wilkesbarre, Nescopeck Township, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, May 25, 1794, a son of John and Hannah Clingman Briggs. His mother was a daughter of John Michael Clingman, a Captain in the Revolutionary War from Pennsylvania in 1778. He is mentioned elsewhere in this book. Our subject came to Portsmouth at the age of twenty-one and made his home with his Uncle Aaron Kinney for seven years. On June 23, 1817, when the Parish of All Saints Church was organized, he was one of the original signers of the Constitution. July 27, 1820, he was baptised by the Rt. Rev. Philander Chase and confirmed by him December 10, 1820. He afterwards left the Episcopal Church and connected himself with the Bigelow M. E. Church. In 1852, he assisted to organize the Spencer Chapel, was Stewart and Trustee and held a prominent place in the Church up to the time of his death. He purchased what is known as the Briggs farm, the principal part of which is now owned by John Richardson. July 1, 1824, he was married to Elizabeth Smith, a daughter of John Smith, by Jacob P. Noel, Justice of the Peace. She lived only a few months. On Dec. 30, 1825, he married a Miss Rebecca Timbrook. Their children are as follows: John K., Aaron K., William H., Elizabeth, Henry, Mary and Hannah, now Mrs. Sweet of Shipman, Illinois, and Rebecca, wife of Telemachus P. Noel living near Spring Lane Distillery. Of the daughters, Elizabeth and Mary died in infancy. Aaron K., died October 26, 1871; John K., died November 27, 1893; Henry resides in Jameson, Missouri; William lives in Kansas. In 1840, Mr. Briggs' second wife died, and he married Miss Sarah Barber, who died suddenly a few months after the marriage. He then married her younger sister, Marinda Barber, December 27, 1843. Their children are Joseph C., living near the old home; Sarah Smith, wife of Firman Smith of the West Side; an infant son; Louisa Epworth now the wife of Wellington R. Kinney, who resides on the old homestead. July 1, 1860, Mr. Briggs died. He left a fine farm of over 200 acres to his family. He was a man of the strictest honesty and integrity. He was energetic and industrious. He tried to fulfill every duty in every relation of life. He was highly esteemed by his church people and all his neighbors.

John Kinney Briggs

was born October 6, 1826, the son of Samuel Clingman Briggs, and Rebecca Timbrooks Briggs, his wife. He was born at the old Briggs Homestead on the Chillicothe Pike now occupied by Wellington R. Kinney. He obtained his education in the district school and was brought up a farmer. He was married three times, first in 1850, to Miss Mary Miller. The children of that marriage were: Louisa, who died in childhood, Laura, who died at the age of sixteen, Aaron Anthony, Charles C., and Frank. The fourth child of this marriage was Margaret, now the wife of Dr. George W. Osborne, of Dry Run. The fifth child, Anna Bell, died at the age of two years. The first, Mrs. Briggs, died November 14, 1865, and on December 6, 1867, our subject married Miss Melinda Jane Smith, daughter of Hamlet Smith. The only child of this marriage was Bertha A., who died at the age of sixteen years. Mr. Briggs' second wife died November 22, 1867, and he married her sister, Margaret Smith, July 17, 1870, who survived him. On March 4, 1861, he located in Washington Township, where he spent the remainder of his life. Mr. Briggs was noted for his integrity and uprightness. He always enjoyed the confidence of his neighbors. He was Treasurer of his Township for fourteen years. He was a Republican, but never aspired to a county office, and had no political ambitions. He was a member of Oldtown M. E. Church. He died November 27, 1893.

Asa Boynton, Senior.

John Boynton, the three times great-grandfather of our subject, was born at Knapton, Wistingham, East Riding of Yorkshire, England, in 1614, and came to Massachusetts and settled at Rowley 1630. He was a tailor and married Helen Pell of Boston. He died February 18, 1670, and was the father of eight children, one of whom, was Captain Joseph Boynton. He was born in 1644 and married Sarah Swan by whom he had eleven children. He died December 16, 1730. One of his sons, Sergeant Richard Boynton, was born November 11, 1675, and married Sarah Dressler and had seven children. He died December 25, 1732. One of his sons, Nathaniel, the father of our subject, was born August 18, 1712. He married Mary Stewart, 1736, by whom he had twelve children and Asa was the eleventh in order of their births.

Asa Boynton was born March 4, 1760, and married Mary, daughter of Joseph and Mary Edmunds, of Lynn, Massachusetts, April 10, 1781. She was born in Lynn, August 9, 1762. They resided first at Lynn and then moved to Grafton County, New Hampshire at Piermont. In 1806, he came to the French Grant for the purpose of looking out a location. He went back to New Hampshire and negotiated the purchase of 3,800 acres of the Gervais Tract, and 650 acres outside, from Rosewell P. Hunt, brother of Samuel Hunt and executor of his last will and testament, for the sum of \$9,000. Samuel Hunt had purchased the 3,800 acres of John G. Gervais and had given a mortgage for the purchase money. The mortgage was assigned to Earl Sproat. Samuel Hunt died July 27, 1807. The mortgage was foreclosed and the 3,800 acres were sold to Earl Sproat at Sheriff's sale for \$5,700, April 18, 1810. Boynton got a warranty deed from Rosewell P. Hunt, dated January 15, 1810. He afterwards, June 25, 1811, received a warranty deed from Earl Sproat for the same premises, the consideration being \$8,000. From this we would infer that he paid \$8,000 for the Gervais tract and \$1,000 for the other 650 acres. In 1812, he deeded the 650 acre tract to Lawson Drury, Senior, Lawson Drury, Junior, Ruth Drury and Charles T. Drury. On January 9, 1811, he deeded 850 acres to Peter White for \$1,400. About the same time he conveyed 176 acres to James Abbott for \$522. On July 17, 1812, he conveyed 100 acres to Zelotes Tucker. On January 13, 1812, he conveyed 131- $\frac{3}{4}$ acres to Adam Proebster and Jacob Lynch. He sold altogether 2,040 and retained 1,759 acres for himself.

Boynton and his family made the trip overland from New Hampshire to their new home in 1810. They traveled in the family carriage and wagons, and they were on their journey for six weeks. By his marriage with Mary Edmunds, thirteen children were born: Mary, b. December 17, 1781, d. May 4, 1797; Asa, b. August 4, 1784, d. August 30, 1802; Lucy, b. July 6, 1787, d. November 29, 1787; Lydia, b. February 21, 1789, m. James B. Prescott November 12, 1815, d. February 23, 1825; Joseph E., b. February 21, 1791, m. Betsey Wheeler, January 18, 1813, d. August 17, 1817; Charles C., b. December 29, 1792, m. Roda, daughter of Captain Edward C. Sumner of Peacham, Vermont, March 13, 1814, d. August, 1837; Cynthia, b. June 13, 1795, m. Benjamin Locke, December 22, 1814; Lucy, b. November 22, 1797, m. George Williams November 30, 1818, d. November 3, 1883; William L., (See Sketch); Mary, b. July 9, 1802, m. Thomas Rogers June 1, 1822; Jane Ann, b. March 7, 1805, m. Thomas Whittier December 19, 1821, d. November 19, 1891; Asa, b. July 21, 1807, m. Julia Bertrand, December 25, 1828, d. about 1880; John L., b. July 17, 1811, m. Felicite Bertrand February 13, 1836, d. August 12, 1858.

Mr. Boynton was an industrious and enterprising man and did much to develop the new country and toward furnishing the necessary conveniences for his friends and neighbors. He built a mill for grinding wheat and corn. The mill was run by horse power and the bolt was turned by hand. Often those who came to get grinding done would furnish the horse power, thereby saving toll. He built another mill back of where Ironton now stands, at which both grinding and sawing were done. In those days it was difficult to get money for market products and upon one occasion, Boynton built a flat boat and took a cargo of produce to New Orleans, and came back on the Steamer "Congress." He was successively a Federal, a National Republican and a Whig. He was treasurer of Green Township during 1819 and 1820. He died February 21, 1837 and his wife died July 23, 1823.

William L. Boynton

son of Asa Boynton and Mary Edmunds, his wife, was born in Piermont, Grafton County, New Hampshire, in 1800, and came with his parents to French Grant in 1810. His boyhood was spent on his father's farm and his education was meagre. He was married on January 1, 1822 to Nancy Feurt, who was of direct French lineage, and whose father Peter Feurt, was one of the first white inhabitants of Scioto County, having come to Alexandria shortly after it was laid out. To them were born seven children: Mary, (deceased), married Doctor Mussey; Cynthia, (deceased,) married Samuel Skelton, and at his death married Alva Jaynes; Peter, married Eliza J. Cadot; James, deceased; Henry, lives at Powellsville, Ohio; Asa, deceased, and William who lives in Florida. His father gave him 400 acres of land, a part of the Gervais tract and he afterwards added several hundred acres to this on Pine Creek. When the Furnaces flourished he dealt a great deal in live stock and supplied the furnaces with meat.

He was active in politics and was a Whig until the founding of the Republican party and then became a Republican. He was appointed Township Trustee in 1839 to take the place of Jacob Andre and was elected the following year to the same office. He was Justice of the Peace from 1844 to 1847. He was Commissioner of Scioto County from 1840 to 1846 and was a prominent man in the County. He was not a member of any church but held the Universal doctrine. He died July 12, 1870.

Peter Feurt Boynton

was born near Franklin Furnace, Ohio, October 17, 1822. He is the son of William L. Boynton and Nancy Feurt, his wife. His father was of direct English lineage and his mother of French descent. He was quite an active boy and liked boyish sports. When a young man he was very fond of dancing and many a pleasant evening the Boyntons spent together dancing and playing the old fashioned games. His schooling was very meagre and he attended one school when he was twenty-one. He offered his services to his country at the breaking out of the Civil War but was rejected on account of a crippled hand. He was a Whig and is now a Republican. He was a trustee of Green Township in 1856-7 and in 1858-9, serving two terms.

He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when he was thirty years old and has missed but three quarterly meetings since. He has always been an active and enthusiastic worker and has held some office in the church all the time. He is a member of the Haverhill M. E. church.

He was married to Eliza J. Cadot, January 10, 1848. She was the daughter of Claudius Cadot. To them were born three children; Orin, (deceased), married Urania Bush, now Mrs. George M. Clary, of Ironton, Ohio; Asa of Haverhill, married Margaret, daughter of Henry and Mary A. (Winkler) Feurt; and Carrie married H. W. Farnham. After he was married he bought the farm just south of Haverhill now owned by Samuel Krickenger. He sold this and bought a fourth interest in Raccoon Furnace in Greenup County, Kentucky; but the war breaking out immediately afterward, he sold this and resided with his father two years. He then rented the Hamilton farm between Hanging Rock and Ironton. Next he bought the Ironton ferry and conducted it for a while. He then moved to Haverhill and bought his present farm in 1866. Nearly all the time since, he has owned and run a threshing machine in addition to his farming. He has been a hard worker and is now eighty years old and is as straight as an arrow and as active as most men at fifty. Mr. Boynton is just in all his dealings. He is a good citizen and a conscientious Christian and is respected by all who know him.

John Brown, Sr.,

was the first man to leave Alexandria and locate in Portsmouth. Uriah Barber had built a two story log house on Front street on the first alley above Scioto street, and intended to keep hotel in it, but his wife dying, he gave up the idea, and induced Mr. Brown to take his house and open it as a tavern. The tavern keepers were the aristocrats of those early days, and they answered all the purposes of bankers, as they obtained all the currency which was afloat. John Brown was about the beginning of things in Portsmouth; he was first in almost everything. He was among the first settlers, he kept the first tavern, he built the first school house, the first grist mill, (a horse mill), the first ware house, and he was the first Justice of the Peace who ever administered the office in the town of Portsmouth. He was the first Postmaster Portsmouth ever had, and he aided in digging the first well. He opened the first road from the top of the bank down the grade to the river edge, opposite the Vincent Brodbeck property on Front street. There was no other road down the river bank until 1810. At that time there was not a wagon or dray in Portsmouth, and the goods were hauled on sleds, pack horses, or carried on men's backs. John Brown owned and used the first cart ever used in Portsmouth. From 1807 until 1812, he was the principal citizen. He was the first commission merchant who ever did business in Portsmouth. He appeared to have performed all his duties well. The first court held in the town was held at his house. He was one of the first nine councilmen of Portsmouth, and was one of the three to draw a two years term. On March 10, 1817, he was elected for three years, and that same year was the town supervisor. His son, John Brown, Jr., was elected councilman in 1817 and held that office for two years, while at the same time his father was a councilman. He seemed to be fond of pleasure, as balls and dances were frequently held at his tavern. He was a small man, and slender, with sharp visage. As a Justice, he administered his office with severity. He had a rough class to deal with and he dealt with them according to their deserts. Mr. Brown built the first market house in Portsmouth. On one occasion when he was administering justice one John Cutright, was brought before him. As soon as he told his name, John Brown, said, "Well, John Cutright, you have cut wrong this time." When a supervisor of the road, he announced that "God willing" they would work the road Monday and Tuesday, but they would work it on Wednesday anyway. It was in 1806 that he took the contract to build the first school house in Portsmouth.

COUNTY TREASURER. BORN 1793—DIED 1865.

He was a native of dear old Ireland, and was born not later than 1760. He stopped in Harrisburg, Pa., long enough to get him a wife, and floated down the Ohio river with her, the same as everyone else did at that time. We know his wife's name was Hannah, but her maiden name has not been preserved. He had one son, John Brown, Jr., and two daughters: Rachel, who married General William Kendall, May 29, 1806, the ceremony being performed by Robert Lucas, a Justice of the Peace, and Eliza, who was married to General Robert Lucas, April 4, 1810. Both of them raised large families, as did John Brown, Jr.

Our subject was a very active citizen; he was connected with almost every enterprise started in Portsmouth and was one of the charterers of the Commercial Bank. He owned the site of the present post office in Portsmouth, where his son, John Brown, Jr., kept a tavern. He was post master of Portsmouth from July 1, 1808 to March 7, 1812, and was succeeded by Dr. Thomas Waller.

In politics, he was always a democrat. His religious affiliations are not known to the writer, but he was a Protestant.

Major John Brown, Jr.,

was born December 9, 1783, near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, the son of John Brown, Sr., who has a sketch herein. His father and his grandfather, Adla Brown, were natives of Ireland. His father came to the United States and located near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

There he married his wife, Hannah, whose maiden name is unknown. John Brown, Jr. must have been about ten years old when he came to Portsmouth. He went out in 1813, in the War of 1812, in the troop of horse commanded by his brother-in-law, William Kendall, better known as General William Kendall. He belonged to a brigade commanded by his other brother-in-law, General Robert Lucas. His name is numbered seventeen on the original roll, now in possession of Mrs. John W. Overturf, of Columbus, Ohio. He entered the service July 28, 1813, and served one month. His pay was $8.00 per month for himself, and 40 cents per day for his horse. He was paid for one month and one day, $21.05. His age was put down as eighteen on the muster roll, which was a mistake of two years too young. While stopping at Chillicothe he had his picture painted on a board and sent to his mother. It is now in possession of Mrs. Charles P. Kehoe, of Portsmouth, Ohio, his grand-daughter, and looks as well as when it was painted seventy-eight years ago. A cut from it is shown on the opposite page.

John Brown, Jr., was a very active citizen. He was elected a member of the town council, in 1817, to fill a vacancy, and for two years he and his father were members at the same time. Two ninths of the town Council were Brown. In 1818, he was re-elected to Council, but in 1819 he resigned and moved out to the William Kendall place. On June 1, 1818, he was appointed County Treasurer for one year and gave bond of $4,000, with John R. Turner and William Kendall as sureties. On September 9, 1818, he had an advertisement in the only newspaper in Portsmouth, stating that "a stitch in time saves nine," and calling on those who owned him to come and settle, and if they did not, on October 1, 1818, he would put his accounts in the hands of Ezra Osborn, J. P., for collection.

He was once notified that he had a large estate in Ireland, near Dublin, which he could enter into possession of by swearing allegiance to the then king of England. He declared he would not do that for all of Ireland for an inheritance.

At one time he kept a tavern where the post office now stands in Portsmouth, Ohio. He also conducted a grist mill at the same place.

He was a Democrat in his political views, and a Methodist in religion. In 1826 he was a candidate for Justice of the Peace of Wayne Township, but was defeated. The vote stood, Ezra Osborn, 71; John Brown, 48. He married Charity Johnson, of Mason County, Kentucky, February 2, 1815. She was born August 19, 1793 in Hampshire County, Virginia. Their children were: 1st, Eliza, born February 1, 1816, married John F. Day, April 2, 1835; 2nd, John Johnson, born August 5, 1817, married a Miss Monroe of French Grant, and went to California; 3rd, Hannah, born January 19, 1820, married Franklin Bliss, of Wheelersburg; 4th, Isaac Brown, born

April 15, 1822, married Susan Rickey, of Jackson, C. H.; 5th, William Washington, born September 3, 1824, died in 1826; 6th, Benjamin Franklin, born February 17, 1827, married Susan Calvin, and located in Greenup, Kentucky; 7th, James Lawson, born September 23, 1830, married Ann Salisbury; 8th, Thomas, born December 22, 1823, and resides in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Our subject was wharf-master in Portsmouth in 1839, and real-estate appraiser in 1840. As the latter he served 145 days and his compensation was $295.00.

In 1834, he was a partner in Watson's Hotel with William Watson, Sr., for eighteen months. He attained the rank of Major in the State Militia. At one time he obtained the boot hooks of General Anthony Wayne; they are now in possession of Mrs. Charles P. Kehoe, before mentioned.

His wife died April 22, 1857. He survived until May 4, 1868, and he and she were buried at Mount Zion, Kentucky.

He was a useful and prominent citizen, but in obtaining municipal distinction was largely overshadowed by his father, John Brown, Sr., who has an interesting sketch elsewhere.

Royal Brown

was born April 11, 1811, in Vermont. His father was David Brown, a native of Massachusetts, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Hubbard, born in Connecticut, daughter of Wm. Hubbard. Our subject remained in Vermont three years, and in 1816, came to Portsmouth on a flat boat, with his father who had twenty-five cents in money left when he landed. Royal was then five years old. His father located on the east side of the Scioto river above Portsmouth. On account of fever and ague he left there and moved in Madison Township, and took part of the Dow McKinney farm now owned by his grandson. After residing here a few years he sold out, and bought land in Marion Township, Pike County, Ohio. He survived his wife. He was a Whig, and a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. He was a stock dealer as well as a farmer and owned a 200 acre farm. He lived an honorable and respectable life, but never made or accumulated money, as his sons, who made their own way, made money and became substantial farmers. His son, Royal Brown, before mentioned, married Rachel Beauchamp, August 18, 1833, whose mother was a native of England, but of French ancestry, daughter of John Beauchamp and Elizabeth Prettyman. Royal Brown began with a farm of eighty-three acres and afterwards acquired more land. He was a stone cutter, and built a great many chimneys for his neighbors. He was an ordained preacher of the Methodist Protestant Church and very active in his work. The children of Royal Brown were as follows: Harriet, married Thomas Allard, father of Dr. Allard, of Portsmouth, born June 27, 1834; Milton Wesley, born September

2, 1836, has a separate sketch herein; Francis Asbury, born Nov. 5, 1838, a minister in the Methodist Protestant Church; Elizabeth, born March 16, 1841, died in infancy; William, born August 23, 1842, died September 20, 1860; John Shepherd, born August 18, 1844, resides at Stockdale, was in Company "G" 91st Ohio Volunteer Infantry; Royal Benton, Born Jan. 12, 1847, resides at Stockdale; David Tipton, born May 18, 1849, lives at Stockdale; William Beauchamp, born December 12, 1860, also lives at Stockdale; Rachel Ellen, born January 28, 1848, married James Wallace, August 10, 1876. Royal Brown was the organizer of the Methodist Protestant Church at Stockdale. He was a lover of mutual rights, and claimed that the laity in every church should have the same privileges as the Clergy. He died December 31, 1894, aged 83 years, 8 months and 13 days.

Benjamin Brush

was born in Suffolk County, New York, April 1, 1817. He was the son of Joseph and Amy (Smith) Brush. His father was a native of New York and his mother of Connecticut. His parents located at Haverhill, Scioto County, Ohio, in 1822. Benjamin's early life was spent on the farm and in attending a subscription school, where he received a meager education. He worked at the shoe maker's trade and earned the money which enabled him to attend Dennison University, at Granville, in Licking County, where he fitted himself for a teacher. He taught school several years but finally gave it up and began farming, which occupation he followed until his death, November 5, 1893. He served as Justice of the Peace six years and as Township Clerk twenty-five years. He was a Republican although he favored Prohibition. He was a member of the Methodist Church for over forty years. In 1846, he married Ellen Butterfield, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Butterfield of Scioto County. He has five children living. Charles, Amy, Ida and William A., of Gervais and Benjamin of Durango, Mexico. He was a just man, a good Christian and a good citizen.

Henry Buchanan

was born in Kentucky, of Scotch parents, about 1800. His parents removed to Chillicothe, Ohio, while he was young. He received such education as he could obtain there. His elder sister married John Woodbrige, a banker of Chillicothe, and as he grew up he obtained a position in Woodbridge's bank, where he learned the business. In 1828, he married a Miss Woods, and removed to Portsmouth to take charge of the Commercial Bank as Cashier. His wife died at childbirth, the child, John Buchanan, lived to be fifty years of age, and died at Yellow Bud, Ross County. In 1834, he was elected a fence viewer of Wayne Township. This was evidently intended as a joke by those who voted for him, as it was customary to elect the most prominent men of the Township to that office. None of the

March 22, 1837, he was married to Elizabeth Belt, the daughter of Judge Belt of Chillicothe then a resident of Washington City. She died March 16, 1838, aged 19 years, 9 months and 17 days, in childbirth. Her daughter is now the wife of Lyman Perrin of Cincinnati, Ohio. This second wife of Mr. Buchanan's is buried at the foot of a large tree in Greenlawn cemetery, and the growth of the tree has broken the slab covering her grave. In 1842, he married the third time to Maria Louisa Nixon at Mobile, Alabama. Her parents were Irish, and she was the mother of six children, three boys and three girls. Of the sons, Harry and Austin are deceased, Frank is now living at Newport, Kentucky. Of the daughters, Alice and Kathleen are deceased, and Florence is the wife of one Dewitt, of Baltimore. Mr. Buchanan was prominently connected as financial agent and correspondent of the New York Company through the Stetsons, Bankers of New York. He attended to their business in Portsmouth, he also took quite an active part in the publication of a History of Ohio by Caleb Atwater, of whom he was an intimate friend. He visited West Union and other places with the author in the interest of the work. Mr. Buchanan was connected with the Commercial Bank of Portsmouth during its existence, and afterwards conducted business as a broker in Portsmouth. In 1843, he was Councilman of the town, and on the Committee to receive Ex-President John Quincy Adams, on the occasion of his visit to Portsmouth. He was Recorder of the town from November 15, 1844 to April 4, 1845. He was again Recorder of the town from March, 1846 to April, 1847. On July 20, 1849, he resigned his position as Councilman and left the city. He was always honorable in all his dealings, and had considerable property. He and all his family were communicants of All Saints Church. In 1849, he was in partnership with Thomas Dugan for a short time, as Buchanan & Dugan. He was also an Insurance Agent, and was agent of the Protection Insurance Company of Columbus. During this same year, he returned to Ross County and went into partnership with John Woodbridge, his brother-in-law, then a banker of Chillicothe and owner of the Rapid Forge Iron Works, to further improve the Rapid Forge property; but after failure to secure a sufficient dam across the Rocky Fork, a few hundred yards above the Rapid Forge dam in Paint Creek, the enterprise was abandoned, after the loss of many thousand dollars. In 1852, Henry Buchanan with his family moved to Newport, Kentucky, and took charge of the interests of the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company of Cincinnati. When this institution was closed under the State Banking Law, Mr. Buchanan was elected President of the Newport Safety Fund Bank, which was successfully managed by him, and ceased to do business only after the U. S. Banking Law went into effect. During the closing years of his life, Mr. Buchanan with his sons, Harry and Frank, managed the interests of the Hartford City Life Insurance and Trust Company in Kentucky as State Agents. He died in 1872 in Newport, Kentucky, and is buried there. He left a wife and five children. He was a man of fine personal presence. His weight was seldom less than two hundred pounds. He was six feet and two inches high. In politics, he was first a Whig, but during his later years he voted with the Democrats, though he was never prominent in politics.

Rev. Erastus Burr, D. D.

Of all those who ever lived in Portsmouth, there is no finer or more admirable character than the subject of this sketch. His history and life is largely the history and life of the community in which he dwelt and spent his life. If ever there was a life spent in Portsmouth which was illustrative of the excellences and nobilities of human character, it was this one. It makes no difference from what point of view the life and character of Doctor Burr be viewed, the result is the same: there is ever some noble element to call out admiration. And yet Doctor Burr's life was nothing but a round of simple every day duties, which every clergyman is called on to observe and perform, but he elevated and ennobled them. Doctor Burr never made any show of goodness, such a thing never occurred to him in the course of his long and useful life. He simply lived to do each day what was before him, to do it well and on his conscience. He was a man of extensive learning, of broad scholarship, but he never attempted to display it. As a matter of course he could not conceal it, for it was part of his life. He was a beacon light to all those about him. He was a man of most excellent judgment, and it served him on all occasions. He was never perturbed or excited. There was nothing nervous or excitable about him, and he always said, advised and did the best thing to be advised, said or done; and his advice, his statements and his actions, on or about any subject, seemed to be conclusive. His diction in public speaking was perfect. He never violated the rules of syntax, never used slang and his qualifying words of every subject of which he spoke, seemed to be perfect. While his delivery was slow, his thoughts and ideas were always instructive and interesting. At the conclusion of his career, when the memory of his life was most vivid, it was said of him, that the loved clergyman and citizen had passed away. He was at that time revered and respected above any citizen of Portsmouth. When discussing goodness and excellence in the community he was always placed first. He was a man of broad views on every subject. He was always conservative, never impetuous or inconsiderate. He was never carried away by new ideas or notions, never adopted extreme views or followed extreme courses in respect to any subject. He was wise in the best and broadest sense of the term. Where his advice was sought and followed, the recipient always found he had adopted the very best course.

REV. ERASTUS BURR.

He was born at Bridgeport, Conn., April 15, 1805, of a long line of honorable ancestry. At the age of thirteen his father settled in Worthington, Ohio, and here, in 1820, he began his preparations for college under Bishop Philander Chase. He attended school in Worthington until 1825, when the school was removed to Gambier, Ohio. He attended the school there until 1828, when he entered Trinity College at Hartford, Conn., where he graduated in 1830. On his return from Hartford, he went to Nashville, Tenn., and studied theology, though he really went on account of his health. On January 6, 1833, at Lexington, Ky., he was ordered deacon, and on August 29, 1834, he was ordained priest by Rev. Dudley Smith, Bishop of Kentucky. This was Bishop Smith's first ordination of a priest. In April, 1833, Doctor Burr took charge of the St. John's Church at Worthington, Ohio, and remained there until he came to Portsmouth. On February 7, 1833, he was married to Miss Harriet Griswold at Worthington. On November 9, 1838, he became Rector of All Saints Church at Portsmouth, and there he spent the remainder of his life. On November 9, 1873, he retired from the Rectorship of All Saints Church, and on that occasion preached his thirty-fifth anniversary sermon. The writer heard it, and it is one of his cherished memories. Again on November 9, 1891, fifty-three years after taking the Rectorship, and at the ripe age of 86, he again addressed the All Saints Congregation. He stood on his feet and spoke for one hour and twenty minutes and no one was restless. He held the strict attention of all his hearers, and his mind was bright and clear as in his youth. He desired the Congregation to consider that address his last words, and so they proved. He stood on the brink of eternity and gave his people tender and affectionate advice and counsel, and words of loving farewell.

He was an examiner of the Public Schools of the city from 1839 most of his life. He was County School Examiner for forty years continuously, and had the confidence, respect and affection of the teachers. In the duty of granting certificates, he was always just, and he invariably gave the teacher the benefit of the doubt. He resigned the County Examinership in 1888, but held the City Examinership till his death, because his colleagues insisted on it. In the Councils of his own Church no clergyman was better known or more highly respected. In the Convention of his own Diocese, he was always on the most important Committees. From 1856 to 1887, he was on the Committee on Canons, which dealt with the laws of the Church and had the best talent and learning of the Convention. The Bishop frequently called on him as temporary chairman, and he was the Bishop's own counselor. The Bishop always sought his advice and it goes without saying, followed it. In the discussion of all questions in the Convention, after Dr. Burr spoke, the body was ready for a vote, and his views were nearly always adopted. After he had spoken on a question, the members wondered why they had not seen it that way before. Doctor Burr's influence in his own church was not limited to the Diocese. He was a Trustee of Kenyon College and of Bexley Hall for 48 years, and his labors on those Boards were most highly appreciated by his colleagues. He attended each General Convention of his Church from 1840 until 1877, and was most favorably known in that body. This was the highest honor his Diocese could confer.

In his prime, he could have been a Bishop, but discouraged all advances of that kind. All the honors he ever held came to him. He sought none. He had very few, if any enemies, and yet a man more positive in his convictions never lived. He had a way of enforcing his ideas on all subjects, which convinced those about him that he was right and his way was best. Everybne conceded he was the best man in the city. His life was pure and noble. It was set to high ideals, conscientiously followed. He was modest, sincere, sympathetic, and his type of Christianity was the best. He died in perfect peace December 19, 1891.

Bishop Boyd Vincent conducted his funeral, and the Masonic bodies and the teachers of the Public Schools attended in a body.

Samuel B. Burt

was a prominent citizen in Scioto County in the early times. He was a Supervisor in Wayne Township in 1810. In 1812, he was a Lister in Wayne Township, and in 1813, 1814 and 1815 a Trustee. He was one of the first nine city fathers and drew a three years' term. On May 1, 1815, he and William Kendall were on a Committee to bring in a bill on executions. In 1815, he built a school house. In 1817, he removed from the city into the country on the West Side. He was elected a County Commissioner in 1818, 1821 and 1826. He was a Lister in Nile Township in 1818. In 1829, he was elected County Commissioner for three years, but removed from the County in 1830. Nothing further is known of him.

Thomas Burt

was born in 1803 in Scioto County, near Sciotoville, Ohio. He was a Health Officer of Portsmouth in 1836. He was one of the Executive Committee of the Portsmouth Clay Club which was organized May 23, 1844. He was elected Wharfmaster April 5, 1844 and served until December 1, 1855, when he resigned. He was County Commissioner from 1861 to 1867. In 1826, he was married to Ann Bufington. She was born at White Post, Loudon County, Virginia, March 13, 1809. She came to Portsmouth with her parents in 1814. Thomas Burt had six sons and five daughters. The four surviving sons are: William, John, Charles and Henry. Lewis and Thomas are deceased. Thomas Burt died February 26, 1871, in Vicksburg, Mississippi, while on a visit there. His wife died February 13, 1892, in Chillicothe, Ohio, at the residence of her son, Henry, and was brought to Portsmouth for burial.

Abraham W. Buskirk

was born in Bedford County, Virginia, in 1820. He was brought up there until he was eighteen years of age. His mother was a sister of Col. T. J. Graham. At the age of eighteen, he came to Greenup County, Kentucky, and became a clerk in a store. He became acquainted with J. V. Robinson there and by him, was induced to come to Portsmouth, Ohio, and engaged as a clerk for him. He remained with Mr. Robinson for a number of years. In 1846, he engaged in the wholesale grocery with Frank J. Oakes as a partner, under the firm name of Oakes and Buskirk. This firm continued until 1868 when Frank J. Oakes retired and George Davis took his place in the business. Mr. Buskirk remained with Mr. Davis until he sold out to William R. Stricklett in 1872. Mr. Buskirk then went in partnership with Sam Hempstead at Hanging Rock. In 1878, he started a Stove and Tinware House in Portsmouth, and in 1883, he retired from all business. He was married to Josephine Oakes, June 4, 1845, by Rev. Gould, in Gallipolis. They had six children. His son, Frank Whitney, was born March 24, 1846. Harry Henderson was born May 22, 1848; Floyd Oakes, born May 1, 1850 and died November 21, 1879. They had one daughter, Aileen, now the wife of George Gilliland, of Washington, D. C. They also had a son, Charles Tracy, who died when he was about thirty years of age, and Fred, now residing in Cincinnati. Mr. Buskirk resided in Portsmouth from his retirement until his death on the 6th of July, 1898. His wife survived until August 4, 1891. Mr. Buskirk was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth for a number of years, also a member of the City Board of Equalization, and had been for several years prior to his death. During the entire Civil War he was a member of the County Military Committee. In his business career, he was noted for his integrity and fair dealings. He is a valuable citizen and highly esteemed in every relation of life.

was born February 17, 1793. His father was Claudius Cadot, and his mother Jane Bastine, both of France. They were married in Paris in 1790. Right after their marriage they started as emigrants to Gallipolis. They arrived there in the fall of 1790. Three children were born to them. The first was Maria Louise, born January 28, 1791 she married Francis LeClercq, October 21, 1809. They had two children, a son and a daughter, Claudius Cadot, our subject was the second child; the third was Lemuel Cadot, who was born two years subsequent to Claudius. In 1795, Claudius Cadot, senior, fell a victim to the climate and died. In three months his

and married Frances Charles Duteil. They located in the French Grant in 1797. Duteil first came down alone to the Grant and built a log cabin on Lot number 32 in the French Grant which he had drawn as one of the emigrants. Three months later he brought his wife and step-children down. Young Claudius worked on his step-father's farm and learned the art of distilling fruits and grains. He had altogether about eleven months schooling. In the spring of 1812 he volunteered in Capt. John Lucas' Company for one year to go into the war of 1812. He went as far as Urbana, and there his Company joined Col. Duncan McArthur's Regiment, 1st Ohio Volunteers. General Hull took command of the army and marched to Detroit where he surrendered on the 16th of the August following. Before Hull surrendered our subject was engaged in the battle of Brownsville and after the surrender he and his companions were sent to Cleveland. From there they walked to near Pittsburg, and then floated down the Ohio river. Cadot got off at Gallipolis to visit his sister. After that he engaged in keel boating on the Ohio river, in connection with the celebrated Mike Fink, and earned about 50 cents per day at first and afterwards 62 1-2 cents per day. He followed this four years and saved enough money to buy a quarter section of land. On March 24, 1818, he had patented to him from the United States, the southwest quarter, Section 15, Township 3, Range 21, and afterwards bought 57 acres out of the northwest part of the northwest quarter of the same section, township and range from his brother Lemuel for $150.00.

On December 17, 1819, he married Nancy Ball and in 1820, he moved onto his land. In 1820, he built him a commodious frame house. June 9, 1835, he lost his wife who was born December 30, 1799. He afterwards married Cynthia Stockham whom he survived. After the death of his second wife, he broke up house-keeping and resided with his daughter, Mrs. Mary Hayward, first in the vicinity of Wheelersburg and afterwards in Wheelersburg. He was the last survivor of his Company in the War of 1812, and drew a pension under the law of 1878.

His children were, Mary, born May 1, 1821, married Eliphaz Hayward, and is now his widow; Charles F., born October 12, 1822; Eliza J., born March 4, 1825, married Peter F. Boynton; John Claudius, born June 20, 1828, married to Mary A. Winkler, who died July 11, 1901; Sophronia, born July 27, 1829, died young; Juliet, born April 1, 1830; Madeline, born May 1, 1832, married Asa Boynton, and is deceased. Ruhama, youngest daughter, married Charles Pixley of Ironton.

The following is an estimate of Mr. Cadot from one who knew him best: In Claudius Cadot the elements which most contribute to the thrift and general prosperity of the French people as a nation were pre-eminently united. He had great industry, untiring energy, a rare capacity for good management, and the ideas of frugality which had been inbred in the French colonists who located on the Ohio. These qualities, united with a frame of iron, insured for the little man the success which his life exemplified. By good fortune, too, he invested the hard earnings of his youth, made at keel-boating and other laborious pursuits, in land located near the iron furnaces of the Pine Creek country in the Hanging Rock region, and thus realized a ready market for all his produce and Claudius Cadot always had something to sell. If his neighbors—who also lived on farms—ran short of feed, or fruit, or truck, or young stock, Cadot could nearly always supply them. As he continued to prosper he added to his holdings until his farm grew to comprise hundreds of acres. He was prudent and cautious withal—and came to be widely recognized as a solid, safe, substantial, reliable man. At the end of life, when his surplus securities were unrolled and were found to net nearly $60,000, in addition to his real estate holdings, it presented a valuable object lesson as to what the young man in this country, starting with his bare hands, and working without speculative methods, may achieve, if he is animated by the right spirit. And besides his worldly accumulations, he left not only a worthy example to the community, but the record of a pure life and honorable name to his family.

Lemuel Cadot, Sr., was born in Gallipolis, Ohio, July 4, 1794, the son of Claudius Cadot, one of the 500 French who formed the settlement at Gallipolis. His father died in 1795 when he was but a year old and his mother took him and his brother Claudius and his sister Mary to the French Grant to live. His sister who afterwards married Francis Le Clercq was the first child born in Gallipolis. When a boy our subject worked at keel-boating. From 1817 to 1827, he was thus engaged and would go with a keel-boat from Pittsburg to Nashville, Tennessee, and sometimes walk back. In 1827, he purchased a farm from the government and followed farming until he died, still residing on his original farm. He was married July 28, 1828, to Catherine Baccus, daughter of James S. Baccus. To them were born nine children, six sons and three daughters. Mary Jane, wife of Harrison H. Fullerton, died in 1873. One daughter died in infancy. Nancy M., wife of Dr. Thomas McGovney, died some years ago at Ironton, O.; William Henry Harrison and C. S. Cadot of Portsmouth, John Julius and Lemuel Zenas, both deceased; Seymour Sydney of Fredericksburg, Virginia, and James Claudius, deceased. Our subject was a township officer for a number of years, but held no other offices. He was industrious and an honorable citizen, a good neighbor and a careful and close business man. In charitable matters he was liberal. He died June 6, 1875.

George Washington Calvert

was born in Prince William County, Virginia, September 15, 1805. When he was a child his father died and his mother came to Ohio with her family and located in Scioto County in the vicinity of Portsmouth. For many years young Calvert was in the employ of the late Captain Cleveland, as manager of his farm, now known as the "Infirmary Farm." He was also engaged for a time as a contractor on the Ohio canal, having charge of a section between Portsmouth and Jasper. When the canal was finished, he purchased some land in the neighborhood of Portsmouth, to which he afterwards added as his circumstances permitted; and at the time of his death he was the owner of a very large and valuable farm in the Scioto Valley. In the latter part of his life he was engaged in farming.

Our subject's early education was meager, but he was quite a reader and student and acquired a great fund of general knowledge.

In 1833, he was married to Miss Mary Emma Dent Hoskinson, daughter of the Rev. Josiah Hoskinson, of Scioto County, but formerly of Virginia. Mrs. Calvert died April 1, 1852, of lung fever, at which time Mr. Calvert was very sick with the same disease. They had six children, five of whom survived; Frank W., formerly a groceryman in Portsmouth, now deceased; Robert A., attorney-at-law, Portsmouth; Thomas E., farmer of Scioto County, and Eva A., wife of Silas Clark.

For some years prior to his death, Mr. Calvert married a second time to Miss Jane E. Reed, who survived him. He died August 5, 1874.

In 1868, he established the Calvert dairy farm and conducted it until the spring of 1874.

Mr. Calvert was a Whig during the time of that party and after the death of that party, he became a Democrat.

He was an advocate of progress at all times and was noted for his integrity and kindness of heart.

Phineas Bean Chaffin

was born December 7, 1823, in Porter Township, Scioto County, Ohio. His father, Phineas B. Chaffin, was a brother of Shadrach, Reuben and Daniel Chaffin. His father came from New Hampshire in 1812, and married his mother, Almira Wheeler in 1820. She was a daughter of Nathaniel Wheeler, a Revolutionary soldier, whose record as such will be found in the article on Revolutionary Soldiers in this work. Levi and Luther Wheeler, and Nathaniel Wheeler, Jr., well known in Scioto County, were her brothers. Of the children of Phineas Chaffin, Sr., there were: Lovina and Vilena; Lovina married Reuben Lamb in the French Grant and had a family; Vilena married Horace T. Hall, and had a family. Phineas B., our subject, was the next child, and then there were two who died in infancy.

He had a brother John who married Rebecca Patton, and reared a family. Another brother Frances M., married Susan Perry, and reared a family. Another brother, William Brackett, married and has two sons living in Huntington, W. Va. Their names are Clarence and William. Another brother, Thomas B., is married, has a family, and lives in Portsmouth, and George a brother also lives in Portsmouth, and has a family. Abigail, a sister, married Francis Andre. Both are deceased. Another sister, Calphurnia married Augustus Andre, and lives in Huntington. Our subject married Persis Lamb, January 18, 1848. They have five children living, two sons and three daughters. The sons, Albert Byers and Frank Morey, reside in Morgan Township. Of the daughters, Ruby married Thomas Hartman and resides at Wheelersburg; Ida May and Ina Belle are unmarried. Our subject lived on the Lamb farm, one and one-half mile below Franklin Furnace, from 1848 to 1875; and then bought the Montgomery Mill on Pine Creek and lived there until April 5, 1882, and then moved to Crabtree, Morgan Township, where he has since resided. He was a Whig until the Republican party came into existence, and acted with them until 1896, when he voted for Bryan. He learned the shoemakers trade, but never followed it after his marriage. The Lamb family came from Vermont and the Chaffin family came from New Hampshire. His wife died the 1st of September, 1890.

Aaron Clark

was born at Piketon, Ohio, June 18, 1808. He came to Scioto County in 1834, and settled in Washington Township, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was married April 3, 1836, to Eliza Orme, daughter of John Orme, who with his sons, Silas and John, and daughter, Mrs. Lovey J. Carlin survive him. He was a Democrat all his life. At one time he was worth considerable money, but three Scioto floods in five years lost him all he had. In 1878, he was the candidate of his party for sheriff, and was defeated. He died June 15, 1899. Uncle Aaron, as he was generally known, was always willing to do everything for everybody, even to the neglect of his own affairs. He was an easy going citizen and a good neighbor, but utterly lacked the talent of accumulation. His widow, the youngest child of John Orme and the only survivor of his family is living near Dan Harwood's in Morgan Township. She was born September 12, 1817, in a log house near the great mound which formerly stood on the Heinisch lot on Gallia street.

was born in Ireland, County Tyrone, near Fintona, November 6, 1829. His father's name was John Crawford, who came to this country in 1840, landed at Manchester, and went from Manchester to West Union. He bought a little farm on Brush Creek and moved out there. He resided there until his death, August 23, 1873 at the age of eighty-five. His mother's maiden name was Jane McClung. She died November 7, 1855, aged 63 years. His parents had ten children, all of whom they brought to the United States. They came over in the ship, Napier to Philadelphia, and were six weeks on the ocean. The youngest child, two years old, died on the ocean and was buried at sea.

Our subject received his education in Ireland, but attended pay schools all the time, as they had no free schools there in his time. He helped to build the Maysville & Zanesville Turnpike through West Union to Aberdeen. His father, his oldest brother Samuel and himself worked on the pike. In the spring of 1841, his brother Samuel and he went to Bloom Furnace and worked there. In 1842, they went to Jackson Furnace and part of the time at Junior Furnace. They dug ore and filled the furnaces. In the spring of 1843, Joe Smith put him in the store at Junior Furnace, as storekeeper, and his brother Samuel worked in the coal mines. In addition to keeping the store, he attended to taking up the charcoal. In 1844, he was put in the office at Junior Furnace, as book-keeper, and remained there until March 1, 1851. He was married December 26, 1849, to Mary Young Glidden, daughter of Samuel Mills Glidden. They went to housekeeping at Junior Furnace, but moved to Clinton Furnace in March, 1851, where he still resides and expects to die.

Joseph W., Charles N., O. H., and Daniel H. Glidden, four brothers, bought Clinton Furnace in 1848. Our subject went in with them first as a book-keeper. Then Stephen Glidden, his brother-in-law and he rented the Furnace, and operated it until 1854. At the end of three years, he bought the interest of Stephen Glidden and bought 1-24 from each of the other owners. The furnace continued under the firm name of Glidden, Crawford & Co., until the fall of 1867, when Mr. Crawford bought the entire property. He took in with him Wm. J. Bell. They operated the Furnace as Crawford & Bell, until the fall of 1870, when he sold out to Wm. J. Bell, who operated the Furnace individually. Our subject then moved to Portsmouth, and after ten years lawing about the title of the Furnace, Mr. Crawford bought it back. The Furnace went out of blast in the fall or winter of 1873 for good. There were 5,000 acres of the Furnace property at that time. Mr. Crawford sold about 3,000 acres of the land to G. W. Kelley. His son owns 2,500 acres around the whole furnace site and Mr. Crawford resides there.

His wife died April 22, 1891. Their children are as follows: Mary Ellia, died at sixteen months; George W., formerly Mayor of Portsmouth; Charles M., died at the age of eight years; Dr. John N. W., residing in New York City; Doctor Mrs. M. A. G. Dwight, at Boston.

Mr. Crawford was a Whig while that party lasted, and since then has been a Republican. He is a typical Irishman. Though the infirmities of age have worsted him somewhat, he is hale and hearty for his years. He is as full of business as he was at the age of twenty. Care acts on him like water on a duck's feathers. Time was when he was in a sea of troubles in the business world, but now he is a spectator and enjoys seeing the procession go by. He has outlived all his contemporaries in business, but yet life is sweet to him and he disagrees with the poet who wrote the hymn, "I would not live always."

was born at Norwich, Conn., December 24, 1796. He was a brother of the father of Ex-President Cleveland. He received a very liberal education and when it was complete, he went to New York City and engaged as a Clerk for his uncle. In 1817, he went to Zanesville, O., where he taught school one year. Here he married and two children were born to him, a son and a daughter. His wife died in 1823. His sister, Mrs. Lewis F. Allen of Black Fork, New York, took the infant daughter and reared her till she was fourteen years of age, when she died. His son Francis lived in the east with relatives until he was eighteen years of age, when he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and lived with his father one year or more. He went from Portsmouth, Ohio to Indiana. From there he went to California, where he soon after died.

In 1832, our subject went into business in Zanesville with one, Charles Hill, as jewelers. They bought a large stock of high priced goods in the east and could not sell them. As a result, they failed in business. This was in 1824, and he obtained work on the Miami Canal as an Assistant Engineer. He developed a talent for the work and in 1825 was made an Engineer on the Ohio Canal.

In 1828 and 1829, he located on the Ohio Canal from ten miles north of Chillicothe to Portsmouth, Ohio. Captain Cleveland had complete charge of the building of the canal for this distance. He was given the naming of the new town to be located in Pike County and he named it Waverly, for Sir Walter Scott's "Waverly." The Captain was a great reader of standard fiction and was especially fond of Scott. He possessed excellent literary taste and was a great collector of books. When he located in Portsmouth, in 1828, he was the best educated person in the town, excepting Dr. G. S. B. Hempstead. He and his assistants worked all winter in locating the canal and the wonder is he did not die from the effects of it. From the spring of 1828 until his death, his home was in Portsmouth. On July 4, 1831, Portsmouth had the greatest celebration of Independence Day in its history. Captain Cleveland read the Declaration of Independence, after which a salvo of artillery was fired as a defiance to King George. He also responded to one of the toasts at the public dinner on that day. In 1832, he was one of the lecturers before the Portsmouth Lyceum. In 1833, he was overtaken by financial failure a second time by reason of this connection with the New York Company. In 1834, he married Miss Margaret Waller, the daughter of Dr. Thomas Waller. In 1835, he went to Indiana and located the Whitewater Canal. Soon after this he bought what is now the Infirmary farm and built the stone house residence where he resided for some time. In 1845, he had a ferry at the mouth of the Scioto river for which he paid $25.00 per annum. In 1844, he edited the Portsmouth Enquirer and continued that till 1852, when he sold out. In 1848 he was the Democratic candidate for Congress and was defeated. J. L. Taylor was his opponent. In Scioto County, Taylor received 1,530 votes and Cleveland 1,064. In 1851, he was the Democratic candidate for State Senator in the new Seventh District, against Col. O. F. Moore and was defeated. The vote in Scioto County stood, Moore 1,348, Cleveland 928. He adhered to the Democracy till about 1861, when he became a Republican and remained as such the remainder of his life.

On October 26, 1848, his wife died leaving no issue. He never re-married. In 1849 to 1851, he was an Examiner and Inspector of the public schools. From 1851 to 1853 he was City Clerk. He was also City Clerk from April 24, 1865 until November 6, 1872. He was Town Surveyor from 1854 to 1860. In 1855, as a member of the City Council, he offered a resolution to build the first sewer in Portsmouth and it carried. In 1856, he was appointed engineer to construct the Third street sewer and controlled the entire work. From 1852 to 1872, he was Secretary of the Aurora Lodge of Free Masons. He was very fond of Masonry and attained the 33rd degree.

In 1870, he was one of the Infirmary Directors of Portsmouth. He was the most efficient City Clerk the town ever had. The Committee on Claims was a great power in its time, but Captain Cleveland was equal to the Committee on Claims, and the whole Council besides. He knew every detail and department of the city's affairs. He knew the city's financial condition all the time. The writer knew of his work from April, 1871, to November 4, 1872. On Monday morning, November 4, 1872, he was found in his office speechless. He seemed to be as well as usual in every respect, but his voice was utterly gone. He could not even make a sound, though he could see, hear and understand everything said to him and move about as usual. He could not write, and hence was cut off all communication with his fellows. His minutes from October were all complete and were in the same firm hand as he always wrote in. A few days after his affliction, the council passed resolutions in regard to his official career, in which it was stated that he was always found at his post of duty and ready to furnish information as to city matters. He was ever watchful of the city's welfare and was truthful and honest. Council resolved it had lost the best and most efficient clerk it ever had, and that he had the sympathy of the council. His salary was ordered paid him to date and that a copy of the resolutions be given him. As long as council had the election of clerk, Captain Cleveland was re-elected unanimously, regardless of the political complexion of council.

Well might the Council have spread this testimonial on its journal. For years the Captain had done the work of the committees of Council and they had only to sign their names to a report. Moreover when Captain Cleveland did this work for the members, it was done better than they could have done it themselves, and they knew it. His mind was a most perfect repository of the city's business. He knew every document and every book in his office and could find anything called for at once. It was a good, clean, easy job to be a councilman while Captain Cleveland was clerk. If a councilman, did not know everything about city affairs (which was usually the case) all he had to do was to ask Captain Cleveland and he was informed at once.

In 1869, the City Clerkship was elective by the people for once and Captain Cleveland was on the Republican ticket and Thomas G. Howell on the Democratic. The vote stood Cleveland 893, Howell 663, a majority of 238, the largest majority of any one elected.

No doubt every Democratic Councilman and city officer voted for the Captain. He was not a religious man. All his religious emotions evidenced themselves in his Masonry. He did more work for the City of Portsmouth in the administration of its affairs than any officer who ever held office under its municipal organization.

As City Civil Engineer, he was the best qualified who ever held the office. The sewers he built stand as well today as when he finished them. The Captain was very fond of reading standard works on science and literature. He wrote out the manuscript of a scientific work which was never published. It is in the possession of his niece, Miss Clara Waller.

He survived until June 26, 1881, more than eight years after his stroke of paralysis, but he never recovered his power of speech or ability to write. He could see and could go about, but the world was dead to him and he to it. When stricken with paralysis he had been making his home with Robert Montgomery and he continued his home here until his death. His Masonic brethren and his wife's relatives looked after his comfort, but it seems the irony of fate that he should be compelled to live over eight years shut off from the world. No more useful citizen ever lived in Portsmouth.

Charles Chick

was born in Gallia County, Ohio, December 23, 1823. He was the son of William and Nancy (Skinner) Chick. William Chick, his father, was born in Somerset, England, April 25, 1794. He, with two brothers, John and Charles, came to this country in 1817 and settled in Gallia County. John Chick for years was superintendent of Mt. Vernon Furnace. William Chick in 1828, purchased a farm of five or six hundred acres in the French Grant and removed his family there. He built the stone house on his farm which stood until 1900 when it was destroyed by fire. He had learned the trade of stone mason at the Portsmouth, England, Navy Yards. He also built the stone church near Powellsville which was torn down about 1892. He was baptized in the Church of England, but there was no Episcopal church near him and he gave his strong support to the Baptist church, which he built on his farm with his own hands and contributed very liberally to its founding. His children were: John, who died on "the Isthmus" while on his way to California; Charles, the subject of this sketch; William, aged seventy-seven, who resides at Walton, Indiana; Elizabeth, wife of John Shope, who died at Powellsville; Frank, who died at his home in Illinois; George, aged seventy-five, of Newport, California; Hiram, aged seventy-three, of Sierra street, Los Angeles, California, and Vashti, aged seventy-one, the wife of James Davis, of Walton, Indiana. William Chick's wife died in 1843, and in 1846 he purchased the farm on the river east of the city which is now the site of the Burgess Mill and of Yorktown. The farm contained 237 acres for which he paid $5,000. In March, 1847, while the family were preparing to move to the river farm, he was taken sick and died. Charles and Vashti, the two children who were still at home, moved to the new farm. Charles bought out the other heirs and spent the remainder of his life there. In 1854, he was married to Sarah Lawson, daughter of Squire John Lawson, oldest son of William Lawson, pioneer of Scioto County and oldest son of Thomas Lawson of Hampshire County, Virginia, who was a soldier of the Revolutionary War. Sarah Lawson was also the great-granddaughter of Michael Watson, pioneer of Adams County, who was born in Maryland and emigrated to Mason County, Kentucky, in 1790, and to Adams County, Ohio, in 1804.

The children of Charles and Sarah Lawson Chick are: Elizabeth, wife of Henry Amberg, Stephen C., Ida M., wife of W. D. Horr, Clara B., John W., Harriet, wife of William W. Gates, Jr., Ella E., Laura R., Walter A., and Pearl. One child Henrietta died when three years of age. All the children live in this city with one exception, John, resides on the Peebles farm at New Boston. Charles Chick died June 8, 1877. His widow resided on the farm until 1898 when she sold the farm and moved to this city. She had lived in the same house for forty-four years, having gone there when a bride. She and four children: Clara, Ella, Laura and Pearl now reside at 229 Gallia street. Charles Chick was a man of sterling qualities and the soul of honor; ever ready to lend a helping hand or do a kindness to a neighbor; he was honored and respected by all who knew him. The "Golden Rule" was the rule of his life and whatever he did was characterized by thoroughness. His farm was one of the model farms of the county.

was a native of Perthshire, Scotland, where he was born February 10, 1821. His father was David Crichton and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth MacFarland. The father with one daughter came to Porter Township in 1832, leaving the family to settle up affairs at home and come over the following season. When the mother and children arrived, they found that the father and daughter had lately died, and they were thus thrown among strangers to wage life's battle, as best they could.

The children were: John, who early emigrated to the Pacific coast where he lived, unmarried, though in prosperous circumstances; Andrew, a notice of whom appears in this volume; James who became partner in Buckhorn Furnace with Seeley, Willard & Company, married Ruby Whitcomb and left two children; Ernest and James, the former a partner, Secretary and Treasurer of a navigation company in Portland, Oregon and Amelia who married a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Gamaliel Beaman and lived in Croton, Iowa, whose only son David C. Beaman is a practicing attorney in Denver, Colorado; Elizabeth who married Doctor Josiah Haines, a practicing physician in Keokuk, Iowa; Janet now living in Wheelersburg, Ohio, unmarried, and William, the subject of this sketch, who died unmarried at the old home, in October, 1894.

When the gold fever broke out in 1849 Mr. Crichton caught it and became an Argonaut. He went overland to California with the party made up at Wheelersburg and a full account of his trip will be found under the article "Forty-niners." While in California Mr. Crichton turned to the carpenter's trade and worked in the erection of buildings in San Francisco. He soon tired of California and returned, by the Panama route. He concluded Scioto County was good enough for him and settled down to the life of a farmer. This occupation was to him a study, a pleasure, an esthetic recreation, as well as a source of profit. The first reaper introduced in Porter township, if not in the county, was one of the old, heavy McCormick reapers which he bought soon after it began to be manufactured. His tastes ran to wheat culture. It was he who first demonstrated, even before the days of commercial fertilizers, that there was money in wheat raising. His wheat yields ran up to twenty, twenty-five and sometimes thirty bushels an acre, in favorable seasons. So his neighbors began to take observations. And largely through Crichton's pioneer work in this direction, this section has become one of the famous wheat producing districts of the State.

As a man he was far above the average in culture and intelligence. His reading was varied and extensive and few subjects came up that he was not competent to discuss intelligently. In 1869, he revisited relatives in Scotland and made a tour on the continent. He began keeping a diary at that time, in which he made entries daily thereafter up to the time of his death, so that on referring to this he could tell in a moment about the weather and seasons and all the occurrences of any importance on any day referred to. He was a good talker and a charming companion. A complete file of Harper's Magazine from the first number issued down to the time of his death had a place in his library. Flowers of many kinds, gorgeous beds of them in season, adorned his yard, kept fresh by a perennial spring in their midst, and in the cultivation of these, he took great pleasure and spent a large part of his later years. And withal, he wielded a facile pen and, on occasion, could write an idyllic sketch, or an ironic, biting screed. Not many knew that an occasional editorial from his pen would sometimes appear unsigned in the local press. A fine sense of honor, to those who knew him, formed the ineradicable substratum of his character. In matters of principle he was uncompromising. A trust of any kind was absolutely safe in his keeping. When abolitionism was a reproach he was one of two in his township who voted his principles. And he permitted no questions of expediency to dim or blur his perceptions of what was honorable and right. He was a fair type of the Old World country gentleman transplanted to the New.

was born in Chenango County, New York, August 2, 1797. He received a common school education and in 1819 he went to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in teaching English in a German school. In the summer of that year he walked to Pittsburgh. On leaving there he with two others went in a skiff to Portsmouth, Ohio, where he landed and which place he afterwards made his home. As a youth he had been brought up to the trade of wagon maker. He located in Washington Township, and followed that trade there and in Portsmouth until about 1825. On November 22, 1822, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Huston, daughter of William Huston, and settled in the town of Portsmouth, on the southwest corner of Second and Court streets. He continued to reside in Portsmouth until 1839, and from that year until 1840, he lived on a small farm along the canal on the West Side. In 1826, he was Supervisor of the east ward of Portsmouth, and the same year, he was Overseer of the Poor in Wayne Township. In 1827, he was one of the Health Officers of the Town, and in 1830, he was the Clerk of Wayne Township. In 1832, he was made an additional member of the Board of Health, in Portsmouth, on account of the cholera. In 1833 and 1834, he was a member of the Town Council and one of the committee on claims. Thus he became one of the aristocrats of the town. In 1835, he was President of the Council. In 1836, he was allowed $100.00 for his services, caring for the streets. In 1837, he was elected street commissioner of the town of Portsmouth, when that office was first created. He served in the same office the following year. In 1844, he was elected a County Commissioner and served one term. In 1837, he was elected County Infirmary Director. He was re-nominated in 1867, on the Republican ticket; but went down in the great disaster to the Republicans in that year. However, he was re-elected in 1869 and served another term. In 1861, his wife died. In 1864, he married Mrs. Antoinette Squires, who survived him.

The following were the children of his first marriage: George W., who lives at Dry Run, this county; William Crayton, who resides at New Windsor, Illinois; Charles Oscar, living at Cheshire, Ohio; Amos Burnham, deceased; Caroline, the widow of William Barber, who resides in Portsmouth, Ohio; Joseph H. hereinafter mentioned; Silas, living in Washington Township; John, who lives on the Gable farm in Clay Township and James Madison of Hulett, Wyoming.

In politics, he was a Whig and Republican. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for fifty years and a consistent one at that. His son, Joseph H. Cole, entered Co. E of the 33rd Ohio as a private, and was appointed Sergeant, promoted to Second Lieutenant in 1863, and on September 19, 1863, was killed at the battle of Chickamauga.

Mr. Cole was a man of severe manners and of great dignity. He was one of the plain Methodists. Had he lived in the time of the Puritans, he would have been a Chief among them. He was always frugal and industrious. He was regular in all his habits and positive in his opinions. Sometimes he appeared to be abrupt and cold, but with all he was a most excellent man and citizen and a very earnest Christian. With him religion was no loose sentiment, but a set of principles to be lived every day. He held many times the offices of Steward and Trustee in the Church. He died on the 6th of January, 1875, honored and respected by the entire circle of his acquaintance.

Captain Samuel Cole.

son of Benjamin and Hannah Coles, (Quakers) was born at Glen Cove, Long Island, June 8, 1808. His father was a farmer, came west at an early day, settled in Rising Sun Indiana, then removed to Franklin, Ohio, where he was engaged for a time in building a part of the Ohio canal. In 1830, he went to Portsmouth, where with his brother-in-law, Lemuel Moss, he superintended the construction of the terminus of the canal; and also the excavations for the present channel of the Scioto river at its mouth. In 1835, he commanded the steamboat "Fairy Queen." Later he built the steamboat "Home" and ran her on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. He was married, October 6, 1836, to Nancy Ellen Peebles, a daughter of Robert and Jane Peebles of Newville, Penn. She came to Chillicothe with her mother in 1828, and to Portsmouth with her sister, Mrs. Lemuel Moss. From 1837 to 1849, he was one of the owners of Moss's Mill near Portsmouth. With J. V. Robinson, he built the tannery at Springville, Kentucky, opposite Portsmouth; also in the firm of Robinson, Waller & Coles, carried on a commission business for many years. In 1854, he moved to Hanging Rock, having purchased an interest in Hanging Rock coal works and Pine Grove Furnace, and managed the coal works. In 1864, in company with his former associates and others, he purchased the eastern division of the Lexington and Big Sandy R. R., and moved to Ashland. He was president of the company and had supervision of all its interests until his death. He was stricken with paralysis in July, 1869, and never recovered. He died March 8, 1871, leaving a wife and ten children. His son Thomas K., was killed November 19, 1864, near Bunker Hill, Va., fighting in defense of the flag of his country. His oldest daughter, Mrs. Martha M. Derby, died at Omaha, December, 1871. His wife survived him fourteen years. She was a woman of remarkable character, was the mother of thirteen children, of whom one son, Col. Frank Coles, and eight daughters survive her.

was born at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1785. In his father's family there were twelve sons and one daughter. Our subject came to Portsmouth, Ohio, in the year 1811, at the age of twenty-two. He was then married, but the name of his first wife was not preserved. There were two children of this marriage; John and Mary Ann, the wife of Judge Wm. V. Peck. Mr. Cook's first wife died May 20th, 1822, at the age of thirty-seven years and twenty-nine days. He married the second time on the 8th of October, 1822, to Mercy Smith, the widow of John Smith, and the mother of Luke P. N. Smith, Charles N. Smith and Joseph W. Smith. The following are the children of the second marriage: Alpheus; Margaret, married Wm. Salter, died in August, 1901; Wm. Thaddeus, born October 15, 1828; Mercy, married Valklow, and Robert Hugh. Hugh Cook was elected Appraiser of Wayne Township in 1813 and 1816; and a Trustee of the Township in 1818. In 1819, he was elected Supervisor of Portsmouth, Ohio, but declined the office, and Nathan Wheeler was appointed in his place. From 1827 to 1830, Mr. Cook carried on a very extensive teaming business between Portsmouth and Chillicothe. James Emmitt and Samuel C. Briggs were among his drivers; and James Emmitt claims to have laid the foundation of his fortune by working for Hugh Cook, as a driver of one of his teams. Mr.

Cook was engaged in this business very extensively and must have had six or eight teams. In 1828, 1829 and 1830, he served as Court Constable. He was market master of the city in 1833. He was a man of substance and standing in the community, as he was accepted as one of the securities on Isaac Noel's bond, as contractor for the jail in 1834. He was jailer of the County in 1843 and 1844, and when John Cook was Treasurer in 1852, he was one of his bondsmen. He was always a Democrat, and was one of the seven Democrats in Scioto who voted for General Jackson in 1828. He was a carpenter by trade, but never followed it. He at one time owned the McDowell building on Front street, and afterwards owned property near the north end of Market street. At one time, he owned the property now occupied by the J. F. Davis Drug Company. He owned six acres on what is now the north side of Gallia street in the vicinity where Wm. Connolley now resides. He also owned what is now the George Ball Addition on the northeast corner of Gallia and Offnere.

Mr. Cook died at Portsmouth, Ohio, August 25, 1858, aged seventy-three years, five months and twelve days. His wife, Mrs. Mercy Cook, survived until February 2, 1885, when she died at Hamden Furnace. Her maiden name was Mercy Stratton. She united with the All Saints Church in 1822, and was confirmed by Bishop Chase.

Henry Core

was born on Twin creek, Ross County, Ohio. The name was German originally, Kohr. He married Effie McDonald, daughter of Colonel John McDonald, and was in the War of 1812. He was a Whig. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church and during the old circuit riding days, his home was the minister's home. He and his wife had six children: Doctor James Core, of Homer, Illinois, a prominent physician and a member of the Legislature from that district, deceased several years ago; Catherine, wife of James A. Gunning, died in 1856, she was the mother of Mrs. John R. Foster; Elizabeth, widow of James Steele, formerly of Ross County, Ohio, but for many years resident of Marshall, Missouri, was another daughter. John Core died long since. He was long a resident of Red Rock, Iowa. Clay Core, another son, married and spent a long life in Illinois and Anna Core, still living, is a resident of Tennessee. Henry Core came to Portsmouth in 1817, the year of his marriage. He opened a hotel on Front street called the Ohio hotel. It was said to have been built by Colonel McDonald. From Portsmouth, he removed to Frankfort, Ross County, Ohio, in November, 1829, and kept a hotel there. From there he removed to Bloomingburg, Fayette County, Ohio, where he engaged in farming and dealing in horses. He shipped droves of horses to the southern markets. In 1851, he sold his Fayette County farm and removed to Ross County where he rented a farm. In 1853, he bought a farm near Bourneville. He was a son of Elias Coriell, a native of New Jersey, who came to Scioto County in 1818. His wife was a Lucretia Covert. They had nine children: Isaac was the eldest, Daniel was the second, Eliza, who married Isaac Schoonover, the third; the fourth was Celia; the fifth Peter; the sixth, Ira; the seventh, Fannie, who married William Brown; and the eighth was a daughter drowned at the age of two years in the Alleghany river, as the family were emigrating to Portsmouth. The boat in which they were traveling sank and they were unable to rescue the child. Their youngest child was Abraham, our subject, born July 28, 1818, in the town of Portsmouth, on Front street. Elias Coriell was brought up to the trade of hatter, but never followed it for, when he reached Portsmouth, he concluded that there were too many of his trade in the town. In the spring of 1819, he moved to the country, on Little Scioto, where our subject remained until he was fourteen years of age. At the age of sixteen he went into John Clugsten's jewelry store and served there as an apprentice until he was twenty-one years of age. On reaching his majority he went to Chillicothe and worked there one year in the jewelry store of A. J. Clarke. He then came back and worked with Mr. Clugsten till about 1842, when he started up in business for himself in Portsmouth, and continued until the year 1896, a period of fifty-four years. August 5, 1892, he was married to Mary White, a daughter of Daniel White. From the time of his marriage he resided in the city of Portsmouth. His children were: Electa Ann, wife of Peter J. Honaker, died in 1886; Henry Otterbein, died at the age of eight months; Ira Frank, died in 1898; Alice, wife of William Hancock; and his son Edward, is Secretary of the Scioto Building Association; and a daughter, Ella died at the age of five years. Mr. Coriell was a Whig as long as the Whig party lasted, and then became a Republican. In his early life he was a member of the Methodist Church, but about 1861, he became a member of the Christian Disciple Church, and has continued such ever since. His wife died May 17, 1895, and since then he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Hancock.

Catharine Murphy Cox,

widow of Martin Cox, was born October 18, 1815. When a girl she attended school three months a year, and stated that the teacher did not know more than a ten year old boy does now. The school house was of logs. She had to walk through wet swampy ground and would often sit with cold damp feet on wooden benches, nothing more than a board with legs. She thinks the boys and girls of today could not stand that. The teachers of her childhood whipped their pupils frequently, and the girls as well as the boys. She attended church about once a month but attended Sunday School every Sunday. Abner Ewing conducted it. Her father, Recompense Murphy, was not a member of any church until after he married his second wife. Her mother was an old school Presbyterian.

She saw the second steamboat go down the Ohio river. It was named the "William Putnam." When she was a girl, the banks of the river were inclined at about an angle of forty-five degrees, and did not begin to cave until the steamboats began to run regularly. The waves washed the sand out of them and then the banks began to crumble and this process has been going on ever since. This second boat which she saw was a stern wheeler.

The articles of table-ware in her time were all pewter. She relates that her father, Recompense Murphy, walked all the way from Adams County to New Jersey to get money to pay for his lands. He had bought six hundred acres and agreed to pay one dollar an acre for it. When she was a child, wolves were howling around her father's house every night. There was an old man who bought six hundred acres of land back of Vanceburg, in the hills and undertook to start a sheep farm. He brought hounds with him and these hounds caused the wolves to leave the neighborhood. One night her father awakened her and her brothers and sisters and told them that it would be the last time they would hear the wolves, and so it proved. The hounds in Kentucky would run the deer into the Ohio river, and the people on the Ohio side would take them.

There was a young woman in the neighborhood named Blakemore. When she was about sixteen years of age, she left her home in Kentucky, crossed the Ohio river in a canoe and walked through the woods from the landing place opposite Vanceburg, to the cabin which stood where James McMasters now lives, more than a mile. She started in the afternoon to return home with a package she had obtained at the house where Simon Smith then lived. The wolves followed her through the woods and she was compelled to undo her package and throw its contents on the ground, and afterwards, her bonnet and shawl and apron to delay the wolves. They would stop long enough to ascertain what was thrown down and to tear the articles up, and then they would follow. She managed to get to the river before they did and jumped into her canoe and pushed out into the water. The wolves followed as far as they could wade, but went back rather than swim.

Mrs. Cox's father used to go to West Union to buy tea when it was four dollars a pound. She was married November 19, 1834, to Martin Cox. In that year, he built ninety flat boats and took them to Cincinnati. These boats were from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and twenty-two feet long, and five to six feet deep. They were taken to Cincinnati where they were loaded and taken to New Orleans. There they were broken up and the lumber used to build houses. In 1834, was the first year Martin Cox engaged in the building of flat boats; and he continued it for about five years, and then went to farming. Martin Cox employed eight men in boat building, and sold most of his boats to Thomas Redden.

Charles A. M. Damarin

was one of the foremost citizens of his time in the city of Portsmouth. He was one of the most enterprising,—one of the most successful. He was a man of the very strongest purpose. He never undertook anything except he had carefully considered it before hand, and approved it. He would undertake nothing unreasonable, nothing he did not believe he could accomplish, and when he undertook it, he succeeded. The word "failure" was not in his copy of the dictionary. He was a Frenchman, but without the excitability of a Frenchman. He was always calm, cool and collected. He never lost his presence of mind, or equipoise. He maintained a supremacy over other men in business, because he had the genius and talent which deserved it. He was born in Paris, France, April 10, 1797. His father was Antonius M. M. Damarin and his mother was Mary Le Brun. He was the eldest of three children. He received a liberal education in France. On March 16, 1817, he, his father and his brother concluded to come to the United States. They landed in New York, May 2, 1817, and went to Gallipolis, Ohio. He went into the employment of John Peter Romaine Bureau, as a clerk; and subsequently he became a partner in the business.

In 1830, he returned to France, and was in the city of Paris at the time when Charles X was dethroned. He brought back his mother and sister with him. He felt that he wanted another field than in Gallipolis, and in 1831, located in Cincinnati, and engaged in business. In 1833, he was induced by Captain James W. Davis to locate in Portsmouth, Ohio, and did so. He embarked in the grocery business and expanded it till he became a wholesaler. Part of the time he had as partner Charles Henking of Gallipolis. He took the lead in his business in Portsmouth and maintained it all his life. While he was in active business, which was the whole of his life in Portsmouth no enterprise of any public consequence was undertaken unless he was in it, and at the first of it. He was one of the founders of the Commercial Bank and one of its directors. He was one of the first to start the Scioto Rolling Mill, afterwards the Burgess Steel & Iron Works. If he and J. V. Robinson had not endorsed the Scioto & Hocking Valley Railroad, it would never have been built. He was also in the Portsmouth Insurance Company and its President.

In 1853, he built the Hamden Furnace. To show the character of the man, in 1835, when he had only been in Portsmouth two years, he was selected to obtain a loan of $10,000 to build the present Court House. The Commissioners left the money with him and checked it out as they needed it, preferring to do that rather than trust the County Treasurer on his bond or any Bank. Mr. Damarin amassed a fortune, as he deserved to. He had four sons, and three daughters. Two of the sons died in infancy, and one in youth and one is surviving, Augustus M. Damarin. Of his three daughters, two survive, Mrs. Mary E. Voorheis, wife of A. B. Voorheis of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Harriet, wife of George D. Scudder of Portsmouth.

Mr. Damarin wanted a lateral canal to Portsmouth, a dam at Bear Creek and the canal on the east side. He planned for a great basin, or canal boat harbor, where the Burgess Mill stood at the west end of the city. It was a wonderful plan and had it succeeded, Portsmouth would have been a city of 75,000 people today. But it was turned over to the State and dropped. Had it been turned over to Mr. Damarin, the enterprise would have been carried through. Had he lived in our day, with his business talent, for organization, he would have found ample opportunity for their employment. He had a strong will, great powers of endurance both mental and physical. His integrity shone above all his other qualities. He was public spirited to the highest degree, and his energy knew no limits except time in which to act. He was charitable and benevolent, and was pleased with opportunities to display those features of his character. His native French courtesy made him courteous to all whom he met. He had a wide business acquaintance and enjoyed the confidence of its entire circle. His credit was as good away from home as at home. Had he offered to buy the town and council had accepted the offer, he would have been ready to pay the money down at the time appointed. He never made a business proposition, which he did not mean to be accepted, and, if accepted, he always had the means to comply with it.

He did as much as any man who ever lived in Portsmouth to contribute to its growth and prosperity. The writer and no one else is responsible for the idea, but he believes that C. A. M. Damarin and J. V. Robinson made Portsmouth what it is: that they laid the foundation for the town's prosperity and success.

was a fine subject for the story tellers. He was born in 1788, but where is now unknown, probably in Philadelphia. He was one of the very first settlers in the town of Portsmouth.

He bought a whole inlot, No. 95, 82½ feet front on the corner where the Gilbert Wholesale Grocery now stands, for $50.00, of Henry Massie in 1809, and the inlot immediately south of it, fronting the same width on Front street, No. 96, for $100. He built a small log house on the Front street lot and rented it out. He built a two story log house on Second street. There was a door toward Second street, but no windows fronting either street. He had an opening on one side of the door to enable him to observe any one who approached. At the same time, he bought an outlot on the southwest corner of Third and Chillicothe streets, No. 540, for $50.18, of the County Commissioners. It contained three acres and he used it for a cow pasture. He owned another outlot on Third and Washington streets. It also contained three acres. His business was making oars and selling poles for keel boats and skiff oars, and he was kept busy. He carried on his business in the lower story of his log house on Second street. His Second street lot he had fenced with pickets twelve feet high.

He was a bachelor and his own cook and housekeeper. He was extremely frugal and parsimonious in his habits. It is said that he once fell in love with a widow, who had two children, but never declared his love. He at one time prepared a meal and set his table for four. He helped each plate, one for the widow, whom he imagined to be present, and one for each of the two children and one for himself. He then took a survey of the table and then said to himself, it would not do, that he could not afford to maintain such a family. He gave up the matrimonial project and the widow never heard his declaration of love.

After rejecting the project, he lived and died a bachelor on September 16, 1825. The newspaper announcing his death, said he died of a lingering disease, and of the infirmities incident to old age. He was 50 years old when he died and yet Captain Shackford who came to Portsmouth at the age of 68, lived twenty-five years afterward. He never held any office, except that of fence viewer. In April, 1811, he was a fence viewer of Wayne Township and Martin Funk was his colleague. He was a member of the Methodist Church, very industrious and strictly honest. He died four years before Greenlawn cemetery was opened and the place of his sepulchre is not known. His relatives in Philadelphia obtained his property. The hermit business was much overdone in the pioneer days. It was then out of place, because people were so dependent on each other; but now it would be a blessed thing if a large number of the community would seclude themselves from their fellows. But with all the conveniences, comforts and luxuries of modern life, the hermit business has been abandoned and there are no more Sanders Darbys to write about.

Stephen P. Drake

was born near Georgetown, Brown County, Ohio, in October, 1818. When a boy he was apprenticed to David Ammen and learned the printer's trade on the "Castigator," published in Georgetown. In the office was Captain Daniel Ammen, afterwards Commodore Daniel Ammen, and Reeder W. Clark, afterwards Congressman from that district. After finishing his apprenticeship, he worked in the office of the "Western Advertiser," at Cincinnati, as a hand, when George E. Pugh, afterwards United States Senator, was employed in the office. From Cincinnati, he went to Hillsboro, Ohio, where he worked in the newspaper offices of the "Ohio News" and "Hillsboro Gazette." From Hillsboro, he removed to Wilmington, Ohio, where he established the "Western Whig," since changed to the "Clinton Republican." In the winter of 1840 and 1841, he commenced the publication of the "West Union Intelligencer," at West Union, Ohio. He published this, a Whig paper, until the winter of 1845 and 1846, when he removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, and published the "Portsmouth Clipper," in which he purchased a half interest of Mr. Dromillard. He afterward purchased the other half of the "Clipper" and united it with the "Tribune," then owned by Simlon Clark. The new paper was called the "Tribune and Clipper." Afterwards the word "Clipper" was dropped. He and Clark sold out to John Hanna and subsequently he bought back one half of the paper from Hanna and they started the "Daily Evening Tribune." In 1852, he began the publication of the "Tribune." In 1858, he removed to Jackson, Ohio, and was connected with the "Jackson Standard" for one year. He then removed to Madison, Indiana, and published a daily and weekly paper there. In 1860, he began the publication of the "Clipper," at Ironton, Ohio, and continued it until October, 1862, when he enlisted as a private in the 2nd Virginia Cavalry. About December 12, 1864, he was captured and murdered by his captors. He left a wife and two children, Robert and Louisa.

was a well known character in Portsmouth from 1821 to 1835. We do not know when he was born or when he died or what place holds his ashes. We know that he was a butcher by occupation. He lived in that part of the city near South Waller and Second; that he gave his name to one of the additions to the town; and that he had a large family of sons and daughters, none of whom or their descendants are now in Portsmouth.

In 1821, he was lister in Wayne Township and was allowed $6.00 for his services. In 1822, he held the same office. In 1823, he had charge of the Court House, and for the period from December 28, 1821, until March 4, 1823, fourteen and one seventh months, he was allowed $30.00, for taking care of it. On the last named date, he was re-employed for one year, and was allowed $5.00 per quarter for his services. In 1824, he was the jailer and was allowed $22.25, for boarding a horse thief (so entered on the Commissioners' Record) for 89 days. This was at the rate of twenty-five cents per day. In the same period he charged and was allowed fifty cents for washing for the horse thief. In 1824, at the July term he was allowed $6.00 for attending the term as Court Constable. The term lasted twelve days and he was allowed fifty cents per day. On December

3. 1827, an inventory of the Court House furniture was given and among them were: four brass candlesticks, one pair of snuffers, one tin bucket, one glass tumbler. He was ordered to buy two sets of small andirons and one set of large ones for the Court House. The Court House had but one writing desk, two tables and 29 chairs.

In 1825 and 1826, he was Court Constable at fifty cents per day, and in 1827 had charge of the Court House. In 1830, he was jailer. In 1831, he took charge of the Court House for $16.00 for the entire year, payable four dollars each quarter. He was Town Marshal in 1822, and on March 26, it is recorded on the Council Journal that Simon De Long, being sick, asked to go home. He was Town Marshal from 1828 to 1834. In 1822, he served as Town Marshal the whole year for $8.00.

After 1834, he disappeared from the public records and we have no further trace of him.

William Dever

was born October 20, 1825 in Hamilton Township, Jackson County, Ohio. His father was Solomon Dever who lived to the ripe age of eighty-nine years, and enjoyed good health all his life. His mother's maiden name was Chloe Mault, and she lived to the age of eighty-eight in good health. His grandfather Mault, lived almost to the age of one hundred so that our subject was born with a most excellent constitution. He was one of a family of twelve children, the second child. He was reared in Jackson County, and attended first a subscription school and afterwards a public school; but the educational facilities in his boyhood were most meager. The joys of his boyhood were chiefly in attending the general musters under Col. Aaron Stockham. He was married in March, 1848, to Louisa McDowell and has had twelve children. Three of them died in infancy and nine are surviving. He has but one son and eight daughters. His children in order of their ages are as follows; Noah J., a resident of Portsmouth, Attorney-at-Law; Mary, married Samuel Wade, residing at Chetopa, Kansas; Abigail, married William R. Micklethwait, residing in the suburbs of Portsmouth; Ellen, married Stephen B. Kearns, residing at Oak Hill, Jackson County; Elizabeth Emily, married William Butcher, living in Scioto County, Ohio; Louisa Isabel, married Royal William Allard, residing in Scioto County, near Flat Postoffice; Ida Josephine, married Edwin Stone, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Dolly Alice, married Everett E. Johnson, lives in Pike County near Flat Postoffice; Jane, married Morton M. Johnson and resides in Jackson County, near Flat Postoffice in Pike County. Mr. Dever lives on a farm of 240 acres, just over the line of Jackson from Scioto County. He has lived there twenty years, since April 10, 1881. Prior to that he lived in Madison Township, Scioto County from the time of his marriage. In political views, Mr. Dever was first a Whig, afterwards a Republican.

Always aggressive and out-spoken. He is not a member of any church; but his wife is a member of the Free-Will Baptist. William Dever's life has flown along in smooth currents all the time. He has never been sick. He is not troubled with the infirmities of age. He was never in politics. He never sought office. He was never in any war. He never had any exciting or wonderful incidents in his life. He is a plain farmer and has lived in the same neighborhood all of his seventy-six years and yet, notwithstanding all that, he is a remarkable man. He possesses great force of character. He has wonderful will power and when it is complete, good judgment. When one comes in contact with him, he feels his will power and personal force. Mr. Dever was never a man to follow. He always led. Living all his life in a locality poor in agricultural resources, he has followed farming all his life and has made and saved a great deal of money; and besides that he has reared a family of nine children and sent them out in the world, a credit to him and themselves. How many men at seventy-six are able to make such a showing? His children are all healthy and strong. His daughters are all fine looking women,—all mothers; and his grandchildren, thirty-three in number, are all in the enjoyment of as fine health as their parents. In the evening of his days Mr. Dever is taking things easy. While his home is on his farm in Jackson County, he and his wife visit among their children much of their time, and, though old, enjoy life as much as they did when young. They have grown old happily and have no regrets. Mr. Dever is about the best illustration of a sound mind in a sound body, that could be found anywhere. If there are any principles he has lived up to more than others, they are these: to be just, to pay his debts, to keep his word and the Bible command, that one should take care of his own,—the latter term referring to the person and his family. Mr. Dever has done these things well. He can be proud of his fulfillment of his duty to his family, and so can his children for him.

was born in Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1806. His wife was Lima Burris, daughter of Horatio Burris of Flemingsburg, Kentucky. Our subject was born in Virginia and spent his boyhood there. He came to Portsmouth in 1829. He was married in Portsmouth in May, 1830. He kept a harness shop on Jefferson street, in the Grimes Building, where Harry Grimes was born. John Cooley and George Metz were his workmen. The latter afterwards became a Representative in the Legislature of Illinois. William Nixon was also in his employment. His children were Amanda who died at five years of age, accidentally burned to death at Mrs. Ashley's school, the first day she attended; Robert, who lives at number 2, Taylor street, Covington, Ky.; John, who died in 1902 in Chicago; Benjamin F., died in 1878 at Hot Springs, Arkansas; Mrs. Anna Daniel, the wife of James Daniel, resides at 7142 Harvard avenue, Chicago; Mrs. Irene Morrison, the wife of Arnor Morrison, who also resides in Chicago.

Abner Doty died in September, 1844, after ten days illness of inflammatory rheumatism. His widow survived until April 6, 1885. She died in Cincinnati. They are both buried at Greenlawn Cemetery, with other members of the family. The name Doty is of French origin.

Colonel Sebastian Eifort

was born at Neustadt, near Marburg, Hesse, in Germany, January 12, 1817, a son of Henry and Catherine Eifort. In 1832, the family left Germany and settled at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where Sebastian served an apprenticeship in a confectionery, and was a fellow citizen with Thaddeus Stevens and James Buchanan. He left for the west in the spring of 1837 and came to Massillon, Stark County, Ohio, engaging in the furnace business, making castings and pig-iron. In 1839, he went to Scioto County, Ohio, working at Jackson, Scioto and Bloom Furnaces, at the last named being founder and manager. In 1842 he married Rachel Jackson, daughter of William Jackson of Scioto County. In 1852, he, with others, built Harrison furnace Scioto County, Ohio, and in 1855, sold his interest and moved the next year to Carter County, Kentucky, where he built Boone furnace and successfully managed it until the breaking out of the rebellion. Being a strong Union man, he called a meeting, in April 1861, of the citizens of Lewis, Carter, Boyd and Greenup Counties at Boone Furnace, where the old flag was raised and speeches made by ex-congressman, George M. Thomas, and others, in favor of supporting the government. Then and there a plan was made to raise a regiment of Home Guards for the protection of property. This was fully organized during the summer and sworn into the service by Mr. Eifort, who was elected Colonel. In 1863, he was sent to the state legislature where his strong Union sentiments made him conspicuous during that stormy period of conflicting opinions. After peace was restored in 1866, he sold his interest in Boone furnace and in 1869 became manager of Hunnewell furnace, for the Eastern Kentucky Railroad Company, where he remained thirteen years. In the meantime he, Mr. Stoughton, and K. B. Grahn bought 10,000 acres of land near Olive Hill, Carter County, Kentucky, intending to build a furnace, but pig-iron becoming very low, the project was abandoned and the property divided. From 1882 until 1890, he lived at Olive Hill, where he, assisted by his son, Joe, mined and shipped large quantities of a high grade of fireclay which was found to be very abundant on his land. His health failing he retired from all business and with his wife removed to Greenup, Kentucky, at which place he died, December 11, 1893. His remains were interred in Portsmouth.

COLONEL SEBASTIAN RIFORT.

He was a strong Republican in politics and a Royal Arch Mason. His widow still lives in Greenup. Nine children were born to them, three of whom died in infancy. William Henry whose sketch will be found in this book, was killed in the Civil War, James died at the age of twenty-eight, and Mrs. Kate Warnock died at the age of fifty-four, in California. Mamie, wife of Charles Hertel, of Greenup, Kentucky, F. S. Eifort and Joe B. Eifort of Ashland are still living. Colonel Eifort was a citizen of great force of character, strong will power and superior executive ability. He was a born leader and manager. His convictions on any subject he had investigated were strong and, when required, he would carry them out at any and all hazards.

Andrew Jackson Enslow

was born October 24, 1824, near Wheelersburg, Scioto County, Ohio. His father was Rezin Enslow, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Sebring, a daughter of Thomas Sebring. His grandfather, David Enslow, originally settled in Scioto County, and purchased a large farm near Wheelersburg. The family originated in Flanders before the time of William the Conqueror. An ancestor of that time carried a banner in the army of William the Conqueror, on which was emblazoned the word "Onslow", which in the Norman French of that day meant "to hasten slowly," the same as the Latin term "Festina lente." Mr. Enslow as a boy attended the common schools of Porter Township and learned "out" there. In addition, he received instructions at Wheelersburg, under the late Hon. Edward W. Jordan, privately. The latter taught school at Wheelersburg, and gave young Enslow lessons in the advanced branches. Mr. Enslow became a school teacher himself; and afterwards became a book-keeper at a furnace in Kentucky, and took an interest in it. It was the furnace owned by Seton, and he was engaged in this furnace two years. He was married December 3, 1846, to Nancy Marie Bliss, daughter of Theodore Preston Bliss, a native of New Hampshire, who came to Scioto County in 1819. Her mother was Nancy Dunton Dean, a native of Maine. Our subject learned the cabinet makers trade with Stephen Cameron. He served as postmaster at Wheelersburg many years. He was a County Commissioner of Scioto County from 1859 to 1863, and was County Auditor from 1863 to 1865, elected each time on the Democratic ticket. In 1866, he was a candidate for Auditor on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated by Philip W. Noel. The vote stood Noel 1,599, Enslow 2,147. After leaving the Auditor's office, he became manager of a furnace in Tennessee for Stephen Glidden. In 1850, he went to California and was there two years. He was mining in the American Valley, but his health broke down, and he returned. He was Justice of the Peace of Porter Township, Scioto County, Ohio, from April 14, 1870, until October 11, 1870. He moved to Huntington, West Virginia, in March, 1871, and while there he was a magistrate for a number of years. He left Huntington in 1878, and from there he went to Cumberland County, Illinois, and remained there until 1881. Then he located near Richmond, Virginia, where he resided for ten years, and from there he went to California, where he died in 1894, on October 27. His wife resided in California with her daughter until 1897, and has since resided with her son, Frank B. Enslow, of Huntington, West Virginia. Mr. Enslow's children are: Frank Bliss, born August 4, 1853, a prominent attorney of Huntington, West Virginia; Edward Bliss born May 11, 1858, a resident and insurance agent of Huntington, West Virginia; a daughter Alice born July 23, 1849, and married Richard Peckham, of Richmond, Virginia, March 23, 1877, in the city of Portsmouth. She died in California, May 17, 1897. Our subject also has a son, Linn Bliss, born February 1, 1860, who resides in Richmond, Virginia, and is auditor of the Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Mr. Enslow was a most excellent business man, a correct book-keeper and accountant and very highly esteemed by all his business associates.

John Davidson Feurt

was born in Scioto County, Ohio, March 2, 1816. His father was Gabriel Feurt and his mother Lydia Hitchcock, daughter of Jesse Hitchcock, one of the first settlers of the County. His father was born in 1780 and died September, 1850. His mother was born February 6, 1793 and died January 10, 1864. (For further particulars, see Feurt Family in the Pioneer Record.). His father was out in the general call in the war of 1812. Mr. Feurt was brought up a farmer and followed it all his life. He died near the spot where he was born and had always lived. In 1839, he was married to Maria Oldfield, daughter of Judge William Oldfield. They had a family of nine children: Caroline C., wife of Henry Clinton Feurt, of Franklin Furnace; Lydia, wife of John Lindsey; Harriet E., first married to William H. Peters and after his death to T. J. Brown; Nettie, wife of George M. Salladay; Frank B., wife of John F. Noel; John F., now of Canada; and William Oldfield who resides on his home farm. Mr. Feurt was a Whig and a Republican. He was a Justice of the Peace of his township for ten years and held other township offices, but only because he felt it a duty. He never aspired, but sought to be a good citizen, and as such he was esteemed by all who knew him. He was an exemplification of all the civic virtues. He was a good father, a good neighbor, a good Christian and to sum up all, a valuable citizen.

James Smith Folsom.

From the published Genealogical Family Record, we learn that the Folsom family originated in England, the earliest known progenitor being Roger Foullsam who lived at Necton, County of Norfolk and whose will was dated in 1534. For five generations the Foul-sams appear to have been large land owners there in Besthorpe, Windham, Burwell, Hackford and Hingham. Coming down to 1638, John Foul-sam, the first of the Anglo-American line, and his wife Anna Gilman emigrated from Hingham, England to Hingham, Massachusetts. The immediate cause of their coming to America was ecclesiastical troubles and persecutions at home. They came for conscience sake, selling their lands at half their value. John was a sturdy character, well fitted to stand as the progenitor of the many thousands who have since born that name, or sprung from that source through collateral inheritance, now scattered through every part of the United States. Every Folsom in America, except one family in Georgia, is descended from this John of whom it was said, "He was enterprising, courageous, prominent in the communities in which he lived, a leader in public affairs, determined on simplicity in religious worship and equity in the State, a solid, independent, righteous and true man." While most family names which are distinctive tend to disappear, this one on the other hand has multiplied exceedingly, until it embraces all manner and qualities of people, from the dead level of humanity, up to a great body of useful and respectable citizens, including members of all the learned professions, editors, authors, capitalists, inventors, railway magnates, naval and military officers, legislators, judges, congressmen, governors, and on up to Frances, the charming wife of Grover Cleveland. The emigrant John was an officer, and the Gilmans, his wife's people, were also prominent military men. And the military spirit thus prominent in the progenitors has been faithfully transmitted to all succeeding generations, every war from the Indian and the French Wars down to the late Spanish war, having enlisted numerous representatives of this family. The records down to 1882 show more than 700 different surnames, other than Folsom, derived from female marriages into other families, some of the more common names embracing as many as forty or fifty individuals. Thus does the stream from a prolific stock continue to widen down the centuries.

James Smith, the subject of our sketch, appears in the sixth generation in the line of descent from John, having been born at Point Harmar, Ohio, April 1, 1804. His father Samuel, who married Catharine Smith, bought the home in French Grant in 1805, moved down on a flat boat from Marietta, in 1806, and died there in 1813. Besides James S. there were born in this county, Samuel, Melissa and Mary, all of whom married and had large families. James S. married Sarah Bennett of Baltimore, in 1827, and had the following children: William, Catharine, Melissa, Mary, Albert, Minerva, Sarah and Henry. All his life, except a brief period spent at Portsmouth learning the cooper's trade, was passed at the old home farm which he bought in early manhood. Junior and Empire furnaces, located a few miles back, had a tramroad to this place, and for many years he kept their landing, shipping iron, caring for the freight, and doing their receiving business. At the same time he farmed and merchandised and prospered apace. During the Civil War, the sales from his retail store became so large that he was required to take out a wholesale license. Just before the war he took a large quantity of pig iron in a settlement with the furnace companies at from $14 to $15 a ton. Later he disposed of it at $70. Yet he was not given to speculating. His favorite way of investing his surplus was in buying farms, which resulted in his becoming a large land owner. In 1852, he was elected a County Commissioner to fill a vacancy, by a vote of 1,407 to 1,069 for his opponent. He served about one year. He had no taste for politics except to be conversant with the affairs of the nation, and to maintain high fealty to his political party. From a previously written biographical sketch we reproduce the following which characterizes him suitably: "The one predominant trait which gave form and texture to his whole character was his utter detestation of everything which savored of insincerity. Not a grain of dissimulation infected his nature. No motives of worldly policy could induce in him the slightest departure from an honest conviction. His loyalty to truth was ingrained and incorruptible. He would face the whole world in defense of his convictions. However much one might differ from him in belief, there was that in the man which proclaimed that in his inmost heart he felt himself impregnable in his position. Hypocrisy or shams of any kind or what he believed to be such, he would denounce before all mankind if need be. And his clear steadfast eye carried the strong assurance that here at least was a man who had the fullest courage of his convictions. This was the one overmastering trait in his character which commanded the respect of every man who knew him. The other prominent characteristic for which he will perhaps be longest remembered, was his unfailing readiness to help the poor. No one in distress, that was worthy, ever appealed to him in vain. His benevolence to any about him who might be in need was as steady as the flow of an unfailing fountain. Those whom he befriended will carry the remembrance of his cheerful acts of kindness long after the fitful fever of this life is o'er." In many respects he was a unique character. His disregard of conventionality not always diplomatic, was sometimes almost suggestive of eccentricity. Withal, his perceptions were exceedingly clear, the processes of his mind logical, and his confidence in conclusions arrived at was immovable. In all business transactions he was the soul of honor, positive in manner, truthful in statement, energetic in action, prompt in decision, the possessor of executive ability in a rare degree. Among those who knew him his word was a guaranty, without future quibble or evasion. And in possession of the highest respect and confidence of his neighbors, he died at his old home October 3, 1883, in the eightieth year of his age.

was born in February, 1762, at Stephenson, Frederick County, Virginia. His father came to Pennsylvania from Germany in 1712, and afterwards located in Virginia. We cannot give the names of his parents, but believe that he was related to Captain John Funk, who was prominent in Frederick County, Virginia, eleven years before his birth; and also to Joseph Funk, another prominent citizen of that county. Joseph Funk, on June 12, 1751, entered 205 acres on the river of Shenandoah within Josh Hite's claim. Capt. John Funk, on November 10, 1751, entered 341 acres on Cedar Creek and 150 acres on the south side of the Shenandoah under the Three Tops mountains. We have reasons to believe that our subject was of the same family. When he was a year and one-half old, his parents moved to Hagerstown, Maryland. At the age of nine years, they moved to Westmoreland County, Pa. While here in this county, he performed service in the Revolutionary war, which is officially given under the title of Revolutionary Soldiers. During his two months service he was a substitute for Robert Wallace. In his four months service, December, 1776, he was in New Jersey, and was reviewed by General Washington. It is said that on the review, he forgot the etiquette of the occasion and personally addressed General Washington in broken English. He relates in his application for pension, that when he was serving in New Jersey, the British in small bands were traveling through the country robbing the people. He and his party took four prisoners, a cart and horse, and two dead hogs, which the British had taken from the people. He relates that in 1778, while scouting he was chased by seven Indians to the Fort. Twenty-five went out and fought one hundred Indians, and nine of his company were killed. Mr. Funk in his application for pension gives the list of names of those killed and stated that the survivors had to fall back to the Fort. He further relates that in October, 1778, the Fort in which he was then stationed, was besieged by 110 Indians for thirty hours, and forty-five men, the garrison, repelled the attack of the Indians. He was married in 1789, in Pennsylvania, to Elizabeth Studebaker, who was born in 1772. He emigrated to Oldtown in Scioto County, and arrived there June 25, 1798. His daughter, Catharine, was born ten days after their arrival at Oldtown. His eldest son, John Funk, was born in Pennsylvania in 1790. He married Margaret Glover, a sister of Elijah B. Glover, and raised a large family. His sons were Thornton, John, Melvin and Melvira, twins, Azel Glover, Samuel Martin and Margaret. Martin Funk's daughter Mary was born in 1792, his son Jacob, in 1795. His daughter Catharine, married John Timmonds, October 16, 1817, the ceremony was performed by John Brown, Justice of the Peace. Martin Funk brought considerable money with him. In 1809, he bought a quarter section of land from the United States, now the Micklethwait, Stewart and Timmonds lands near the Children's Home. In 1810, he bought twenty-three acres along Lawson's run next to the river, and in 1811, twenty-five acres adjoining it on the east. He built a log cabin near the site of the old brick Micklethwait home near a fine spring, and started a distillery. Making whiskey was the only way of turning corn, selling at eight and ten cents per bushel into cash, and Mr. Funk was not behind his neighbors in this. He lived on the old Chillicothe road, and he entertained wagoners to and from Chillicothe, and made much gain in that way. His home was a general stopping place. In 1811, there was a general muster on the portion of his place now owned by Gilbert Stewart. An eclipse occurred during the muster; when the general call for militia was made in 1813, the place of rendezvous was Funk's. James Keyes tells of that meeting. All were there at twelve noon and marched away at two o'clock in the afternoon.

He tells that William Lawson, a neighbor, became much incensed at Mr. Funk and one morning came over to whip him. Mr. Funk declined to fight till after breakfast and Lawson waited in the yard until Mr. Funk had breakfast. After breakfast Funk came out and asked Lawson, if nothing but a fight would do. Lawson insisted and both parties stripped to the waist. At it they went, and Lawson soon cried enough. Funk then said, "you had no breakfast while I did and so you have learned the folly of fighting before breakfast." The writer does not place the fullest confidence in this story. Historian Keyes had a vein of romance.

Mr. Funk was a man of great strength and muscular power. He could lift a barrel of whiskey almost as easily as another man could lift a jug.

Mrs. Elizabeth Funk was an excellent cook and a most efficient nurse in sickness. Many of those attacked with malaria resorted to her home and remained there till cured. She, however, fell a victim to malaria prevailing in 1822, and died that year, at the age of fifty years. Her daughter Barbara married Joseph Micklethwait an Englishman, and lived and died at the present Micklethwait homestead. She was born in 1801.

Martin Funk believed in attending to his own business and prospered by doing so. He never held any office, but that of fence viewer, and he was elected to that office in the years 1809, 1811, 1813, and annually until 1817. There were always two and he had as associates, William Brady, Sanders Darby, George Bowers, Abraham Stock, Aaron Kinney, John Simpson. Most times, persons were elected to this office in sport, but Martin Funk was elected in earnest, and served in earnest. It was an office never sought, but always thrust on the person elected. Mr. Funk left valuable real estate which was divided among his heirs and afterwards made them rich. He died October 16, 1838, in his 77th year.

Benjamin Fryer

was born in 1794, but the place of his birth is now unknown. He located in Chillicothe about 1819. He was married August 18, 1814, to Catharine Jefferson, a sister of Mrs. John McDowell and Mrs. Bernard Kepner. They came to Portsmouth about the same time the Jefferson family did. Mr. Fryer had no regular occupation, but did whatever he could find to do. When the Gaylord Rolling Mill started, he became a worker in it, and continued as such until 1846, when failing health compelled him to give up all manual labor.

He always took great interest in town and municipal affairs. In 1832, he was a member of the Portsmouth Board of Health, and again in 1855. During the time the coffee houses were rampant in Portsmouth, he was a member of the town council and uniformly voted against each and every one of them which applied for license. Moses Gregory and William Newman voted with him on the coffee houses. They were always in the minority but they voted their principles and were satisfied. In 1858, Mr. Fryer was a Trustee of Clay Township. In 1861, he was First Lieutenant of the third ward Home Guards, and was one of the most loyal men in Portsmouth. In 1867, he was again a Trustee of Wayne Township.

He had eight children. His eldest was John Hamilton. Eliza, his second child, married Cornelius Moore of the French Grant. His daughter, Mary, died single at the age of thirty. Benjamin, his fourth child, born in 1823, enlisted in Company G. 1st O. H. A., December 15, 1863, for three years. He died at Cleveland, Tennessee, April 2, 1865. His widow, Mrs. Matilda Fryer, resides on east Eleventh street. Asbury Walker was his fifth child. He became County Judge of Lewis County, Kentucky. He died, leaving a son Grant, who has a tannery at Vanceburg, and two daughters, Mrs. Lewis Stricklett and Mrs. Elmer Rowland.

Mr. Fryer was always a devout and pious member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was an old fashioned shouting Methodist. He believed in the discipline of the church and lived up to it. As early as 1834, he was a member of the official board of old Bigelow, and was always a class leader. When Spencer Chapel was formed he became a member of it. All who knew him believed in him. In his latter years, he was affectionately and reverently called "Father" Fryer, and in the Church he was regarded as an oracle and a leader. He is written up for this work because he was one of the truly good men of Portsmouth and if his spirit and those of Father the father of Erastus Gates, had a dry goods store in a frame building on the corner where Brunners are now located.

McDowell, Jacob P. Noel, and Job Ledbetter can be located, there is Heaven.

Wilson Gates.

On November 30, 1820, he was married to Elizabeth Kinney, daughter of Aaron Kinney, by Rev. Stephen Lindsley.

On January 2, 1824, he was a member of the Council, in place of James Lodwick who resigned. He held this office until June 4, 1824, when he resigned. April 3, 1829, he was Health Officer of the city of Portsmouth. He was City Treasurer from 1830 to 1836.

In 1832, he built the brick residence just across the alley from Daehler's furniture store and resided there until 1843, when he sold his home to Charles Henking and removed his family to Memphis, Tennessee. He lived there until 1849, when he returned to Portsmouth.

He died, July 29, 1849, at the age of fifty-seven, and was buried in the Kinney graveyard. His widow, Elizabeth Gates, lived to see her eighty-seventh year and died at the Dennison House, in Cincinnati, Ohio, July 21, 1887.

Wilson Gates was a large, fine looking man, with light hair and a portly bearing. He was an active citizen, well esteemed by his contemporaries. As a merchant he had to encounter reverses, but did so in a manly way. We regret we were able to obtain so little of him, but from what we could learn, he was one of the forceful characters of his time. His widow survived him thirty-eight years.

Thomas Gould Gaylord.

The Gaylords or Gaillards as it is in the French, were among the many French Huguenots that left their beloved shores of France to enjoy the freedom of religious and political thought and action that was afforded them in the new land across the sea. They settled with others in the old Puritan State of Connecticut and there founded the town of Gaylordsville. In time they branched out, some going south others to the westward. Silas Gaylord, the father of the subject settled on a farm near Utica, New York and there married Mary Gould. He was very religious in his tendencies, although they never carried him farther in the service of our Lord than a deaconship and eldership in the Presbyterian Church.

The wife and mother of Thomas was a stately commanding personage of great dignity and decision of action. From her Thomas got what proved so useful to him in his business life, quick perception and instant action. Silas and Mary Gaylord were blessed with two children—both boys—Thomas and Horace. Thomas being more patterned after his maternal than his paternal—took the lead in everything and being an ambitious youth, while yet in his teens, after getting a good common school education, and after teaching a year as was the custom for one to do, before one was considered a thoroughly educated man, asked his father to aid him in furthering himself in the world and adopted New York as his initial point for a start. He was employed while there by a Mr. Greenfield, who was a very rich and influential queensware merchant, and he seeing that Thomas was ambitious to rise above the ordinary man of that day, determined to aid him and made a proposition to him to start a queensware establishment in Pittsburg, and place him at the head of it. Thomas readily accepted and moved to Pittsburg and opened his queensware store. Before leaving however, while on a trip to Johnstown, New York, he met and fell in love with Angeline Morrell, daughter of Judge Morrell, then a very eminent and respected Judge on the bench. They were married and Thomas took his young bride to Pittsburg. He was so successful in the queensware store that he soon made Mr. Greenfield a proposition to buy out his interest, which was accepted and he carried on the business himself.

About this time he set his brother up in the queensware business in Maysville, Ky., but with the appearance of cholera there in 1836, which carried off Horace and his entire family, he sold his store in Maysville and concentrated his attention to his Pittsburg house.

In 1837, Mr. Gaylord while on a visit to Portsmouth traded his queensware house and some mountain land in Pennsylvania for the Glover, Noel & Co. rolling mill of Portsmouth. This was his first appearance in the business community of Portsmouth. He moved his family there and set to work to re-model and modernize the mill and to build up a success in the iron business such as was his in the queensware business. New boilers were put in. The old fashioned "knobbling" furnaces gave place to the "puddling" furnaces and the "hammers" gave place to "rolls" and he soon had one of the most complete and modern rolling mills of the West.

In 1846, he left Portsmouth and moved with his family to Cincinnati and continued in the iron business under the name of T. G. Gaylord & Son. He gave his son Thomas Greenfield Gaylord, whom he had named for his friend Mr. Greenfield, a quarter interest to remain in the business and promised him another part, as soon as he could pay for it out of the profits, which he soon did.

In 1858, while on a visit to New York, he was suddenly taken with a stroke of apoplexy and was found dead on the street. His remains were brought to Cincinnati and with his own workmen, who came in a body from Portsmouth to bring their last tribute to their beloved employer, as pall-bearers, he was laid away for his eternal rest in the Gaylord lot in Spring Grove cemetery, and afterwards his body was placed beside his wife in the Gaylord vault in Cincinnati, which had been built by his son Thomas G. Gaylord, Jr.

Mr. Gaylord never took much interest in politics for his own advancement. He was a staunch Whig. His only public office being one of a committee of three including James Pursell, and Moses Gregory as fence viewers of Wayne Township. Outside of his milling business he was director of the Portsmouth Insurance Co. He left what would be considered in those times a large estate.

A man of great personal magnetism, he made many friends, while his perception and nerve in business enabled him to be considered among the foremost citizens of Portsmouth. He left a son, Thomas Greenfield Gaylord, and a daughter, Emma Gaylord. The former married Miss Grosbeck, of Cincinnati who died shortly afterwards. He then married Miss Pall of Philadelphia, by whom he had one son, J. Pall Gaylord, now living in Chicago. His second wife died a few months after the birth of her child. Mr. Gaylord then married Miss Alice Brannin a celebrated beauty of Louisville, by whom he had three children, two girls and a boy, Elsie Kilgour Gaylord, Edith Pommeroy Gaylord and Thomas Gould Gaylord. Edith died at the age of six from diphtheria.

Emma, the daughter of Thomas, married E. H. Pendleton of Cincinnati, by whom she had eleven children, four of whom are living. Lucy, the oldest, married Ambrose White of Cincinnati. E. H. Pendleton, Jr., married Miss Eckstein of Cincinnati; N. G. Pendleton, married Miss Bessie Johnson of Iowa, and Susie G. Pendleton married Mr. Nathan Powell of Madison, Indiana.

Benjamin Brayton Gaylord

was born in Westernville, Oneida County, New York, November 26, 1811. His father was Dr. Chester Gaylord, and his mother was Lydia Brayton. When he was a child, his parents removed to Litchfield, Herkimer County, New York. There at the age of 15, under the preaching of Rev. Abner Towne, father of Judge Henry A. Towne, of Portsmouth, Mr. Gaylord became a member of the Presbyterian Church and continued such all his life. In the year 1839, he came to Portsmouth and was employed as a clerk for several years by his cousin, the late T. G. Gaylord, of Cincinnati, in the Gaylord rolling mill in Portsmouth.

In 1844, he became manager of Clinton Furnace and remained such four years. He was also a stock-holder in the same furnace.

In 1845, he married Margaret Jane Hempstead, daughter of Dr. G. S. B. Hempstead.

Returning to Portsmouth in 1848, he assumed full control of the Gaylord Mill and remained in charge until December, 1874, when, on account of failing health, he was compelled to retire. He was an incessant worker, a superior financier. He had the faculty of being able to attend to a great many things at once. He was a man of remarkable foresight and would anticipate a coming crisis when others would fail to understand the situation. He was an eminently practical man and gave his personal attention to his business. He made a specialty of the manufacture of boiler iron and built up a reputation in this line second to none in the country. He held the love and affection of his employes, and they always regarded his interests as carefully as they would their own. He had but one strike in all his business career. He took special pains to encourage economy, and exerted his influence to induce his employes to save their money and obtain homes for their families. In this way he gathered round him a class of steady, industrious laborers, many of whom became well-to-do and influential citizens of Portsmouth. To assist those who were willing to act upon his advice, he advanced them money for the purchase of property, and gave them convenient period for payment.

When the civil war opened out and the Government invited proposals for the making of gun-boat iron, the other mills along the Ohio river were afraid to undertake to make the iron because it involved such enormous expenditures and such expensive changes of machinery, but Mr. Gaylord accepted a contract with the Government to make the iron to sheathe the gun boats. His execution of the contracts were entirely satisfactory to the War Department and he made a very large sum of money for himself and for those in business with him.

He was not a graduate of any college, but was a self educated man. He read a great deal and digested what he read. For a great many years he was a member of the Board of Trustees of Marietta College and contributed several thousand dollars towards its endowment. He also gave liberally to the Lane Seminary at Cincinnati, and in many instances, assisted young men in acquiring an education. His benefactions to the churches and other parties were of the most liberal character. His pastor, the Rev. Dr. Pratt, said of him:

"He cared for the poor and needy, sending coal and provisions often to their homes when they knew not from whence they came." Dr. Pratt also said of him that if every one who had received a special favor of him, were to bring a spray of evergreen and throw in his grave, he believed it would fill it to the top. He was one of the most upright and conscientious men in the community.* To show his peculiarities of conscience,—one of his business associates had employed a young lawyer to collect a bill for about one-half what his services were worth. Mr. Gaylord ascertained the circumstances and sent the lawyer a check for $50 more to make his fee what it should have been. At another time, he bought a lot of pig-iron of an agent for the furnace. The bill called for one hundred tons, and on re-weighing the iron, it was found to weigh one hundred and sixteen tons. Mr. Gaylord settled for the sixteen tons extra, although it was billed to him at one hundred tons. He bought at one time a lot of miscellaneous bar iron from the old rolling mill of Means, Hall & Company. They asked $2,500 for it, but he offered them $2,000, and they accepted that sum. He sold it in St. Louis better than he expected to, and on his return, he paid Means Hall & Company $500 additional.

In 1873, he was a candidate for State Senator on the Republican ticket, but was defeated by Hon. James W. Newman. In 1862, he was a member of the Board of Military affairs of the city and on the Military Committee of the county.

Mr. Gaylord was for many years a ruling elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He had a family of six children, only three of whom survive; Martha B., Helen and Benjamin H. After his death on September 1, 1880, his family removed to Riverside, California, where they now reside. The employes of the Gaylord rolling mill attended his funeral in a body, and no man was ever more deeply mourned than he.

was one of the most interesting characters who ever took part in public affairs in Portsmouth. To begin with, he was one of the first nine City Fathers of Portsmouth, Ohio, and he continued to be a Councilman of the town of Portsmouth from March 15, 1815, until March, 1823. He was Town Treasurer of Portsmouth, Ohio, from March 15, 1815, until April 1, 1822, when he was removed by a unanimous vote for squandering the circulating medium of the town.

The town at that time had a currency of its own, and the Town Councilmen of 1822 could not understand David Gharky's method of keeping accounts, and so they removed him. The town never sued him, nor does it appear he was brought to book on account of the circulating medium; nor did the charge seem to affect his health or spirits; nor did it have any effect to modify his peculiar characteristics. For a plain Dutchman, Mr. Gharky could give the Virginians lessons in office-holding. Here is an inventory of the various offices held by him.

1815 to 1823, Town Councilman.

1815 to 1822, Town Treasurer.

1808 to 1811, County Commissioner.

1815 to 1816, Trustee of Wayne Township.

1821 to 1829, County Auditor.

1834 to 1836, County Treasurer.

He was the first City Treasurer, and the second County Auditor. In 1840 he was Town Councilman, and in 1827 elected Health Officer of the Town, but declined to serve.

DAVID GHARKY.

PIONEER OF ALEXANDRIA, FIRST COUNCILMAN OF PORTSMOUTH, FIRST TOWN TREASURER, COUNTY COMMISSIONER, AUDITOR AND TREASURER, BORN 1775, DIED 1850.

He was born February 13, 1775, in Stargard, Prussia, a subject of Frederick the Great. His father was a brewer and distiller; kept an Inn, and was a man of consequence. David received a good education for his time. His mother died when he was but seven years of age, and his father soon married again. His step-mother was of the traditional kind—largely emphasized. His father was imbued with King Solomon's ideas as to the use of the rod, and carried them into practice on his son. He was kept in school and sent to church regularly. His father wanted him to be a Lutheran minister, but the son was determined otherwise, and learned the carpenter's trade in an apprenticeship of three years. He then traveled about and worked at his trade. He visited many towns and cities, and ran up against gamblers and sharpers. After five years' wandering he returned to his father's home, but he soon quarreled with his father about a matrimonial venture his father wished him to make, and left home. He then determined to emigrate to America, and landed in Philadelphia in the fall of 1796. He was disgusted and about to return home, but missed his vessel. Then he started for Pittsburg. At one place he stopped with a Dutch farmer of the name of Knappenberger. He had an attractive daughter, and David Gharky, who never did anything by halves, fell in love with her. When her father found out the state of facts he sent young Gharky away, not approving his proposition for the position of son-in-law.

David Gharky went to Pittsburg, and from there down the river in a flat boat, with a view to going to Chillicothe, Ohio. He landed at Alexandria and viewed the town site. He went on to Chillicothe and found everybody sick with the fever and ague. He could obtain no work, and he returned to Alexandria. He was about to start down the river when Philip Moore gave him some work and he remained. When it was known that he was a carpenter and joiner, he obtained all the work he could do. He bought lots and built him a home, and in the spring he went back to Pennsylvania and married Elizabeth Knappenberger. He bought in-lots and out-lots. In 1803 he was elected an Assessor of Union township, when it extended east from Carey's run to Little Scioto, and north to the present Pike county line.

In 1803 Henry Massie tried to induce him to abandon Alexandria and move to Portsmouth, but, with his usual obstinacy, he declined, and remained in Alexandria till 1814, and then only left because the floods compelled him. He was a Justice of the Peace in Union township in 1810.

When Mr. Gharky was compelled to move to Portsmouth, in 1814, he bought four lots on Scioto street, where Vincent Brodbeck kept his store so many years, and established a ferry, which was conducted by him and his sons. He built a large shop on the lot and carried on the business of cabinet-making. Up till 1817 the Courts were sometimes held in his shop.

In 1818 he started a carding machine. It was run by horse power and carried on by Captain Edward Cranston, who was a practical machinist. They ran it several years when it was purchased by the Youngs of Wheelersburg and removed there. However, Mr. Gharky kept the wool-carding business going on several years after that.

While he was auditor of Scioto County he conducted the business at his cabinet shop. From 1830 to 1834, he was in Muncie, Indiana. In the latter year he returned to Portsmouth and became a candidate for County Treasurer and was elected by a plurality of nine votes.

In 1836, he went to Muncie and was there for some time. He returned to Portsmouth in 1840, and was in the Council. He went away to Muncie after that, but returned in 1850, took sick and died at Robert Montgomery's hotel in the 75th year of his age. He was buried in the Alexandria graveyard on the shelf of the hill overlooking Carey's Run.

In 1831, it was claimed that Mr. Gharky, while Auditor, in making up the tax duplicate of 1826 to 1829 had overcharged for the work. Suit for the overcharges was filed July 2, 1831, in trespass in the case, but the declaration read like one in debt. The narration called for $1,000, but the real amount claimed was $232.90, with interest. At the March term, 1832, it was tried in the Common Pleas by a jury and there was a verdict for plaintiff for $278.47. Mr. Gharky took a Bill of Exceptions and appealed to the Supreme Court on the Circuit and the verdict was for the defendant. Samuel M. Tracy represented the Commissioners, and William V. Peck the defendant. It is reported that the jury verdict in the Supreme court turned on the charge of the court, that if the jury found there had been a settlement between the parties for the work, the county could not open it up.

The anecdotes in regard to Mr. Gharky's peculiarities are numerous. Many of them are probably apocryphal. Mr. Gharky was a good subject to fasten a story to and was probably used for that purpose by the illustrators.

In June, 1835, while Treasurer, he was in the habit of endorsing orders "not paid for want of funds," and thus putting them on interest. This was carried so far that the Commissioners in a body called on Mr. Gharky and demanded to examine his books. The Commissioners entered the transaction on their journal and stated that Mr. Gharky became so disorderly that nothing could be done. The Commissioners ordered suit on his bond and he then agreed to pay the orders.

George A. Waller told this anecdote: Mr. Gharky, the Treasurer, would refuse orders, stating there were no funds and send the holders to Jacob Clingman, the banker, who would buy their orders. If the person receiving the order were a particular friend of Gharky's, he would place a circle with an "X" over in the left hand corner and then Clingman would pay it without question. Once Gharky gave his best friend in the County an order to take to Clingman, but forgot to put the circle and "X" on it. Clingman examined the order and said he had no money to pay, but would discount. The friend brought the order back to Gharky very indignant at being refused payment.

Gharky then said: "Did old Jake Clingman refuse to pay that order?" His friend answered "yes." Then Gharky said: "Let me see that order." His friend handed it over and Gharky saw at once that the circle and "X" were not in the lower left hand corner. Gharky placed them there and returned the order to his best friend, saying: "You take that back to old Jake Clingman and show him the mark and he will pay you." Gharky's friend took the order back and gave it to Mr. Clingman without pointing out Gharky's circle and cross. On being shown the mark, he apologized, saying: "I did not see that before," and at once paid the order.

As soon as he took the treasurer's office in 1834, he announced that he would pay out the money in the Treasury raised by taxation to pay for a new jail on County current orders and would not deposit it in the Commercial Bank as ordered by the Commissioners. This created quite a commotion and made much trouble.

Mr. Gharky reared quite a family of sons and daughters. He made and published a small book for the benefit of his family. He preserved all the early newspapers of Portsmouth and they are now in the state library.

Mr. Gharky was a man of the most decided opinions and was obstinate in the superlative degree. He loved to be in opposition and was the happiest when he was.

In 1822, he entered his solemn protest in Council against fencing the graveyard then on the old site of the Burgess Mill. He protested because the proposed fence left some graves out and he continued to protest until the occupants of those graves were disinterred and reinterred inside the new fence.

Mr. Gharky was a very industrious and useful citizen, but dreadfully abrupt and eccentric. His son, John, was in many respects like him, as well as his son George H., but neither of them were as self-willed and obstinate as he. With his peculiarities, it is strange he was able to be elected to public office as often as he was. As a modern politician he would have been much out of place. He was not a member of any church, but he and Dr. Burr were always good friends in spite of Mr. Gharky's quarrelsome disposition.

George Henry Gharky

was born in Alexandria, Scioto County, Ohio, May 17, 1813, the son of David Gharky, who has a separate sketch herein. His father moved to Portsmouth, Ohio, from Alexandria, in 1814. The first eighteen years of his life were spent in the town of Portsmouth. At the age of 18, he went to Cincinnati and spent six months learning the carpenter's trade. He returned to Portsmouth and worked at that for four years. His father was a cabinet maker and carpenter and George worked with him. In November, 1833, at the age of twenty, he built a box house on a flat-boat, loaded it with goods and went to Cincinnati. He made four trips down and three back, pushing and pulling the boat along the shore and tying up at night. The boat was eleven tons burden, and on the last trip he sold her for $75 or twice what she cost him. Captain William Ripley was chief engineer, cook, bottle washer and mud clerk. The dry goods which Mr. Gharky handled in this venture were shipped from New York to Cleveland, and thence to Portsmouth by canal.

In 1834, he built a canal boat and was its captain for one year. He named the boat "William Shakespeare."

In 1840, he was wharfmaster at Portsmouth, Ohio.

In 1843, he purchased the canal boat "Laurel" and had in operation three boats making weekly trips between Columbus and Portsmouth. He continued in this business for five years. He learned the business of river pilot and followed that for several years.

In 1847, he bought the steamboat, "America" and took her up the Scioto River as far as the State Dam, six miles below Chillicothe. This was considered quite a feat and the citizens of Chillicothe came down in great numbers to see the boat. It is tradition that they took Captain Gharky to Chillicothe and initiated him into the Ground Hog Club. On the return of the boat to Piketon, it gave the people of that village an excursion to Richmondale.

He was married September 26, 1852, to Miss Martha Oldfield, daughter of Judge Oldfield. Immediately after this, he was in the shoe business with Thomas G. Lloyd for a short time.

He was elected Auditor of Scioto County in 1854 over John Walder. He served two years from March 1, 1855.

In 1857, he became Deputy Auditor and remained such until 1860. In 1863, he was Deputy Treasurer for one year. He became book-keeper for the First National bank in 1864 and served until 1868.

On June 6, 1873, B. P. Holmes resigned as City Clerk and he was appointed in his place. He was elected by the Council for one year from April 17, 1874.

From 1875 to 1879, he was a member of the City Board of Equalization.

His children are George H., who died in 1875 at the age of 22 years; Miss Jennie L. who died in 1879 at the age of 39 years; Sarah Elizabeth, who died at the age of 3 years; Marinette, the wife of Samuel Rice and William D., who is engaged in business in Philadelphia.

Mr. Gharky was a Whig during the time that party existed. He afterwards became a Republican. He was very fond of reminiscence and of conversing about the early history of Portsmouth. He liked a good story and could laugh with as much zest as any one who ever resided in Portsmouth. He was very much given to telling people what he thought of them and his extreme candor rendered him unsuitable for a candidate before the people. All his duties as a public officer were performed with the greatest exactness and care. He was an excellent citizen, but as arbitrary as Bismarck. His way was always the best way and the only way.

Colonel Troilus Jura Graham

always signed his name T. J. Graham and every one assumed that these initials stood for Thomas Jefferson and that his father was an admirer of the great Apostle of Democracy, but on the contrary, the "T. J." stood for the name above given. Like most of our distinguished citizens, he was born in Virginia. His birth was on January 22, 1810, near Snickers' Gap, in Loudon County. He attended school at Bloomfield Academy and at Rockbridge College. In 1827, his father removed to Muskingum County, Ohio, on a farm where our subject worked until he was nineteen years of age. He taught school two terms. He then went to Zanesville and clerked in the dry goods store of Robert and James Golden two years.

On October 21, 1831, he went to Chillicothe, Ohio, and put up at Watson's Hotel. He first taught a select school of from eighty to one hundred pupils and then went into the clothing store of White and Douglas. After a time he became a partner in the business. On October 30, 1836, he was married to Miss Harriet Scott, daughter of Judge Thomas Scott. He was quite a society young man in Chillicothe and occupied a prominent position. He commanded a fancy military company in the city, and was afterwards made Colonel of the County Militia in Ross County, hence his title.

He came to Portsmouth as Colonel Graham, and so remained all his life. In 1837 and 1838, he attended the legislature, as a lobbyist, and procured the passage of a new militia law of which he was the author, and many features of which are retained to this day.

While visiting in Columbus he became acquainted with Dr. John Glover, in December, 1839. The latter thought he would make a good hotel keeper and induced him to come to Portsmouth and take the Watson House, as Watson, who was then conducting the hotel, wished to return to Chillicothe. He landed in Portsmouth February 20, 1839. The steamboats, the canal and the stage line were all doing a big business and Portsmouth was on a boom. Colonel Grathen remained in charge of the hotel eighteen years and four months, when he sold out to John Row & Son. The Colonel was a model landlord and the hotel business was better paying in the time he conducted it than it ever was before or has been since. In 1842, he charged two dollars per week for meals and board; but that was when wheat was thirty to forty cents per bushel, corn ten cents per bushel and beef three cents per pound. Our subject was active and public spirited and was into everything which went on. His was the best house in the place and he entertained all the distinguished men who visited Portsmouth. Henry Clay, John J. Crittenden, William Allen and Allen W. Thurman were among his guests. Amin Bey was a guest, as was John Quincy Adams.

His wife died while he was in the hotel and on March 16, 1855, he married Miss Eliza Tobin. They took their wedding trip to Wheeling. Directly after his wedding Governor Chase appointed him commissioner and inspector and he gave up the hotel.

During the war he was again remembered by his old friend, Salmon P. Chase, and was made a treasury agent in the south. He took a cotton plantation and planted a crop, but lost it by the cotton worm. He left Vicksburg on the 24th of January, 1866, on Captain Jesse Hurd's ill-fated steamboat, the "Missouri." She exploded on January 30, near Smithland, Kentucky, and killed and wounded many people. Colonel Graham was in his state-room at the time and was thrown between the wheel-houses. He was badly and permanently hurt and never recovered from the injuries thus received. On June 13, 1866, he took the agency of the National Express Company at Portsmouth and held it until the company quit business.

On May 25, 1860, he was elected a Justice of the Peace in Portsmouth, but resigned on the third of June, following. In 1874, he took charge of St. James Hotel in Cincinnati and conducted it for over a year. In 1876 he returned to Portsmouth for good. In the same year the City Council made him Infirmary Director and he held that office by successive annual appointments, until his death on January 21, 1898. He had been a resident of Portsmouth for almost forty-nine years. In his political views, he was first a Whig and afterwards a Republican, with the "know-nothings" switched in between. In 1844, after recovering from his dreadful accident, he was confirmed in St. Saviour's church. He was a citizen held in general esteem.

Jean Gabriel Gervais.

In the spring of 1780, five hundred French families landed at Alexandria, Virginia, induced to emigrate to this country by the Society Land Company, on promises of lands which that Company was unable to fulfill. Some of them returned to France at once, some settled in seaboard cities, and about one half resolved to cross the mountains and settle in the wilderness. They went across the country to the Monongahela river, at Old Redstone Fort. Here they took boats and floated down to below the mouth of the Great Kanawha, where the Scioto Company's lands were said to be, but they located in the Ohio Company's purchase at Gallipolis. It is said that eighty cabins had been erected for them on the site of Gallipolis, and the Scioto Land Company supplied them with provisions for a while. When they found that they were in the Ohio Company's purchase, many of them left. Those who remained employed Jean Gabriel Gervais to procure them lands from Congress. He was a gentleman of means, and had a great sympathy for his suffering countrymen. He was well bred, of fine education and polished manners. He went to Philadelphia and employed Peter Stephen Duponceau, a Philadelphia lawyer to assist him. It is apparent that Gervais made the best selection of an attorney to put his scheme through. Duponceau was born on the Isle of Rhe on the coast of France, in 1760. He came to the United States in 1777 with Baron Steuben, whom he served as secretary and aide-de-camp. He quit the army in 1780, on account of ill health, and studied law, and became an eminent lawyer in Philadelphia. He was a voluminous writer of essays on various subjects. He wrote a book on the "Jurisdiction of the Courts," published in 1834. He received a prize from the French Institute for an essay on the "Indian Languages of North America." He was for some years President of the American Philosophic Society. He died in Philadelphia in 1844.

The French inhabitants of Gallipolis had agreed to give Gervais 4,000 acres of the grant for his services in securing the necessary legislation. Gervais employed Duponceau and "An act to authorize a grant of lands to the French inhabitants of Gallipolis and for other purposes therein mentioned" was passed March 3, 1795, and is found in Volume 2, page 503, of the United States Statutes at large. Under this act, 24,000 acres of land now constituting Green Township in Scioto County, was surveyed into a tract of 4,000 acres, and 92 lots of 217 acres each. Each inhabitant was to draw a lot, and have it patented to him. The act and Gervais' patent required him to settle on the tract within three years from the date of the patent, and to live on the land three years after, and in default of so doing the land was to revert to the United States. Each of the other French settlers was to locate on his lot within five years from the date of his patent, and reside on it for five years, and in default of so doing, the lot was to revert to the United States. However, on February 21, 1806, Congress repealed the conditions of the act of March 3, 1795. On June 25, 1798, (3rd United States General Statutes) Congress made the additional French Grant of 1,200 acres lying just west of the first grant, and fronting on the Ohio river 640 rods, and extending back to include the quantity. There were eight persons included in this grant. It does not appear that Gervais was concerned in obtaining this grant. The patent to Gervais was dated December 28, 1800, and is recorded in Volume A. B. C., page 84, Record of Deeds of Scioto County. Gervais deeded 200 acres of the 4,000 acre tract on the Ohio river to Peter Stephen Duponceau, the Philadelphia lawyer whom he had employed. The consideration named was $600.00. The deed was dated April 3, 1802. In the deed, Gervais is recited as "Gentleman" of Upper Township, Scioto County, Ohio. The deed to Duponceau is presumed to have been for his services to Gervais. It is found in Volume A. B. C., page 2, and in 1855 was owned by Boynton and Lacroix. On May 6, 1806, Gervais conveyed the remaining 3,800 acres to Samuel Hunt, of Charlestown, Sullivan County, New Hampshire. The consideration stated was $7,000. The deed was executed May 26, 1806, and is found in Volume A. B. C., page 85. Hunt gave a mortgage to secure $5,000 of the purchase money payable May 6, 1808. He did not pay the money and the land was sold on foreclosure, December 22, 1809, to Earl Sproat to whom Gervais had sold the mortgage. Roswell Hunt obtained it of Sproat and sold it to Asa Boynton for $9,000. Roswell Hunt was of Charlestown, New Hampshire, "Gentleman," and Asa Boynton is recited to be of Piermont, Grafton County, New Hampshire, "yeoman." The deed is recorded in Volume A. B. C., page 303, and was dated Jan. 15, 1810. Duponceau held on to his 200 acres until February 20, 1830, when he sold them to Thayer D. White for $1,000 silver money. Keyes says that of the 100 French who drew lots, only about twenty settled on them. That the others remained in Gallipolis, or went elsewhere. Gervais laid out a town on his land and called it Burrsburg. There were never more than five or six cabins on it. It is said he had estates in France and had moved in the best society in Paris; that he was a fine dancer, and fond of all kinds of amusements. Frontier life palled on him even if he did have a two story double log house in Burrsburg. He came to the United States in 1790 and in 1806, he sold out to Samuel Hunt, and the land went to a colony from New Hampshire of which Asa Boynton seemed to be the head.

Then Monsieur, Gervais disappeared below our horizon and we hear of him no more. He went back to his beloved France, in 1817. He rode all the way from Gallipolis to Philadelphia, on horseback accompanied by E. S. Menager. When he reached Philadelphia, he gave his horse to Menager. He carried his money on this trip in his saddle pockets. He was never married but resided in Paris with his sister. He died in 1824, at the age of sixty. In leaving Gallipolis, he presented the many town lots he owned there to his friends.

MARTIN BEEBE GILBERT.

Martin Beebe Gilbert

was born September 16, 1816, at Canaan, New York, the son of Giles Gilbert, Senior, and Effie Beebe, his wife. When he was but two years of age, his parents located in Marietta where his father engaged in the grocery business with Colonel Stone at Point Harmar. The family came to Portsmouth in 1830, and his father engaged in the same business; and he was connected with it as clerk and partner until 1846, when his father went out of it and it was changed to M. & G. Gilbert, our subject and his brother Giles Gilbert, Jr., composing the firm. Mr. Gilbert obtained his education in Marietta and in the public schools at Portsmouth; but the greater and better part of it was his business education in the counting room of his father. Between 1830 and 1850, the furnishing of supplies to the steamboats plying the Ohio river was a very extensive and lucrative business; and Portsmouth was a point at which a great many of the supplies were purchased. Mr. Gilbert made his fortune largely from the steamboat and river craft trade. He continued in the wholesale grocery business from 1838 until his death, and was uniformly successful. He was a man who made and held many friends. He had a wide acquaintance through all the territory tributary to Portsmouth; and had the confidence of the entire business community. He was known for his promptness and integrity in business. He was a public spirited and liberal minded citizen. No enterprise for public benefit was ever projected in the community, but he was called upon for and favored it with a liberal subscription and with his influence. He was a Whig and a Republican in his political views; but he never sought an office or attempted to control any political action. He was ambitious only for business success. About the only public office he ever held was that of city wharfmaster, from May 3, 1842, until April 6, 1844; but this was directly in connection with his business in selling boat stores. Mr. Gilbert was one of the most patriotic and loyal citizens of the County. October 14, 1861, he was made one of the Military Committee of Scioto County. This was an office of great responsibility but without emoluments. His associates on this committee were F. C. Searl, W. A. Hutchins, John P. Terry and A. W. Buskirk. He served on this committee as late as November 20, 1864. When the history of the war is written, the arduous duties that were performed by the County Military Committee will be known. It had arbitrary power; and none but the most loyal and self-sacrificing men, could, or would accept the place. Mr. Gilbert performed his duties on this committee to the satisfaction of all concerned. He was the founder of one of the most substantial and extensive businesses in the city of Portsmouth, now conducted by the M. B. Gilbert Grocery Company. During his life and until the 1st of January, 1900, the business was conducted as a partnership, but since that tie it has been conducted as a corporation. Since his death his estate has been largely interested in the business. Mr. Gilbert was not only an honest and successful business man during his entire life, but he was essentially a religious man. For thirty-five years, he was a communicant of All Saints Church. He was a member of the vestry of that church nearly the whole of that time. For some years prior to his death and at the time of his death, he was a Senior Warden of the church, the most important lay office in the organization. May 12, 1840, he married Laura Virginia Hancock. She died October 14, 1868. Their children were: Lucius H., and Augustus B., both deceased in young manhood; Frank L., and Martin B. jr., deceased in middle life. On the 15th of June, 1871, he was married to Mrs. Caroline Stockham, widow of Thomas Crull, who survived him. They had one daughter Laura Virginia, the wife of Frank Kendall. Mr. Gilbert was punctilious in carrying out to the letter all of his obligations whether financial, social or religious. He was not a user of liquors or tobacco and was very methodical in all his doings. He was uniformly courteous and obliging to all of his acquaintances. He was a model business man and churchman. He was most highly esteemed in his church and in the community, and when called upon to part with this world he had no regrets. His life and conduct were more valuable than a thousand sermons and all those who remember him, recollect the words, "He being dead yet speaketh" because the remembrance of his honorable Christian life is a precious treasure to all who knew him.

Marion Ingalls Gilruth, daughter of William and Grace Ingalls Gilruth, was born Feb. 14, 1776 in the city of Edinburg, Scotland. In 1784, she with her parents emigrated to the United States. On the 16th of March, 1787, they settled on the Ohio river, at a place called Belleville on the Virginia shore, some eighteen miles below the mouth of the Little Kanawha. During the Indian War which followed they ran many risks of losing their lives. On one occasion as the family were sitting at breakfast, they heard footsteps of men running. Marion stepped to the door to see what it meant. As she opened the door, she heard a scream in another direction, and looked to ascertain the cause. She saw him, who afterwards became her husband, rush into his house while some twenty Indians were carrying on a work of death within a few yards of the other end of his cabin. Turning she saw three Indians within fifteen feet of her, with their guns pointed at her. She looked one that was immediately in front of her full in the face, he instantly took down his gun, crying out "Ugh." In the meantime her little brother had come out and advanced nearly half way to where the Indians stood. She sprang forward, caught the child, darted into the house, and shut the door, and gave the alarm. Firing commenced and the Indians retreated, having killed one man, taken a little boy prisoner and lost their chief. In March, 1792, she was married to Thomas Gilruth by whom she had seven children, two of whom died in infancy. John, Jane, James, Mary and William are yet living. Having lost their possessions at Belleville by an older claim, the Gilruth family settled in the French Grant, Scioto County, Ohio, on the 8th day of April, 1797. Thomas Gilruth died March 19, 1826. She survived until April 14, 1847. She was a mother to the orphan, a friend to the poor, and a support to the church.

was born January 29, 1793, at Belleville, Wood County, West Virginia. He was the son of Thomas Gilruth and Marion Ingalls, his wife. His parents came from Scotland shortly after the close of the American Revolution; and the year 1792 found them in southern Ohio, then the theatre of an Indian war. The danger of assaults from the savages caused the Gilruths to cross the Ohio river and seek shelter in, or near, a fort at Belleville, Va. After the treaty of Greenville the Gilruths concluded to seek a permanent home in Ohio. April 8, 1797, they settled in the French Grant.

Our subject spent his youth on the farm, with occasional interludes for such schooling as the neighborhood afforded. In 1813, he volunteered with a company raised in his region for service in the war against Great Britain. The company was assigned with an Ohio regiment, and saw a great deal of hard service on the northern frontier. He made a good record and was sent out on several scouting expeditions.

In 1816, he was married to Miss Hannah Kouns.

In the winter of 1818-9, a great revival swept through southern Ohio; and in February of the latter year, our subject was, as he himself had said many a time, "powerfully converted" at a Methodist meeting. By the latter part of March, he had so favorably impressed his Presiding Elder that he was licensed to preach; and on the 7th day of August, following, when the conference met, he was ordained as a regular minister. He continued in the regular ministry in the Ohio Conference for thirty-two years. He made his first visit to Iowa in 1844; and in that year, or the year following, entered a quarter section of land two miles north of the city of Davenport. He returned to Ohio and remained until the spring of 1851 when he removed with his family to Davenport, Iowa. He became a member of the Iowa Conference, a relation he sustained until the day of his death. He officiated as pastor in charge, or on circuit, whenever appointed, until the year 1863, when he was placed upon the superannuated list. Gilruth Chapel near his home was named for him. In 1853, he moved his family onto a farm near Davenport, where he resided until his death.

His wife died in 1818. September 25, 1823, he married Miss Mary Westlake, daughter of a prominent citizen of Gallipolis, Ohio.

He had eight children: Harriet and Mary, both deceased; Naomi M., the wife of Sylvester R. Hayes; Matilda, the wife of George Carpenter; Pauline, who married A. J. Kynett; Christina, the wife of Augustus R. Logan; James M. and Thomas W. He died June 11, 1873.

He had made money, became quite rich, indeed, but he never lost the respect and confidence of the neighbors nor of those who had business transactions with him, by the means of acquiring it. He sustained his Christian integrity in business as well as in the pulpit. He possessed bright intellect, had vivid imagination, and a love for the beautiful in nature and literature. His memory was very retentive, his command of language good. He was a mighty man physically, and in his prime, his weight was nearly 300 pounds.

was born May 24, 1797, in Adams County in the Northwest Territory. He was the youngest of three children of Thomas and Marion Ingalls Gilruth, who emigrated to this country shortly after the Revolutionary War and finally settled in the French Grant.

He was early trained in the use of rifle, ax and fishing rod, the first implements of those days. Schools, there were none. But his mother was a woman of refinement; and having brought some books from Scotland, her children were given the rudiments of an education, with a taste for good reading which they improved all through life.

He was married to Rebecca Austin of Lawrence County in May, 1822. Her parents came from Luray, Shenandoah Valley, Virginia. His wife died in April, 1860, leaving ten children, seven sons and three daughters. The sons were Irwin Malcomb, Thomas, James, Austin, Isaac Newton, Henry Clay, Archibald. All the sons lived and grew to manhood, except Henry a boy of eighteen, who enlisted in Co. D. 173 O. V. I., August 25, 1864; appointed post duty sergeant, September 16, 1864; died in the service January 23, 1865. Only two sons are now living, one of them, Austin, is the owner of a Cattle Ranch near Elko, Nevada. He is of quiet, reserved disposition, taking pleasure in his fine stock, his books and papers. Archibald, the other was for fourteen years a missionary in India. He is now a member of the Ohio Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church. He married Miss Agnes Mulligan. They have six children. The daughters of William Gilruth were: Minerva, married Thomas D. Kelly, now a widow, living in Huntington, West Virginia; Mary, married A. E. Goddard, lives at the old home place, near Haverhill, Ohio; Alice married M. S. Pixley, M. D., Portsmouth, Ohio. William Gilruth lived four score years on a farm on which he was born. He died June 2, 1879, honored and respected by all who knew him.

was born November 5, 1827, at the old Gilruth homestead in Green Township above Haverhill, Ohio. He was the second son of William and Rebecca (Austin) Gilruth. His grandfather was Thomas Gilruth, born in Perthshire, Scotland, and came to the United States in 1783, and located in Virginia. His wife was Marion (Ingalls) Gilruth, daughter of William and Grace Ingalls, and was born in Edinburg, Scotland, February 14, 1776.

Our subject was raised on a farm and got his meagre education by attending three months subscription schools during the winter months. At the breaking out of the rebellion, he enlisted October 3, 1861, in Battery F., First O. V. Light Artillery and was transferred to Co. G., 19th regiment, Veteran Reserve Corps, April 28, 1864. He was mustered out at the expiration of his term of service, November 9, 1864. He was wounded by a piece of shell on the right hand. He was married December 25, 1866, to Nancy Coe, daughter of Strander and Sophia Coe. They have had four children, but only two are living: Hattie and Addie Bell, who reside with their mother. Mr. Gilruth died April 13, 1899, and is buried in the family graveyard on the home farm. He was a Republican in his views, a man of integrity and honor and of a quiet and retiring nature. He was a great reader and kept well informed on current events. He had a special weakness for fine horses and had a reputation for his blooded animals.

William Givens, Jr.,

the eldest son of Judge William Givens and Rachel (Stockham) Givens (see their sketch), was born at Poplar Row, now Jackson, the village of salt boilers in Jackson County, Ohio, July 31, 1811. He attended the district schools and the subscription schools of the day, and worked with his father at the salt works until the year 1826, when the family moved to Nile Township, Scioto County, Ohio, on the farm purchased from John Graham, one of the proprietors of the Graham, O'Bannon & Massie Survey Nos. 2,459 and 2,558. Here he assisted his father and brothers David and John in clearing up the land and cutting wood for the supply of such steamboats as were then plying the Ohio river. They used their earnings in making payments on the farm, which was then a wilderness. He was engaged much of his time in the construction of keelboats and flatboats, for which there was a good demand for freighting to all points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers as far down as New Orleans. The boats were loaded with produce and floated down the river and the load sold out. Then the boat would be sold, and the enterprising mariners would frequently walk back. He was connected with this business more or less, as well as looking after and cultivating his farm and orchard, until there was no more produce of the forest worth looking after in his neighborhood. In politics he was a Whig until the dissolution of that party, and was then a Republican the remainder of his life, taking a very active part in recruiting soldiers for the Civil War, and in assisting in caring for those who were left behind. In religion, he was a Methodist from the age of twenty-one, and his home was a haven of rest for the circuit rider and those attending the quarterly, and other meetings, from a distance. He was a warm hearted, friendly man, and was always slow to believe that any of his acquaintances could go wrong. He saw nearly three generations come and go in his neighborhood, and was acquainted with all the men, women and children, and was highly respected. William Givens was married to Elizabeth Elliott on October 15, 1834. She was the sister of Katharine, who married Laban Woodworth; Nancy, who married John Elliott, and Sarah, who married Leroy S. Moore. She had four brothers: John, Benjamin, William and Alexander. These were all children of Benjamin Elliott and Isabella (McCann) Elliott. Both families, the Elliotts and McCanns, are believed to have emigrated from Scotland and Ireland at an early date and settled in Adams and Scioto Counties. The clan of Elliott had a separate tartan of plaid, and were an important family in Scotland. There was also an important English family by the name of Elliott, belonging to Devon and Cornwall. Elizabeth Elliott was born in Scioto County, Ohio, February 12, 1814. Children were born to them as follows: Cynthia A., who married Washington Cross, and now lives at Roseland, La.; Sarah Ellen, who married R. A. Bryan, residing in Portsmouth, Ohio; Mary Jane, who married M. Herdman, residing at Elm Tree, in Nile Township; Martha Susan, who married Rev. S. M. Donahoe and died June 16, 1881; Eliza Catharine, who married George Williamson of Dry Run and died March 28, 1887; Margaret Isabel, who died at the age of sixteen in 1862; David Creighton, who married Josephine McDermott and resided in Nile Township until recently, when he with his family emigrated to Hampton, Iowa; William Alexander, who married Lucy Murphy, daughter of Sherry Murphy, of Adams County, and now resides on the old Givens farm. The married life of William and Elizabeth Givens extended to nearly sixty-four years. Williams Givens died at his home in Nile Township, July 30, 1898, from the infirmities of old age, aged eighty-seven years. Elizabeth (Elliott) Givens died October 11, 1899, from the same cause as her husband, aged eighty-five years, seven months and twenty-nine days.

Allen Forsythe Givens,

the sixth son of William Givens; was born in Jackson County, Ohio, April 22, 1820. He lived in Jackson County until 1827, when his father removed to Scioto County and located 312 acres in the O'Bannon, Graham and Massie survey No. 2,459 and 2,558. He attended the country schools for three months in the year, during his boyhood and was reared a farmer. He lives on a farm of 120 acres, part of the same land on which his father located, and has lived there all his life. When he moved there his father's purchase was nearly all woods: For thirty years, our subject was engaged in building flat boats and in flatboating to Cincinnati. In 1880, he was real estate Appraiser of Nile Township, the only public office he ever held. On June 10, 1841, he was married to Mary Smith, daughter of James Smith, a brother of John F. Smith, the old ferryman. His children are: John W., living in Salina, Kansas; James H., deceased, leaving a widow and three sons; Rachel Eliza, the wife of Augustus Orcutt, now living in Charleston, West Virginia; Elizabeth, married, first, to Marion Coe by whom she has two children, living and married; second, to George Williamson of Dry Run; Aurilla F., married to Andy, Noel and has died leaving five children; Victoria Givens, married to Silas Smith and died leaving two children. Mr. Givens lost three children in infancy, two sons and one daughter. He was originally a Whig and then became a Republican. Since 1884, he has been a Prohibitionist. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for sixty-five years. He has been a steward of the church for forty-five years and Sunday School superintendent for twenty-six years. He is holding both offices at present. His wife died November 8, 1900, aged seventy-eight. No citizen of Scioto County is held in greater regard than Mr. Givens. The purity of his life and the integrity of his character are known to all of the community where he dwells and have earned him the high place he has in the esteem of his fellow men.

Jefferson Wadley Glidden

was born at Northfield, New Hampshire in 1806. His father was Charles and his mother, Ruth (Hall) Glidden. She lived to be 91 years old and died in Wheelersburg, Ohio. He learned the dyer's trade in New Hampshire. His father, who had located in Franklin this county, in 1826, is buried there. Jefferson Wadley Glidden went into the woods and made charcoal. He formed a partnership with John Blair, Obadiah Glidden's father-in-law. He began chopping wood at $10 a month, and then went into making charcoal for Junior Furnace. After a few years, he was one of the parties who bought the furnace. He discovered a spring on the place that would cure ague. It cured him and all of his neighbors. It turned out afterwards when the water was analyzed that it was impregnated with arsenic. He was a member of the old Ohio Iron Company which built Junior and Empire Furnaces. When the company failed, our subject went to Texas on a trip. He afterwards came back and bought Junior Furnace. He went there in 1840 and remained until 1850. He owned an interest in the Furnace until it blew out in 1866. He and John Blair were the owners and were partners. It was then purchased by Glidden & Company, consisting of Jefferson Wadley Glidden and Obadiah his brother. After that, it was owned by Glidden, Murfin & Company, composed of Jefferson W. Glidden, Daniel A. Glidden, Obadiah Glidden, and James Murfin. Glidden & Murfin built Empire Furnace in 1859. In 1852, the firm of Glidden, Crawford & Company was organized, consisting of Jefferson W., Obadiah, Charles Mills, Stephen S. and Daniel A. Glidden and George Crawford. That firm purchased and operated Clinton Furnace. Jefferson W. Glidden also had an interest in Scioto Furnace under the firm name of Glidden, Robinson & Company. Jefferson Glidden built the first suspension bridge across the mouth of the Scioto. He organized the Gas Company at Portsmouth and built its works there.

He was one of the leading spirits of the city of Portsmouth during his residence there. At one time he was interested with Mark E. Reed in the purchase of 30,000 acres of land in La Porte, Indiana. He, with John Lockwood, bought a large tract of land near Milwaukee and laid out an addition to the city known as the Glidden & Lockwood Addition, which was sub-divided and sold during his life, and after his death. At one time he had a judgment of $13,000 levied on his house as a member of the firm of Glidden, Robinson & Company, he being the only solvent member of the firm. Col. Turley had the judgment. When Jefferson Glidden heard of the levy, he was then sick in bed and said to his son, John, "Let them sell the house, I can't." John Culbertson, of Ironton, better known as "Black Hawk," hearing of the levy, offered him $22,000 on his own note at 6 per cent. He declined the offer and paid off the judgment from his own resources. He died March 16, 1863, of consumption.

He was a Whig and Republican, but not a member of any church. He was a man of few words, clear and concise in his expressions. He had immense energy and great kindness of heart. At one time when Judge Searl, then a mere boy had a coal contract for Franklin Furnace, and was losing money right along, he asked to be relieved from his contract. The other partners refused. The matter was brought to the attention of Mr. Jefferson W. Glidden. He investigated it and saw that if Judge Searl completed his contract, it would ruin him. He insisted to the other members of the firm that it should make a new contract with Judge Searl, who was then plain F. C. Searl, and give him an opportunity to make something. A new contract was made and Mr. Searl came out all right under the contract.

Mr. Glidden was a man of wonderful nerve, always cool. He was a great reader and a man who investigated everything thoroughly. As a business man he was invaluable in the community.

Elijah Glover, Sr.

The Glover family were among the earliest settlers of Scioto County and Portsmouth. Their American ancestor, John Glover came from London, England, under a grant to Lord Baltimore. He was of mixed Scotch and English descent. He bought land in Frederick County, Maryland, and lived near what was known as Ellicott's Mills. His children were Joshua, Samuel and Sarah. The latter married, in Maryland, a man named Basiman; Samuel married Elizabeth Barnes of Cecil County, Maryland; and through every generation of the Glover family until the present time, there has been a Samuel Glover and an Elizabeth Barnes Glover. Samuel Glover and family emigrated to Kentucky in the year 1795. They settled on a farm in Mason County near May's Lick. They had thirteen children: John, named for the grandfather, Ezekiel, Elijah, Johusa, Nathan, Joshua, Sarah, Samuel Barnes, Asa, Anna, Margaret, Azel and Elizabeth Barnes. The last named died in early girlhood, the remaining twelve lived to manhood and womanhood, and most of them to old age. Elijah, Johusa, Nathan, Sarah, Anna, Margaret and Azel lived and died in Portsmouth or vicinity.

Elijah Glover was born May 6, 1782, and was the first member of the Glover family to locate in Ohio. He was followed by his brothers and sisters before named. He was the third child of Samuel Glover and was in his fourteenth year when his father left Maryland. His first visit to Ohio was in 1799, when he came to buy furs for his father's hat store in Kentucky. In company with a man named Crane, he went in a pirogue up the Scioto river as far as Chilli-cothe. On their way back, in passing through the old ford, at the head of the mill race, their boat struck a snag, turned over and Crane lost all his furs. Ever after, during the keel boat navigation, this spot was called "Crane's Defeat."

In the year 1800, Elijah Glover and Catherine Jones were married in Kentucky. Her father Griffith Jones was also from Maryland and lived on a farm, about five miles from the Glover farm. Several of her brothers and sisters also came to Ohio, and many of their descendants are still residents of Portsmouth. After Elijah Glover's marriage, he came to Ohio and settled at Alexandria. Two of his children were born there: Samuel and John, the latter in 1802, afterwards known as Doctor John Glover. The subsequent children: Ezekiel, William, Nathan, Elijah Barnes, known in Portsmouth as Eli, Samuel Griffith, Elizabeth Barnes and Anna Maria, were all born in Portsmouth, to which place Mr. and Mrs. Glover moved in 1804.

They built a house between Scioto and Massie streets. He finished the kitchen first and moved into it. The same year they completed the house and opened a tavern. Mr. Glover also opened a hat store, running both at the same time. This tavern was a log house, weather boarded and painted red. It was used as a tavern many years by different parties, among them Mr. John Peebles, father of the late John G. Peebles. Mr. Glover afterwards built a larger house on the corner of Jefferson and Front streets, which is now known as "Pig Iron Corner." This house was for several years the largest house in Portsmouth, the "Prescott House" built soon after, being next in size.

Elijah Glover was appointed sheriff in May, 1810. John Clark, the sheriff, resigned rather than serve a bastardy warrant on General Robert Lucas. A volunteer was asked to accept the Sheriff's office and served the warrant. Elijah Glover volunteered, was appointed and lodged General Robert Lucas in jail. He was elected to the office that fall, and served until 1812. He was re-elected and served until 1814. There was bad blood between the Glovers and the Lucases from that time on and there were arrests and prosecutions while that generation lived. The first court was held in what was called a bank stable. The room for horses was dug out of the bank of the Scioto river, and the room where court was held was above it. While Mr. Glover was Sheriff, court was held in his hat store and in the Overman house which stood on the corner of Massie street.

Mr. Glover lived on the corner of Jefferson and Front streets until his death. Three of his sons: Samuel, William and Nathan were drowned in the Ohio river. Ezekiel, the third son, died in 1823, in his sixteenth year, of a fever which then prevailed and which was almost as fatal as yellow fever. There were not enough well to care for the sick, and many fell victims to it. Mr. Glover was Councilman in 1823, and a member of the committee on streets. He was also on the Committee to improve the front of the town. He owned land in Portsmouth and a farm above the town on the Ohio river. His cows pastured in a lot where All Saints Episcopal Church now stands.

He was a man of quick temper, but soon over it, and never cherished ill will, but forgot and forgave. He was hospitable and his house was always full of his own and his wife's relatives, who found a welcome and a home, when needed. They raised several of their nieces and nephews. He never turned the hungry from his door. He was intelligent, beyond the time in which he lived. Letters still in existence show him to have been a man of education beyond the average of that day.

On October 23, 1829, he went to his home to dinner, and laid down on a settee to rest until it was ready. When his wife went to call him to the meal, he was found dead. After his death, his widow moved to the corner of Washington and Second streets. The house stood on the alley where Knittel's bakery now stands, and the grounds extended to Washington street, on the east, and to Third street on the north. Many of our older citizens will remember this beautiful garden with its flowers and shrubs and vines, the long vine-covered porch with its ample settees, where the society belles of those early days met to talk over social events.

Mrs. Glover was loved by everyone. She had a kind word for all and an excuse for everybody's faults. She was far in advance of her day in her niece's and nephew's. After her thirteenth marriage, she moved to Fourth street, in half of a brick house standing next to the Baptist Church. She leased the lot on the corner of Front and Jefferson streets about 1840, to Conway & Thompson. The old hotel was divided into sections and rented to different parts of the town. The portion formed the Ben Ball house on Second street. Mrs. Glover lived with her daughter Elizabeth many years in the Fourth street house, and died there in March, 1840, aged seventy-eight years. She made no outward profession of religion, though a Methodist in early years, but she lived her religion in a pure, loving, blameless life. Her son-in-law, Doctor Dunn, often said he enjoyed conversing with her more than with anyone else he knew. When she died, he came to the house and requested them to bury her from All Saints Church, saying, he "knew of no one more worthy to be taken to God's house, for she lived her religion, seen and known of all men."

the brother of Sheriff Glover, first appears in the court of Thomas Waller, Justice of the Peace, on May 4, 1814, when he was sentenced to work two days on the road for swearing. He did not seem to hold a grudge against the Squire for this, for on June 11, 1808, the latter married him to Emily Jones. In 1810, he was Clerk of the Town Township and in the same year he participated in the arrest of Gen. Robert Lucas. In the melee he threw Squire John Brown over a fence into the jimson weeds. Gen. Lucas wrote of him that he was "one of the damn raskels who mobbed him and put him in jail." This was before Gen. Lucas became pious.

On March 15, 1815, Nathan Glover was elected one of the first five city fathers, but served only till December 20, 1815, when he left Portsmouth and John Young was elected in his place. He was a man of fine appearance and great physical prowess. He was the Apollo Belvedere of the Glover family, and when the Sheriff wanted a posse, he was always called on and could be the poſſe comitatus all by himself.

He died on the 20th of April, 1822, aged 36 years and 27 days. His wife Mary, died August 1, 1823, in the 35th year of her age. They are buried in Greenlawn, victims of the sickly years of Portsmouth's history.

was a brother of Elijah, the Sheriff, and was born Sept. 27, 1800, in Maysville, Ky. He came to Portsmouth about 1820. His wife was Elizabeth Deering. She was born in Winchester, Va., March 24, 1821. He married her in Scioto County in December 11, 1824. In 1831, he attended the great Fourth of July celebration and responded to a volunteer toast. In 1837, he was elected County Assessor and failed to qualify. In 1838, he was elected Town Marshal. On June

7. 1839, Mayor Hamilton filed charges against him for the following reasons: The mayor had heard a State case and had ordered defendant to give bond or to go to jail. Glover undertook to take the prisoner to jail and seized him by his auburn locks and proceeded to drag him out to the jail at once, in disregard of the mayor's instructions.

On June 21, Samuel M. Tracy, Corporation Council presented articles of impeachment to the Council. William V. Peck represented Glover, and asked 24 hours delay. At the end of that time, Peck asked that his client be allowed to apologize, and that the case be dismissed at his costs. Council accepted the terms. On July 7, 1839, 'Squire Cornelius McCoy presented charges against Glover for misconduct in office, and a committee of Council was appointed to investigate. This committee reported Glover's resignation and asked to be discharged, which was agreed to. In 1846, he sold six acres of ground where the children's home now stands to the County for an Infirmary. The price paid was $1,200.

On January 18, 1855, he was elected sexton of the city cemetery, and served until November 20, 1865, when he resigned. From 1857 to 1863, he was market master of Portsmouth. He was Marshal of the city from May, 1864 to July, 1865. He left Portsmouth in 1865, after resigning as sexton of the city cemetery, and took up his residence in Covington, Ky. He died, October 10, 1877, and is interred in Greenlawn cemetery, where he interred so many others. His wife died December 12, 1884, and is buried by his side.

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, July 29, 1813,—the eldest daughter of Elijah and Catherine Glover. She was a welcome child, being the first girl in a family of six boys. She often said, had she only been a boy, she would have come to honor as the seventh son. She finished her education at Doctor Lake's School at Cincinnati. She had hosts of friends through all her life. She was very popular and much sought after in social circles; had many admirers and numerous offers of marriage; but lived to old age unmarried. She was the life of many social gatherings, always surrounded by a circle of friends, whom she attracted by her wit and brilliant repartee. She had always an anecdote or illustration to suit the topic of conversation. There are many still living in Portsmouth who will remember her wonderful curls. The fashion of hair dressing never changed with her. Her curls were perennial and when age had silvered them, they were even more beautiful than the original color. She taught many years in the public schools and her pupils loved her. She was a member of All Saints Episcopal Church and devoted to it. She was Chairman and Secretary of the Business Committee of the Soldier's Relief Circle and served one year as Secretary of that Association. Her sister, Mrs. Kendall, having moved to West Liberty, Ohio, in 1866, she followed her and resided there until her death. Her heart longed for her church and many friends in Portsmouth to the very end, and her love for them never grew cold. No one who ever resided in Portsmouth left behind more friends or warmer ones. She was the most popular single woman who ever lived in Portsmouth. The flag she loved and honored is placed at her resting place each Memorial Day, and covered with flowers on that occasion. At the end of life she lost her sight and could neither read nor sew; and she who had cherished so many friends, spent many lonely hours in her room, with no companion but the "memory of other days." She passed away May 30, 1892, and was brought to her childhood's home, to lie in beautiful Greenlawn among those she loved and who had loved her.

Samuel Gould

was born June 5, 1783, at Tyngsboro, Massachusetts. He was married to Mrs. Hannah Young Ela in 1811. She was the daughter of Jesse Young and was born in 1780 and died in 1846. Her father, Jesse Young was a Major in the Revolutionary War. Samuel Gould emigrated to Ohio with the Young family, about 1820, and resided there the remainder of his life. He was a Justice of the Peace of Green Township, Scioto County, Ohio, from June 14, 1832 to 1834. He held the office again from June 20, 1849 to 1852, and from 1859 to 1862. He was Trustee of Green Township in 1849. He was post master at Franklin Furnace. He was a carpenter and builder by trade, and prominent in the early Masonic circles of this county. He was highly respected in his community. He died February 11, 1864, aged 80, and was buried with Masonic honors. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. A. G. Byers.

Orin Barron Gould, Sr.,

was born in Concord, New Hampshire, November 20, 1818. His father was Samuel Gould and his mother's maiden name was Hannah Young. She was one of the family of brothers and sisters who came from New Hampshire to Southern Ohio in the early twenties. Our subject came to Scioto County, Ohio, when but two years old. His father located in Wheelersburg and he attended the district schools there; but his education was supplemented and continued throughout life by wide reading, keen observation and earnest thinking.

He was one of the pioneer furnacemen of the Hanging Rock region. When eighteen years of age, he went to La Grange Furnace, Lawrence County, Ohio, and was there for two or three years, connected with the management. He then went to Peoria, Illinois, and remained there for two years. He came back to Ohio and he and his brother, John, bought Franklin Furnace, and operated it as J. F. Gould & Company. The furnace ran until 1858, when it blew out, and has never run since. Directly after the furnace closed, Mr. Orin B. Gould bought his brother's interest in the Furnace property and thereafter was sole owner.

He was twenty-three when he first came to Franklin Furnace; and he lived there all the remainder of his life. After the furnace closed, he was a farmer till his death. Strong in his attachments and taking root deeply, he could not bear the thought of giving up his old home and entering into new alliances after the making of charcoal iron in his neighborhood was no longer practicable. He clung to the old scenes and faces tenaciously.

He was manager of the Scioto County Agricultural Society in 1868. In 1872, he was a candidate for Commissioner on the Republican ticket. He received 2,895 votes to 2,153 for John Violet, Democrat, majority, 742. Office holding did not suit him and he declined a second term.

In 1859, he was united in marriage with Lavinia Seeley, widow of Henry S. Willard, who was a member of a New England family which emigrated early to Northern Ohio. Of this union were born two children: Orin B., of Wellston, Ohio, who has a sketch herein. and Mrs. Winnie H. McBride of Asbury Park, New Jersey.

While not a church member, he had deep religious convictions, studied the Bible seriously, and reflected earnestly on the problems of life and eternity. To the Methodist Church and its ministers, he was notably liberal, without ostentation, as many yet living gladly bear witness. Politically, Mr. Gould was a Republican, and gave to the party his time and money without stint. He was a strong partisan, and not tolerant of the views of opponents. What he felt to be right, he believed in without shadow of turning. In politics, as in other things, he was unselfish, that is not self-seeking, and gave his services and means, without thought of compensation, to promote the principles of his party and the interests of his friends. The only office he ever held was that of County Commissioner from 1872 to 1875. He was many times a delegate to County and City Conventions. He was a lover of fine horses and had a great many about him. Through church and political associations, he made a wide acquaintance and established many enduring friendships.

To know him well, which was not easy, was to love and admire him; and his friends were knit to him with links of steel. Apparently abrupt and outwardly austere, his nature was mostly kindly, warm and unselfish. Stern of countenance and often harsh of expression, his heart was overflowing with sweet and generous impulses, and his hand quick to do noble deeds. He was a natural leader of men, and led more by example than direction. He was independent in thought and action, ignoring all conventionalities, and bordering on radicalism. In criticism, he was bitter and fearless; in support of a friend, or cause, true, staunch and loyal to the core. His position was never uncertain or equivocal. He was usually in advance of the sentiment of the day upon all public questions.

Of good roads, he was an early ardent advocate, urging their efficacy as a material help and an educational influence. He was a man of remarkable energy, wonderful presistency and determined will. He delighted in physical labor, and in doing things, the harder and more difficult the better, the more adverse and rough the elements the greater his pleasure, and many instances of his endurance and vigor are well remembered. His nature may be compared to an uncut diamond,—a rough exterior covering a gem of rare purity and value. His acts of kindness and helpfulness were as the sands of the sea; and his left hand knew not what the right hand did. He died at Franklin Furnace, March 20, 1890, and was buried in Greenlawn Cemetery, Portsmouth, Ohio. His wife survived him until December 2, 1900.

was one of the Saints of the Lord on earth. He was born in Connecticut in 1763 and came to Alexandria as early as 1805 with his wife, Joanna Warner and family. He was a school teacher, and taught in a log school house at the foot of the hill back of Alexandria. In the latter place he had a two story frame residence. He moved to Portsmouth in 1816, and established a cooper shop.

June 16, 1819, he took part in the organization of All Saints church and was one of the two wardens selected,—Dr. Thomas Waler being the other. He became a lay reader in the church and, as such, conducted services for twelve years.

In 1820, he was elected one of the town councilmen to fill a vacancy. In 1822, when David Gharky was removed as town treasurer, he was appointed to succeed him and served until April 14, 1830, when he was succeeded by Wilson Gates. On March 8, 1824, he was elected to the town council by 13 votes,—all that were cast. On June 11, 1824, he was appointed to bring in an ordinance to establish a Board of Health. The ordinance was brought in and passed, and under it, Portsmouth had its first Board of Health. In 1827, he was re-elected to the town council and received 41 votes. Colonel John McDonald, elected at the same time, had 27 votes, and James Lodwick, also elected at the same time, had 23 votes. He served until 1830. In 1827 he was surety on several official bonds, showing him to be a man of substance. In 1828 he was president of the Sunday School Society of the town. In 1829 he and Washington Kinney were appointed a committee of the Council to procure two floating wharves six feet long. On the 18th of February, 1830, he was one of the founders of the Scioto County Bible Society.

August 27, 1832, he died in his 69th year. His widow, Joanna Gunn, survived until August 21, 1858, when she died in her 96th year. He had four sons, Havillah, Enos, Zina and Bela. He had two daughters, Martha, who married Levi Moore; and Pama, who married Philip Moore. Captains William and Enos Moore are sons of Levi Moore.

Havillah Gunn

was born in Connecticut in 1786, the son of Samuel and Joanna Gunn, and came to Alexandria with his father and mother. In 1810, when Alexander Curran resigned as Clerk of the Courts, he was appointed pro tempore and served a month. He was succeeded by John R. Turner. On July 15, 1824, he was elected Justice of the Peace of Wayne Township and served till January, 1826, when he resigned. In 1825, he was an Overseer of the Poor of Wayne Township. From 1826 to 1828 he was a Trustee of Wayne Township. From 1832 to 1835, he was Clerk of Wayne Township. In 1826, he was a candidate for Auditor and was defeated. David Gharky had 769 votes, and he had 140. In 1828, he was conducting a general store in Portsmouth. From 1828 to 1830, he was County Treasurer. In 1829, he was a candidate for re-election to that office and was defeated. Wm. Waller had 448 votes and Gunn 319. At that time the county duplicate was $4,087.33. In 1834, he served as Town Recorder, April 4 to September 5.

He does not appear to have held any public office in Scioto County after 1835, but went to Illinois. He died in Olney, Ills., September 8, 1867, at the age of 81.

William Hall,

first of Colchester, Connecticut, and afterwards of Groton, in the same state, was married to Eunice Foote, August 12, 1787, at Colchester, Conn. William Hall died in Groton, Connecticut, August 16, 1810. His widow Mrs. Eunice Hall died in Marietta, Ohio, July 15, 1826. To them were born six children. William Hall, late of Portsmouth, Ohio, and the subject of this sketch, was their fifth child. He was born at Colchester, Connecticut, July 7, 1800.

Of his early childhood, little is known. He attended the common schools of the "Nutmeg State" until about his twelfth year, and as the necessities of the family required it, he went to work with his elder brothers in a bakery that they were then carrying on. He worked at that business for seven years.

The war of 1812 coming on, the British sent a fleet of war vessels to blockade the port of New London, at the mouth of the Thames river, the principal port for sea going vessels on Long Island Sound. The militia of the state and neighboring states were called out for the defense of the city. Wyllys Hall, his elder brother, was in command of a company of militia, and marched his company from Colchester to New London and went into camp. The British commander sent word to remove all non-combatants from the city within a certified time. The mother and the girls immediately left for Colchester, twelve miles back, and for their sustenance while away, William loaded up a barrel of flour on a wheel barrow and wheeled it the entire distance.

He then returned to camp, and his brother Wyllys said to him, "Bill, you might as well stay in my tent and keep things in order, black my shoes, etc., and I can draw pay for you as my servant." This was agreeable to Bill and he entered upon his duties. Some brick masons were at work near the camp building brick ovens, and William, like all boys, could not get along without fun, so he would call out, "mortar!" or "brick!" and run off and hide behind the tents. This was an annoyance to the workmen; and he was finally caught and put in the Guard House, for three days.

About 1860, Wyllys Hall, while visiting his brother, said to him, "Bill, did you ever get a land warrant for your services in the war of 1812?" He answered him, "No." He told him he was entitled to one and to look it up. He did so and much to his surprise found his name on the muster roll at Washington and got a warrant for 160 acres of land. He told his children that he thought that was good pay for being three days in the Guard House.

After the war in 1812, the family concluded to remove to Ohio, and there being a Yankee town at Marietta, that place was their objective point. They sold out their little property and started overland with one horse, "old Charley," and a wagon to carry their mother and sisters, the boys all walking. They camped out at night, until they arrived at Pittsburg, where the boys built a flat boat and floated down the Ohio to Marietta, arriving there in the fall of 1816. The mother, brothers and sisters lived, died, and are buried in Marietta.

William, the subject of this sketch, worked with his brother in the baking business, they established there, serving his full seven years' apprenticeship.

After the completion of his term, he went to Cincinnati and worked as a journeyman baker for one year. Going back to Marietta he worked for a year with Weston Thomas and had saved up $500, when Thomas told him to start out and hunt a location and he would start him in business. He left home in search of a location, visiting Gallipolis, Greenupsburg, Portsmouth and Maysville. He seemed to think more of Greenupsburg than of the other towns; and went home concluding to locate there; but the old anti-slavery doctrine was strong in the old mother and she opposed it very strongly, and told him, not to locate in a slave state; that a blight was over slave states; that Kentucky was far behind Ohio, a much younger state; and that he had been raised to believe that slavery was wrong. So he changed his mind and came to Portsmouth in 1826.

He opened out his stock of dry goods and groceries on Front street on part of the lot on which the Biggs House stands. Being a violin player of no mean merit, he soon "caught on," in a social way, and was popular. His business was a success from the start.

November 30, 1828, he was joined in marriage to Miss Margaret Kinney, daughter of Aaron and Mary Kinney, who were among the first settlers of Portsmouth.

In 1820, he bought the lot where Webb's mill was lately burned down, and built a stone house and residence in the rear, and then the firm of Hall & Thomas was dissolved. In 1834, he took in as a partner, Thomas S. Currie, which partnership was dissolved in 1842. In 1838, he in conjunction with Eli Kinney and Peter Kinney, established the banking house of E. Kinney & Company, which proved very profitable. They continued in business until 1846, when E. Kinney withdrew, and the firm name changed to P. Kinney & Company. In 1850, he sold his interest to Peter Kinney. In 1854, the firm of bankers under the name of Dugan, Means, Hall & Company was established and continued in business until 1862, when it was wound up. In 1855, he sold out his stock of dry goods and became one of the original builders of the Scioto Rolling Mill Company (now the Burgess Steel and Iron Works.)

The affairs of the mill company were closed and since that time he was not engaged in any business up to the time of his death, which took place, June 17, 1869. His wife preceded him a few years, her death taking place September 21, 1864. Both died at the homestead on Rose Ridge and were buried from All Saint's church of which they were members. Their children are: Henry, born October 11, 1829; William Oscar, born September 10, 1831, and died September 11, 1832; Margaret K., born June 8, 1833; Thomas F. C., born October 26, 1835; Wyllys, born March 18, 1838; Mary Clingman, born June 4, 1840; William Foote, born February 24, 1843; Aaron Kinney, born May 10, 1845; Eunice Foote, born September 19, 1847; Faneuil, deceased, and Loren. Nine of the eleven children are now living (1900.)

Mr. Hall was a man of affairs while in Portsmouth. In 1829 and 1830, he was elected a fence viewer in Wayne Township. Only the most prominent men in town were elected to that office. He was a Mason and a member of Aurora Lodge. In 1839, he was elected town treasurer. In 1844, he was a director of the Portsmouth Insurance Company. In 1850, he was a school trustee of the town. In 1860, he participated in the great Union meeting held at the Biggs House on January 16. He was a Whig and a Republican, a first class business man of excellent judgment and great force of character.

Octavo V. Hall

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, August 18, 1813. His occupation was that of a brick layer and plasterer. He was one of a family of three sons and two daughters. He built the John Neill house on Third and Market streets. His father was Abraham Hall, who built a house on the site of that occupied by John Dice on Second street, the timber for which was cut in the rear of the premises on Fourth street. The house was moved away many years ago to give place to the present residence of John Dice. Abraham Hall was a stone and brick mason, and made headstones and monuments for the cemetery.

Octavo Hall married Rebecca Sappington, September 22, 1832. She was born June 24, 1807, and died February 18, 1887. Her father was James Sappington of Maryland, who came to the Northwest Territory in 1795. He was a ship carpenter, and had a wife, three daughters, and two sons,—Thomas and Elias. Thomas enlisted in the war of 1812, and died on his way to Sandusky. He was a civil engineer. Elias died while living in Sandusky.

James S. and several others who afterwards became prominent as early settlers of this vicinity, came down the Ohio river in keel boats. They floated to the mouth of the Scioto river and then cordelled their boats up the Scioto to one-half mile above the site of Piketon, where they located. There James Sappington entered 168 acres of land, and in 1797 sold it to Sargent and located three miles below Piketon. The children of Octavo V. Hall and Rebecca, his wife, were: Mary Francis, deceased; James Hall, deceased; Marietta Kendall; Josiah, deceased; Maria, deceased, wife of Judge Martin Crain; Cornelia, deceased; and J. Clark Hall. He and all his family are buried on the home place near Piketon, with the exception of Mrs. Crain.

He was a member of the Whig party, and a member of the original Methodist Congregation of Portsmouth. On June 19, 1838, he was appointed Deputy Town Marshal. In 1840, he was an Overseer of the Poor in Wayne Township. In 1841, he was a Health Officer for the Third ward, and in 1842, he was elected a councilman for three years from the Third ward. He went to California in February, 1850, and returned in 1851. He died February 6, 1851.

David Hahn

was born April 4, 1810, at Woodstock, Shenandoah County, Virginia, a descendant of a German family, which settled there before the Revolution. At the age of fourteen he left home and being large for his age became a stage driver, driving four horses over the Alleghany Mountains. David Hahn was a born driver and drove over all the principal lines of the United States. He had a knack of managing horses—the gift of nature. The horses all behaved for him. If his shade could come back and mount the Seventh street fire engine and take the lines, the horses would go off like lambs. He was gifted to train animals and did the training for the famous Van Amberg, and for the old time Stickney circus. He was a great friend of Dan Rice and was identified with the floating palaces that in former days traversed the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. His secret in animal training was in their diet and this secret went to the grave with him.

David Hahn came to Portsmouth when a young man, and became a driver on the stage line between Portsmouth and Columbus and stuck to the job until the stage line was discontinued. He was the last survivor among the Jehus of the old stage coaching days in Portsmouth. His stage horn has waked the morning echoes many a morning before the sign of the "Golden Lamb" on Front street. But David Hahn was something more than a stage driver. He was a patriot. June 20, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Battery L First Ohio Light Artillery. He gave his age as forty years when in fact he was fifty-two. What might have been expected, and what usually happens in such cases, happened in his case. December 4, 1863, he was discharged on account of physical disability.

At the age of forty-six years he was married to Mrs. Susan Clark, widow of Joseph Clark. They had one child, Mrs. Balser H. Andres.

On June 19, 1869, David Hahn was appointed driver of the city fire engine, No. 1, and he served until April, 1876. The city never had a more faithful servant. He died on August 6, 1894, at Portsmouth, Ohio, and was interred in Greenlawn Cemetery. His death was noticed in the New Mail and Express and in all the big dailies of the country and in all the dramatic papers, and it was stated that in driving over the Alleghanies, he had carried General Jackson, Henry Clay, Presidents Harrison and Tyler. When last he drove from Columbus, the coaches stopped at Pim's Hotel on the site of the present Sixth street M. E. Church.

William Hard

was born September 9, 1820, in Green Township, Scioto County, Ohio. His father was Ezra Hard, a native of Arlington, Bennington County, Vermont. His father was born December 3, 1773, and came to Ohio in 1812. He was a communicant of the Episcopal church. He died December 22, 1867, in Green Township. He was married December 3, 1796, to Mary Cook Perkins, a niece of Captain Cook, the explorer. His great-grandfather, Elisha Hard, had a son of the same name. His grandmother Hard's maiden name was Mary Benedict. His mother's father Moses Perkins was a drummer in the Revolutionary war. For record see Revolutionary Soldiers herein.

Our subject attended school in Green Township. Rev. Landon Taylor was one of his teachers. He left school at the age of seventeen and became a farmer. He was married April 15, 1845, to Tryphena McMullen, daughter of James McMullen, of Greenup County, Kentucky. Their children were: Mary Cook, who married Henry

B. Boynton, both deceased. (She died September 13, 1883, and he died July 17, 1887.) He has a son Frank Lee at St. Albans, West Virginia. Dora E. is at home. William Carroll resides in Boise City, Idaho. A daughter, Viola Belle, died in infancy, and Charles Ellsworth is the editor of the Portsmouth Blade. Mr. Hard lived the life of a farmer until November 10, 1869, when he came to Portsmouth. The family lived two years on Ninth and Chillicothe streets, and then purchased the lot on the southwest corner of Sinton and Gallia streets. His father was a Whig, and he was a Democrat until the war broke out, when he became a Republican. He has been a member of the M. E. church since 1852, and attends Bigelow. He never belonged to any secret orders, except the Sons of Temperance. He is the youngest of twelve children by the same mother, four of whom died in infancy. Of these there were eleven sons and one daughter. He has never been out of the county twelve months since his birth. He keeps a clear conscience, does the duty nearest him, and does not allow a wave of trouble to roll across his mind.

was born in Lebanon, Connecticut in 1766. His father, Caleb Hayward, came from Scotland, in 1700, and located in Connecticut. His father was a sea captain with quite a large family of Children, of whom Moses was the youngest son. His father, Caleb, would spend a portion of his time on the sea, and a portion on his farm. When our subject was twenty-one years of age, in 1787, he went to Vermont where he had an older brother.

He married Hannah Smith in Norwich, Vermont, in January, 1793. He had the following children: Lora, born January 8, 1794, married Joshua Cutler, and has one son living in Nebraska; Rhoda, born March 12, 1796, married Thomas Brown; Betsey, born June 27, 1798, died an infant; Moses, born October 30, 1799, married Julia Reynolds. Our subject has one son in Iowa, Horace; Mrs. Sophia Merrill, a daughter, resides in Parsons, Kansas; Phillip Smith, born June 4, 1801, married Elizabeth Keyes. They had an only child, Sarah Ann Noel, born July 15, 1826, and married to John Harrison Noel, lately residing near the city of Portsmouth on the Chillicothe Pike. Her mother, Elizabeth Keyes, was a sister of James Keyes, and she married John Harrison Noel, August 1, 1852. Moses Hayward's son Orange was born September 8, 1802, and died October 1, 1822, unmarried. His son Zenas was born December 14, 1803, and was married twice, first to Rebecca Ewing and then to Sarah Mitchell, daughter of Judge David Mitchell. Mrs. Salome McKinley, widow of James McKinley, was a daughter. He also had two sons, Virgil and Mitchell; another daughter, Mrs. Mary Kenyon, wife of Dan Kenyon, lives at Santa Clara, California. Moses Hayward's son, Leonard, was born January 16, 1805, married Mary Ann Musgrove and located in Jackson County. Their grandchildren only are living.

Our subject also had a daughter, Betsy, born June 13, 1806, and married Lloyd Orm. They had a family of three children: Mrs. Condit of Kansas, was one of them. She married Seymour Pixley and had children: C. L. Pixley, Dr. M. S. Pixley and Mrs. Joseph Merrill. Moses Hayward's daughter, Philura, was born October 16, 1808 and married John Orm. She was the mother of Mrs. A. B. Cole, Mrs. James Richardson and Mrs. John Richardson. Eliphaz, a son, who was born May 14, 1810, and married Mary Cadot, daughter of Claudius Cadot. Frank Hayward of Ironton was a son of this marriage. Another daughter, Sarah Ann, was born September 17, 1811, and died in childhood January 27, 1816. Another son, Hiram, was born February 10, 1813, and died at the age of fourteen days. Moses Hayward's daughter, Martha, was born February 9, 1814, and married John Miller Salladay. Her children are George W. Salladay and Mrs. Lora Bierley.

Moses Hayward left Vermont in 1814 and went as far west as Pittsburg where he remained two years. He came to Scioto County, in 1816, and located in Vernon Township at Chaffin's Mill, where he bought land. A great many people called him Howard, instead of Hayward; and he sold the land on which the Howard Furnace is built, and the Furnace was named for him, assuming that his name was Howard, instead of Hayward. He had sixteen children, all told, ten boys and six girls. He was a very energetic man. He built roads, churches and schools. He was not a member of any church. At one time, he was a Mason, but gave it up. He was of an inventive turn. At one time, he made gun powder, at another time, he manufactured buckskin gloves, and at another time, he had a fad for raising hops. There was no experiment he was not willing to try. Shortly before his death he had $10,000 in government bonds. He had ten surviving children, and gave $1,000 to each of them. His wife died August 2, 1834, and he never remarried. At one time, he was also a distiller, and distilled corn. Like the native born Yankee, there was nothing he could not do when he tried. He was a successful farmer and a man of strong character. He lived to be ninety-four years of age, and died October 2, 1860.

Eliphaz Hayward

was born May 14, 1810, in Windsor County, Vermont. His father was Moses Hayward, and Eliphaz was the youngest child. He was married to Mary Cadot, the oldest daughter of Claudius Cadot, Aug. 24, 1837. They had six children: Claudius Cadot Hayward, died single, in Santa Clara, California, in 1893, aged fifty-four years; Philura Elizabeth Hayward, married John W. Hatch, a farmer of Marion County, Illinois, who formerly lived near the old Red School House above Portsmouth, Ohio, on a farm now owned by Mr. Peebles; Charles Eliphaz and Augusta Ann died of cholera in 1849; Francis Edwin resides in Ironton; and Mary B., married J. B. Fullerton, of Wheelersburg, Ohio, a farmer and book-keeper. Mr. Hayward died November 22, 1850, near Wheelersburg, in the Lower French Grant.

Patrick James Stuart Hayes

was born near Dublin, Ireland, March 17, 1790. His father was Richard Hayes, and his mother's maiden name was Anne Cummins Stuart. He was the eldest son. When about ready to enter college, having been prepared for that purpose by a private tutor, his father died suddenly. From that sense of duty, which always controlled his every act, he gave up his cherished ideals to assist his mother in the rearing of his younger brothers and sisters. Making surveying and kindred subjects his profession, he was successful. Later, when through his help, those younger sisters and brothers, according to choice, had settled on the Continent, in India and Australia, he traveled in the Orient, finding there in the philosophy of the Ancients' "passing race" much that was congenial to a meditative mind. Returning to Ireland, he married Alice Fitzgerald, and then came to America, the home of the "coming race." Stopping for a time in Canada and New York, his journey ended in Portsmouth, Ohio. In politics, he was independent, voting locally for the candidate he felt would best discharge the duties of the position. In Federal politics, he recognized, in 1860, that the union of states could be best preserved through the supremacy of the party supporting Abraham Lincoln, and voted accordingly. He was a devoted member of the Catholic Church, and there was nothing cynical in his view of life. He could see with a hopeful spirit, the pathos and the pity of it, knowing that some day the mystery of it would be untangled. He died in 1870, his wife having preceded him by many years.

was born in Green County, Pennsylvania, January 24, 1789, of German parentage. His boyhood was spent on the farm and he learned the carpenter's trade. His educational facilities were limited to the common country district school, and as is prevalent in all the new countries, the school term was generally limited to the winter months, when farm work was slack. He served in the War of 1812, under General Harrison. After the campaign of the Miami and Maumee, terminating with the battle of Fort Meigs, he was detached to superintend the building of boats to transport the army to the Ohio river at the mouth of Big Miami, where General Harrison finally settled and passed the remainder of his life excepting time served as President at Washington. After the War, George Hereodh returned to his home in Pennsylvania, and in 1815, was married to Elizabeth Kendall.

daughter of Jeremiah and Rhoda Kendall, both natives of Scotland. She was a sister of General William Kendall. Elizabeth Kendall was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, in 1796. George Hereodh had six children four of whom lived to maturity: Rhoda, who married William B. Russell; Sarah, who married Robert Russell, and after his death, married Levi Kirkendall, now resides on the Hereodh homestead nine miles from Portsmouth; George W., of Chicago, Illinois; and Emma, the wife of W. A. Marsh. A few years previous to the building of the Ohio Canal, he removed with his family to Ohio and settled in the Ohio Valley, nine miles from Portsmouth. He and his brother-in-law, General William Kendall, built a mill and saw mill at the lower falls of Scioto Brush Creek, and built two steamboats, the Diana and Belvidere. When work commenced on the Ohio Canal in 1826, Mr. Hereodh took and completed several contracts of stone work, viz: the Elbow lock, and a lock below that one, near the mouth of the canal, the Hereodh lock and the Camp creek culvert. On July 4, 1859, Mr. Hereodh suffered a stroke of paralysis which completely paralyzed his left side. He never regained the use of himself, and died February 16, 1861, from an attack of pneumonia after about a week of sickness. His widow died February 23, 1866. In politics, he was a Whig, as long as that party was in existence, but did not aspire to office; and never held a political office above a township office. In his early manhood he joined the Methodist Church, but after his marriage he joined the Baptist Church, to be with his wife in her religious views. After completing his last contract on the Ohio Canal, he burned brick and had a church erected on his farm, in fulfillment of a promise that he had made to Mrs. Hereodh, before he went into contracting on the canal. The church was called Bethany and was of the regular Baptist denomination. He was generous and open hearted to both educational and religious institutions. It afforded him more pleasure to give than to receive. In the last thirty years of his life he made it a point to give one half of his income to charity. The world was better that he lived.

was born November 5, 1793, in Pennsylvania. His father was Aaron Hibbs, who settled near Locust Grove, Adams County, Ohio, about 1800, and died there in June, 1852, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. His mother's maiden name was Catharine Humphreys, who died in October, 1846, in her seventy-seventh year. Our subject's early life was passed in helping to clear a farm in the woods, and his educational advantages were very meager. He was married March 3, 1814, to Rebecca Lucas, daughter of Judge Joseph Lucas. To them were born eleven children: Aaron, born February 15, 1815, died unmarried April 15, 1837; Hannah Humphreys Lucas, born July 12, 1817, married Reason Wilcoxon, and now living near Freeport, Ill.; Joseph Lucas, born April 8, 1819; George C., born July 27, 1821, died unmarried; Ursulina, born June 5, 1823, died unmarried, October 6, 1855; Rebecca Lucas, born August 3, 1825, married William B. Russell, died September 10, 1885; John A. T., born January 18, 1829, was never married, and resides at Council Bluffs, Iowa; Jacob C., born April 3, 1830, residing at Portsmouth; Robert Lucas, born April 23, 1832, died near Alexandria, D. C., November 11, 1862, a member of the Twelfth United States Infantry, regular army; Sarah C., born June 26, 1834, who resides in Hillsboro, Highland County, Ohio; Van Buren, born January 13, 1839, served through the entire war of the Rebellion; was private, Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, and died in Mattoon, Ill., in November, 1869. Our subject served in Captain David Roop's Company at the time of Hull's surrender, in the war of 1812. He took an active part in political matters from 1840 to 1848, and was always a strong Jackson Democrat. He held the office of school trustee for a number of years, but held no other offices. After his marriage he settled in Union Township, Scioto County, Ohio, where he died July 12, 1852. His wife died October 20, 1853. They were members of the Disciple church. Mr. Hibbs was a man of great firmness and moral courage; and was noted for his determination and positiveness of character. He took great pride in the education of his children; and did all in his power to give them a good start in life.

Hon. Samuel Hunt, Jr.,

was born July 8, 1765. He never married. Hon. Samuel Hunt, as he is now usually called, possessed natural abilities of a very high order, to which, what he accomplished in life,—though he attained some eminence—was hardly proportionate. Deciding on the profession of law, he entered himself as a student in the office of Benjamin West, and, in 1790, was admitted to practice. He established an office at first in Alstead, but soon removed to Keene as a more suitable location; and after continuing about five years in the profession, he gave it up; for what reason is not definitely known; but it is usually supposed that it was on account of the many details which are essential to a successful practice of it, and to which he had a great aversion. He is described by the late John Prentiss as “an eloquent advocate who early retired from the bar.” His talents adapted him to literary pursuits, and his inclination led him also in that direction. He became, therefore, a contributor to the famous “Farmer's Museum,” which had been established by Joseph Dennie at Walpole. Dennie was afterwards editor of the “Port Folio” at Philadelphia, which may be said to have been the first popular magazine established in the country. The “Museum” was sustained by the “Literary Club,” which consisted of the following persons, all of whom were or had been members of the bar; Joseph Dennie who was editor of the "Museum"; Royal Tyler, of Brattleboro, Vt., afterwards Chief Justice of Vermont; Roger Vose of Walpole, who also became Chief Justice; Samuel Hunt, whose popular talents ultimately secured his election to Congress; and Samuel West of Keene, son of Rev. Samuel West, D. D., of Boston, and nephew of Hon. Benjamin West, of Charlestown, a most brilliant advocate and eloquent orator. These were all men of fine abilities, keen wit, and no inconsiderable culture, whose superiors have not probably been since consolidated in the country. The combined talents of the club produced a paper which became exceedingly popular, and which was taken and read with interest by many educated persons in other states.

Mr. Hunt, soon after giving up his profession, went abroad, with the double purpose of improving his mind and benefiting his health. He was absent nearly three years, the greater part of which time was spent in France. He spent considerable time at Bordeaux. From a letter to Dr. Oliver Hastings, written from that place in answer to one communicating the death of his brother, a promising young lawyer at Windsor, Vt., it appears that he was in very low spirits, and without any plan or settled purpose for the future. To the question, when he expected to return to America, he replies, "Perhaps soon, perhaps never." His brother had been very dear to him, and his death, when he was so far away from him, in connection with some sad circumstances which had transpired previously to his leaving Charlestown, had probably at that time produced an unusual depression of spirits. He, however, after an absence of about three years, returned home, and settled down in Charlestown to the business of a gentleman farmer. In this he continued, engaging moderately in politics, till 1802, when he had so attracted public attention that on the occurrence of a vacancy in the state's representation in Congress by the resignation of Hon. Joseph Pierce of Alton, he was appointed to fill his place. His term expiring in the 7th Congress, he was re-elected to the 8th in 1803. At the close of this term, not desiring a re-election, as he had business in view that would wholly occupy his attention, he was succeeded by the Hon. Caleb Ellis of Claremont. The business referred to was the formation of a colony for the settlement of a large tract of land, of which he had come into possession in Ohio. In this project he enlisted some dozen or fifteen persons in Charlestown, by holding out to them the inducement of the acquisition of a fortune more speedily than it was likely to be obtained in any other way. Hunt made the journey to Ohio on horse-back, accompanied by Miss Cynthia Rigg, whom he had engaged to be his housekeeper, while the others sought their land of promise on foot. All arrived in Ohio in safety, and commenced their settlement in French Grant, as the place was called. But the location proved so unhealthy that nearly all of them were very soon prostrated by sickness, and it is related that at one time there was not a person in the company able to wait upon the rest, and that all the attention and nursing they had was from one Indian squaw, who did little more than to bring them water from a distant spring with which to quench their thirst. The fever proved fatal to Mr. Hunt, who died on the 7th of July, 1807, at the age of 42, and was buried on the bank of the Ohio a few yards from Mrs. Clay's house at Haverhill, Ohio. The colony was broken up; and of those who went out to it from Charlestown, only three survived to return.

He appears to have been the son of Colonel Samuel and Esther (Strong) Hunt, and to have been born in Charlestown, although the genealogy in the history is confused.

Captain Jacob Sampson Hurd

was born December 25, 1816, near Concord, New Hampshire. He was the son of John and Mary (Young) Hurd, sister of Dan Young. He came to Ohio when a boy, and lived in the French Grant, in Scioto County, Ohio. His education was obtained in the country schools. He married Miss Sarah E. Clough, daughter of Abner Clough, in 1837, and they had children: Col. John R. Hurd, of Pueblo, Col.; Jesse C., of Jackson C. H., Ohio; Mrs. Alice Riggs, wife of Charles Riggs of Pittsburg, Pa., and Joseph H. Hurd, of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Jacob Hurd was a Whig, during the existence of that party and afterwards a Republican. From the date of his marriage, until about 1851, he resided in the Hanging Rock iron region and was interested in several furnaces, moving from Jackson Furnace, Jackson County, to Portsmouth, January 1, 1852. From this time until the outbreak of the Civil War, he commanded several different steamers, and was engaged in boating on the Mississippi river and its tributaries. He was master of the "Susquehanna," "Clipper," "Zachary Taylor," "Boone," and "Effie Afton." From the beginning of the Civil War, he, with his youngest son, Joseph H. Hurd, was in the gunboat service until 1864. He was a master on the "Lexington," while in the gunboat service. Following his retirement from the navy, he resumed his former occupation of steam-boatman, and by reason of an explosion of a boiler on the "W. R. Carter" on February 2, 1866, he lost his life. The explosion took place at 4 a. m. at the mouth of Green river, Ky. He was asleep in the Texas and was never seen after he retired from his watch. His remains were lost in the river and never recovered. Some sixty-five persons lost their lives in the same disaster.

William Huston,

one of the pioneers of Portsmouth, was one of the first settlers on the town site. He came to Portsmouth from Virginia, with his father, William Huston, from Frederick County, Virginia. He and his brother Joseph were located at Portsmouth, but William Huston, their father, went to Piqua and resided there until his death, in 1822. The members of one branch of the Huston family were hereditary Barons in England. An uncle of William Huston was knighted in England for distinguished bravery, and the family had a coat of arms. It represents a greyhound rampant on a broken column, an hour-glass with the last sand running out and the motto, "In tempore." The John Huston who was knighted for bravery, re-enforced a broken column, marching in great haste, and this design in the coat of Arms was from this instance. The greyhound rampant indicates the fleetness of his coming to the rescue, and the last sand in the hourglass indicates the perilous extremity of the army, to whose rescue he came. The motto "In tempore" commemorated his coming at the proper moment.

William Huston's wife's name was Susannah Boyd, born in Maryland. She came with her husband to Ohio, in 1802. They erected a pole cabin, the fourth, on the site of Portsmouth. William Huston's wife was raised a Quaker, but after locating in Portsmouth, became a Presbyterian, and it is said, she was the first person baptized in the Presbyterian Church in the city of Portsmouth. As a child she went over the battlefield of Brandywine, the day after the battle.

William Huston was quite prominent in the early history of Scioto County. In 1809, he was a member of the Board of Trustees of Wayne Township, at the organization of the township. He was Overseer of the Poor in Wayne Township in 1812. He was one of the nine city fathers of Portsmouth March 1, 1815; but the position of councilman not being to his taste, he neglected to attend its meetings. So on May 1, 1816, he was dropped from council for non-attendance; and his place was filled by Philip Moore. He forgot the Huston motto and was not at the council "in tempore." He had a taste for military matters and was Captain of a company of Light Horse. He served in the war of 1812.

At one time, he was engaged in keel boating on the Ohio and Scioto rivers, and he took much specie from Chillicothe to Pittsburg. Afterwards he boated considerable on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. His last trip is related as follows: He brought a boatload of salt from the Kanawha and went down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans. He was then engaged by emigrants to take them to Texas, by way of the Gulf of Mexico. He made the trip in safety, but on returning, his vessel encountered a storm in the Gulf and the boat was foundered. He managed to get ashore at a desolate island and died of starvation. His wife was born in 1772, and died in 1854, at the house of her son, Captain Samuel J. Huston. Mr. William Huston was a man of great energy and enterprise, a family characteristic; but it was his extreme daring which lost him his life, in the zenith of his physical and mental powers.

Cornelius Creed Hyatt

was born on the 24th of August, 1804, on Long Island, New York, four miles east of the original site of Brooklyn. His father was a farmer. Eldred Hyatt, and his grandfather, Thomas Hyatt, came over from England before the Revolution. He had a brother, Shadrach Hyatt. They were fifteen and seventeen years of age, respectively, when they landed in New York. They by some means became separated, and never found each other afterward.

Our subject remembered Brooklyn when there were but three stores in the place; and their proprietors were: Bagby, Ramsen and Haggeman. They were general stores and were on Fulton street. His father had four sons and two daughters. Cornelius was the youngest son. His mother's name was Rebecca Creed. Thomas Hyatt, his grandfather, was a man in excellent circumstances and was a Royalist during the Revolution. He divided his land among his children and gave Eldred the farm of sixty-five acres, which he mortgaged to improve it. Mr. Hyatt remembers having walked four miles to school, and every quarter was paid for by his father. He lived on a farm until the age of eleven, when his parents moved to New York city, where he was apprenticed to a bricklayer. His master was Stephen P. Britton who had twenty-one other apprentices. He served six years. After completing his apprenticeship, he worked as a journeyman in New York city. He worked in building the Bowery and the Park theatres. He was married in 1825, to Miss Cornelia Cynthia Thompson in New York city. He determined to try his fortune in Portsmouth, Ohio, because his wife had relatives there, John Thornton's family. One Saturday night, he quit work and the next Tuesday he and his wife were on the way to Albany, by boat. They went from Albany to Buffalo by Erie Canal, from Buffalo to Cleveland by lake steamer, from Cleveland to Newark by the Ohio Canal, from Newark to Portsmouth, they drove overland and arrived in Portsmouth, October 3, 1830. The first person they met was John G. Peebles. When they arrived in Portsmouth, it had but six brick houses. The corner opposite Pig Iron Corner on Front street, the McDowell Building on Front and Market, the old Clough house on Fourth street, the McDowell brick above the corner, a brick on the corner of Fourth and Market and a brick where Dr. Kline's house now stands. The first work Mr. Hyatt did in Portsmouth was to plaster the house where Captain A. W. Williamson formerly lived. This was done for Charles Oscar Tracy.

His first wife died in 1847. He had three children who died in infancy. On February 24, 1846, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Taylor, of Cincinnati, and she was the mother of his daughter, Mrs. Dukes, afterwards Mrs. J. R. McClure. The foregoing was obtained from Mr. Hyatt by the editor of this work, when he last saw him.

The following facts are taken from biographical sketches heretofore published. Mr. Hyatt had a longer life than any one who ever lived in Portsmouth. From August 29, 1804, to October, 20, 1901, is ninety-seven years and one month and twenty-two days. Mr. Hyatt was a citizen of Portsmouth from October, 1830 to November, 1900, a period of seventy years, less one year spent in Cincinnati, and four in St. Paul, Minn. The first house he built in Portsmouth was the one story brick on the southeast corner of Front and Chillicothe streets, for George Corwine. He built the first All Saints Church in 1833, which stood where the chapel now stands. He built the following churches: St. Mary's, on Madison street, Bigelow, the German Lutheran and Sixth Street. He built the first school house in Portsmouth, the lower Fourth street in 1839. He built the United States Hotel in 1835. He built the Damarin grocery on Front street, the Stephenson residence which stood where Simon Labold's residence now does. He built the Moses Gregory residence on the north side of Third street. In 1837, he started a grocery on Fourth and Court streets. While in business, he built the brick business-house on the southeast corner of Second and Chillicothe streets, where T. B. Blake now does business. It was built three stories, but the top story was blown off by the storm in May, 1861. In this year, Mr. Hyatt sold out and went to Cincinnati and remained about one year. In 1886, he sold out and removed to St. Paul, Minn., where his son-in-law was located. On February 25, 1870, he returned from St. Paul and re-engaged in the grocery business and kept it up till about 1886, when he retired.

Mr. Hyatt was honest to the core,—too honest for his own good. He trusted out goods of the value of the site needed for the Carnegie library in Portsmouth. He was always ready to take every man at his own estimate, and he lost thousands of dollars by reason of his confidence. In 1833, he united with the Methodist Church and lived a consistent member ever after. At the time he joined the church, the services were held in the old Academy on Fourth street. John Waller and Richard Lloyd became members at the same time. Mr. Hyatt was an old fashioned primitive Christian. He believed in the discipline of the Methodist Church just as it reads, without being construed. When the church was built where Hibbs' hardware store now stands, Mr. Hyatt was made a trustee and was the last survivor of the Board elected in 1834. When Spencer Chapel was organized, Mr. Hyatt thought Bigelow Chapel was too fashionable and he went to form the new church, with a number of other plain people who were Puritans—among their Methodist brethren. Mr. Hyatt was always a plain spoken man. He condemned his grandfather, Thomas Hyatt for being a tory; and his father, Eldred for being a "ne'er do well" and missing all his opportunities. He was one of the pillars in the Sixth street church for years, and there was never any question as to the sincerity of his religion or his living up to what he professed.

In 1837, he was one of the health officers in Portsmouth, and in 1843 and 1844, was one of the town council. In 1844, he worked on the grade to the amount of $365 and took his pay in town scrip. He was one of the committee who welcomed Hon. John Quincy Adams, Ex-President, when he visited Portsmouth in 1843.

He had one daughter, Ella, who married W. H. Dukes. The latter died of consumption in St. Paul, in 1870, leaving one son, Harry, a prosperous young man located in Hemet, California. Mrs. Dukes afterwards married Dr. John R. McClure and survived him. Mr. Hyatt loved Portsmouth and would have preferred to have ended his days there, but his daughter felt it her duty to follow her son, Harry, and she felt her father must go with her. The family went to Arkansas, in 1900, and a few months later to Hemet, California, where he died on October 20, 1901, and was buried.

Mr. Hyatt was a man of pleasant address, always cheerful and always gracious to every one. He believed everybody was honest and good and was often shamefully deceived; but the deceptions never changed his faith in humanity or soured his disposition. He was always the same genial neighbor and kind friend. He ever spoke well of those who had beaten him out of large grocery bills. He lived his religion every day and was a living epistle read and known of all men.

William Jackson,

the son of Samuel and Mary (Scarlett) Jackson, was born May 30, 1780, at Reading, Pennsylvania. His father died when he was very young. He learned the hatter's trade with his brother, John. He travelled through Virginia while working at his trade. He then went into business as a hatter at Berwick, Pennsylvania. There he was married to Rachel Tomlinson, January 15, 1808. He remained in Berwick, until 1816, when he emigrated to Ohio, crossing the Alleghanies in a wagon to Pittsburg, where he bought a flat boat and floated to Portsmouth, with his wagons, horses and family. He brought his hatter's outfit with him, intending to follow his trade, but there was a hatter already in Portsmouth, and the country being thinly populated, one was sufficient. He went twenty miles to Bloom Township, and bought some land, and farmed where William Jackson, Jr., now lives. Our subject was Justice of the Peace in that Township. He was County Commissioner from 1828 to 1834 and from 1837 to 1840. He was Assessor of Scioto County from 1837 to 1841. He was in the militia, but his Company was never called out. He was a Whig and was very prominent in politics. He was raised a Quaker, but afterwards became a Methodist.

He had the following children: Mary, who married William Fout; Joseph; Sarah Ann, died at the age of fifteen years; Isaac, deceased, aged twenty-five; William, who resides on the old home place;

Rachel, married to Sebastian Effert and resides in Greenup, Kentucky; Samuel; James T. died in infancy; John T. lives in Wauke, Iowa; Hannah, died in infancy. John, William and Rachel are the only surviving children. He died February 26, 1874, in his 94th year. He was a distant relative of Stonewall Jackson, and strength of will and purpose was a family characteristic. He was decided in his convictions and uncompromising in politics. He was benevolent and hospitable. He would never charge travelers for lodging, or meals, and would never turn anyone away from his home. He was plain spoken, candid and sincere in all his intercourse with his fellow men. He was one of the most prominent figures in the county in his time. In the Whig party, he was always a leader.

James Okey Johnson

was born in Scioto County, Ohio, February 28, 1808, a son of Isaac and Jane (Clark) Johnson, natives of Hampshire County, Virginia, who came to Ohio in 1807 and located near what was known as Scioto Inn, the land having been entered by his grandfather, James Clark. Eight months later his parents removed to Ross County, where they remained two years, and then returned to Scioto County. His father and mother were married February 28, 1805, and had a family of six children. Isaac Johnson, his father, died February 18, 1832, and his mother died July 11, 1845.

James O. received but a meager education, the most of his time being employed on the farm. On March 10, 1833, he was married to Phoebe Jeffords, daughter of Henry C. Jeffords, the Scioto Inn keeper. She was born June 17, 1817, in Warren County, Ohio. They had the following children:—Sarah Jane deceased at two years; Mary Ann, the wife of Wm. T. Carnahan, resides at Emden, Illinois; Isaac Johnson, resides at Washington C. H., Ohio; Rebecca, the wife of George Taylor, resides near Emden, Illinois; Henry Johnson, died aged one year; Eliza, the wife of C. J. Husband, lives at Grandin, Florida; Caroline, the wife of Newton Austil, of Piketon; Emma, the wife of J. G. Rice of Rush township; Milton, deceased; Okey, resides at Dayton, Ohio, and William G. Johnson.

At the time of his marriage, our subject was farming on his father's land. In 1838, he sold out his interest in the place to his brothers and emigrated to Jersey County, Illinois, and settled four miles from Jerseyville. He raised one crop there and sold out and returned to his old home in the valley, and soon after bought a farm below Lucasville from Judge Samuel Reed of Piketon. In 1849, he sold to William Marsh and leased a farm of Thompson W. Cockerell, for five years. In three years he purchased it. Once in his life, he narrowly escaped being caught in the mill stream of politics. In 1860, he was pressed into service as the Republican candidate for Commissioner against John M. Violet, and was defeated by a small majority. March 10, 1883, he and his wife celebrated their golden wedding. He was a very successful farmer and stock-dealer and at one time owned 1,300 acres of land. In the latter years of his life, he traveled a great deal, visiting all parts of the Union. He died August 3, 1883, aged 75 years, 5 months and 5 days. His widow continued to live at the old homestead until her death, November 17, 1885, aged 68 years, 5 months and 16 days. James Okey Johnson was not forgetful to entertain strangers. He was noted for his hospitality, far and wide. He was a neighbor in the true sense of the term. He was always ready to do a kind and generous act. If he was a friend once, he was a friend always.

was born in Maryland in 1778, and received a fair education. His father and family removed to Kentucky in 1793, in the midst of the Indian War. They came down the Ohio in a boat, but had the good fortune to escape all Indian encounters. They located in Kentucky. In 1799, our subject made a trip to New Orleans in a flat-boat for one Samuel Smith. He traded his cargo for sugar and took the sugar around by sea to Baltimore. He rode from Baltimore to Kentucky on horseback. He married Phebe Coon on his return, and in 1803, bought a town lot in Alexandria, for $100. He was the first Recorder of Scioto County, appointed September 28, 1803, and served until June 26th, 1805, when he resigned and was succeeded by Alexander Curran. He was also Clerk of the Courts from August 6, 1804, till June 26, 1805, when he resigned and was succeeded by Alexander Curran. At this remote period, his reasons for resigning these offices can only be conjectured. There was but little to do in the public offices, at that time and as Jones was a cabinet maker and a genius in that trade, he probably resigned to give his whole attention to his trade.

In 1810, he moved to the mouth of Scioto Brush Creek, and became a farmer. This proved to be a great mistake. He aided in building Gen. Kendall's mills there in 1815, two saw mills and a flour mill. He also worked there in boat building. He had the ability to take up any trade and follow it, creditably. He was regarded as better educated than most men of his time. In 1821, he was a Justice of the Peace for Union Township. In the same year he and his large family returned to Portsmouth. In 1823, he was clerk of the market in Portsmouth. In 1825, he was the jailer and was employed to put a lock on the dungeon. In the same year he was elected to the town council by 21 votes, and the council made him supervisor of the East ward. From 1825 to 1828, he was the Town Marshal and in 1828 and 1829, he was clerk of the market. In 1826, he was a candidate for Coroner. In 1827, he was employed by the county to make a desk for the Commissioners and received $8.00 for it. While jailer, he had Robin Hood as a prisoner. When he fed prisoners on bread and water he received 12½ cents per day for each and he at one time had five on bread and water for three days. From 1829 to 1831, he worked on a contract on the Ohio canal, and when the latter was completed went to boating on it. His wife died of the cholera in 1834.

In the fall of 1840, Mr. Jones took a severe cold which resulted in consumption, of which he died December 9, 1841. He was strictly honest in all his dealings and his word could always be relied on. He met many heavy losses in business by trusting that every one was like himself. He had been opposed to the party of Jefferson until 1832, when he went over to the Jackson Democracy on account of President Jackson's action as to the U. S. Bank.

Mr. Jones, had he lived in our day, would have been deemed an agnostic. He did not believe in revealed religion. He had been reared a Methodist, but he was a great reader and especially of "Free-thinkers' " works. He was also a Socialist and Communist. He was a great reader and possessed a mind always bent on investigation. He was a good neighbor, but used liquors to excess. The wife of Elijah Glover, senior, was his sister. Nathan L. Jones at one time Infirmary Director, was his son. One of his daughters married Ezra Jeffords.

was born in Winchester, Va, December 9, 1797. His parents, Peter Kehoe and Ann Carey, came from Ireland in youth, and were married in Virginia. Peter Kehoe was a shoemaker, and had his son learn the trade. The father accumulated and owned real estate in Winchester, Va. His mother died in Winchester when he was quite young. In 1815, Murtaugh and his friend Nicholas Burwell, both of Winchester, Va., and both shoemakers, concluded to come west. They came to Portsmouth, and looked the town over. They concluded it could not stand two shoemakers; and as Kehoe was more favorably impressed with Portsmouth, he remained and Burwell went to Maysville, and afterwards to West Union. Both followed the shoe business all their lives. Kehoe died November 25, 1874, worth $75,000 and Burwell died July 1, 1879, with $750.

Peter Kehoe, father of our subject, soon after came to Portsmouth, with his other children and remained until his death, October 19, 1838 at the age of 74. Peter Kehoe set up a shoe shop in Portsmouth and, in 1818, advertised as a shoe dealer in the first newspaper published in Portsmouth. Murtaugh Kehoe was in business with his father until 1826 when he engaged in business for himself with a stock of boots and shoes, groceries and liquors. In 1831, he had discontinued the shoe business and confined himself to groceries and liquors. In 1837, he was again in the shoe business with William Gray, made the firm name, Kehoe &

Gray. In 1828 young Thomas Waller owned a strip of ground from Second to Gallia street, which he inherited from his father. It contained about six acres. Young Waller thought the town would go to the "demnition how-wows," and wanted to sell out, so he sold to Kehoe for $300. Kehoe held on to it and before he died it was worth $50,000. The same ground now with the improvements is not worth less than $300,000.

Mr. Kehoe was born with good business talents and he improved them. He was strong in his likes and dislikes. He was conservative in everything. He was industrious and frugal, and always strickly honest. He retired from business about 1862 and lived a quiet and retired life, thereafter.

Moses Thompson was a prominent citizen of Portsmouth, who about 1829 had five handsome, loveable and marriageable daughters. He furnished the same number of wives to five lucky young men of Portsmouth. Mr. Kehoe was one of the lucky ones, and he married Eliza Thompson, April 29, 1829. They had eleven children, of whom Charles T., John C., James S., Caroline, Ann Eliza, Ann Carey and Mary Ellen are deceased. James S. was a soldier in the Civil War, in Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery. After the War, he studied medicine and became an excellent physician. He died in Clay Center, Kansas, in March, 1875, leaving a family. Charles T. Kehoe was a merchant and business man in Portsmouth. The surviving children of our subject are: Peter Kehoe, a merchant of Clay Center, Kansas; Frank B., of the old Tremper Shoe Company of Portsmouth, and Murtaugh, Jr., also of Portsmouth.

Mr. Kehoe was raised in the Roman Catholic faith, but became an Episcopalian. He was originally a Whig, but became a Democrat. He never took any interest in politics. In 1832, he was an Overseer of the Poor in Wayne Township, and in 1842, was a school trustee. He was an ardent supporter of the Civil War. In September, 1861, he was nominated as Infirmary Director on the Union ticket, but declined to run. He died November 25, 1874. He was one of the successful men of Portsmouth; but quiet and unostentatious in all things. In all respects he was a useful and valuable citizen.

was born at Xenia, Ohio, May 1, 1807. His father had the contract for erecting the first Court House built at that point, and was residing there temporarily. He was the oldest son of William and Rachel (Brown) Kendall. He spent his boyhood in Scioto County, and was sent to Uniontown, Pennsylvania, to his grandfather, Jeremiah Kendall's to be educated. When he returned to Ohio, he was surveyor for a number of years. He married Elizabeth Fenton, December 9, 1830.

He assisted his father in the building of Scioto, Clinton and Buckhorn furnaces. He moved to Wheelersburg in 1835, where he established a general store of drugs, dry goods and groceries. He remained there until 1846, when he loaded his goods on a flat boat and went south as far as Memphis, Tennessee, closing out his stock there. He moved to Portsmouth in 1850, locating on the southeast corner of Seventh and Chillicothe streets. The old stage line between Columbus and Portsmouth, made his house their headquarters and occupied a large frame barn once used by his grandfather, John Brown, as a mill. Here he again engaged in surveying for a number of years.

When the war of the Rebellion broke out, although fifty-four years of age, he enlisted as a private in Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery, Captain L. N. Robinson, October 19, 1861. He served with the Battery until September 26, 1862, when he died at Washington, D. C. He is buried at the National Cemetery near that city. He was a life long Whig until 1860, when he voted for Abraham Lincoln.

His wife, Elizabeth Fenton, was born in Hector, New York, August 30, 1808. She was the daughter of John and Sallie Bennett Fenton. Her father took a drove of horses to Philadelphia to sell, and died there, after a few weeks illness. Her mother with four children then came to Ohio with her father, Thaddeus Bennett and a number of other families in 1818. They left New York in the fall of 1817, and wintered at the head of the Alleghany river, where they sawed lumber and built rafts. Upon these they placed cabins, and floating down the Alleghany and Ohio rivers landed at the mouth of the Little Scioto on April 27, 1818. They lived in a schoolhouse at Wait's Station during the summer, while they looked around for a location. Fever and ague having become prevalent along the rivers, they settled inland in Madison township. Elizabeth Fenton taught school until her marriage with Jefferson Kendall. Five children were born to them, three of whom died in infancy. Of the two who grew to maturity, the son, Alva Fenton Kendall of Portsmouth is deceased, and the daughter, Ella Kendall Overturf, who resides in Columbus, is still living.

Milton Kendall,

son of General Willam Kendall and Rachel Brown, his wife, was born June 16, 1812 in Clay Township. He spent most of his boyhood on his father's farm, but resided with relatives in Pennsylvania for some time. He became a farmer and resided near the city of Portsmouth, and gardened for the market. He continued at this work most of his life. He was a member of the Whig party until the dissolution and then became a Democrat. He was united in marriage, June 23, 1833, to Ruth Lawson, youngest sister of Christina Lawson who was his father's second wife. Ruth Lawson was born June 16, 1812 and died September 27, 1882. To this marriage were ten children born, Thomas L., William H., Mary J., George W., Stephen, Louisa, Rachel, Milton, Clara B., and Jeremiah.

Mr. Kendall was a member of the First Baptist Church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He was a good father, a good neighbor and was well liked by all who knew him. He died August 9, 1882.

Thomas Kendall

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, July 6, 1822, the eldest son of General Andrew Kendall and Rachel Brown, his wife. His mother died while he was a child and he was taken to Pennsylvania to the home of his maternal grandfather, where he spent his boyhood. As a youth, he returned to Portsmouth, and became a clerk in the drug store of Thomas & McVey, and subsequently went into business himself. In 1847, and in 1848, he was Overseer of the Poor of Wayne Township. In 1846, he was a Trustee of Wayne Township. He was Superintendent of the Scioto and Hocking Valley Railroad for a number of years. In 1849, he removed to West Liberty, Ohio, and engaged in milling. In 1872 he went to Cleveland and engaged with the Wilson Sewing Machine Company. In September, 1888, he returned to Portsmouth. November 10, 1870, he married to Miss Anne Ganser, and three children were born to them: Charles Kendall, son, the wife of General William H. Brown of Toledo, Ohio; and Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson, deceased. The latter left three children: Annie, Jennie and Charles. Our subject died December 15, 1889, of a paralysis of the muscles of the throat.

was born May 7, 1811, on Wolf Creek in Washington County, Ohio. His parents were William Kennedy, son of a Revolutionary Soldier and Martha Gray, his wife. The family moved to Washington County Pa., shortly after his birth, and resided there until he was eight years old. At that age the family embarked on a family boat and went to New Richmond, Ohio. Our subject's father was a tobacconist, and he continued the business. He attended school but six months, but studied law in New Richmond with Perry J. Hunniman and practiced before the magistrates in Clermont County. In 1848, he came to Portsmouth and engaged in buying and selling corn. He continued in that business until 1856, and handled as much as $40,000 to $50,000 per year. In 1855, he met with financial reverses, from which he never fully recovered. He lost $26,000.

In politics, he was most prominent always. In 1836, he voted for Van Buren. In 1841, he voted for James G. Birney. He was the first member of the Free Soil Party in Scioto County. In 1852, he voted for John P. Hale and he, Wm. Hicks and R. S. Silcox were the only ones in Scioto County, who so voted. He held the first Free Soil meeting in Scioto County in 1852, and made a speech from a wagon in front of the White Bear Hotel. The same year he attempted to make a Free Soil speech at Lucasville, and was stoned and rotten egged. He joined the American Party when it was formed, and, in 1856, was a delegate to the National Republican Convention in Philadelphia. He was a first class politician, and one of the first Apostles of the Republican Party, when many wanted to act with him but were ashamed to.

He was a great friend and admirer of Salmon P. Chase, and named a son for him. That son was educated at West Point, is now an officer of the Regular Army and has a sketch herein. In 1860, Governor Chase made him Superintendent of the Ohio Canal, and when the war came on, Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Vicksburg. In the earlier part of the war he commanded the steamboat Piketon on the Sandy river, and was a captain of transports on the Mississippi. He at one time owned the Peytonia and Reville—small steamboats.

He married Rosanna Israel February 4, 1830, and had eight children. October 20, 1849, he was married to Miss Josephine B. Hutchinson, of Pittsburg, and they had ten children. He was a Constable in Portsmouth many times. He was a Justice of the Peace in Wayne township in 1858. In 1871, he was a candidate for Postmaster, Oliver Wood got 428 votes and he received 385. In 1872, he was a Day Policeman in Portsmouth. In 1873, he was appointed Sanitary Policeman. He was a man of great physical powers and intense mental energy. He became addicted to the drink habit, after he came to Portsmouth, but he reformed and became a great advocate of temperance.

was born in Albemarle County, Virginia, March 24, 1801. His father's name was Selma Keyes, a native of Massachusetts, and his mother's maiden name was "Polly" (Mary) Andrews. There is an account of the Keyes family elsewhere in this book. When our subject was ten years old, his father re-considered the idea of residing in Virginia and moved to Scioto County, Ohio. Selma Keyes was a Revolutionary soldier, a sketch of him, as such, will be found under the title of Revolutionary soldiers.

James Keyes was born with a disposition to be a student. He received a fair education in Virginia. When he came to Ohio he procured a scholarship in the Ohio University at Athens, and improved his education there, but never graduated. He was one of the earliest pupils at the Athens University. He was a fine mathematician, well read in both modern and ancient literature. After completing his education, he learned the trade of a carpenter, and followed it to some extent.

In 1830, he kept a ferry at the mouth of Scioto Brush creek. Samuel Griffith Jones, who has a separate sketch in this work, resided there with his large family, and Mr. Keyes became acquainted with his daughter Catharine, and was married to her April 3, 1831. Her father's home was then on the Kirkendall place. He had four children: Thomas, of Columbus; Milford, who resides at No. 151 East Eighth street, and is a journalist; and two daughters who died in infancy. Mr. Keyes was a Democrat until the Know Nothing movement came up, and then he joined that party. When it went to pieces, he became a Republican, and continued that during his life. Mr. Keyes never belonged to any church. He was a man of the strictest morality. He never drank any liquors, never smoked nor used tobacco in any form, and would not tolerate profanity or immoral talk in his presence. He was a free thinker in his notions. He was of the strongest of will power, great purity of life, a high sense of business and social honor. He had a wonderful constitution physically. He never got old, except in years and at eighty, he still had advanced ideas and kept abreast of the times. In 1866, he was elected Justice of the Peace of Wayne Township and served one term. In 1872, he was one of the City Infirmary Directors of Portsmouth. In 1880, he issued a book called "A Series of Pioneer Sketches," which is fully noticed under the bibliography of Scioto County. He moved about considerably in his early life, but settled down in Portsmouth and became quite well off from the year he made Portsmouth his permanent home. Mr. Keyes conserved all his powers physically and his faculties, mentally to the year of his death. He was a pleasant companion and fond of reminiscence. He never forgot anything he learned of a historical character. He was stricken with paralysis in March, 1883, but appeared to have recovered. He died suddenly on June 28, 1883, in the fullness of all his powers. He was buried in Greenlawn Cemetery. He was highly respected by all who knew him; and it is most unfortunate that he did not undertake to write a history of the county, for no one appreciated a work of that character more, and no one was more competent to edit such a work.

Aaron Kinney

was born in Sunbury, Penna., October 10, 1773. His father, Peter Kinney, was in the Revolutionary war.

He was a man of great force of character, and after the war became a farmer.

As to the early education of our subject, we know but little, but we do know that he had only such as the vicinage afforded. He however, learned the tanner's trade.

In 1797, he married Mary Clingman, the daughter of John Michael Clingman, who was born in 1746, a native of Germany, but a man of substance and importance for his time. He had been a Captain in the Revolutionary war.

On August 26, 1798, the eldest son of our subject was born, and was named for the Father of our Country, then living. His next child, Elizabeth, afterwards married to Wilson Gates, was born October 2, 1800. His third child, Ann Elizabeth Cady, was born July 2, 1802, and his fourth, Maria Tracy, was born July 2, 1804. Then Mr. Kinney thought he had best emigrate where his increasing family might have room to grow up. As a youth he had learned the tanner's trade, and he thought the great state of Ohio would be a good place to exercise it.

He came to Portsmouth with his family, from Pennsylvania, in 1804 in a four horse wagon. His brother-in-law, Washington Clingman, had come before, and had entered fractional section seven and section eight, north of Portsmouth.

Aaron Kinney purchased his rights and had them transferred to him. The first thing he did was to inspect his domain. It extended from the foot of Amos B. Cole's hill, at the old toll house, to the foot of Clingman's hill where the C. P. & V. railroad crosses the turnpike, and from the Scioto river to Martin Funk's land on the west. He was of course first looking for springs of water, and he found the celebrated "Kinney Spring," and drank from its limpid waters. Then he took his trusty rifle, and went upon the hill just above the spring and killed two deer. He marked out a place for a cabin west of where the present brick house is built; here he built the cabin and set up his household goods. He sunk a tannery in front of the present brick residence and went to work to make money; and well he might, for his family was increasing right along. Peter was born December 16, 1805; Margaret Hall, February 16, 1808; Rachel Dodson, December 9, 1809; Nancy Walker, November 19, 1811. In the mean time he was busy with his tanning. Leather was a prime necessity among the pioneers, for money was a thing almost impossible to obtain. So he tanned on the shares and took his pay in hides. His share was plenty, and he sent it to Barr & Lodwick in Chillicothe. He owned a six-horse team which was sent to Chillicothe with tanned leather and came back with goods and money; Samuel C. Briggs drove this team for him. Hugh Cook had a six-horse team and took his leather to Chillicothe. James Emmitt drove the Cook team for him, and one James Davis of Chillicothe, was also a driver for him. While Aaron Kinney brought money from Pennsylvania, he was a money maker, a family trait which descended to his sons.

From 1809 to 1811, he found time to be an Overseer of the Poor in his township, but he eschewed politics and office holding.

In 1812, he began to feel that he was on a firm foundation, financially. On August 7, 1812, he had completed his payment for fractional section seven and section eight and received a patent from the United States, recorded in Volume D, Page 402. This was a goodly inheritance and embraced several of the best farms in the county.

PIONEER OF SCIOTO COUNTY. SETTLED IN SCIOTO COUNTY, 1804.
BORN 1778—DIED 1857.

On June 14, 1814, he bought of Henry Massie for $900.00, 104 acres which fronted the Ohio river, and was bounded on the west by the Raynor property, and by the Martin Funk tracts on the east. It extended north from the river 209 poles and was 80 poles wide.

In the summer of 1812, he built the present brick house in which his son, Henry R. Kinney resides. The brick was made of earth excavated in front of the residence.

All the time his family was increasing. His son, Eli, was born September 17, 1813; his son, Henry Richie, was born July 2, 1815; his daughter, Sarah Ann Renshaw, was born April 23, 1817; and the youngest, Philander Chase, was born May 28, 1821.

On February 9, 1816, he began the tannery business in Portsmouth. He went into partnership with General Kendall. Each put in $700.00 and they sunk a tannery where the Gas Works are now located. The partnership was to last for ten years.

On December 15, 1823, he purchased 178 acres of land of Henry Massie. It embraced the Maria L. Kinney, Peter Kinney, and Eli Kinney Additions. It extended from Union street to the Scioto river, and from the south line of sections seven and eight to Thirteenth street. He gave $1,780, or $10.00 per acre, for it. At the time of the purchase General Kendall had 124 acres south of it, which he had purchased of Massie, and which afterwards became the Barr Addition.

This was the last of his purchases, and he died seized of all of it, and it was divided among his heirs. He was a staunch citizen, always up to date with his obligations. He was a communicant of the Episcopal church.

His wife died August 21, 1849, of the cholera, and he survived until April 11, 1857.

He was the first tanner in Portsmouth. In his political views he was a Democrat. Of his four sons, Henry R. Kinney is his only survivor. Of his seven daughters, only Mrs. Sarah Ann Renshaw survives.

Men of such sterling qualities as he, made our nation great and powerful. He was a man who let no opportunity pass, and left his impress on his sons, who were all prominent business men.

Washington Kinney

was born August 26, 1798, in Pennsylvania, and came to Portsmouth, Ohio, with his parents. In 1820, he advertised in the Portsmouth paper as "G. W. Kinney, Tanner and Currier." He had his tan yard where the Portsmouth Gas Works now stands and it ran through from Second to Third street. On December 14, 1820, he was married to Mary, one of the daughters of Doctor Thomas Waller and they had a large family. The daughters were Mrs. Samuel Ross and Mrs. Samuel Reed; and the sons were George, Charles, Aaron, Alfred, William and Thomas Waller.

Mr. Kinney was successful as a tanner and currier and made and saved money. He became a banker and for many years conducted a private bank in Portsmouth under the name of W. Kinney & Company. He was a person in whom the whole community had confidence. He was always an active and useful citizen. In 1827, he was Secretary of Mt. Vernon Chapter of Freemasons. In 1829, 1830 and 1837, he was a Trustee of Wayne Township. In 1829, he was in the town council and he and Sam Tracy settled the question as to the front of the town. That was a great question in its time and Mr. Kinney settled it happily. In the same year, he and Mr. Samuel Gunn procured two floating wharves for the city. In 1833, he was Overseer of the Poor of Wayne Township. In 1839 to 1845, he was one of the school directors of Portsmouth. He filled the same office in 1837. From 1847 to 1850, he was one of the County Commissioners. In 1846, he was Assessor in the Second ward.

He was a Whig in his political views and he was a devout communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church. He was a vestryman, first of All Saints and afterwards of Christ church. He was always reliable as a citizen and a churchman. He was conservative in his views, but of excellent business judgment. He had a happy faculty of getting along smoothly and easily with all with whom he did business. Mr. Kinney was highly esteemed by all his business contemporaries as a man of honor and integrity, and he enjoyed the highest confidence of the entire community. He was always regarded as a safe man. He died September 21, 1869, aged seventy-one years and one month and his wife died March 7, 1874.

Colonel Peter Kinney

was born in Scioto County, Ohio, on December 16, 1805, the son of Aaron Kinney and Mary Clingman, his wife. He was born with an imperious will and it lasted him to his dying hour. He grew up in Portsmouth with what little education the town afforded him, but he learned much from the association with his fellow men. He was at all times daring and venturesome. In 1820, his father sent him with the family grist to Major Isaac Bonser's mill on Bonser's Run, when the woods were full of wild animals. This then was the nearest mill available to Portsmouth. In the same year his father sent him to New Orleans on a flat boat loaded with produce.

In 1827, he made another trip to New Orleans and this time brought with him the seed of the pecan tree, which stands near the spring near the old Kinney homestead. In 1829, he was Captain of a cavalry company of militia. He had a taste for military affairs which followed him all his life. In 1829, he and Wilson Gates had a general store, under the name of Gates and Kinney. In 1832, he engaged in business as a private banker and was so engaged for many years. The firm name was E. Kinney & Co. In 1832, he also had a grocery license from the city council and conducted a grocery on Front street. In this year he married Elizabeth Redhead, who survived him. In 1835, he became a member of the city council and was a member of the town and city council most of the time until 1854. From 1842 to 1844, he was a Director of the Portsmouth Insurance Company. In 1845, he appears on the committee on claims. In 1846, he was elected town recorder, but declined. In 1848, his banking firm was P. Kinney & Co. In 1850, it was Kinney & Tracy.

In 1849, he was appointed to welcome Gen. Zachary Taylor on the occasion of his visit to Portsmouth on his way to Washington to be inaugurated President. In the same year on September 21, he was elected trustee and visitor of the public schools. In 1850, he was one of a committee sent to the Legislature to lobby on the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad.

He was president of the city council from 1852 to 1854. In 1855, he obtained a controlling interest in the Portsmouth branch of the state bank of Ohio and directed its affairs till 1861, when he yielded the control to go into the military service of the United States. In 1856, he took a great part in the erection of Christ church and was a vestryman there a long time, but went back to All Saints church. In 1857, he was treasurer of the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad and helped build it.

On September 11, 1861, he was appointed Colonel of the 56, O. V. I., and served as such until April 8, 1863. During the Morgan Raid, he commanded all the militia at Portsmouth. He declared martial law. Every man who could carry a gun did so; and those who did not were ordered to work with a pick or a spade on the entrenchments. After his return from the army, he resumed his position in the bank; and when the law was passed organizing banks, he organized the Portsmouth National bank, became its president and remained such until 1867, when he sold out his interests and made his celebrated trip to the Holy land, in with the party written up in Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad"

When he came home from Europe, he organized the bank of Portsmouth and in 1872, he changed it into the Kinney National bank of which he became president. This enterprise was not a success, as Portsmouth was then overstocked with bank capital. After Col. Kinney's death, this bank liquidated, and its stockholders lost fifty per cent of their investment.

On May 16, 1872, he and Mrs. Kinney gave a party to the young folks at their beautiful home at Mt. Tabor in the afternoon and evening. The day was fine, merging gradually into a moonlit evening and the young people rolled ten pins. Col. Kinney and his wife always took pleasure in the young people and this function was one of those ever to be remembered in the history of the city. Col. Kinney was always in favor of any public enterprises or improvements. He took a great interest in the completion of the Scioto Valley railway. He took part in the ceremonies of digging the first earth on April 10, 1877. He died on the 13th of August, 1877.

He was proud, self-willed and very much set in his own opinions. He was a good friend if he had his own way all the time. It was of no use to cross him. He was a communicant of All Saints church and a vestryman there, after 1870. He was a valuable citizen.

After his return from Europe, he built a fine residence on Kinney Lane, north of the cemetery and named it Mt. Tabor. He was the father of ten children all of whom died in childhood, but two; Emma now the wife of Hon. Theo. K. Funk and Captain John W. Kinney.

Eli Kinney

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1810. He and his wife, Martha S. Lodwick were married at the residence of James Lodwick, the old Buckeye House on Front street. They went to housekeeping in the east side of the double brick in the rear of All Saints Chapel. Mr. Kinney then had a salary of $400 per year and he and his wife thought they were rich. In 1849, he built the brick dwelling on the southwest corner of Court and Fourth streets and lived there until his removal to Cincinnati.

He began his business career in the old Commercial Bank below Lynn's livery stable. He afterwards went into business two doors below Gilbert's store on Front street. The firm was E. Kinney & Company and was composed of himself, Peter Kinney and William Hall. He retired from this firm in 1846 and became the founder of the Portsmouth branch of the State Bank of Ohio, and was its first cashier. He went to Cincinnati and established the banking house of E. Kinney & Company, composed of himself, B. B. Gaylord, George Johnson and William Salter. A few years after the firm became Kinney, Espey & Company. Then the firm became Kinney & Company. His son-in-law, Major Low was a partner. In 1877, the firm failed and that precipitated the failure of W. Kinney & Company of Portsmouth, Ohio. At one time Eli Kinney had a fortune of $500,000, but had too much in real estate when the Jay Cooke panic came on.

In 1849, he was a councilman in Portsmouth in place of Henry Buchanan who resigned. He died at his home at Newport Highlands, August 22, 1884, of paralysis. His widow and four children survived him, Mrs. Major Low, Mrs. Darling, Fannie and Alice. He had two sons, one died of yellow fever in the south and one was killed by an accident on a ferry boat. His daughter Alice is the wife of Mr. Dudley Hutchins of Portsmouth, O.

Henry Richie Kinney, son of Aaron Kinney, who has a sketch and portrait herein, was born July 21, 1815, at the old Kinney homestead, where he now resides, on Kinney Lane. His last year of schooling was in 1836 in the Woodward High School, Cincinnati, Ohio, where he received instruction from Dr. Ray, the author of Ray's Arithmetic, and the two McGuffeys, authors of the McGuffey school text books. Stanley Matthews and George E. Pugh were classmates. He worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-two years of age. The farm extended down to what is now Twelfth street and much of that portion of Portsmouth, north of this street was ploughed and cultivated by Mr. Kinney when a young man.

His father gave him a farm when he was twenty-one which he sold and took the proceeds, and with his brother, started west to invest in real estate. It was their intention to invest in Chicago which at this time, was a mere cluster of huts, and seemingly a swamp. It looked so unpromising that they decided not to invest there. They traveled through the West and East for about three years. They were present at the signing of the treaty by which Iowa was acquired from the Indians. The chiefs, Black Hawk and Keokuk, were present. This was at the period of suspension of specie payment, and Mr. Kinney emulating the example of his brother, Eli, who was then a banker in Portsmouth, began to buy and sell the paper of the local banks, at which he made considerable money. After this he became a trader on the Mississippi river, buying produce and live stock, and transporting it to New Orleans to market. During one of these trips, the party became wind bound near Island 96 and narrowly escaped an encounter with the land and sea pirate, Lafitte, whom they learned had a few days previously captured a flat boat loaded with cattle, and murdered the crew. He was married November 7, 1843, to Mary McNairn, a daughter of Joseph and Jane McNairn, natives of Scotland. His wife came to the United States when only fifteen years of age.

When Mr. Kinney gave up flatboating he located in Portsmouth and set up a hardware store. His stock was worth about $3,000 and there was not $10.00 worth of American manufacture in the whole stock. He continued in this business until 1856 when he sold to Waller and Ward and received for his stock complete $23,000 and not $50.00 worth of foreign manufacture could be found in the stock. He imported his stock for about four years and at that time American manufactures began to come forward, so he patronized home industries.

It was one of his characteristic traits, to attend closely to any business he had in hand and almost all of his ventures were successful. Everything he touched turned into money. His father made a division of his property in 1836 and Mr. Kinney received for his portion the old homestead. Here he has lived ever since. This house was built in 1812, and has been the home of three generations. Upon moving to the farm he turned his attention to farming, and the cultivation of fruit trees for profit. In 1870, he went back to the hardware business with his sons. This was one of his unsuccessful ventures, and he sold out February 28, 1877, to J. B. Rottinghaus and Joseph Lang. He then went back to his farm and has been engaged in farming, gardening and raising small fruit. In 1826, he went to Cincinnati and got one dozen grapevine cuttings and brought them home with him and planted them. He is said to be the second man in the state of Ohio to cultivate the grape.

Mr. Kinney has always been a Democrat. He was treasurer of Clay Township for a short time, filling a vacancy. He was a candidate for County Treasurer October 9, 1877, against B. R. Miles. The vote stood Miles, 2,974, Kinney, 2,539. He has been a member of All Saints church since 1843. He was baptized by Bishop Chase in the old Court House, which stood on Market street between Second and Front streets, in 1821. His children were: Joseph, died aged one year; Sarah Ann, died aged eight; Wellington, living on Chillicothe Pike; Mary C., died aged four; Harry Elwell, died in 1881, aged thirty; Janet married Samuel T. Williams, living; Josephine and Isabel, living; Aaron and Polly, twins, died aged three months; Sarah Ann and Mary C., mentioned above died of cholera, July 1, 1854. Mr. Kinney bears well the weight of years, aside from his loss of hearing, he enjoys complete health. He is the last survivor in this vicinity of the generation of men who conducted flatboats to New Orleans.

Philander Chase Kinney

was the son of Aaron Kinney, who has a separate sketch herein. He was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, May 18, 1821. He was educated partly in Portsmouth and partly in Cincinnati, and passed his minority on his father's farm. In his youth he was a market gardener and dairyman. For several years subsequent to his majority he was engaged in farming and flat-boating between Portsmouth and New Orleans.

In 1846 to 1848, he was engaged in the livery stable business in Portsmouth. In 1849, he was engaged in the banking business in Portsmouth with Thomas Dugan, under the name of Kinney &

Dugan, and continued it until 1870, when he removed to Cincinnati and engaged in the same business there until 1874.

In 1850, he was married to Marie L., daughter of John Clark. They had one daughter, Lilly, wife of Walter A. Cissna, of Chicago, Illinois.

From 1856 to 1858 he was interested in the lower rolling mill. In 1868, he was a candidate for County Commissioner of Scioto County, on the Democratic ticket but was defeated by Henry Rosenberg. The vote stood, 2,764 for Rosenberg, and 2,340 for Kinney. He was always a Democrat. In 1871, he retired from the banking firm of W. Kinney & Co., with which he had been engaged for some time. From 1874 to 1877, he was engaged in the furnace business in Tennessee, but had his office in Cincinnati. In 1877, he returned to Portsmouth.

He was a man of great business qualifications and met with remarkable success. He traveled extensively through this country and made two trips to Europe. On one trip he was accompanied by his nephew, William Kinney. As a banker, he was very successful and made a fortune. He died January 15, 1884.

Levi Kirkendall

was born in Jefferson, now Valley Township, Scioto County, Ohio, October 19, 1818, a son of Daniel and Sarah (Campbell) Kirkendall. His grandparents Willia and Lavinia Kirkendall, settled in Portsmouth about the beginning of the present century. They had a family of five children: Daniel, Levi, Henry, William and Lavinia. Daniel was married about 1813, in Portsmouth, to Sarah, daughter of William and Mary (Stricklett) Campbell. In 1819, he removed to the farm where Levi now lives. He was a Captain of a rifle company in the old military days, and served in the war of 1812. After his death the government gave his widow warrants for land in Logan County, Illinois. He died in 1853 and his wife in 1857. Eight children were born to them: William of California; Levi; Mary, wife of Thomas Craig; Stephen, on the old farm; Lavinia, wife of David Dunlap; and John. Sarah Ann and Henry are deceased.

Levi Kirkendall was married March 15, 1838, to Minerva, daughter of George and Mary Beloit, and settled on the old Beloit farm. In 1855, he removed to Jo Daviess County, Ill., but the next year returned to Ohio. The day after his return, August 31, his wife died. Of their six children: George, William, Sarah Alice, Mary, James O. and Levi, the three latter are deceased. In 1857, Mr. Kirkendall married Mrs. Sarah Russell, daughter of George and Elizabeth Hereodh, and removed to Washington County, Ill. In 1864, he returned to the home farm where he has since resided. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkendall have had four children, but two now living: Rhoda E. and Fanny. James S. and Truss L. are deceased.

Politically, Mr. Kirkendall was a Republican. Before the organization of that party he was a Whig and cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison for President. He owned a fine farm, well improved. He was a member of the Baptist church, and of Lucasville Lodge, No. 465, F. & A. M. His son, George W. enlisted in the Forty-fourth Illinois Cavalry and served during the war. He died June 11, 1888.

was born April 22, 1811 in Dusseldorf, Parish of Kempen, near Cologne, Germany, now part of Prussia. His father was a school teacher, and he was brought up to follow that profession. His mother's name was Gertrude, the family name not remembered. He had a brother, Peter, and three sisters, Madeline, Catherine and Gertrude. He attended his father's primary school and afterwards an academy. At the age of fourteen, he was apprenticed to a cabinet maker, served three years and became a journeyman.

At the conclusion of his apprenticeship, after the custom then, he had to designate a route he would follow, starting from his master's place and returning to the same point. This route was marked down in a book and certified by the government and he had to obtain statements in every place he stopped from a master workman. He worked in Belgium about a year and was three years in Holland, at the Hague, Rotterdam, Amsterdam and other places. At the age of twenty-one, he returned to Cologne, and he and his brother Peter went to making velvet ribbons. They were prosperous for a time, but a duty interfered with their business and broke them up. He spent three years after the conclusion of this venture in Cologne, as a foreman in a cotton factory. At the end of that time, his father died, and he took his place as a school teacher in the public schools for a few months.

He came to the United States, at the age of thirty-one. He came as a sightseer with the view of locating in case he was satisfied. He reached this country in the fall of 1842, and went from New York to Buffalo and then to Cleveland. He worked awhile at his trade in Cleveland, and came to Portsmouth on the canal, intending to go on to Cincinnati. He stopped in Portsmouth at Major Reiniger's hotel. The latter persuaded him to stay. In the summer of 1843, he made a trip through Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. He was looking for a better location than Portsmouth, but concluded to return. He worked for others until his marriage.

He met his wife in the Roman Catholic church, on Madison street. Her name was Margaret Myers, a daughter of Anton Myers, a native of Wurtemberg. They were married November 23, 1844, by Rev. Father O'Maley. They went to housekeeping at once, on Third street, between Madison and Jefferson streets. He then went into business for himself as a cabinet maker for three years. He then concluded to try hotel keeping and kept the Swan Hotel for three years, after which he purchased where the post-office and the Kricker building now stand, and became a contracting teamster until 1854. He then went to manufacturing buggies where Fisher & Streich's drug store now stands. He was afterwards an Insurance agent. He was a Justice of the Peace from March 4, 1863, to January 10, 1872, in Wayne Township. He retired from business in 1888, and died January 31, 1890.

He was brought up in the Roman Catholic church and adhered to it all his life as a faithful member. Samuel M. Tracy was one of his intimate friends. Both were great readers, fond of history, and had many tastes in common. In his political views he was a Democrat. He was noted for his integrity in business and his conscientious life. Mr. Kricker was a man of domestic tastes and preferred to spend his leisure with his family. He was very successful in business and could have been more so had he chosen to. He never had good health. He was administrator, executor and trustee of many estates, and was very methodical in all his ways of doing business. Having been a school teacher, he never used any colloquialisms but followed the rules of syntax in all his speaking.

His wife, Mrs. Kricker was born April 23, 1826, in Wurtemberg, Germany, of a Roman Catholic family. Her father's family came to Pittsburg in 1832, over the mountains with mule teams. They went from Pittsburg to Louisville on the steamer "Powhatan." At that time there was only one other steamer plying on the Ohio river, the Robert Fulton. They were two weeks coming from Pittsburg to Louisville. She came to Portsmouth in January, 1835. Her father was a butcher and went into partnership with Major Reiniger. Her father died in 1841 and her mother, when she was five years old. Mrs. Kricker is a woman most highly esteemed in her church, and in the circle of her acquaintance in the community. Her faculties are wonderfully preserved for her years. She has a remarkable memory and her hair is as black as when she was a young woman. Her life has been one of great usefulness.

Mr. Kricker and his wife were the parents of the following children: Lewis, born 1845, and died 1887, leaving a wife and five children. Joseph, born 1847, died in St. Louis in 1896, leaving three children, who reside in Portsmouth; Francis Charles, born in 1850, died in Portsmouth in 1878, at the age of twenty-eight and left a wife; Mrs. Louise Balmert, widow of Simon Balmert, has seven children and resides on Washington street, Portsmouth, Ohio; George Englebrecht, born in 1856, is cashier of the Central Savings bank; Richard, who resides on East Second street; William, born in 1870, resides in Baltimore, is employed by the Canton Distilling Company and is single.

a French emigrant, was born in Normandy in 1766. He was an ac-concheur in his own country. He came to the United States at the age of 25 years. He was one of the regular French emigrants, not a pick up or stowaway as some were. In Gallipolis he became a ship carter under Abraham Bernard, and carried on a horse mill. On February 13, 1797, he was married to Madame Serot, widow of Peter Serot. She had four children of her previous marriage, the oldest of which was only four and one-half years old.

He came to the French Grant on March 21, 1797, with Jean G. Gervais, Jean Baptist Bertrand, Charles F. Duteil and William Dudit. He drew lot number 15 as his portion. He built him a cabin and cleared ground for peach orchards. When he secured a crop of peaches, he distilled them. Directly after coming to the Grant, he had an encounter with a bear on the hill back of Franklin Furnace. He shot at the bear and only broke its lower jaw. The bear then hugged him and the two fell down and rolled down the hill together. Lacroix managed to stab the bear with his knife and make an end of it after much injury to himself. As Lacroix's peach distilling grew, he sent boats to New Orleans. He gave his attention to fruits. He had orchards of apple trees. From September to March, he would be engaged in distilling apple or peach brandy. It was a hard employment, requiring constant attention, night and day. One night he fell into a well 36 feet deep but managed, unaided, to climb to the top and saved his life, as it was in a lonely place where no assistance could be called.

His wife died December 16, 1824, leaving seven children of her marriage with him, Cecilia, born May 20, 1798; Zaire, Emily, Catharine, Michael, Andrew and Alexander born December 28, 1809. Madame Lacroix was herself one of 23 children. Monsieur Lacroix was called to practice his profession in the Grant, and often went twelve to fifteen miles in the night. He died September 29, 1844. He was fond of books and spent much of the time in his latter years, in reading.

enjoys the distinction of being about the only one of the pioneers of Portsmouth, who brought any money with him. We have stood them all up and searched them (historically speaking) and we find that he brought about one thousand dollars—a great fortune in 1799. This William Lawson is reported to have been born in Virginia, but was born in York County, Pennsylvania, in December, 1761, the eldest son of Thomas Lawson, a Revolutionary soldier, whose record will be found under that title. William may have been in the Revolution, but if so we have no account of it. He went into Hampshire County, Virginia, in 1779 or 1780, and remained there nineteen years. It is said he disliked the institution of slavery. In 1799, he appeared in Alexandria. He came with three of his brothers, Thomas, John and James, and three sisters. The brothers and sisters located in Kentucky opposite Scioto County.

He located on the Ohio side and went into a trust which bought up the 2,024 acres of land on which Portsmouth was located. Henry Massie, Jeremiah McLene, Nathaniel Willis and General Thomas Parker were his partners. Jointly they entered all of section sixteen and fractional sections, 15, 17, 18, 19 and 20, Township 1, Range 21, and fractional sections, 1 and 2, Township 1, Range 22, on March 28, 1801. They all sold out to Massie who thus obtained the credit of being the founder of the town. Lawson's share was 454 acres in the pool and he took it on the east side of the purchase. The part he took is bounded on the east by the Damarin farm, on the north by Seventeenth street extended, on the west by Campbell Avenue and on the south by the Ohio river. Lawson formally assigned his interest to Major Henry Massie who took out the patent for the tract in August, 1804, but directly after, he deeded to Lawson the 454 acres, two rods and thirty-six poles. Lawson paid Massie, or rather the government two dollars per acre for this land. His deed from Massie was dated October 29, 1806, and in consideration of one dollar. He built his cabin on the tract near the present residence of Miss Mary Young, when no timber had been cut on the site of Portsmouth. It was built with reference to the large spring. Lawson's Run was named for William Lawson. When Massie was surveying out the lots in Portsmouth he and his party of surveyors boarded at Lawson's home. He was evidently pleased with the treatment accorded him for he offered to give Mr. Lawson a lot in the town of Portsmouth. It is said Lawson declined it because he thought it would be a burden and the town would never amount to anything. In 1811, Lawson replaced his cabin by a rich house which in its turn was replaced by the present Jesse Young residence, built by Mr. Aholiab Bently in 1854.

On May 10, 1803, William Lawson was made a Commissioner when Scioto County was organized. He served until October 10, 1810, seven years. In 1809, at the organization of Wayne Township he was made an Overseer of the Poor. In 1813, he was a viewer of the first road laid out in Wayne Township. In 1814, he was an Overseer of the Poor for Wayne Township, a second time. In 1820, he was elected a fence viewer of the Township, refused to serve and was fired.

William Lawson married Susannah Earsom. The following are their children: Manasseh and Thomas; John, born August 27, 1790, died September 18, 1859; Madison and Enoch; Mary, married Judge Joseph Moore; Christina, married to General William Kendall; Maria, married to General William H. Kelley of Union

Landing; Ruth, married to Milton Kendall, a son of General William Kendall.

William Lawson was a positive man and went direct after everything he wanted. He was very candid in his opinions and never hesitated to express them. He had no policy except to speak out his impressions and feelings at any time. He died March 18, 1832, and is buried on the hill in the spot back of where Thompson Kenyon now resides. His wife died June 25, 1846, aged seventy-six years. The proposed city, in which he had no faith and whose pretensions he despised, has absorbed his entire farm of 454 acres.

Thomas Cotton Lewis, Sr.,

was born in Llandaff, Wales, March 31, 1776. He was the son of Lewis Lewis and Ann Cotton Lewis. He served apprenticeship in Merthyr-Tydvil, South Wales, to become a machinist, draughtsman and millwright. He was the master mechanic in erecting iron works at Newbridge. June 19, 1815, he landed in New York city. At Middletown, Fayette County, Pa., in 1818 he erected, and with his brothers, run for Mason & Company, of Connellsville, the first mill in the United States for rolling bar iron from blooms. In 1821 and 1822, he put up a blast furnace in Butler County, Pennsylvania, for Whitney & Company. Later he repaired and remodeled several mills in Pittsburg, and built a new rolling mill in Centre County for Curtain. As master mechanic, he erected "the upper" rolling mill in Portsmouth, in 1832, for Glover, Noel & Company. With his son, Thomas Cotton Lewis, Jr., he built and operated a foundry on Mill street, in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1842. He prospected for iron and coal in Ohio and West Virginia. About 1850, he gave up business and settled on a farm, near Wheelersburg, where he died October 19, 1853. He was buried in Greenlawn Cemetery. He joined the Masons in Wales, was a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church, was a well educated man for the times, was competent in his trades and capable of erecting and running all kinds of iron works.

Thomas Cotton Lewis, Jr.,

was born in Merthyr-Tydvil, Wales, January 25, 1805. He was the son of Thomas Cotton Lewis, Sr. and Mary (Watts) Lewis. He was one of the forty-two persons, by the name of Lewis, who came in one ship to New York city in the spring of 1817. He helped his father and his uncles make the first bar iron rolled in the United States. He was a machinist, roll-turner and engineer at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He was an engineer on passenger boats on the Ohio river for a time. In 1832, he came to Portsmouth and for years, at different times he was roll-turner and machinist in "the upper" or Gaylord Mill. Soon after coming to Portsmouth, he bought the lot at the north-east corner of Third and Washington streets where he lived for nearly sixty years. He invented and built the old rivet machine that David Patton ran, click-ety-clack, for so many years in the Gaylord Mill. With his father, he built and run the foundry, afterwards a wheel-barrow factory, paper mill, etc., on Mill street.

With his son, Charles, he went over-land to the California gold-fields, in 1852. Returning by the Isthmus of Panama, he was shipwrecked in the Caribbean Sea. In 1856, he built the store room on the corner of Third and Washington streets, where he conducted for thirty years a toy and notion store, and was "Santa Claus" to the boys and girls of old Portsmouth. At various times, he built six or eight houses in the city. He took stock in several factories and did what he could to build up the city. He was elected Assessor of the Third ward of the city many years in succession. He was an active member of various temperance societies, of the Y. M. C. A., of the Home Guards, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. He died in his eighty-seventh year and his remains are interred in Green-lawn.

was born in Boston, Mass., Nov. 9, 1806. He came to Portsmouth Ohio with his father in 1817. The following year the family moved to Cincinnati, but returned to Portsmouth in 1820. In 1827, he engaged in the shoe business for himself, and in 1830, formed a partnership with John P. Terry to carry on the same line of business. Later on he employed a number of men in the manufacture of boots and shoes in connection with his regular jobbing business, being the pioneer manufacturer in this line in the city. The firm did an extensive wholesale business in this and adjoining states for a number of years, being located on Front street, below Market.

He had five brothers and one sister.

October 21, 1829, he was married to Anna Canfield, who died April 25, 1896. Eight children were born unto them, all of whom have passed away with the exception of Mrs. Geo. W. Field, of London, England.

Richard Lloyd was a man of the strictest integrity, a consistent member of the Sixth Street M. E. church, and one of the most liberal supporters. The lot upon which the church was erected being donated by him.

He died March 5, 1891, at Portsmouth, Ohio.

Thomas Geldred Lloyd

was born at Marietta, Ohio, October 11, 1810. His parents moved to Cincinnati on or about the year 1811. They removed to Portsmouth during the year 1817. Here the remainder of his life was spent. His education was such as the schools of the pioneer days of Ohio afforded. Aside from education he was endowed with large common sense, business foresight and executive ability.

His first business adventure, after reaching years of maturity, was the manufacture of shoes in which he was successful, employing many laborers. He made for himself the start of what was afterward a very comfortable competence. He learned his trade as shoemaker under his brother-in-law, Benjamin Melcher. When money began to flow into his exchequer, his foresight began to assert itself. When he saw that the destiny of Portsmouth was one of progress and that there would be money in the real estate business, he ventured out upon this line, purchasing vacant lots and improving property until before he died he was one of the largest real estate holders in the city of Portsmouth. He constructed some fifty odd new houses in the city which were sold soon after completion, as it was a well known fact that houses he had constructed were of the best material and would stand wear and tear.

He and two associates, realizing the need of a cemetery, and one that would be creditable to a coming city, laid out what was known as Evergreen Cemetery, the southwest part of Greenlawn. Mr. Lloyd gave this project his personal supervision and the most, if not all, of the trees planted in that cemetery are the work of his hands, or were planted by his direction. His business and executive ability, as well as his judgement of real estate, brought him into considerable notice and his advice and opinions were often solicited. In 1841, a newspaper clipping would indicate that he held trust funds and loaned large sums of money to some different parties. Along in the early sixties, he was appointed to the Board of Equalization of the city of Portsmouth, and on five subsequent occasions was re-appointed to the same Board, serving from one to three years each term.

Thomas G. Lloyd was married to Lola Adams, May 8, 1833. To them eight children were born, four of whom are with their parents in the happy beyond. The four remaining children are: Lola Cornelia Duke, wife of John K. Duke of Portsmouth, Ohio; Louella N. Lucas, wife of Samuel B. Lucas, of Cherokee, Kansas; T. Frank Lloyd, the only son, a resident of Portsmouth, Ohio; Julia A. Russell, wife of J. S. Russell of New Hartford, Missouri.

Mr. Lloyd's family were members of the First Presbyterian church of this city. Mr. Lloyd did not identify himself with the church till late in life. Yet from this it is not to be inferred that he was not an attendant and a supporter of the church. When the present structure was built, an indebtedness of considerable amount hung over the church for some time. Mr. Lloyd and his neighbor, George Johnson, each being large contributors originally, took it upon themselves as outsiders, to set the precedent of doubling their subscriptions and relieving the liability of the church, and they accomplished this in a remarkably short space of time.

Mr. Lloyd was originally an old line Whig, but joined the Republican party at its organization, and loyally adhered to it through-was the residue of life. In the early part of the great civil strife of 1861-62 he joined the Home Guards, or what was known as the "Silver Greys" in which organization he did service. But the water from the years was permitted to be a member. Through the dark days of the Republic his face was the bulwark as to the success of our army. He was a loyal adherent to all the policies advanced by the President, Mr. Lincoln, and was usually as loyal in the support of the boys who were the first and followed the flag.

On May 8, 1871, Thomas G. Lloyd and wife celebrated the Golden Anniversary of their wedding in their residence, now named and occupied by Doctor W. D. Turner, corner of Washington and Second streets. Mr. Lloyd spent sixty-seven years of his life in the city of Portsmouth and witnessed its slow growth from a small village to a city of 13,000 to 15,000. But few pioneers took more interest in the growth of the city and of relating its prosperity from its pioneer days, than did Mr. Lloyd. For a few years prior to his death, he was a great sufferer from kidney disease but he bore this affliction with great fortitude and without complaint. His faithful wife passed to her reward February 1st, 1881. The remaining years of Mr. Lloyd were spent with his family and to him they were honey days as he and his wife had been happily married near a half century. He died September 1, 1883.

William Lodwick

was born in the stockade at Manchester, Ohio, January 17, 1801, the son of Capt. John Lodwick and Elizabeth Chisley, his wife. He was the eldest son. He came to Portsmouth at about 1811, and he made money very fast. He was a Councillman in the second year of the town in 1817, and was re-elected in 1819, and served until 1820. In 1821, he was elected a Supervisor of the town. He kept a general store, a saw-yard for steamboats and was a money lender.

The April 22, 1822, Council gave him leave to have a saw-yard under the bank, with the permission to put his wood on top of the bank in case of high waters. He was to pay the town one-half of one per cent on the wood he sold as a tax.

In 1823, he tired of municipal honors and resigned from the Council. He built several steamboats and built the first one ever built in the country. This was at George Heron's, at the mouth of Brushy Creek. In 1827, he sold the granty the black hawks and stationery which it required. He owned Hahn's row on Fourth street near Madison. In 1819, 1820 and 1821, he conducted a general store in the town. In 1826, he and John T. Barr dissolved partnership. In 1828, he and his brother, Kenneth Lodwick had a general store, and in 1830, Kenneth Lodwick had a store alone. When Massie laid claim to the front of the town and laid out lots on the river bank south, Mr. Lodwick purchased two lots of Massie right opposite his store on Front street about 1823. This controversy with Massie lasted till 1829. There was correspondence with him, suits were ordered, and there were proceedings to take testimony de bene esse. In 1829, Massie offered to sell his claim to the front of the town for $3,000, but the town had no money to pay him. Thereupon William Lodwick came forward and offered to sell his two lots for $2,000, to lend the town $3,000 to pay off Henry Massie, and to take the town scrip or notes in payment. The town borrowed $6,000 of Lodwick and gave its notes payable in gales and pledged the wharfage of the town to pay the notes.

Mr. Lodwick left the town soon after this and went to St. Louis, where he died at a comparatively early age. He came to Portsmouth without anything. He became associated with John T. Barr and made a great deal of money. At one time, he owned more lots in Portsmouth than any one in it, not excepting Henry Massie, and he was one of the early money lenders. While he did not keep a bank, he managed to find money if any one wanted to borrow it. He was an excellent business man and that is the most we know of him.

James Lodwick.

It was his misfortune not to have been born a Virginian, but he came very near it. His father and mother were married in Winchester, Va. His father was Col. John Lodwick, born in Winchester, Va., March 24, 1767. His mother, Elizabeth Cooley, was born in 1760. She was a widow with one child, Peter Cooley, when John Lodwick married her in June, 1790. Their eldest child, Sarah was born in Winchester, Va., on July 13, 1791. In 1792, the family went to Mason County, Ky., and in 1794, to the stockade in Manchester.

In 1795, Col. John Lodwick purchased the farm on Zane's Trace known as the Col. John Means farm. It is one mile south-west of Bentonville in Sprigg Township. Here, our subject was born March 15, 1798, the fourth child and third son of his parents. Here his mother died on July 6, 1800, in her 41st year. While a boy in Adams County he was treed by a wolf, which his father's dog drove away. In 1812, being somewhat of a musician he played airs on a horn for Henry Clay who was passing through Adams County on his way to Washington.

His eldest brother, William, born in the stockade in Manchester, July 11, 1794, had located in Portsmouth and in 1814 was a merchant there in the firm of Barr & Lodwick. He was then one of the principal citizens of the town and at one time owned more real estate in Portsmouth than any one. James Lodwick entered the store of Barr & Lodwick as a clerk and so continued with his brother for five years. The first year he worked for his board and clothes, and the second year, he was allowed a salary of $500.

October 14, 1819, he married Jane Hempstead and the same year he went into the business of merchandising for himself and continued it for fifteen years. He made soap and candles, carried on a bakery, and a woodyard for steamboats. He sold the wood to steamboats at $1.00 to $1.50 per cord. Elijah Glover, as a boy did his first work in cording wood for Mr. Lodwick at thirty cents per cord. In the year after he was married, he built the Buckeye House on Front street and lived in it until 1850. While in the bakery business, Martin F. Timmonds came to him as an apprentice to learn the business under him. He also had Robert Montgomery for an apprentice and taught him the bakery business. Mr. Lodwick also sold goods from a keel-boat, which traveled between Portsmouth and Guyandotte.

In 1832, he began selling lumber on commission for B. Chamberlain. At the end of two years, he bought out his principal and conducted the business until 1848. At the same time he was in the dry goods business. In 1848, he took his eldest son, John K. into the dry goods business.

He retired from the dry goods business in Portsmouth, on February 15, 1871, having been in it fifty-one years. In 1852, he became agent for the Protection Fire Insurance Company and, from that time, was an insurance agent the remainder of his life. Mr. Lodwick was not born a Virginian and therefore not born with a thirst for public office, but he held office persistently and long enough to make any Virginian green with envy. John R. Turner, who was a native Virginian has always been considered the star office holder of Scioto County, but a close comparison of his record with that of Mr. Lodwick, will satisfy any one that the latter was a close second to Mr. Turner. The first office he held in Portsmouth was that of town councilman in 1823, but the honors wore on him and he resigned in 1824.

In the fall of 1825, his brother, William was nominated as county commissioner, but declined to run and thereupon, James Lodwick run in his place. At that time parties had not been organized to any extent and it was a free for all race. The vote was James Lodwick, 424; Daniel McKinney, 265; Charles P. Hatton, 203; John Brown, 122; James Chapman, 121; Samuel Monroe, 79, and Thomas W. Burt, 19. His first official act was to concur with the other two commissioners in appointing Samuel M. Tracy as legal adviser for the county.

In those days no act was done by any city or county officer until Mr. Tracy had been consulted and advised it. Mr. Lodwick was a candidate for the same office in 1853, and was elected. The vote stood James Lodwick, 1,446. Leonard Groniger, 1,076. In 1874, Mr. Lodwick was a candidate for the same office on the Democratic ticket and was elected. The regular Republican nominee was Dr. L. A.

Norton. Col. Sampson E. Varner ran as an independent Democratic candidate and contrary to expectation his candidacy defeated the Republican nominee. The Republicans divided between Norton and Varner, while the Democrats stood by Lodwick. The vote stood, Lodwick, 2,255; Norton, 2,023; Varner, 728.

In 1823, 1825 and 1835, Mr. Lodwick was a trustee of Wayne Township. From June 23, 1829, to February 9, 1842, he was the postmaster at Portsmouth. He received the appointment from Gen. Jackson and his appointment created a great newspaper controversy because of the removal of John R. Turner to give him the place. This was the first example the people had had of Jacksonian doctrine that "to the victor belonged the spoils." He removed the office to the Buckeye House and kept it there till November 15, 1841, when he removed to the market house, where he kept it till relieved by Gen. Wm. Kendall.

In 1839, he was appointed by the council as inspector of domestic spirits and served as such until 1839. In 1838, he was elected a school trustee for the First ward.

In 1839, he became a councilman for the Second ward and in 1841, was re-elected for Third ward. In 1842 to 1851, he was City Treasurer, elected annually.

In 1845, he was a town guard for the First ward. In 1850, he was a guard for the Third ward. In 1840, he was a director of the Portsmouth Insurance Company and in 1844, its president. From 1832 to 1879, he was Treasurer of Aurora Lodge of Free Masons.

The only time that we have found that he was defeated for office was in 1870. He was a candidate for City Treasurer and the poll stood W. T. Cook, 884, James Lodwick, 788. In 1844, he and Mr. Joseph Riggs were sent by the town council to Columbus to lobby against the machinations of the Portsmouth Dry Dock Company, which was then supposed to be intending to have the mouth of the current made a mile below Portsmouth. Their errand was successful.

In 1863, 1868 and 1873, he was appointed to the City Board of Equalization and served nine years. In 1867, he was in the City Board of Health. In 1872, he was appointed city collector and served as such until his death, October 11, 1879. His wife died October 11, 1865, and he never re-married. His four sons were, John Kennedy, Oliver C., Eggleston B., and Henry C.

Mr. Lodwick made a great deal of money in his time, but made no noise about it. He was very liberal with his sons and helped them while they were in business to the amount of $60,000 all told. Mr. Lodwick was a quiet unostentatious citizen. He had a great vein of humor but never used it offensively. He had a faculty of dealing pleasantly with every one and was for this reason much liked. He was just and exact in all his dealings. He was very fond of Masonry. He became a Master Mason in 1820, Royal Arch in 1839, and Knight Templar in 1850. He was secretary of the Chapter over twenty-five years. He was a man whom every one trusted. In 1861, when Sumter was fired on, he was appointed one of three to take charge of the $5,000, appropriated by the county for the defense of the town. Whenever there was any public business to be done which required discretion and good judgment, he was usually called on. He was a safe man, and the whole public knew it. He was true to every trust he ever undertook and was as reliable as the bank of England. He was of dark complexion, over medium height, with small black eyes deeply set in his head. He had a pleasant salute and greeting for his friends, enjoyed a good joke or story and liked to tell it himself. He was a firm Democrat in faith and practice all of his life and never wavered. He was a good husband, a good father, a good Democrat, a good citizen and a good Christian. He never failed in any duty, and left the record of a busy, pure and good life.

Captain Preston Lodwick

was born on three mile creek, three miles from Manchester, in 1810. In 1824, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and engaged in mercantile business with his brother, James Lodwick. He continued in that till 1828, when he moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, and became a member of the firm of Barr, Lodwick & Co., dry goods dealers. In 1832, he formed a partnership with Thomas Huff as Huff & Lodwick. They purchased the store of Graham & Clare at Second and Main streets. They continued their business for several months, and then moved it on a boat on the river. He closed out this business and then he and his brother, John N., and two others bought the steamboat "Argo" and took her south and entered her in the Natchez and Shreveport trade. "Honesty" Joe Jones was one of the pilots. He kept the boat one season, made a lot of money and brought her back and sold her at Cincinnati. He then re-entered the dry goods trade, where he remained until 1842.

He bought a one-half interest in the steamboat "Sylph" with his brother, Capt. John N., and they ran her from Louisville to Owensboro, Ky., making two trips per week. The trade was profitable and they purchased the "Gallant," and put her in the same trade. They extended her trips to Henderson, twenty-four miles further. They sold the "Sylph" and ran the "Gallant" on this trade for two years, when they sold her. Captain Preston then built the "Swallow" and sold her in New Orleans. Then he built another boat and called her the "Argo." He took her to the Upper Mississippi, and sold her, and became a Captain on one of the boats of the Northern line. Soon after, he went to Madison, Ind., and superintended the building of a large steamboat called the Northern Light, for the Northern line. After that he returned to Cincinnati where he, David Gibson and others built the "Prince of Wales," a fine steamboat. She was sold to the southern trade, captured by the rebels and burned. He bought the steamer "Kentucky" and ran her in the St. Louis and New Orleans trade. The rebellion coming on, his boat was impressed. After a time he escaped, and came north. He bought the interest of Captain Wm. McLain in the "Bostona." She was burned and another built and he kept his interest till he sold out to Captains Wm. and Enos Moore. He bought an interest in the Arms & Wick Rolling Mill in Portsmouth and dropped $80,000 in it. He again went to Cincinnati and commanded the steamer "Ohio" for a while and then the Kanawha steamer, "Virgie Lee." He was associated with Captain W. W. Little in constructing the "Eldorado" in 1874. This closed his steamboat career. He returned to Cincinnati and dealt in real estate there. He accumulated quite a fortune. He died at his home in Sedamsville, Ohio, November 16, 1887.

John Newton Lodwick

was born October 24, 1812, on the Col. John Means farm in Adams County, now owned by A. V. Hudson. As a boy he was very fond of fun and mischief according to his own accounts. He used to play all manner of tricks in school and out of it and sometimes came to grief. Notwithstanding his aptitude for mischief he thought he got a whipping too much when he was a school boy and he laid it up against the teacher, intending to whip him when he became a man. When he became a man he was mate on a steamboat, and the teacher came aboard the boat and recognized him. He spoke very pleasantly to Mr. Lodwick but he was very gruff and told him he intended to whip him the first time he saw him and as this was the first time the whipping was in order. Capt. Lodwick says that he got the best whipping then and there that he ever got in his life.

In 1826, he came to Portsmouth and attended the school taught by Erastus Dwyer for two years. He began life on a flat boat in 1828. At the age of 20, in 1832, he took the river and made a trip to New Orleans with two flat boats loaded with pork, lard and bulk meat. The cargo was owned by Renich and Hurst of Circleville. In 1831, he began to learn the trade of ship carpenter under Archibald Gordon at Cincinnati. In 1832, he built the steamboat "Carroll" at Portsmouth for Gordon. In 1834, he was shipping clerk at Portsmouth for a canal boat line called the Troy and Erie. There were two boats a day for the line which was then considered a small business. In 1833, he went on the river as a mate on the "Helen Mar" under Captain Fuller.

He was captain of several different boats, and in 1836, he went as mate on the "Comanche" to New Orleans and Texas. When he arrived there the war for Texan Independence was going on and he joined a company of independent scouts, as he then believed them, but thinking over the matter for 50 years he thinks they were plain cattle thieves. Their business was to go into Mexico and steal cattle from the Mexicans and sell them to the Texan government. After the war, and some bouts with the Mexicans and Indians the Captain returned to New Orleans and continued on the river as captain and mate.

In 1840, he was married to Elizabeth A. Stephens, of Wheeling and took up his home at Hawesville, Ky. He then owned one-fourth of the steam-boat "Pensacola" and was its Captain. She was sunk and he came down to mate again. In 1834, he came to Portsmouth and bought the "Sylph" of McDowell and Davis. The boat cost $2,700 and he did not have a dollar to pay for her. He took her to the Illinois river and paid for her in six months. He bought a new boat, the "Gallant," and the purchaser of the "Sylph" sunk her on the first trip out. Captain Lodwick wore the "Gallant" out in the Louisville and Henderson trade. In 1833 he moved back to Portsmouth. He purchased the "Hamburg" and run between Portsmouth and Pomeroy. He was Captain and J. W. Vance was Clerk. Dr. A. B. Jones and Col. S. E. Varner were part owners with the Captain and Clerk.

On April 26, 1854, he was walking along the track of the Little Miami Railroad near its station in Cincinnati and was reading a paper as he walked. A switch engine with a baggage car attached was backing up and struck him and knocked him down in the middle of the track. The baggage car passed over him but the fire box caught him and he was dragged 95 yards. He held on to the fire box and this saved his life. About all his ribs were broken loose and his jaw and nose were broken. His right arm was wrenched out of place and his left leg lacerated from hip to foot. He was laid up for twelve months. After this he bought a shoe store and run it for a while.

From 1856 to 1862, he was wharf master at Portsmouth, Ohio, and built a fine wharf boat, the first one ever at Portsmouth. During this time he was agent for the B. & O. Ry. In the year 1862, he sold his wharf boat to Thos. T. Yeager and went on the river and remained until 1868. He ran as Captain on all the "Bostonas" but the last one. In 1879-80 he served on the city Board of Equalization of Portsmouth and from 1883 to 1888, the time of his death, he was a member of the Board of Health of Portsmouth. In 1881 he was invited by his friend, A. W. Williamson to take a ride on the propeller, "W. F. Gaylord." When she was opposite Ashland in the night the tow boat "D. T. Lane" was coming down. She ran the "Gaylord" down and sunk her and the Captain was thrown into the river. He seized two board life preservers and floated down the river until he was picked up by the "Nellie T. Brown." The cook, Elizabeth Meade, was drowned.

After that the Captain stated that he had been blown up four times, sunk three times and run over by the railroad once. After his experience at Ashland he came to the conclusion that he was bound to die in bed; and was not born to be killed on the railroad or drowned in the river. However, he did die with his boots on, as he was found dead in his yard in March, 1888. He served on the Board of Health twelve years, and took a great interest in the work. After he had left the river for good, he became a member of the First Presbyterian church. In politics he was a Democrat, and ready to serve his party at all times, although he was not a strong partisan. In 1868 he opened a commission house on Pig Iron Corner. The same year he was a candidate for the position of wharf master and was defeated. He was also a candidate for Coroner in 1873.

He was a very strong patriot in the civil war, and when his son Blashford got up a company of volunteers, he spent $600 in equipping them. He had a fund of anecdotes entertaining enough to entertain a regiment at any time. He was one of the most agreeable companions and was greatly esteemed by all who knew him. He was one of the old fashioned steamboat captains, the generation of which has forever passed away.

John Wood Lummis

was born near Vineland, Cumberland County, N. J., September 5, 1813. His father was James Lummis, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Wood, a native of Holland. His education was limited to the common schools of Cumberland County, N. J. When a youth of eighteen, he went to Wheeling, W. Va., where he served three years as an apprentice in a machine shop. At the age of twenty-one, he went to Hanging Rock, Ohio, and became an engineer for Mr. Dempsey. He worked here a time, then went to Tennessee, to a furnace, and worked for a man by the name of Peters, running a furnace engine. He did not like it there and returned to Portsmouth. Shortly after returning to Portsmouth, he was offered the place of engineer at Bloom Furnace, and went there and remained in the employment of the Bloom Furnace Company for twenty years. After leaving the furnace, he bought eighty-four acres of land in and near Webster. He built him a comfortable home in Webster and resided there until his death.

He married Elizabeth Chaffin, the daughter of Shadrach Chaffin of Vernon Township, February 4, 1849. She died in March, 1883. They had eight children, all of whom are deceased, but three, Sarah E., wife of Simeon E. Evans, of Jackson, Ohio; Jacob W., agent on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and Postmaster at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Shadrach Chaffin, Treasurer of Custer County, South Dakota.

Mr. Lummis was always an abolitionist but acted with the Republican party. He had a talent for accumulation, and left a good estate at his death, September 5th, 1891. He was a religious man and a Christian. He was a member of the United Brethren church at South Webster, and one of its main pillars. He was a man of strong convictions. He examined a subject carefully and made up his mind. When once made up, nothing could prevent him. He was never idle a day in his life. He always found something to do. He was not only a good mechanical engineer, but a draughtsman as well. He built the engines for Ohio, Buckhorn and Bloom furnaces. When he took up farming he was just as busy at that as he had ever been before, and death struck him and took him while he was out in his field at work; but he had been ready for his call for years. Mr. Lummis was essentially a good citizen and a credit to the community in which he dwelt.

William Maddock, Sr.,

was born in Staffordshire, England, in the year 1803. His father was a manufacturer of porcelain ware and pottery. John B. Maddock of the firm of John B. Maddock & Sons, of London, England, manufacturers of the widely known Maddock ware, is a brother. William learned the trade of a foundryman and machinist in Manchester, England. He was raised a Quaker and when he came to America in 1824, at the age of twenty-one, he wore the conventional Quaker dress. He first landed in Maine, but located in Detroit the next year and worked for a Mr. Pond in a foundry, but did not stay long.

He came to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1826, and with money which his thoughtful mother had stowed away in a chest for him, similar to those brought by most emigrants to America, and with $600.00 borrowed from Judge William Salter he bought the lots where the Opera House now stands and built a woolen mill with a grist mill attached. After operating the mill in this way for some time he purchased the balance of the lots between Fourth and Fifth streets, fronting on the east side of Chillicothe and built a foundry and machine shop. To these as side lines were attached mills for flour and linseed oil, so that he had a monopoly on the manufactures of the town. This foundry and machine shop was the first of the kind in Portsmouth. Maddock and Beyerly advertised in 1836 as manufacturers of sheet iron, and Stevenson and Maddock as foundry. He was connected with the foundry business until his death from apoplexy, May 11, 1865.

He was married in 1826, to Elizabeth Buffington and had nine children. John B., died June 29, 1898; Mary J., widow of Captain Charles A. Barton; Addean E., widow of Captain William Stoner; William H., died December, 1897, was a mechanical engineer in Pittsburg; Emma and James died in infancy; Charles R., United States Inspector of woolen goods for army use at Chicago; Ida C., widow of Walter Mann, now living at Columbus, Ohio; Richard Cotton of Philadelphia, agent for the output of several knitting factories (stockings). Mrs. Elizabeth Maddock, wife of our subject died November 1, 1868, aged fifty-five years and nine months.

Our subject always retained his Quaker ideas, but attended the Episcopal church. He was a Whig and afterwards a strong Republican. When he died he left his business to his sons and $8,000 each to his daughters.

Isaac Malone,

one of the twelve children of Benjamin Malone and Priscilla Guthrie, his wife, was born in Scioto Township, Ross County, Ohio, Nov. 20, 1820. His father was a native of Bedford County, Va., and emigrated to Lawrence County, Kentucky, near the Blue Lick Springs and afterwards to near Chillicothe, Ohio, about 1813. Shortly after arriving, he was asked to convey the news of peace to Detroit at the conclusion of the war with England. Three days after being asked, he started and made the journey on horseback. Benjamin Malone was born December 25, 1785, and died January 15, 1881. The mother of our subject was a daughter of William Guthrie, one of the pioneers of Pike County, who emigrated there from Pa. about 1799, and was married March 1, 1816.

Isaac Malone came to Scioto County when about 20 years of age and was married to Mary Ann Utt, daughter of John Utt, February, 1844. He lived awhile on Pond Creek and afterwards moved to Hygean Run and bought 138 acres of Scioto bottoms of George Davis which he continued to own until his death. Of the eight sons born to them, seven are now living: George, Frank, Joseph, Charles, Isaac, Fred and John. All daughters are living: Lizzie, wife of John L. Hinze; Priscilla, wife of Frank Turner; Mary, wife of Carl Huber and Hattie, wife of Charles McMillen.

Our subject was always a Democrat but often voted for the man and not the party he represented. He died November 7, 1884.

Samuel Marshall, Sr.

Samuel Marshall, his wife and four children were the first persons to settle permanently in Scioto County. They left Pittsburg in the summer of 1795, and went to Manchester where they remained till after Wayne's treaty. He then took the same boat he came down in and went up the river to opposite the mouth of Tygart creek in Kentucky, where he landed and built the first log cabin in Scioto County. His family consisted of himself, his wife Polly Marshall and her children: Labina Marshall, Jesse Marshall and Samuel Marshall, Jr. This was in March, 1796, when he located in Scioto County. His daughter, Nancy, did not come till the next year, and

MAJOR HENRY MASSIE.
FOUNDER OF PORTSMOUTH. BORN 1768—DIED 1830.

then as the wife of William Rollins. Labina married a Pyles; and she and Samuel Marshall, Jr., were living (August 2, 1873) in Madison Township. The log cabin built by Samuel Marshall in 1796 was, when completed, the only one on either side of the river between Gallipolis and Manchester.

John Lindsey and wife and children soon followed. They came from Manchester also. His children were Beulah who married George Edgington, John H., William, Oliver, Lemuel, Peter and James. Sallie Lindsey married Samuel Perry. John A. Lindsey and Polly Marshall were the first couple married in Scioto County, but when or where does not appear. They probably went to Kentucky. They built a cabin where the Scioto Furnace now stands. Samuel Marshall, Sr., had five children when he settled in Scioto County. A daughter Fanny was the first white child born in Scioto County. She married George Shonkwiler, reared a large family and died at an advanced age.

was a son of Nathaniel Massie, of Goochland County, Virginia, and Elizabeth Watkins his wife, and was born February 7, 1768. His elder brother, General Nathaniel Massie, founder of Manchester and Chillicothe, was born in 1763. His father was said to have been a Colonel in the Revolutionary War. He was well educated, but the place or extent of his education is unknown. It is certain that among his educational acquirements was the science and art of surveying.

He followed his brother, Nathaniel, to the Northwest Territory and became a land speculator. Like all men of his time, he was in the militia, and rose to the position of Major. He married Helen Bullitt, daughter of Colonel Alexander Scott Bullitt, one of the first settlers of Jefferson County, Kentucky. No children were born to them, but they adopted four—two of his own nieces, and two of his wife's nephews. The nieces were Constance Massie, who married Major James Love of Louisville, Ky., and Elizabeth Watkins Massie, who married William L. Thompson, of Jefferson County, Kentucky.

The nephews were Henry Massie Bullitt, son of Cuthbert Bullitt and Scott Bullitt, son of William Bullitt. He owned a large farm of 300 acres eight miles out of Louisville, Ky., which he called Ridgeway. There he built a beautiful home, from which he dispensed a generous hospitality all his life. He was married about 1807. He spent considerable time in Chillicothe, Ohio, and prior to his marriage, in Adams County, but Ridgeway was always his home.

He died February 8, 1830, and is interred at Oxmore, the family burial place of the Bullitts.

His widow re-married twice—first to Major John L. Martin, and second to Colonel Marshall Key, of Mason County, Ky., and is buried at Oxmore.

Ridgeway is now occupied by Joshua Bullitt, a nephew of his wife whose post office is Buechel, Ky.

Henry Massie came to the site of Portsmouth as early as 1798. He saw what others failed to see, that Alexandria was predestined to failure, and undertook to purchase lands on higher grounds on the eastern side of the Scioto, but he was not the first one to appreciate the site of Portsmouth.

Jeremiah McLean, Nathaniel Willis, William Lawson, and Thomas Parler had all of them entered the lands he wanted, before him. As four of them were non-residents he did not have much trouble with them, and William Lawson, the only resident yielded quickly. He bought them out in 1802, but the lands were not patented, to him until August 4, 1806, when he received his patent from the United States for fractional sections, 17, 18, 19 and 20, Township 1, Range 21 and fractional sections 1 and 2, Township 1, Range 22.

This covers all the land on which the original town of Portsmouth was located by him, in May, 1803, and hence any one who has real estate in Portsmouth and can trace it clear to Henry Massie has a good title. His patent embraced 2,024 and 26-100 acres.

He dedicated in-lots 130 and 143, where the Second street school house now stands, and out-lot 39, where the Fourth street school house now stands, to the public schools. He dedicated lots 3, 146 and 147 on Second and Market streets for public purposes, and they were so used for many years.

On July 10, 1807, he deeded to the County Commissioners—Samuel Lucas, James Edison and Gabriel Feurt—in-lots 18, 19, 30, 62, 63, 66, 78, 99, 110, 111, 114, 115, 126, 131, 142, 177, 186, 200, 205, 211, 219, 226, 235, 241, 246, 261, 264, 268, 269, 271, and out-lots, 14, 15, 16, 21, 35, 36, 37, 38, 42, 46, 51, 53, 54 to be sold by them and the proceeds used to build a court house and jail.

On March 8, 1809, he deeded in-lot 31 to the Commissioners for building a court house. It is in the center block, on the south side of Second street, between Court and Market.

When he made the town plat he left all land south of the present Front street vacant, and made no indications of his intentions in respect to the same.

About 1811 he undertook to plat and sell the Front of the town on the river south of Water street, and went so far as to sell one lot to General William Kendall for $80.00. It was opposite lot 280, and was six poles square. About the same time he sold two lots to William Lodwick, opposite his lots on the north side of Front street. The latter bought them for a wood yard. This matter troubled the town for years, and was the subject of much public agitation. Delegates were sent to him at Louisville, lawyers were employed and testimony de bene esse taken. The matter was supposed to be settled on August 7, 1829, when Massie was paid $3,000.00 and he gave the town a deed, but it was not signed by his wife.

In the deal William Lodwick reconveyed his lots to the town, but General Kendall's lot was lost sight of.

After Henry Massie's death, his widow asserted a claim as executrix of her husband and dowress in this land, and the matter was bandied back and forth until 1842, when, on June 19, the city paid her and John L. Martin $1,087.62 for a release of her claim.

It is in tradition that after Henry Massie had purchased the site of Portsmouth, he revisited it and found Captain Josiah Shackford there. The Captain informed him that he had expected to purchase the same land, to plat a town on it and name it Portsmouth. Major Massie then told Captain Shackford, if he would aid him in building up the town, he would name it for Portsmouth, Captain Shackford's native place.

Captain Shackford agreed to Major Massie's proposition, and the town received the name of Portsmouth. Whether the same be true or not, Captain Shackford and Massie became great friends, and Shackford did all he could to promote the town of Portsmouth.

When Massie began to sell lots he usually sold a lot 82½ feet front by 132 feet deep for $50.00. He was content to sell his land outside of the lots for $10.00 per acre.

In 1807 he vacated all of his town plat of 1803 north of the center line between Second and Third streets, and made the inlots into outlots of about three acres each. This was probably done because he despaired of the town.

Major Massie made his will but two days before his death. He gave to his wife his home estate of 430 acres and his slaves and their increase, his moneys on hand, debts due him in Kentucky, and his stock in the Shelbyville and Louisville turnpike road; also $3,000 and the securities for the same, owing to him but payable to him some time in the future by the corporation of Portsmouth in the State of Ohio. He directed that his debts be paid and the interest on $1,400 be paid to his brother, Thomas Massie during his life, the principal on his death to go to his wife. He gave his nieces, Constance Massie and Elizabeth Thompson each $3,000. The residue of his estate he divided between his nephews, Heath Jones, of Louisville, Kentucky; Nathaniel Massie of Ohio; Henry Bullitt, son of Cuthbert Bullitt, and Alexander Scott Bullitt. The will expresses a great affection for his wife and his desires to provide for her. She seemed to have been much attached to him, but that did not prevent her marrying twice after his death. The following is a tribute written by Mrs. Massie in regard to him directly after his death. "He fell like a noble tree, after two or three strokes, with all his sap and verdure, with extended boughs and rich foliage, while many were reposing in his shadow and partaking of his fruits. Seldom has death gained a richer spoil than in the extraction of the earthly existence of this admirable man."

"Take holy earth all that my soul holds dear, Take that best gift which heaven so kindly gave."

Benjamin Melcher

was born July 7, 1794, in Rockingham County, New Hampshire. His grandfather was in the Revolutionary War. His father was a farmer. He lived at home until he was sixteen, when he was apprenticed to a shoe maker in Exeter, New Hampshire. He served five years. He was in the first company, Fourth Regiment, New Hampshire Militia, in the war of 1812. He was in active service for forty days. Captain Gilliman commanded his company. After his apprenticeship, he worked in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, as a journeyman shoemaker. He had an uncle there in New Hampshire, who resided in Marietta, Ohio. He concluded to go west with his uncle. They drove in a two horse wagon all the way from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to Marietta, Ohio. He remained in Marietta, a month, and not obtaining work, concluded to go further down the river.

He landed at Portsmouth, Ohio, August 16, 1816. He took breakfast at Eli Glover's tavern. After breakfast, he took a walk to see the town. He dropped into John H. Thornton's shoe shop and asked for employment. He obtained it and in three months bought Thornton out. He had at this time between $300 and $400. October 19, 1817 he married Miss Nancy Lloyd. She was born on September 1, 1798. In the spring of 1819, he built a two story brick house on the southeast corner of Second and Washington streets. In 1819, he bought O. F. Moore's lot for $300. In 1820, he built a two story frame, some distance above, on Second street opposite O. F. Moore's. At that time business began to be dull and many left the place. In 1829, Mr. Melcher built a two story brick on the southwest corner of Second and Court streets. It gave way to the present Elk building. He opened a boarding house in it. He sold his shoe business and went into the grocery business in the same building. He made money and considerable of it, but hard times and unfortunate speculations overtook him and he was compelled to sell out. He then went back to his trade and worked for his brother-in-law, Richard Lloyd until he was unable to work at all. Mr. and Mrs. Melcher were members of the Presbyterian church. They had three children living (in 1874): Richard Lloyd Melcher, Mrs. M. V. Cropper and Mrs. Jesse J. Appller. When he failed he was several hundred dollars insolvent. He paid it off by working at the shoe bench. He died of paralysis April 9, 1874, aged 79 years and 1 month.

was born in Oldurf, Holland, on November 20, 1805, and died in Portsmouth, Ohio, on November 26, 1879. He was the son of John and Wilhelmina Molster, and grew to young manhood in his native land, where his father was employed at teaming on the construction of some of the Dutch canals. In 1823, John Molster and a brother with their families set sail for South Carolina, intending to settle there. The writer isn't informed whether they ever reached there, or, if so, why they did not remain. At any rate, they settled in and near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where the men found employment in the rolling mills, and there our subject met and married Charlotte Blecker, a native of Lancaster, a Pennsylvania Dutch girl, whose parents were natives of Alsace.

In 1831, Martin Molster who had become a skilled worker of iron, with his young wife and their first child, traveled by wagon over the then great highway the Cumberland road, to Wheeling, West Virginia, and thence by boat to Cincinnati, Ohio, whither he went to assist in the construction of one of the first mills in the west. In the next year they returned to Philadelphia or Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, and remained about two years when they again went to Cincinnati. In 1836, he came to Portsmouth and with the exception of about one year 1839-1840 when the family resided in Cincinnati, continued to reside in Portsmouth till his death.

For thirty-six years he was employed in the Gaylord rolling mills, and when in 1873 he retired from the mill he had completed fifty years of toil in various iron works. He acquired in that service a splendid knowledge of the building and operation of every feature of the rolling mill, was the wise counselor of his sons and co-laborers in the mills, and enjoyed the highest esteem of his employers, and especially of the late Benjamin B. Gaylord. He had "run with the machine" as a member of the Volunteer Fire Department, Independent Company No. 1 for many years and in recognition of that service was elected Chief of the Fire Department in 1876, serving until 1878. At the time of his death, he was Street Commissioner of the city to which office he was elected April, 1879. In politics he was a Republican, though up to the beginning of the Civil War he had been a Democrat.

His was a vigorous mind and body and whatever he undertook was done with enthusiasm, with all his might. So after he took the vows which united him with the First Presbyterian church in 1841, he was ever a consistent and faithful member evidenced by attendance on its service, the study of his Bible and his walk in life, where to know him was to love him.

During the Mexican war, a company of guards of which the late Peter Kinney was Captain and our subject was a member, was engaged in a sham battle north of the court house, and during its excitement Charles Kinney, a fellow member let the steel ramrod remain in the gunbarrel and on being discharged, a piece of the rod was driven through Mr. Molster's neck and into his shoulder. It was removed with great difficulty and the flow of blood checked by some heroic means. A long fight followed, but he eventually recovered his full strength. At the time of the accident, his son, Henry, then a lad of eight years, was playing nearby and learning of the affair, ran all the way to the family home on Second street, where he fell prostrate in his mother's presence, unable to deliver the news. During the war of the Rebellion, he did service as a member of the Home Guards and did scout duty at the time of Morgan's Raid. He was an expert rifleman and loved to hunt.

Four sons and three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Molster: Mary Ann, John T., both deceased, Henry, Cornelius, Susannah E., wife of Peter J. Monaghan, James M. and Wilhelmina, all of whom together with numerous grandchildren, gathered at the family residence on the evening of Monday, November 24, 1879, to celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding. It was a joyous assemblage with little thought of what a day might bring forth. Martin Molster was taken deathly sick that night and after intense suffering endured with wonderful fortitude for thirty-six hours, died on Wednesday morning. All the people mourned his death and sympathized with the bereaved household and especially the widow. Mother Molster as she was known to many (as our subject was "Daddy") lived eleven years thereafter till December 8, 1890, and many a sad heart or sick one was gladdened by her visit, generally with some delicately prepared food, always with a sunny smile. The world is better for their living.

Captain Enos Bascom Moore,

the son of Levi Moore and Amanda Gunn, his wife, was born December 27, 1823. His mother was a daughter of Samuel Gunn, one of the pioneers of Portsmouth, who has a sketch herein. His grandfather was Phillip Moore, a native of New Jersey. A fuller statement of the ancestry of our subject will be found under the title of Capt. Wm. Moore, an elder brother.

Enos Moore grew up on his father's farm, graduated from the country school of his vicinity, and was preparing to enter Delaware College with a view to the study of law. At this time, a flat-boat loaded with flour from New Orleans came down the river and landed at the bank near his father's farm. He was invited to become a part of the crew and take a trip to New Orleans. If he did so he had to give up his project of an education at Delaware. The love of adventure was too strong, he decided to make the river trip, gave up the idea of being a lawyer and followed the career of a boatman.

For forty-two years from that time his life was given to the occupation of boating on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. For ten years he served as a pilot between St. Louis and New Orleans, and afterwards as a master. In 1858, he and Capt. Duvall Young built the steamer "Champion" and ran between St. Louis and New Orleans. The breaking out of the war compelled the abandonment of the trade and the boat was sold. Capt. Enos Moore has served as master, on no less than forty different steamboats, but most of his service has been in the Cincinnati and Portsmouth trade, on the boats of the White Collar line, in which company he was largely interested until his retirement from the river in 1889. In 1863, he and his brother, William, purchased an interest in the foundry and machine business, conducted at that time by Murray and Stevenson. The firm was originally Murray, Ward and Stevenson. In 1863, the Moore brothers purchased the business, and conducted it under the firm name of Murray, Moore & Company, until 1872, when Mr. Murray sold out his interest to the Moore brothers; and afterwards the business was incorporated as the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine works, and has been conducted as such ever since. Capt. Enos Moore is now president of the company, and has been for a number of years. Capt. Moore has been twice married; first to Miss Maria Prime Pratt, of Washington County, New York, and second time to Miss Mary E. Switzer, of Dayton, Ohio. There are two children of the first marriage: Mrs. Frances Geiger of Troy, Ohio, and Mary Young Moore at home. Of the second marriage, the children are; Ralph, Lucy, Edith and William. Capt. Moore is a Republican in his political views. He has been a member of the First Presbyterian church since 1862, and is one of the board of ruling elders.

Capt. Moore is a gentleman of the most agreeable temperament. He is always calm and collected, never loses his equipoise. As a captain of a large steamboat he was unexcelled. Whatever dangers threatened, he was equal to the emergency, and never was taken off his guard. No matter what happened he was always ready for it. He used to claim to the passengers on the old "Bonanza" that they were safer on his boat than they were on land, and they believed it. He is a gentleman of the most excellent judgment in business and in social affairs. He has always been a most pleasant companion and could always entertain the passengers with him on the steamboats, as well as take care of their safety, and navigate the boat. He looked for the comfort of his passengers with great care, and it was always a real pleasure trip to travel on the "Bonanza" with Capt. Moore as master. He has made as excellent a citizen since 1889, as before that he did a steamboat master. It would be useless to attempt to inventory his good qualities, he has so many of them. While his life has been mainly devoted to business, he has been very successful and all the while, has enjoyed the highest regard of all who knew him.

Captain William Moore

was born October 8, 1815, in Alexandria, Scioto County, Ohio. His father was Levi Moore, born in Fayette County, Pa., February 9, 1793. His mother was Amanda A. Gunn, daughter of Samuel Gunn, who was born in Waterbury, Conn., and came to Portsmouth, at five years of age. Levi Moore was the same age when he came to Scioto County in 1797. Philip Moore, grandfather of our subject, was born at Allentown, Pa. Levi Moore had the following children: our subject, the eldest; Milton, died in Mississippi, of yellow fever in 1854; Maria, who married Solomon B. McCall; Lora, died when 18 years of age; Mary Ellen, died about the age of twenty-five years; Enos and Samuel.

Our subject was educated in the common schools, and did not learn any trade. He labored on his father's farm until he was about fifteen years of age, then he began to run machinery wherever steam was employed. He worked for Dr. Offiere in the old Red Mill, as engineer for a year. He began steamboating for Samuel Coles on the steamer "Home" from Cincinnati to Pittsburg, as engineer. He went to Franklin Furnace and was engineer for Dan Young in 1837. The year 1838 he spent on his father's farm four miles below Portsmouth. In 1839, he made a trip to New Orleans on a flat boat, and while there became an engineer on a steamboat on the Yazoo river. He built the steamboat "Reliance," and was her master in 1841. He was then a steamboat engineer for two years. Then he was off the river for one year; and in the meantime ran a flat boat of corn to New Orleans in 1845, and was at his father's home in 1846. In 1847, he ran the steamboat "St. McClean" from Yazoo to New Orleans.

He was married August 11, 1847, to Elizabeth Smith, daughter of John F. Smith, and her mother Margaret Russell. Directly after his marriage, he went to New Orleans and began running a corn sheller on the steamboat, "Grace Darling," and also shelled corn on the flat boats. He was then employed by the Yazoo Packet Company, to run the packet "Hard Times" from Yazoo city to Vicksburg, one hundred miles, and he lived in Yazoo city. He was master and kept at that for four years, when he sold her in 1851. He built the steamboat "Home" in Cincinnati in the summer of 1855, and the "Hope" in 1859, and run her until the war broke out when the Rebels took and sunk her. Then Capt. Moore stayed at home and fished until he could get a chance to escape the Rebels. Gen. Heron brought an expedition up the Yazoo in 1863, and Capt. Moore got in with him and came home. He then went into a partnership with David N. Murray and his brother, Enos B. Moore, in the fall of 1863, as the firm of Murray & Co. In 1878, Murray sold out and a corporation was formed, under which the business has been conducted. This corporation was called the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine works. Capt. Moore has had the following children: Louisiana, wife of James W. Ricker; Mary; Virginia, married E. B. Greene; Elizabeth, married R. R. Peebles. He has two sons, Enos and John. He has been a communicant of All Saints church for many years.

Captain Moore has been a great reader and accumulated a large collection of books which he sold to the public library of Portsmouth. He is quiet and retired in all his tastes and prefers the fellowship of his books, papers and family to public assemblies. He has taken no interest in political affairs since the war, though he keeps fully informed in all public affairs. He has been very successful as a business man and devoted all his life's energies in that direction. Capt. Moore died suddenly on Sunday, June 22, 1902.

David Morrison

was born September 16, 1807, in Pennsylvania. He was a nephew of John Loughry. He went from Pennsylvania direct to Rockville to engage in business under Mr. Loughry. He remained with John Loughry from about 1831 to 1841 as superintendent of the business of quarrying and shipping stone. From 1841 to 1847, he was engaged in boating on the Ohio river. He owned a towboat and a number of barges and engaged in transporting heavy goods on the Ohio river. From 1851 to 1859, he resided in Covington, Kentucky. He bought the Judge Mitchell farm, lately owned by his sons, Albert R. and James H. Morrison, removed there in 1859, and resided there until his death, though he never was at any time a farmer, but was always engaged on the river.

He was married to Martha Mitchell, the daughter of Associate Judge David Mitchell, on the 28th day of November, 1835, by Rev. Eleazor Brainard, and they went to housekeeping in Rockville.

He was a large man, weighing over two hundred and fifty pounds and was always active and energetic. He died suddenly March 23, 1863, from the effects of an operation on his eyes. His wife survived him until March 18, 1886. They both rest in the Mitchell cemetery on the hill overlooking the former home of Judge David Mitchell, her father. They had the following children: Mary, wife of Loyal Wilcox, residing in Kansas, who has a large family and a son and daughter married; Armour Morrison, resides in Chicago and is engaged in the life insurance business; Albert R. Morrison, married Elizabeth McMasters, now his widow, who resides in the old home in Nile Township, Scioto County; James H. Morrison, the second son, died September 23, 1901; Charles W. Morrison, the youngest son, is a teacher of music in the Conservatory of Music at Oberlin College, and has been so engaged for the last twenty-three years. He went there as a young man to study music and after he had completed his studies there and in Europe, he was engaged to teach and has remained ever since. The sons are and were all like their father, active, energetic and industrious men.

David Whittaker Murphy,

son of Recompense Murphy and Catherine Newkirk, his wife, was born in Salem County, New Jersey, in 1800. He was brought by his parents to Adams County when five years old.

This incident occurred when our subject was about twelve years of age. He and another boy near his own age were crossing the Ohio river in a canoe, one sitting at either end. When they had gotten far into the current, they noticed a large animal swimming toward them. It proved to be a bear, nearly grown, and was almost exhausted by its efforts. Seeing them, it made for their canoe and climbed in. The boys, of course, were very much frightened, but nevertheless, continued paddling their canoe to the landing. The moment they touched the shore, bruin sprang out and disappeared. The boys were as glad to be rid of their shaggy companion as he was of their company.

Our subject grew to manhood in Sandy Springs neighborhood, having the advantages of such schools as were there, having the fun and sports that boys of his time were privileged to have. His first wife was a Miss Julia Ann Turner, whom he married in Bracken County, Kentucky. By this marriage there were two sons and a daughter; James, William, and Anna Maria. The sons both went south before the Civil War, and were soldiers in the Confederate Army. William was Lieutenant of a Mississippi Battery.

David Murphy's second wife was Cynthia Givens, a widow whose maiden name was McCall. The children of this marriage were: David A., married to Jennie M. Ball, of Portsmouth, Ohio, now living at Oxford, O.; Ella M. Evans, wife of Mitchell Evans, a prominent citizen of Scioto County, residing at Friendship, Ohio; Leonidas Hamline, a partner in the recently organized shoe house, The Murphy Shoe Company, of Portsmouth, Ohio; John Fletcher Murphy, a clerk in the Auditor's office of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway Company, in Cincinnati, and Miss Tillie M. Murphy, residing at Valparaiso, Indiana. Our subject and his second wife, Cynthia Givens, were earnest members of the Methodist church all their days. Until 1848, he was a farmer, residing in Adams County, Ohio. In that year he left Adams County, and removed to Buena Vista, just over the line of Adams County in Scioto County, where he kept a hotel for awhile. He was postmaster at Buena Vista from 1868 until 1873. His home in Buena Vista was a delightful one where it was always pleasant to visit. After the death of his second wife, in 1873, he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Evans, of Friendship, Ohio, until his death in 1892.

Mr. Murphy had a great deal of dry humor and could express himself so as to entertain his hearers and amuse them at the same time. He was always anti-slavery, and once, a long time before the war, being asked if he would help execute the Fugitive Slave Law, he said, "Yes, if called by the United States Marshal to be part of a posse to catch fugitives, I would help, as I must obey the law, but I would be very lame." He served as a Justice of the Peace in the two counties of Adams and Scioto, for a period of fifty years, and his decisions gave general satisfaction. He would draw an ordinary deed as well as any lawyer. In politics, he was a Whig, until the Republican party, was organized, when, after 1856, he went into that party and remained a member of it during his life. However, he voted for Fillmore for president in 1856, because he felt that his election would better preserve the Union. In 1860, he voted for Lincoln and for every Republican presidential candidate from that time until 1888, his last presidential vote, which was for Benjamin Harrison. He died in February, 1892.

Lorenzo Dow McKinney

was born in Madison Township, Scioto County, Ohio, June 17, 1816. He was the son of Daniel and Catherine (Samson) McKinney, and a grandson of Daniel McKinney, one of the first settlers of Scioto County. He lived on the home farm until he grew to manhood, has always followed farming pursuits, and by his own industry has accumulated a large property. He was married September 12, 1841, to Isabinda Stockham, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Stockham, pioneers of Scioto County. She was born February 26, 1819. They were the parents of eight children, two of whom are dead. Those surviving are: William, a farmer of Madison Township; Samantha, wife of Jacob Deemer of Crabtree, Ohio; Ruth, wife of Eli Stout residing in Portsmouth, Ohio; Maria, wife of John Decker residing in Los Angeles, California; Charles, in the Steam Shovel Works at Marion, Ohio, and Eliza, residing in Denver, Colorado. His wife died in 1886. He was always a Democrat and at one time was a member of the U. B. church, but is no longer.

He announced his intention of having his funeral preached on his eightieth birthday. The fact was heralded all over the United States and his picture was printed far and wide in all the great newspapers. He was a widower and gave it out that if he survived his funeral he would marry again. That was published broadcast and he was deluged with offers of marriage by mail. His post office was Scioto and the post office was overwhelmed with scented and tender missives. He received over a hundred such offers. They were from old women, widows with children, widows without children, and young misses. Some of them sent photographs and three of them were from Portsmouth.' It is only the eccentric people in this community who attract attention. Lorenzo Dow McKinney was eighty years old on the 17th day of June, 1896. For twenty-five years, he had been contemplating having his funeral sermon preached if he ever reached his eightieth birthday. The services held in the grove at Fallen Timber were carried out according to his directions. Six weeks previous, he made the matter public and it was published in all the great daily newspapers in this country and even in the London Times. The place was on the farm of John Diffen, six miles east of Lucasville, Ohio. There were 6,000 to 8,000 people present. The newspaper men present were: C. I. Barker, George Mitchell and Walter C. Taylor of the Blade; E. C. Dover, C. A. Goddard and H. E. Taylor of the Times.

Rev. Forest E. Evans delivered the funeral sermon. He resided at Pride in Ross County, Ohio, and Fallen Timber was one of his regular appointments. His text was from 11 Timothy IV Chapter, 6 verse, "The time of my departure is at hand." It was a funeral without a corpse. Uncle Dow was seated on a round platform, surrounded by a dozen newspaper reporters and listened to his funeral sermon. The minister gave some account of him. The corpse behaved himself properly only sometimes he talked to persons in the crowd when he ought to have been listening to the sermon. After the services were concluded, each man, woman and child present filed past the platform and shook hands with the anticipated corpse. It took an hour for the people to bid him farewell. They picniced on the ground and there were services in the afternoon at 2 p. m. and again in the evening. The sentiment, "I would not live always" has no response in Dow McKinney's heart. He would live always if he could, and enjoy it too.

After his funeral was preached, he took a long trip west, and where he was known, he had an ovation. Everyone who had heard of the man who had had his funeral preached on his eightieth birthday wanted to see him and shake hands with the corpse. Wherever they found him out, Uncle Dow's receptions vied with those of Prince Henry. In all the history of the world, "Uncle Dow," as he is best known, Charles V., of Spain and a Japanese gentleman are the only examples of those who have had their funeral sermons preached while they lived.

Uncle Dow takes life easy. He never worries about anything. That is perhaps the reason he has lived so long. At eighty-six, he can take a tramp like a young man and there is nothing that he enjoys more than a festive occasion. He has outlived all the enmities of life and having a competence, he has nothing to worry about. He resides in New Boston with a grand-daughter, Mrs. Thomas Lantz, and does not permit a wave of trouble to roll across his peaceful soul.

Colonel John McDonald

was born in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, January 28, 1775. His father was William McDonald and his mother Effie McDonald, a distant relative. He was the first born of his parents and had four brothers: Thomas, James, William and Hiram and two sisters: Nancy and Henrietta. Nancy married George Duncan McArthur and Henrietta married Presley Morris. His grandfather, Thomas McDonald was a shepherd in Scotland, born near Lock Shin. He came to America in 1772. William McDonald, father of our subject, was a soldier of the Revolutionary War and about 1780 crossed the mountains and settled in the Mingo Bottoms near Steubenville, where he remained until 1798, when he removed to Washington, Kentucky, where he lived a number of years. He then settled in Ohio. He died near Chillicothe on the 6th of September, 1823, and his wife died on the 10th of September following. They were buried side by side on Fruit Hill. The husband was seventy-eight and his wife sixty-eight.

Our subject learned to be a woodman while his father lived at Steubenville. He was a contemporary with Simon Kenton, General Nathaniel Massie and others, well known pioneers of Ohio. He was so anxious to go with parties from Washington, Ky., to pursue Indians, that on one occasion, he stole a rifle and joined a party going in pursuit of the Indians. In the spring of 1792, he joined General Nathaniel Massie's settlement at Manchester and was engaged in many dangerous expeditions. During the Indian war, his life was one of extreme hardship and constant peril. He was a boatman, a hunter, a ranger, and a surveyor. In 1794, in Gen. Wayne's campaign he was a member of a company of seventy-two men, commanded by Capt. Ephraim Kibby. It was their duty to traverse the country in every direction in front of the regular army.

McDonald was a man of the most unquestionable bravery, persevering and wonderfully ingenious and surveyed over the entire Virginia district. He was skilled in woodcraft and had a thorough knowledge of Indian habits and tactics. He was courageous enough to attempt any task and he was judicious enough to conduct it to a successful issue. He was of short stature, broad built and heavily muscled and had great physical power and ability to resist fatigue. He was agile and active and always on the alert. He was married on the 5th of February, 1799, to Catharine Cutright, and in 1802, settled on Poplar Ridge in Ross County.

He was elected several times as Justice of the Peace and served as a militia officer, being Captain, Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel. When the war of 1812 broke out, he enlisted in the first regiment of Ohio Volunteers and was immediately made Paymaster General of the army. He went to Dayton where he accepted this appointment and there was made quartermaster of the regiment and served in both capacities until General Hull's surrender. In 1813, he was made a Captain in the regular army. In 1814, he was a Colonel of volunteers. He remained in the service until peace was made in 1815.

He entered the Ohio senate December 7, 1816, from Ross County and served at the 15th and 16th legislative sessions. On December 20, 1816, Lawrence County was organized. During his second session of service, on December 2, 1817, Brown County was organized and Hocking County was organized December 17, 1813. He removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, sometime prior to 1825 and resided on Front street with his family. In that year, he was Captain of one side in a great squirrel hunt, which took place in Scioto County. On March 7, 1837, he was elected a councilman of Portsmouth, for three years, by 27 votes and had no opposition. He served the first year on committee on streets with Doctor Hempstead. In 1828, he was on the committee to repair the public well. November 28, 1829, he vacated his office and William Hall was elected to succeed him. In the year 1827, he was Assessor for Scioto County. He returned to his Ross County farm on Poplar Ridge, late in 1829, where he spent the remainder of his days.

In 1834, he began writing his sketches of the pioneers with whom he had been familiarly acquainted. They were first published in the Western Christian Advocate and four of the more important biographies were published in book form in 1838, and known as "McDonald's Sketches." The prospectus of his work was published in the Portsmouth papers. When published it sold for seventy-five cents but the books are rare now and a copy sells for five dollars. He was not an educated man but he possessed a strong and vigorous mind. As an author, he was very modest and was very reticent in regard to himself, a matter much to be regretted by readers of this day who would like to know more about him. His work was valuable beyond his fondest hope, and has given him a place in the minds and hearts of the thinking people of the present time, which he never thought to fill. His early years were spent in the midst of excitement, toil and conflict. The later years of his life were occupied in the promotion of public good and almost every work of material and moral improvement and every benevolent enterprise found in him an unselfish friend and warm supporter. He died September 11, 1853, after a long and lingering illness, having survived his wife over three years and his intimate friend General Nathaniel Massie over forty years.

Col. John McDonald had the following children: Effie, born on the 15th day of January, 1801, married Henry Core, November 11, 1817; Maria, born on the 14th day of December, 1802, married White Morgan, March 20, 1820; Henrietta, born on the 4th day of December, 1804, was never married; Nancy, born on the 6th day of December, 1806, married Enos Gunn, September, 1827; Mary Tetter, born on the 8th day of July, 1808, married David Core, March, 1833; John Cutright, born November 26, 1809, married Hannah Tetter, January 17, 1833; Margaret, born on the 20th day of March, 1811, died July 7, 1814. Elizabeth, married to John B. Morgan, October 7, 1820.

Captain John McDowell

was born September 24, 1798, near Winchester, Virginia. His father was Doctor William McDowell, who was born in Ireland and died in Chillicothe, Ohio, November 11, 1841, in his 81st year. His mother Rachel McClintick was born in Philadelphia and died in Chillicothe, in 1831, in her 60th year. In 1806, his father removed to Chillicothe. In 1818, our subject joined the Methodist Episcopal church. He was married September 20, 1820, to Mary Whiting Jefferson.

He came to Portsmouth, Ohio, on January 1, 1821, with his personal goods, overland in wagons and loaded them on a keel boat to go further west. After they were loaded the boat was snagged and sank in shoal water near the shore. Their goods were somewhat damaged by water and they took them out and put them in an empty warehouse to dry out, intending to resume their journey. While waiting for their goods to dry, John McDowell concluded to try to sell some goods and met with so much encouragement, he concluded to remain in Portsmouth. He was a zealous and earnest member of the M. E. church and lived his religion every day. In 1821, he was appointed a class leader in the Methodist church and took part in organizing the first Sunday school. This Sunday school met at the Academy on Fourth and Market streets until 1834, when the church on Second street was built, after which it was held there.

In 1827, he was a Captain of a Light Infantry Company of the Ohio Militia and served five years. In 1823, he was an Overseer of the Poor of Wayne Township and was such in 1826 and 1834. In 1832, he built the steamboat "Diana," and ran her as master. He and Captain Davis built the "Scioto Valley," a fine side wheel boat. In 1834, he was in the Commission business with James W. Davis as McDowell and Davis and was associated with him for many years. In 1836, he purchased of C. C. Hyatt and moved into the Moses Gregory property on the north side of Third street and remained there until he moved into the William Knowles residence on Second street, built by Captain Frank Oakes. Then the B. Kepner property on Second Street was bought, and the family afterward resided there. In 1839, he was inspector of the schools.

In 1839, he kept ferry across the Ohio at Portsmouth and paid a license of $50.00 per year. He was to cross every half hour in daylight from May to December, and every hour the remainder of the year. In 1840, he was Treasurer of the Portsmouth and Columbus Turnpike Company. In 1842, he was agent of the Columbus Insurance Company. In 1842, he was elected mayor of Portsmouth and served two years. In 1846, he was active in the Sons of Temperance. He was County Infirmary Director from 1848 to 1854; 1865 to 1868 he was County Commissioner. In 1853, he and Captain A. W. Williamson established a wharfboat and paid the city $295 per year wharfage. In 1861, he was Captain of a Military Company, known as the "Silver Grays." No man under forty-five years could be a member. From 1873 to 1875, he was one of the City Infirmary Directors. He built the three story brick on Front street, just south of the Washington hotel. For years he conducted a commission business in Portsmouth.

In his political views he was first a Whig and afterwards a Republican. In his church, he was esteemed one of the Saints on earth, and in the latter years of his life was affectionately referred to as Father McDowell. He was one of the few men as to whom everyone agreed that his life accorded with his professions. In his latter years, had anyone inquired as to the best man in Portsmouth, in virtues, Father McDowell's would have been the first name used. He was a citizen whose memory should be sacredly cherished by his townsmen as the record and exemplification of all the Christian virtues. He died March 20, 1876, leaving a widow, five sons and two daughters.

David Nevin Murray

was born in Gallowayshire, Scotland, May 23, 1814. His parents were John Murray and Hannah (McKean) Murray. He was reared on a farm and received a good education in his native country. When a lad of seventeen, having a desire to try the fortunes of the new world, he embarked for the United States, and landed at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, in July, 1831. There he clerked in a wholesale dry goods and hardware store for three years. In 1834, he removed to Brighton, Beaver County, Pennsylvania, his father's family, having come to America and located at that place. He was engaged as a clerk there until 1837, at which time his father removed to Morgan County, Illinois, and he came to Portsmouth and became a member of the hardware firm of McNairn & Murray and so continued for six years. After the dissolution of this partnership, Mr. Murray carried on the hardware business for some twenty-five years, thus making thirty-one years in which he was engaged in the hardware trade. In 1854, he with Messrs. Ward & Stevenson erected the machine shops and foundry in Portsmouth, now owned by the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine works. In 1857, Mr. Ward sold out and the firm was Murray & Stevenson. In that year, Mr. Murray offered to sell the whole property for $10,000, but could not. It was to avert the panic of that year that he offered so low. Afterwards when he sold out, he received $138,000 for his interest from Moore brothers. These shops built the cars for the railroad from Portsmouth to Hamden, then known as the Scioto and Hocking Valley Railroad. When that company failed, Murray & Stevenson were their creditors to the amount of $69,000 of which the firm lost some $9,000. In 1855, Mr. Murray built the Portsmouth Rolling Mill, assisted by James W. Davis and Charles A. M. Damarin. They each put in $10,000. They afterwards took in seven more partners and made the capital stock $100,000. In 1857, it went down and its debts were paid by five out of the ten partners, Mr. Murray being one of the five. In 1862, he and other prominent business men of Portsmouth undertook to get a National armory at Portsmouth but failed. In 1871, he was interested in building the Portsmouth Agricultural Works, which failed in 1874. In 1875, he organized the Citizens' Savings Bank of Portsmouth, and at the outset owned half its stock, and was its president. He was a member of the School Board as early as 1849. In 1882, he was elected president of the Board of Education and served several years as a member and was also its treasurer. From 1875 until 1880, he was a member of the Board of Health and was for two years president of the Board of Trade. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church for forty-two years, and a teacher or superintendent in the Sunday school for forty-seven years. He was the first man to introduce the plan for the superannuated ministers' fund in his church. He was also the first to establish a young men's prayer meeting in the Presbyterian church in Portsmouth. He was a staunch Republican. His first wife was Isabella McNairn, whom he married May 23, 1839. She died April 28, 1849, leaving three children: Joseph, now in Grand Rapids, Hiram B., a resident of Portsmouth and Mary deceased. May 14, 1850, he was married to Harriet White, daughter of Josiah White of Hadley, Massachusetts. There were seven children of this marriage; the survivors are: Emma, the wife of J. Boyd Herron, of Chicago, Ill.; Addie, the wife of John Naesmith, of Marion, Ind.; Lucile, the wife of William A. Harper of Portsmouth, and Maggie, the wife of Mr. Kerner living in Columbus. Mrs. Harriet Murray is deceased. Mr. Murray died August 13, 1895. At one time, he was worth $100,000, but lost every cent of it before his death.

was born in 1778 in Virginia. In 1809 he was a commissioner of the County and served as such until 1823, a period of fourteen years.

In 1810, 1815, and 1817, he was a supervisor of Wayne Township. In 1817 he was also a Justice of the Peace of Wayne Township. In 1818 he was an overseer of the poor. He was a Colonel of the Militia. He appears to have been a popular citizen, capable and highly appreciated.

He died June 27, 1828, in the 50th year of his age and is buried in the Noel graveyard on the Nicholas Gable farm. Mrs. Joseph Briggs is a granddaughter of his.

Aaron Noel

was born in Scioto County, Ohio, July 13, 1807. His father was Philip Noel, a native of Pennsylvania, and his mother's maiden name was Susannah Putnam, a native of Virginia. His parents had thirteen children, Aaron being next to the youngest. His father emigrated from Virginia in 1798, with his wife and seven children, Peter, John, Philip, and Jacob P., Mary, Solomon and Catherine. After his location in the northwest territory, Isaac, David, Margaret, Aaron and Elijah were born. Philip Noel came to Wheeling by land and thence to the town of Jackson, from there he removed to Oldtown. He was a weaver by trade and a great hunter. He died in the year 1849, at the age of eighty-five years, and his wife died October 11, 1851. Aaron's four brothers, Peter, John, Philip and Jacob P., were in Captain Roup's Company, in the war of 1812, and were surrendered by Hull at Detroit. Aaron worked on the farm until he was of age, and he also learned the trade of a baker, and worked at it for his brother, Jacob P., in Portsmouth, Ohio, for eight years. Aaron Noel never saw window glass till he was five years old. His father's house till that time had greased paper for lights. In 1814, his father built a frame house, where Michael J. Noel now lives and it was used for an inn for thirty-eight years. In 1831, he traded on a boat on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, selling dry goods, groceries, etc. In 1832 to 1835, he conducted a dry goods store in Portsmouth, Ohio. After that, he went back to farming. August 15, 1844, he was on the Whig Central Committee. October 8, 1867, he was elected County Treasurer on the Democratic ticket, and he served one term. The vote stood Charles A. Barton, 2,344; Aaron Noel, 2,503; Noel's majority, 159. In October, 1869, he was again a candidate for County Treasurer, but was defeated. He received 2,078 votes to 2,530 for his opponent, Charles Slavens, his son-in-law, majority of 452. He has been a trustee of Clay Township a number of times. In 1886, he owned 600 acres of land within four miles of Portsmouth, all highly improved. He was married June 3, 1832, to Catharine Ann Orm. She died February 25, 1864. They had eleven children. His son, Nathan Milton was drowned in the Scioto river, November, 1855, aged twenty-two years, three weeks after his marriage. His older children: were Josiah O., Ann Eliza, married Henry Briggs, John Philip, Elizabeth S., Aaron T., Mary C., married Charles Slavens, Jacob S., Oscar B., Maggie J. and Sarah M. He was a Whig during the continuance of that party, and then became a Democrat. Mr. Noel died April 1, 1895, on the same farm on which he was born. He was a very generous man and hospitable. He was firm in his convictions and not easily moved. He could be led but not driven. He was remarkably charitable to the poor. He was never anti-slavery in his views and this fact caused him to join the Democratic party when the Whig party dissolved. He was a man of great public spirit and in favor of public improvements. He gave the Scioto Valley Railway the right of way through his lands, a distance of three-fourths of a mile. Mr. Noel was a very agreeable companion and was always disposed to make the best of every situation. He accumulated much wealth in land and money and was very liberal with it to his children, to charity and public enterprises. He was the last survivor of the early Scioto Valley farmers, a hardy race who conquered the forest and gave their descendants good estate.

Abraham Good Noel

was born in Scioto County, Ohio, six miles northwest of Portsmouth, January 29, 1809. His grandfather Peter Noel is said to have come to America from Holland, at the outbreak of the Revolutionary war and to have enlisted in that war from Virginia and served during the contest. After coming to this country he learned the trade of a weaver. In 1793, he removed to the Northwest Territory where he died.

His wife was Sophia Good and he had thirteen children, all of whom grew to maturity and married. The third of these, Peter, was fourteen years old when the family located in the Northwest Territory. He learned the trade of a gunsmith, which he followed much of his life. He was an expert marksman. He was in the war of 1812, and was a scout and guide. For this work of guide he was well adapted, for he was a thorough woodsman and could tell the points of the compass at night by feeling the bark of the trees. He was at Finley's block house, eighteen miles from Detroit, when notified of Hull's surrender and paroled. He was taken sick immediately after, and it is said that on recovering, he re-enlisted in the war of 1812, in which he was promoted to be a Colonel.

He left Ohio in 1850, and went to Will County, Illinois, where he died in the spring of 1851. He was a large land owner in Ohio, at the time he left the state. In politics, he was a Whig and it is said that in 1840 there were 76 Noels in Scioto County who voted the Whig ticket. In the militia he commanded a company of riflemen and he was a great hunter.

In 1833, our subject and two others were out hunting at the time of the shooting stars, which made the night light as day, an interesting phenomenon which our subject vividly recalls. In the month of October, 1833, Peter Noel, father of our subject, shot 47 deer and our subject 37, while one was shot by both, making a total of 85, which suggests that there ought to have been a law for the protection of game at that time.

Peter Noel, father of our subject, married Susannah, daughter of Joseph DeFeurt, said to have belonged to the nobility of France, who came to America, and served in the Revolutionary War. He settled in New Jersey and afterwards removed from there to Ohio, making the trip in the same boat with Peter Noel. Peter Noel's children were Joseph, Abraham G., Mary, Sophia and Mercy, all of whom are deceased.

Our subject obtained what was then considered a good, practical education in the subscription schools. November 9, 1837, he married Evelina Glasscock, the daughter of Gregory and Elizabeth (White) Glasscock, the latter a cousin of Zachary Taylor. Her father, Warner White, a native of Virginia, but for years a resident of Ohio, served in the Revolution. She was born and reared in Brown County, Ohio.

After his marriage, Mr. Noel bought a farm and began life for himself. In 1844, he removed to Indiana, and to Will County, Illinois in 1848. Since 1850, he has resided in Joliet or near there. He was a farmer until 1885, when he moved to town. For many years he served as a school trustee in Joliet, and was regarded as a man of good judgment and had great influence in his community. In his political views, he was a Republican.

He had five daughters: Mary, the wife of Lewis Linebarger, a banker of Orient, Adair County, Iowa; Sophia L., died in 1890; Susanna E., the wife of Joseph Campbell, a grain dealer of Lacon, Illinois; Sarah, married James Watkins and is now deceased; Melvina M., widow of Carlos F. Long, resides at Joliet. He has four grandchildren: H. Norwood Linebarger, a banker at Greenfield, Iowa; and Sarah E. Linebarger, the wife of A. A. Wright, a banker of Kent, Iowa; Ethel M. Campbell, a water color artist of New York city and Harry Noel Campbell, who resides in Chicago. He also has four great grandchildren.

Mr. Noel died February 5, 1902, aged ninety-three years, at his home in Joliet, of injuries resulting from a fall. He furnished the account of the shooting stars on November 13, 1833, which is published in this book. He also furnished a list of the animals, birds, trees and plants of this county when he was a youth, which will be found herein. He was a citizen highly respected at Joliet and was noted for his honor and integrity in the whole course of his long life.

Philip William Noel

was born on the George Davis farm, September 16, 1824. His father was Solomon Noel and his mother Mary Huston, daughter of Joseph Huston.

His education was obtained by attending a country school, a month and a half each winter, commencing in December and quitting in February to make maple sugar. He lived in the Davis Bottoms till he was eight years old. He was run out in 1832 and moved to the Hereodh farm. In 1834, he moved to where he now lives.

He was elected Clerk of Clay Township in 1847 and served fourteen years. He was treasurer of the Township for ten years. He was county Treasurer from 1860 to 1864 and Auditor from 1865 to 1869. He has always been a Republican and was formerly very active in politics.

He was married January 3, 1830, to Harriet Oldfield, daughter of Judge Oldfield. She died February 13, 1851, leaving one son, John F., still living. He was again married April 3, 1861, to Miss Sophia S. Chase. She died June 14, 1873, leaving three daughters: Janette C., Anna Sophia and Elsie Catherine.

Joshua Oakes.

Joshua Oakes was born at Haverhill, Scioto County, Ohio, January 11, 1826. His father, Ephraim Oakes, was born at Long Island, February 1, 1796, and came to Ohio when about twenty-one years of age, being one of the early settlers, suffering the hardships incident to pioneer life, and in the course of time amassed a considerable fortune. He lived to see a large family of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren bear his name, dying at the ripe age of ninety-two. Joshua Oakes, his eldest son, soon after attaining his majority, went to Illinois, where he operated a saw mill for three years. Returning to Ohio, he purchased the ferry at Haverhill, running it for seven years, when in 1857 he bought a farm of two hundred acres in Green Township, on a portion of which he now resides. On this land, in 1877, he erected the tile factory which has since grown to extensive proportions, and is one of the thriving enterprises of the county.

January 10, 1850, he was married to Temperance, daughter of Jesse Marshall and Mary Gervais Serot Marshall, who was born June 21, 1791, at the French Settlement at Gallipolis, and who has always been claimed by her relatives and descendants to have been the first white child born in that settlement. Her parents, Marie Avaligne and Peter Serot, were married in Christ church, Alexandria, Va., just after landing in America. In token of her being the first white child born, she was given two town lots and a half dozen solid silver teaspoons and table spoons, each inscribed with her baptismal name, "Mary Gervais," by the members of the French colony.

Joshua Oakes and Temperance M. Oakes were the parents of eight children, all of whom are living: Mary C., the wife of Charles W. Austin, residing in Lawrence County, Ohio; A. Davis, Oscar F., and Frank E., residing on the home farm; Ella T., the wife of Samuel Mathes, residing at Charleston, West Virginia; Elona O., the wife of Elmore Musser, and A. Elmore, residing at Portsmouth, Ohio; and C. Henry, residing at Yazoo City, Mississippi. The mother passed to her reward, at the age of seventy-two years, on March 10, 1901, after having celebrated with her husband, the fifty-first anniversary of their marriage. Joshua Oakes is still vigorous in mind and body, is a practical farmer, a prosperous manufacturer, a good citizen and a kind parent.

Doctor Jacob Offnere

was born October 4, 1775, in Virginia. His father was Samuel Offnere, a native of the Canton of Berne in Switzerland. His mother was Sarah Carpenter, only daughter of a Dr. Carpenter of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He studied medicine with her father. The name Carpenter is a translation of the German name Zimmerman which was the name the family bore in Germany. Dr. James Offnere was the eldest son and he studied medicine. When he came to Scioto County, he had his diploma as a Doctor of Medicine, a horse, saddle, bridle and saddle bags. At the close of his life he was in as good circumstances as any one in Portsmouth. One of his mother's ancestors was a Dr. Zimmerman, physician to Frederick the Great of Prussia.

Samuel Offnere lived in Lancaster County, Pa., and was the owner of "Wheatland," the estate afterwards owned by James Buchanan. He was ready to endorse for his neighbors, and lost all he had, including "Wheatland." Everything was sold and he died. His wife then began the practice of medicine and thus supported herself and children. Her sons Jacob and George came to Portsmouth. Dr. Jacob built a brick house on his farm near the river, the present Damarin farm, and was residing there in 1816. When he moved to Portsmouth, in 1823, he built a red brick house on the street just east of the first alley above Market street on Front street. It had a hall through the center and a large flower garden back. Mrs. Harriet Damarin was married in that house. They had three children, a daughter Caroline and a son Samuel, both of whom died young.

He did not practise his profession subsequent to 1830. He had a natural adaptability for business and followed it. He was conservative in all matters prudent and economical. He knew when to buy and when to sell, but he did very little selling. He invested in real estate as opportunities offered and held it as did his descendants after him, until now it is in the possession of the third generation.

The first official recognition of him at Portsmouth, was in 1810, when he was elected treasurer of Wayne Township and refused to serve. In 1817, he was elected township road supervisor and served. He evidently wanted good roads and to keep out of the mud, and to do so was obliged to accept the office. From 1819 to 1823, he served as county Treasurer being appointed in June of each year. In 1820, he served as township Clerk of Wayne Township. In 1823, the town authorities appointed him and Drs. Waller and Hempstead to investigate the slaughter houses, then being conducted in Portsmouth, with a view to report to what extent, if any, they affected the public health. Their report was not a matter of record. In July, 1823, he was elected a member of the town council, but refused to serve. In 1824, he was one of the three health officers of Portsmouth, the others being physicians. This particular Board of Health officers was the beginning of a Board of Health in Portsmouth, and it was suggested by Mr. Samuel M. Tracy, the year previous.

In 1825, Dr. Offnere was supervisor of the East ward in Portsmouth, being all that part of the town, east of Market street. The office was then the same as street commissioner now, but for only one-half of the town. In 1823, he was elected treasurer of Wayne Township and was re-elected each and every April thereafter, except 1836 until 1842, when he retired and was succeeded by William G. Whitney. Apparently he was elected without opposition. A singular thing occurred in 1836. John Smith, grandfather of our Col. Floyd L. Smith was elected by 71 votes to 15 for Doctor Offnere. Doctor Offnere was not a candidate in seeking the office and whatever may be the cause of his being dropped in 1836, the Township was sorry for it and re-elected him in 1837, and thereafter until 1842.

His wife, Mary Harness, was born October 4, 1775, and died April 9, 1843. He never married. His daughter Harriet married Charles A. M. Damarin and his grand children are the well known members of the Damarin family.

In 1820, he was carrying on a nail factory in Portsmouth. In 1839, he was a Director of the Commercial bank in Portsmouth. In 1840, he was a Health Officer in Portsmouth. His principal business in Portsmouth was conducting a mill which stood on what is known as the York place. In this business, George Corwine was his partner for a long time and the firm was Corwine & Offnere. They were in business many years and were quite successful. Doctor Offnere had the faculty of King Midas. He was always successful in business. He was exact and precise in all his business methods and far seeing.

He had a patent from the United States for the 400 acres constituting fractional section 14, township 1, range 21, what is now the Damarin farm, and there has never been a conveyance of it since the patent. It descended to his daughter and from her to her children.

His interest in Wayne Township is easily accounted for. He owned considerable real estate in the eastern part of the Township and was desirous of good roads and improvements. Doctor Offnere bought real estate to a considerable extent, but the author cannot find that he ever sold any. He held what he purchased and it descended to his heirs. He was a prominent Mason and contributed liberally to build the present Masonic Temple. He was a useful and valuable citizen and contributed much to the material progress of the town of his adoption. He died December 12, 1859, aged eighty-three years, seven months and twenty-three days.

was born March 28, 1774, near Hagerstown, in Maryland. His parents were from England, and the name was originally thought to have been Arms. He was married to Elizabeth Graham, about the year 1798, at Hagerstown, Maryland. They had eight children, the first seven of whom were born in Maryland. John Orme, his wife and seven children came from Hagerstown, Maryland, to the Ohio river at Wheeling, in wagons. They traveled muddy roads and country with no roads at all, climbed over hills, and forded rivers and creeks till they reached the Ohio river. Then he purchased a family boat and went in it to Portsmouth, where he rented what was then called the Offnere farm near Gallia and Offnere streets. His family lived there in a log house for several years and then they purchased land about four miles north of Portsmouth on the Chillicothe pike, and moved there. John Orme was a tall man, fully six feet high, wore side whiskers, and had a slight stoop in the shoulders.

His eldest son was Thomas Orme, born in 1799, and died February 18, 1872. His second son, Nathan, married Margaret Noel, daughter of Philip Noel; his son, John Orme, married Philura Hayward, daughter of Moses Hayward. He was a farmer in the Scioto Bottoms. His children were: Martha E., wife of A. B. Cole; Sarah, married to Charles O. Cole; George W., married Effie Fenton, and died at the age of twenty-six, leaving two children, both now deceased; Mary Jane, married to James Richardson; Lloyd, married to Elizabeth Hayward, another daughter of Moses Hayward; Mary, married to Isaac Noel and Eliza married Aaron Clark, who was born September 12, 1817, in Portsmouth, on Offnere street, in a log house near the mound, on the Heinisch lot.

John Orme cleared up his land and resided on it till his death on the 25th of March, 1844, at the age of seventy-six years, one month and twenty-seven days. He and his children went through the hardships of the early settlement of the country. He paid for his land by hard work, and at his death he owned the largest portion of Big Island. In order to do this, each of the boys and girls had their share of work to do. Eliza, being the youngest, had to do the marketing. She walked four miles or more to Portsmouth and carried a big basket of eggs and a half dozen chickens to market. She says she sometimes rode horseback, if one of the horses happened to be idle. Eggs were three cents per dozen and other things were in proportion. When there was no marketing to carry to Portsmouth, she worked at the spinning wheel, or worked on the farm. She says she was never idle, as there was always plenty to do. She remembers when the old Methodist church stood on Fourth and Market streets. It was a one story brick church with two fire places for burning wood. She remembers two of the ministers: Mr. Brown, of Kentucky and Mr. John R. Turner. The school house where she attended was on the Alpheus farm about five miles from Portsmouth. It was a small log house with benches made out of slabs with wooden pins for legs. One log was taken out for a window and the vacant space was covered with greased paper. Some years they had school for three months. The teacher boarded week about among the families. She says he never forgot to have a switch, which he kept in the corner of the school house and used it as though he thought he had to. Mrs. Clark is living at this date, August 31, 1902.

John Orme was a Democrat, but was not a member of any church. He was an upright, honorable citizen and well respected by all who knew him. He tried to do his best for his large family of children. He made them all rich, and his grandchildren are enjoying the fruits of his labors at this day.

was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, February 9, 1801. When about seventeen years of age, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and on July 20, 1826, married Rhoda Kendall, daughter of General William Kendall. She was born December 9, 1808, and died April 19, 1837. Their children were: Elizabeth (Mrs. Hughes) born May 6, 1827, died May 8, 1901, aged 74; Eleanor (Mrs. A. Marsh) born April 16, 1829, and died May 25, 1901, aged 72; William born September 16, 1831, died September 9, 1834. On August 23, 1838, he married Rachel Kendall, the youngest sister of his first wife. She died October 30, 1874. To them were born John W. who after a residence of sixty years in Portsmouth removed with his family to Columbus, Ohio, where he now resides; Rhoda, who died in infancy; Ewing K., who resides in Rush Township, Scioto County; Thomas J., who resides in Buffalo, New York; Emma, who married Peter Brown and resides in Rush Township, and George who resides in Waterville, Douglas County, Washington. From 1830 to 1834, he was Sheriff of Scioto County. From 1838 to 1839, he was Treasurer of Scioto County. In 1832, he was elected County Assessor. At that time there was an unwritten law that the Sheriff should also be County Assessor. In 1833, his bill as assessor was \$57.75. His assessment roll as returned was \$10,974.06 $\frac{3}{4}$ cents and the commissioners cut his bill to \$51.04. In 1834, he again assessed the County and his fees for the same was \$61.40, for 41 days labor. In 1835, he was elected councilman of the town of Portsmouth and re-elected in 1836. He was on the committee on claims, in 1835 and in 1836. In 1839, he was Captain of the steamboat "Post Boy." From 1849 to 1852, he was assessor of Wayne Township. He resided in Portsmouth until 1864, when he removed to a farm in Rush Township and spent the latter part of his life there. He was employed for a number of years with the grocery firm of M. B. Ross & Company. He was a member of the dry goods firm of Kendall, Kepner & Company, and for a number of years was connected with the flour mill (which property is now occupied by the Times Publishing Company) run by C. S. Smith & Company. He was a Whig and afterwards a Republican. He was a member of the Methodist church and when he removed to Rush Township was instrumental in building a church there. He died October 31, 1872, and was buried on his farm. Afterwards his remains were removed to Greenlawn Cemetery. He was respected by all who knew him.

John Peebles

was born near Shippensburg, Pa., November 21, 1769. His father, William Peebles, was a Captain in the Second Battalion of Miles' Pennsylvania Rifle Regiment, March 9, 1776. He was taken prisoner at Long Island, August 27, 1776, and died while a prisoner October, 1776.

He spent four hundred pounds sterling to raise and equip his Company and was repaid in continental money only.

John Peebles was married November 17, 1795, to Margaret Rodgers, a native of Shippensburg, Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, born May 17, 1777. They came down the Ohio river on a flat-boat in 1807. They stopped at Portsmouth, Ohio, near the mouth of the Scioto, and went on to Chillicothe, where they remained until April 2, 1819, when they came to Portsmouth in a keel boat in the Scioto river.

Mr. Peebles stopped with his family at the Hotel on Front street, and the same day purchased it. The next day was Sunday, and he and his wife attended the Presbyterian church. They put their letters in that Sunday and remained members all their lives. He believed in the doctrine of the final perseverance of the Saints and practiced it.

They had a family of nine children, William, the oldest, died July 24, 1829, aged 33 years, and was the first person buried in Greenlawn Cemetery. Rachel Rodgers, the wife of Robert Hamilton, died August 27, 1883, at the age of 83 years. Elizabeth, the wife of Dr. G. S. B. Hempstead, died April 11, 1875, aged 75.

years. Fanny Denny died at 16 months at Shippensburg, Cumberland County, in Pennsylvania, November 11, 1804. Jane Finley, wife of Robert Wood, died November 1, 1875, aged 69 years. Richard Rodgers, died August 8, 1893, aged 83 years. Margaret Rodgers died at Portsmouth, Ohio, September 17, 1822, aged 11 years. Joseph Scott, died at Portsmouth, Ohio, July 8, 1893, aged 73 years. John Geddes died October 30, 1901.

John Peebles was a cabinet maker by trade. He followed that and a commission business and conducted a hotel.

In 1819 and 1820, he was engaged in making iron nails. They were made by hand, and sold from forty to sixty cents per pound.

In 1822, he was Overseer of the Poor of Wayne Township.

In 1824, he was Supervisor of the East Ward in Portsmouth, and a health officer of the town the same year.

The first Board of Health in the town of Portsmouth was composed of John Peebles, Jacob Offnere and Ebenezer Corwin. In 1824, he was appointed by the County Commissioners as Custodian of the Standard Measures of the County. He was appointed by the County Commissioners House Appraiser of Wayne Township, and was allowed $3.75 for his service.

In 1825, he was Assessor of Wayne Township, and was allowed $4.00 for his services. The taxes collected in that year were $205.48.

In 1826, he was Overseer of the Poor and a Trustee of Wayne Township.

In 1828 and 1833, he was also a trustee of the Township.

On July 17, 1828, he was one of the jury in the celebrated case of Jackson vs Clark, reported in 1st Peters, 666. This case was heard in Columbus before Judges Robert Todd and Charles Willing Byrd. Mr. Peebles' business often took him to Columbus during the sessions of the United States Court there, and he was frequently called as a juror. The verdict in the case was sustained by Chief Justice Marshall.

In 1828, he was Secretary of the County Agricultural Society.

In 1830, he was conducting a hotel in Portsmouth, which he called the Portsmouth hotel, at Glover's old stand, corner of West and Waller streets.

In 1832, he was a director of the Columbus and Portsmouth Turnpike Company.

In 1836, he was a Commission Merchant in Portsmouth and agent of the Protection Insurance Company of Columbus. He kept his office in with his son-in-law, Dr. Hempstead.

He died at Hanging Rock, Ohio, October 22, 1846. His wife died at the same place, August 28, 1847.

William Peebles,

the eldest son of John Peebles and Margaret Rogers, his wife, was born November 16, 1796, in Pennsylvania and came with his father and mother to Ohio in 1807. When they located in Portsmouth in 1819, he was twenty three years old, and the hotel business was carried on by him in his name in Portsmouth for some time.

In 1826, he was fence viewer of Wayne Township with John R. Turner as his colleague.

In the same year he received one vote for Justice of the Peace and John Noel had 32. He died unmarried July 24, 1829, and was the first person interred in Greenlawn cemetery. His remains were taken up when Mr. John G. Peebles purchased his family lot in Evergreen cemetery and now repose in the family lot with an appropriate headstone.

John Geddes Peebles

was born on a small farm on Lick Run, five or six miles from Chillicothe, Ohio, November 30, 1813. His father, John Peebles, one of the pioneers of Portsmouth, has a sketch herein. His mother was Margaret Rogers, fully mentioned in the sketch of her husband. His parents located in Portsmouth, Ohio, April 3, 1819.

Our subject, John G. Peebles, attended the primitive schools of the village of Portsmouth until he was fourteen years old. He then entered the dry goods store of his uncle, John McCoy, at Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1828, and continued there in a clerical capacity for eighteen months, when he returned to Portsmouth to assist his father in his hotel and commission business. In the summer of 1831, his father was appointed Deputy Marshal and sold his hotel. Then young Peebles clerked on the steamboat "Hermit" and was afterward in the employ of A. B. Ellison and Charles Scarborough. In 1836, he took two flat boats loaded with stone to New Orleans for Lemuel Moss, whose employ he had entered in 1833 as clerk and manager at the quarry mills. Moss was engaged in the manufacture of sawed stone. In 1836 he left this position and started a store on the West Side with Captain Francis Cleveland. He closed his store when the panic of 1837 came and moved his stock to a flat boat and traded along the river for about a year and then sold out what goods he had left and returned to Portsmouth, where he worked for Colonel John Row until 1842.

This year he removed to Pine Grove Furnace where he worked at the carpenter's trade. While thus engaged he studied the iron business and so well did he learn it that he was made General Manager of the furnace in 1844. Mr. Peebles continued in this position for about ten years, during which time he accumulated a small capital. In 1854, he and his brother, Joseph Scott Peebles, and Samuel Coles, bought a half interest in Pine Grove Furnace and the Hanging Rock Coal Company. In 1864, this interest was sold to Thomas W.

Means and others. In 1860, our subject became the successor of James Rogers, as president of the Iron Bank of Ironton, Ohio, which position he filled until the bank merged into the First National bank of Ironton, when he became its president, and so continued until his removal to Portsmouth.

During his residence in Lawrence County, he was interested in other enterprises than those mentioned, the most important of which were the Belfont Iron Works Company at Ironton, Ohio, the Ashland Coal Company, the Ashland Coal and Iron Ry. Company and the Lexington & Big Sandy R. R. Company. Mr. Peebles changed his residence from Ironton to Portsmouth, August 28, 1865. Two years later, in partnership with Sherman G. Johnson and Benjamir B. Gaylord, he built the hub and spoke factory of Portsmouth, the firm being Johnson, Peebles & Company, and later sold his interests to Josiah H. Roads and Sherman G. Johnson. Mr. Peebles was a stockholder in the Portsmouth National Bank from its formation, later he became a director and on the death of George Johnson, in 1875, was elected President. He held that position until his death.

After coming to Portsmouth to reside, Mr. Peebles retired from the more active sphere of business life, in the sense that he did not engage in new enterprises. He continued, however, to look after the interests that he already had, with the shrewdness and ability which always marked his business dealings. A large part of his time was devoted to work along charitable lines. As an instance of this, he bore a prominent and influential part in securing the establishment of the Children's Home, and served continuously as president of the Board of Trustees of that institution for twenty-five years. He avoided all political positions, and, although solicited often, never accepted any position in the gift of the people. He has, however, held appointive positions.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Peebles was a Republican from the time the party was organized, and previous to that time was an old line Whig. He was a faithful and consistent member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, and contributed liberally toward its support.

Mr. Peebles was married June 10, 1835, to Miss Martha Rose Steele, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Nine children were born, five of whom reached maturity: Robert, Secretary and Treasurer of the Ashland Coal and Iron Railway Company at Ashland, Kentucky; John, formerly of the firm of Reed, Peebles & Company, Portsmouth, Ohio; Margaret J. and Mary E. who reside at the Peebles home on West Second street, Portsmouth, with their mother; Richard R. who recently died at Wooster, Ohio.

Mr. Peebles was killed instantly on the afternoon of October 30, 1901, by being run over by a trolley car going west on Second street, at the corner of Second and Washington streets.

Notwithstanding he was in his eighty-eighth year, his faculties were well preserved and he filled all the positions he occupied with credit and ability to the last. At the time of his death, he was president of the Portsmouth National Bank, President of the Belfont Iron Works of Ironton, Ohio, and Vice President of the Ashland Coal and Iron Company of Ashland, Kentucky. He took an active interest in many matters of public interest. He was deeply interested in the Presbyterian church and in the enterprise of the preparation of this book. Mr. Peebles had not lost his interest in anything going on around him on account of his age or his infirmities. He was not willing to admit that he had any infirmities, at his advanced age, and his unwillingness to depend on others in going about cost him his life.

He was a man of the most positive convictions. When he would investigate a matter and make up his mind on the subject, that ended it, but he was always open to conviction and if any one approached him on a matter and it was meritorious, he could interest him in it. He had a wonderfully keen insight in business affairs. His integrity was most strict. He had remarkable executive ability, was a shrewd observer and his acquisitions and knowledge were extensive. In every matter of business or social duty, he was prompt, and never forgot anything incumbent on him to do. As a business man he had phenomenal success, and accumulated a fortune. He made the very best use of it; his charities and beneficences were innumerable. They were carefully and meritoriously bestowed and were given or made without any ostentation. When Portsmouth lost this prominent and distinguished citizen, it lost one of its most useful and valuable business men. This fact was shown in the attendance at his funeral. No larger or more numerous attended funeral was ever held in the city of Portsmouth. Distinguished people from neighboring towns and cities attended to show their respect for his memory. All who knew him well felt as if they had lost a friend and more than a friend.

Joseph Scott Peebles

was born at Chillicothe, Ross County, Ohio, June 19, 1817. His father, John Peebles, has a sketch herein. Our subject was two years of age when his parents removed to Portsmouth. He attended school till fifteen years of age, finishing at the old seminary that stood on the corner of Market and Fourth streets, Davis and Archibald being the teachers. After leaving school, he spent a few months with his brother, John, who was bookkeeper and financial manager of Lemuel Moss's flour and stone mill at the Three Locks, and a few months with G. J. Leet, agent for the Troy & Erie Canal boats. He was then a year or two with William Hall, of Portsmouth, where he learned the dry goods business. He next went with his brother-in-law, Robert Wood, who was in the supply business, on the corner of Front and Madison streets (the Lodwick corner) ; and afterwards on the corner of Jefferson and Front streets.

In 1836, Mr. Peebles went to Hanging Rock to take charge of the store owned by his brother-in-law, Robert Hamilton, which was connected with Pine Grove Furnace.

During the years 1842, 1843, 1844, after Mr. Hamilton had become exclusive owner of Pine Grove Furnace, he associated with him John Ellison, the manager of the furnace, James A. Richey, his bookkeeper, and Joseph Scott Peebles, under the firm name of Hamilton & Company. In 1844, Messrs. Ellison, M. R. Tewksbury and Richey purchased Jackson Furnace, Ohio, and Mr. Peebles, in company with Robert Wood and Thomas Martin, built the Hanging Rock Foundry, and carried on business under the firm name of Peebles, Wood & Company. This business proved very successful.

In October, 1850, John F. Steele, the junior partner and bookkeeper of Hamilton, Peebles & Company, died, and Joseph was solicited to take the position thus made vacant, with the promise of an interest at some future day. In 1854 the new firm was formed, consisting of Robert Hamilton, John G. Peebles, Samuel Coles and Joseph Scott Peebles, the firm name being Hamilton, Peebles & Coles. September 11, 1856, Mr. Hamilton died, and the business was carried on eight years longer under the same name, and in 1864 was sold to Messrs. Kyle & Company.

April 30, 1864, Mr. Peebles removed to Portsmouth, and with his brother John G. and others bought the Ashland coal and railroad property including a large number of iron and coal mines. They opened the coal banks at Coalton, and built a coal furnace at Ashland. A year later, Joseph Peebles' health becoming impaired, he sold his property to his brother, John G., and traveled a year through the Eastern and Southern states. In June, 1866, he returned to Ohio, and went to Lebanon where he purchased the Corwin property, and remained there till June, 1869, when he purchased a residence at 49 Wesley avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

He was married April 8, 1851, to Nancy Finley Lodwick, daughter of Colonel John Lodwick and Hannah Finley, his wife. They had but one child; William, now deceased. September 28, 1874, he went with his son William, who had been appointed vice consul by Hon. James S. Scott, United States Consul to the Hawaiian Islands. On December 1, 1875, he returned to San Francisco and took a steamer for Japan, traveling through the countries of the Eastern continent, and returned to America October 28, 1876.

After his return, he visited all parts of his own country, and has been in thirty-six of the states, of the United States. In 1884, he was a stockholder in the Portsmouth Steel and Iron Works, Portsmouth, and the Peebles, Foulds & Company flour mills, Cincinnati, Ohio. March 18, 1860, Mr. Peebles united with the First Presbyterian church at Hanging Rock. His first vote was for Wilson Shannon, Democratic Governor in 1838. He voted for Van Buren, Polk, Cass, Pierce and Buchanan for presidents. In 1860, he changed his politics and the rest of his life voted for the Republican candidates. He died July 8, 1890, aged seventy-three. His wife died October 23, 1881, aged sixty-one years.

Nathaniel W. Preston

was born near Danvers, Massachusetts, April 17, 1817. His father died when he was a babe and his mother in company with eighteen others, emigrated to Ohio, in 1820. They landed at Hayport, near Wheelersburg, Green Township, December 20, 1820. There were nine adults and eleven children in the party, among them were Rev. Daniel Young, his brother, John Young, Joseph and Asa Merrill. Mr. Preston's mother, Mrs. Jane Preston, reared two sons, Nathaniel and Ira. She lived a long life of great usefulness and died June 22, 1879, aged 83 years. From December 20, 1820, at the age of three years, he lived on the banks of the Ohio river at Hayport, in Porter Township and led the life of a plain and simple farmer.

He was married February 19, 1850, to Mary Ann Holmes, who survived him. He never tried to make money and never did so, but always had enough of this world's goods to be comfortable. He was always cheerful and always cordial. No man was more attached to his friends than he. He never had a dishonest thought. In fact, he was too honest with his neighbors and gave them the benefit of the doubt all the time, instead of reserving it for himself. He believed in simplicity in living and lived in that manner all his life. He was not a member of any church. He often compared himself with his brother Ira and thought himself very wicked. He would sometimes say "damn it" but he possessed all the Christian virtues in an eminent degree. No kinder hearted nor more sympathetic man ever lived. He was always in earnest in all he did. He loved his country and would have given his life for it on a second's notice. In his political views, he was a Republican and strong anti-slavery. He died May 23, 1901, at his home near Wheelersburg, Ohio.

was born in Dedham, Massachusetts, in 1818. His father died a few months before his birth and when he was two years old his mother took him and another son, Nathaniel, thirteen months older, the long and then very difficult journey to Wheelersburg, Ohio, to join her father, who had gone there some time before to secure land for a home. Ira grew up there helping in the farm work, but considering himself not strong enough to be a farmer, he went to Marietta to fit himself for a position as clerk in a store in Portsmouth, Ohio. He very soon became a Christian and his conversion changed all his plans for life. He decided that he must preach the Gospel and that he must have a thorough education. He entered Marietta College in 1841, graduating in 1845. He went to Lane Theological Seminary, graduating there in 1848. He had some time before this decided to go as a missionary to the heathen, choosing as his field, West Africa. On the 29th of May, 1848, he married Jane Sophia Woodruff of Marietta, and soon after sailed for the Gaboon Mission in Equatorial Africa. After nineteen years of service under the A. B. C. F. M., he returned to this country, broken in health. His health improving, he taught school for several years. He was tutor in Marietta College for three years. He was a man of great fortitude, bearing hardships and trials without a murmur, always a singularly upright, conscientious man. After years of great feebleness, he died in Marietta, February 7, 1901.

was born July 14, 1801, in New York state. In October, 1830, he was County Assessor of Scioto County and John Peebles, G. S. B. Hempstead and James Lodwick were on his bond. On June 7, 1831, he was allowed $56.81 for his services as Assessor. September 16, 1831, he was a candidate for Sheriff in Scioto County, Ohio. In 1832, he was County Assessor. The total expense was $68.37½ of which his bill was $49.00. 62½ cents was for two quires of ruled paper and $18.75 for Ira Preston for 12 days as deputy. April 3, 1841, he was appointed Assessor of damages on the Portsmouth and Columbus turnpike, by the County Commissioners.

September 30, 1827, he was married to Eliza Ann Smith, daughter of Major John Smith. She was born February 15, 1807. Her mother was a sister of Doctor Lincoln Gooddale of Columbus, Ohio, and daughter of Major Nathan Gooddale, who was abducted by the Indians. Their children were: Hezekiah Squire Pixley, born July 8, 1828; Edwin Pixley, born June 10, 1830; Mary Ann Pixley, born November 17, 1832; Susan Gooddale Pixley, born February 20, 1835; Eliza Ann Pixley, born January 7, 1838; Eliza Ann Smith Pixley died January 14, 1838.

June 20, 1838, Seymour Pixley married Elizabeth Orme, widow of Lloyd Orme. Her maiden name was Hayward and she was a daughter of Moses Hayward. Their children were: Charles Lloyd, born May 6, 1839; William Henry Harrison, born August 20, 1840; Milton Smith, born June 2, 1842; Martha Hannah, born February 5, 1850, married Joseph Merrill, January 20, 1874, and died September 13, 1901. Elizabeth Orme died August 3 1857, and Seymour Pixley died October 16, 1860, on his farm on the Ohio river near Wheelersburg on which he had lived for many years.

Ezekiel Powers, Sr.,

was born October 11, 1793, in Harrison County, Virginia. His father was John Powers, a Revolutionary soldier, who married a daughter of William White, a native of Ireland. About 1802, he went with his father to Butler County, Ohio, where they lived for several years. The family returned to Virginia about 1810, on account of ill health. When the war of 1812 with England commenced, Ezekiel, with his father, joined the First Virginia Militia, in Harrison County, Virginia and went to the war. He was afterwards granted a pension for his military services.

The records of the War Department at Washington show that John Powers, Sr., grandfather of our subject and father of John, Jr., served as a private in Capt. Thomas Meriwether's Company of Light Infantry, First Virginia regiment, Revolutionary war, from September 14, 1777, to March 4, 1778, when he died.

His son John, Jr., also served in the Revolutionary war in Capt. William Hoffler's Company, First Virginia state regiment, from March 1, 1777 to April, 1780. He and his son, Ezekiel, Sr., our subject, afterward served in the war of 1812. The former was a member of Capt. John E. Brown's company, 1st (Clark's) regiment of Virginia militia, from February 11, 1813, to June 25, 1813, when he was killed in action at Hampton, Va. The latter served in Capt. John McWhorter's company of infantry, 1st Virginia militia from September 16, 1812 to March 29, 1813.

Ezekiel and his father escaped from the British at the time of Hull's surrender, and traveled across the state of Ohio, most of the time in the night, to avoid hostile Indians. They sustained many hardships, living upon the inner bark of trees and ground nuts and found their way to the Ohio river at the mouth of Guyan river, West Virginia, where a camp of hunters in Virginia heard them and constructed a raft on which they were taken across the river. When the raft was near the Virginia side, a band of Indians, who had been in pursuit, came yelling through the willows on the Ohio side and fired at them, but without effect. Their clothing was almost worn from their bodies from struggling through the dense brush at night, their moccasins entirely worn out, their feet bleeding, and they were almost starved. They were well cared for by the hunters who proved to be from near Clarksburg, their home, and with whom they returned. Young Powers had hunted about Guyan river before and had met the famous Davy Crockett and heard from him many incidents of his career as an Indian fighter. On his second removal to Ohio, he settled in Portsmouth, where he resided but a short time. He then removed to the mouth of the Little Scioto river, where he lived for several years.

In 1815, Ezekiel, Sr., was married to Jane Simpson, daughter of James Simpson and Jane Van Sickle, of Harrison County, Virginia, who were themselves married on the day of the first battle of the Revolution, in Sussex, County, New Jersey.

His first child, Sarah, was drowned at the age of two years, in 1818, by falling down the steep bank into the deep water. His son, James was born October 7, 1818. He married and lived at Lexington, Indiana, many years, but now resides at Dehesa, California. His second son, John Simpson was born October 13, 1820, and went to California in 1848, and has lead the life of a miner and prospector ever since. He now resides in Dehesa, California. He joined the First California Regiment, United States Volunteers, war of 1861 and served until its close. A second daughter, Harriet, born March 13, 1823, was married to William Campbell, at Lexington, Indiana, and resided there. She died February 14, 1900. The third son, William Powers was born October 6, 1826, was Captain in the Mexican war of a company of Louisiana Rangers, and in the war of 1861 to 1865 was Captain in the Twenty-second Indiana Volunteers. He died May 30, 1901. Ezekiel Powers, the fourth son, was born October 9, 1828, on Bonset's Run. He died at Sciotoville, October 14, 1894. George Read Powers, the fifth son, was born July 27, 1832, near Sciotoville. He went to Indiana when a young man. He joined an Indiana Regiment in 1861, and served until 1865. He resided at Madison, Indiana. Jane Simpson Powers, the wife of our subject, died at Wheelersburg, June 28, 1838.

Ezekiel Powers, Sr., was a stone mason and worked upon the first bridge across Little Scioto river at Sciotoville. He also worked on the Ohio canal, near Chillicothe. He was a Democrat until the war of 1861, when he became a Republican. He was a devout member of the Methodist church and took great interest in the welfare of the church. He was postmaster in Wheelersburg from 1839 to 1843. He owned 160 acres of land near Sciotoville upon which he discovered fire clay, which in 1861, he brought to the notice of Mr. Thomas, a fire brick manufacturer of near Wheeling, West Virginia, who soon organized a company, procured the old Wilcox saw mill at the narrows at Sciotoville and converted it into the first fire brick works in Scioto County.

He married again in later life. He died in Wheelersburg, January 15, 1876. He was a citizen respected and honored by all who knew him.

John Walter Purdum

was born April 15, 1815, in Cumberland County, Maryland. His parents were Zadock and Matilda (White) Purdum, both of whom were born in Cumberland County, Maryland. His ancestors emigrated from Wales to America in the time of Cromwell; his mother was of English ancestry. In 1817, his parents, in company with a colony of relatives and neighbors, came to Ohio and located in Ross County, near Chillicothe. His father located and cleared a farm in the Paint Creek Valley, where he spent his boyhood; but upon the death of his parents, while he was yet a lad he went to Chillicothe where he learned the trade of carpenter and joiner. In 1832, on the opening of the Ohio canal, he came to Portsmouth.

October 9, 1838, he was married to Eliza, daughter of John Ratcliff who was a prominent citizen of English nativity. She died in 1854. Of this marriage, were born eight children, all of whom died in childhood, except Harriet who died in 1863; John W. Jr., who died in 1870, and Annie E., who died in 1899. April 10, 1855, he was married to Sarah Pursell, who was born in Burslem, Staffordshire, England February 3, 1824, and was a sister of James Pursell, one of the pioneer merchants of Portsmouth. She survived him and died August 10, 1894. Of this marriage, four children were born, two dying in childhood, Martha A., dying in 1880, at the age of 22 years, and James P. Purdum, who is a practicing attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio.

From 1832 until 1880, Mr. Purdum engaged in contracting and building in Portsmouth, during which period he constructed many of the largest and finest public and private buildings in the city.

In 1885, he built, and for some years afterwards operated, what was then one of the largest planing mills in the Ohio Valley. This mill was located on the north side of Fourth street between Chillicothe and Gay streets. The panic of 1857 and the war of the Rebellion made its operation unprofitable and he sold it to James Bryson who converted it into a flour mill, which he operated for several years.

Mr. Purdum was a Whig and Republican and prominent in the councils of those parties, but never sought public office. On several occasions, however, he served as a member of the city council. He was an early, earnest and consistent member of the First Presbyterian church, in which he served as an elder. On the organization of the Second Presbyterian church, he and his family became members of that congregation. He died at Portsmouth, Ohio, September 7, 1891.

James Pursell

was the son of Charles and Ann Pursell, born at Burslem, Staffordshire, England, March 11, 1817. At the age of fifteen, he left his native place and went to Liverpool where he embarked for the United States on the 19th of January, 1831. He arrived in this country on the 8th of March, 1831, and went to the home of his uncle, Thomas Pursell, a queensware merchant in Washington, D. C. There he remained until 1835, and obtained an excellent business training in his experience with his uncle.

While in the city of Washington, he made the acquaintance of Mr. Mathias B. Ross, of Portsmouth, Ohio, who was much impressed by his observation of Mr. Pursell. Mr. Ross offered him a position in his dry goods house in Portsmouth, which he accepted and he remained with M. B. Ross & Co. in the dry goods business until 1839, when he engaged in business for himself. In 1842, he opened a branch store with Karns Laughlin in charge, and another in 1847 with Lon Heaton in charge. In 1850, he built and moved into his own building in Enterprise block. In 1852, he divided his business of queensware and dry goods and took James F. Towell in the dry goods business with him and James Y. Gordon and Thomas J. Pursell in the queensware business.

On March 16, 1843, he married Miss Amanda Thompson, of Wheeling, West Virginia, daughter of Sarah Cowles and Moses Swan Thompson. In October of 1856, while in the east purchasing goods he contracted a cold which resulted in consumption and he died on the 22nd day of March, 1856. His wife survived him with six children, who are noted under her sketch.

Mr. Pursell was always noted for his integrity, in all his dealings. He had great business talent and was very successful. He was one of the most active and energetic citizens who ever lived in the city of Portsmouth. His death was a calamity, not only to his family, his church and social circle, but to the community at large.

Mrs. Amanda Pursell

was born at Wheeling, West Virginia, April 30, 1821. She was a daughter of Moses and Sarah (Cowles) Thompson. She was one of a family of seven children, six sisters and a brother, Dr. John Thompson. She came to Portsmouth with her parents, and on March 16, 1843, was married to James Pursell. He died March 22, 1856, in his thirty-ninth year.

A few days after the departure of Company G, the first Ohio troops to answer the call of President Lincoln for volunteers, she organized the first Aid Society in the state and began making comforts, clothing, lint, etc., for those whom she felt would need such assistance. Soon after the first engagement, the remains of the boys were sent home for burial, and she and her co-workers were instrumental in having public funerals, such as had never been witnessed in southern Ohio. Soon thereafter, she and some thirty other mothers adjourned to Greenlawn cemetery and held a memorial service, decorating the graves of the fallen heroes. This occurred as early as 1862.

This womanly organization has honored the dead and themselves, by each year strewing flowers upon the three hundred graves at Greenlawn cemetery, until now there are only five or six of them left to impress upon the youth of the land the lesson of patriotism and of commemorating the memories of the heroic dead. She may justly be regarded as the originator of our beautiful memorial day exercises.

Later on she organized the Monumental Society, and was largely instrumental in the erection of the Soldiers' Monument in Tracy Park. Still later, realizing that the country's need was men, and, being a widow with no sons of suitable age, she had her agent hire a substitute, paying $800 therefor, and sent him in answer to one of the calls for volunteers.

She was the mother of six children, two of whom are deceased: Charles T. and Henry P. Those surviving are Mrs. Julia P. Rupel and Mrs. Edward Ricketts of Cincinnati, and William McLain, of Portsmouth, and Morris H. She was a prominent worker in Bigelow M. E. church. She died March 10, 1895.

William Raynor

was born in Leeds, England, October 4, 1810. He married a sister of Joseph Micklethwait, in England and came to the United States in 1831. His wife died soon after he reached this country, and he married Miss Mary Kinney Barber, in 1833. She died in 1864. Their children were: General William Raynor, now of Toledo; Uri Raynor, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Maria, widow of the late John B. Maddock. For a third wife he married a Mrs. Munn, a widow, daughter of Major Isaac Bonser by whom he had one child, a son Charles, of Sciotoville. He was a shoemaker by trade, but in his latter years he was a gardener. Mr. Raynor was, during his life in Portsmouth, a well known and highly respected citizen. He was a man of energy and great industry. He was thoroughly domestic in his habits and very hospitable. Nothing delighted him more than to entertain his friends in his own home. His greatest pleasure was in making his family and those around him comfortable and happy. He died March 4, 1878.

Major Charles Frederick Reiniger

was born in Wurtemberg, in Germany, November 11, 1805. His father educated him, expecting him to become a Lutheran minister. However, the son's tastes were all military, and at 18 years of age, he went into the military service and served until he was promoted Major. In 1830, he went to Montreal, Canada. Here he engaged in the butchering business for one year and then went to Cleveland, Ohio, penniless and a stranger. In 1831, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio.

In 1833, he married Barbara Suiter, daughter of Valentine and Frances Suiter. He had thirteen children, eight of whom survived him, four sons and four daughters. The sons were: Charles Frederick, Jr., Joseph, Louis and George. Joseph and Louis are now deceased. Charles F. lives in Portsmouth and George lives at Washington Furnace. His daughters are Mrs. Jacob Bender, Mrs. Samuel Culbertson of Portsmouth and Mrs. Frank Seth of Parkersville, Kansas.

When he first came to Portsmouth, he worked in the Gaylord mill at 75 cents per day. He conducted the butchering business for a while, and for a time he ran a canal boat to Cleveland. In 1837, he began to build the National hotel at the Point, but did not finish it till 1844. It was the finest hotel in the city, and cost $30,000. He ran it with his brother-in-law, William Briggs until 1852. It was a mistake to build it and a greater mistake to have built it at the point. It never paid and never could be made to pay. In 1840, he organized the Washington Guards and was Captain of the Company from 1840 to 1860. He was a city street commissioner in 1849; and the same year was supervisor of Wayne Township. In 1852 he was a Justice of the Peace of Wayne Township.

In 1860, he organized the Steuben Guards, twenty-four of whom afterwards went with him into Company B of the 56th O. V. I. Major Reiniger was born with military tastes. He was every inch a soldier. When the Civil War broke out, he was fifty-five years of age, yet he organized Company B, of the 56th O. V. I. as its Captain. He entered the regiment August 7, 1861, and served as Captain of Company B, till May 2, 1863, when he was promoted Major. He was discharged October 27, 1864, by reason of his age and physical disability.

In 1865, he was a candidate on the Democratic ticket for County Treasurer against John L. Ward. He received 1902 votes and Ward received 2,130, making a majority of 228. He was always a Democrat in faith and practice. Personally Major Reiniger was a fine looking man. He had the most determined expression on his face. His features were large, regular and handsome. When in the height of his physical powers and dressed in his uniform, he looked every inch a soldier. He loved the profession of arms, and had he followed it he would have acquired great distinction. He was a good and loyal citizen, but had no qualifications as a man of business. He died in November, 1880. His wife survived until August 17, 1888.

Joseph Riggs

was born near Amity, Washington County, Pennsylvania, July 2, 1796, the eldest son of Stephen and Anne Baird Riggs. He had four brothers and six sisters. His father removed to near Steubenville, Ohio, when he was a child; and later to Sardinia, Ohio, where both he and his wife are buried. In August, 1817, our subject left his home near Steubenville, Ohio, to visit his uncles James and Moses Baird in the Irish Bottoms in Green Township, Adams County. While there he was offered the position of clerk in the West Union bank, kept by George Luckey. This position he accepted on December 31, 1817; and in coming from Steubenville to Manchester traveled on a flat boat.

While living at West Union he was a great friend of lawyer Geo. Fitzgerald, and frequently borrowed his fine horse to ride to North Liberty to court Miss Rebecca G. Baldridge, daughter of Rev. Wm. Baldridge. On January 1, 1819, he was elected cashier of the West Union bank; and on December 8, 1819, he married Miss Rebecca Baldridge, before named. Soon after they joined the Associate Re-form church, at Cherry Fork. He served as cashier of the West Union bank until 1823. On March 1, 1824, he was appointed Auditor of Adams County, Ohio, to serve an unexpired term. He was elected, and re-elected; and served from March 1, 1824, until the fall of 1831. In 1831, he was appointed a deputy surveyor of the Virginia Military District of Ohio, from Adams County. While holding that office he made a connected survey of all the lands in Adams County, and made a map of that county which remained in the Auditor's office till it fell to pieces from age. Mr. Riggs was an accomplished surveyor, but when or where he learned the science we are not advised. He resigned the office of Auditor on October 3, 1831, to accept the office of State Senator from Adams and Brown Counties, to which he was elected as a Democrat in 1831, and served until 1833. In the fall of that year he moved to Hanging Rock, Ohio. He remained there until 1837, when he removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, where he resided the remainder of his life.

On reaching Portsmouth in 1837, he and his wife connected with the First Presbyterian church, and he was ordained an elder in 1838. He served until February 9, 1875, when he connected with the Second Presbyterian church. He was at once made an elder in that church, and continued as such during his life.

In 1837, he opened a general store in the city of Portsmouth, and continued in that business, either alone or with partners, for many years. He was a man of substance and of excellent business qualifications. In March, 1838, he was elected to a township office in Wayne Township, in which was located the town of Portsmouth. He was elected a member of the city council of Portsmouth, March 3, 1838, and continued in it, with intervals, until 1868. He was elected Recorder of Portsmouth April 10, 1838, and served until March 15, 1844, and again from March 17, 1848 to March 16, 1849. He was county surveyor of Scioto County from 1839 to 1841. On May 21, 1838, he was appointed on a committee to secure an armory at Portsmouth. He was surveyor of the town of Portsmouth from November 7, 1845 to March 7, 1849, and again from 1852 to 1854. On December 4, 1846, he was appointed one of the first infirmary board of Scioto County, Ohio, and served by subsequent elections till 1852, and during that time he was clerk of the Board. In 1860, he engineered the construction of the tow path from the city of Portsmouth to Union Mills, and charged $70.00 for his entire services. In 1867, he was president of the city council of Portsmouth. He was usually on the committee of ordinances, and was one of the most useful members of the council. He was responsible for most of the city ordinances and general legislation during his membership of council.

Rebecca G. Riggs, wife of Joseph Riggs, died April 3, 1862. Twelve children were born of this marriage. The oldest, Mrs Rebecca A. Kendall, resides in Oakland, Cal.; Eliza, deceased, was the wife of L. Newton Robinson, who commanded Battery L of the First Ohio Light Artillery during the Civil War; Mary died in infancy; Harriet, wife of Robert Dunlap, Jr., died in Pittsburg, Pa.; James W., was killed in a railroad accident on the Scioto & Hocking Valley R. R., in 1857; Martha, widow of J. V. Robinson, Jr., who was Major of the 33rd Ohio Infantry during the Civil War, resides in Florida; Stephen B., is engaged in the real estate business in Emporia, Kansas; Samuel A. and Joseph E. are lawyers at Lawrence, Kansas; Charles H. is connected with the Union Freight Line at Pittsburg, Pa.; Alexander Brown is a professor in Lane Theological Seminary at Cincinnati, Ohio; Emma, the youngest child, died in 1848, at the age of three years.

He was a public spirited citizen, and was so recognized. When any delegation was to be sent on a public mission by the city authorities he was usually one of it. In 1869, he retired from all business, and lived quietly until his death on July 28, 1877, at the age of 81 years, 26 days. He was a just man, a consistent Christian, and a most valuable citizen.

Ephraim Wanzer Rickey

was born in Porter Township, Scioto County, Ohio, October 4, 1820. His parents were Jacob and Tryphena (Strong) Rickey, who came from New York to Scioto County, in 1817. They landed at Scioto-ville. There they remained four years, and then removed to the flats of Madison Township. Jacob Rickey was a Baptist Minister and for forty-five years preached in this county. He died at the age of 72. His wife was a teacher, and after her marriage taught subscription school in Madison Township.

Ephraim, through his mother's efforts, received some advantages of education which most others, of his cotemporaries did not have. He was married July 19, 1841 to Annie, daughter of Jonathan and Rebecca (Mead) Rockwell, of Madison Township. She was born October 21, 1821, in Madison Township. Mr. Rickey engaged in farming until 1873, when he removed to California, Pike County, and commenced dealing in merchandise and live stock, which he continued for several years. He returned to his farm about 1881 and in 1894 removed to Harrisonville, where his wife died April 17, 1896. The following were their children: Rose, Etta, wife of Nathan M. Kent of Harrisonville; James Silas, who has a sketch herein; Telina, wife of Thomas M. Kent, living in Madison Township; Jacob Frank, living on Duck Run, and Nathan Thomas, who has a sketch herein, and is a real estate agent in Portsmouth. Mr. and Mrs. Rickey lost four boys and one girl in childhood. After the death of his first wife he lived with his son, James S. Rickey until his marriage to the widow of Thomas Campbell, of Morgan Township, April, 1900. His second wife died November, 1901, and since that time he has lived on his farm in Morgan Township. He is now 82 years old, and enjoys good health. He was a Whig and took an active part in the elections of that party. He was one of the very first Republicans in Madison Township when there were only eight votes all told out of four hundred, and has been a Republican ever since. He is a believer in Christianity, and the Seventh Day Adventists express his belief nearer than any thing else. He has a clear conscience, and is ready for the world to come.

Captain William P. Ripley

was born near Madison, Indiana, February 26, 1824, a son of William P. Ripley, who located in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1833, where he died in 1845. Captain Ripley commenced life by selling fruit, etc. at the wharfs, when boats landed. He then worked on the canal about four years, and when thirteen years of age, was engaged as cabin-boy on the river. He worked in that capacity for two years, and then was in a grocery and saloon, with his brother-in-law, William Sickles, about nine years. He was subsequently employed on the river boats as chief engineer, cook, bottle washer, and mud clerk. He attended to business and was promoted till he became a master. In 1857, he was Captain of the "Reliance," and in 1858, of the "Swallow." In 1860, he bought an interest in a steamboat. In 1861, he was Captain of the "Moses McClellan." In 1865, he went into the wholesale liquor business, but in 1870, sold out and returned to the river. He built the "Jim Fisk," Jr., in 1870, and sold her the next year. He afterwards bought an interest in the "Kanawha Belle," and in 1873, was Captain of the "Fannie Dugan." He then had an interest in the "Mountain Belle" and was Captain six months. He owned a tug-boat that was commanded by his brother. He sold this boat but afterwards bought it again at a United States Marshal's sale, and of it made the "Iron Duke," which he soon sold. Captain Ripley has been an energetic business man, and made a success of his undertakings. For a number of years he has been retired from all business, and made his home with his son-in-law, Thomas B. Nichols.

He died October 19, 1902.

Joshua Vasant Robinson, Sr.,

was one of the most successful merchants and business men who ever resided in Portsmouth. He first came to Portsmouth about March 29, 1829, and opened a general store which he conducted for years, either alone or with his sons. He was for a long time an insurance agent conducting that business in connection with merchandising. He was largely interested in the Scioto furnace at the time it was most flourishing. He never interested himself in politics, though he was a Whig and afterwards a Republican. He bought and sold real estate, but like Jacob Offnere, he was mostly a buyer and he died possessed of a large quantity of valuable real estate.

He took a great interest in the public schools, and was a school trustee from 1838 to 1845. While a member of the board, he gave the minutest attention to his duties, and the reports made, while he was one of the board, were models of accuracy. They gave all the information any one could ask. In 1830, he built a brick residence on the northeast corner of Second and Court streets. There was a great yard connected with it and weeping willows stood in the yard. A portion of the brick house is yet standing in the rear of the premises cast of Otto Zoellner's jewelry store.

In 1838, he built and occupied the residence now occupied by the Peebles-Hamilton Reading Rooms. This he occupied for his family home until his death. He was greatly instrumental in building the Scioto and Hocking Valley Railroad, in 1857. In 1842, he was a director of the Portsmouth Insurance Company. He was director in every business enterprise in Portsmouth while he was in active life. In the Scioto and Hocking Valley Railroad, the Commercial Bank, and in the Portsmouth branch of the State Bank of Ohio, he was a director. He was President of the latter from its organization, March 1, 1847 until January 7, 1850.

He was born October 18, 1790, and died on Sunday evening January 8, 1865, at the residence of his son-in-law, Col. J. R. Turley, aged 74 years, 2 months, 20 days. He was in apparent good health and attending to business on the day previous to his death. The funeral services took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Bigelow chapel. His wife, Hannah Cooper, preceded him about one year. She was from Coopersville, N. Y., born and reared a Quaker. The following were their children: Lucien Newton, Joshua V., Jr., Lewis Cooper, Cornelia M., wife of Hon. Wells A. Hutchins, Charlotte, wife of Col. John A. Turley, Mary Ellen, wife of Daniel A. Glidden, Camilla, who died young, and Charles Henry.

Captain Lucien Newton Robinson

was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, March 19, 1817. Soon after, his parents removed to Evansville, Indiana. In 1829, his father's family came to Portsmouth and he helped in his father's business. At the age of twenty-two, in May, 1839, he was married to Eliza Jane Riggs, daughter of the Hon. Joseph Riggs. From that date to 1841, he carried on a foundry, at Springville, Kentucky. He removed to Portsmouth in 1841, and engaged in steamboating and buying and selling corn. After his father purchased the Union Mills, he removed there and lived a number of years. The Distillery was built under his supervision, as was the Suspension Bridge. The date of his removal to Washington Township was 1848.

In 1850, he was candidate for Commissioner and was elected by a vote of 1,190 to 514 for Fullerton, his opponent, and served one full term of three years. On the 8th day of October, 1861, he enlisted in Battery L First Ohio Light Artillery, at the age of forty-four. His health was never good, but he managed to stay in the military service until November 12, 1862, when he resigned on account of physical disability. In the fall of 1862, he went off at a tangent and supported his brother-in-law, the Honorable Wells A. Hutchins for Congress, on an independent platform, "A more vigorous prosecution of the war." He, more than any one, was responsible for Mr. Hutchins election. He canvassed the entire district with him.

After his retirement from the army, he formed a company to distill oil from shale. He would have made a fortune out of it, but for the discovery of petroleum, just at the time he had the oil ready to put on the market, after the company had put fifty thousand dollars in it. In 1868, he was appointed Indian agent and went west. He soon had to give this up and ran a hotel at Emporia, Kansas. He was a member of the Kansas Legislature for a term.

He returned to Portsmouth in 1873 and was made mail agent. He ran for State Senator as a Republican in 1875 and was defeated by I. B. Monahan by ten votes. From this date, until his death, he was in poor health. He was a gentleman of very swarthy complexion, prominent features and he had a saturnine expression of countenance. His face in repose was as solemn as that of ten ministers on funeral occasions, but when he relaxed all that changed. He was an excellent political speaker. He could please the people and reach them and he was in demand in every political canvas when he would go. In 1859, he addressed Republican meetings all over the country. He was a very nervous man and full of energy.

He died on Fourth street, Portsmouth, Ohio, in the residence now occupied by Perkins Pratt, November 26, 1877, at the age of sixty years, eight months and seven days. His daughter, Kate married Mr. Harry Willard, of Wellston, Ohio. His daughter Camilla married first Eugene Bigler and after his death Joseph A. Modica. His son, Harry G. Robinson died June 2, 1876, aged 28 years, 8 months and 12 days, and is buried in Greenlawn. His daughter, Lucy A., is now Mrs. S. G. Clark. His son Frank H. Robinson is still living. His wife died August 11, 1886.

Mathias Baldwin Ross

was born in Lebanon, Warren County, Ohio, August 4, 1808. He received his education in the Lebanon school, and was a contemporary with Thomas Corwin. At the age of fifteen, he located in Cincinnati, and for some two years was a clerk in the store of George Graham. For the next two years, he was a clerk for his father, under John McLean, Post-master General, in Washington City.

In 1829, he came to Portsmouth, and embarked in the dry goods trade. On September 5, 1834, Havillah Gunn resigned as Town Recorder and Mr. Ross took his place. April 3, 1835, he was re-elected and he served until April 10, 1838. December 4, 1835, he was one of a committee of three in regard to the Ohio canal. The others were C. A. M. Damarin and Isaac Noel. On April 1, 1836, and March 27, 1837, he was re-elected Recorder. From his location in Portsmouth, he was engaged in a wholesale grocery and general commission business and continued until 1845, when he removed to Cincinnati, and engaged in the same business in Portsmouth. In 1869, he located in New Orleans and became general agent for the Erie and Atlantic and Great Western railroads, but fell a victim to yellow fever, and died September 20, 1878.

He was a remarkably well-preserved, fine looking man for his age, and a kind, noble-hearted husband and father. Both as a business man and as a citizen, he was greatly respected for his scrupulous honesty and purity of life. On June 29, 1843, he married Elizabeth D., daughter of Samuel M. Tracy, of Portsmouth. His widow and a daughter, Miss Alice Tracy Ross survived him, and resided in Portsmouth during the remainder of their lives.

Samuel Randall Ross

was born April 8, 1819, at Oxford, Chenango County, New York. His father was Samuel Ross, a graduate of Princeton College, New Jersey, and a contemporary of Theodore Frelinghuysen and N. S. Prime, the father of Ireneus Prime of the New York Observer. His grandfather, Andrew Ross, was a descendant of John Ross of Scotland, who was one of the first settlers of New Jersey. His mother's maiden name was Maria Randall. He was educated at the famous Oxford Academy, at Oxford, New York, and left his father's home at the age of twenty-four and located in Portsmouth, in the fall of 1844, where he has since resided. He first advertised as a grocer in Portsmouth, November 7, 1844. He bought the wholesale grocery business of his cousins, M. B. and J. W. Ross, and conducted it until 1857, when he retired from business until 1861. At that time he engaged in the wholesale tobacco business in Cincinnati with J. G. Kercheval, under the name of Kercheval & Ross, and conducted that for twelve years, when he retired.

He was married, September 7, 1847, to Miss Elizabeth Kinney, the eldest daughter of Washington Kinney and Mary Waller, his wife. Mrs. Ross died October 28, 1897. The following are the sur-living children: Miss Anna Ross, who resides with her father in the old home in Portsmouth, O.; George Kinney, who has a separate sketch herein, and Thomas Waller, of Cleveland, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross moved into the home in which Mr. Ross now resides at No. 310 Court street, in December, 1847, two weeks before the great flood of 1847. Mr. Ross has resided in the same house ever since, and he went through the floods of 1847, 1883 and 1884 in the same residence. The flood of 1847 was three feet deep in his residence. Mr. Ross in his well appointed home has been a greater dispenser of hospitality to distinguished visitors in Portsmouth than any other person in the city. He has entertained Bishop's McIlvaine, Bedell, Jagger and Vincent. His house has always been open to the Episcopal clergy and other clergy visiting the city.

Mr. Ross in his political views was first a Whig and afterwards a Republican; but never a seeker of any political preferment. He is a strong church man, and has been connected with the Episcopal church ever since he has been in Portsmouth. He was connected with the All Saints until the organization of the Christ church, and during the activity of that church he was a member of the vestry and a senior warden much of the time.

Mr. Ross has passed his 83rd mile stone, as he states it, but he has the most excellent health and a wonderful flow of spirits. He is the best of company, and delights in being in the society of his friends. Mr. Ross is one of those few men who make old age a delight. He has no infirmities. He is in the possession of all his faculties, and all the excellent qualities of mind and heart which he possesses have been enriched and developed by age and experience. His society and companionship is much sought after and highly appreciated among those who know him. He is the last survivor of the old time merchants of Portsmouth, Ohio. As an entertainer and a host, and a member of a reception committee, Mr. Ross never had any equal in Portsmouth; and it is the cordial wish of every one of his friends that he may live to see his 100th anniversary, in the same health and spirits which he enjoys at the present time.

was born in Northumberland County, Pa., in 1796. In 1808 his father removed to Circleville. There, at sixteen, he was apprenticed to Charles Cavalier to learn the saddlery and harness trade. In 1812 he was out in the war and was in Hull's surrender. In 1817, when he came of age, he married Susan Baltimore, at Circleville, and moved to Adelphi, where he set up a harness shop. In 1820 he removed to Richmonddale and began merchandising. He carried that on until 1832 when he moved to Waverly, Ohio, where he had a flour mill and carried on merchandising. In 1832 he was a director of the Columbus and Portsmouth Turnpike.

find to do until he was twenty-six years of age, when on the 27th day of May, 1840, he married Martha, daughter of Moses Hayward, a pioneer of Scioto County. They had three children: Harriet Jane, who died at the age of seventeen; Lora A., wife of Sam Bierley, of Portsmouth, Ohio; and George M. Salladay, who has a separate sketch herein.

Mr. Salladay by economy and careful dealing accumulated a fortune, chiefly in the rich bottom land of the Scioto valley. In 1884, he owned 767 acres and has accumulated much more since then. He was first a Whig, but since the organization of the Republican party has been a member of that. He and his wife have been members of the M. E. church since 1864. He has served as trustee of Clay Township. His wife died May 29, 1892. Since then he has been making his home part of the time with his daughter, Mrs. Sam Bierly and part of the time with his son, George M. Salladay. He died August 20, 1902.

Mr. Salladay made his fortune by strict attention to his own business. He was always just and honest in his dealings with others and expected the same treatment in return. He was always noted for his obedience to and respect for law and for the rights of others. His character has always been above reproach and criticism. He is one of the last survivors of the men who made the Scioto Valley what the present generation find it.

John A. Schafer

left Wurtemberg, Germany, September 19, 1819, for the New World. He was accompanied by his family, consisting of his wife, Sabina, his three sons and five daughters. They took a sailing vessel at Amsterdam, Holland, for the United States. After being out at sea for about a week the vessel sprung a leak and had to put into the port of Lisbon, Portugal, where they remained until December 24, 1819, when they again put to sea, bound for Baltimore, Maryland. They arrived there without further mishap on the 25th day of February, 1820.

Mr. Schafer had spent all of his means on the voyage and three of his oldest daughters were bound out at Baltimore from three to five years to pay for their passage, eighty dollars each. The others of the family proceeded by wagon to Brownsville, on the Monongahela river in Pennsylvania, and thence to Portsmouth, Ohio, by means of a flat boat. Mrs. Sabina Schafer died in 1821 soon after their arrival in Portsmouth.

In August, 1824, George Schafer, one of the sons, walked to Baltimore to bring out his sisters. He made the trip, one way, in fourteen days. This brother brought his two elder sisters out in a wagon. The younger sister remained in Baltimore eight years longer, and then came alone. In 1832, Mr. Schafer went to Indiana, settling in Hamilton County, where he remained until his death on the 8th day of July, 1870, aged ninety-five years, five months, and thirty-two days.

Captain Josiah Shackford

was born in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1736. He came to the location of Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1802, and intended to purchase the town site, but Henry Massie got ahead of him. The idea of founding the town of Portsmouth, undoubtedly originated with Captain Shackford. When he examined the location he saw it was a better one for a city than Alexandria. Henry Massie appreciated this fact, though he made no special examination till after his purchase. When Massie came to examine his purchase, he found Captain Shackford on the ground and the two became good friends. Captain Shackford suggested the town to Massie and its name, and Massie named his town Portsmouth, for Portsmouth, N. H., at Captain Shackford's request.

Captain Shackford was sixty-eight years of age when he landed at Alexandria in 1802, and he was the most self contained man who ever lived on the town site of Portsmouth. He brought no relation, or friend, when he came, but came alone in a boat. He never asked any favor of any one. He never borrowed any money, but always had it when he wanted to buy anything. He was a large man, had a large head, a prominent Roman nose, keen and piercing eyes. He had a wart on the bridge of his nose. In his youth, he had been a sailor, and was very fond of spinning yarns as to his voyages. While he talked freely of his sea-faring life, he kept still about his domestic and social affairs. Till he died it was not known whether he was a widower or a bachelor. There was much speculation as to his family history, and the women folks told a story of his disappointment in a love affair, but he kept a quiet tongue and enlightened no one. He had studied attending to his own business, till he had it reduced to a fine art.

After his death in 1829, one of his nephews came in to settle his estate and then something was learned as to his story. His father, Josiah Shackford, was married twice. The first wife was a widow named Eleanor Marshall. She has a grown daughter, Deborah, who came to live with her step-father. Deborah was attractive and comely and the usual result followed. Young Shackford fell in love with her, and married her. Shackford, however, was her second choice as she lost a lover, John Hart, by his premature death. Captain Shackford lived with Deborah, a number of years, and after a few years of sea-faring life, wanted to come west. She refused to leave her mother and he would not stay. He left and came to Portsmouth, Ohio. After his wife's mother died, Deborah wrote and offered to come to him, but he would not answer her letters and she was too proud to come uninvited.

In 1840, he participated in the great Masonic celebration of St. John the Baptist's Day. In 1845, he was Assessor of Wayne Township. On September 19, 1845, he was elected one of the school directors for the Second ward. His associates were J. L. McVey and Moses Gregory. On May 1, 1857, he was elected chief engineer of the fire department. April 11, 1859, he was elected president of the council, and re-elected April 9, 1860. March 18, 1862, he presided at the meeting at the Court House in Portsmouth with a view to secure a National Armory at this place. Senator Sherman introduced a bill to appropriate one-half million dollars for that purpose, but the measure failed.

Mr. Stevenson was a communicant of the All Saints church and a vestryman. He was a Democrat in his political views. His family home stood on Market street just one door above the present residence of John Lynn.

was born at Ayr in Scotland, in 1816, the son of Hugh Stewart, a miller, and Jeannette Forsythe, his wife. He was one of a family of five sons and three daughters. He was brought up in the strict Presbyterian faith, a son of the covenant. He was taught the trade of a stone mason and followed it in Scotland. In 1840, he came to the United States and worked at his trade in New York city. In 1842 he came to Portsmouth and engaged in the stone business on the West Side.

He built a stone saw-mill near the site of Alexandria, and carried on the business of quarrying and sawing stone till 1855. His health began to break down, and he felt he must go into other employment. In 1856, he purchased forty acres of the old Martin Funk land of his son, Jacob Funk, for $4,000 and moved on it. He occupied himself as a market gardener until his death.

He was married in 1844 to Miss Jeannette Bryden, also a native of Scotland. They had seven children. The eldest was Walter P., who has a separate sketch herein. His second child was Miss Jeannette, who with his son, Gilbert, his fifth child, have a pleasant home on the Stewart place. His daughter, Margaret, married W. C. Silcox and has one daughter, Jeannette. His daughter, Ella, married Le-grand B. Smith. She died in 1896, leaving two sons, Walter, now aged twenty-two and Stewart, aged fifteen. They make their home with their Aunt Jeannette and Uncle Gilbert. A son, William, is married and resides at Pomona, California, where he conducts a ranch. He has four sons and one daughter. His sons are: Jay, Wallace, Walter and Donald, and his daughter is Amy.

Mr. Stewart was an upright and just man. He was as fond of the bawbees as any Scotchman, but they had to be earned honestly and fairly. He was a typical Scotchman and his appearance and speech announced that fact wherever he went. He was a devout Presbyterian and fully believed in all and singular, the Westminster Confession. He not only believed it, but he lived it in his every day life. He was esteemed by all for his uprightness and sense of justice. He died July 26, 1870. His wife survived until July 14, 1901.

Levi Sikes

was born at Wilbraham, Massachusetts, on October 29, 1794. His father was John Jones Sikes, the Revolutionary soldier who is mentioned on page 212 of this work. His mother's maiden name was Sarah Sowles. The family left Massachusetts in 1801 and located in New York on the Genesee river. In the spring of 1804, the family came to Scioto County and settled at the mouth of Munn's run. He learned the brick-maker's trade and worked at that business from 1815 to 1822 in Portsmouth. In February, 1819, he married Mary Keyes, the daughter of Salma Keyes, who was born July 17, 1799. He had the following children: Malvina, married John Wait; Harriet; Eliza, married David Ball; James Sikes, born May 20, 1826, resides in Porter Township; Ruhama, died in infancy; Sarah, married Addison Batterson and died soon after her marriage; Melvin, the father of Frank L. Sikes; Thomas, Colonel in the 33rd O. V. I.; Elsie, married Edward Neary; and Hiram Sikes, who resides in Portsmouth, Ohio.

In 1822, Levi Sikes moved to Porter Township and became a farmer. In 1836 he moved to Harrison Township where he died on March 30, 1870. His wife survived him about four years. She was a woman of remarkable force of character and James Keyes gives a full account of her in his book.

James Simpson

was the son of John Simpson, one of the first settlers of Portsmouth and Mary Noel, his wife, a daughter of Philip Noel. He was born November 9, 1819, on a farm where the Children's Home now stands, which was then owned by his father. He was brought up at his father's trade, that of a carpenter, and followed it most of his life. He had charge of the Cuppett & Webb lumber yards for years. He had twelve brothers and sisters, ten of whom lived to maturity. He received his education in Portsmouth.

He was married April 4, 1839 to Elizabeth Jane Lewis, daughter of Wm. Lewis and Rachel Feurt, his wife. Her father was Frederick Feurt. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wm. Simmons. Mrs. Simpson was born in 1822. They have had four children: Wm. Henry, who lost his life in the fire of 1877; Elenora, married first Thos. J. Fritts, and second Thos. T. Yeager; Thomas Jefferson, and Margaret, the wife of Wm. Worth Donaldson. Their son Thomas J. enlisted September 1, 1861, at the age of seventeen in Company E, 81st Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was transferred to Company H, November 15, 1862, and served until July 13, 1865, and veteranized. He died June 10, 1892.

Mr. Simpson was a Whig and Republican in his political views. He joined the Scioto Lodge of Odd Fellows, Oct. 8, 1845, and was a member of it till his death. He spent most of his life in Portsmouth, but lived in Stephenson County, Ill., from 1854 to 1856. During the war he was a resident of Clermont County, Ohio. He was first a member of the Bigelow church, but since 1867 had been a member of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal church. He was a member of the first choir organized in the Bigelow church. He never sought or held any public office except he was Assessor of Wayne Township in 1854.

He was an industrious, energetic citizen, and lived up to his profession was a Christian. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was very tall, of dark complexion, thin and spare, and of fine carriage. He had a remarkably firm expression of countenance, which was repellant to strangers, but at the same time to his friends, he was most companionable. He was earnest in all things. He died June 2, 1899.

Elias Simpson

was born in Hampshire County, Virginia; December 15, 1818. His parents were John and Rebecca Simpson. His father died in Virginia and his mother was married there to Hiram Alloway. He came to Pike County, Ohio, in 1827, with his step-father and remained there ten years, when he removed to Scioto County and began working for George Herod in 1837. He went to Mr. Herod's an orphan, ragged and torn, cold, tired and hungry. He was taken in and fed and told his story. He stayed through the winter for his clothes. He stayed several years and grew to manhood. He received no education but was active and industrious and made money. He bought a team and that helped him. April 1, 1842, he was married to Mary Howard.

He leased land of his employer where he lived until January 17, 1848, when he moved to his farm on Survey 464, in Morgan Township and resided there the remainder of his life. When he first went there he leased land with John Rankins. When he married he bought a small farm and soon paid for it. In 1854, he began buying land and continued it until at his death, when he owned 3,500 acres in Rush, Morgan and Valley Townships. He was said to have owned more land in acres than any man in Scioto County and to have paid more taxes. He returned more personal property for taxation than any one in the county. His tax return in 1896, is said to have been $30,800. When the war broke out, he thought corn would go up and he rented all the land he could and put it in corn. His expectations were realized, and as he said, he made a bed tick full of money. He held on to his crop until 1862 and made $50,000. The rest was easy. At the time of his death his wealth was estimated at $150,000.

His wife died August 8, 1881. Of this marriage there were thirteen children: Mary Ann, deceased, wife of James Allison; Rhoda, deceased wife of Joseph Morgan; Rebecca, wife of Jesse Johnson; Franklin, deceased; Henry; Jane, deceased; John, enlisted October 4, 1864 in Company B, 22nd O. V. I., and served one year. He died November 2, 1865. Elias, deceased; George, deceased; Amos, deceased; Andrew T., deceased; Cynthia, deceased; Alice, deceased; and A. Lincoln, deceased. He was married July 12, 1883, to Mary Dunlap. She died July 16, 1894, leaving two daughters, Louise and Scioto Valley.

He was a member of Lucasville Lodge, F. and A. M. No. 465. He was first a Whig and afterwards a Republican. He died June 3, 1897, in his seventy-ninth year. He had been a resident of Scioto County for over forty years.

Elias Simpson was an honest man. He never permitted an obligation to lapse. His fortune was made by industry, economy and a close application to business. He had a great deal of faith in his fellowmen and never lost much by it. Honest himself, he took it for granted every one else was honest. He demonstrated what obstacles can be overcome by patient and unremitting labor, guided by a full knowledge of the business he was engaged in. He was one of the few men who could make money in agriculture, and who did it.

Luke Philpot Newson Smith

was born October 10, 1818, on the lot where J. C. Hibbs formerly had his hardware store on Front street. His father was John Smith, a native of Massachusetts and his mother's maiden name was Mary Stretton. As a child he was precocious and could read in the New Testament when he was only three years old. He had a very meager education in the common schools, but he was a diligent student all his life and educated himself by learning from his well educated friends. As a child he was of a pious disposition; as a young man, he was the life and soul of his circle and was always fond of the society of young people.

At the age of eighteen he began life for himself as delivery clerk for McDowell & Davis, who were then doing a commission business in the McDowell corner. He had literary tastes and on February 11, 1842, he was made Vice President of Franklin Institute. In October, 1844, after he had served as a clerk for the firm for eight years, he was taken into the firm on his birthday and the firm became Davis, Smith & Company. He and his brother Joseph W., were the Smiths of the firm.

He was a man of great public spirit and when Mr. Robert Bell started in the manufacturing of shoes in Portsmouth, to encourage it, Mr. Smith took an interest. In 1850, he was a member of the Portsmouth Council and one of the Committee on Claims. In 1854, the firm of Davis & Smith exchanged their interest in the Buckhorn tannery with M. R. Tewksbury for his interest in Jackson furnace, and Mr. Smith removed there and afterwards became sole owner of the furnace.

On October 10, 1839, he was married to Rebecca Peebles. She was born at Wilkinsville, Pennsylvania, May 18, 1821. She and her husband joined the Presbyterian church January 19, 1851, under the pastorate of Rev. Marcus Hicks. In 1852, he was made a ruling elder of the church and continued until his death. He maintained his residence, until 1872, at Jackson furnace, when he built a large and commodious home at Sciotoville, to which he removed and in which he died October 21, 1873, leaving a widow and seven children to survive him. They were: Anna Thane, Mary Davis, Gertrude, Hugh Cook, Joseph Stretton, who died in October, 1875, Bertha and Lilius. Hugh Cook married Miss Ella Finton of Portsmouth in November, 1895. Lilius married John Henry Holman at Sciotoville, June 2, 1886, and has one daughter. Luke P. N. married Miss Lydia McLaughlin, in March, 1885, at Sciotoville and has four children. Gertrude was married in March, 1877, to Charles N. Sellers, in Colorado, and has a family of four children. Mr. Smith lost six children in infancy or childhood.

Our subject was a fine looking man of dignified carriage. He always wore a full beard. He was courteous to all he met and made a good impression on friends and strangers alike. He was most highly esteemed by all who knew him. He died from an attack of flux and his death was a calamity not only to his family and friends but to the whole community. As a religious man, he lived up to his professions.

Charles Stratten Smith

was born November 1, 1816, on the McColm farm below Carey's Run. His father was a native of Boston and his mother was a Miss Stratten, of Virginia. He attended the Portsmouth schools, and was a clerk in the store of Hall & Gales. He afterwards traded on the river. From May, 1838 to May, 1839, he was a wharf-master at Portsmouth, Ohio.

November, 1843, he was married to Miss Mary G. Locke, of Oxford, New York. Directly after he went into the grocery business, and remained until 1850 when he went to California to find gold. His wife died December 20, leaving two children, Floyd L. and Addie M., now Mrs. Walter M. Tibbetts, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and he left them with her parents in New York and sailed from New York City, May 12, 1850.

He made twenty thousand dollars in three years and came home. In 1854, he was the proprietor of a wharfboat at Portsmouth, Ohio. He went into milling, where the Times office stands and made money. He built several steamboats, one the "D. M. Sechler" and ran her on the Muskingum river. He built the John Dice home on Second street.

On January 5th, 1854, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Kate Ackerman. The children of that marriage were Isabel Ellis, wife of Howard H. French, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and Mary Allen died in infancy. Mr. Smith was a half brother to Alpheus, Thaddeus and Robert Cook and Mrs. William Salter, his mother having, after the death of his father, married Hugh Cook. He conducted a paper mill on Mill street. He was a man of fine personal appearance, a handsome man. His son, Colonel Floyd L. Smith, owes his good looks to him. He was genial and agreeable, very much appreciated among his friends. He died August 28, 1900.

Joseph Mills Glidden Smith

was born December 28, 1807, near Tilton, New Hampshire. He was the son of Jeremiah and Betsey (Glidden) Smith. His mother was the daughter of Charles Glidden, a Revolutionary soldier, (see his record under Revolutionary Soldiers) and Alice (Mills) Glidden. He came to Ohio in 1827 and located near Wheelersburg. He first commenced his life's work at Franklin Furnace. He aided in the construction of Junior Furnace. He built Vesuvius Furnace in Lawrence County, and then went to Jackson Furnace, Ohio. He moved to Scioto Furnace in 1841 and was its principal owner and manager until 1853, when he sold his interest to J. V. Robinson, Senior. He continued to manage the furnace until 1855, when he moved to Portsmouth. He had been identified with the iron business since 1832 and when he came to Portsmouth, he had $90,000 on deposit in the banks. He concluded to build a distillery at Springville and in so doing, lost all his fortune. He was afterwards interested in Diamond Furnace, at Jackson, in 1864 and 1865 and in 1867 and 1868 he managed Kenton Furnace. His last active employment was at Talladega, Alabama, where he remained until 1881. At that time he returned to Portsmouth and made his home with his daughters, Mrs. J. W. Bannon and Mrs. James Orin Murfin. On November 3, 1832, at Franklin Furnace, he was married to Miss Charlotte Marie Hurd, daughter of John and Mary (Young) Hurd. Her mother, Mary (Young) Hurd was the daughter of Jesse Young, whose record will be found under Revolutionary Soldiers. They had five children: Warren Smith, now in California; Brigadier General Jacob Hurd Smith of the regular army; a daughter Alice who died in infancy; Mary, the wife of James W. Bannon and Josephine, the widow of James Orin Murfin, of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Joseph M. G. Smith died April 4, 1889, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Murfin, of softening of the brain. His father lived to be 100 and his mother 98. He was a man of great force and determination, and honest in all his dealings. His generous hospitality was well known. He was a unique character and many are the tales told by the old inhabitants of his adventures.

Mrs. Joseph M. G. Smith

was born September 9, 1814, in Orange County, Vermont, in the town of Burlington. Her father was John Hurd and her mother's maiden name was Mary Young. John Hurd was born in Bath, New Hampshire and her grandfather, Jacob Hurd, was born in England. Jesse Young was her grandfather and he was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. His record will be found under Revolutionary Soldiers. Jacob Hurd's wife was Hannah Barron. Her father Timothy Barron was in the Revolutionary war. Our subject came to Ohio in 1821 with her father, and his family, Orin Gould's mother and her children and the Whitcomb family. Samuel Gould was already here. Benjamin Whitcomb was her uncle and had married Sallie Young, an aunt of our subject. Samuel Gould married Hannah Young. The following are the family of John Hurd, her father, first, Charlotte Marie, our subject, who married J. M. G. Smith. Second, Jacob Hurd married Elizabeth Clough of Ohio. Third, Jesse Young Hurd married Catherine Rogers, at Bloom Furnace. Fourth, Mary Hurd married Leander Comstock in Scioto County. Fifth, Josephine married first, Lewis Tomlinson, second, Dan Glidden, and third Cyrus Ellison. Our subject married Joseph Mills Glidden Smith, November 3, 1831, at Franklin Furnace landing. The wedding party of forty rode horseback from Franklin to Junior Furnace, where the bride and groom went to housekeeping in their own house. Elizabeth Kendall, nee Finton, cooked the wedding supper. They lived there two years and then went to Vesuvius Furnace which Mr. Smith built. Their son, Warren, was born there and they lived there for three years. They then went to Jackson and there General Jacob Smith was born. They lived at Jackson for two and a half years and then went back to Junior Furnace and lived there for two and a half years. They resided at Scioto Furnace for eight years. They came to Portsmouth in 1854 and Mr. Smith then built the Springville Distillery. They lived in Kentucky from 1855 to 1861 and then came to Portsmouth which became their permanent home. Their children are given under the sketch of her husband. Mrs. Smith has been a devout member of the Methodist church since childhood. She is certainly living a happy old age at the home of Judge Bannon. She is a woman of remarkable memory and vitality and of a self-sacrificing, lovable disposition.

William Russell Smith

was born in Scioto County on September 20, 1824. His father was John Funston Smith and his mother's maiden name was Russell. His brothers and sisters were: Stephen Smith, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, wife of Captain William Moore, Thomas and Reuben. William R. was reared in the County.

Some years before the war he bought a steamboat and went on the river as its master. Charles C. Row was with him. He owned and ran the T. J. Patton, the "Nymph," "Clyde" and "Bierce" successively. He had altogether nine steamboats. During his career as a steamboatman he was engaged in navigation on the Big Sandy, the Ohio, the Mississippi and the Yazoo rivers. He was engaged in the business of navigating steamboats prior to and during the war. His boat, the "Patton," was impressed by the government, and he went with it. The "Bierce" was a tug and was also impressed. The "Patton" carried soldiers and freight, and was used part of the time by General Grant personally. After our subject left the government service, as a master of steamboats, he became a contractor with the Government for the purpose of raising sunken steamboats. He was hurt at one time on the "Bierce" while operating it on the Yazoo river, by a piece of machinery falling on one of his limbs and this laid him up for a year.

He was married in 1863 to Margaret Wishon, sister of Henry and Leonard Wishon. The children of this marriage were William R., Jr., John S., now a resident of McDermott, Ohio, Frank C., Oliver F., Louis D., Everett N., and a daughter, Magnolia Russell.

Captain Smith was originally a Whig, but at the outset of the war he became a Republican. November 13, 1866, he was appointed postmaster at Portsmouth, Ohio; but was not confirmed and served until March 6, 1867, when Oliver Wood succeeded him. After that time he became a Democrat and remained such during his life. He was not a member of any church but believed in the creed of the Universalists. After he left the government service, he engaged in the stone business in Scioto County and was in that for many years. He died in June, 1898, at McDermott, Ohio, of asthma. His wife survives him, and she and her daughter and sons, John S., Louis D. and Frank C., reside at McDermott, Ohio.

John Webb Spry

was born at Whitestone parish, County of Cornwall, England, December 26, 1822. His father and mother, Richard and Frances Spry with their family of seven children, of whom he was the youngest, left their home in England, leaving Plymouth Harbor March 14, 1834, on the sailing vessel, the "Minerva."

After a voyage of six weeks, considered at that time as being unusually prosperous and speedy, they made ready to land upon the shore of this new and unknown country, when the vessel was wrecked upon Rockaway Beach, Long Island Sound. They were rescued by American seamen who came to their assistance. A rope was stretched from the shore to the ship and the passengers were removed part of the way in small boats and then to the land in the arms of these strong men. No lives were lost, but the possessions of the emigrants went down with the ship which soon sank in twelve feet of water.

After many trials and hardships, this unfortunate and distressed family found their way to Honesdale, Pennsylvania, where English kindred and friends were settled. They next went to Norwich, New York and about 1848, John Spry came to Portsmouth, Ohio, where his brother Richard had lived some time and there he made his home. For several years, he successfully practiced his profession of dentistry and afterwards went into the drug business with Enos Reed.

He was married to Louisa Davey of Alexandria, Virginia by Rev. Spahr, May 2, 1855, and four children were born to them: John Henry, who died in infancy; Allan Webb; Jennie Waller, who died November 7, 1888; and Fannie Grace, who died November 14, 1897.

He was for many years a loyal and consistent member of the First Presbyterian church and devoted his unusually fine musical talents to the services of the sanctuary, adding by his voice and skillful flute playing, much to the interest of the services so dear to his heart. An intimate friend, Mr. Stephen Riggs, also a member of that notable choir thus writes of him, "About that time (1850) also appeared in our midst, the mild genial, wholesouled Doctor Spry, the silvery strains of whose flute could be readily distinguished above voices and instruments for their exquisite softness and sweetness; he possessed a soul for music, and I often think that he must occupy a prominent place now in the celestial choir, contributing no small amount to the diapason of melody that continually reverberates among the Heavenly hills, as they sing the song of Moses and the Lamb." Mr. Spry possessed a gentle nature and a tranquil spirit with a frail constitution and in early manhood he was called to a better world. Beloved and lamented by his friends and respected and regretted by the community, he died February 21, 1868.

was born in Cornwall, Whitestone parish, England, March 5, 1809. On April 14, 1831, he was married to Elizabeth Hicks. On March 15, 1834, he set sail to the United States. On reaching land their ship was wrecked on the shores of Long Island. They reached the shore in safety but lost all their goods. They settled first in Norwich, N. Y., and afterwards in Honesdale, Pennsylvania. In 1844, they came to Portsmouth, Ohio, but resided a year or two at Springville. He was a blacksmith and gunsmith by trade, and followed that business at Portsmouth. He was president of the Gas Company and of the Home Building Association. He was prominent in Odd Fellowship. He was highly trained in music and had served as a chorister. He had been a communicant of All Saints church in Portsmouth, for twenty-one years prior to his death. He died February 12, 1882. His children were, Mrs. T. J. Pursell, Daniel R. Spry, Mrs. Francis Helfenstein, Miss Thyrza G. Spry, and Miss Emma, who died in 1873 and Robert N., who died in 1877.

Mr. Spry was a model citizen and a good Christian. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him. His widow survived until November 11, 1896. She was born June 20, 1811, in Cornwall, England. She was a woman of great kindness of heart and loved by all who knew her.

was the town and city Marshal of Portsmouth, Ohio, continually from March 10, 1845, until September 19, 1853, when he became disabled. From 1847 to 1851, he was clerk of the market. In 1848, he was paid for his services as Marshal by the dog tax, and the rent of the market stalls. In 1847, he was allowed $100 as Marshal and $50.00 as clerk of the market.

He was born at Chemung, N. Y., 1798, came to Scioto County in 1818, and located on the French Grant. He was first married to Lucinda Lamb. She died within two years. He was next married to Antoinette Vincent and had three children; Lucina, wife of C. C. Row; Susan, killed accidentally at the age of 18; and Sophia, wife of John Rockhold. He was at one time part owner of Franklin Furnace, and was manager at Junior Furnace 1825 to 1831. He suffered a sunstroke in 1853 from riding in an open car after a prisoner, and had for that reason to give up the Marshal's office. He died within a week after his injury. His widow survived until 1880, and died in her 79th year. He made a very efficient officer, was a powerful man and had no fear. He never failed to make an arrest or to hold his prisoners.

Colonel Aaron Stockham

was born August 3, 1787, in Pennsylvania. His father was William Stockham, who was a Revolutionary soldier from New Jersey, born in 1752, and died in Scioto County, Ohio, December 17, 1815. His mother was Susannah Paine, a sister of the famous Thomas Paine. Colonel Aaron was a famous militia Colonel in the early days of the state, and was one of the chief mustering officers of the war of 1812. He was a salt maker at the Scioto salt works, made a great deal of money there, and bought two sections of land on Little Scioto.

He married Ruhama Sikes, a daughter of John Jones Sikes, who has a sketch herein. He died July 16, 1849, and his wife died March 10, 1873, aged eighty-three years, seven months and twenty-two days. He had the following children: Rachel, born, February 19, 1812, married Job Kittles; William, born March 31, 1813; David Jackson, born March 4, 1815; Cynthia Ann, born April 14, 1816, married Claudius Cadot; John, born September 15, 1817; Polly, born April 27, 1819, married Franklin Batterson; George W., born February 4, 1821; Susan, born October 4, 1822, married Solomon Riker; Pardon P., born February 22, 1824; McKenzie, born March 8, 1826; James Harvey, born November 7, 1827; Aaron, born June 13, 1832; Henry C., born March 13, 1834.

His son William is living near Stockdale, Pike County, Ohio. He was married to Abigail Adams, January 23, 1839, the daughter of George Adams and Margaret (Schoonover) Adams. His wife was born October 27, 1820, and is still living in excellent health. Their eldest son, George A. Stockham enlisted in Company G, 91st O. V. I., August 11, 1862, at the age of twenty-two years, and died March 6, 1863, at Fayetteville, W. Va., their daughter, Ruhama is the wife of Levi Brown; Margaret, married Warren Dever; Nancy, married Solomon Dever. They had five children who died in infancy. Mr. Stockham lived the first eighteen years after his marriage in Madison township, and in 1854, he moved to Marion township, Pike county, Ohio, and has lived there ever since. During the time of the Whig party, he was a Whig, and since, he has been a Republican. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church. In his ninetieth year, his faculties are well preserved, and he is able to give the Revolutionary reminiscences of his grandfather Stockham with great detail and accuracy.

Rev. Landon Taylor.

The Taylors in New York were a Methodist family. Rev. James, a Methodist minister for thirty-seven years, with his wife Julia A. Hathaway, came to Scioto County and settled near Little Scioto about 1835. There were seven sons and one daughter, four of the sons also becoming Methodist ministers, among whom was Landon, who was born in 1812.

Soon after coming to Ohio, Landon engaged in school teaching near Haverhill, at $25.00 a month, making his home with J. S. Folsom. Later, having married Jane Vincent, daughter of one of the French emigrants in 1837, he secured employment as clerk at Franklin Furnace. The Furnace Company soon after failed, carrying with it all his earnings amounting to $1,200. Stranded financially, and his family broken up by the confirmed invalidism of his wife, he preached for a few years among the furnaces, at Burlington and Wheelersburg where he labored with Murphy in the great revival of 1843. In 1845 he went to the territory of Iowa, and becoming identified with the Upper Iowa Conference, passed the most of his life there, filling appointments at Burlington, Davenport, Dubuque, Iowa City and many other important charges. For a time he was Presiding Elder of the Sioux City district, was Conference Evangelist for some years, then Bible Agent until on account of failing health, he superannuated. In 1883 he published his autobiography under the title of "The Battlefield Reviewed" of which he disposed of two editions. A portion of his last years he spent with his son, Doctor J. L. Taylor of Wheelersburg, where he died in 1885.

His religious faith was intense, and of the now disappearing type of Wesleyan Methodism. He had, a grand voice for public speaking, an earnest manner, a fine physique, and withal, was a most genial and interesting companion. His life work was largely one of self sacrifice, since no motives of remuneration, or the lack of it, had the slightest influence in his acceptance of ecclesiastical positions. The joy of his life was that he had contributed to start a number of young people into a religious life who afterwards came into positions of great influence and usefulness in the Christian church.

Doctor Jonathan Tracy

one of the pioneer settlers of the western part of the County, was born in Steuben County, New York, February 2, 1797. His was the hardy frontier life of early days. As a member of the state militia, he participated in the battle of Plattsburgh during the war of 1812. Securing a meager education, he taught school a few years in western New York, and in 1823, emigrated to Stout's Run, Adams County, Ohio, where he resided until 1834. Having made a study of medicine, he located near Otway, Scioto County, Ohio, where he engaged in the successful practice of his profession for over forty years. He was first married to Sabina White in Steuben County, New York, who died in 1824, leaving one child. In 1825, he was married to Elizabeth Westbrook, of Stout's Run, Adams County, Ohio, with whom he lived for sixty-three years. He was a member of the Methodist church for sixty-four years and was ordained a local preacher. He died October 14, 1888, in full communion with the Methodist church.

Elizabeth Westbrook Tracy was born December 25, 1804, at Stout's Run in Adams County, the daughter of John Westbrook. She saw the first steamboat, the "New Orleans" go down the Ohio river in September, 1811. She joined the Methodist Episcopal church when she was eight years of age. She was the mother of ten children, and at death had ninety-three descendants. Six of her children survived her. She had 56 grandchildren and 35 survived her. She had 26 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith, of Otway. She and her husband lived together for 63 years. She died January 7, 1893, aged 90 years.

John Pease Terry

was born in Coos County, New Hampshire, February 16, 1807. His parents, Charles Terry and Huldah Pease, were from New Haven, Connecticut, subsequently removing to New Hampshire, where our subject was born. When he was three years of age, the family removed to Oneida County, New York, and one year later, to Ontario, now Wayne County, where his father purchased a farm in the wilderness, and began clearing it, assisted by his eldest sons. His father was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1814 from the effects of a gunshot wound received in the defense of Sodus Point, on Lake Ontario, against the attacks of the British.

Shortly after this event, young Terry was bound out to a farmer, where he remained until he was about 19 years of age. Not liking his master, he left, and, after visiting his sister some thirty miles distant, started on foot for the west, with but one dollar in his pocket, which he had borrowed from his mother. He had at this time no definite destination, but made his way to the mouth of the Genesee river, walking a distance of some forty miles. Then, by boat, he reached the mouth of the Niagara river, where, having spent his dollar, he stopped a short time, and cut wood to earn some money to enable him to pursue his journey by water. Reaching Buffalo, he again stopped, and worked a month carrying brick and mortar, for which he received ten dollars, half in cash and half in dry goods. He then boarded a sailing vessel bound for Cleveland, and was some seven days on the way, the vessel being stormbound. From Cleveland, he walked to Akron, Ohio, where he found employment for six months as a clerk in the store of the contractors on the Ohio canal. This was in 1825. For something over a year subsequent he worked for his brother-in-law, William Lake, at Newburg, near Cleveland, in the manufacture of fanning mills. From 1828 to 1832, he was connected with the engineering corps on the Ohio canal, being for a part of the time assistant engineer. He was also subsequently engaged in contracting on the Cincinnati and Harrison Turnpike. On November 14, 1832, he married Susan Waller, daughter of Doctor Thomas Waller. He then purchased an interest in Clinton Furnace, Scioto County, and had the management of it until the spring of 1834, when he was compelled to sell out and pay a large sum of money on an endorsement for Jacob Clingman, cashier of the old Commercial bank of Scioto. This misfortune left him worse off than nothing.

For several years following he was employed on the public works of Ohio and Indiana. In the fall of 1837, he embarked in the wholesale boot and shoe business in Portsmouth, and so continued for some four years. For the two subsequent years, he was engaged in freighting products to New Orleans, and for two years later in farming in the vicinity of Portsmouth, and still later in the milling business. In 1853, in connection with others, he built the Madison furnace, in Jackson County, Ohio, and had the general management and supervision of it until 1864. In 1866, he purchased Buckeye furnace, in the same county, conducted it two years and then sold it. He was subsequently interested in a farm in Pettis County, Missouri, and also superintended the building of a furnace in Washington County, in the same state. After 1847, he was variously engaged in business in Portsmouth; was for a while president of the First National bank.

He was town surveyor of Portsmouth from 1838 to 1844. In 1839, he received $50 per year for his services. In 1842, he and C. McCoy were fence viewers of Wayne Township. In the same year, he was a director in the Portsmouth Insurance Company. He was a school trustee in 1857. In 1864 to 1867, 1875, and 1880, he was a member of the City Board of Equalization. He was a member of the council in 1877. In 1880, he was a candidate for the State Board of Equalization for the Seventh Senatorial District, but was defeated by W. T. Washam. He was a director in the Portsmouth Iron and Steel Works until June 1, 1881, when he became president and general superintendent; and was also interested in a large tract of wood land near Portsmouth, working up the timber into lumber.

He always manifested a large degree of public spirit; and has been prominently active in advancing the efforts of his adopted city. He was a member of the county military committee, during the Civil War, appointed by Governor Dennison. In the discharge of the duties of this office, he was independent, conscientious, and true to the interests of his country. Politically, Mr. Terry was a staunch, uncompromising Republican. He was very successful in his business, and always maintained first class credit. He was a fine specimen of a self-made man, and, as his record shows, worked his way from a poor, fatherless boy to a leading position among the business characters of his community. Retiring in manners, strictly honorable and conscientious in all his dealings, he was greatly respected in the community for his sterling qualities, both as a man and a citizen.

Mr. Terry had four sons and two daughters: Charles Terry, Louis Terry, deceased, who has a sketch herein, George Terry, Thomas Waller Terry, who died in the Civil War and has a portrait and sketch herein, Mary I. Terry and Alice B. Terry, who died November 25, 1890. Mr. Terry gave three sons to the cause of the Union, all three of them entering the army while yet under age. Mr. Terry died May 17, 1886.

Moor Russell Tewksbury

was born in Bath, New Hampshire, April 27, 1808. His father was Ezekiel Tewksbury, a native of Amhurst, Mass. His mother, Sallie Barron, was a native of North Haverhill, New Hampshire.

Our subject remained on his father's farm until his majority and had only a common school education. At 22 he went to Michigan, but not liking it there went to Portsmouth, Scioto County, Ohio, in 1830. Directly after that, he went to Franklin Furnace and chopped wood and employed himself about the furnace until 1833. In that year, he went to Hanging Rock and engaged as a river agent for Robert Hamilton, who at that time was proprietor of Pine Grove Furnace. Here Mr. Tewksbury remained until 1841 when he became book-keeper for D. Agnew & Co., proprietors of Hanging Rock Forge. This concern failed a year later and the assets were sold out to Mr. Henry Hanna. Mr. Tewksbury remained as their book-keeper until 1844. He had saved some money and bought an interest in Jackson Furnace, filling the position of river agent for this Company until January, 1853.

In September, 1845, he was married to Miss Sarah W. Lynn, daughter of Andrew and Jane Lynn, of Brown County, Ohio. Three children were born to them: one child died in infancy; Ella S. married Joseph N. Murray, January 29, 1867, who is deceased, leaving two children; Albert L. and Isabella, the wife of George T. Sellow of Galesburg, Illinois; Sarah L., married John Peebles, November 8, 1870. She died July 7, 1881, leaving one daughter, Martha S. now the wife of Elmer Dover, of Washington, D. C., secretary to Senator M. A. Hanna. In the spring of 1851, our subject removed to Jackson Furnace, and in the following year, his wife died.

In January, 1853, Mr. Tewksbury sold his interests in Jackson Furnace and became a resident of Portsmouth. He first went into the employ of Robert Bell & Co. manufacturers of shoes, and remained with them until 1856. A part of this time he was agent for Madison furnace. In 1854, he was one of the company who built Madison furnace and held an interest in that until April, 1868. Mr. Tewksbury was interested in the bank of Means, Hall & Co. in 1855.

On May 27, 1856, he was united in marriage to Sarah A. Baird, daughter of Captain William Baird of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. They had four children, one son and three daughters: Jane T., deceased wife of Frank E. Todd; Russell B., business man of Cleveland, Ohio; Julia, married to Theodore N. Johnson, Jr., and Margaret, the wife of Albert T. Johnson, President of the Portsmouth & Kentucky Fire Brick Company.

In 1860, the banking house of Means, Hall & Co. suspended and he wound up its affairs. In 1862, our subject was Deputy Collector of Internal Revenues under John Campbell of Ironton, and remained as such until 1865. He was one of the charter members of the Portsmouth National bank in 1865 and was a director for many years. In 1872, he served on the City Board of Equalization. In 1875, he became president of the Norton Iron Works of Ashland, Kentucky, and held it a year. In politics, Mr. Tewksbury was an old line Whig. He was a trustee of the Young Ladies' Seminary for a number of years, and a member of the Presbyterian church. He died August 4, 1892.

John Theron Tillow

was born in Duchess County, state of New York, July 12, 1820. Until he was seventeen years old, the family lived on a farm. His father came to this county from Loraine, France, in 1790. At the age of seventeen, the family moved to Rochester, New York. After his father's death, in 1831, the family came to Portsmouth, Ohio. A short time afterwards, Mr. Thomas Lawson, a well and favorably known citizen married his sister, Jane. Mr. Lawson was then in the grocery business and Mr. Tillow became associated with him in business for a number of years. He was married to Julia Elizabeth Williamson, sister of Capt. A. W. Williamson, of Portsmouth, in 1847. He died in February, 1862. Four children and his wife still survive him, Mrs. Louis W. Terry, of Portsmouth; Mrs. T. N. Cheek, of Seattle, Washington; William H., and Frank N., of Lexington, Kentucky. He was a Democrat in his political views.

As a business man, and a man of honesty, and integrity no man ever stood higher. He held the office of treasurer of Odd Fellows in Scioto County. He was beloved by the poor, and honored by all. At his funeral every business house in the city was closed, and the streets crowded with people to do him honor. He was a self-made man, and at his death had accumulated quite a competency.

Martin Funk Timmonds

was born December 14, 1818, in the town of Portsmouth, then but three years old. His father, John Timmonds, came from Cumberland, Md., and was reared in the Roman Catholic church. His mother was Catherine Funk, daughter of Martin Funk; they were married October 16, 1817 by John Brown, Esquire. His father died in August, 1831, in his fortieth year, when Martin was but twelve years of age, and upon Martin fell the burden of supporting the family. His mother survived until June, 1877, when she died in her seventy-ninth year. His father had made a good living, but signed too many notes as security for others and left his family nothing.

Martin began to work at once, and within a year became the baker for M. B. Gilbert & Company, remaining in their employment as such for fifteen years. In 1847, he went into business for himself in a one story frame building on the lot next west of the Biggs House. In 1852, he took his brother Samuel Dole Timmonds into partnership with him under the firm name of M. & S. Timmonds, a firm which was well known to every steamboat man between Pittsburg and Cincinnati. It kept a small cannon called the "bull dog" which barked every time a new boat came on the river, or an old boat reappeared after an absence. In 1857, they first built the store room next the Biggs House, and during the war made a great deal of money, supplying steamboats and the military camps at Portsmouth with bread, ice and groceries. Samuel Timmonds died in 1866, but the firm name remained unchanged. In 1871 the store was burned out in the Biggs House fire but immediately rebuilt. Mr. Timmonds was a stockholder and director of the Portsmouth National bank.

Mr. Timmonds was married in 1852 to Mary Jane Lawson, daughter of Thomas Lawson. She died January 3, 1871. They had the following children: Mary Virginia, wife of Frank Waterman Hills, Comptroller American Smelting & Refining Company, New York; Samuel Bradstreet, who was one of the organizers and the first manager of the Portsmouth Electric Railway and Light Co.; Katherine Maria, wife of William H. Ware, Jr., of Portsmouth, Ohio; and Jeannette Timmonds Ford.

Mr. Timmonds never remarried, but his children made their home with his mother and sister, Maria, on the old Timmonds homestead near the Children's Home.

Mart Timmonds, as he was best known among his business associates, was the soul of honor. His word was always implicitly taken; he was liked by all who knew him, and had a pleasant greeting for all. Although not a member, he attended the Methodist church regularly and was a liberal contributor to it and to every public enterprise. He was a Whig and a Republican in politics, but never held any political office. No one ever applied to him for charity and was refused. He had as warm a heart as ever beat in human breast. He died November 18, 1882, of blood poisoning, leaving a handsome estate, honorably acquired by his own business ability.

Moses Thompson

was born in Pennsylvania, August 18, 1784. He married Sarah Cole. She was born February 18, 1786 and died June 17, 1854. Moses Thompson was elected Justice of the Peace in Wayne Township in 1848 and was again elected to the same office in 1855. His children were: Margaret, wife of William P. Gray; Jane, wife of Joseph Lodwick; Caroline, wife of Samuel Clark; Sarah A., wife of William McClain; Amanda, wife of James Pursell; John C. married Abigail Sophia Botsford in Wheeling. She was a native of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Mrs. Henry Hall was his daughter. Eliza married Murtaugh Kehoe; Julia T. married William Salisbury. He was a Whig and a member of the Methodist church. He died October 7, 1861, and is buried in Greenlawn.

John H. Thornton

was one of the prominent citizens of the town of Portsmouth. He was a native of Flushing, N. Y., and his family name was Merriam. His family was of some importance and he was appointed a naval cadet and sent to Annapolis. He was guilty of some infraction of discipline there, and to escape arrest and punishment ran away into Virginia, and was concealed by a gentleman named Thornton, whose name he assumed. He resided with him for some time and there concluded to seek his fortune in the west. He came to Portsmouth, about 1812.

In 1814, he appears as one of the overseers of the poor in Wayne Township. In 1816, he was the Town Supervisor. In 1818, he had an interest in a flour mill but it does not appear that he conducted the business. He owned the site where the Biggs House now stands, and from 1820 to 1826, carried on a wool carding business there together with a blacksmith shop. In 1822, he sold the town its celebrated town bull for $68.00 and kept him for the town for one year for $50.00, and also kept him the following year, after which he was sold. From 1823 to 1825, he was town Marshal and Clerk of the market. In 1827, he carried the mail between Chillicothe and Portsmouth. In 1830, he was again an overseer of the poor for Wayne Township. In 1838, he was elected Coroner and in December, 1839, the Sheriff, Oliver Lindsey, died and he succeeded to the office. In 1840, he was elected Sheriff on the Whig ticket against one Clark. He received 1,356 votes to 781 for his opponent. In 1842, he was again a candidate for Sheriff on the Whig ticket and was defeated by John Cook, on the Democratic ticket. The poll stood 920 for Cook and 880 for Thornton. That was the first time the Democrats had ever broken the Whig phalanx in Scioto County.

After that time Mr. Thornton retired from public life. He died owning the Biggs House property and the former home of the Hon. Wells A. Hutchins on which premises he died. He was born November 23, 1784, and died September 24, 1847. He was married to Sarah Glover, a sister of Hon. Elijah Barnes Glover, and left a family, among whom were George Thornton, the blind musician, and the wife of Peter Yeager. His father-in-law, Elijah Glover, Sr., was Sheriff from 1810 to 1814; he was Sheriff from 1839 to 1842; and his grandson, Thomas T. Yeager, was Sheriff from 1887 to 1891.

John H. Thornton was not a religious man so far as we can learn, and he was a poor politician, but he was a good citizen and accumulated considerable property.

John R. Turner

was born June 25, 1787, in Northampton County, Va. His father was a poor slave-holder, and was ashamed of the fact. He determined that his children should be free from the curse, and independent of it, and so educated his son for a school teacher.

In 1808, the Turner family came to Scioto County, and John R., began his career as a school teacher. There comes a crisis in the life of every man, when fortune must be taken at its tide. On April

In 1810, Alexander Curran resigned as Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas to avoid issuing a warrant for the arrest of General Robert Lucas.

Hevilleh Mann was appointed Clerk pro tem, but would not qualify for a full term. The court adjourned to May 25, 1810, to select a Clerk and to hold an election for Sheriff in place of John Clarke, resigned. James Mann, the Coroner, had also resigned. The Court tried to find a person with grit enough to issue a paternity warrant for General Robert Lucas. Turner volunteered to take the place, and he was appointed pro tem until he could obtain the necessary certification from the Supreme Judges. Curran had also held the office of Auditor and resigned that, and Turner was at the same time appointed Recorder of the county.

Turner gave up his school at Marietta to take the place. He held it by successive appointments until the fall of 1811, when the office became elective. He was a candidate for the office at the October election that year and received 1,034 votes. His opponent, George W. Flanders received 1,033 votes, and so Turner was elected by a majority of one. Mr. Turner understood the art of standing in with "the powers that be." He was a first-class diplomat, and, when he was a Whig, it mattered not, if a majority of the Court were Democrats. John R. Turner was re-appointed Clerk every seven years. "The powers that be," with him, were the Presiding Judge of the Common Pleas court and his three associates. In 1820, there was an attempt to remove Mr. Turner from office by impeachment. Several charges as to malfeasance and misfeasance in office were presented against him, and he had a trial, but the court unanimously acquitted him. Prior to 1823, he kept the office in a rented room near the court house. From 1823 to 1827, he kept it in Dr. Waller's former office on Front street. From 1827 to 1837, he kept it in rented property, and in October, 1837, moved it into the present court house. He was a most efficient clerk, and was noted for accuracy and neatness.

On July 14, 1812, he purchased of Henry Massie, the founder of Portsmouth, lot No. 123 on Front street, for $30.00. This lot was 82½ feet front by 132 feet deep, and lies directly south of the present residence of George O. Newman. He built a house on it and resided there until his death. The house is still standing, but has been removed about fifty feet farther east. Mrs. Dorothy Zwick resided in the house until her recent death.

In 1812, he was appointed Clerk to the County Commissioners, and continued to hold this by appointment from year to year till 1821, when the office of Auditor was created. He was Recorder of the county from May 25, 1810, until August, 1841.

On August 12, 1823, he was appointed Postmaster of Portsmouth to succeed Dr. Thomas Waller, who had died holding the office. Mr. Turner held the office until June 23, 1829, when he became a victim of Jackson reform and was turned out to give the place to Mr. James Lodwick. His dismissal was considered unjustifiable, and a great outrage. There was much newspaper comment and controversy about it. However, Mr. Turner was a Whig, and Mr. Lodwick a Democrat, and Jackson having just come into office, the victors had to have the spoils. Mr. Turner's compensation was about $150.00 per annum, while he held the place.

In 1826, he kept the office in the court house, but the Commissioners thought they were not bound to keep up the United States, and required its removal.

On March 15, 1816, he was elected a Councilman of Portsmouth for three years, and re-elected in 1819 and 1822. He was President of the Council in 1822, in 1825 and in 1838. He was Mayor of the town in 1822, 1836 and 1855 to 1857. January 1, 1841, he was fined or being thirty minutes late at the council.

In 1826, he was elected a fence-viewer of Wayne Township, with William Peebles as his associate. For many years he was an examiner and visitor of the public schools.

In the great Fourth of July celebration in 1831, he responded to one of the toasts. In 1829, he was one of the committee which settled with Henry Massie for the front of the town.

Mr. Turner was married twice. His first wife was a Scarboro. He had two sons, William and George. William died in boyhood; George grew to manhood, became a lawyer and was a Territorial Judge in the State of Nevada. He afterwards practiced law in San Francisco, and committed suicide there in 1881, leaving a wife and daughter. A daughter of John R. Turner, Caroline, died in young womanhood. His daughter, Sarah, married Jacob Clingman and went West. His daughter Martha married an Aldrich; Mary Ann married an Allen; Hester married Daniel Tresler, and Nancy married Eliza Jeffords who became a Congressman in Mississippi.

John R. Turner every season had a fine garden on his lot. He gave it his personal attention. He grew, cultivated and preserved many fine fruit trees.

He was a zealous Methodist, and the pioneer of Methodism in Portsmouth. In 1810 he organized a class of four and became its leader.

In 1814 he took part in the organization of the first Methodist Society in Portsmouth, and was one of the first seven members. He became a local preacher in the church in 1816, and thereafter held that position the remainder of his life. He was, however, Chaplain of a Militia Regiment in the county in 1813. As a local minister he is reported to have married more persons than any minister or magistrate in the county.

As a Clerk of the Court he issued all marriage licenses, and as a local minister he performed the marriage. He was as keen after a job of this kind as 'Squire Hall or Deacon Tracy.

While Clerk of the Court he was also Master in Chancery, and a Master Commissioner, and, as such, made many sales. His second wife was Miss Susan Chenoweth, an aunt of Samuel Reed, Esq., Vice-President of the Portsmouth National Bank.

He retired from public office in 1857. He was taken sick October 2, 1858, and the same day made his will and deeded all his real estate to his wife. He died, Friday, October 15, 1858, and was interred the following Sunday. He had the largest funeral ever held in Portsmouth.

The lot which he purchased of Henry Massie in 1813 for $30.00, was sold by his widow in 1889 for $2,500. He and his descendants had held the title for fifty-six years. He was a ready and fluent speaker, and ready to speak at any time. He could always improve every opportunity in the speaking line, and it could be a speech or a sermon, as he desired.

He was very fond of children, and delighted to show them attention. He knew how to keep in office, and how to please those having the appointing power.

He was always a Whig, but never disdained favors coming from his political opponents. Judge Joseph Moore, a strong Democrat, and Associate Judge from 1834 to 1841, was his friend, and concurred in his appointment while he held the office. His widow, Susan Turner, died January 19, 1878, at the residence of Judge Moore.

Mr. Turner's character was one to be studied by the politicians. He knew how to keep in office, and how to please the public. He discharged the duties of all his offices well, and was an honorable and upright citizen. While he had his enemies they never worried him much, and he pursued his own course without reference to them. His memory will be sweet and fragrant so long as his adopted city endures.

Jerome Bonaparte Valodin

was born June 6, 1817. His father was Francis Valodin and his mother's maiden name was Nancy Slater, the second wife of his father. He was born in the French Grant, on the lot granted to his father. At the age of fourteen, he was bound out to learn the saddler's trade with a Mr. Burke at McArthur, Ohio. His master neglected to teach him and he could not read. He concluded to run away and did so. He went to Greenup and finished learning his trade and there attended school. He developed quite an aptitude for learning and began his career as a school teacher in Greenup County, Kentucky. The second and third schools he taught were in Nile Township, in Judge Moore's District. He taught a school in the first school house erected where the Elm Tree school house now stands, and was thus engaged up to Decmber 24, 1844, when he married Mary Jane Moore, a daughter of Judge Joseph Moore and of Mary Lawson, his wife.

He and his wife went to housekeeping in Rome, Adams County, Ohio, and lived there for three years. While there, he worked at his saddler's trade. In 1847, he went to Harrisonville, Scioto County, Ohio, and sold goods until 1850. In that year, he went to Turkey Creek and kept a store for a short time. In 1851, he moved on the Judge Moore farm and farmed for eight years. In 1859, he became a teacher in the public schools of Portsmouth, and taught until 1863. At that time, he was compelled, on account of the condition of his health to give up teaching, in which he had been eminently successful. He became a book-keeper and kept books for several firms until 1866, when he bought a grocery on the corner of Sixth and Chillicothe streets and conducted it until 1870. From that year until 1883, he was a book-keeper and collector for different business houses. In the latter year, he removed to the Judge Moore farm and remained there until his death on January 28, 1886.

Mr. and Mrs. Valodin had nine children: Susan Alice, now the wife of John Cooper, resides near Vanceburg; Mary Agnes died at eight years; Sarah Ellen, deceased. Laura Esther died at six years; Minerva Moore died at eighteen months, and Joseph Moore died at three years; John Moore born April 15, 1859, is still living unmarried, with his mother on the home farm, the old Judge Moore farm; William Francis died in his sixteenth year.

Mr. Valodin was a member of the Methodist church. From 1850, he was a Whig so long as that party was in existence, and after the dissolution of the Whig party, he became a Democrat and remained such during his life. Mr. Valodin was a master of arithmetic. He was very fond of mathematics. He was a man very strong in his likes and dislikes. There was no limit to either; withal, he was a very good citizen. Had he had a complete college education and followed teaching, he would have gained distinction in that profession, as his natural bent was in that direction.

was not one of the regular listed French emigrants. He was born in France in 1765, but was without property or education. He seemed to have been left upon his own resources. When he was 26 years of age, he wanted to go to the Northwest Territory; and having no means of going or enlisting himself regularly among the emigrants, he slipped on board one of the ships and secreted himself. He was not found until the vessel was out on the ocean some days. When the ship in which he sailed reached Alexandria, he was sold out for a year to pay his passage, and he worked out his time very cheerfully.

After this, he walked to the colony at Gallipolis and cast his fortunes with them. He managed to be counted in as one of the French emigrants when the land deal came up, and he received a patent for lot No. 5 of the French Grant. After obtaining his lot in the Grant, which was one of the very best and part of which is now the homestead of Peter F. Boynton, he cleared up the land and planted fine orchards of peaches and apples. He even went so far as to plant a peach orchard on the slope of the river from the top bank to the water. He was about the first of the French settlers to distill peaches and apples, and he sold great quantities of peach and apple brandy. He was also an excellent gardner and reared vegetables for the boating trade.

In addition to his lot of 217 acres, he made the following purchases in the Grant. In 1807, he bought of Anthony L. Carpenter, 75 acres of French Grant lot No. 14 for $255. It was from the original French Grant lot granted Louis Cel. About the same time, he bought lot No. 4, of 15 acres of the little French Grant of Mons. G. C. Laforge, who at that time resided in New Madrid, Mo. He paid $400 for this. On December 11, 1816, he bought lot No. 21, in the French Grant of Joseph W. Devacht, for $605. September 8, 1817, he bought lot No. 12, of the French Grant of Louis Berthe. Jr. The reader will understand that a lot in the French Grant proper was always 217 acres, and a lot in little French Grant 150 acres. His last purchase was 10 acres lying on the river front for $200 of John Fitzer and wife.

In 1800, he married a French woman, his first wife, Madame Gabrielle, from New Madrid. She was 20 years of age and he was 35. She lived but four years, and died on the 10th of September, 1804. There were two children of that marriage, Francis and Agate. For his second wife, he married an American woman, Nancy Slater, and she died Dec. 31, 1825, at the age of 41. Her children were: Adell, Ducuttee, Alexandre, Oriet, Hester, Dennis and Henry.

He took pride in educating his children and sent them away from home for that purpose. He never learned to read and write, but he wished his children to have all the advantages which he had been denied. He was a man of great prejudices, of strong loves and strong hates, a trait which he transmitted to his descendants. He kept quantities of fine liquors in the cellar and dispensed them to his friends. He was very fond of card playing and drinking. He was in the habit of going to the town of Greenup and engaging in card playing and drinking with his friends. August 26, 1826, he spent the evening in Greenup playing cards with a party of friends, and at the conclusion of the games he determined he would cross the river in a canoe. In leaving the house where he had met his friends, he fell over the river bank in the darkness, and so injured himself that he died within a few hours, in his 61st year. He had an iron will, indomitable perseverance, and left quite an estate to his children. He had the vivacity of the French, and the energy and industry of his Yankee neighbors, and so prospered more than the majority of the original French emigrants.

Col. Sampson Eagon Varner, son of Christian M. and Elizabeth Eagon Varner, of Scotch-Irish descent, was born in Staunton, Augusta County, Virginia, August 17, 1824. He came to Portsmouth, Ohio, with his parents in the spring of 1838. The journey over the mountains was made in company with two other families in wagons.

September 28, 1861, Colonel Varner enlisted in the 56th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, for three years. He was made Major of the regiment and was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, April 6, 1863. In 1864, he was assigned to command the post at Algiers, Louisiana, opposite New Orleans, and on the eve of his departure, after four months service there, the citizens of the southern city presented him publicly with a sword and sash as a testimonial of their regard. This is said to be the only instance during the great Civil War when a conquered people united to do honor and compliment to their conqueror. Colonel Varner left Algiers in July and was discharged from the service November 14, 1864.

In private life he was a brick mason. He had become a large manufacturer of brick and a flourishing contractor when the war broke out. He was one of the organizers and for a time superintendent and director of the Portsmouth Horse Car Company. He served sixteen years as a member of the City Council of Portsmouth. In 1874, he was an Independent Candidate for County Commissioner, but was defeated.

He was married November 26, 1848, to Maria Louise Huston, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Huston, two of Scioto County's pioneers. They had six children, William Eagon, now deceased; Mrs. Ella L. Brown, of Youngstown, Ohio; Mrs. Anna M. Sanford, of Cincinnati; Frank Floyd and James Huston of Cincinnati, the latter connected with his brother-in-law in the firm of Sanford, Storrs & Varner. The youngest daughter, Mrs. Bessie C. Adams, resides in Portsmouth.

Colonel Varner passed away suddenly on the morning of June 5, 1877, of heart disease. A whole city mourned the loss of one who was a public as well as a private benefactor. He was a natural leader. With limited school opportunities, his habit of reading useful books enriched his mind and his store of information, his genial disposition, kindly nature and rare conversational ability rendered him attractive to old and young.

John Alexander Vaughters was born August 9, 1814, in Caroline County, Va., a son of John and Catharine (Mason) Vaughters. The family was English. The form of the name as used in Virginia was Vawter. Among the Revolutionary Continental Land Warrants issued from the Land Office at Richmond, Va., was one to William Vawter for 2,666 2-3 acres of land, another to Benjamin Vawter for 200 acres. These are believed to be members of the same family. Our subject's father died in Virginia, and his mother moved with her family to Ohio, and located in Ross County in 1830; but in 1831, removed to Coalton, Jackson County. His mother died in 1833.

Our subject had no means, but he had a good constitution and a wonderful quantity of energy. He and his brother came to Scioto County in 1844, and for a number of years he was a tenant farmer. In 1849, he began to purchase land. By industry, thrift and economy, he prospered and at his death his farm was one of the largest and best kept in the Ohio Valley. At that time he was the owner of 503 acres of valuable Ohio river bottom land in the upper part of Nile Township, about seven miles from Portsmouth.

In 1847, he married Mary Dortch of Kentucky. They have five children, two of whom lived to maturity: Mrs. Harry S. Grimes, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and George A. Vaughters of Chillicothe. Mrs. Vaughters died in April, 1860, and in December, 1861, he married Mrs. Ada J. Brouse, who had two children: Mrs. Chancey M. Holcomb of Gallipolis, and Mrs. W. C. Brouse of the West Side. Mr. Vaughters was always a Republican. He was a man of the most remarkable energy and strict integrity. He was more successful than either of his brothers in accumulating property. He died April 14, 1891, honored by all who knew him.

William Vaughters

was born in Caroline County, Virginia, in 1817, the third of a family of four sons: John, Thomas G., and Richard M. and one daughter, Mary L. In 1831, his father settled in Ross County, and in the same year in Jackson County. In 1838, he moved to Scioto County. In 1842, he married Miss Sophia Graham, by whom he had two sons and one daughter: John of the West Side, Thomas of Wetmore and Mary Margaret in Illinois, all married. In 1850, he married Mary Bryson by whom he had five children, four sons and a daughter: Richard, William, Carey, Sherman and Ella. He died July 26, 1880. His wife survived him. He was a Republican and served two terms as Infirmary Director from 1871 to 1874 and from 1875 to 1878. In 1871, the vote stood: Vaughters, 2,546; Luther Jones, 2,387; majority, 159. In 1875 he received 3,293 votes to 2,989 for his opponent, C. F. Bradford, majority 304. He was a prosperous and successful farmer and left a good estate. He held the confidence of his neighbors and associates as a just man.

William Veach

was born April 8, 1794, in Surrey County, North Carolina. His father was Thomas Veach and his mother's maiden name was Mary Truitt. Thomas Veach was of Scotch ancestry and the Truitt's were an English family.

In about the year 1800, the family emigrated from North Carolina to Fleming County, Kentucky, using three horses, the mother rode one carrying one child, two children rode another, and the third was used as a pack horse. The father walked.

The boyhood, youth and young manhood days of our subject were spent on the farm in Fleming County, Kentucky, where the father also conducted a still. William Veach had a fair education, derived principally from his father, and he as well as his brothers, five in all, did land surveying in their neighborhood. In 1822, he was married to Miss Ruth Burris, and came immediately with his bride to Scioto County and settled in Nile Township. After the marriage of his son, Thomas Veach moved to Lewis County, Kentucky, where he died in 1848. William Veach was Justice of the Peace for Nile Township July 20, 1863 for three years. From 1855 to 1861, he was a County Commissioner for Scioto County.

On May 2, 1864, when he was seventy years of age, but giving his age as sixty-eight, he enlisted in Company I, 140th O. V. I., for one hundred days, and served until September 3, 1864. In addition to having served in the Civil War himself, he had five sons and one grandson who served in the same war.

In politics he was a Whig, but sympathized with the Know Nothing party while it lasted and became a Republican at the founding of that party. He was a live politician and with great energy worked for his party's interest. He sought to see justice done every man. He was a member of the Methodist Church, at Friendship, although he believed in the creed of the Christian church, of which there was no organization in his locality. He had thirteen children, seven sons and six daughters, of whom but seven, Nathan Thomas, Horatio C., Harriet, Charles Wesley, George W., Mary and Robert P. grew to womanhood and manhood. Of these, Charles Wesley and Mary are now living. Harriet married William Canada Worley and resided and died in Scioto County, Ohio. Mary married Murtaugh Lodwick and resides in Portsmouth, Ohio. Charley Wesley resides at Kingston, Ross County, Ohio. William Veach died of cholera, August 4, 1866, and is buried at Friendship, Scioto County, Ohio.

was a type of the true American, a unit of that great body which makes our country of the highest citizenship of any on the globe.

He was noted for his upright character in youth and in manhood. He was born September 6, 1814, in Adams County. His father was Paul Vigus and his mother's maiden name was Mary Ann Seaman, daughter of John Seaman, one of the pioneers of Adams County. He received his education in the Adams County schools. When of a suitable age, he learned the trade of the stone and brick mason. In 1834, he came to Portsmouth, saw the future possibilities of the town and decided to make this his home.

In 1836, he married Miss Hannah Caroline Ripley, daughter of William Plum Ripley and Cynthia Spencer Ripley. Seven children were born, four of whom, died while quite young; Sylvester Warren, Lewis Taylor, Amanda Emmeline and George Oscar. The surviving children are: Mrs. Hannah C. Edgington, Ada C. and Kate L., a teacher in the public schools in Portsmouth.

Our subject was always anti-slavery in his views and acted with the Republican party. When the war broke out, he desired to enlist in the military service and would have done so, except that he was a sufferer from asthma, which rendered it impossible for him to pass the physical examination necessary for him to become a soldier. His heart was for the Union and there was no more loyal citizen in the country. When the news came, that the rebel, General Morgan, had entered Ohio, it was supposed for a time that he would come through Portsmouth. Mr. Vigus had a flag floating from a staff on the top of his house. Some of his neighbors suggested that he should take it down because if Morgan passed through he would burn his house. Mr. Vigus replied, "That flag shall not come down, I will show my colors, and if Mr. Morgan comes this way, he can do his worst."

About 1877, he removed to a small farm on Dry Run, Washington Township, Scioto County, to improve his health, but the disease from which he had suffered all his life, obtained the mastery, and he died March 21, 1881.

In early life, he united with the Methodist church, and was ever faithful to the doctrines of that denomination. He believed in the gospel of honesty and integrity and lived up to it all his life. As a citizen, a husband, a father, he was a model. To support him all his life, he had the sympathy and co-operation of a model Christian wife. She was born in Cattaraugus County, New York, on April 3, 1812. She came to Portsmouth, with her parents, in 1833. She was a woman most highly esteemed by all who knew her, and was a living example of all the Christian virtues.

Antoine Claude Vincent

was born in Gentilly, France, one league south of Paris, October 13, 1772. His parents were Bourgeois and in easy circumstances. They were devout Catholics and set apart their son for the priesthood.

He was educated for this purpose. He studied Latin and Greek. In his boyhood, he was a chorister in one of the churches near his home. When the time came for him to take orders, he had become somewhat tinctured with the freethinking ideas of that period, and did not feel that he could take the vows. This was a great disappointment to his parents, but he took it philosophically, and for immediate employment went to work in a calico factory. Soon after this he went into the service of a wealthy jeweler, Antionme.

The latter saw and appreciated the signs of the coming Revolution, and determined to leave France. He solicited Vincent to accompany him. The latter, being of an adventurous disposition, consented, and they sailed from Havre de Gras to the United States in the vessel bringing the Gallipolis colony. During the long voyage young Vincent studied English and learned to read and write it.

On his arrival at Alexandria he tried to speak it, but found he could not make himself understood, and that he had to learn to speak the language as well as to read and write it. After arriving at Alexandria, they concluded to cast in their fortunes with the French colonists with whom they came, and so went to Gallipolis. They reached Gallipolis but found it was no place for Mons. Antionme's business. The latter then determined to go to New Orleans with his stock of goods and after trading them to return to France. Vincent was to have a part and share in the venture but was to remain behind his partner to attend to some business and to follow him to New Orleans when he had cleared up the business matters.

Antionme built a fine pirogue, loaded on his stock of jewelry and watches, and put a regular arsenal of fire arms on board to protect his goods. He hired two men, of whom he knew nothing, to row the boat and made his start. It was in the fall of 1791, at the outset of the Indian war. At the mouth of the Big Sandy they encountered a party of Indians in canoes. One canoe, with some of the Indians approached Antionme's pirogue and he prepared to shoot. The two men forbade Antionme to shoot, as it was not certain the Indians were hostile. Antionme studied a moment, and then shot himself through the heart. The Indians hearing the discharge started to row away and Antionme's companions called them back. The Indians then took such of the cargo as they saw fit, threw the remainder in the river with Antionme's body, and let the cowardly white men go, giving them a blanket and loaf of bread each. It is a great pity the Indians did not kill them instant, as could Antionme have appreciated the situation, he would have done that meritorious act himself, and could have proceeded safely to Lime-stone or Ft. Washington, and there could have secured proper escort and proceeded on his voyage. The moral of Antionme's story is always to kill the other fellow first, and take your chances of his killing you. However, a Frenchman is nothing if not tragic, but Antionne's rash act caused this story to be written.

Mons. Vincent had all of his capital in Antionne's goods, and Antionne's suicide caused him to remain in the New World instead of returning to France. He had nothing left but himself and he went to work. He raised chickens, he taught the American children French, etc., but he felt that it was best for him to be among Americans, and he went to Marietta and obtained such employment as he could. Here on the 23rd of January, 1799, he married Mademoiselle Flore Emilie Berthelot. He was then twenty-seven years of age and she was sixteen. She was born November 14, 1783, at Sevres near Paris.

One month after his marriage he made a trip from Marietta to Belpre in a canoe alone. He fell into the river and came near drowning. He managed to get to shore almost exhausted and before he could obtain assistance he came near dying of cold and exposure. This incident caused the first joints of his fingers to stiffen permanently, so that he could never follow his trade, or play the flute afterwards. He regretted the loss of ability to play the flute more than the loss of ability to follow his trade.

While Vincent had not originally been one of the Gallipolis colonists, and had not intended to remain with them, in order to make as good a showing as possible, John Gabriel Gervais put him down as one, and in the allotment of lots he drew one in the hills, number 54, and sold it to Jean Baptist Gobeau for $200. It lies near the Giant Oak Mills. On March 6, 1801, he bought of Stephen Monot four acres, part of the Little French Grant, lot number 6, on the bank of the river. The deed was acknowledged April 21, 1801, before John Belli, a Justice of the Common Pleas Court, and was recorded in Adams County. He located on this land in the fall of 1801. On October 6, 1805, he bought twenty-five acres of lot number five for $200 of Anthony Magnet, and on November 1, 1822, he bought the remaining 125 acres of lot five for $900 of the same party. The same land is now owned by his grandson's wife and has increased in value about eight times over what he paid for it. Madame Vincent received an inheritance from her mother's estate in France of about $3,300, and this was invested in land in the French Grant. The correspondence in obtaining this inheritance from France is yet preserved, and in the hands of Dr. J. L. Taylor of Wheelersburg, a grandson of Mons. Vincent. Albert Gallatin our minister to France, attended to it; and the money was transmitted through John Jacob Astor. Mons. Vincent was naturalized August 31, 1803. He kept a fine garden on his first purchase, but did not hasten to clear up his latter purchases.

His children were: Louise, born June 28, 1800, married John Swain; Antoinette, first married John Squires, then Silas W. Cole

Lucie, married Horatio Caswell; Susan, married Dan Young Whitcomb, and afterwards John R. Powers; Theresa, married Volney Reeves, and afterwards John Hurd; Claudius, died July 2, 1836; Flore Emilie, married John S. Baccus; Marie Jeanie Francoise, married Rev. Landon Taylor.

Mons. Vincent was a fine musician. He was a good player on the flute and violin. He was also a pianist, and could tune pianos.

In 1821, he walked to Gallipolis and back in forty-eight hours to consult a French doctor about his family, four of whom were sick. He disliked horse-back riding, and traveled afoot. He walked to Gallipolis and back in 1837, when he was in his sixty-fifth year. He was an excellent gardener, and kept a vineyard and made wine. He raised tobacco and made cigars. He was a great reader, and C. A. M. Damarin was accustomed to furnish him with books. He took life easy and never hurried himself about anything.

He died August 22, 1846, of a fever, aged seventy-three years, ten months and nine days. In appearance he was a small spare man.

He had all the passion of the traditional Frenchman, and could get towering angry and hiss sacre through his teeth whenever occasion required. If a neighbor wished to borrow anything that Vincent had, he would lend it cheerfully, but with the stipulated proviso that it be forthwith returned in good condition—failing in which, that neighbor was never accommodated the second time. The salient feature of Vincent's character was reliability. His word once being given, there was no evasion or quibbling. It was a prime article of his faith that a promise must be kept sacred at all hazards, and his word had for him as binding an obligation as a bond.

John Heaton Wait

was born March 22, 1811, at West Chazy, New York, on the shore of Lake Champlain. His family record will be found under the title of the Wait family. Benjamin Wait, his father, and family came to Ohio in 1814, from Vermont. The emigrants came by wagons to Pittsburg and on to Portsmouth by river and settled at what is now Wait's Station. His wife's maiden name was Lavina Heaton. She was born June 26, 1775. John H. married Malvina Sikes, September 12, 1839.

When our subject was a youth, he decided to learn the trade of cabinet making and went to Pittsburg for that purpose. He remained there about two years, then went to Cincinnati and completed his course, after which he went back to visit his folks and decided to work at his trade at that place. He was a very skillful workman and his cleverness in designing and constructing furniture was a great source of pleasure to his friends, and some of them lamented the fact that soon everybody would be supplied and he would have nothing to do.

In the year 1838, he moved to Portsmouth and opened a small shop on Market street. The next year, he bought a lot on Jefferson street and built a combined shop and dwelling. Here he made furniture, chairs and coffins for many years, doing all the work by hand. Some of the finest mahogany goods in the way of sideboards, tables and parlor chairs were made here and they were so well made by his superior skill that some of them are in use to this day. Later on he used horse power, the best of that day, and about the year 1850, built a steam factory, one of the first along the river, between Pittsburg and Cincinnati. In 1866, he was joined in business by his son, Gilbert D., and it was conducted under the style of J. H. Wait & Son up to 1884, when he retired from business. His name in business stood for honesty and integrity and the goods he constructed proved the sincerity of his purposes.

His children were: Isabella, Gilbert, Emma, Fannie, Sarah and John, all living except Isabella. In politics, he was first a Whig, afterwards a Republican. He was a member of the Bigelow Methodist church for many years. He died in Portsmouth, October 10, 1897, aged over eighty-six years. His wife died March 5, 1898.

William Waller, Sr.,

brother of George A. Waller, was born Feb. 7, 1805, the son of Dr. Thomas Waller. He grew up in Portsmouth, and became a dry goods merchant, and was in partnership with Jacob McCabe, as Waller & McCabe.

For a considerable time he and Samuel Coles conducted a mill at Unionville in Washington Township. From 1830 to 1834, he was Treasurer of the county. In 1847, he was one of the County Commissioners, and served one term. He was a good citizen and a good business man. He was never married.

He was found dead in his bed November 25, 1854.

George Allen Waller

is descended from Charles Waller who came to Virginia in 1820, in the ship Adelaide, a single man. He married a Miss Allen in Virginia, a native of Liverpool. His son William Waller married a daughter of George Allen whose mother's maiden name was Withers. William Waller's son John was the father of Dr. Thomas Waller, father of our subject. George Allen Waller was born August 24, 1817, on Front street in the city of Portsmouth, in a house which stood just below where Dr. Titus now resides, which was moved to Fifth street below Court where it now stands. His father, Dr. Thomas Waller died July 23, 1823, and his mother, Elizabeth Macfarlane, two years later.

He was reared by his eldest sister and brother William. He went to school in Portsmouth until his seventeenth year, when he went with his brother-in-law Captain Cleveland, to locate a canal from

GEORGE ALLEN WALLER.

Indianapolis to Evansville, Ind. In 1836, he returned to Portsmouth and clerked for his brother William in his office of Canal Collector at Portsmouth. In the spring of 1837, he went to Indiana to superintend the building of a canal and was gone till the close of the year. In 1838, he engaged in store boating on the Ohio river. A boat was built and a store placed on it and floated from town to town along the river. The store boat would be kept at each point as long as it was deemed profitable. In 1839, he carried on wagon-making at Portsmouth with Samuel Peebles. In 1840, he went on the river and spent most of the time as a flat boat pilot until the spring of 1849. In this time he was clerk and captain of a steamboat, though most of the time a pilot. At that time pilots were not licensed.

October 6, 1847, he married to Miss Jane Davey, of Alexandria, Va., in the house where he died.

In the fall of 1848, he was elected Auditor of Scioto County on the Whig ticket, defeating Thomas Kendall on the Democratic ticket. He was re-elected in 1850, defeating James Thoroman. In 1852, he was elected to a third term as Auditor, defeating Thomas Kendall. In 1856, he engaged in the hardware business in Portsmouth and continued in it for a period of over thirty years. In 1857, he was the financial agent of the Buckeye furnace. In 1859, he was Republican candidate for State Senator in the Seventh District, and was defeated by William Newman. In 1861, he was again the Republican candidate for State Senator in the Seventh District, and was defeated by Gen. B. F. Coates by 126 votes. He was a Whig so long as the Whig party lasted. In 1852, he was a delegate to the Whig National Convention at Baltimore, Md. When the Whig party went out he became a Republican and in 1854, he voted for Lincoln for President three times, first as a delegate to the National Convention which nominated him, second at the Presidential election as a voter, and third as a Presidential elector for his District. He became a Democrat in 1866, and remained with that party.

He was eleven years on the Board of Education of Portsmouth, six years from 1857 to 1863, when the Board was composed of three, and afterwards served five years when the members were elected by wards. During his membership the Fourth street, the High school, the Colored school and the Union street building were erected, and he was on the building committee, and was its chairman. He was for twelve years a member of the town and city council. In 1872 and until 1876, he was President of the Iron National bank. He was candidate for Treasurer of Scioto County against Mark B. Wells and was defeated. In 1889, he was elected Mayor of the city, and served one term. In 1893, he was appointed a member of the County Board of Elections and served four years. In 1897, he was appointed a member of the City Board of Elections for four years. He died November 27, 1900.

In all public positions, Mr. Waller has been known for his excellent judgment, and for his integrity. While on the School Board, his fellow members nearly always followed the course advised by him. In school matters, he studied what was best, advocated that, and his fellow members necessarily followed him. But he was wrong in retiring Prof. E. E. White, as circumstances afterwards demonstrated.

John L. Ward

was born in Georgetown, D. C., February 14, 1813. In 1818, his parents moved to Pickaway County, Ohio. At the age of 18, he went to Perryville, Ind., and began blacksmithing. He may be said to have hammered out his fortune on an anvil and it was a good one. In 1832, he went to New Orleans as most young men of his time did and was there during the prevalence of the cholera. He returned to Lancaster, Ohio, and went to blacksmithing.

In 1835, he came to Portsmouth, which then had a population of 400 to 500. In 1836, he and Thomas Wilbahn went into partnership in blacksmithing at the south-east corner of Second and Jefferson streets. They continued in business until 1846, when Wilbahn withdrew and the next year Andrew Applegate came in. In 1843, Ward bought out Applegate and continued in business alone. At the same time he enlarged his business and made plows and wagons. At the same time he conducted a livery stable on Second street in the rear of the Hotel Portsmouth.

His career in public office began in 1843, when he was elected a Councilman from the first ward. In the same year he was a school Trustee. From 1844 to 1849, he was a Trustee of Wayne Township. From 1849 to 1852, he was a member of the town and city Council and one of the Committee on Claims. Hence, he was one of the aristocrats of the town and in that period he governed it and did it well. He always had the affection and good will of the fire laddies and was always trying to do something for them. So much did they think of him in 1859, he was made Fire Chief. From 1859 to 1863, he was Sheriff of Scioto County, and F. C. Searl, then a verdant and unsophisticated country school teacher was his deputy. Searl was an apt pupil in the school of experience and soon learned to be as good a politician as Ward. The latter may truly be said to have been the founder of Judge Searl's fortunes. The Judge admits it himself and hence, no proof is necessary. While Ward was Sheriff there was a remarkable friendship between Ward and Searl, which only terminated with Ward's death. It was a stronger case than that of Damon and Pythias. Ward was much the older man, but the confidence he placed in Searl proved to be well bestowed and it led to making the political and private fortune of Searl. From the Sheriff's office, John L. Ward went into the Treasurer's office and served there two terms, 1864 to 1868. In 1852, with D. N. Murray and George Stevenson he undertook to manufacture engines and machinery. The firm was Ward, Murray & Stevenson, and it made the machinery for the Burgess mill.

In 1855, he sold out of the machine shop and went into the Burgess mill as a part owner, but did not give the business his personal attention and this venture of his very nearly proved his undoing. In 1862, he was a government tobacco inspector and U. S. Provost Marshal. In May, 1863, he performed the pleasantest duty of his life. The city of Portsmouth prepared a carload of provisions, clothing and hospital supplies for the 56th O. V. I., and he and Daniel McIntire went down into the swamps of Louisiana with the goods and delivered them to the soldiers. The trip took them several weeks. The soldiers were much rejoiced to be remembered and unanimously sent back a vote of thanks to the city Council in which Messrs. Ward and McIntire were most highly spoken of. The Council also passed resolutions thanking them for their services in making the trip.

In 1855, he engaged in the hardware business with Joseph Cone as Ward & Cone. After some time George A. Waller was admitted as a partner and the firm was Ward, Waller & Cone. In 1875, Mr. Ward sold out the entire interest to George A. Waller, Cone having previously retired. When the lower mill failed, Mr. Ward apparently to himself was financially ruined, but he made no sign. He sacrificed his property and went on. He retrieved his fortunes and died leaving a fine estate and owing no man a dollar. After he retired from the Treasurer's office he purchased two good farms in Green-Township and became a farmer.

In 1871, he was tempted to go into politics, and became a candidate for County Commissioner. That year the candidates submitted their claims to a vote at the primaries and the poll stood William Kinney 665, John L. Ward, 663; so Mr. Ward continued his farming.

In 1836, Mr. Ward married Miss Mary E. Smith of Lancaster, Ohio. They had one child, Mrs. Ellen Miller, wife of Captain Isaac Miller.

Mr. Ward was not a religious man. An occasional oath to him acted as a safety valve to express his feelings or opinions which were always strong, but if probity and integrity are religion, then Mr. Ward was remarkably religious. The following occurrence will show Mr. Ward's characteristics. A few years prior to his death he determined to put up a monument in the cemetery, and made a contract for the design in granite, having an anvil at the top, which now stands guard over his grave in the cemetery. He was notified that the monument was ready for inspection and acceptance. His neighbor, John F. Gerding was coming to town in an express behind a pair of mules and invited Ward to go with him. Ward accepted, and to reciprocate the favor, told Gerding to put the mules up in his stable on Sixth street. Capt. Isaac Miller warned Ward not to go near the mules in the stable, but Ward, did not think he needed any advice from his son-in-law about mules, and went into the stable. One of them kicked him in the face and knocked out two teeth, disfigured Ward's face very much and he lay unconscious for a half hour before he was discovered. When Ward was brought back to this world he said he thought eternity had come and the mule was the messenger to notify him. When shown the teeth the mule had displaced, he said they would do for corner stones to the proposed monument. Further commenting on the affair he said, "I have lived 72 years, and the idea of being kicked by a d-d old mule at my age is more than any constitution can bear." He, however, admitted that Captain Miller knew more about mules than he did, and that he ought to have listened to his advice.

We do not write this merely for the sake of giving a biography of John L. Ward. What is the lesson of his life? How many blacksmiths die leaving $80,000? How many of that trade rise above the anvil? How many men who are financially ruined at the age of 47 ever regain their fortunes? John L. Ward was a man of iron nerve and remarkable will power. When he determined on anything it was as good as accomplished. He would not undertake anything but what he believed he could do, and when he undertook it, it was done. The life of John L. Ward is a noble lesson and example to all young Americans, if they can walk in the path he followed. If a motto was made to illustrate his life, it would be "Nil desperandum." was born February 2, 1808, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. His parents were Germans. There he learned the tailoring trade, which he followed during his life. When a young man, just of age, he left Philadelphia and went to Washington city, and engaged in business for himself for a year. He enjoyed a very fashionable trade in his business. In 1828, he came to Wheeling, and then to St. Clairsville, Ohio, and from there to Portsmouth, where he located in 1829. His grandson was a member of Congress from the Bedford, Pennsylvania, District, in the early history of the Republic. When he first came to Portsmouth to reside, he lived in a small house on Front street, between Washington and Chillicothe. From there he moved to Court street in the Scott property, between Fourth and Fifth streets, and then to the old homestead opposite Lynn's livery stable, where he died.

He was married to Eliza Gibson, daughter of William Gibson, in the year 1834. Mr. Gibson had been a blacksmith in Washington's Army, and kept a tavern at Bedford, Pennsylvania. William Wertz and wife had six children: Hattie, married to George Dennison, of Milford, Ohio; Ambrose, who died in young manhood; Orloff, who resides in Portsmouth, and is better known as "Buddy;" Mary, married to William Love, of Philadelphia; Wilbur, who is a brick contractor, and Ida, who died in childhood. Mr. Wertz worked a great deal of his time in the latter years of his life for Stephen D. Bishop. He was well up in his trade and could have made a fortune at it, had he tried. He was highly respected wherever he was known.

Mrs. Judith Watkins

was born January 25, 1797, in Hampshire County, Va., the daughter of John and Elizabeth Timbrook near Romney. Her mother was a daughter of Lieutenant Lane, a soldier of the Revolution. Mrs. Lane was one of the ladies who strewed flowers in the pathway of Gen. Washington. The Timbrooks family resided in the Little Cabin valley. When a child she was chased by wolves, and rescued by her parents. In 1857, her mother died in her ninety-first year. Her brothers and sisters were as follows: William, died at Fort Wayne, Ind., aged 86; John, died near Portsmouth in 1840; James, died in the suburbs of Portsmouth in 1865; Rebecca, who married Samuel C. Briggs, died in 1840.

In the fall of 1815, Judith Timbrook married Thomas Bates Watkins. In March, 1821, she and her husband, her mother, sister Rebecca and brother James, with a wagon started west. At Brownsville, Pa., they purchased a flat boat. They laid by, nights and Sundays. They reached Portsmouth in April, 1821. They were laid up at Portsmouth with high winds. The people of Portsmouth tried to induce them to stay, and they sold their boat, bought horses and started for Chillicothe. The roads were so bad, that they gave up and located on the John Orme place, north of Portsmouth, where they raised a garden and Watkins teamed. Their flour was $5.00 per barrel, ham 5 cents per pound, eggs 5 cents per dozen, and all other articles in proportion.

When the Scioto was high, flat boats came down manned by as many as twenty-four hands. Thos. B. Watkins farmed the bottoms for years and then removed to the brick house which formerly stood on Lincoln street north of Robinson avenue. In 1825, just after he went into partnership with Samuel C. Briggs, he was in the bottoms cutting wood when a large dead limb fell on him and paralyzed him. He lay helpless for six weeks. After recovering, he started a grocery where the Second street school house now stands. He remained there till just before the flood of 1852, when he went to Lucasville and kept a tavern. Charles Mastin kept a store there, and the residents there were David Jones, father of Luke; Henry Roush, who also kept a tavern, and Dr. Watkins. A great many teamsters from Lancaster made Watkins' hotel their stopping place, and sometimes there were as many as 20 wagons in front of the hotel at night.

In 1829, they removed to Waverly and kept a tavern there. They entertained Duncan McArthur, Robert Lucas and other distinguished men. In 1851, they returned to Portsmouth, and kept a tavern on Front and Massie streets where Reitz's office now is. Mr. Watkins afterwards kept a tavern known as the "Travelers' Home" which stood east of Chillicothe in the middle of Sixth street in front of the church. Mr. Watkins had always been a Democrat, but he voted for Mr. Lincoln in 1864. He had served in Captain Sealy's Company in the war of 1812. He died November 16, 1884. Mr. Watkins wore the first blue jeans made in Scioto County, and of it mitts were made for Dr. Waller, John Orme, Daniel Noel and other residents. His children were Mrs. S. H. Holmes, Thomas B. Watkins, James, Captain of the Anchor line steamer of St. Louis, Jefferson L., John Watkins, and Mrs. H. Densmore. Her son, William, died in 1865 and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Beatty, in 1865. Mrs. Watkins drew a pension on account of her husband's service in the war of 1812. It was granted under the law of March, 1878. She died April 15, 1885.

Peter and Charlotte Weaver.

Peter Weaver was a colored man born in 1748, an attache of the Court House and a well known character in the town. He was the first boot black in the town. He went to the taverns, shops and stores on Saturday afternoons and blacked shoes and boots. He had customers by the month and by the quarter. He lived on the site of the National Hotel. On April 23, 1825, he was allowed $3.00 for waiting and attending on the Court. On August 6, 1825, for attending on the court for six days, he was allowed $4.50. November term, 1827, he was allowed for waiting on the court, $3.75. For waiting on the court at the march term of 1829, he was allowed $3.75. Samuel M. Tracy had $33.33 1-3 for his services at the same term. On December 30, 1830, he was allowed by the county $4.00 for digging the grave of Mahala Murphy, an insane woman, who died in jail.

Peter Weaver was a member of the First Presbyterian church and prided himself on the fact. The colored churches did not suit him. He always wore a silk hat, usually furnished second hand from some friend in the church. In his latter days, Mr. Robert Bell furnished him in silk hats. In the latter part of his life, Peter lived on the present site of the Sixth Street Methodist church. His wife, Charlotte Weaver was a character. She was a midwife and a factotum about the town. No child could be born, no woman buried and no social function be given, without her assistance. She was born in 1778, on the south branch of the Potomac river, a slave, and at ten years was sold to a master named Walker, who took her to Kentucky. There she married Peter Weaver, who had had two wives before, and was 3 years older than she. Weaver worked and bought his own freedom. Then he borrowed $1,000 and bought his wife's freedom, but was unable to buy that of his child by her. They came to Portsmouth before the town was located and built a cabin. They continued to live in Portsmouth till he died in 1865, at the age of 117 years. She survived until September 12, 1883, when she died in Columbus, Ohio, at the age of 105 years. She had never been sick and was found dead in her bed.

located in Portsmouth, in 1819. He had a good education and was very expert in figures. From 1815 to 1819 he was clerk of Wayne Township. From 1817 to 1821 he was Sheriff of Scioto County; at the same time he was collector of taxes. In 1820 he took part in the famous Fourth of July celebration. He was one of the marshals of the procession and Gen. William Kendall was the other. There was a public dinner and he responded to two toasts. On July 17, 1820, he issued an address to the electors of Pike, Scioto and Lawrence Counties as a candidate for Legislature, and while he led the poll in Scioto County, he was not elected. David Mitchell and William Miller were elected. The vote stood as follows: Nathan Wheeler, 465; Caleb Hitchcock, 431; David Mitchell, 200; Miller, 151. This was before the time of political conventions and when each man determined his own candidacy. He had a brick yard in the east end of Portsmouth and made brick there. In December, 1820, he went into partnership with Arnold G. Sergeant, as a watch repairer, silver and gun-smithing. He was the first person who ever made building bricks in Portsmouth.

On May 4, 1817, John Brown resigned as councilman and Nathan Wheeler was appointed in his place. In 1819, he was Road Supervisor of Portsmouth. He died about the year 1826, but the exact date is not known, neither is his place of burial.

He was married March, 1811 or 1812 to Nancy Chamberlin. They had three children. She was born in 1792, in Vermont and emigrated to Blennerhasset Island in 1801. She died at Ceredo, West Virginia, in June, 1869, in her 77th year.

Nathan Wheeler was a public spirited citizen. He was ever ready to take part in any public function, whether as a marshal, speaker, or otherwise. He was well liked by his contemporaries. He was industrious and active and a suitable man to aid in building up a city or county. His residence while in Portsmouth was on the north side of Second street, near the Scioto river bridge, and it is said that he kept a ferry there part of the time.

Major Amos Wheeler

was born in Massachusetts, September 5, 1761. He was the son of Nathan Wheeler, a merchant who served for more than five years in the Revolutionary army, being an officer of the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment, commanded by Col. Thomas Nixon.

Amos Wheeler served in the Revolution (see Revolutionary soldiers) and was an eye witness of the execution of Major Andre, the famous British spy, at Tappan, N. Y., October 2, 1780, being one of the horse guard at the time.

After the Revolution, he moved to Bethlehem township, Grafton, County, New Hampshire, and married Elizabeth Snow at Bath, N. Y., October 11, 1788. His wife was the daughter of a sea captain, who spent a great many years on the ocean, and who wrote a book on the Millennium. Amos Wheeler believed with the Declaration of Independence, that all men should be treated alike, and tried to be sociable and friendly with the poorest and most ignorant as well as with the wealthy and educated. He was major in the militia, and a Presbyterian. His wife was a Free Will Baptist, aristocratic, choosing her associates among the wealthy and refined, but always treating the "back woods" people kindly. Although they differed in religion and politics, there never was any quarreling between them.

The family relations were unusually congenial because the children were carefully taught to respect each other's rights and feelings. So peace and kindness reigned in spite of all irreconcilable opinions.

In 1808, Amos Wheeler together with his family, which then consisted of his wife, two sons, and three daughters, moved from New Hampshire, and settled in the town of Wheelersburg, Scioto County, Ohio. Amos was accompanied to Ohio by his father Nathan Wheeler, an old man who loved to tell war stories, and to sing war songs to the boys. He died in 1812 lacking but two weeks of being 90 years old. During the war of 1812, Amos Wheeler offered his services to his country, and it is believed took part in the expedition against the British and Indians at Vincennes, Ind.

July 17, 1818, while yet a resident of Scioto County he applied for a pension, which was granted and continued until his death. About 1822, he sold his place at Wheelersburg to the Rev. Dan Young who also was from New Hampshire, and moved to Marion County, Ohio. Amos was tall and fair with curling hair, and grew bald as he grew older. He died March 27, 1827, aged 66 years and 6 months, and was buried at Marion, Ohio.

His wife, Elizabeth, who was born on December 16, 1771, was small and her eyes and hair were very black. She was a very handsome woman and used to in the earliest days, wear high-heeled shoes, and hoops so large that she had to tilt them to pass through a door. To the very last she used her face powder, and was fond of fine caps, and was dainty and precise in her dress and manners. She had something of a military spirit, for she walked with much spirit and precision in all her movements, something like a trained soldier, even to the last years of her life. She was so well acquainted with the Scriptures,—book, chapter and verse,—that her son-in-law, a minister, when hurried, consulted her rather than turn to the concordance. She was very helpful to him in his ministry, which was a widely successful one. She was in her 73rd year when she died. Elizabeth Wheeler, drew a pension as widow of a Revolutionary soldier, until the time of her death which occurred in June, 1843 at East Liberty, Ohio, where she made her home during the latter part of her life with her eldest daughter, Elizabeth, then the wife of Rev. David Dudley.

Amos and Elizabeth Wheeler were the parents of six children, three sons and three daughters. The five eldest children were born in New Hampshire, and the youngest Horatio Nelson was born at Wheelersburg, Ohio, August 4, 1811.

It might perhaps be interesting to note in this connection that a number of the grandsons of Major Wheeler took part in the Civil War, among them being Lieut. Edward D. Wheeler who graduated from West Point on June 13, 1864, served during the siege of Petersburg, Va., and was at the action of Laurel Hill and was Asst. Adj. General of the 25th Army Corps when Grant entered Richmond, and who served for many years in the regular army. Lieut. Amos Wheeler, a man in every way worthy of his namesake, took part in many hard fought battles, and accompanied Sherman to the sea. David Thompson, son of Mahala (Wheeler) Thompson, second daughter of Major Amos Wheeler, entered the army as a Second Lieutenant, in the 82nd Ohio, and was rapidly promoted to Colonel. He was wounded at the battle of Dallas, Ga., and again at Averysboro, N. C., for his services in which he was brevetted, Brigadier General, to date, from March 13, 1865. For his bravery at the battle of Gettysburg he was presented with a magnificent sword by the privates, and non-commissioned officers of the 82nd Ohio regiment.

Ruluff Whitney

was born in Salisbury, Conn., June 25, 1777. His father was Christopher Whitney and his mother, Mary Ticknor of Sharon, Conn. His great-great-grandfather, John Whitney, of Watertown, Mass., located there from London, England, in June, 1835, coming on the ship "Elizabeth and Anne." He was soon admitted as a freeman and for twenty years was selectman, constable and town clerk. The founder of the family in England was Turstin the Fleming, or Turs-tin De Wigmore, or Sea Rover, whose distinction between meum and tuum were of the vaguest character and who with other gentlemen (?) of his kind followed in the wake of William, the Conqueror, from Normandy and England, for anything which might turn up.

Christopher Whitney was a Revolutionary soldier. In 1790, he went to the western part of New York, to take up land as a reward for his military services in the Revolution.

1800, Ruluff Whitney married Susan Glenney of Virgil, New York. In 1806, he was a Justice of the Peace of his township. He lived at Dryden Corners, Cayuga County, New York, until 1816. There was a frost every month that year and he determined to go further south. He started with his family for New Orleans. They went in wagons to Pittsburg, Pa. The party was composed of himself, wife and eight children. At Pittsburg he invested most of his money in goods for trading down the river. These goods were lost in a storm in the river. The family stopped at Pomeroy, Ohio, and Mr. Whitney bought coal land. After remaining here a year or so, he loaded a boat with coal and started with his family to New Orleans, but went to St. Louis. He left his family at St. Louis and took up a claim and built a cabin in Illinois. Coming back to St. Louis to renew his journey to New Orleans, some of his children had been attacked with yellow fever but recovered.

This induced him to give up the voyage to New Orleans and as soon as his children recovered, he took his family on a steamboat to go up the Ohio and return to his old home in New York.

On the boat going up the Ohio, he fell in with a citizen of Portsmouth, who persuaded him that one of the poles of the earth came out there. He was so charmed with what he had heard of Portsmouth that he determined to stop there and did so in January, 1821. He never left the town and is buried in its cemetery. In 1825, he was Coroner of the County. In 1829, he bought the lot known as the Whitney corner where the Washington hotel now stands. He built a part of the building first placed on the lot and moved another part, from Jefferson street. He gave $111.82 for the north one-half of inlot No. 2, 66x82½ feet on the northwest corner of Second and Market streets and bought of Hugh Cook. He gave Mercy Cook, the wife, $5.00 extra to release her dower.

He got coal off his lands in Meigs County, Ohio, and sold it in Portsmouth. The coal first burned in the court house at Portsmouth, was sold to the County, December 6, 1831, at 16½ bushels for fifty cents. Our pioneers were desperately reckless about spelling and in entering the transactions on the Commissioners' Journal, they spelled coal, "cole." Moses Gregory, then Auditor, will have to stand responsible for this error as he was Auditor at that time. Mr. Whitney had a coal yard on Jefferson street north of Second and later on his lots opposite the court house on Sixth street.

In 1837, he burned and furnished the brick for the present court house. He first used the entire Whitney corner building for a residence. Then he kept a grocery there. In 1837, he went into the pork packing business and built the brick house on Market street so long used by Maxwell as a feed-store.

In 1833, he was a Health Officer of Portsmouth; was re-elected in 1834, but declined to serve. In 1836, he was appointed and served as Health Officer. In 1836, he was elected clerk of the market at $15.00 per year. He declined to accept the office, at that compensation, and Thomas Ferrin was elected at $30.00 per year and accepted.

Ruluff Whitney was a large, portly man, lacking one-fourth of an inch of six feet, with florid complexion, light hair and blue eyes. His wife was under size, plump and with very black eyes and hair. After he had bought the Whitney lots on Sixth street near the court house, he tried to have the street laid out east, in a straight line until it struck Lawson's Run, but the men in Portsmouth who made it their business to block streets, and in each generation got in their work, said he was entirely selfish in the matter and his plan was defeated.

His wife was a Presbyterian all her life. He attended that church with her, but later he attended All Saints church. He died at his residence on the Whitney corner August 8, 1846. His wife died a year previous. A few years before their death they together made a long visit to their friends and old home in New York. They are buried in the old Funk graveyard in Kinney's Lane. Their children were eight in number. John resided on the corner of Sixth and Court streets. He was married twice and had two sons, John Nesbit and James Glenny; Mary Ticknor, a daughter, married Hannibal H. Hamlin and resided in Cincinnati. She had five children who attained maturity: Ruluff Whitney, Jr., a son, died in Portsmouth in 1824; Susan Whitney, a daughter married Elisha G. Stone and lived in Cincinnati; she had five children to attain maturity. Sarah Whitney, a daughter married Andrew Rowan Harden and resided in Cincinnati; she had five children to attain maturity. William Glenny Whitney, a son, resided in Portsmouth all his life, and has a sketch below. Minerva Whitney married Abjah Curtis of Connecticut and was childless. Olive Whitney married Col. Allen Campbell McArthur of Chillicothe, Ohio. They had five children.

Ruluff Whitney, our subject, has sixty-eight grand-children and eighty-seven great-grandchildren, all of whose names and addresses are known to Miss Belle Whitney of Portsmouth, Ohio.

William Glenny Whitney

was born April 11, 1811, at Dryden's Four Corners, Cayuga County, New York. It is now in Tompkins County. He was the third and youngest son of Ruluff Whitney and Susannah Glenny. His mother was the daughter of John and Nancy Nesbit Glenny of Virgil, New York. The Glennys emigrated from Newry, County Down, Ireland, in 1795. Ruluff Whitney was a descendant of John and Eleanor Whitney, who emigrated from England, and settled at Wattertown, Mass., in 1635.

Mr. Whitney resided with his parents as long as they lived. Until he was about six years of age, they lived in Dryden and vicinity. In the year 1817, they went to Pomeroy, Ohio, where they resided until 1820. In 1821 they settled in the town of Portsmouth. Our subject attended school three months in the winter in town. The teacher was paid by the parents of the pupils. One of his teachers was in the habit of taking a long nap in the afternoons and it was a favorite amusement for the boys to try which could approach close enough to shake a fist under his nose and regain his seat without arousing him. We are not informed who that teacher was, but it may have been William Jones. However, William G. Whitney was disposed to learn and kept his books and slate for study and studied at every opportunity. He was quite a reader of the English classics.

In 1830, he and his brother, John, bought out the father's business and conducted it under the name of J. & W. G. Whitney. They engaged in forwarding freight on the canal and were part owners of the steamboat "Olive," plying between Cincinnati and Portsmouth. William G. was the Captain.

On January 22, 1831, our subject was commissioned Ensign of the First Regiment, Second Division, Second Brigade State Militia. He was qualified July 11, before Silas Cole, Adjutant. He was called Captain because he became Captain of a militia company in Portsmouth.

Mr. Whitney was twice married. His first wife was Miss Melvina Fleming, whose parents came from Pennsylvania. There were four children of this marriage: Ruluff, who lives at 419 Arch street, Cincinnati, Ohio; Susan, wife of John S. Womble, of Oviedo, Orange County, Florida; William Fleming and James, an infant who was killed by a fall when he was two days old, the mother following four days after, April 29, 1847.

In 1837, 1838 and 1840, Wm. G. Whitney was overseer of the poor of Wayne Township. From 1840 to 1844, he was town street commissioner of Portsmouth. In 1842, he succeeded Jacob Offnere as town Treasurer and was elected annually until 1845 when he was succeeded by John Waller. He was a communicant of All Saints church and from 1847 to 1851, he was a vestryman. In 1850, he was on the building committee.

In 1850, Mr. Whitney was married to Miss Elcy F. M. Voorhees, daughter of Isaac Voorhees and his wife, Isabella McCormack. Mr. Voorhees came to Ohio from Brownsville, New Jersey, a son of Jacob Van Voorhees and his wife, Hannah Sickles. Jacob Voorhees, his father, was a Revolutionary soldier, and descended from a Stephen Coerte Van Voor Hees, who emigrated from the province of Drenthe, Holland, April 1660, on the ship "Bontekoe," meaning "spotted cow," and settled at Flatland, Long Island. The children of our subject's marriage were: Isabella Olive, Mary Jane, married Charles Edwin Jewell, died at Toronto, Canada, June 14, 1889, leaving three children; Elsie G., Martha W., who died in infancy, and Teresa, who married Allen Campbell McArthur, of Circleville, Ohio.

PIONEERS OF SCIOTO COUNTY.

In 1851, the partnership with his brother John was dissolved. John W. took the Sixth street property, and William G. took the Second and Market street corner. Later, he took into partnership his wife's brother-in-law, James D. McLean. In 1859, the firm abandoned the grocery business and confined themselves to commission and to transporting freight on the canal. The business of freighting on the canal was very lucrative during the Civil War. Mr. Whitney's business required him to spend much of his time traveling the country between Portsmouth and Columbus, which he did in a buggy built by John L. Ward. It is said he brought the first locomotive for the Hamden Branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad by canal.

In 1870, James D. McLean, Mr. Whitney's partner, retired from the business and it was conducted by him alone. He was a town guard in Portsmouth in 1875.

Mr. Whitney was a Whig and later a Republican in his political views. However, he had a strong dislike to party slavery. While at least after middle age, not an active politician, he always informed himself of the party candidates and never hesitated to scratch from his ticket, the man whom he knew to be unfit for office. Mr. Whitney was essentially a refined man, disliking roughness and coarseness in reading or companionship. While alive to business opportunities, he had no taste for going beyond in a bargain or shoving another man aside. He never used tobacco in any form. He died February 9, 1889, and is interred in Greenlawn cemetery.

Joseph Williamson

came to Ohio from New Jersey and located on government land, on the site of the town of Alexandria. He had a family of nine children: Frank, William, Joseph, Peter, James, Thomas, Margaret, Anna and Sarah. He died in 1812. His wife, Martha (Fort) Williamson died in 1834. Both are buried in Washington township. His son, Joseph was the father of George Williamson of Dry Run, who has a sketch and picture herein.

Alden Washington Williamson was born February 7, 1819 in Flat Woods, West Virginia, near Louisa, Kentucky. He was the son of Hiram and Mary (Swearingen) Williamson. His father died when he was only fifteen and left several children, of whom he was the eldest. His first employment away from home was on the steamboat "Transit" as a deck hand at $15.00 per month. She was a side-wheeler built by Samuel J. Huston and owned by Captain James W. Davis and Luke P. N. Smith. She ran from Portsmouth to Cincinnati and made two trips a week. She was 100 tons burden. He worked on her until he was made mate at eighteen and then went on the "Ashland," a stern-wheel steamboat owned by the same parties. She ran from Portsmouth to Cincinnati. Captain Tinker was the master. Our subject was mate for ten years on these two boats or until 1847. After the "Ashland" was built, the pilot, steward, engineer and mate all got $1.00 per day. They served some time at this rate and then all who had been receiving $1.00 per day were raised to $40.00 a month, except our subject. He determined not to stand it and left the boat at Cincinnati. All of the crew wanted him to remain but he refused and returned to Portsmouth on a Pittsburgh boat. In the six weeks following his leaving the "Ashland" it had five mates successively. They lost money, and Captain Davis offered Williamson $75.00 per month to go back on the boat, but he declined. They had paid $60.00 for a mate after he left.

December 22, 1841, he was married to Sarah Ann Gharky, daughter of David Gharky. After he left the "Ashland," he engaged in building flat boats for David Gharky and saved $300 from his labors. He bought a canal boat and four horses for $600 paying $300 down and the remainder at $50 per month. He ran the canal boat for ten years and regards this as the pleasantest part of his life. He carried passengers and furnished meals and carried all freight which offered. The rates of fare were $3.00 to Columbus, $1.00 to Waverly and $1.50 to Chillicothe, including meals and lodging and the boats crew and passengers lived on the fat of the land. He ran to Columbus and return and made one trip a week. The boat carried a double crew and ran the whole 24 hours. He cleared $7,500 in four and one-half years. For eight years he used horses, but the last two years he was on the canal, he ran a propeller. He bought it for $2,500 and sold it to a southern man for $5,000.

He went to St. Joseph Missouri, for eighteen months, and there ran a ferry boat which he had purchased at Portsmouth and taken out with him. The boat was a steamboat named "General Gaines." He and his partner, a Mr. Knight, cleared $600 in 46 days by ferrying emigrants on their way to California. He traded the boat for 160 acres of land two miles back of St. Joseph. He gave $10 per acre for this land, held it three years and sold it for $25 per acre. The Captain thinks it was the mistake of his life in not holding on to this land, as it is now in the center of the city of St. Joseph, a city in 1870, of over 52,000 people. The Captain was like everyone else who has ever lived in Portsmouth, he had a longing to come back, and he did come back. He built two steamboats: the "Cotton Valley" and the "Bedford." He sold the "Cotton Valley" and sunk the "Bedford" at Tower Island, ninety miles below St. Louis. He got $670 out of the wreck of the "Bedford" and bought the "Fashion" and paid $1,200 for her. He ran her from Portsmouth to Rome. The "Fashion" was sadly out of repair and after repairing her a number of times, he rebuilt her and changed her name to the "Reliance." He sold her for $2,250, paid his debts and had $200 left.

He and Captain Pres Lodwick bought the propeller, "W. F. Gaylord," and on Nov. 16, 1881, she was run down by the towboat "D. T. Lane," and sunk at Ashland, Ky. All the crew were saved except the cook, Elizabeth Meade. The "Gaylord" was going to land and the "Lane" had a fleet of empties. Captan John N. Lodwick was aboard the "Gaylord" as a guest and was in bed when the crash came. He secured two wooden life preservers and the boat sank under him. He floated down the river, and was rescued by the "Nellie Brown" after he had been in the water about thirty minutes. Captain John N. Lodwick had been blown up four times, sunk three times and run over by a railroad train once.

Captain Williamson is one of the best illustrations of "pluck" who ever lived in Portsmouth or anywhere else. He has made and lost fortunes. He has all the bad luck any one possibly could have. He is badly crippled up and has to go abroad with a crutch under each arm, but nevertheless, he goes about and attends to any business he can do just as though he were young. He goes to church every Sunday and attends to every duty and obligation just as though he had a grant of life for 100 years to come. Whenever Captain has been called on to go through a season of adversity, like Mark Tapley, he always "comes out strong." He is never dismayed, never overcome. If the British gave him the task of subduing the Boers in South Africa, he would undertake it and do it, too, if he lived long enough, even if he had to go about on trestle work like he does now. He has clung to the Ohio river and is known by everyone on its banks from Portsmouth to Cincinnati, and they are all his friends. If he were in that trade again, he could carry every pound of freight which could be loaded on his boat.

John Williams.

better known as "Rocky" Williams was born in Scioto County near Rarden, September 25, 1830. His father was Matthew Williams, an early settler, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Jones. The only education he had was that of the common schools of the vicinity. He was a tall, slender built man, with very black hair, and was the most popular man who ever lived in Brush Creek Township. For sixteen consecutive years, he was Assessor of his township, and was also township Treasurer for two or three terms. In his political views, he was a Democrat. His occupation was a farmer, but at the same time his energy was such that he engaged in buying and selling lumber.

He married Saloma Ann Hibbs, daughter of Samuel Hibbs, in 1862. Mr. Hibbs' mother's maiden name was Sarah Catherine Tencer. Three children were born to them: Eliza, the oldest, was married to John Newman, of Rarden, September 29, 1888, and is the mother of four sons: Charles was born September 8, 1875. He is the agent of the N. & W. Railroad at Mineral Springs, and Della Pearl, who died July 29, 1891. He was one of the best business men in his township. There was no new enterprise project in his community in his period of business activity which covered all his life from the age of twenty, in which he did not have a part. He promoted all public enterprises. He was a man of very firm purposes and good judgment. He had most excellent qualities of mind and heart, and when he died he was more generally missed by the community than any man who ever lived in it before, or in his time.

John Asher Winkler

was born November 5, 1820, at Harrisonville, Scioto County, Ohio, and is of German, French and English descent. He is the son of Asher Winkler and Rebecca Rockwell, his wife. His great-grandfather Winkler, whose father went to England from Germany emigrated thence to Maryland. His father with his parents moved to New York and settled near Elmira. Here his father married Rebecca Rockwell, who was of French and English descent. She was a daughter of Job Rockwell, a Revolutionary soldier. Mr. Winkler's uncles, James and John W., fought in the war of 1812. On July 5, 1816, his parents landed in Ohio, having floated from the source of the Alleghany to just below Wheelersburg.

The country at that time was practically a wilderness. They purchased the land on which Harrisonville was afterwards built. Here they lived for several years, but the land not being very productive, they sold it and bought another farm near Lucasville which proved to be as poor as the other. They lived here two years and then sold again this land, purchasing land back of Wheelersburg. But on account of the unhealthfulness of the country; they were not satisfied and determined to try it further west. Having some friends near Piqua, Ohio, they sold out and gathered together their household effects and set out thither.

Our subject was then a sturdy lad of twelve, and was the proud possessor of a yoke of calves which his father had given him. His father wished to sell the calves before setting out, but the boy would not have it. So he rode in his cart and drove his calves all the way to Piqua. His father having refused to feed the calves the following winter, he was compelled to seek work to get feed for them. He secured work in Piqua for himself and his calves, and thus at the age of thirteen, was begun a career which ended in a modest fortune.

His parents returned to Wheelersburg in 1834, and this year marks the close of his schooling. At the age of seventeen, he began work for himself at La Grange furnace. When he commenced working, he vowed he would not touch strong drink, nor gamble, nor associate with those who did and that he would save enough by the time he was twenty-one to keep him from working for a daily pittance. He quit La Grange furnace when he was twenty. He had saved $600 and had also gained a reputation for honesty and uprightness of character.

Buying some oxen, he commenced dragging rock for the locks which were being built at the falls of the Licking river. Here he labored until he was twenty-one. Faithful to his vow, he had saved $1,630, and had four valuable yoke of oxen. Turning his paper scrip into gold in Cincinnati, he walked and drove his oxen home.

He then began taking contracts for digging and delivering coal and ore at the furnaces in Scioto and Lawrence Counties. He was thus employed at Franklin Furnace for eleven years, at Junior Furnace, one year, at Ohio Furnace one year, and at Union Furnace two years. * He also worked at Harrison Furnace and was manager there for some time. From there he went to Boone Furnace in Greenup County, Kentucky, where he was manager for a time.

With this, he ended his furnace career, and was worth $20,000. He met with some severe losses during his time, by fire and water, but not by his own mismanagement. He then bought the farm at Haverhill where Samuel Krickenberger now lives and has farmed ever since. His success at farming has been no less phenomenal than his furnace career, having more than doubled the fortune he had at that time. He has made most of his money at farming, by taking advantage of a low price and selling at an advance, also in raising stock. Recently he has made a division of his property among his children, saving enough for his own comfort while he lives.

He was a Whig, until the breaking up of the party, and then he became a Republican, and is still with that party. He has been a member of the Methodist church at Haverhill for thirty-six years, a greater part of which time he has held office in the church. On March 10, 1842, he married Cynthia Chandler, whose grandfather was English and moved to Ohio in 1802. Their family consisted of five sons and six daughters, of whom three sons and four daughters are now living. They are as follows: Mary, the wife of Claudius Cadot, died July 12, 1901; Ruby, the wife of John Oakes; Emma, the wife of Samuel Krickenberger; Silenda, the wife of Frank Seamen; Stephen, residing near Hanging Rock, O.; John, and George are engaged in the lead business in Missouri.

Simeon Wood

was born September 7, 1804, in Cayuga County, New York. His father was Abner Wood, and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Campbell. His father was born in 1766. His father and mother had sixteen children and reared twelve of them. Abner Wood emigrated to Ohio when our subject was four years of age. His father died in 1882, and his mother died April 18, 1853, in the eightieth year of her age. Both are buried in the cemetery in the rear of the Scioto church, a mile below Harrisonville on the road to Sciotoville. Abner Wood when he first landed in Scioto County settled in Alexandria in the year 1808. He then settled in the Scioto valley on the east side; but the family suffered so with fever and ague that he moved to the Little Scioto in 1812.

He was reared a Presbyterian. His son Simeon, at the age of twenty-eight, connected himself with the United Brethren church on Little Scioto, because there was no Presbyterian church near. He married Emeline White, daughter of Daniel White. She was born Nov. 9, 1815, in Greenup County, Kentucky. They were married Oct. 31, 1852. They went to housekeeping on a farm at Little Scioto where they spent their lives. They had the following children; Martha, born November 30, 1833, died January 1, 1834; Elizabeth, born July 31, 1835, married James Sampson, and died July 19, 1897. He resides in Harrisonville; Sarah, born December 14, 1837, married Milton W. Brown; Ruth, born March 17, 1841, died February 18, 1858. The mother died December 1, 1875.

While the Whig party lasted, Simeon Wood was nominally a Whig; but in reality he was the strongest kind of abolitionist. He had learned the carpenter's trade. He worked for Dan Young, and helped build Franklin and Junior furnaces. He also helped build Scioto furnace. There was a life-long friendship between him and Dan Young. He was a great admirer of Dan Young's prominent traits.

Simeon Wood was a man of strong convictions on every subject. He made it a rule to always be in the creditor class. He abhorred debt and always liked to have a surplus on hands. He followed the carpenter's trade as it suited his convenience. He had advanced ideas on the subject of temperance. In the year 1843, he built a barn. At that time it was customary to furnish liquors to be drank at all raisings. He said he would break the custom; he would raise his barn and there should be no liquors used on the occasion. He kept his word and managed to have his barn raised, but his neighbors did not believe he could do it. He died in December, 1896, at the advanced age of ninety-two, in the enjoyment of all his faculties, respected and honored by all who knew him.

John Yoakley, Sr.,

son of William and Letitia (Hammond) Yoakley, was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1817. He emigrated to this country in 1838, first locating at Zancsville, Ohio, where he remained but a short time. He then removed to Portsmouth, and accepted a position in a banking house of which Peter Kinney was President. After serving in this position for several years, he resigned, and embarked in the business of wholesale and retail dealer in music and musical instruments, in which business he continued the remainder of his life.

Mr. Yoakley was a musician of fine attainments, both as a composer and teacher, and for thirty-three years was organist of All Saints church, of which he was a consistent member. He resigned as organist May 30, 1877. He came from a family of musicians, his father and two brothers being quite noted composers.

Mr. Yoakley was married in 1847, to Susan St. John, daughter of Ralph and Lillian St. John, of Grayson, Kentucky. The children born of this union were: Lucy Howe, now Mrs. R. L. Cannon of Cincinnati, Ohio; Letitia Hammond, wife of Charles Kinney, of Columbus, Ohio; Lillian St. John, now Mrs. Lillian S. Gunn, and John Yoakley of Cincinnati, Ohio, the latter of whom inherits his father's great musical talent. Mrs. Yoakley died August 14, 1862, her husband surviving until 1877. He was a prominent Mason. Mr. Yoakley was a man of high character and gentle disposition, beloved by all who knew him. He was one of the few, of whom it may be truthfully said, that the world is better because of his having lived in it.

Aurora Lodge No. 48, Free and Accepted Masons.

This lodge was instituted September 21, 1818. The charter members were Ezra Osborn, Samuel Gunn, Nathan K. Clough, William Dailey, George Clark, Robert Scott, Silas Cole and William Oldfield. Grand Master Henry Brush instituted the lodge. It met in the McDowell building on Front and Market streets. Ezra Osborn was Worshipful Master; Nathan K. Clough, Senior Warden; George Clark, Junior Warden; William Dailey, Treasurer; Jacob Evans, Secretary; Silas Cole, Senior Deacon; Floyd Talbot, Junior Deacon; Robert Scott, Tyler. On September 24, 1818, these officers were publicly installed at the court house, then on Market street.

It worked under a dispensation till 1820, and was granted a charter, December 26, of that year. The following officers were elected: S. S. Wilkinson, Worshipful Master; G. S. B. Hempstead, Senior Warden; William Oldfield, Junior Warden; Jacob Offner, Treasurer; Marcus Bosworth, Secretary; James Abbott, Senior Deacon; Wilson Gates, Junior Deacon; James Hummell, Tyler.

The lodge occupied the McDowell building till 1831. From 1831 to 1843, it met in James Lodwick's house on Front street, between Madison and Massie on the corner of Pine alley. In 1843, it removed to the Whitney building where James A. Maxwell had a feed store. The Lodge then took quarters in the Cook building on the west side of Market street between Second and Third, in 1854.

On May 18, 1855, a move was made toward the erection of the present Masonic building. Thomas G. Lloyd, George Stevenson, J. J. Appler and S. S. Fuller were appointed a committee to carry on the work. James Lodwick subscribed $250 and Jacob Offnere, $300. $4,885 was raised for building purposes. On August 6, 1855, plans were ordered and on November 24, 1855, contracts were ordered. Appler and Varner did the brick work; Fuller and Carre, the wood-work, and James Grimes, the iron-work. The work was commenced in May, 1856. June 18, 1856, the corner stone was laid. Grand Master, William B. Dodds, of Cincinnati officiated. Rev. Nicholls, Grand Orator, delivered the address. In 1857, work was suspended at the second story and in the summer of 1857, the building was closed. In the fall of 1858, a five year lease was made of the second floor part to the Hebrew Congregation and it paid two years in advance. In December, 1858, the Lodge took the south room on the second floor. In 1859, the Lodge borrowed $4,000 to complete the building and owed Thomas Dugan $2,700 besides. He sold the north half of the lot, first and second floor, to the Hebrew congregation and satisfied his claim. The south one-half of lot and first floor he sold to a Building Association, but it was re-purchased by the Lodge in 1885. On November 19, 1866, a move was made to finish the third floor and $3,438.37 was raised which finished it.

The principal early workers in the Lodge were: Samuel Gunn, William Dailey, Dr. Thomas Waller, Nathan K. Clough, Dr. G. S. B. Hempstead, Hiram Wilson, Silas Cole, Wilson Gates, Marcus Bosworth, Ezra Osborn, Robert Scott, Moses Gregory, Dr. Jacob Offnere, Rev. Stephen Lindsley, David K. Cady, James Lodwick, C. A. M. Damarin, Murtaugh Kehoe, William Hall, William Salter, Jacob P. Noel, Robert Lucas, Arthur C. McArthur, Joseph Wadde, Jonathan Cutler, Josiah Shackford, Dr. Erastus Burr, William Oldfield and Washington Kinney. Jacob Offnere gave the Lodge $500 by will and William Salter gave it $1,000. The Past Masters are as follows:

1820, Samuel Wilkinson; 1821 and 1855, William Oldfield; 1825-39, Ezra Osborne; 1822 and 1826-40, Dr. G. S. B. Hempstead; 1840-1, 1843-4, 1848 and 1858-62, George Stevenson; 1842, 1847 and 1853-4, Arthur C. Davis; 1845-6, Moses Gregory; 1849-50, R. C. Jordan; 1851-2, L. G. Terry; 1857, Rev. Jacob Nichols; 1863, T. J. Pursell; 1866, Elijah Nichols; 1867, B. F. Coates; 1868-73, J. H. Johnson; 1874-6, R. W. Farden; 1877-9, W. A. Connolley; 1880-2, Thomas L. Jones; 1883-5, C. S. Cadot; 1886, F. B. Kehoe; 1887-8, George Padan; 1889, D. B. Thurlow; 1890-1, A. J. Fuller; 1892, E. F. Draper; 1893, J. A. Ives; 1894-5, B. F. Vincent; 1896, J. S. Dodge; 1897, W. B. Altzman; 1898, Dr. J. S. Rardin; 1899, Robt. G. Bryan; 1900, J. C. Adams; 1901, C. F. Calvin.

James Lodwick was Treasurer from 1852 to 1879, twenty-seven years. Francis Cleveland was Secretary from 1852 to 1872, when he was paralyzed.

The present officers are: Geo. F. Roberts, W. M.; Dr. G. A. Sulzer, S. W.; L. W. Baker, J. W.; W. C. Silcox, Treasurer; Geo. Padan, Secretary; H. C. Mitchell, S. D.; S. P. Shaw, J. D.; A. J. Reinhard, Tyler.

PART IV.
BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

George Follansbee Abbott

was born January 6, 1875, at Utica, New York. His father was John T. Abbott, a traveling salesman, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Johnson. He was the eldest of four children, two sons and two daughters. He attended school at Utica, New York, until he was ten years of age, when his father moved to Columbus, O., and he attended school there until he was nineteen years of age. He then engaged in the paint business with his father, in Columbus until 1898 when he came to Portsmouth, and engaged in the same business at 208 Chillicothe street, with the chief office at 34 east Town street, Columbus, O. Mr. Abbott is politically a republican. He is a member of Massie Lodge Knights of Pythias and of Scioto Lodge of Odd Fellows. He is a young man who believes in conserving all his forces and making the best use of his time and natural abilities. His course merits success and he will achieve it.

James Crichton Adair

was born at Buckhorn Furnace, Lawrence county, O, April 30, 1856. His father was Smiley Robert Adair, and his mother's maiden name was Lucy C. Whitcomb. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, and was of Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject was reared on a farm and received his education in the Wheelersburg schools. He was married to Mary A. Shaw, daughter of Joseph Shaw, of Ironton, Ohio, June 11, 1881, and became a farmer on "Dogwood Ridge." In 1891 he left the farm and engaged in merchandising in Wheelersburg. He removed his business to Lynchburg, Highland county, Ohio, in 1894 and in 1898 removed to Columbus, Ohio, where he is now engaged in the wholesale notion business at the corner of Third & Spring streets. In politics Mr. Adair is a democrat. In 1893, he was a candidate of that party for Probate Judge of Scioto county and received 2,994 votes to 4,488 for his opponent, George M. Osborn. This was his first and only venture in the political field. Mr. Adair's maternal grandmother was Susan Vincent, a daughter of Antoine Vincent, one of the French settlers. His grandfather was Daniel Young Whitcomb, whose mother was a sister of Dan Young. Susan Vincent married Dan Young Whitcomb August 28, 1825. J. C. Adair's children are Earl W., Frank H., Chester S., Alice L., Donald C. and Dortha.

Mr. Adair is a prosperous and successful merchant. He is a man of high character and excellent business ability, and is respected by all who know him.

Hiram Butcher Adams

was born November 9, 1867, in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, one mile from the Pike county line near California, on the farm and in the house in which his father was born and reared, and on the farm in which his grandparents first settled when they came to this county. His father was Hiram Adams, and his mother's maiden name was Diana Butcher. The Adamses were New Yorkers. Two brothers came to this county, one settled on the Little Scioto, and one, George Adams, the grandfather of our subject, settled in Madison township.

Our subject worked on the farm until eighteen years of age and attended the district school in winter. When eighteen years of age, he began teaching and taught in the immediate district for twelve successive years. He was very successful as a teacher. He graduated from the Commercial College of the University of Kentucky in 1889. He never held or asked for any offices. He was appointed Census Enumerator of Madison township in 1890.

He is a republican, true blue, and always works for what he thinks for the best interests of the republican party. He is now Deputy Clerk of the Courts under Andrew J. Finney. He was born and raised a Baptist, married a Methodist and afterwards united with Manley M. E. church. On August 1, 1890, he was married to Anna E. Jones, daughter of George O. and Marjorie (Crull) Jones of Lucasville. They have two children: Gladys, age eleven, and Grace age six. Mr Adams located in Portsmouth in 1892 where he now resides. Mr. Adams is the most obliging, accommodating official who ever held a public office in Scioto county. His good temper is inexhaustible.

Amos Barrett Alger, son of Sylvester and Harriett P. (Monroe) Alger, was born at Wooster, Wayne county, Ohio, June 11, 1838. He attended the common schools and received only such education as they afforded. He enlisted in the 11th Independent Battery Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery September 17, 1861, promoted to 2nd Lieutenant May 4, 1862, participated in all the battles the battery was engaged in, up to and including the battle of Iuka September 19, 1863, where he was captured with his battery. He was taken to Vicksburg, Miss., and paroled one week later. The 11th Independent Battery lost more men in killed and wounded—eighteen killed and twenty-eight wounded out of fifty-four cannoners—in this one battle than any other battery did in any one battle during the entire war.

On February 9, 1863, he resigned his commission, and with H. M. Neil, of Columbus, Ohio, raised a new Battery—the 22nd Ohio, afterwards known as Alger's Battery. With this Battery he served until the end of the war. At the battle of Jonesville, Va., on the 3rd day of January, 1864, he was again captured and held as prisoner of war at various rebel prisons—Libby, Macon, Charleston, Columbia and Charlotte. From the latter place he was paroled March 1, 1865, having been confined fourteen months. Returning to his Battery at Knoxville, Tennessee, he assumed command as Captain to which office he had been promoted a month after his capture. He was mustered out of service with his Battery July 13, 1865, and returned to his home at Mansfield, Ohio, where he remained until December 8, 1875, when he came to Portsmouth and has been engaged as an architect ever since.

He was appointed trustee of the Portsmouth public library in 1882, and has served continuously as trustee and secretary up to the present time.

When he entered the United States service at the beginning of the war, he was a democrat but immediately changed his politics to correspond with his views and became a republican, with which party he has since affiliated. He was married May 22, 1867, to Julia M. Wharton, daughter of the late Col. James E. Wharton, the founder of the Portsmouth Public Library. He has four children: Edwin Neal, an architect located in Huntington, W. Va., Barry, an architect in his father's office in Portsmouth, Ohio, married; Francis Harter, superintendent of the Mingo Coal mines at Hatfield, W. Va., Richard W., a student of civil engineering. His wife died July 15, 1897. His sons Francis and Barry were members of Company H, 4th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Spanish American war.

William Royal Allard

was born on Brushy Fork in Madison township, June 23, 1853. He is the son of Thomas and Harriet (Brown) Allard. His father was born in Sheffield, York county, England, January 27, 1829. He enlisted in Company H, 176th O. V. I. September 2, 1864, and was mustered out with his company, June 14, 1865. His grandfather, Joseph Allard, came to America in 1834 and located in Madison township the next year. He was six weeks in crossing the Atlantic. When William was two years old, his parents removed with him to Pike county. His early life was passed in working on a farm and in attending the village school. At the age of seventeen, he began teaching, which profession he followed continuously for twenty years. Fourteen years of this time he taught in Pike county and six in Scioto. He is a republican and voted for Hayes in 1876. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church at California. He married Louisa Isabel Dever, daughter of William Dever, September, 1881. They have two children: William Thomas and Lorenzo Dow, Jr.

Andrew David Allen

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was William H. Allen, and his mother's maiden name was Hannah J. Pinteer. His grandfather, Henry Allen, was a native of Greenbrier county, Virginia, and settled in Scioto county in 1848. His grandmother, Abigail Massie, was from Virginia. She was said to have been a relative of Henry Massie, the founder of Portsmouth. His grandfather, Henry Allen, was a shoemaker by trade, but in Scioto county followed farming. The father and mother of our subject are both living. His father was brought up to the carpenter trade. He entered Company "A" of the Thirty-ninth O. V. I. August 25, 1862 for three years. He served until July 9, 1865, and was never wounded nor a prisoner. He died January 20, 1902. The father and mother of our subject had nine children, of whom he is the eldest. He has lived in Madison and Harrison townships all his life. He never had any thing but a common school education and has made the most of it. He has been a teacher of common schools by profession since 1879; and has taught in Madison, Harrison and Bloom townships in Scioto county. In the summer he has a farm and does farming. In the year 1890, he kept a store at Lois, Ohio. He married September, 1883, Amanda C. Bonzo, daughter of Joseph Bonzo, of French descent. His wife's grandfather came from France. He is a republican, and is a member of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He was a Justice of the Peace from 1890 to 1893 of Madison township. He has seven children: Louis Alva, Mary Hannah, Charles William, Ora Ida, Augusta, Prasconia, Gertrude and Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Allen is a man of strong mental qualities and is known in his community as a well informed man. He has attained this measure of proficiency by constant application to his studies urged on by his strong will and desire to excel. His natural fitness for a teacher has won him success in that profession.

was born in Alleghany City, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1844. His father was Abraham Altzman and his mother's maiden name was Nancy McFeely. His father was a native of Lancaster county, and his mother of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. His parents had fourteen children, five of whom are living, four sisters and himself. He attended school in the second ward of Alleghany City, but quit at the age of fourteen. He engaged first in a carriage factory, but not liking that followed various other employments until 1861, when he went into the shoe store of R. C. Loomis & Company in Pittsburg. He was there eight years. He enlisted in Company C, 123d Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry July 26, 1862, as a private. He was wounded in the right hip at the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, by a minie ball. This wound disabled him so that he was unfit thereafter for military service. The ball imbedded itself in his body and was not extracted until January 29, 1863. He was married August 2, 1866, to Victoria La Clair from Uniontown, Pennsylvania. Her parents were natives of France. After his army service, Mr. Altzman was promoted to be salesman for his employer, traveled in Scioto county, Ohio, and became acquainted with the people of this county in that way. Mr. John G. Peebles was a friend of Mr. Loomis, visited his store in Pittsburg and became acquainted with Mr. Altzman and it was in this way our subject came to Portsmouth. R. C. Loomis discontinued business in 1869, and on the recommendation of Mr. Peebles, Mr. Altzman went with R. Bell & Company, the same year, and remained with them until 1875, when they closed out their business. In 1876, he became a salesman for C. P. Tracy & Company and has remained with them ever since. Mr. Altzman has had three children: Minnie L., the wife of Earl Clare; Alice D., and Will B., who married Miss Mattie Varner. Mr. Altzman is a member of Bigelow M. E. church. He is an Odd Fellow, a member of the G. A. R. and of the United Commercial Travelers. He has always been a republican.

Frank Amann

was born March 13, 1860, at Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was Charles E. Amann. His mother was Ruan Wynett. His father was a native of Baden, Germany, and his mother was a native of Ohio. He attended the schools in Portsmouth until 1874, and then became a clerk in Daniel Spry's drug store. He remained there until 1880, when he went into business for himself at 208 Market street, and has been there ever since. He also conducts another drug store at Eleventh and Offener streets. He was married November 21, 1883, to Mary Ella Ridenour of Cincinnati, O. Mr. Amann is not attached to any particular political party, nor any fraternity. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church. He is a first class citizen in every respect, is one of the best business men in Portsmouth, and he attends strictly to his own business.

Eugene Graham Anderson

son of George W. Anderson and Annie H. Warwick, his wife, was born February 10, 1873, at Council Grove, Kansas. At the age of two, he was brought to Portsmouth, Ohio, by his parents and has lived here ever since. He attended the public schools of Portsmouth until 1889, when he began the mercantile business with his father. He has been engaged in the same business until July 23, 1894, when he took a position with Louis A. Crossett a prominent manufacturer of mens shoes, traveling through the south and southwest, filling this position successfully until January 18, 1896. After the death of his father, who died in October, 1895, he formed a partnership with his brother Wm. B., and mother Mrs. Annie H. Anderson, January 1, 1896, and the firm was changed to G. W. Anderson & Sons.

He was married February 2, 1897, to Ruhama Halderman, daughter of Doctor S. S. Halderman, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and they have two children: Mary and Charles.

He is a republican and a communicant of All Saints church and is superintendent of All Saints Sunday school. He is an Elk. Mr. Anderson believes in everything that is good and true. As yet his life is before him and his prospects are brilliant. He has high ideals in religion, in social life and in business, and those who know him best believe he will live up to them. As it is now, he is respected and admired for those qualities of character which most adorn the life of a young man, and his course promises distinction and success in every field of effort.

William Beverly Anderson

was born January 22, 1859, in Montgomery county, Kentucky. His father was the late George W. Anderson. His mother is Annie H. (Warwick) Anderson who is still living.

While a boy, Mr. Anderson was taken by his parents successively to Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, Portsmouth, Ohio, Council Grove, Kansas, and back to Portsmouth where he has resided since 1874. He received his education in the public schools of these several places. He had some experience in farming while on his father's farm near Council Grove, Kansas. He worked at farming for two years and the grasshoppers ate up every thing they raised. Consequently Mr. Anderson does not have much of a hankering for farm life. His sympathy for the farmer is exceeded only by his desire to keep out of the business. When he came to Portsmouth in November, 1874, he entered his father's shoe store. From this on, he continued in business with his father until his death in 1895.

When Mr. Anderson was only eighteen, his father's health became poor and the responsibility of the business fell largely upon him. He became a partner with his father under the firm name of G. W. Anderson & Son in 1878, and was the chief support of the business till his father's death when he assumed complete control. A more complete history of the business will be found under the sketch of G. W. Anderson. In 1900, the large department store corner of Third and Chillicothe streets was established under the old firm name of G. W. Anderson & Sons. Our subject is the moving spirit in this immense enterprise and is its business manager. He is a republican, but devoting all his time to the management of his business, he finds no time to spend in politics. He has been a member of the Sixth Street Methodist church since he was thirteen years old, excepting the short interval he was in Kansas, and has been a steward of the church for twenty-five years. He has been superintendent of the Sunday school for the past ten years and is one of the chief workers in the church as well as a liberal contributor.

Mr. Anderson was married, February 2, 1886, to Ida Russell, daughter of William B. and Rebecca (Hibbs) Russell. William B. Russell was a son of the Hon. William Russell and Governor Robert Lucas was an uncle of Mrs. Anderson's mother.

George Washington Anderson

was born in Bath county, Kentucky, June 18, 1830. His father, William Anderson was from Virginia. His mother was a daughter of Judge Graham of Virginia. At the age of sixteen he went into the business of store keeping as a clerk for his uncle in Mercer county, Kentucky, and remained there two years. He was clerk on the steamer "Blue Wing" between Frankfort and Louisville for six months. He went back into Mercer county and from there to Cincinnati in 1856. He took a business course at Bartlett's Commercial College, and remained as a teacher. In 1857, he went to Howard's Mills, Montgomery county, Kentucky, and kept a store there till the winter of 1859 and 1860. That same year he went to Camargo and remained two years. He removed to Mt. Sterling and remained there until 1866. In June, 1864, his store in Mt. Sterling was robbed by John Morgan's band. He was a Union man during the entire war and was outspoken. On the occasion of another raid, he secreted his stock in the coffins of an undertaker who was a rank rebel but who was willing to aid his neighbor. The coffin scheme was successful as the rebels did not want to steal coffins and did not dream of them being used as places of concealment.

In February, 1867, Mr. Anderson came to Portsmouth and opened a store in the Huston corner where he remained until fall. Then he moved to 109 West Second into a building erected for him by the late Dan McFarland, and remained until 1871, at which time he sold out and went to Council Grove, Kansas, and tried farming, also being interested in the firm of J. F. Warwick & Co., doing a general merchandise business in Council Grove. In November, 1874, he returned to Portsmouth, having purchased the shoe store of R. M. Lloyd of Chillicothe street. He afterwards removed to Second street, and occupied the west half of the building now occupied by the Hibbs Hardware Company. While here his son, William B., was admitted to the business under the firm name of G. W. Anderson & Son. At the end of three years they removed to a building which stood where Ben Davis' clothing store now stands where they remained about a year, and then moved to the Huston stone front on Second street, where they did business for nine years. In 1886 dry goods were added to the stock. They removed to the Brushart building, No. 134 West Second street in 1888, and were doing business there at the time of Mr. Anderson's death, October 8, 1895.

Since his death the business has been conducted and managed by his son, William B. Mr. Anderson was a republican, but took no active part in politics. He was a member of the Presbyterian church until his marriage, and then transferred his membership to the Methodist church, and was a member of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal church of Portsmouth until his death. He was always connected with the Official Board of the church as steward and was treasurer for a number of years. He took an active part in church work.

He was married October 22, 1857, to Miss Annie H. Warwick, daughter of B. G. Warwick, then living in Cincinnati, but who afterwards came to Portsmouth. By this marriage thirteen children were born to them, two of whom died in infancy. Those who grew up were: William Beverly, a sketch of whom is found elsewhere in this book; Maggie M., wife of Dr. J. N. Crawford, now residing in Newport, Rhode Island; Sallie J., wife of Dr. F. H. Williams at Portsmouth, died in Cincinnati, October 13, 1901; George B., died in Cincinnati, January 13, 1902; John Frank; Charles N., a member of the shoe firm of Anderson Bros.; Eugene G., a member of G. W. Anderson & Sons; Preston H., employed in the department store of G. W. Anderson & Sons; Warwick W., manager and buyer for the house furnishing department of G. W. Anderson & Sons; Nelson R., and Crawford W., now in the first year of the High school.

Lexey Clayton Debo Anderson

was born in the state of North Carolina on November 7, 1855. His father was Sandy Freeman Anderson and his mother's maiden name was Mary Jane Taborn, free persons of color. They moved from the south to Fayette county, Ohio, before the civil war, and there our subject was educated in the common schools. He has acquired a higher education, but it was secured by self study. He and his parents remained in Ohio, until 1866, when they returned to their former home in North Carolina, where our subject attended the public schools at Oxford until 1870. At that time his parents became satisfied that the opportunities for the colored race in the south were not equal to those in the north and returned to Fayette county, where our subject attended school until 1874, when he began teaching. He was the principal of the colored schools in Washington C. H., from 1874 to 1883, then he tried the hotel business in 1883 and 1884 in the same place. The latter year he went to Jacksonville, Florida, and taught music in the public schools for a period of six months. In 1885, he returned to Washington C. H. and taught there until 1886. In 1886 and 1887, he was in business in Washington C. H. in house furnishings. He went to Ripley in 1888 and took charge of the Fourth street school and was there as principal of that school for five years, until 1893. He returned to Washington C. H. in the latter year and until 1895 was in business there in selling housefurnishings. In 1895 he came to Portsmouth and was the principal of the Eleventh street school for two years at the end of which time, he went into business in the sale of house furnishing goods and dress making at No. 1130 Findlay street. He was married in 1878 at Bowersville in Clinton county to Miss Madie Catharine White, daughter of Mrs. Cynthia White. He has a family of three children; one daughter, Pearl Beatrice who is a teacher of the Portsmouth public schools, two sons Cecil, aged 13, years and Leon A., aged 10 years. Mr. Anderson is the best educated person of his race in the city and is a gentleman of integrity and excellent reputation in the community.

Balsar Horn Andres,

the veteran engineer of the Portsmouth branch of the B. & O. railroad, was born February 14, 1836, at Norwalk, in Huron county, Ohio. His father was a native of Baden, Germany, and was a clockmaker. He concluded America was a good country for him and came here and peddled clocks. His wife was Mary Elizabeth Horn. They were married at Wilmington, in 1834. When Basler was four weeks old, his parents moved to Piketon. When he was four years of age, they moved to Jackson. He went to school at Jackson and obtained all of his schooling there. Among his teachers was Judge Longbon. At the age of sixteen, he carried water for the men who graded the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad. After that, he went to work grading about the station under his father. At seventeen, he went on the road as brakeman. At the age of eighteen, he got a place as a fireman and held it for two years. In 1859, he began to run an engine and has continued it for forty-two years.

He ran on a freight until May 30, 1863, when Richard Burns, then an engineer of the road, entered Co. K of the 2nd Ohio Heavy Artillery. He was engineer on the mail until August 23, 1865, when Dick Burns came back from the army and he went back on the accommodation, and was on that for seven years, except six months when he ran on the main line between Cincinnati and Chillicothe. In the spring of 1888, he became engineer on the mail train, the one leaving Portsmouth in the morning and returning in the evening. He has been employed on the branch between Hamden and Portsmouth steadily since 1859.

During these years he has stuck to his post and has traveled 1,717,170 miles, or more than 68 times around the world. He has never lost a day for pleasure or recreation. The longest time he was away from his engine was when he was hurt in a wreck; that time he was off eight weeks. This wreck occurred on Hayes-Tilden presidential election day in November, 1876. His train ran over a broken rail and was ditched. He was buried under his engine and they had to dig him out of the earth. This occurred two miles south of Hale's creek.

On February 14, 1863, his train was ditched near Sciotoville at the "narrows" and it was prevented from going into the Ohio river by the engine burying its cow catcher in the ground. Once in a wreck, he had his engine turn a complete somersault down an embankment and escaped with only a scalded hand. Another time his engine left the track and ran out into a field with him. One night near Chillicothe, on the Scioto river bridge, his engine collided with the hind-end of a freight train, the lights of which had frozen out. His engine plowed through this train and was badly wrecked and he didn't get a scratch. He has always remained at his post ever mindful of the lives behind him. His fastest run was on the main line when he made 110 miles in 1 hour and 30 minutes. He has a remarkable record. His engine has killed two men only. Both of them were walking on the track and one was a deaf mute. He ran over a woman at Wait's station. She was a deaf mute.

He was married February 21, 1862, to Mary E. Clark, in Bigelow chapel, the second marriage which occurred in that church. His children are: William Shackleford, a General Press Agent and Grace C., a music teacher. He moved to Portsmouth in 1856 and has lived there ever since. He resides at 64 west Seventh street and has resided there for thirty-eight years. He is a member of Bigelow chapel and has been since 1868. He voted for Steven A. Douglas for President in 1860, and for Abraham Lincoln, in 1864, and has been a Republican ever since. Mr. W. C. Draper has known him since 1863 and says that he is as reliable as the government and can be depended on with the same certainty.

He is as regular in his habits as his father's old clock which he has owned for thirty-eight years. He is sixteen years older than the road he has worked on since 1853. The road has changed owners five times since that date but Balser was sold with the road-bed and franchises every time. At the age of sixty-five, he is hale and hearty, has a good conscience and good digestion. Each week day he goes to Hamden Junction in the morning and returns in the evening. He is always in his place at church every Sunday. When the Good Angel who is sent to bring mortals to the Better Land, calls for Balser Andres, he will know just where to find him, for he will always be found at the same place, the same hour each day, and doing his duty all the time.

of South Webster, was born in Powellsville, Ohio, June 18, 1864. His father was Peter Andre and his mother's maiden name was Mary L. Huston. They now live on a farm in Vernon township near Chaffin's Mill.

Dr. Andre's boyhood history is much the same as that of any other boy who was raised on a farm. He was very fond of horses and even now has his roadsters and takes great delight in driving. He attended the common schools and prepared himself to teach. He began teaching in 1885 and taught for seven years. He then attended Miami Medical College from which he was graduated April 1, 1897. Doctor Andre soon after began the practice of medicine in South Webster, where he has since resided. He has built up a lucrative practice and is a promising young physician. He was married to Miss S. A. Gifford, November 7, 1901. Her parents live on their farm in Vernon township. Doctor Andre is and always has been a democrat. He is not a member of any church, but is straightforward, honest and energetic. His many friends will best remember him as a "threshing machine man," having traveled over Pike and Scioto counties several summers with machines from 1888 to 1897. He is very ambitious to succeed and has already won the confidence and esteem of the citizens of Bloom township and has shown rare skill in his profession. He is possessed of a cheerful disposition which he takes with him in the sick room. He is a member of the Western Sun Lodge F. and A. M. No. 91 located at Wheelersburg and of South Webster Lodge, Knights of Pythias No. 724. He has the highest standing for morality and integrity.

Peter Duteil Andre

was born September 24, 1825, in the French Grant. His father was Jacob Andre, who was born July 23, 1797. His father married Jane Duteil, in 1822. She was born May 17, 1804, and a daughter of Francis Charles Duteil, a French emigrant, who drew lot 32 in the French Grant. Peter Andre grew up in the French Grant, and had such an education as the schools of the vicinity afforded. He married Nancy Caroline Tong, February 6, 1854. He went to house-keeping on the Andre farm, formerly known as the Hurd farm, on lot 34 in the French Grant. He lived there all his life.

His eldest son was Wayne W. born May 14th, 1852. He was married in 1876, to Margaret J. Boren, a native of Iowa county, Iowa. They had four children. He died at the age of thirty-eight years.

The second son of Peter Andre is Orin C. Andre, a physician at Waverly. He was born April 29, 1856. He attended the common schools at Wheelersburg, until 1873, when he became a clerk for M. B. Gilbert & Co. in Portsmouth, at which place he remained a year. Then he began the study of medicine with Dr. A. B. Jones and afterwards with Dr. P. J. Kline. He graduated from the Ohio Medical College, in Cincinnati, in 1877. He first located at Buchanan, Pike county, Ohio, and practiced there one year, and then located in Piketon where he remained until January, 1894, when he moved to Waverly, in Pike county, where he has since been located. He was first married to Mary E. Sargeant, February 8, 1883. She died April 15, 1884. He was married a second time to Miss Martha J. Wessenstein, October 30, 1890. They have three children: Robert G., Harold E., and Peter D. Dr. Andre is a republican, a Royal Arch Mason, and a Knight of Pythias. He is a member of the American Medical Association, of the Ohio State Medical Association, of the Hempstead Memorial Academy of Medicine of Scioto county, of the Pike county Medical Society, and an honorary member of the Ross county Medical Society. He is a student in his profession. He patronizes its literature liberally, and keeps right up with all the modern ideas in it. He is regarded as one of the best informed physicians in Southern Ohio, and amongst the most skillful. He possesses the confidence and respect of all his medical brethren and of the community in which he dwells.

The first daughter of our subject, Ella, is the wife of John T. Wells, a rancher, of Anaheim, California. The second daughter of our subject, Ruba, has been a teacher in the Ironton high school. She has a remarkable career, having first taught at Washington, D. C., taught the languages two years in Wichita, Kansas, and in Ironton three years. The third son of Peter D. Andre was Dan Young, named for the well known minister. He lives in Dixon, Illinois. He married Stella Wilcox, December 26, 1888. He follows the occupation of a photographer. The third daughter, Elonia, is a teacher in the Detroit High School. Her subject is Zoology. She has been engaged there for six years.

Peter D. Andre was a member of the Methodist church all his life. He lived up to it, and was a man noted for his conscience. He was superintendent of the Sunday school near his home for many years. In his political views, he was a whig and a republican. He did not belong to any fraternities. At one time he was township trustee. He was highly regarded by all his neighbors.

Though not an emigrant himself, Mr. Andre embodied in a high degree the emigrant spirit,—that spirit born of ambition, energy, thrift, and high ideals, which inspired the great body of pioneers with a desire to better themselves in every moral and material way. It was this spirit, sustained by an iron will to meet and overcome all obstacles, which raised the average population of this country to the highest plane of any civilization which the world has yet seen. Mr. Andre exemplified these qualities as shown in his model farm, his successful management, his beautiful home, the esteem of his fellow citizens and transmitted them in an unusual degree to a respected and talented family of children.

was born September 15, 1868. His parents were Theodore and Mary E. (Brant) Appel. His mother was the daughter of Joseph H. Brant of Lucasville. Our subject received a common school education and graduated at the Ohio Wesleyan University in 1894, in the classical course. He began teaching in 1885, in Jefferson township and taught there and in Clay township until 1891, when he was appointed superintendent of the Lucasville schools. He remained there two years, and in September, 1894, went to Wheelersburg, where he was superintendent until 1899. In June, 1899, he went to Piketon and was superintendent of the Piketon schools until January 1, 1900, when he was appointed superintendent of the Ludlow, Kentucky, schools and has been there since.

He has twelve schools under his charge at present. He taught summer school at Wheelersburg, in 1898, and at Lucasville, in 1899, 1900, 1901 and 1902. He received a state common school life certificate in December, 1899, and a High School life certificate in June, 1900. He also received the degree of A. B. from the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware. On June 15, 1895, he was married to Martha Jane Cook, a daughter of George Cook. They have one child, Ralph Franklin. Mr. Appel is a republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

He is honest, energetic and thorough in everything he undertakes. As a superintendent, he is fearless and efficient in the discharge of his duties. As a county school examiner, he did much to raise the standard of scholarship among the teachers of Scioto county. He was a leader among the teachers of Scioto county while he was one of them, and has made a permanent impression in his institute work in the county. He was regarded as one of the brightest teachers ever in the county.

George M. Appel,

President of the Gilbert Grocery Company and Treasurer of the Portsmouth Shoe Company, is the sixth of the eight children of Philip Appel and Katharine (Bender) Appel and was born December 20, 1859, in Portsmouth, to which town his parents had come from Germany, in 1847, both having been born in Sandhofen, Baden on the Rhine. His mother was born in 1827 and his father in 1820.

His father was a member of the liberal party in the movement among the German states for increased liberties and for a constitution in which these liberties should be embodied and sacredly guarded. The success of the movement seemed doubtful owing to jealous dissensions and not wishing to remain longer under the tyrannies of his native country, he determined to adopt a country where liberty abounds, and came to America.

What education Mr. Appel received was in the schools of Portsmouth before he reached the age of fourteen. At this age he was compelled or rather felt it his duty to go to work for himself. His father had died when he was only four years old and his mother had a large family to care for. He was employed by B. R. Brown, a plumber, and worked at plumbing for three years, after which he was employed by W. H. H. Cadot, who was then carrying on a wholesale and retail grocery business. After a year here, he entered the service of M. B. Gilbert and was given charge of one of his ice wagons. This was in May, 1878, and he served in this capacity for five years when he was transferred to the grocery department and was given the position of billing and shipping clerk. He soon became book keeper and continued in this capacity until Mr. Gilbert's death in November, 1887. Then the firm of M. B. Gilbert & Co. was formed, composed of Mrs. M. B. Gilbert, Mr. Appel and Mr. Joseph S. Gaston. The latter member of the firm died in 1892, leaving the business in the hands of the former until 1894, when George A. Goodman was taken into the firm. On January 1, 1899, the business was re-organized and incorporated under the name of The Gilbert Grocery Company and Mr. Appel was made its president. It is to his careful management and constant oversight that the business owes its prosperous and rapid growth and its present immense proportions. Mr. Appel is also interested in the Portsmouth Shoe Company and is its treasurer.

He was married July 23, 1890, to Miss Lena Zoellner, daughter of Philip Zoellner, the jeweler. Two daughters have been born to them, Margaret, aged nine, and Katharin, age four.

Though a democrat, Mr. Appel does not allow party lines to interfere with his voting when it is a question of his country's welfare or its business interests. Being a thorough business man he looks at politics in a business-like way.

Theodore Appel

was born September 2, 1841, at Sandhofen, Baden, Germany. His father's name was Theodore Appel, and his mother's maiden name was Eva Margaret Katzmaier. Our subject attended school in Germany until he was ten years of age. In July, 1852, his parents came to this country, and located at Mt. Vernon Furnace where his father died in August, 1852. In September of the same year, his mother moved to Portsmouth, where she was re-married to Jacob Clopine. While our subject was in Portsmouth, he worked for the Doerr Bros. in the cigar factory. In the spring of 1853, the family moved to Harrison Furnace, where he worked in the ore banks until he was fifteen years of age. He then worked for a farmer by the name of Moore for six months, after which he went to work for Ephraim Bennett, a farmer in Madison township, where he worked for two years. In 1859 he went to work on the Miller farm, where he remained for about a year, and then worked on the Dugan farm for three years. In 1864, he rented a farm on Millar's Run, where he remained until 1866, when he moved to the upper Thomas farm in Valley township. He remained there nineteen years, and in 1885 he went to the lower Thomas farm in Clay township, where he remained fourteen years. Then Joseph H. Brant and himself bought the Johnson farm at Clifford in valley township, where he has remained ever since.

He was married August 20, 1863, to Mary E. Brant, daughter of Joseph Brant, of Valley township. They have the following children: Joseph Henry, married, living at Lucasville; George William, married and farms on the Joseph W. Fulton farm in Valley township; James Benton, married, lives on the Bannon farm; Frank, married, is superintendent of the public schools at Ludlow, Ky.; Margaret, married T. C. Beatty, an attorney at Portsmouth, O.; David, married, lives on the lower Thomas farm in Clay township; Charles T., married, lives on a farm in Valley township; Louise at home; and Edgar, a student at the Ohio Wesleyan University. Mr. Appel is a republican in his political views and a member of the Methodist church.

He is a gentleman of excellent habits, honest, industrious and frugal. He is the father of a family of whom any man should be proud. He is a model farmer and devotes all his time to this pursuit. He is conscientious and fair in all his relations with his fellowmen. Above all he is an earnest, sincere and devout Christian.

Joseph Ashton

was born June 1, 1805, at Old Town near Newcastle, Pa. His father Joseph Ashton was a major in the Revolutionary army and a very prominent man in his time. His record will be found under Revolutionary soldiers. Our subject had only a common school education. After finishing school, he went to Pittsburg where he was apprenticed to Samuel Walker, a steamboat builder, and learned that trade. In 1847, he left Pittsburg and went to New Richmond, Ohio, and lived there till 1855, teaming for David Gibson, who had a distillery there. In December, 1855, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and went into partnership with his brother-in-law Milton Kennedy in the feed business, in a three story building on the site of the Huston Stone front on Second street. They occupied the first story, the second was a concert hall, and the third was occupied by the Odd Fellows. In 1856, he went into business with Henry Densmore in making mineral waters and remained in that business one year. He was then appointed Canal Collector by Governor Chase. During the war he removed to Rapid Forge on Paint creek, Ross county, and made his home there for ten years. In 1864, he received an appointment as treasury clerk at Vicksburg and other points in the south, from his old friend Salmon P. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury. At one time he was taken prisoner at Goodrich's Landing, La.

After returning from the south, he lived in Ross county and afterwards in Pike county. In 1870, he was given charge of the City Hospital of Portsmouth, a position he held for several years. He was elected a Justice of the Peace in Wayne township, Scioto county, in April, 1878, and was re-elected annually until June 1, 1891, when he resigned his office and removed to Sinking Springs in Highland county, where he remained until his death. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church. He was an abolitionist, but acted with the republican party after it was formed.

He was married October 13, 1830, to Miss Matilda Kennedy, sister of Milton Kennedy, in Alleghany, Pa. He had seven children, three of whom survive him; viz., Mrs. Pauline McKeown of the Portsmouth schools; Mrs. Martha M. Gall, of Sinking Springs, O., and John Q. Ashton, of San Diego, California. He was a man without antagonisms and at the same time no one had a stronger will than he. His attachment to the views of his church and his views on the subject of slavery were of the very strongest. As a Justice of the Peace, his decisions were well considered and were correct. He was honorable with all men and content to do his duty in the sphere in which he was placed.

Walter Atkin

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, April 20, 1837. He is the son of Frank C. and Jane (Duval) Atkin. His mother was of French descent and came from Maryland. His father came from England. His boyhood and youth were spent in Portsmouth where he received a common school education. He lived in Kansas from 1856 to 1858 and learned the baker's trade with Hugh Stewart of Portsmouth, Ohio. He enlisted in Company G, 2nd Colorado Cavalry, September 20, 1862, and was mustered out after three years service. Most of his service was in Kansas and Missouri. He was one of the many who went to Pike's Peak looking for gold, but was not fortunate enough to find any. He was in the saw mill business for several years and then run a threshing machine and molasses evaporator. For the past five years, he has been a merchant and huckster near Stockdale, Ohio. Within the past three months he purchased the California mills and is at present running them. He is a republican and a member of the Baptist church and of the G. A. R. He was married in December, 1865, to Sarah M. (Bennett) Adams, daughter of Ephraim Bennett.

wholesale grocer, was born December 26, 1830, in the kingdom of Hanover, at Meppen, a town of about four thousand people at that time. His father, Joseph Augustin, born in 1792 and died in 1857, was a wholesale grocer of that town and a man of wide political influence. He served two terms as mayor of the town of Meppen. Our subject's grandfather was Karl Augustin, a dry goods merchant and a well educated man. His mother was Margaret Drexler. She died when he was only six years of age. Her father was Joseph Drexler. Mr. Augustin attended the common schools till he was fourteen and then studied in the gymnasium at Meppen for the next five years. He was reared a Catholic. It was the intention of his parents to educate him for the priesthood, but seeing his natural inclination for the fair sex, they abandoned this project and he was taken into his father's store until he was twenty-five, when he started a glass manufactory of his own.

He sold out to his mother at the end of five years and came to the United States in 1868. He stopped first near Catlettsburg, Ky., and went from there to Pittsburg with the intention of getting a position in the glass factories there; but owing to his inability to speak the English language he could not secure a position which his education and knowledge of the business would have commanded in his native country. He came to Portsmouth the next year. He was first employed here by Valentine Rheinart, manufacturer of candy. He worked for Rheinart for three years and saved his money, and at the end of that time started a candy-making business of his own. To this he added a small line of groceries and kept branching out and adding to his stock until he is now doing a large and exclusively wholesale business at the corner of Front and Court streets.

He is a democrat but does not mix in politics. He is a communicant of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Portsmouth, Ohio. He was married to Anna Schleinhege, daughter of Bernard Schleinhege, November 5, 1858. They have had seven children, four living and three dead. Two died in infancy and Adolph was drowned in the Scioto river in 1881. Those living are: Bernard, Jr., now in business with his father; Joseph M., a wholesaler of fancy groceries in Portsmouth; Mary; and Anna, married to Carl Streuber.

Mr. Augustin is an example of what can be accomplished by strict attention to business methods. He became employed in a candy manufactory and soon after took the business onto himself. Later finding that manufacturing candy was not profitable, he undertook the wholesale grocery business and in that has been very successful and has made and accumulated a fortune. His standing as a business man in the community is the very best. It is always good for a man to have a failure in early life, that is if there is any outcome in him. Mr. Augustine had one in the glass business in Germany and thereby learned how to retrieve his fortune and has done so in a wonderful degree. He is one of the most substantial citizens of Portsmouth.

John Maximilian Augustin

was born March 6, 1864, in Hanover, Germany. His father was Bernhard Augustin, who has a sketch herein. His mother's maiden name was Anna Schleinhege. He was the third child of his father's family. When he was four years of age, his father left his family in Germany and came to the United States, first going to Pittsburg, then to Big Sandy, and then to Portsmouth. In 1870, his father sent for the family to come over and they located in Portsmouth. John attained his education in St. Mary's Parish school in Portsmouth. He left school at the age of twelve years, and started to work in his father's candy factory. He mastered the business in two years. From the age of 14 to 16 he worked at his trade with his father. At the age of 16, he began to travel and sell groceries. He remained in this business from 1880 until 1891. From 1891 to 1892 he was a salesman for his father for the city trade. February 1, 1892, he started in business for himself at 17 west Front street, and has remained in that business ever since, but he changed his location in 1894, and removed his business to Seventh and Chillicothe streets. In 1898, he removed to Gallia street, where he is now. He was married September 20, 1887 to Anna B. Snyder. He has three children, one son and two daughters. His son and one daughter died in infancy. His surviving daughter is Madeline, aged eight years. He is a communicant of St. Mary's church and a member of the Young Mens' Institute. He is a good citizen, has the best business ability and has been very successful in business.

was born at Harrisonville, Ohio, February 1, 1875. His father was John Ault, and his mother's maiden name was Agnes Boren, daughter of James Boren. His parents had four children, of which he was the oldest. His grandfather, Henry Ault, was born November 30, 1820, in Breidenbach, Hessen-Nassau, Germany. He came to the United States in 1845 and located in Beaver county, Pa. He married Barbara Brame in 1847, came to Scioto county in 1852, where he has since resided except a short time in Jackson county. Their children were: John, born March 6, 1848; William, born January 13, 1851; Callie, born November 1, 1857. His first wife died directly after the birth of the last named child, and he was married in 1861 to Christina Shear, of Jackson county, Ohio. They had three children: Mary (Mrs. Robert McAleer), born 1864; Maggie, born September 21, 1867; Frank, born May 14, 1874. William Ault, residing in Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Callie Burke, of Wheelersburg, Ohio, with whom the father lives at present.

Our subject received a common school education, and one term at the Rio Grande College. He attended several normal schools, began teaching in 1892, and has been engaged in it for ten years in Scioto county. In his political views he is a free-silver democrat, not a member of any church, or any fraternal societies.

Walter J. Bagby

is the son of William Bagby. He was born in 1841 and is a grandson of John Bagby, born in 1819, and a great-grandson of Robert Bagby who emigrated to Lewis county, Kentucky, about 1800, from Virginia. His mother is Mahala Isabella (Bruce) Bagby, a daughter of Thomas Bruce and a granddaughter of John Bruce who was also a Virginian, belonging to a family which originally came from Scotland in the ante-revolutionary days, and has a common origin with the family of Bruces to which Robt. Bruce, King of the Scots belonged. The paternal grandmother of our subject was Sarah Thompson, daughter of Anthony Thompson, a member of the Thompson family of Lewis county, Kentucky. The Bruces settled originally near where Vanceburg now stands and the Bagbys in what is now known as "Ferman's bottoms" near Quincy. The Bagbys came to Virginia from England before the revolution.

Our subject was born September 21, 1867, at Springville, Kentucky, and was raised at St. Paul, Kentucky, to which place his parents removed when he was still a child. Here he received his schooling. At the age of twenty-one he began railroading, working most of the time at bridge carpentering, and continued at this occupation till 1897, when he was employed as a clerk by W. A. Hamilton, grocer, in Portsmouth. At the end of two years he bought out Hamilton and is now conducting the business himself at the corner of Gallia and John streets.

He is a socialist in his views and votes with the social democrat party. He is a member of the Christian church of Portsmouth and is an active worker. At present he is an elder in the church. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Modern Woodmen. His father served in the 2nd Ky. regiment, Co. F, Union army. His grandfather Bruce's brother was a Captain in the 22nd Kentucky regiment, Union army, and his cousin was a member of the Confederate Congress from the Louisville district.

Mr. Bagby was married April 30, 1895 to Emma Eastham, daughter of Robert and Mary (Davis) Eastham of Boyd county, Kentucky. They have one child, Paul T., born June 30, 1901.

The subject of the sketch affords a splendid opportunity for one to emphasize those qualifications which go to make a man in the highest sense of the word. As to honor, no citizen has a better or higher sense of the same than Mr. Bagby; in honesty, his record is known well to all those who have been placed in a position of contact with him; considering duty, sacrifice tells better than any word his unswerving loyalty to a well educated conscience; as to purpose, any success he has attained to, so far in life is due very largely to the secret of this word.

Lewis William Baker

was born October 24, 1852, in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was Henry Baker, and his mother's maiden name was Louisa Pelhank, both natives of Germany. They had four children, three now living. Our subject is the eldest. A daughter, Louisa, married Andrew Biegel, and Fred is in the cigar business. Our subject attended school until he was fifteen years of age, when he went in with Stemshorn and Engelbrecht grocers as a clerk. He was with them for two years. In 1869, he began to work for H. Eberhart & Company, foundrymen, and clerked and traveled for them until 1873. On July 22, 1873, he went into the Ohio Stove Company, as a salesman, and was with them until 1890. In that year he became a director in the Portsmouth Stove & Range Company, and its vice president. F. V. Knauss, W. S. Todd and Mr. Baker took $10,000 stock in it when it started and it is now owned by Knauss and Baker. Mr. Baker has been the vice president ever since the business started. Mr. Knauss is the president, and R. A. Bryan, the secretary and treasurer. Mr. Baker married Eva Servey, of Lawrence county, April 2, 1873, and has one son, Frank J., in the retail shoe business at the former stand of R. L. Gilbert on Chillicothe street, opposite the post office. Mr. Baker is a member of the First Presbyterian church and was a trustee for fifteen years. In politics, he is a Republican. He is a member of the Aurora Lodge, Mt. Vernon Chapter, Solomon Council and Calvary Commandery of the Masonic bodies in Portsmouth. He is the founder and author of his own fortune and one of the most successful business men in the city of Portsmouth. He has made his business career a success by the observance of correct economic principles.

Cornelius Hyatt Barbee

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, January 18, 1843. His parents were Elias and Mary Hyatt Barbee. She was a niece of the late C. C. Hyatt. Mr. Barbee's father came from Culpepper county, Virginia, and his mother from Long Island, New York. He passed his boyhood and youth at Portsmouth in attending school and clerking in J. K. and O. A. Lodwick's dry goods store. He was employed there altogether sixteen years. He enlisted as third sergeant in Company E, 140th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, May 2, 1864, and was discharged September 3, 1864. He was a democrat till 1876, and after that has been a republican. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Aurora Lodge, Number 48 F. and A. M., Scioto Lodge Number 31, I. O. O. F., Portsmouth Lodge, 154, B. P. O. E., and Bailey Post, G. A. R., Portsmouth, Ohio. He married Eliza Jane Bowman, January 20, 1864. He has two children living:

William H. in business with him at Union Mills; and Alice May, wife of James Mitchell. He has two daughters deceased: Nelly, late wife of William Malone and Bertha, late wife of Albert Turner.

Mr. Barbee has been in business at the same place for the past thirty-one years. He conducted the store for Mr. Davis until his death and then he purchased the stock and continued it in his own name. He has been canal collector the past ten years. Mr. Barbee is one of the reliable citizens of the county. He is as near a fixture as the "sugar loaf" hill near his place of business. He can be found at the same place each hour of the twenty-four, year in and year out, and his habits are as regular as those of a Thomas clock. Not to find him in his store, in the business hours of the day, would be remarkable and alarming.

He is about the best illustration of steady and good habits of any subject in this book. His very admirable qualities have endeared him to his whole community and he is as good a specimen of the model citizen as can be found anywhere in this Republic.

Stout St. Leger Barklow

was born February 15, 1822, at Enterprise Furnace, Greenup county, Kentucky. His grandmother was Ruth Stout of New Jersey, who heard the guns at Trenton. His maternal grandfather was Job Foster, a revolutionary soldier. His father Benjamin Barklow kept a grocery on Second street, on the western part of the school lot. He was one of the founders of the Methodist Protestant church. In 1827, his parents moved to a farm in Kentucky opposite Sciotoville and lived there until the flood of 1832 reached them when they came back to Portsmouth. In 1838 our subject went to draying in Portsmouth. In 1841 he went into the Gaylord mill as a shingler, that is, to manage the trip hammer. The boss shingler was Peter Gardner. The elder T. G. Gaylord was then at the head of the mill. John Gould and Mr. Morrell held positions in the office. John Critzer was the engineer. A small nail mill was connected, in charge of Abraham Springer and William Miller. Miller got to be manager of the mill and Springer went to California in 1850. There were six knobbling fires, one boiling furnace and one scrap furnace. In 1844, more furnaces were built and the mill enlarged. While learning to shingle, our subject lost one eye. A spark from a muck ball when the hammer fell upon it, destroyed it. He kept at the work until he became boss Shingler.

In 1852, he went to California with John Sturgeon, David Price, Thomas Williams, Captain W. B. Williams, Andrew Robinson, William Sidney, Thomas Richardson, William Delaney and Thomas McAuley. They were joined by Captain John Clark, father of Mrs. P. C. Kinney, Giles Thornton, William Morton, Thomas Thompson, Leonard Alexander and Frank Johnson. Their wagons were made in Portsmouth and shipped to St. Joseph, Missouri. Barklow remained for two years and made money. In 1855, he went again and remained nearly five years. He owned very valuable property while out there the second time. In 1859, when he returned from California, he went back to the rolling mill and was a boiler for several years. Then he boated iron for several more years. For fourteen years of his life at different times, he was on the police force of the city. He was married August 15, 1844, to Sarah Jane Jeffords, daughter of Ezra Jeffords, and brother of Henry Jeffords. He had three children: William, Agnes, the widow of B. E. Roe and Margaret Jane. He died February 3, 1898. Stout Barklow was like King Saul, head and shoulders above his fellows, and the tallest man in the county, being six feet three and a half inches high. He was a man of the highest courage and of strong will.

was born in the city of Wicklow, Ireland, January 24, 1843. His father was Robert Barry and his mother's maiden name was Bridget Bryan. His father first went to Australia and then to California. He died before he could return to his family. In 1848, his widow and children, James and Richard, came to Canada and located in Kingston. In 1856, they came to Chillicothe and from there they went to Hanging Rock in 1859. In 1860, Mr. Barry was employed at a boiling furnace as a helper and was soon made a boiler. He has worked as a boiler for forty-two years. He afterwards learned to be a heater and worked for Richard Mather in Ironton.

He enlisted in Company E, 18th O. V. I., three months men, May 26, 1861, at the age of 20, and served until the 28th of the August following. He re-enlisted in Company A, 2nd Virginia Cavalry directly after his first service but was taken out on account of his minority. For the whole of 1862 and a part of 1863, he drove a team for the United States army and worked on the army roads under contract.

In March, 1863, he came to Portsmouth and went to work in the Gaylord mill and worked one year. In 1864, he went to work in the lower rolling mill for the Haydens and was connected with that mill till it was burned. He worked with the Burgess at Yorktown until it was sold out to the trust and has not worked any since. He was married July 4, 1864, to Ann Bargin, a native of Kings county, Ireland. They have had eleven children: Jennie B. who died in infancy; Margaret a dressmaker in Portsmouth; Richard died, aged eleven, from an accident; Charles, a machinist at the Norfolk & Western shops at Portsmouth; James, a foreman of the Hanging Rock, machine shops of the Norfolk & Western R. R.; Daniel, died in infancy; Agnes died in infancy; Mary, a stenographer with H. S. Grimes & Company; Loretta died at eleven years of age; Joseph, employed at the Norfolk & Western shops; Richard 2nd, aged fifteen. Mr. Barry enjoys good health and endeavors to take life easy. He is a member of the Holy Redeemer church and in his political views is a democrat.

Charles A. Barton

was born in Sidney, Maine, Sept. 3, 1824. He was the third son of Rufus Barton and Susanah Wyman, the grand-son of Flint Barton of Worcester, Mass. The years of his minority were passed under his father in the business of farming and lumbering, and his opportunities for education were exceedingly meager. At the age of twenty-one he started in the world for himself, and for several years was engaged in the lumber districts of Maine, New Brunswick, Pennsylvania, and New York. He was subsequently employed for a couple of years at the trade of mill-wright. In the spring of 1854, he made his way to Ohio, rafting lumber down the Alleghany and Ohio rivers to Ironton, and the next year located in Portsmouth and engaged with Messrs. Riggs & Thompson in the lumber trade and manufacture, in which business he continued until the breaking out of the late Civil War. He then entered the army in Company G, 1st Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and at the expiration of the three-months' service, re-enlisted and went out as First Lieutenant of Company B of the 13th Ohio, which was afterwards changed to the 22nd Ohio, serving until after the battle of Shiloh, when he resigned on account of failing health. In the fall of 1862, he raised an independent company of sharp shooters, and took them into the service. In November, 1863, he was attached to Gen. Thomas' headquarters for general duty and so remained until mustered out on July 25, 1865. Returning home, he resumed the lumber trade for a short time, and then engaged in civil engineering and surveying, which for the most part he continued to the time of his death.

He was for a time employed on the turnpikes of Scioto county in connection with Captain Gibbs, and with that gentleman prepared a very excellent map of the county. In 1872 and 1873, he had charge of the survey of the Ohio University lands, and after they were ready for market was engaged in selling them, and also in various other matters pertaining to his profession. On February 25, 1858, he married Miss Mary Jane, daughter of William Mad-dock of Portsmouth, but originally from Wales. Captain Barton was a Master-Mason, and has been connected with the order for a quarter of a century. In politics, he was a strong adherent to the principles of the republican party.

In 1867, he was the republican candidate for county Treasurer. He was defeated by Aaron Noel and contested the election. Noel won in the contest. In 1873, he was elected to succeed Andrew O'Neill as a member of the Water Works Board. The latter had been removed by impeachment. Captain Barton was elected to take his place and re-elected in 1875, serving five years. For the same length of time he was a member of the city council and was its president in 1881. He also served as a member of the Board of Education. He was a useful man and citizen wherever placed. He served on the city Board of Equalization of Portsmouth for several years. He was a member of the city Board of Trade and took great interest in it. He was its secretary at the time of his death. He and Captain F. C. Gibbs laid out the Barton and Gibbs addition to the city, and in 1883, they published a map of the county. He was agent for the Ohio State University lands for several years. He was a public spirited citizen, and highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a man who should have had no enemies. If he had them, they did not make themselves known. He was always in favor of public improvements and laboring to secure them. He died June 28, 1888.

James G. Basham

was born April 11, 1862, near Empire furnace, Scioto county, Ohio. He is a son of John W. Basham and Florence Hansford Basham. His parents were born and reared in Kanawha county, West Virginia, came to Scioto county in 1861 and settled near Empire furnace. His mother was of English descent and his father of Irish descent. He was reared on a farm until he was ten years of age. His mother died when he was hardly a year old and he was reared by his grandparents. He moved to Sciotoville, Ohio, in 1872, started to school at the age of ten, and received a teacher's certificate at the early age of sixteen; but continued in school until eighteen years of age, when he accepted a position as clerk in a grocery store in Ironton, Ohio. This position he held for three years. At the age of twenty-one, he purchased a grocery store at Ironton, Ohio, but owing to the depression of business generally, discontinued business at the close of the same year. Soon after, he came to Scioto county, and taught school, until 1885, when he was appointed postmaster at Sciotoville, Ohio, under President Cleveland's administration. During his term as postmaster, he was elected clerk of Porter township by the largest majority (98) ever given a democratic candidate. In 1898, he was elected Justice of the Peace in Porter township by a majority of 53. His prominence as a democrat gradually grew, until he was selected by that party, as their candidate for Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas against F. L. Sikes, but was defeated. In 1899, he was the democratic candidate for Probate Judge; but was defeated by Harry Ball.

He is a prominent member of the Church of Christ at Sciotoville, Ohio, at various times, holding the most important offices of that church. He married Rose E. Evans, October 2, 1892, who died December 27, 1894. He was again married to Lula Pierce, January 8, 1898, by whom he has two children: J. Frank born March 10, 1899, and Bertha M. born May 30, 1900. Mr. Basham is well informed and keeps in touch with current events. He enjoys the confidence of the community in which he resides to the fullest extent and is regarded as one of the best citizens of the county. His example and influence is uniformly for the public good and for progress.

Thomas Jefferson Basham

was born January 3, 1842, where he now lives near New Boston. His father John Basham, was born near Gepharts, Scioto county. His grandfather, Anderson Basham, came to Gepharts from the salt regions of West Virginia near Charleston. His mother was Mary Moore, daughter of William Moore who lived in Sciotoville, Ohio.

Our subject received a common school education. He attended school three months in the year from the time he was ten years until he was thirteen and set on the old style benches made of a slab with legs to it. He has been a member of the Board of Education of Clay township for the last twenty years with the exception of three years, and secured the construction of what is known as the Star yard school house. He has never been active in politics and has never held office, but is a "dyed in the wool" democrat. He is not a member of any church.

He was married December 16, 1862, to Nancy Rowley. Five children were born to them, all boys. Four of them died before reaching the age of five and one is now living: Thomas Edgar, born May 20, 1868.

Captain George Anderson Batterson

was born in Harrison township, September 19, 1874. He is the son of John Batterson and Sarah (Richardson) Batterson. His paternal grandfather was Franklin Batterson and his grandmother was Mary (Stockham) Batterson. His great grandfather was Abijah Batterson. His maternal grandfather was Edward Richardson and his grandmother Mary (Blair) Richardson, born in Ireland.

Our subject is one of five children: Edward R., Frank J., attending the Drew Theological Seminary and is going to Montevideo, South America, as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal church; Mame A., teacher of the Hav-erhill High School; and Sallie L. at home. The father died when our subject was five years old and the mother still survives a widow. He was raised on a farm and attended the country schools until 1894, when he entered the Ohio University at Athens, Ohio. He completed the junior year and entered on the senior year and continued with his studies till the Spanish war broke out, when he enlisted in Company B, 7th O. V. I. at Athens, Ohio, April 1, 1898, and was transferred to Company E, 4th O. V. I. at Columbus, Ohio, and served during the war as a Corporal. He took part in the capture of Guyama, Porto Rico and another engagement in the mountains; and was discharged February 1, 1899.

In 1900, Mr. Batterson raised a company of infantry for the Ohio National Guard in Portsmouth and it was mustered in July 27 of that year as Company K of the Seventh regiment. He was chosen its Captain and is at this time the head of the company. (See page 627.)

In March, 1899, he registered as a law student with George M. Osborn of Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended the law school at Ann Arbor during the winter of 1899 and 1900 and again the following year, and is still a student. He went in as a partner with his brother in the Ed. R. Batterson Dairy Company, in the spring of 1900, became sole owner of the business October 15, 1901 and conducted it until 1902, when he sold out. He represented Ohio University in a debating contest in 1896 and was commencement orator in 1897. He was president of the Webster Literary Society at Ann Arbor. While yet at the threshold of his career Mr. Batterson has that persistent determination that insures success. His inheritance combined the habits of industry with several generations of cultivated intellect of much more than ordinary power. He is by nature a leader of men and has been at the front in all organizations and movements with which he has been connected. He gives promise of becoming a leader in his chosen profession.

John Christian Bauer

was born February 17, 1863, in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was John Frederick Bauer, and his mother's maiden name was Anna Wolf. His parents came from Hanover, Germany, of which place they were natives. They had eight children, of whom John C. was the third and only son. Our subject attended the schools of Portsmouth until seventeen years of age. He then went into the Burgess mill and worked until he was twenty years of age. After that he worked at Zottman's soap factory. From 1885 to 1888, he was employed in the Portsmouth Wagon Stock Company as book-keeper and salesman. In September, 1888, he went to work for M. B. Gilbert as a salesman, and has been in the employ of that house from then until the present time. The business was incorporated January 1, 1900, and since, he has been its secretary and a director.

He was married June 4, 1890, to Mary Zoellner, a daughter of Philip Zoellner. They have two children, Irma and Marie. Mr. Bauer is a democrat in his political views. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and the United Commercial Travelers. He is highly regarded by all who know him as a first-class business man.

An associate in business says of him: "He is an honorable, energetic and reliable man, perfectly familiar with his business, and he has been very successful in his undertakings. During the time he was connected with the Gilbert Grocery Company as traveling salesman, he succeeded in working up a trade that placed him far in the lead of his competitors. This was accomplished by his courteous treatment to every one, and close attention to his business. He is of a very jovial disposition, has excellent habits, and has hosts of friends in this and surrounding counties."

William Ray Beatty,

son of William R. and Armina (Remy) Beatty, was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, August 11, 1874. He came to Sciotoville with his parents, when he was only six years of age. Here he attended school during the winter months and worked in the clay mines during the summer months until he was nineteen. By this time he had fitted himself for a teacher in the country schools. He is still engaged in this profession and during this time has taught four years on the west side of the county and four years on the east side. At present he is employed at the Briggs school on Chillicothe pike in Clay township. He is a loyal republican and a member of the Free-Will Baptist church of Sciotoville. He was married July 19, 1898, to Della A. Moore, daughter of Alfred and Tabitha (Hill) Moore.

William Robert Beatty

was born July 10, 1840, at Brush Creek furnace, Jefferson township, Adams county, Ohio. His father Rynard Carlyle Beatty was a collier at the furnace. His mother was Elizabeth Howe Taylor. His father was married twice. There were five children of the first marriage and four of the second. Our subject was the second child of the first marriage. When William R. was two years old, his father moved to Elizabeth township, Lawrence county and in two years more moved to Green township, Scioto county, not far from Powellsville. Young Beatty went to school there and attended school of winters till he was twenty years of age. He remained with his father till his majority.

On September 3, 1861, he was mustered into Company E of the First Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. He had enlisted in the July previous. He served in the same company and regiment until September 13, 1865, and was Corporal of the company when mustered out. His command was in twenty-one battles, to say nothing whatever of skirmishes. The list begins with Booneville, Mississippi, May 30, 1862, and ends with Columbus, Georgia, April 16, 1865, a week after Lee's surrender at Appomattox. The principal of these were Perryville, Kentucky, October 8, 1862, Stone River, December 31, 1862, to January 2, 1863, Chickamauga, September 19 and 20, 1863, and the Atlanta campaign. Mr. Beatty saw his Colonel, William Millikin killed in battle at Stone River, Tennessee, December 31, 1862. He saw a rebel aim at Colonel Millikin and tried to shoot the rebel first but the latter was too quick, his aim was true and Col. Millikin was shot dead off his horse. Mr. Beatty was taken a prisoner at Cortland, Alabama, July 23, 1862, and held as such until September 23, 1862, when he was exchanged. During the time he was a prisoner, he was confined at Jackson and Vicksburg, Mississippi. He was taken prisoner the second time in the fall of 1863 near Pulaski, Tennessee, by Guerillas, deserters from both armies. They could not hold him, and they took a vote whether to kill him or let him go. He was set free by a single vote.

During Sherman's March to the Sea, he was with General Wilson's Cavalry Corps and was in the famous Wilson's raid. His command was set to capture Jeff Davis and to do so a detachment of which he was one, was dressed in Confederate gray.

He came to Scioto county after the war. Then he went south one year, but returned in 1866. Since that time he has been mining ore and coal, but owing to his age, can no longer follow that occupation. He has been married three times. He was married first to Armina Remy, of Powellsville. His children by this marriage were: Thomas Carlyle, City Solicitor of Portsmouth, Ohio, who has a sketch herein; Harrison Taylor, died January 11, 1895, aged twenty-five years; Orpha Alma; William Ray, a teacher. Mr. Beatty's first wife died July 4, 1887. He was married the second time to Sophrona Hessler, of Wheelersburg. She died June 29, 1892. He was married the third time, May 24, 1893 to Margaret Smith Gamberline. They have one child, Bessie Florence, born June 14, 1901.

Mr. Beatty is a democrat in politics. For many years he has been a member of the Free-Will Baptist church, in Sciotoville. He is not a fraternity man. He is remarkably well informed for his opportunities and understands himself as well, if not better, than any one mentioned in this book. He knows his own abilities and will not attempt more than he can do. Like all old soldiers, he is a good citizen. He understands his duty to the state and is not amiss in its performance. He is well read and a good conversation-alist. He is fond of discussing complex problems. He is original in all his ideas and withal he is industrious.

James Bell,

the father of Robert Hunter Bell, was born in New Castle, Pennsylvania, August 3, 1784. He was the son of Joseph Bell, born March 8, 1758; in Ireland. Joseph Bell, his father married Anna Hezlep, February 7, 1779, in Ireland. She was born June 7, 1759. They came to New Castle, Pennsylvania, in 1784. James Bell, their son, located in Circleville, in 1810, when there were but three houses in the place. He carried on a shoe and leather business and had one tanyard located at Circleville and one at Perry. He also carried on a broom factory at Circleville. He made his home in Portsmouth for six years prior to 1861, when he went to Circleville on business and died and was buried there. He was a prominent Mason and member of the old school Presbyterian church at Circleville. The following constituted his family: Robert Hunter, deceased; Anna, married Nathan White, deceased; Lemira, married Samuel E. Brown, deceased; Nancy, married Silas Chipman Newton, deceased; James W., a physician; Joseph Hezlep, deceased; John Lynn, deceased; Lucy, married Joseph Willis Collins; Mary, married Melancthon Hicks Curtis, deceased, and Eleanor Emma who has resided in Portsmouth since 1856, and conducts a kindergarden on Washington street, between Third and Fourth streets.

Robert Hunter Bell

was born August 20, 1815, at Circleville, Ohio. His father was James Bell, and his mother Mary Hunter. James Bell, his father, was a native of New Castle, Pennsylvania, and his wife of Carlisle, Pennsylvania. His father, Joseph Bell came from Ireland, in 1784, and settled in New Castle, Pennsylvania. Robert Bell as a boy in Circleville, Ohio, was brought up to the shoe business. He also had a broom factory which he and his father conducted. He came to Portsmouth July 1, 1850, and engaged in the shoe business. He was the pioneer of boot and shoe making in Portsmouth. He started the first shoe factory in Portsmouth August 21, 1850.

Frederick Drew, Irving Drew's father, was Mr. Bell's foreman for many years. All the shoes were made by hand until March, 1869, when machines were first used. After 1869 they made 200 shoes per day and employed 40 hands. 15 were women and they stitched and bound the shoes. Each bench of five men made six pairs of shoes in one hour. Mr. Bell went into the wholesaling of shoes with W. H. Ware and Joseph Vincent under the firm name of Bell, Ware & Vincent, afterwards R. Bell & Company. He went out of the shoe business in 1874 and went into the insurance business. On April 4, 1876, he was elected a member of the board of cemetery trustees for three years. In 1873 he was elected a school trustee for three years. He was elected clerk of the Courts October 8, 1878 and re-elected October 11, 1881.

He joined the Presbyterian church in Circleville, in 1834, and was an elder in that church for many years. He was superintendent of the Sabbath school of the Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, Ohio, from 1856 to 1883. He was Clerk of the Trustees of the Children's Home of Scioto county for a number of years. He was married March 4, 1850, to Miss Dorcas Currie, of Lithopolis Ohio. His children are as follows: Mary Elizabeth, wife of John Glidden; Charles Bruce, died in infancy; George Henry, living in Florida. Lucy Margaret, wife of Captain Richard P. Rifenberrick of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Bell departed this life December 2, 1883. He was a public spirited man, always ready with time and means to assist in any laudable enterprise. He was a lover of children and knew a great many of them. If a teacher or scholar was absent from Sunday school, before he went to his place of business Monday morning, he called to ascertain the cause of their absence. He was one of the most useful men in his church and in the community.

Benjamin Franklin Bennett was born in Scioto county, Ohio, October 11, 1829. His father was a soldier of the war of 1812. In 1818, he emigrated from New York and settled on the Little Scioto river, in Scioto county, Ohio. The son received a limited education in the country schools, which he enlarged by reading and study in after years. He was taught the business of milling and as a millwright, and for some years carried on this business. On March 11, 1849, he was married to Miss Sarah Ann Snodgrass, of Scioto county. On December 4, 1855, he moved and settled on Tygart creek, in Greenup county, Kentucky, at the Globe Iron Furnace. He here erected the first flouring mill ever built in Greenup county. This, and a corn mill which he built and has operated ever since, are known, as "Bennett's Mills." While a citizen of Ohio, he was twice elected Assessor of his township, and township Clerk.

On the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, while Kentucky stood neutral, he crossed to Ohio and enlisted in Company G, of the 56th Ohio Infantry, September 12, 1861, and was made Sergeant. After the siege of Corinth he fell sick and was sent to the hospital at Camp Dennison, treated through a long spell of illness and discharged from the United States service in August, 1862, on account of disability. He remained at home until August, 1863, when he became Deputy Provost Marshal for the Ninth Congressional District of Kentucky, and served as such until the close of the war. He was admitted to the bar of Kentucky in 1866, and opened an office at Greenup. He has been one of the most successful attorneys in the state and Federal courts in northeastern Kentucky. He was Road Commissioner for his county, for four years, from 1866 to 1870. In 1890 he was elected a delegate to the state Constitutional Convention, in which body he served with ability and credit to himself and constituents. While yet in this service, the people of his county elected him to represent them in the General Assembly. Mr. Bennett may be best characterized as a man of strong and vigorous mind, with positive convictions and a frank and open expression of the same. Behind a manner somewhat abrupt at times, his kindly and accommodating spirit makes him a general favorite among his friends of all parties. He is as well known in Portsmouth and Scioto county as he is at home. He is and always has been a republican in his political faith and practice.

Jacob Bennett

was born April 1, 1860 in Bloom township, Scioto county, Ohio, son of Amaziah Bennett and Sarah Quenn his wife. He was the sixth of a family of eight children. He was brought up a farmer, but has been a miner for ten years. He had a common school education. He was married November 3, 1883 to Mary Alice Fulk, daughter of John Fulk. There were three children of this marriage: Margaret, Sarah and John. His wife died February 14, 1892. He was married April 5, 1896 to Melissa Johnson, daughter of John Johnson. There are two children of this marriage: Nellie and Bessie. Our subject is a republican but was never a candidate for office. He resides near Bloom Switch. Mr. Bennett is a young man of pleasing address and good habits. He tries to do the best he can for himself under any and all circumstances and that is the best any one can do. He is a good friend, a good neighbor and a good citizen.

John Gordon Bennett

was born November 1, 1846, in Scioto county, Ohio. His father was William H. Bennett, a farmer, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth T. Beauchamp. He attended school in Pike county, near Stockdale. He enlisted in the Eighth Company of Ohio Independent Sharp Shooters, October 22, 1862, and served until July 19, 1865. Since the war he has been a farmer in Pike county, near the Scioto county line. He was married first in 1872, to Harriet E. Norris, daughter of James Norris, of Pike county. There were four children of this marriage: Stella Grace, the wife of Harry Bierley of Portsmouth, Ohio; Edith Magnolia, the wife of Stanley Allard of Stockdale, Pike county, Ohio; Laura Ellen died at the age of seven years; Lewis Ellsworth resides with his father. His first wife died in 1882. He married in 1883, Charlotte J. Kirkpatrick, daughter of Thomas Kirkpatrick. There are two children of this marriage: Dwight Merrill and Nora Alice. Mr. Bennett is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and is a republican in politics.

Lewis Smith Bennett

was born March 22, 1849, in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was William H. Bennett. He was born in Madison township. His mother was Elizabeth Beauchamp, daughter of John Beauchamp of Pike county. His grandfather was John Bennett. Lewis Smith was the third of his father's nine children. There were three sons and six daughters. He received a common school education.

He enlisted February 22, 1864, in Company G, 91st O. V. I. as a recruit for three years, when he yet lacked one month of being fifteen years of age. He gave his age on the roster as eighteen and signed his mother's consent to his enlistment. His father was already in the service in the 8th Ohio Independent Company of Sharpshooters, having enlisted November 3, 1863 for three years. He was transferred to Company D, 15th V. R. C., December 21, 1864, and mustered out August 4, 1865. Our subject's brother, John was in the same Company, having enlisted October 22, 1862, for three years, at the age of sixteen. He served until July 19, 1865.

Our subject was wounded at the battle of Lynchburg, being hit in the back of the neck by a piece of shell which burst over him. On September 19, 1864, at the battle of Opequan, he was wounded three times by minie balls. One ball struck him near the right knee and plowed through his thigh. He was in the hospital three months on account of it.

After his return from the war, he went to work on his father's farm and remained there until April 7, 1870, when he was married to Lottie E. Brown, daughter of John H. Brown, now deceased. After his marriage, he went to farming on 80 acres of land in Pike county and lived there fifteen years. He bought the Noble farm in 1889 and has resided there ever since. He was a Trustee of Marion township, Pike county, Ohio, for six years. He was a member of the school board in the same township for three years.

He has had five children, four of whom are living: Florence Viola, wife of Bertie A. Crabtree, resides near Flat, Pike county, Ohio; John B. married Allie, daughter of W. M. Coburn, and lives near Nairn, Ohio; Sarah M. wife of Eli S. Wilson, lives near Scioto P. O.; William D. died at the age of fifteen months; Libbie May is at home.

Mr. Bennett is a republican, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a Knight of Pythias. He is a man of good character, honorable in all his dealings, of exemplary habits and a first class citizen.

Rolla E. Bennett,

the son of James J. Bennett and Margaret Bowler, was born November 16, 1856, in Madison township. His grandfather Thomas J. Bennett came from Virginia, in 1809 and settled on the farm on which our subject now resides. His childhood was spent on the farm, receiving only such education as the common schools afforded. Politically he is a republican, though not active in politics. He has religious views peculiarly his own and claims to have been born in the family of God by regeneration, February, 1883, and takes the New Testament as his standard of belief. He was married May 9, 1880, to Jessie F. Moore. They have eight children living and one dead. The surviving children are as follows: Agnes, Gertrude, Clarence, Icy and Ivy (twins), Lillie, Nona and Emma.

Mr. Bennett is a man of excellent qualities—a good neighbor, a patriotic citizen and a thoroughly conscientious Christian. He is always ready to perform a neighborly or Christian duty. He is honest and upright in all his dealings and can be counted among Madison township's model citizens.

William Jefferson Bennett was born January 12, 1854, in Jo Daviess county, Illinois. His father was Jehiel Bennett and his mother was Mary Crain Bennett, daughter of Martin Crain. His grandfather was Benjamin Bentley of New York. His father was born in Scioto county, Ohio, and emigrated to Illinois. He lived in Illinois until 1867 and was engaged in farming. There were ten children in the family, two of whom died in infancy. There were seven sons and three daughters. When his father left Illinois, he went to Clark county, Missouri, and remained four years and from there went to Batesville, Arkansas, where our subject resided until 1875, when he came to Portsmouth, where he now resides. He was married September 14, 1876 to Lucy Woodruff, daughter of Isaac Woodruff. They have twelve children, three of whom are dead. Edwin J., blacksmith in Plattsburg, Wisconsin; Ernest Theodore, and William Jefferson, Jr., both shoe cutters in Portsmouth; Clinton W., presser for Haas, Schwartz & Company; Clair, deceased at two years; Walter and Wallace (twins) died at two years; Charles Crain, employed in the shipping room of Drew, Selby & Company; Lucy M., Benjamin Bentley, Mary Erna and Wesley Oliver at home. From 1877 to 1880, he was with the Portsmouth Transfer Company. From 1880 until 1887, he worked for Mark Wells. He was Street Commissioner of Portsmouth from 1887 until 1891. Mr. Bennett has always been a republican and is a member of the Baptist church of Portsmouth.

William Pool Bennett

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, January 15, 1880. He is the son of Rolla E. and Sarah Pool Bennett. She was the daughter of William Pool. The great-great-grandfather of our subject, M. Bennett came from Morgantown, Virginia, in 1806. He died in June, 1815, at the age of eighty-three. His son Thomas Bennett married Nancy Jenkins and to them was born Caleb Bennett, the grandfather of our subject, who married Eliza Stockham and to them was born Rolla E. Bennett. His family consists of Warren, in Iowa; Erma, wife of Wm. N. Kent of Pike county, Ohio; Susan, wife of Wm. Brown; Harvey William, our subject, and Chloe. William's boyhood was spent on the farm and at the district school. He obtained a fair education. He conducts the home farm. His father Rolla E. Bennett was in Company G, 91st O. V. I. He is a democrat. He married Florence Deemer daughter of Louis and Jane Thomas Deemer, December 16, 1900.

was born in Sharon, Pennsylvania, May 22, 1807, the youngest of eleven children of Benjamin Bentley and Mary Baldwin, his wife, a native of Pennsylvania. For particulars as to his ancestry, see the Pioneer Record in this book. His father was a millwright and followed that trade for a number of years. He removed to Trumbull county when our subject was but one year old. There he attended the common schools and had to walk three miles. He worked on the farm in summer. Between the ages of fifteen and seventeen, he attended school at Warren, Ohio, and after the age of seventeen years, he engaged in teaching in Richland county, then in the old court house in Georgetown, Brown county, and then after that, taught four miles north of Ripley. One of his pupils there was Doctor Dunlap. In 1828, he embarked in the mercantile business in Georgetown, Brown county, Ohio, and was engaged in this business and farming for ten years. He afterwards engaged in the same business at Higginsport. In 1830, Mr. Bentley married Mrs. Mary Ann McCauley. They had two sons, Morrison and Martin. She died in 1836. In 1840 he married Jane Linn. They had five children: Franklin, died in infancy; Mrs. Laura J. B. Lloyd, widow of Charles P. Lloyd; Mary E., widow of Richard M. Lloyd; Linn, of Columbus, engaged in the iron business and Benjamin, residing at Jackson, engaged in the grocery business.

In the spring of 1840, he became clerk at Hanging Rock landing for Campbell, Ellison & Company, who were running Mt. Vernon furnace. In the spring of 1840, he went to Manchester, Ohio, and engaged in milling for two years. In 1846, he and some others built Gallia furnace and remained engaged in that for eleven years. In 1853, he removed to Portsmouth, Ohio. In 1854, he became connected with Madison furnace in Jackson county, Ohio, and his family are interested in that at the present time. In 1873, he became a stockholder in the Globe Iron Company in Jackson county, Ohio. On November 7, 1866, he was elected a councilman in Portsmouth, from the Fifth ward. On October 7, 1870, he was appointed a member of the Board of Equalization for the city of Portsmouth. In politics, Mr. Bentley was a republican. He never had any failures in any of his enterprises. The rule of his financing was that he never invested in any enterprise more than he could afford to lose and the result of that was that he passed through every panic in our country with unimpaired credit. He was a member of the Sixth Street Methodist church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He was an excellent business man and always a christian gentleman. He died on December 26, 1891.

Linn Bentley

was born December 10, 1851, at Gallipolis, Ohio, a son of Aholiab Bentley, who has a sketch herein. His ancestry will be found in the Pioneer Record of this book. He resided with his father in Portsmouth during his youth. He attended the public schools at Portsmouth and the High School when it was first opened in the Salter building. He was a student at the Ohio Wesleyan University in 1868 and 1869. He was a clerk in the Ohio Valley Bank with his father in 1870. From 1871 to 1874, he resided at Madison Furnace in Jackson county. He has been a member of the Methodist church since 1878. He has always been a republican in his political views.

He was married February 7, 1876, to Miss Rachel Alice Clare, of Portsmouth, the youngest daughter of the late James D. Clare. They have two daughters, Sarah and Jennie L., and three sons, Linn Clare, deceased, Robert A., and James P. All of the children are with their parents in Columbus, residing at 585 Oak street.

Since 1871, Mr. Bentley has been engaged in the pig iron business and has been uniformly successful. He is now a member of the pig iron company of Feisner, Wagner and Bentley, operating blast furnaces in the Hocking Valley. Mr. Bentley is a gentleman of more than usual ability, and is highly esteemed by all who know him. He has never made a false or mistaken move in business and his career illustrates the idea of learning one business and following it to the exclusion of all others.

Mrs. Lora Elmira Bierley, nee Salladay, was born in the French Grant, near Hayport, February 18, 1844. Her father was John Miller Salladay, and her mother's maiden name was Martha Hayward daughter of Moses Hayward. When she was a child, her parents moved to the Scioto valley, north of Portsmouth, where she was reared. She received a common school education. She was married September 19, 1877, to Samuel Bierley, and has had two children, Sarah Martha, wife of George D. Gims, who conducts a flour and feed store in Portsmouth, and Stewart Salladay a youth of seventeen years. Mrs. Bierley has resided within four miles of Portsmouth all her life. At present she resides at 381 East Eleventh street. She is a member of the Valley Chapel Methodist Episcopal church, and a woman highly respected and loved by all who know her.

William Biggs, Jr.,

was born January 16, 1830, at Greenup, Kentucky. He was one of twins, his twin brother being Robinson Biggs, who died June 22, 1852, unmarried. He was reared on his father's farm, and attended the local schools. He attended college at Washington, Pennsylvania, in 1848. In 1849, he went to Mount Savage Furnace, Carter county, Kentucky, as a store keeper of the furnace there, and followed that occupation and stock receiver for nine years, while his brother, Andrew was manager. In 1858, he took charge of his father's farm below Greenup, and managed it for eight years. March 15, 1860, he was married to Rebecca, daughter of Benjamin King, a prominent iron man of Laurel Furnace, Kentucky. In the year 1866, he removed to his present home, "Gravenstein Place," Greenup county, Kentucky, near Portsmouth, Ohio, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Biggs has had seven children: Robinson, a physician; Maurice, who married Nina Mitchell, of Greenup, Kentucky; Anna, who died in young womanhood; Lucy Davis, wife of Joseph Damron, engaged in business in Huntington, West Virginia; Sara and Helen Rebecca, at home; Winifred, wife of Irwin Smith, of Huntington, West Virginia. Mr. Biggs has always been a democrat. He is one of the most kind hearted men in the community where he resides, and is highly esteemed for his civic virtues.

Louis N. Bishop

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, January 25, 1871. He is the son of John Bishop of Portsmouth. His great-grandfather removed from England to Germany, and his father came from Germany to the United States. His mother, Clara Roth, was a native of Wurttemberg, Germany, she was a descendant from the Kober family, and among them were those holding the title of Baron and Baroness.

Young Bishop received his education in the public schools of Portsmouth, and then pursued the trade of a tailor and later that of designing garments. In 1889 he left Portsmouth, and traveled for a year. In 1890 he took charge of the manufacturing department of Sanford, Varner & Company of Portsmouth, and was soon afterwards promoted to the position of designer, which position he has occupied ever since with the same house or its successor. He gives instructions in the art of designing and has pupils in different parts of the country. To such an extent was he called upon to give instructions that he decided to publish his book entitled "The Modern Designer."

Mr. Bishop possesses fine literary tastes, and has quite a collection of books on scientific, historical and technical subjects.

Daniel Thompson Blackburn,

now head of Rarden, Ohio, was born at Pipe Grove Penna. Lawrence county, May 15, 1846. His father Thomas Blackburn, was the son of Edward Blackburn, a native of Ireland, who came to America in 1815, in search of his fortune. Some whereabouts had been lost sight of. While here he married Elizabeth Thompson of Butler county, Pennsylvania.

The mother of our subject was Caroline (Scott) Blackburn, daughter of James Scott, of Butler county, Pennsylvania, and was of Scotch descent.

His parents moved to Mt. Joy, in 1854, where our subject spent his childhood and received his early education. He attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, for a short time. He commenced teaching at the age of eighteen and continued to teach for seventeen years, never leaving out-side of four districts, which speaks well for his ability as a teacher. When teaching he was also interested in farming and fruit growing and was at one time known as the "peach boy of Mt. Joy."

In 1876, he gave up teaching and rented a farm he owned for a stock of merchandise in Western Avenue, Ohio, and carried on a general merchandise business there for three years, when he sold out and went back to Mt. Joy, and the next year formed a partnership with J. E. Johnson in the general merchandise business at Rarden, which partnership lasted two years. It was then sold back to Andrew and the firm was changed to L. T. Blackburn & Son as it is still known.

While he is known as a merchant, he takes a very deep interest in agriculture and has been a very active member of the organization formerly known as the Mt. Joy Fair Association, but at present is the Scioto County Agriculture Society, and has been its President for the past six years. It is largely owing to his management that the fair have been so successful.

When only ten years of age he offered to volunteer in the Grand Army. He was not accepted on account of his age. His father was a member of Company H, 11th U. S. I. and served from September 1, 1862 to June 14, 1865. Mr. Blackburn served as private two years in Brown (Ohio) township and was later sergeant of Rarden township for one year 1880. He has served one term as townman of Rarden and was elected Treasurer of the corporation in that office the next term. He was elected township Treasurer at the spring election of 1901 and was a member of the Rarden township Board of Education four consecutive years.

Mr. Blackburn is very liberal in his political views, voting more for the men than the parties. He is strongly inclined to protection and takes the democratic ticket on national issues. He was elected a Freeholder of the township, owing to the decay of his home church, he has passed his membership with the Mt. Joy Christian church.

He was married to Fannie Finger, daughter of Jacob and Sarah Finger of Pipe Grove, March 1, 1873. They have seven children, two of whom live in Indiana, one at the age of twelve and one at thirteen. Their names in order are William H. deceased, Randall C. Deerp P. deceased, Edna M. Quinlan, V. deceased, Lilla M. deceased, and Sarah C.

Thomas Bartlett Blake

was born at Biddeford in Devonshire, England, on the 6th day of August, 1843. His father was William Blake, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Bartlett. He attended the public schools in England, but left there at eleven years of age and went with his parents to Hamilton, Canada. His father was a butcher and he was brought up to that business. He soon learned it and at the age of nineteen years started in business for himself at Hamilton, Canada. He, however, had a desire to see something of the world and worked a while at his trade in Detroit; and afterwards at St. Louis. In 1862, he returned to Hamilton, Canada, where he engaged in his trade but a short time. In the latter part of 1862 and 1863 he was located in Detroit. From 1836 to 1840 he engaged in the same business in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. In the last named year he became tired of the long winters in Michigan and longed for a better country. While a boy in England at the age of nine, he had read and re-read and cried over, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He then formed a great desire to see the Ohio river and visit the scenes along the river depicted in that work. So in 1870, when he determined to find a warmer country, the memory of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" came to him and he resolved to come to the Ohio river. In the fall of 1870, he was engaged in the sewing machine business at Eagle river, Keweenaw county, Michigan. In connection with this business he came to Cleveland and consulted with Mr. Wilson, of the Wilson Sewing Machine Company; and as the result of such interview he came to Portsmouth and engaged in the selling of the Wilson Sewing Machine for four years. In 1874, he concluded after four years observation in Portsmouth that he had better re-enter the business he learned when he was a boy, so he started a meat shop on the corner of Second and Chillicothe and has kept it up ever since. He was married June 20, 1865, in Hamilton, Ontario Province, Canada, to Adelaide, daughter of Jacob Hess. The family originally came to Pennsylvania and later to Canada. Mr. Blake has six children: Alice M., the well known violinist; Cora M., married Ralph Johnson; George H., who is in business with his father; William T., who is in the same business in Chicago; Harry C., the famous base ball player; and Charles B., who is engaged in the meat business in Columbus. In his political views, Mr. Blake is a republican. He was naturalized in 1870. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. Mr. Blake is a model citizen; and never at any time in his life let a draft or note go by; but at the same time, like other mortals, he has his weakness, and one is his pride in his English ancestry. Those who know him, and know how to work him, can get anything out of him by praising England and her institutions. He is the happiest when he can get with Henry Vincent, or some other Englishman, and talk over dear old England.

Philip Bobst,

the son of Philip Bobst, Sr., and Magdalena Frank, his wife, was born September 3, 1847, at Lorain, Lorain county, Ohio. His parents were born at Durkheim, Bavaria, and emigrated to Lorain, Ohio, in 1846, where the son was born. In 1853 his parents moved to Beaver, Pike County, Ohio, and took up Congress land. Philip attended school only about nine months. He was raised on a farm and continued to work at farming all his life until 1896. He came to Scioto county, in 1871, and located near Portsmouth. He engaged in the grocery business on the Chillicothe pike in which he continued until 1900, when he went back to farming and gardening. He served as Justice of the Peace of Clay township from 1883 to 1886, and was constable of the township for a number of years. He was a member of the School Board of Clay township a number of years, and served as president two terms. He was once elected Justice of the Peace but failed to qualify. He has always been a republican, and formerly took an active part in politics, but of late years he has been out of it. Mr. Bobst has been a member of the United Brethren church since 1864; and at present is a steward of the official board of the United Brethren church of Portsmouth. He was married May 3, 1867, to Margaret Brush, a daughter of John Brush of Beaver, Pike county, Ohio. By this marriage they had eleven children all of whom are living: Henry; Magdalena, married Charles May; Philip; Margaret, married George Vogel;

Jacob, Aaron, Louis, Elizabeth A., Adam H., Fred C., and Clara M. His first wife died April 27, 1889, and he was re-married June 13, 1889 to Grace Vollmer daughter of Leopold Vollmer, near Portsmouth, who emigrated from Baden, Germany.

Carl Christoph Bode

was born in Hanover, Germany, May 2, 1835. His father was Conrad Bode. He attended school in Hanover till the age of fourteen, when he was apprenticed to the stone mason's trade. He served in the Hanoverian troops for seven years. He came to the United States in 1864 and located in Cincinnati, where he worked two years at his trade and became acquainted with Henry Rosenberg, who induced him to come to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1866. He built the Rosenberg business house on Gallia street, now occupied by Charles E. Welch, the grocer, and the Tribune. Mr. Bode conducted business alone until 1872 when he formed a partnership with Ignatius Reitz which continued for ten years. In 1882, he established a stone saw-mill on Twelfth street and went into business alone. In 1889, he opened a queensware store on Gallia street which is conducted by his widow. Mr. Bode went into the marble business in Portsmouth, in 1870. He was married in 1865 to Maria Theresa Koke, in Cincinnati, who with two children survive: Charles J., who is engaged in the monument business and is also a stone contractor and John Arthur, the well-known music teacher. Three children died in infancy. Mr. Bode was a member of the German Evangelical church, and a republican in his political views, but never held any public office. He took a great interest in the Masonic order and in the Harugari society. He died August 26, 1902.

Colonel William Mather Bolles

was born February 28, 1827, at Brooklyn, Windham county, Connecticut. His father, David Charles Bolles, was a native of Connecticut and his mother, Fannie (Mather) Bolles was a direct descendant of Rev. Increase Mather, D. D. (1639-1723,) who was President of Harvard College from 1685 to 1701. He obtained a new charter for the Colony of Massachusetts and was the author of many works. His book to prove that the devil might appear as an honest man, enabled many convicted of witchcraft to escape death.

When our subject was six years of age, his father removed to Granville, Ohio, resided there three years and then moved to a farm in Jackson county, near Jackson Ohio. Young Bolles lived on the farm until he was fourteen years of age, when he became a student at the Ohio University, where he attended for three years and then began the study of law with J. B. Johnson, at Athens, Ohio, where he studied until he was twenty-one, when he was admitted to the bar at Pomeroy, Ohio, in 1848. He began the practice of law at McArthur, Ohio, and continued it until 1851, when he went to Ironton, Ohio, and went into the iron business with Campbell, Peters & Company, first as a book-keeper and then afterwards, a partner in the concern, in 1854. He also became a partner in Monroe and Washington furnaces. Monroe furnace was owned by McConnell, Bolles & Company and Washington by J. Peters & Company. These two concerns were combined in 1867, under the name of the Union Iron Company and Colonel Bolles was a partner in that and remained such until 1883, when the company dissolved.

When the war broke out he enlisted in Company C, 18th O. V. I., three months men April 22, 1861. He was appointed Captain on the same date and was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, May 28, 1861. He was mustered out with the regiment August 28, 1861. The service of this regiment was on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad between Parkersburg and Clarksburg, West Virginia. After this service he enlisted in the 2nd Virginia Cavalry and became Colonel of that regiment September 1, 1861. The regiment was mustered into the service November 8, 1861, and Colonel Bolles resigned the 7th of July, 1862. The regiment was engaged in the campaign at Lewisburg, West Virginia. Colonel Bolles after his service in the 2nd West Virginia Cavalry served as volunteer aide on the staff of General John F. Reynolds in the second battle of Bull Run and ending with the battle of Chantilly. He resided in Ironton until 1863, when he took up his residence in Portsmouth where he has resided ever since except the period from 1885 to 1896 when he was away on different employments. He was married October 21, 1852, to Miss Amaryllis Long. His children are: Mrs. George Crawford; William Bolles, who died in 1892, at the age of 30, leaving a wife and two sons, and Nellie, the wife of Ernest H. Merrick of Pass Christian, Mississippi. He was first a whig and afterwards a republican. He is a Knight Templar Mason. Col. Bolles is at this time the oldest soldier of the Civil War residing in Portsmouth. He enjoys excellent health for his years. He is a gentleman of fine physical appearance and great natural dignity. He developed great executive ability in the management of the iron business. He can unravel any set of books of any business and tell the financial condition of the concern with as much ability as any such work was ever done. His reputation for skill in this direction is known far and wide.

Henry Cole Bradford

was born September 27, 1838, at Friendship, in Scioto county. His father's name was Littleton Bradford, and his mother's maiden name was Abigail Sampson. He spent his boyhood at Friendship, and received a common school education. At the age of twenty-one he began teaching school in Scioto county, which he continued for twenty years, seventeen years in the county and three years in the west. From 1869 to 1872, he lived in the west. In 1873, he began the occupation of a fruit grower, which he has continued ever since.

He was married December 2, 1863, to Miss Sarah Fenton, daughter of Bennett Fenton of Wheelersburg, Ohio. They have the following children: Claude, married Jessie Smith, residing in Portsmouth, Ohio, on Eighth street; Henry W., married Mertie Johnson, residing at Sciotoville; Ella, married Isaac Price, residing at Sciotoville; William Fenton, married Rosa Bolts, residing at Friendship; Emma, married David Gore, residing at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Findlay street; Littleton, aged twenty-five, and Herbert, aged twenty-one, at home.

Mr. Bradford was postmaster at Friendship for five years. His politics are undecided, not held down to any particular party, just as the issue suits him. He is a member of the Swedenburg church. He owns twenty acres of land, a fruit farm, four miles from the city on the Valley pike, but he resides at Portsmouth, Ohio. He is a highly respected citizen and a straightforward man of good habits. As a school teacher he was most efficient.

Marion C. Brame

was born on a farm in Madison township, about two miles south of Stockdale, Pike county, Ohio, January 2, 1877, the son of Jacob and Emeline (Coburn) Brame. The greater part of his boyhood was spent in Madison township, where he attended the district school. His father died when he was very young and he was thrown upon his own resources. He went to Illinois about 1896 and worked on a farm until he had earned enough to enable him to attend one term at an Illinois Normal School. He then returned to this county and attended two terms of school at the Harrisonville Normal. By hard work and constant application, he soon acquired an education to enable him to teach, which profession he has followed three years. He is a republican although most of his people are democrats. He is a young man of excellent habits and agreeable disposition. As a teacher, he puts honest, earnest effort into his work and his patrons have no cause for complaint. He is esteemed by all who know him.

was born near Hesse Castle, Germany, December 14, 1844, and came to America with his parents, in 1851. They located near Portsmouth, on a farm, where they remained until the winter of 1863-4. February 24, 1864, he enlisted in Co. F, 27th O. V. I., at the age of nineteen and was mustered out July 11, 1865. He received a common school education. After returning from the war, he worked at butchering till 1873 when he went into the business for himself. In 1875, he became an itinerant preacher and in 1881 he entered the ministry of the United Brethren church and was ordained in 1883. He continued to preach till 1885 when his health compelled him to give up the work. The field of his work as a minister was in Pike and Hamilton counties. In 1887, he again started in the meat business and has continued in it ever since.

He was married October 1, 1867, to Mary Stoll, daughter of George and Barbara Stoll of Pike county, Ohio. Five children were born to them of whom four, all girls, are now living, the other a boy died in infancy. His daughters are: Martha Elizabeth, married George Rueppel; Anna Catherine, married Harry J. Butts; Mary Louisa married Doctor Charles D. Slagel. His fourth daughter is Emma Bertha at home.

Mr. Brandau is a republican and was elected Water Works Trustee, in April, 1899, which office he held for three years.

Joseph H. Brant, Jr.,

was born near Lucasville, Ohio, in Scioto county, December 13, 1858. His father was Joseph Brant and his mother's maiden name was Susan Wilson. In 1864, when Joseph was six years old, his parents moved to Lucasville and he has resided there ever since. He received his education in the graded schools of Lucasville. In 1878, at the age of nineteen years, he was employed in Dr. B. G. Warwick's store at Lucasville, and after Dr. Warwick's death on June 14, 1880, he continued the business for his widow, Mrs. Mary Warwick, until February 1, 1894. In 1881, he was elected township clerk of Valley township and served for five years, when he refused to be a further candidate. He was president of the Board of Education, of his township and he served in that capacity for several years. Mr. Brant first voted the democratic ticket, but for the past ten years he has voted the republican ticket. He was married to Sarah C. Funk, July 26, 1881. They have two children: Clyde, born March 7, 1883, and Eva Crete, born April 20, 1885. Both are attending school at the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio. Mr. Brant connected with the Methodist Church about 1892, and is a trustee and steward. He moved to his present location May 20, 1895, and is starting in his twenty-fifth year of business. He is regarded as one of the best business men of his locality.

John T. Breece

President and General Manager of the Portsmouth Rim & Spoke Company, was born March 10, 1872, at Roundhead, Hardin Co., Ohio, and is the son of George Breece, whose father was a native of Wales. His mother was Asenath (Tingle) Breece, and he was one of eight children. His father died when he was eleven years of age, and when he was thirteen, his mother took him to Pottersburg, in Union county. They remained there until our subject was eighteen. From there he went to Bainbridge and formed a partnership with his brother, G. E. Breece, in the rim and spoke business in which he has been engaged ever since—three years at Bainbridge, one year at Latham, in Pike county, two years at Winchester, in Adams county, three years at Waverly, one year at Otway, and from there he came to Portsmouth and organized and incorporated the Portsmouth Rim & Spoke Company, of which he is the chief stockholder.

He received only a common school education. He is a republican and an active member of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal church of Portsmouth.

He was married April 30, 1890, at the age of twenty-one, to Jennie Miller, daughter of William Miller, near Latham, Pike county, Ohio. They have two boys; George W. aged seven and James Ernest, aged three. John T. Breece is wonderfully active and energetic. He is the architect of his own fortunes and has built them well. He has made a great success of his business.

One whose business and social relations have been very close with him for the last three years says, "he is the most even tempered man I ever knew; he is generous, enterprising, and cheerful, having the happy faculty of seeing the best side of all men. He is energetic, genial, temperate, and religious, also rich in his love for his fellow men."

was born January 1, 1833 near the city of Breslau, Prussia. His father was Benjamin Breslau, a dress maker. In his boyhood he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a cap maker. At the age of twenty-one he and a companion embarked from Hamburg to New York. He landed there with the sum of seventy-three cents in his pocket. He labored for two years on a farm in western Massachusetts, not far from Albany. He went to West Union, Adams county, in 1856, and became a peddler of merchandise, with headquarters at Peter McKenzie's on Ohio Brush creek. In 1859 he began farming near Blue creek, which occupation he followed until 1882, when he moved to Peebles, Ohio, to engage in pork-packing. In 1883, he went to Otway, Ohio, where he opened a general merchandise business in connection successively with J. W. Davis, Evan Thomas and George Ralstin. From 1891 to 1897, he was engaged in the timber business. In the latter year he retired.

In 1861, he married Nancy Jones, a daughter of Andrew B. Jones, of Brush Creek township, Scioto county. He has had four children: Rosa, Zora, Myrtle and Thomas Herschel, the latter only surviving. His wife died in 1890, and he was married in 1893 to Phoebe McNeil, daughter of John S. McNeil. His second wife died in 1901.

In politics, he is a democrat. As a business man, he is careful energetic and honest. In his disposition, he is unassuming and agreeable. He is a charitable, public spirited citizen, and enjoys the esteem of all who know him. The only surviving member of his family is Thomas H., a member of the firm of Breslau & Chabot, dealers in general merchandise, at Otway. He makes his home with his son and oversees his fruit farm of 40 acres, near Otway.

George Levi Bricker

was born March 26, 1858, at Lucasville, Ohio. His father was Henry Bricker, a native of Columbiana county, and his mother's maiden name was Mary A. Murphy, daughter of Arnold Murphy, also a native of the same county. He was the sixth in a family of eight children. He received a common school education and began teaching when nineteen years of age. He worked on the farm in summer and taught during the winter months for twenty-two years. In 1899, he began as a clerk for Martindale & Edmunds, and has been with them since. On June 11, 1885, he was married to Eliza Ellen Ward, daughter of Thomas Ward. They have two children: Mary Pearl and Otto Cleve. He is a republican, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a Blue Lodge Mason.

Mr. Bricker possesses the happy faculty of adapting himself to any and every situation. He can take up anything and succeed in it. He taught school in Valley township for fifteen years and stood at the head of his profession.

Aaron Anthony Briggs

was born November 29, 1853 in Clay township, the son of John Kinney Briggs, and Mary Miller, his wife. He received a common school education, and was brought up a farmer. He married first Sabina Cole, a daughter of George W. Cole, March 3, 1881. They had two children, Alfred M., and Frank A. She died November 22, 1888. He was married February 26, 1890, to Norah T. Jones, a daughter of Luther R. Jones. They have three children, Margaret, Beulah and Helen. Mr. Briggs is a republican. He is a member of the Oldtown Methodist Episcopal church, and not a fraternity man. He is positive in his views and convictions on all subjects. His ambitions are satisfied in being a good neighbor and a good citizen.

William M. Briggs

was born near Portsmouth, Ohio, December 5, 1857. His father was Henry Briggs, son of Samuel C. Briggs. His mother's maiden name was Anne E. Noel, daughter of Aaron Noel. His grandmother Briggs was a Timbrook. When he was ten years of age, his father, a farmer, moved to Daviess county, Missouri. His father had ten children, and our subject was the oldest of seven daughters and three sons. Our subject returned to Scioto county in 1878, and remained until 1888. In this period he was engaged in various mercantile businesses. In May, 1883, he began working for M. B. Gilbert & Company and remained with them and their successors until 1888. From 1888 until 1895, he was engaged in merchandising in Kansas. In 1895, he went to work with M. B. Gilbert & Company, and remained with them until January 1, 1900, when they became a stock company, and he is now a stockholder and travels for the house. April 28, 1888, he was married to Ida Buckhold. He has two children: Warren, born March 10, 1890, and Maurice, born July 20, 1892. He is a republican, a Mason and a member of the United Commercial Travelers. He is a first class business man and is progressive in every respect.

William Corydon Brouse

was born March 22, 1849, in Scioto county, Ohio. His father was James Sampson Brouse and his mother Adah Jane Baldrige, daughter of John Baldrige and Zillah Cole, his wife. John Baldrige lived and died in Adams county, adjoining Joel Treber. He is a descendant of Ephraim Cole, a Revolutionary soldier, an account of whom is found under the title of Revolutionary Soldiers in this work. His grandfather, John Brouse, was one of the first settlers. He was a blacksmith and also kept a horse mill near Sugar Grove school house. His father, James S. Brouse, died November 21, 1854, and his mother in 1883, at the age of eighty.

Our subject had a common school education and attended E. W. Smith's Commercial School, in Portsmouth, Ohio. He has been a farmer all his life, and has lived in the house he was born in or in sight of it all the time. He is a republican and a member of the Bethel Methodist Church near the infirmary.

He was married March 25, 1873, to Eliza A. Veach, daughter of Doctor Charles Veach and Elizabeth Burriss, his wife. They have had two children: Adah May, the wife of Fred Becker, and James Stanley, who died at the age of four years.

Mr. Brouse is a good citizen, highly esteemed by his neighbors and tries to live according to his professions.

Charles Carroll Brown

was born near Laurel, Clermont county, Ohio, June 9, 1847, the son of Enoch G. Brown and Susan Fisher, his wife. His maternal great-grandfather, Adam Fisher, a Revolutionary soldier, of German birth, came to this country in 1742, and settled in Pennsylvania, near Philadelphia.

Our subject's maternal grandfather, Hon. David Fisher, was born in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, December 3, 1794. He came from Pennsylvania down the Ohio river and landed at the mouth of the Scioto and raised one crop and them removed to Limestone, Kentucky, and remained there a few years, then came to Ohio, about 1798, and located in Clermont county. He was married in Clermont, Ohio, April 7, 1814, to Nancy Byrne, whose father was a commissioned officer under General Pulaski, and was an own cousin of Charles Carroll of Carrollton. In 1842 and 1843 David Fisher represented Clermont, Brown, and Clinton counties in the State Legislature. From 1847 to 1849, he represented the Second District of Ohio, composed of Butler, Preble, Darke, Warren, Clinton and others in Congress. He died May 8, 1886, aged ninety-two.

Enoch G. Brown, the father of our subject, was a native of Clermont county, Ohio. He was a distant relative of Alexander Hamilton. He was a farmer and a merchant. He came to Scioto county to live with his son, our subject, about 1889, and died in Portsmouth in 1891.

Our subject passed his boyhood and youth in Clermont county and attended the Amelia public schools. At the age of eighteen, he ran away from home and went to the war. He enlisted in Company I, 184th O. V. I., Jan. 31, 1865, and was discharged September 20, 1865. After returning from the army, he attended Parker's Academy in Clermont county for four years, and commenced teaching in 1868 and continued that occupation until 1874. In June, 1874, he was appointed mail agent on the river from Cincinnati to Portsmouth. In that same year, he was transferred to Chicago and remained there six months. He was then transferred to the Ohio and took his old position where he remained until 1885. He was then transferred to the C. P. & V. Railroad as mail clerk and served two years, or until 1887. In November, 1886, he took charge of the Portsmouth Steam Laundry and continued to conduct it until July, 1901, when he sold out. In 1898, he ran for Mayor, but was defeated on account of the "Ripper Bill." He is a republican and has always been prominent in county and state politics. He has attended several District and State conventions, in particular a Congressional convention, which nominated Hon. H. S. Bundy for Congress the last time and the following one which nominated Hon. L. J. Fenton. He was a Congressional delegate in Clermont county when he was twenty one years old.

September 11, 1877, he was married to Nannie M. Power, daughter of James C. Power, a former well known steamboat owner. Their children are: J. C. Power Brown, now private secretary to C. S. Fee, General Passenger and Ticket Agent at St. Paul, Minn.; Nannie Mary, wife of Guy V. Williams; Charles C. Jr., shipping clerk at the Heer Shoe Factory, and David Fisher, a school boy.

Mr. Brown is one of the most genial and courteous of men, always ready to do his part in any good work for the public good. He makes friends wherever he is known and they remain such. He has always been a good neighbor and a good citizen.

Charles Wesley Brown, son of Milton W. Brown and Sarah Wood, his wife, was born October 7, 1862. His education was that of the common schools. At the age of eighteen in the year 1880, he went to California for his health, and spent one year in the Sacramento valley, then he spent one year at Honolulu. He returned to Scioto county, in 1883, and worked for his father on the farm for four years. In 1886, he was married to Miss Etta Stockham, the youngest daughter of Harvey Stockham. He has two children: Joseph Mills, born in 1887 and Charles Wesley, born April 14, 1896. He lives on the Little Scioto on the M. W. Brown farm, better known as the Bowers farm of one hundred and twenty-one acres. He is a stock raiser and dairyman. He makes butter and sells it in the city of Portsmouth. He is a prosperous dairyman, and calls his farm "Woodlawn." He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Scioto, and has been superintendent of the Sunday school. He is active, energetic and enterprising in everything he undertakes. He is the steward of his church. In his political faith he is a strong republican. He is a force and power in the community, and will be so long as he survives.

Charles Sumner Brown

was born near Locust Grove, Ohio, August 18, 1876. His father was William H. Brown, a son of Hugh Brown who came from Virginia to this county during its early history. William Brown's mother was Margaret Newman, a daughter of Christopher Newman, one of the early settlers in the vicinity of Rarden. The mother of Charles Sumner Brown was Mary Jane Leighly, daughter of Philip and Rebecca (Lewis) Leighly, of Adams county, Ohio. Philip Leighly was a native of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. At the age of sixteen, he emigrated to Ohio and settled near Blue Creek, in Adams County, where he married Rebecca Lewis, daughter of William Lewis.

At the age of eighteen, our subject became a teacher in the public schools of the county, but after being engaged in this profession for two years, he gave up teaching to enter the employ of the Rarden Stone Company as book-keeper. He later served in the same capacity for L. Taylor and assisted in the management of Mr. Taylor's cooperage and stone interests. At the opening of the year, 1900 he became a partner in the Taylor Cooperage Company and two years later formed a partnership with Mr. Taylor in the lumber and timber business under the firm name of The Taylor-Brown Timber Company. Mr. Brown is a firm believer in the policies and principles of the republican party and manifests a deep interest in both local and national politics. Though a young man, our subject by an earnest effort, has established a reputation of being a thorough and practical man. He is honest, upright and persevering, has an active mind, a clear judgment and an independence of spirit that pervades all his actions.

Edgar W. Brown, son of Milton W. Brown and Sarah Wood, his wife, was born December 12, 1873. He had a common school education, was brought up on his father's farm, and has always been a farmer. At the age of seventeen years he took a one-third interest with his father, and worked for three years. Then he took a one-half interest and worked from 1893 to 1899. In the latter year he bought out his father on the Squire's farm, and has given it the name of "Browndale" farm. He has two hundred and one acres, and conducts a dairy farm. He was married August 8, 1893 to Mary A. McKenzie, a daughter of David McKenzie, a farmer of Madison township. They have two children: Milton Wesley, born May 29, 1894, and Earl McKenzie, born March 2, 1898. He is a member of the Scioto Methodist Protestant church, and superintendent of the Sunday school of that church. In his political views he is a republican. He has all the family traits in as pronounced a degree as exhibited in his father, and whatever he undertakes he does with all his strength. He is noted for his energy, industry, and his strict attention to business, and when he is called to show up his balance on the last day, it will all be on the credit side.

Frank L. Brown

was born in New Castle, Pennsylvania, August 3, 1849. His parents were Nathaniel Ellicott Brown and Jane Squier, his wife. When he was eight years of age, his parents removed to Cleveland, Ohio. He attended the public schools there and afterwards his parents removed to Youngstown and from there to Portsmouth, Ohio. On October 11, 1870, he was married to Miss Ellen Louise Varner, daughter of Samson Edgar and Maria Louise Varner of Portsmouth. After his marriage he went to Paducah, Kentucky, where he was connected with the Southern Rolling Mill. In 1872, he moved north and finally settled in Youngstown, Ohio, where he was connected with the Brown Bonnell Rolling Mill until 1900, when he was elected mayor of the city of Youngstown. He served one term, was re-elected and is now serving his second term. Of his three children, only one is living, Natalie Varner Brown. He resides at 537 Bryson street, Youngstown, Ohio.

Frederick Matthew Brown

was born on a farm one mile east of Sciotoville, November 23, 1876. He is the son of John T. and Christina Brown. The maiden name of his mother who was twice married before, was Woolford. She is the granddaughter of Daniel Woolford, a soldier of the war of 1812, who moved to this county from Bath county, Virginia, in 1802. There is a family tradition that while this sturdy pioneer ancestor was away fighting for his country, his wife at home taking up her husband's work, went into the harvest field with a sickle and reaped a field of wheat. The original Brown stock also sprang from Virginia. His great-grandfather, Robert Brown, migrated west about the year 1797, coming down the Ohio on a flatboat to the old disembarking point of Limestone, now Maysville, Kentucky, and settled first in Montgomery county, Kentucky. Some time subsequent to 1812, he moved to a farm opposite Sciotoville, in Kentucky, where he died. His son, William, father of John T., kept the first store ever opened in Sciotoville. He was elected county Surveyor in 1846, 1853 and 1856. Afterwards he moved to his farm opposite Sciotoville, where he died.

Our subject attended the public schools of Sciotoville and at eighteen years of age, engaged in teaching in the schools of the county. As a teacher, he is painstaking in his work. He insists on system and accuracy in his pupils. His great aim is to teach them how to think and in thinking to reach always the safest conclusions. He is also engaged in the study of law. In politics, he is a republican. Either by reason of circumstances or a natural disposition, he has the qualities of self reliance and determination. His habits are good and he possesses a high sense of honor. It matters not what positions he may hold in life, he will be a useful citizen and a credit to his community.

Mrs. Harriet E. Brown,

daughter of John D. Feurt and Maria Oldfield, his wife, was born May 5, 1847, on the old Feurt farm in Clay township. Her father was a son of Gabriel Feurt, who was one of the pioneers of Alexandria. Her mother was a daughter of Col. William Oldfield, a sketch of whom is found elsewhere in this book.

Mrs. Brown was married to William Peters, December 25, 1867, and to them were born three sons and three daughters, all of whom are living. Lillian married Frank Oakes; Berdie married Frang Gasele; May married Charles Cole. The sons are Howard, Clifford and Arthur. Mr. Peters died April 30, 1882, and Mrs. Peters was again married to Mr. T. J. Brown, August 15, 1889, and now lives near Haverhill, Ohio. Mrs. Brown is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is held in the highest esteem by all who know her.

Henry Asbury Brown, son of Milton W. Brown and Sarah Wood, his wife was born March 1, 1858, in Scioto county. He attended the common schools in the vicinity of his home, the Portsmouth High School two years, and was one year at Lebanon. He was a teacher of the country schools for two years, and then he attended the Ohio State University for two years, and left at the end of his junior year in 1881. In that year he became a farmer in Scioto county, and continued that occupation until 1883. He was married February 15, 1882, to Miss Hattie Ackley, at Athens, Ohio.

In 1883, he moved to Ennis, Texas, and kept books for the M. T. Jones Lumber Company for four years; and then, at the invitation of his father, who gave him 80 acres of land, came back and took charge of said farm, known as the Wood farm. He continued this occupation until 1894, when he went into the farming implement business in the city of Portsmouth, with his father, as M. W. Brown & Son. He remained in that business until 1898, with his father, and one year longer by himself. In 1899, he sold out his business to David Stahler, and then began traveling for the Deering, Harvester Co., and is now so engaged. After accepting employment with that company, he resided in Athens Ohio, a short time and since then in Zanesville.

In his political views he is a Republican, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has the following children: Ernest Walter, born May 1, 1883, now telegraph operator at Zanesville; Fletcher Louis, born September 2, 1886, a school boy; Harry Ackley, born September 3, 1892, a school boy. Mr. Brown is a first class business man, and has all the energy, enterprise and industry he inherited from his father and a surplus besides.

Levi Brown

was born in Pike county, Ohio, January 7, 1883. His father, David Brown, was a native of Vermont and came to Scioto county, Ohio, when Levi was two years old. His mother's maiden name was Lavinia Pool. She is still living, being in her eighty-sixth year. David Brown, her husband, died at California, Pike county, Ohio, April 15, 1900, at the age of eighty-six years. Our subject was one of five children: Ransom, Levi, Thomas H., Eliza, wife of a Rev. Harrison, and Filmore, who died when very young. Levi Brown was brought up on a farm and received his education in a subscription school. When eighteen years of age, he and Alex Calder built a grist and saw mill at California and operated it from 1856 to 1859. On May 2, 1864, he enlisted in Co. F, 140th O. V. I. and served until September 3, 1864. He has always been a republican and is a member of the Free Will Baptist church. At the age of twenty-three he married Ruhama Stockham, a daughter of William Stockham, who is living at California, Ohio, aged eighty-eight years. Our subject has had ten children by his first marriage, and all of them are living. Their names are: George L., Ruhama, wife of Albert Diber; Mary, Lois, wife of Henry Koger; Dora W., William D., Otto Scott, Claudine C., Abigail, wife of Perry Prindel, living near Robbtown, Pickaway county, Ohio; and Margaret Ethel. His wife died January 15, 1897, and he married her sister Nancy A., February, 1898. Directly after his first marriage, he went to farming and has been engaged in that occupation and has resided on the same farm ever since. He cultivates between 300 and 400 acres lying partly in Pike and partly in Scioto county, but his residence is in Scioto county.

Milton Wesley Brown

was born Sept. 2, 1836 in Marion township, Pike county, Ohio. His father, Royal Brown, was born in Vermont. At the age of three years he was brought by his father to Portsmouth. His grandfather was David Brown, who has a sketch herein. Our subject's father landed at Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1816. Mr. Brown had a common school education, and became a farmer. He is one of the few farmers who have a sincere love for the vocation. His first ventures in business was the buying and selling of cattle. He enlisted in Company G, 91st Ohio Volunteer Infantry, August 11, 1862, appointed corporal Oct. 19, 1863, and mustered out with the company June 24, 1865. During a portion of his service he was detailed as one of a company composing Blazer's scouts, whose deeds of daring and courage are known to all familiar with the history of the Civil War.

Our subject was married August 21, 1856, to Sarah Wood, one of the daughters of Simeon Wood, who has a sketch herein. Their children are: Asbury, born May 14, 1858; Rachel, born 1861, died at the age of one year; Charles Wesley, born Oct. 7, 1862; Emeline Florence, born Oct. 7, 1867, is the wife of John Quincy Adams, of Portsmouth O.; Edgar, the youngest, was born Dec. 12, 1873.

His brother, John S. Brown, enlisted Oct. 18, 1863, as a recruit, at the age of nineteen, in the 91st Ohio Volunteer Infantry for three years; and on Oct. 22, 1864, was transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps to serve out his term of enlistment.

Our subject resided in Harrison township until after the war and in 1883 moved to Madison township on the Squires farm. In 1898 he bought the Dow McKinney farm in Madison township and moved upon it, and gave up the possession of the Squires farm to his son, Edgar. Mr. Brown has 400 acres of land in his home farm and tills it well; but one of the great features of his business is his herd of Jersey cattle.

He was elected commissioner of Scioto county in 1887, and served until 1894, with great credit. At his first election the vote stood, Brown, republican, 3,526; Wm. McKinney, democrat, 2,501, majority 755. In 1890, the second election, the vote stood, Brown 3,556; Asa McCall 2,746; majority, 810.

From 1894 to 1898, Mr. Brown was in Portsmouth, with his eldest son, engaged in the business of selling farming implements. In 1898, he took up a permanent residence in Madison township on the old Dow McKinney farm, to which he has made several additions. He and his wife reside alone. Though in the sixties, they have forgotten that fact and work just as hard and as continuously as if they were just beginning life like a young couple. Beginning with nothing, he has accumulated a handsome competence which he holds in his own name. In addition to this he has placed two of his sons on good farms, and set them out in life with a most excellent beginning. He has also assisted his other children.

Mr. Brown has been all his lifetime an unswerving republican. He is a consistent member of the Methodist Protestant church at Scioto, one mile south of Harrisonville. He is an up-to-date farmer, and takes all the journals relating to his specialties in farming and dairying, and keeps informed on all modern methods.

"Mr. Brown is one of Nature's favorites. A man gifted by Nature as he is, cannot make a failure of life. He is by Nature a strictly honest man. His bond is good for any amount he will give it for. His word is just as good, and if he believes a thing to be your due from him, you are just as sure to get it as if you had his word and bond. People who do not know him, sometimes regard him as unduly exacting. He may be exacting in the sense that he wishes others to comply with their contracts and meet their engagements, but when one knows him he finds that he is liberal with others, compared with what he exacts from himself towards them. He withholds from no man his due. He is a man of unbounded energy and of unusual ability, untiring industry, strictly temperate, frugal and economical. He is a success in the broadest and most liberal sense."

Charles Edwin Brown

was born October 1, 1856, at Piketon, Ohio. His father was Henry Brown, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Duke, daughter of Samuel Duke. He was reared at Piketon and attended school there until eighteen years of age. He then became a traveling salesman in the grocery business for fifteen years, and the last seven years has been with the Standard Oil Company, located at Charleston, W. Va. For the last two years he has had charge of the managing office at Charleston. He has been a resident of Portsmouth for fifteen years. He was married in July, 1882, to Miss Alice Green, daughter of Samuel Green of Pike county. They have two children: Leila C., and Donald. He is a republican in his political views, and is highly esteemed among all his friends. He possesses all the virtues of his long line of ancestors and if they ever had any vices, he is innocent of them altogether.

Ora D. Brown

is the son of George Wesley Brown and Margaret McFann, his wife. He was born at Lyra, Scioto county, Ohio, July 16, 1876. His father was a son of George W. Brown and Lily M. Foster, both natives of county Tyrone, Ireland, who came to America in 1848, shortly after their marriage. They settled above Haverhill in the French Grant. The father of our subject was born at Franklin Furnace and as a youth was employed about the furnace. In recent years, he has been a farmer and now resides below Haverhill on the river. Ora D. Brown is the eldest of nine children and was brought up on a farm. He received a common school education and prepared himself for a teacher. He began teaching at the age of nineteen and has taught continuously since with good success. For the past three years, he has been employed as principal of the schools at Union Mills near Portsmouth, Ohio. His mother was the daughter of John McFann, a soldier in the Civil War. He enlisted in Company D, First O. H. A., August 6, 1862, and died at Knoxville, Tennessee, May 23, 1864. In politics Mr. Brown is a republican. He is a member of the M. E. church at Haverhill and a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He was married February 16, 1901, to Clara B. Burch daughter of Samuel L. and Lucy (Frye) Burch of Haverhill, Ohio.

was born in Marion township, Pike county, Ohio, April 7, 1840. His father was John H. Brown, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Beauchamp. His grandfather, David Brown, was in the war of 1812. When Wesley was four years of age, his father moved to Scioto county and located in Madison township where he owned a saw-mill. He received a common school education in the district schools of Madison township until fifteen years of age, when he went back to Pike county near his old home. He attended school in that county, until he was seventeen, then he farmed for two years with his father. When his father died in 1859, he went into the mill business and worked at that until he was twenty-one years of age. He then went back to farming and bought a farm in the same township. On November 28, 1861, he was married to Icy Bennett, the daughter of Caleb and Eliza (Stockham) Bennett. He went to housekeeping on the farm he had been tending, in December, 1861. He enlisted August 11, 1862, in Company G, 91st O. V. I. for three years. He was wounded September 19, 1864, at the battle of Opequan, Virginia. He was mustered out with the company June 24th, 1865. After the war, he went back on the farm and farmed until 1892, when he went to Flat, Ohio, and started a creamery. In 1897, he was appointed postmaster at Flat, now Stockdale, Ohio, which office he still holds. He was township Trustee of Marion township for two terms. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church. He has been superintendent of the Sunday School for eighteen years. He is a republican.

Mr. Brown has never had any children of his own, but has reared three. John Henry Rice is one. He resides in the Indian Territory. Mrs. Margaret Myers, wife of Hamilton Myers, of Chillicothe, Ohio, is the second. Mrs. Mary C. Jones, wife of Charles Jones of Columbus, Ohio, is the third.

Mr. Brown possesses all the estimable characteristics of the family to which he belongs. He has a reputation for integrity, known wherever he is known. He is careful in his business and official dealings. He is one of the most efficient workers in his church. He is a man who believes in continuance in well doing else he could not have been a Sunday school superintendent for twenty consecutive years. He possesses all those sterling qualities which go to make up the highest type of manhood. He is a true Christian a model citizen and a man who exemplifies the Golden Rule every day of his life.

William Beauchamp Brown

was born December 1, 1860, in Pike county, Ohio. His father's name was Royal Brown and his mother's maiden name was Rachel Beauchamp. He received a common school education in the county, and at the age of twenty-eight he attended college at Adrian, Michigan, for three years. He took the theological course, and was ordained to preach in September, 1881, but on account of failing health was obliged to give it up. He then engaged in farming and mercantile business, buying and selling stock, in which he is now engaged. In 1894 and 1895, he was Treasurer of Marion township, Pike county. He was married January 11, 1881, to Miss Emma Graham, daughter of Wesley N. Graham, of Scioto county, Ohio. They have one daughter, Ruby, A., eighteen years of age. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

He has and maintains high ideals in life. He is ambitious and energetic and lives up to a high standard of moral excellence. He has business talent and his financial career has been a success. He is a neighbor highly esteemed in his social circle.

Washington Tracy Brumbaugh

was born near Powellsville, Ohio, November 16, 1864. His father Eli Brumbaugh, a native of Pennsylvania and a descendant of the early Dutch settlers of that state, came to Ohio in 1854 and was employed at the Means, Kyle & Company furnaces as a charcoal contractor until 1880, when he quit the furnaces to settle on his farm near Powellsville, Ohio, where he is still living in his seventy-second year. Our subject's mother's maiden name was Arvilla Dille. She is a native of Ohio, daughter of James Dille and sister of James Jr., and Washington Dille now of Los Angeles, California. She was married to Eli Brumbaugh in 1854. Nine children came to this union, of which the subject of this sketch is the fourth. She still survives in her sixty-second year on the farm with her husband. Washington T. Brumbaugh attended the district school during the winter months until he was sixteen years old. At seventeen, he entered the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, and took up the teacher's course of study, began teaching at eighteen years of age and has just completed twenty years' service as a teacher, sixteen years of this service having been rendered in three schools: Powellsville, Junior Bridge and Clapboard. In addition to his work as a teacher he has conducted a general store in Powellsville, Ohio, for the last ten years and has served as Postmaster of that village for the last five years. He is a republican in politics, first, last and all the time.

In 1887, he married Hattie S. Hudson, daughter of A. J. and Malissa Hudson, of Powellsville, Ohio, descendants of the early French settlers. Four bright, cheerful girls and one boy constitute their family. That his services as teacher for nineteen years have been satisfactorily rendered in schools with in three miles of his home, among people of different religious and political views, is evidence that he not only possesses to some degree, the true character of a man but that he has been instrumental in developing it in others. His character is shown in devotion to his family, application to business and reverence for the Golden Rule in dealing with mankind.

Adolph Brunner

was born October 7, 1838, in Schwiedrue, Bezirk Kulm, in Switzerland. His father's name was Samuel Brunner, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Hundeker. His father had a cotton factory in Germany. Our subject attended school in Germany. In 1853, he came to this country, with his brother Gotlieb, Elizabeth, and Mary, wife of John Bender, deceased. His brother Rudolph had come three or four years before him. Soon after coming to Portsmouth he went into the dry goods store of his brother Rudolph, on the corner of Second and Market streets, he has been in the same business ever since, and at the same place. He started in as a clerk and continued as such until the death of his brother, February 17, 1877, when he was made executor of his estate and took charge of his business, which he has conducted ever since.

He was married October 28, 1863, to Frederica Wertz. They have the following children: Charles C., clerk for his father; Mary, married Henry Menzell, residing in St. Joseph, Mo., and is engaged with the Henry Clogg Packing Co., Emily, married Frederick Doerr, who is engaged in the cigar business in Portsmouth, O.; Albert and Adolph, clerks in their father's store; Frederick, died at the age of eight years, in January, 1883; Rudolph, working in The Drew-Selby shoe factory; Henry, clerk, at the store; Willie, died in 1884, at the age of four years; Oscar, a student of the Portsmouth High School; Lena, a student of the Portsmouth High School. Mr. Brunner is a democrat in his political views, and a member of the German Evangelical church. He is a first-class business man. He has an old established business and has prospered in it.

was born at Smidtaud, Switzerland, March 8, 1845. His father had the same name and he was the eldest of seven children. When he was six years of age his father, who was a machinist, moved into France, not far from Geneva, Switzerland. There he resided and followed his trade till 1863, when his eldest son Jacob was of age. There the boy attended all the French schools and became very efficient in the French language. Today he can speak French as well as German, but likes the English language best. At eighteen he went to Geneva and there learned the machinist's trade. He spent an apprenticeship of four years. At twenty-two he finished his trade and he and his father located in Choufhausen in Switzerland to follow it. He spent two years in this place, most of the time making locks for guns. In 1869, his father determined to take his family to Antwerp and there embark for this country. Portsmouth was their destination. The family reached Portsmouth on July 3, 1869. The father and mother, five brothers, Jacob, Emil, Gustave, Adolph, Gottlieb and sister Phillippine were in the party. Rudolph and Adolph Brunner, uncles of Jacob, were already in Portsmouth.

The first work Jacob did in Portsmouth was for the Foundry and Machine Works for the first five months. Then he tried digging ore at Mt. Vernon furnace in Lawrence county till May 1, 1870. He preferred the Foundry and Machine Works and returned to them and worked for them till April 1, 1884. At that time he was appointed engineer of the Hospital for the Insane, at Athens, and was there four years. On his return he set up in business for himself at 26 West Fifth street, and has been there ever since. He does all kinds or repairing to machinery, plumbing, etc., and is a most excellent workman. He needs no sign for he generally has the street in front of his place full of crippled machinery waiting for his services.

He was married August twenty-second, 1872, to Catharine Widdig, a daughter of Frederick Widdig. He has had seven children, six of whom are living. Edward, an engineer, is with the Irving Drew Company; Emma, is the wife of George Schirman; Josephine, Mary, Frederick and Gustave, are at home. He lost one Gustave at the age of four.

Mr. Brunner is a hard worker and is always busy. His services are in constant demand. In his political views he is a democrat. He is a member of the German Evangelical Church, an Odd Fellow, a Knight of Pythias, a member of the German Benevolent Society, and of the Royal Arcanum. He speaks the three principal languages of the world with ease and fluency, and can rebuild any piece of machinery that was ever made. With all these advantages it is superfluous to say that Jacob Brunner is a useful citizen and in demand at all times, and especially when the thermometer is below zero. Notwithstanding the many hurry calls he receives, Jacob takes life easy and is a good deal of a philosopher. If he lives to old age he will have done as much good in the world as any one.

was born in Switzerland in 1821. He came to the United States in 1849, and came to Portsmouth on December 1, 1850, in his 29th year. He was employed as clerk in Wm. Hall's store on Front street about three years. In 1853, he went into business for himself. He began at Brunner's corner, on Second and Market streets, and remained in business there all his life. When he went into business he had $200 in cash and a credit from James Pursell. He was married in 1857 to Barbara Bender. They had three children. His wife died in December, 1868. He was one of the founders of the Lutheran church. He died February 17, 1877. He was one of the successful merchants of Portsmouth. He made a great deal of money by his integrity and by correct business methods. He founded this most excellent business now carried on by his brother, Mr. Adolph Brunner.

John F. Brushart

was born in Jackson county, Ohio, October 25, 1857. He was the son of Peter Brushart, Sr. His mother's maiden name was Phoebe Shy. The family moved from Jackson to Pike county, while Mr. Brushart was a boy. At the age of eighteen, in 1875, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and entered the store of Charles Winter as a clerk. Mr. Brushart learned the business thoroughly and in June 1882, he went into the business himself. He remained in this business for a while when he devoted himself to dealing in real estate, and in this, he was remarkably successful. At the time he died, he owned the block where Hibb's hardware store is now located and the corner block on Sixth street, north of Marting's store between that and Sixth street, a part of which is occupied by Marting's. He was also in the lumber business in Portsmouth, Ohio, and was President of a lumber company. In April, 1892, he proposed to construct an electric railway, in the city of Portsmouth, and on the 26th of September, 1892, the city council passed an ordinance giving him the authority to construct the same. Mr. Brushart was married to Miss Seva E. Keefe, daughter of Thomas Keefe, June 20, 1885. They had four children, two girls and two boys: Esther, Louise, John and Thomas. He was a member of the Massie Lodge, K. of P., and took considerable interest in the order.

Early in July, 1899, he went to a fishing and hunting lodge on the Scioto river, north of the Charles Davis farm to spend several days. On the morning of July 6, he went out with a gun to shoot some birds. While out, the gun was discharged and he was accidentally killed. At the time of his death, his life was insured for $10,000, regular life, and for $5,000 accident.

Mr. Brushart was physically a most handsome man. He had regular features and a pleasant expression. He had a florid, rosy complexion, common to the people of Central New York, but most uncommon in Southern Ohio. It was as clear as that of a young girl, the admiration of all who knew him. Mr. Brushart was genial to all whom he met. He had great decision of character. He was careful and prudent in all his ventures, but at the same time made up his mind quickly and made it up finally. When he had once reached a conclusion, the subject was closed. His virtues were largely domestic. He was much attached to his family and could not do too much for their comfort and pleasure. He was very fortunate in all his business ventures and had he lived would have filled the career of a most successful business man. His death was a great loss not only to his family but to the community of which he was a part.

Robert Alexander Bryan

was born in Adams county, Ohio, March 22, 1839, on what was then known as the "Granny Fry farm," about one mile from Jacktown, or Dunbarton P. O. He was the son of Daniel M. Bryan, who was born in Greene county, Pa., May 10, 1807, and was the posthumous child of John Bryan and Susannah (Baker) Bryan, who was from the eastern shore of Maryland, and she was one of the little girls who strewed the flowers on the bridge at Trenton for General Washington, when he was on his way from Mt. Vernon to New York, in April, 1789, to be inaugurated first president of the United States.

The Bryans had been a very old family in Virginia, from early dates emigrating from Virginia to Maryland, and from Maryland to Pennsylvania, and from Pennsylvania to Hampshire county, Virginia, and from thence to the Ohio river, at, or near Wheeling, W. Va., and from thence to Adams county, Ohio, in 1826, where they settled on Ohio Brush creek. These emigrations covered a period of about two hundred years. The wife of Alexander Spottswood, Governor of Virginia, was Anne Butler Bryan, whose godfather was James Butler, Duke of Ormond, hence there is a strong inference that the family was English.

Daniel M. Bryan was married to Nancy McSurely at West Union, Ohio, May 19, 1836, by Jacob Hempleman, J. P. She was born in Lexington, Fayette county, Kentucky, March 2, 1812, and was the daughter of James McSurely, who was the only son of William McSurely. James McSurely emigrated from Ireland in 1789, at the age of eighteen. The voyage was so tempestuous, perilous and lengthy that his hair turned gray and remained so until his death, at the age of seventy, in 1841. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. Nancy (McSurely) Bryan is now living (July, 1902,) at her home in Novelty, Knox county, Missouri, where the family emigrated in 1871, to a farm purchased before the civil war. Her mother's name was Maria (Niel) McSurely, who was a French lady whose family had emigrated from France to Kentucky prior to 1805. The McSurely's came from Kentucky to Adams county, Ohio, at or near Rockville, and afterwards settled on Cherry Fork where some few members of the family still reside. Daniel M. Bryan died in 1877, at the age of seventy years.

R. A. Bryan was educated in the common, select and special schools of Adams county, and partly at Miami University. On the same bench with him at Rev. Urmston's school in West Union sat John A. Cockerill, who afterwards died in Egypt, and N. W. Evans, the editor of this work. The select and special schools of Adams county at that day had no superiors. Young Bryan began teaching school at the age of sixteen, taught school during the winters and attended school or studied under a master during the summer. He studied law under the tutorship of John K. Billings and William C. Buck, and was admitted to the practice of law September 18, 1860, at West Union, Ohio, by the District Court, Judge W. V. Peck, who was one of the Supreme Judges of the state, presiding. His great distaste against having to fight for a client that he might believe or know to be wrong and his great love of mathematics and physics led him away from the law into surveying and civil engineering.

He first came to Nile township, Scioto county, in 1857, where he taught school in the Elm Tree district for several years, during the fall and winter seasons, and pursued his favorite studies during the summer seasons.

His first engineering work on his own account was the construction of an inclined plane and a tramway near Vanceburg, Kentucky, in 1866, two and a half miles in length, with an incline about 1800 feet long in the form of a parabola and a height of hill of 530 feet. Two previous attempts by others to make a success of an incline at this point had resulted in failures.

He moved to the city of Portsmouth in November, 1866, and has resided there continuously since that time, except when absent on professional business. He was County Engineer from 1867 to 1869, and was engineer for the great turnpike system of the county inaugurated in that period. In 1870, he was assistant engineer on the preliminary survey of a railroad from Cincinnati to Portsmouth, part of which line is now occupied by the Cincinnati, Georgetown and Portsmouth railroad.

In 1870 and 1871, he was engineer and business manager for Pond and Kelley, contractors for five miles of the C. & M. V. Ry. between Zanesville and Dresden, Ohio, including the High Bridge across the Muskingum river at Ellis Station. In 1872 and 1873 he was engineer for Scioto county in turnpike construction and bridges. On November 7, 1873, he was appointed City Civil Engineer and served in that capacity until May 7, 1875. He was again appointed City Civil Engineer April 21, 1880, and was his own successor through all the political changes for thirteen years, until May 1, 1893, when he resigned to take a much needed rest.

He was County Surveyor in 1872, which office he resigned on account of his large private business. In 1878 he was Division Engineer, on the construction of the Scioto Valley Railway for sixteen miles from Portsmouth to the Pike county line. In 1879 and 1880 he made a map of Scioto county, for the real estate appraisers. In addition to the duties of Civil Engineer he was County Engineer from 1880 to 1885, including the bridging of the Scioto river at its mouth, the bridging of Tygart creek and the Little Sandy river at its mouth in Greenup county, Kentucky, and numerous smaller bridges. Also, he was engineer for construction of one single lock and one double lock on the Ohio Canal near its outlet into the Ohio river at Portsmouth; and the bridging of the old bed of the Scioto river and the Ohio Canal north of the Scioto river bridge, all of which are models of fine masonry.

From 1893 he followed a general engineering business, including the first street paving in Wellston, Ohio, and a sewerage system and improvement of streets at Manchester, Ohio. The first street paving in Portsmouth in 1891, was done under his direction and supervision, and is a model to this day for shape and quality, where it has been undisturbed. He has done much cemetery engineering. He did the engineering for the construction of a new bridge in lieu of an old one across the Scioto river at Lucasville, and made maps of real estate in 1899, of the land west of the Scioto river, for the real estate appraisers.

He was again elected City Engineer on January 3, 1900, and served until July 20, 1901, when he again engaged in general business, doing much surveying and platting and surveying a tramway for the Tygart Fire Brick & Clay Company. He has made and published two maps of the city of Portsmouth, the first in 1868 and the second in 1889. He is now Assistant Engineer for the city of Portsmouth, and is preparing plans for an extensive sewer system in Robinson avenue, and also for an arch culvert at the head of Eighth street across Lawson's avenue, and also for an arch culvert at the head of Eighth street across Lawson's run.

He was married December 3, 1860, to Miss Sarah E. Givens, of Nile township, Scioto county, daughter of William and Elizabeth Givens and granddaughter of Judge William Givens (see their sketches in this volume). They have four children now living: Robert G., secretary and treasurer of the Portsmouth Stove and Range Works; James D., a book-keeper at the First National bank; Mary F., is a teacher in the public schools, and Hester E., at home.

William Burnett

was born November 23, 1849, in Sprigg township, Adams county, Ohio. His father was William Burnett and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Bradford. There were nine children in the family and our subject was second. His father moved to Lewis county, Kentucky, in 1857, residing there until 1862 when he returned and located in Bentonville, Adams county. Our subject received his education in the common schools; and at the age of ten years he began to learn the cooper's trade and has followed it ever since. He went into the army in August, 1863, in Company G, 129th O. V. I., and served eight months. Then in August, 1864 he was mustered in Company G of the 173rd O. V. I., to serve one year and was mustered out with the Company June 26, 1865. After the war he engaged in coopering in different places. He was married February 2, 1871 to Sarah Ellen Doddridge, sister of Henry Doddridge and daughter of Reason Doddridge, of Manchester, Ohio. After he was married he located in Rome, Adams county, Ohio, and was there until 1878, engaged in the cooper's trade. On March 1, 1878, he moved to Rarden, Ohio, and has remained there ever since in the same business. From 1884 to 1893, he was foreman for George M. Wikoff in the cooper business, and since 1893, has been working for L. Taylor. He had three sons who died in infancy. He has two daughters, Anna and Eliza. Anna is the wife of John Windel and was married in 1894. Previous to 1894, Mr. Burnett was a democrat, but since that date has been a republican. He was Constable of Rarden township for six years, a member of the town council for seven years, and Trustee of Rarden township for six years. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Improved Order of Red Men. He is highly respected by all who know him. He tries to do his duty in all his relations in life and the verdict of his neighbors is that he succeeds.

Charles Edward Burt

was born December 19, 1835, on Washington street, Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was Thomas Burt, and his mother's maiden name was Anna Buffington. He attended school until 1853, when he began teaming for his father. In 1854, he went to railroading as a brakeman on the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad. In 1855, he began firing for his brother, William and afterwards for Dick Burns, the well known engineer. In 1858, he became a locomotive engineer and has been in that employment ever since. All his services as such have been upon the B. & O. railroad, Portsmouth Branch, with the exception of the winter of 1861 and 1862, when the superintendent of the Branch road transferred him to the Muskingum Valley railroad. At the time of the Morgan raid, in 1863, he was on the river two or three months, but after that he went back on the railroad. He was never in any serious wreck. He was never hurt to amount to anything but once; he had his ankle sprained when a locomotive was derailed. He has always lived in Portsmouth, except one year in Hamden.

He was married to Louisa Cook, a daughter of Conrad Cook, April 22, 1858. He had six children: Anna Burt, at home; William H. Burt, of Burt, Hall & Company; Thomas M. Burt, who works for the United States Express Company; Charles Burt, a salesman for the Irving Drew Shoe Company; May, the wife of Anson Clapper, an electrician of Portsmouth; Harry, employed in the office of Drew, Selby & Company. Mr. Burt has been a republican all his life. He is a member of the Aurora Lodge of the Masonic Order.

Mr. Burt is one of the reliable men of Portsmouth. He can always be depended on to be in his place and doing his duty. When death shall call him, he will find him at his post.

William Burt

was born October 18, 1829, in Portsmouth, Ohio, on the site of the Dr. Burr residence. His father, Thomas Burt, was for many years wharfmaster in Portsmouth. His grandfather, Christopher Burt, was a major in the war of 1812. His mother was a native of Virginia. His father died in Vicksburg in 1871. William Burt attended school in the Fourth street building. In 1842, he went to work at Maddock's factory and worked there for seven years, learning to be a moulder and an engineer. He became the engineer of the mill and afterwards of Rigg's saw mill. He went to Sciotoville and Haverhill and took charge of engines there. He became an engineer on the river. He began on the "Fashion, No. 2," in the Catlettsburg trade. He afterwards was employed on a boat called the "Relief." In 1848, he went to Pittsburg and put the machinery in the first steam ferry boat ever used at Portsmouth. She was owned by Moses McCoy. He brought the boat down and was her engineer for one year. He was succeeded by Armstead Fawcett who died in 1885. Then he flat-boated for six months, this satisfied him for a life time. In March, 1851, he married Rebecca Davis daughter of David Davis. In September, 1852, he became engineer on the first locomotive which ever came to Portsmouth. In July, 1852, he became an engineer on the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad. On July 19, 1853, he ran the first locomotive into Jackson. He was engineer, conductor and master mechanic on the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad. In 1864, he was a locomotive engineer for six months on the Iron railroad at Ironton. Then he went back to the river and was engineer on the propeller, "Pike," and the "Viola" for Captain William W. Little. He was engineer on the "Victor No. 4," "Gipsy Fayette," and "Mountain Belle." In 1872, he left the river forever and went into the plumbing business. From 1880 to 1887, he was a member of the board of trustees of the Portsmouth Water Works. He is an Odd Fellow and a republican. Mr. Burt presents the rare instance of one, who in one life time, has been both a steamboat and locomotive engineer. He is hale and hearty and enjoys life as much as a youngster.

John Butterfield, son of Benjamin Butterfield and Mary Powell, his wife, was born on his father's farm near Haverhill, Ohio, November 20, 1826. His father emigrated to Haverhill from Boston, Mass., about 1815, and was of English descent.

The son was left an orphan at the age of fifteen and with what little education the country schools of those days afforded, he assumed the care of the family and the management of the farm. On becoming of age he united with the whig party, and afterwards became a republican, on the formation of that party. He served as township trustee of Green township from 1860 to 1861 and again from 1869 to 1871.

He was married to Ellen J. Rankin, daughter of David and Persis Rankin in 1861. By this marriage were born four children of whom Jennie, the wife of Dr. Jefferson D. Kiser, of Lexington, Ky., is the only survivor. His wife died in 1869, and he was again married to Lucy Boynton, daughter of Asa Boynton, Jr., in 1872. By this marriage were born two children of whom John, who is married and lives on the home farm near Haverhill is the only survivor. Our subject died January 13, 1895, and is buried in the cemetery at Haverhill. His wife died in 1897.

By industry and economy Mr. Butterfield became a successful farmer and business man. He was a worthy man, kind and considerate in judgment, prompt and prudent in business matters, just and reliable in all things, a quiet, unassuming neighbor, a kind father and a loving husband. It was said of him that his word was as good as his bond. At the time of his death he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Haverhill.

Cicero Sidney Cadot

was born October 12, 1844, in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio, the son of Lemuel Cadot and Catharine Baccus; his wife. He was brought up on his father's farm. He enlisted in the 8th Independent Company of Ohio Sharpshooters, November 3, 1862, and served until the close of the war. After returning from the army, he became a book-keeper for M. B. Gilbert & Company. He was afterwards employed as assistant book-keeper for Damarin & Company for thirteen years. Afterwards he was secretary and treasurer of the Portsmouth Wagon Stock Company. He was engaged in business in Chicago for two years and in 1886 returned to Portsmouth and engaged as a dealer in hardware, stoves and ranges. He was also a partner with Thomas W. Watkins & Company in plumbing. He has always been a republican. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He was elected a cemetery Trustee in 1884 and served for three years. He was one of the Water Works Trustees of Portsmouth from 1888 to 1895. He has always taken a great interest in politics and has frequently served on the Republican Executive Committees of his county. He has taken all the degrees in Masonry from Blue Lodge to the thirty-second and is a Mystic Shriner. He is also an Elk. He was married to Miss Lizzie A. Smith July 27, 1885. She is the daughter of George Smith, a well known business man on Front street. They have one son, Howard, now fifteen years of age. In the winter and spring of 1902 he served as Postmaster of the House of Representatives of the State Legislature.

John Claudius Cadot

was born on his father's farm of 725 acres, in Vernon township, on June 20, 1828. His father was Claudius Cadot, a native of Gallipolis, Ohio, son of a French emigrant of that name. His mother was Miss Nancy Ball, a native of New York. He got his schooling in the schools of Vernon township and then attended school at Haverhill. He afterwards took a commercial course at Gundry's College in Cincinnati. He was a farmer until about the age of twenty-four, when he concluded to try commercial life. He spent something over twelve months in the store of A. W. Buskirk in Portsmouth, then he became a clerk in J. F. Towell's dry goods store, for about three months. He then purchased an interest in Greenup furnace and remained there over a year, when he concluded that farming was the best; he went on his father's farm and in course of time purchased it. He has farmed there all of his life. His domicile was there until he went to Wheelersburg in 1891, where he has since resided. On March 25, 1874, he was married to Miss Mary A. daughter of John Winkler of Haverhill. They have had three children only one of whom is living, a daughter, Avanel; Claire died July 14, 1902.

Mr. Cadot was Clerk of Vernon township for about ten years and Treasurer almost the same length of time, until 1891, when he resigned the office on removing from the township. In 1865, he was elected Commissioner of Scioto county to fill a vacancy of one year. He received a vote of 2,161 against 1,888 for Henry Barrett, his democratic opponent. In 1891, he bought him a comfortable home in Wheelersburg and resides there on account of the advantages to his family. His wife died suddenly July 11, 1901, and his daughter resides with him since. For several years prior to its failure, he was a director of the Farmers' National bank. He has been a member of the Wheelersburg Methodist Episcopal church for the past twenty years, and is one of the official board. His farm is one of the best in the county and he visits it almost every week day. He has been a successful raiser of fine stock and if he is well informed on any subject, he thinks it is farming.

The following is what a neighbor of Mr. Cadot says of him: "In every community there are some men—often among the most prosperous—with whom one prefers not to have dealings. Or if one cannot avoid business relations with them, there is a constant feeling of insecurity associated with every transaction, a sense of the need of unusual alertness to keep from being over-reached or victimized in some way. Solomon crystalized the idea in a proverb: 'It is nought, it is nought, saith the buyer, and when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.' On the other hand there is the man who is eminently fair minded—in whom one does not look for guile, or deceit or cunning. It is to this latter class of men that J. C. Cadot pre-eminently belongs. No one who knows Cadot would expect him to do a mean or dishonorable thing. Nor would any one believe a damaging report alleged against him in the absence of most conclusive proof. Not many men enjoy to the same extent the confidence and respect of their neighbors and associates. This quality—it is needless to say—is the index to a character of which any man may well be proud. Words are not needed to emphasize its value. A man who has scored such a record, already has builded a monument to which his posterity may turn with laudable pride.

Colonel Lemuel Zenas Cadot

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, January 25, 1838, the son of Lemuel Cadot and Catherine Baccus, his wife. He received his education in the common schools of Vernon township. At the age of eighteen, he went into the grocery business in Gallipolis as clerk for his brother, John Julius Cadot. He remained in that position until the breaking out of the civil war. In the spring and summer of 1862, he raised a company for the 91st O. V. I. He entered the service as Captain of Company A, 91st O. V. I., July 15, 1862 and was promoted to Major, April 10, 1863. He was wounded September 19, 1864, in the battle of Opequan, Virginia. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, December 9, 1864, and was mustered out with the regiment, June 24, 1865. As Major, he had his horse shot under him and was injured so as to be unconscious several hours.

In 1862, he was married to Josephine Carel, daughter of Franklin Carel and Sarah Whitney, his wife. They had three children: Charles Carel, clerk in the store of Samuel Cherrington of Gallipolis; Florence, died at the age of three; Harry Lemuel, ticket agent for the Hocking Valley railroad and Adams Express agent at Gallipolis. This son was born September 29, 1874, at Gallipolis, Ohio, and educated there. He was married in March, 1900, to Miss Bettie Deardorff and has one child, Charles Donald, aged five months.

After Colonel Cadot came back from the civil war, he engaged in the cigar business in Gallipolis. He died October 29, 1885, of asthma. He was a republican, a Mason and a Knight of Pythias. He was an excellent business man and noted for his adherence to correct business principles. As a soldier, he was highly esteemed by all who knew him. As an officer, he earned the approbation of his superiors. He was a gentleman in every sense of the term.

William Henry Harrison Cadot

was born July 12, 1840, in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Lemuel Cadot, a sketch of whom appears herein. His mother was Catherine Baccus, daughter of James Baccus. He spent his boyhood on the farm until he was sixteen years of age when he went to Moses Gilmore's private school in Jackson for two years. When eighteen years of age he commenced to teach and taught during the winters of 1858 and 1859 at Pioneer station. In the spring of 1861 he taught school at Howard Furnace, Scioto county. In 1861 he went to Gallipolis and attended the Gallia Academy which was conducted by Prof. A. G. Sears for two years. In 1863, he engaged in book-keeping for J. J. Cadot & Brother, wholesale grocers, Gallipolis, Ohio. He was there until the spring of 1864, then he went to Pittsburg and attended Duff's Commercial College for six weeks and graduated. At the completion of the course in Duff's Commercial College, he was selected as one out of a class of twelve and offered a position with William N. Ogden & Company, dealers in glass, which he accepted and remained with them until October 1, 1864, when he returned to Gallipolis and engaged as book-keeper for J. J. Cadot & Bros., and remained there until 1867.

May 21, 1867, he left Gallipolis and was married to Miss Helen Augusta Kimpel and since then he has lived in Portsmouth. He was a book-keeper for L. F. Gilbert for about a year after his marriage and then was book-keeper for Thomas P. Brown, and was there almost a year. He was then appointed Adams Express Agent but resigned on February 10, 1870. In February, 1870, he went into the wholesale and retail grocery business on Chillicothe street and sold out in July, 1878. On the 9th of October, 1877, he was elected Auditor of Scioto county on the democratic ticket over Frank C. Gibbs, republican. The vote stood: Gibbs 2,664, Cadot 2,828, majority 164. In 1880, he was a candidate for re-election and was defeated on his party ticket by George L. Dodge, by a majority of 104, when Garfield carried the county by 486. He served the first three years under the law extending the term from two to three years. In July, 1878 he sold out his grocery business to Hon. H. S. Bundy, who moved the stock to his furnaces. In November, 1880, he became book-keeper for J. L. Hibbs & Company and remained there until September, 1882. He was with Palmer, Grim & Company, tea dealers, from September, 1882, until January 1, 1883. He was traveling salesman for Austin, Nichols & Company, wholesale grocers, from January 1, 1883, to August 29, 1885, when he went with Shinkle Kreis & Company, wholesale grocers of Cincinnati, Ohio. He was with them until they combined with E. J. Wilson & Company in January, 1891. He worked with that firm which was the Shinkle, Wilson & Kreis Company until July 1, 1900, and was a stockholder from 1891 until 1900. He then came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and on the 2d of July, 1900, became a partner and book-keeper in the Jones-Ferguson Grocery Company.

He has one son Clarence, born April 28, 1868. He is married and resides in Richmond, Virginia, being in the employ of the American Tobacco Company. Mr. Cadot has always been a democrat. He is a Mason and Knight Templar.

Smiley Anson Caldwell,

born March 15, 1853, on the place where he now resides, was the eldest child of Captain Jacob and Huldah (Hurd) Caldwell. His father enlisted in the 91st O. V. I., July 16, 1862, and took an active part in recruiting volunteers for the 91st regiment. He was appointed Captain of Company C and died August 9, 1864, at Frederick, Maryland, in the Sanitary Hospital. He was buried from his father's residence near Richmond, Ross county, Ohio. Mrs. Caldwell, his widow, and mother of our subject, now lives with her daughter, Mrs. P. J. Sours, in Denver, Colorado. Our subject spent the early years of his life at the home farm and attended the neighborhood schools, also the school at Piketon for a few years. After the death of his father, he made his home at his grandfather's in Pike county. While there he attended the Ohio University at Athens. He gave up school at the age of twenty to take charge of the home place. Mr. Caldwell has always been an active member of the republican party, though not prominent in politics. He was married in 1874 to Jennie Claypool, of Fairfield county, Ohio. She died September 12, 1888. His family consists of four children: Maurice J., Erle C., Beatrice F. and Annie L. Beatrice, died in Denver, Colorado, aged nine. Maurice and Erle live with their father at the home place and Annie lives with her aunt in Denver, Colorado. Mr. Caldwell is enterprising and energetic. He is one of the foremost citizens in the community where he resides. He uniformly favors public improvements and stands for what is best for his fellowmen.

Thomas George Calvert

was born May 9, 1847, in Washington township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was George W. Calvert and his mother was Emma Hoskinson, a daughter of Josiah Hoskinson, a private in the Revolutionary war. (See Revolutionary Soldiers.) George W. Calvert was a native of Fairfax county, Virginia, born near the site of the Bull Run battlefield in 1805. He came to Ohio in 1812 with his mother and his brothers, Richard and Jacob. They located on the farm on which the subject of this sketch now lives.

Josiah Hoskinson was a native of Maryland. He came to Ohio and settled in Washington township. The Calverts and Hoskinsons are of English descent.

Our subject attended school in Portsmouth until he was fifteen, when he went into his brother's grocery. Here he worked four years. The next year he worked for Frank M. Gilbert in the same business. He then returned to the farm and went into the dairy business at which he continued until August 4, 1874, when his father died. He then became the deputy of his brother Robert A. Calvert who at that time was Probate Judge. Afterwards he was deputy of H. C. Turley in the same office, serving altogether in this capacity until 1886, or twelve years. After this he returned to the farm and has been in the dairy business since. He has been at all times a staunch republican and at one time was very active in politics, but of later years he devotes his time to his business. He is a member of the First Baptist church of Portsmouth, having joined the church in 1875. He was united in marriage April 19, 1877 to Amanda Morris, daughter of Stout Morris of Union Mills. Mr. Calvert is one of the best citizens of the county. He is faithful to every duty and every trust.

Charles William Carson

was born near Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, January 14, 1867, the son of James H. and Elizabeth (Brooking) Carson. His grandfather, William Carson, was of Scotch-Irish descent. His maternal grandfather, Charles Brooking, was of German descent and came to Ohio from Pennsylvania. When he was very young, his parents moved to near Washington, C. H., on a farm where he was reared and educated. He left the farm at the age of twenty-one and worked in White & Ballard's shoe factory at Washington C. H., for four years. From there he went to Chillicothe and worked for the Union Shoe Company for four years. From here he came to Portsmouth and worked for Drew, Selby & Co. for a year. In this time, he had worked at all sorts of shoe work and had gained a good knowledge of shoe-making. He opened a repair shop on the corner of Gallia and Offner streets and did general repairing for a year and then put in a small stock of shoes. His business prospered from the start and he was soon encouraged to find more commodious quarters and located on the corner of Chillicothe and Fourth streets, where he remained but a short time, when he moved again on account of his business. In June, 1901, he changed to his present location at 505 Chillicothe street and his business is one of the largest in Portsmouth. He is a republican, but votes for the man as often as for the party. He is a member of the Second Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. He was married to Miss Lucy May Keezer, a daughter of George and Carrie (Bodamer) Keezer of Chillicothe, of German descent. They have one child, Lucile.

John Patton Caskey

was born January 1, 1849. His father was Alexander Caskey and his mother was Larissa Patton, born in Wayne township, Adams county, Ohio. He attended the district school and the North Liberty Academy, and labored on his father's farm until he was twenty-seven years of age, when he became a trader. On November 9, 1872, he was married to Tina Patton daughter of George Patton, of Harshaville, and in 1873, he located at Harshaville, and remained there until 1889. In December, 1889, he went to Portsmouth, where he is the junior partner in the firm of Harsha & Caskey. They built a mill in 1889 in Portsmouth, and have been engaged in milling ever since. He had one son by his first wife, George, born January 1, 1874. He is now a student at the Ohio State University, taking a mechanical engineering course. His first wife died on the seventh of September, 1876, and in November, 1889 he was married to Miss Alma Fulton, of Bratton township, Adams county, Ohio. Mr. Caskey has never sought or held public office. He has always been a republican. He is regarded as one of the best business men in the city of Portsmouth.

George Washington Chabot, M. D., was born in Powellsville, Ohio, June 17, 1862. His father was Uriah Chabot, and his mother's maiden name was Laura Hudson. His grandfather, Peter Chabot, was a French emigrant, and drew Lot 85 of the French Grant. He was married three times, and Uriah Chabot was of the last wife. Our subject grew up at Powellsville and went to school there. He was a farmer one year, and then began the study of medicine at the age of twenty with Dr. Slagle. He graduated in the spring of 1886 at the Miami College at Cincinnati. He located at Otway the same spring and lived there until 1888, then he went to Thurman, Gallia county, Ohio, and remained eighteen months. He then returned to Otway, and has been there ever since. He was married December 28, 1887, to Dora A. Breslau, daughter of Julius Breslau. She died November 14, 1902. He took a hospital course in 1895 and 1896 in the New York Polyclinic, and took another course in 1901 in the Illinois School of Electro-Therapeutics, at Chicago. He is one of the members of the Hempstead Academy of Medicine in Scioto county. He is a democrat in his political views.

A professional brother says of him, "He is esteemed by his professional brothers for his ability and for his sterling integrity, those qualities which command the respect of all. He has always been a student keeping abreast of the times which with a clear judgment makes him a trustworthy practitioner. As a man of business, the same qualities have characterized him until he has become a man of great strength and influence in the community where he has spent many years in the practice of medicine."

James Albert Chabot

was born February 16, 1853, at Powellsville, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Uriah Chabot and his mother's maiden name was Lavina Hudson, daughter of Buchanan Hudson. His grandfather was Peter Chabot, a French emigrant, who drew Lot No. 85 in the French Grant. Our subject was the fifth of his father's eight children. He received his education in the common schools of Powellsville and worked on his father's farm until he was of age. Then he worked in the coal and ore mines of Etna and Pine Grove for three years. He then tried life on a farm for a while and afterwards went to Powellsville and was in the mercantile business there for eight years. In 1890 he sold out in Powellsville and went into the grocery business at the north-west corner of Third and Waller streets, in the city of Portsmouth, and was there until September 1, 1901, when he sold out to his son Alva, and since then has not been engaged in any business.

September 24, 1879, he was married to Eliza Finney, daughter of A. J. Finney. He has a son, Alva James, who is married and conducts the grocery store he purchased of his father. His other children are Floyd, Bertha and Georgia. He was never an office seeker and never held office except when he was postmaster at Powellsville. He is a republican and a member of the Free-Will Baptist church at Powellsville. He does not belong to any secret orders. Mr. Chabot is a quiet citizen who does not court or seek public notice. He does the best he can under all circumstances, and desires no public comment about it. He is regarded as a model neighbor and, in the language of the catechism, is content with the station of life in which he is placed.

was born July 10, 1837, in Independence, Alleghany county, New York. His father was Samuel Chapman, Jr., and his mother's maiden name was Betsey E. Leet. She is still living and has nearly reached her eighty-sixth year. His ancestry on his mother's side will be found under the Leet family in this work. The Chapman's came from Windom county, Connecticut. Our subject spent the early years of his life on a farm and received his education in the common schools. When seventeen years of age, he came to Portsmouth with his uncle, Mr. Horace Leet, traveling from Columbus in a stage. This was in September, 1854. There were two stage loads, being thirty-two persons in the party, of that number Mr. Chapman is the only male member now living. Two years later, he became a partner with Mr. Leet under the firm name of Leet & Chapman, Lumber Dealers, and sold his share of the business to him in 1860 or 1861. He became a partner in the private banking firm of Kinney & Raynor by buying Colonel Raynor out. The name of the firm was changed to Kinney & Chapman.

In 1865 he went to Jackson and established the private banking firm of Kinney, Bundy & Company, afterwards Chapman, Clare & Company, and later converted into the First National Bank, of which he was made President, which position he has held ever since. From 1861 to 1863 he read law with Colonel Moore and George Johnson. In 1865 he was admitted to the bar in the city of Chillicothe, Ohio, under the old district court, but never practiced any. Later he became interested in the coal and iron business of Jackson county and still continues to be. Mr. Chapman was city Treasurer of Portsmouth from 1862 until 1864, serving two terms. He was a member of the Council and School Board in Jackson for twelve years, declining to serve any longer. He has also been township Treasurer in Jackson county. He is a democrat and was the candidate of his party for Governor in 1897. He has been district delegate to the National Democratic Convention twice and in 1900 was one of the delegates at large, to the Kansas City Convention.

He is always in favor of public improvements and was instrumental in procuring two railroads in Jackson county. He is a director in both the one from Dayton and the one from Springfield and is also Vice President of the one from Springfield.

HON. HORACE L. CHAPMAN.

September 24, 1868, he married Frances E. Benton, the daughter of Hon. A. M. Benton, of Pennsylvania. They have two children, F. B. Chapman and Grace. Mr. Chapman has a record as a business man and a financier of which Russel Sage could be proud. He possesses the highest credit and has demonstrated that he is and has been worthy of it.

Wesley G. Cheney, M. D., was born February 9, 1873, near Richwood, Union county, Ohio. His father Lorenzo Cheney, was Commissioner of Union county from 1880 to 1889, and Treasurer from 1890 to 1893. His paternal grandfather was of Irish descent, located in Union county in 1835, and built one of the finest cabins in that part of the country. His paternal grandmother was of German parentage. His mother's maiden name was Anna M. White, of Union county. Doctor Cheney received such instruction as the country schools of Union afforded and worked on the farm in summer until eighteen years of age, at which time he commenced teaching. He entered the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware in 1892, and graduated in the scientific course June 20, 1896. He entered the Electric Medical Institute at Cincinnati, September 22, 1896, and graduated May 9, 1899. He commenced the practice of medicine at Frederickton, Knox county, September 15, 1899. He removed to New Boston, November 1, 1900. He is a republican, a Knight of Pythias and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Finley, Union county, Ohio. On December 19, 1898, he married Victoria Inez Gum, daughter of George R. and Jennie Gum. Mr. Gum is City Clerk of Richwood, Ohio. Doctor Cheney stands high in his profession and as a citizen. He possesses agreeable manners and is an interesting companion. He has a fine physical presence and always makes a good impression. He is achieving the success his merits deserve.

Stephen C. Chick

was born November 4, 1856, at the homestead east of the city. He attended the district school until he was eighteen years of age helping his father on the farm during vacation. When twenty years old, his father died, and he, being the oldest son, superintended the farm for his mother, remaining with her eleven years, when he was married to Laura A. Gates, daughter of William W. and Alvira (Nye) Gates, and moved to a farm just north of the city. After two years he moved to the city and entered the Drew, Selby & Company shoe factory, where he has been for the past twelve years. The only public office he ever held was that of township Clerk for the two years of 1887 and 1888.

In 1886, he united with the Sixth Street Methodist church, and in February, 1900, transferred his membership to the Second Presbyterian Church. His residence is at No. 601 Offner street. His children are: Edward Haskell, Mildred Ella, Charles Melzar, Leslie Albert, Beatrice Louise, Stephen Howard and William Louis.

Mr. Chick is one of those who believe, that one serves his community, his family and himself best: by diligence and faithfulness in his own particular calling. In doing this he has earned the respect and good will of all those known to him. He has as interesting a family as any one in this city and he is entirely devoted to them. To rear seven good citizens is a career of itself and Mr. Chick and his excellent wife will accomplish it.

James David Clare

was born in Washington, D. C., November 13, 1822. His parents were James Clare of Calvert county, Maryland, and Ruth Smedley, of Jefferson county, Virginia. His father came to Ohio in 1833, and located near Springfield. In 1836 he removed to Lawrence county and was employed about different furnaces. In 1838, he removed to Jackson county, where he resided on a farm until his death in 1851. He was a whig and a life long member of the M. E. church. Our subject received his education at Alexandria, Virginia, and in Jackson county, Ohio.

He qualified himself to teach and began teaching at Ohio Furnace in 1847. From 1849 to 1852, he farmed in Jackson county. In 1852, he opened a general store at Berlin, Jackson county. In 1854, he added a saw mill and grist mill to this. In June, 1865, he was one of the firm of Kinney, Bundy & Company, Bankers, at Jackson. The firm afterwards became Chapman, Clare & Company, and was afterwards merged into the First National Bank of Jackson. In 1868, he and others purchased Madison furnace. In 1872, he was one of the organizers of the Ohio Stove Company.

November 17, 1873, he located in Portsmouth, and bought the old Dugan home on the corner of Eighth and Chillicothe streets. October 25, 1879, he purchased Bloom furnace for $45,000. It had 7,000 acres of land.

On August 11, 1846, he was married to Miss Sarah Jane Ross, daughter of Robert Ross, of Jackson. Her mother was a daughter of Colonel Owens, who was in the Revolutionary war from Virginia. There were six children born to them: Mrs. Josephine R. Miller, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Hortense V. Hughes, wife of Rev. Thomas L. Hughes, of Shelbyville, Indiana; Mrs. Rachel A. Bentley, of Columbus, Ohio; James Robert, Eugene Herbert, and Earl Stanton, of Portsmouth, Ohio. In politics he was a whig and a republican. In religion, he was a most devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died December 21, 1893. His wife died September 15, 1894.

Earl Stanton Clare

was born at Cross Roads, Jackson county, Ohio, July 20, 1865. His parents were James D. and Sarah (Ross) Clare. He came to Portsmouth in 1873. He attended the Portsmouth schools until 1884, when he became a molder in the Ohio Stove Works, where he remained for three years. He was shipping clerk for two and a half years, and, in 1891, became superintendent and secretary. He became Treasurer of the Clare Iron Company in 1900. He is a republican and a member of Bigelow M. E. church.

On February 9, 1887, he was married to Minnie L. Altman, daughter of Alexander Altman, who has a separate sketch herein. They have five children: Earl A., Jennie, Ruth, Josephine and Robert R.

Mr. Clare is a gentleman of magnificent figure, and in his business he is just as successful as his personal appearance indicates. He is a citizen who believes in doing his best at all times and does it. He can always be found at his place and at work, doing his best for himself, for those dependent on him, and for the community of which he is a part.

Eugene Herbert Clare,

the son of James D. and Sarah (Ross) Clare, was born March 31, 1860, at Cross Roads, Jackson county, Ohio. He came to Portsmouth in 1873. He attended the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio from January, 1879 to June 1880 and completed the scientific course. He then entered Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, New York, in October, 1880, and graduated January 25, 1881. Since his graduation, he has been superintendent of the Clare Iron Company. In his political views, he is a republican. He is a member of Bigelow M. E. church and one of its trustees and assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. On February 14, 1887, he was married to Miss Jennie E. Losee, daughter of Captain S. O. Losee. They have six children: Eugene Herbert, Charles Barnes, Marjorie Marie, Newell Thurlow, Jennie Elizabeth, and Catherine Ross.

Mr. Clare is a gentleman who stands head and shoulders above his fellows. He is a large man in every sense of the word, and is good natured in proportion to his size. He believes in attending to his own business and has made a success of it. He is highly esteemed in every relation of life.

James Robert Clare

was born at Cross Roads, Jackson county, Ohio, March 12, 1857. He is the son of James D. and Sarah (Ross) Clare. His early life until he was sixteen, was passed in Jackson county. He came to Portsmouth in 1873, and spent three years in the Portsmouth public schools and two years at the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. He completed a course in book-keeping in 1878. He became secretary and treasurer of the Ohio Stove Company in 1878, which position he held until 1899, since that time he has been president of the Ohio Stove Company. He has been traveling salesman for the Ohio Stove Company since 1890. He is also a member of the Clare Iron Company. He was a member of the School Board of Portsmouth from 1896 to 1898. He is a republican and a member of Bigelow M. E. church. He married Miss Anna B. Horr, daughter of P. H. Horr, February 3, 1885. They have five children: James David Alice B., Robert Linn Howard H., and Dorcas.

Mr. Clare is generous in all his impulses. As a citizen he is liberal minded and public-spirited; as a business man he is highly esteemed by his associates.

Horace Franklin Clark, M. D.,

was born at Locust Grove, Adams county, Ohio, June 27, 1860. His father was John Harvey Clark, and his mother's maiden name was Thermuthus Cannon, daughter of Levin Cannon. She was a sister of David Eylar's wife. His grandfather was James Clark. Our subject was reared at Locust Grove, O. His father was a physician of the Botanic school, Physio-Medical. He practiced medicine at Locust Grove, beginning in 1847. He died April 23, 1887.

Our subject had a common school education. At the age of fourteen, he began to clerk for L. M. Davis & Co., at Locust Grove, O. in 1874. He remained here nine years. He then read medicine with his father until 1887. He moved to Rarden in 1885. He began practice in Rarden in 1885 and has been there ever since except in 1887, when he was in Portsmouth with Dr. Ricketts a few months. He was married September 18, 1890, to Maggie Owens, a daughter of G. W. Owens, of Pike county. They have six children: Carl Hobart; Carrie Louise; Josie May; Myron Atwell; Teddy Hobart; and the sixth is a boy not named. He is a republican in his political views, and is a Methodist in belief. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He possesses the confidence of the community in which he resides and has demonstrated that he deserves it. He is firm in his convictions and quick to act when he has once made up his mind. He is one of those forceful men, valuable in any community in which they dwell.

Philo S. Clark

was born in Harlansburg, Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, February 21, 1848. His father was Thomas M. Clark and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca McCune. He was one of a family of eight brothers and sisters of whom he was the sixth. He received his education in the common schools and at Witherspoon Institute, Butler, Pennsylvania. He left school at the age of eighteen and engaged as a clerk in a store at Sunbury, Pennsylvania, for one year. After that he was a salesman for three years for a wholesale grocery house in Philadelphia. In 1872, he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and engaged in the service of the National Life Insurance Company of Vermont, and has been a resident of Ohio ever since. He remained in Cleveland in the same business for a period of five years, and afterwards in Cincinnati for two years. He came to Portsmouth in December, 1879, and engaged in the insurance business—fire, life and accident,—and has been in that since. He was appointed postmaster of Portsmouth February 15, 1890 and served until February 28, 1894. He was again appointed Postmaster, February 2, 1898; and re-appointed, February 13, 1902. He is a republican and has been a delegate to the State conventions of his party since 1882. In 1883, he was a member of the county Executive Committee for the first time and has been on the same committee many years since as chairman. He last served in 1901. He was married April 25, 1889 to Lucy Miller, daughter of John T. Miller. He is a member of the Elks, Masons and Knights-Templar. Here is what one of Mr. Clark's most intimate friends says of him:

"Mr. Clark possesses the elements that make the successful man of affairs. He has a genius for organization and his executive ability is of the highest order. These qualities have enabled him to make a great success of his business career in all its branches. His administration of the Portsmouth Post Office has been a marvel of excellence, thoroughness and progress, its remarkable effectiveness being due to his capacity for perfect organization. His political career has been one of great influence and importance and his elements of leadership there are conceded. His organization and executive ability in political affairs, mark him as a leader of unusual capacity and force. Sagacious, far-seeing, courageous, cool and deliberate, he has made more than the usual impress upon the always strenuous political life of Ohio. One of his strongest traits is his unswerving and unselfish loyalty to his ideals, principles and friends, whether in defeat or victory.

William Elza Clayton

was born in May, 1874, in Decatur township, Washington county, Ohio. His parents were Isaac Calvin Clayton and Ann Graham, his wife. Isaac Calvin Clayton enlisted in Company D, 148 O. V. I., May 2, 1864, for 100 days, and was mustered out, September 14, 1864 at Camp Marietta, Ohio. Our subject was one of five children: The first was Dessie, widow of Edward Lee Feyler; the second was George Calvin, who died May 1, 1901, leaving a widow and three children. His wife was a daughter of Edward J. Kelley. Our subject was the third child. The fourth was James Finley, traveling salesman for the Drew-Selby Company and the fifth, Eva, stenographer for John K. Duke. William E. attended the Quaker school at Bartlett, Washington county, Ohio, and the public schools of Portsmouth. His father moved to Scioto county when he was eight years old. When he was ten years of age, he began work in the shoe factory, at the bottom and worked himself up. He began as a heelmaker. He went in the pattern department in 1890 and took complete charge of that department. He gets out all the patterns but first determines what they shall be. He designs the styles. His labors keep him at Portsmouth most of the time, but he makes trips east and west to determine on the style of the shoes to be produced. He is a member of Bigelow M. E. church, and of the Knights of Pythias. He is a republican. His father died in 1884, aged forty-one and his mother died in 1889 at the same age.

He is one of the progressive young men of Portsmouth, always ready to learn and to be instructed and always ready to advance in his chosen business. He is of a bright, cheerful and happy disposition. He is much liked and popular wherever known, and no one has more friends or warmer ones.

James Allen Cleaver

was born at Wilmington, Ohio, June 21, 1862. His father's name was James Cleaver and his mother's maiden name was Mary Allen. His grandfather Cleaver was from Connecticut and his grandmother Cleaver from Virginia. His mother was of Scotch Irish blood. His grandfather, Hugh Allen, emigrated to America in 1818 from county Antrim, Ireland.

His boyhood and youth were spent at Wilmington. He graduated from the Wilmington public schools in 1882 and took up the business of stenography. He became wonderfully expert in that profession.

The celebrated Cincinnati & Eastern Railway case was removed to Clinton county in 1884 and Mr. Cleaver did service in that case for the Hon. John K. Richards, who was Master Commissioner in 1885. This introduced him to the bar of Portsmouth and especially to the Hon. A. C. Thompson and the editor of this work, both of whom were interested as counsel in that case. He formed a friendship with each of them, which lasted during his life. He removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1886 and took up his profession as stenographer in the courts. While a resident of Portsmouth he took stenographic notes in every important case tried in Scioto county, or adjoining counties, and did work in Ross, Highland, Clinton and Fayette counties.

In 1885, 1886 and 1887 he did all the stenographic work in the Cincinnati & Eastern railway litigation, much of which was done for the editor of this work. In 1888, he was stenographer in New York city for the editor, who was then a Special Master in the Scioto Valley Railway case, and his work compared in equal terms with the best New York stenographers who served subsequently in the same case.

In 1890, Mr. Cleaver was a clerk and stenographer for a Sub-Judicial Committee of the United States House of Representatives of which Hon. A. C. Thompson, M. C., was chairman. The committee took testimony in the investigation of certain alleged illegal practices in the United States courts in Boston, New Orleans, Mobile, Shreveport, Montgomery, Huntsville and Atlanta. A great volume of testimony was taken by Mr. Cleaver. This work was arduous, but was expeditiously and faithfully done. He served as official stenographer for the Courts of Lawrence county from December 12, 1887, until April 19, 1899. He was the official court stenographer for Scioto county from 1887, but held no permanent appointment as such until April 15, 1892, when his appointment was entered on the Court Journals. The law of April 6, 1893, as to Court stenographers in Scioto county, Vol. 90, Laws of Ohio, pp. 151 and 152 was really passed for his benefit and on April 10, 1893, he resigned his former appointment and was appointed under that act. He was re-appointed April 20, 1896, and April 24, 1899, and held the appointment until his death.

In March, 1897, the duties of Mr. Cleaver became so difficult that he selected an assistant in Scioto county in the person of Miss Nettie Jackson, who had had three year's experience in the office of the editor of this work. Miss Jackson demonstrated her efficiency so quickly that she not only served as assistant in Scioto county, but also in Lawrence and Pike and in other counties, where Mr. Cleaver had important cases.

On September 22, 1898, Hon. A. C. Thompson became Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio and in January, 1899, he appointed Mr. Cleaver official stenographer of the United States Courts at Cincinnati, which position he held until his death. As such, he reported all the important cases, tried in that court. In the Farmer's National Bank cases in which Mr. Cleaver took the evidence, his transcript was pronounced the best, in accuracy and arrangement, ever filed in any Court.

He was married to Miss Elizabeth M. Cavett January 19, 1890. She died April 25, 1894 leaving two sons, George Cavett now aged eleven years, and James Allen aged nine. Mr. Cleaver insured his life for the benefit of his children and kept it paid up religiously, and all his insurance was in force at the time of his death. Mr. Cleaver was an obedient and dutiful son in his minority. He had every prospect for a long life of usefulness and of promotion and advancement, but in November, 1901, he was stricken with typhoid fever and died at Norwood near Cincinnati, December 6, 1901. He was a strong partisan republican and ever active in politics. He could not do too much for a friend, and if doing for a friend required active work in politics, he did it no matter whom it affected. He was the soul of honor and never forgot his obligations to any one.

was born in Greenup county, Kentucky, September 12, 1839. His father, Archibald A. Clutts, was born in Ohio. His mother's maiden name was Mary Gantz. He lived in Greenup county, Kentucky, from 1839 to the breaking out of the Civil war. He received his education in the schools there. He worked at the furnaces,—Pennsylvania, Buffalo and Star,—driving team, from the time he was sixteen years old until he enlisted in the army.

In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company I, 2nd Kentucky Cavalry for three years, as a private. His captain was A. C. Van Dyke, the owner of Buffalo furnace, and the regiment was commanded by Colonel Baird. He was discharged in April, 1863, at Murfreesboro, Tennessee on account of ophthalmia. He was never wounded nor in the hospital. About September 1, 1862, eighteen of the regiment were detailed for a personal escort of Gen. Rousseau, and he served in that capacity until his discharge. This body guard also acted as couriers. He was in the battle of Murfreesboro and there he captured a rebel flag, belonging to the Second Mounted Arkansas Regiment. This flag had been presented to the regiment by the ladies of Richmond, Kentucky. The color bearer was shot down, and our subject got it. He presented it to General Rousseau. On this occasion the 2nd Mounted Arkansas were fighting on foot. Their Colonel and Second Lieutenant were killed and one-half of the regiment were either killed or wounded before the remainder were captured. They were very brave and daring and charged our forces for several hours, when two of Gen. Rousseau's guns mowed them down. This incident given occurred on Monday about 1 p. m. He rescued the color bearer from whom he took the flag and took him to the hospital, and was never wounded himself.

After he had left the army he went to work at Pennsylvania furnace in 1865, driving team. He remained there until 1866, when the Eastern Kentucky Company bought the furnace out. He then went to Star furnace and worked there until 1869, then he worked one year at Petersburg. From that time until 1873 he was at Hunnewell furnace. He was at Buckhorn furnace from 1873 to 1876. He went to Hopewell furnace from there and worked until 1879. His business was to make charcoal. He worked for this company on the Norfolk & Western railroad at Sciotoville, Rushtown and Franklin furnace, in the years between 1879 and 1893, and all the time engaged in making charcoal. Since then he has resided on his farm in the French Grant. He has been married twice. First in July, 1866, to Percy Skelton, who died in June, 1879. The children of this first marriage are Mary E., wife of William Williams, residing at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.; Charles, living at Galesburg, Illinois, a brick maker; Laura, wife of Frank Parkins, residing at the same place. In the fall of 1882 he was married to Elizabeth Shennett of Lawrence county. The children are: Oliver, aged sixteen, and Flora Ethel, a school girl, aged nine years.

Mr. Clutts has always been a republican in his political views. He is a member of the Methodist church of Haverhill, Ohio, and has been for forty-five years. He belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic, but to no other social order. He is earnest and energetic in what ever he undertakes. He is patriotic and public spirited as every old soldier naturally is. He is firm in his judgment and generous in all respects. He is cordial in his manners, a warm and true friend, a valuable and highly respected citizen.

Alexander Cole

was born May 8, 1837, in Mason county, Kentucky. His father's name was Thomas Cole, a native of Pennsylvania; and his mother's maiden name was Mary Wallingford, from Mason county, Kentucky. His parents moved to Nile township, Scioto county, Ohio, from Mason county, Ky., when he was three years old, and he has resided there ever since. Our subject attended the common schools until he was nineteen years of age. He was raised a farmer and has continued such ever since. He enlisted as a private in Company I, 140th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, at the age of twenty-eight for one hundred days, May 2, 1864. He was reduced from Corporal June 25, 1864, at his own request, not caring for the office, and was mustered out with the Company September 3, 1864. In 1870, he took up the lumber business with farming, and has been in that business from that time to the present. He manufactures lumber and buys and sells it. From 1887 to 1895, he was engaged in the business of contracting and getting out railroad ties.

He was married October 22, 1858, to Miss Hester Ann Hall, daughter of Aaron Hall of Scioto county, Ohio. They had seven children: Catharine, married James Shaw, resides in Portsmouth; William, unmarried resides at home; Ella, married Thomas Bennett, resides at Galesburg, Illinois; Henry, married lives on his father's farm; Emerson at home. He lost two children in infancy.

Mr. Cole is a republican and always has been. He was Treasurer of Nile township for six years. He lives on the Kinney farm near Turkey creek on the Buena Vista turnpike, and has lived there twelve years. Mr. Cole is one of those happy characters who make a friend of every acquaintance and his pathway in life is about as smooth as that of any one mentioned in this book.

James Madison Cole,

the son of Silas W. Cole and Elizabeth Huston, his wife, was born in Scioto county, Ohio, October 3, 1845. He obtained his education in the schools of the county, and was raised a farmer. He enlisted July 28, 1862, at the age of eighteen, in Company C, 91st O. V. I. and served until June 24, 1865.

He married Dora Stone, daughter of William and Susan Stone. The children of this marriage were; Pearl Amos, resides at Hulett, Wyoming, an architectural draftsman; Arthur who, resides at the same place, a miner; Grace, married to Richard Bush, resides at Hulett, Wyoming; Albert, resides at Hulett, Wyoming, a machinist; Walter and Floyd, school boys. Mr. Cole is engaged as a stock raiser, and he owns a section of land and keeps a herd. The location of his home is 3,000 feet above the sea.

He is a republican and an Odd Fellow. He emigrated to Illinois in 1875, and was there until 1876 at Windsor, Illinois. Then he went to Lenox, Iowa, in 1878. He was there until 1883, when he went to Brokenbow, Nebraska. He took up Government land there, and was there a year, and was appointed Infirmary Director, and remained until 1888 and then went to Hulett, Wyoming, where he has remained.

Pearl Amos, his son, was born February 12, 1869, at Portsmouth, Ohio. He started out for himself as a "cow boy" in 1885, at the age of sixteen, and kept at it for nine years. He then learned the carpenters trade in 1894, and followed it until 1898. He then took up architecture and has followed that ever since. He is a republican and a member of the Masonic Blue Lodge and Odd Fellows.

John Wesley Cole

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, March 4, 1842. His parents were Silas W. Cole and Elizabeth Huston, his wife. His father, Silas W. Cole, has a separate sketch. Our subject's boyhood and youth were passed on his father's farm, now owned by John Richardson, on the Chillicothe pike. He received a common school education. July 28, 1862 he enlisted in Company C, 91st O. V. I. He was promoted to Sergeant November 20, 1863, and mustered out with his company June 24, 1865. He has always been a republican and is a member of the M. E. Church. He was married May 7, 1872, to Julia L. Steele, daughter of William Steele, of Jackson county, Ohio. He is the father of six children: Gertrude, Augustus Lewis, Harry, Burnum, and Grace Marie. He is a successful farmer and esteemed by his neighbors for his kind and pleasant disposition. He is an honest man and a good neighbor.

John Allen Colegrove

was born June 21, 1843, in Harrison township. His father was Peleg Colegrove, and his mother was Susan A. Bennett. His grandfather was William Colegrove. His maternal grandfather was Thomas Bennett whose wife was Harriet Canfield. Our subject was raised on a farm until he was eighteen, receiving only a common school education. He enlisted in Company E, 33rd O. V. I. September 30, 1861, and was discharged October 8, 1863, on surgeon's certificate of disability. He was elected Land Appraiser in Madison township in 1890, and was appointed to the same office in 1900. He was appointed Deputy State Supervisor of Elections in 1895, again in 1897, again in 1899, and again in 1901. He has always been a republican. He was married December 15, 1870, to Josephine Sweet, daughter of Samuel and Catherine Sweet, and they have the following children: Ida Florence, the wife of John Erwin; Alva E. married to Flora Call; Walter, William and Elmer.

He is a true physical type of the Colegroves for generations, a man above the ordinary height, of commanding appearance, dark hair, blue eyes and weighing about 180 pounds. He is a good citizen and a fearless, conservative official. He has been at different times Commander of Scioto Post No. 287, G. A. R., at Harrisonville. He is one of the political leaders of his township and county.

Albert M. Collett

was born at Lyra, Scioto county, Ohio, Feb. 16, 1865. His father was Albert M. Collett, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah J. Howell. They had five children: Thomas Leroy, of Ironton; Tiffin Strider, of Lyra, Ohio; John C. Collett, of Portsmouth; Virginia Bell resides at Lyra; and a son, Giles Gilbert, died at the age of twenty-six. Our subject was educated at Chaffin's Mill, and went to the High School at Wheelersburg under Prof. Aaron Grady, where he graduated. He then left Scioto county in 1886, at the age of eighteen, and went to Ironton and engaged in the insurance business and has been in it ever since. He was Mayor of the city of Ironton from April, 1899, to April, 1902. He was elected and defeated John H. Corn, who had been Mayor for twenty-five years in succession. He had a majority of four. The normal republican majority was 1,200 to 1,400.

Mr. Collett has always been a democrat. He made three races for Mayor before that, and never had been beaten over one hundred majority. In 1893, he was a candidate for that office, and had a majority of eighteen; but on a recount of the votes, 117 tickets were thrown out and he was beaten 79. John M. Corn was awarded the place. In 1901, he was a candidate for re-election, and was defeated by a majority of 274, by H. W. Mountain, who was elected. He is president of the Ironton Lumber Company, and has been for one year. He has been secretary of the Board of Elections of Lawrence county for four years.

He married Miss Elizabeth Sinnott, daughter of Patrick Sinnott, in 1900. Mr. Collett is Past Exalted Ruler of Ironton Lodge, No. 177, B. P. O. E. and is Past Chancellor Commander of the Mytillo Lodge, 27 Knights of Pythias. He is Major on the Ohio Brigade Staff, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias.

The Brigadier General is Thomas W. Minshall. He is Past Noble Grand in the Odd Fellows, and is Past Chief Patriarch of the Encampment of his city. He is a member of the Methodist church, but he does not aspire to any prominence in that respect. He is one of the sterling business men of his community.

Thomas Leroy Collett

was born at Lyra, Scioto county, Ohio. He is a brother of Albert M. Collett, who has a sketch herein, and whose sketch refers to his father's ancestry. He had a common school education, was reared on the farm, and was an assistant in a country store. In September, 1876, he began his career as a teacher, and followed it for nine years. The first year he taught near Haverhill; for seven years following he taught at Maple Grove, and his last year at Dry Run.

In 1884, he went to Ironton and engaged in the insurance business,—fire, accident and life,—and he has been in it ever since. He has one of the best and most flourishing businesses in the city. He was a member of the Board of Education of Ironton from 1888 to 1890 and was vice president of the Board in 1885.

He was married to Martha J. Brase, daughter of Adolph Brase. Their children are: Harry Leroy Charles Lester, Sarah Alice and Clara Belle. Mr. Collett has been a democrat all his life. He is the past exalted ruler of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of Ironton. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias since 1884. He has been correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer and New York World. He has improved all of his opportunities and has no cause for regrets. He can justly be proud of the record he has made to this time.

Daniel Fetter Connell

was born on a farm at Wellsburg, Virginia, November 12, 1827. His parents were James S. Connell and Eliza Mendal his wife. His father was a steamboat man and moved to Upper Sandusky in 1842, where he kept the "Walker House." When Daniel was sixteen years of age, he was in the town of Portsmouth. His father came down conducting a party of Wyandot Indians. In 1844 he went from Sandusky to Brooke county, Virginia, where he remained till 1846, when he went to Columbiana county, Ohio. In 1851, he went to Fairview, Hancock county, West Virginia, and engaged in the mercantile business and remained there until 1855, when he removed to New Cumberland, Virginia, now West Virginia, and remained there until 1868, when he located in Portsmouth and engaged in the fire brick business at Sciotoville, with Charles Taylor and organized the Scioto Fire Brick Company of which he was president.

In 1870, his brother-in-law, W. Q. Adams, and himself, bought out Taylor. In 1874, Mr. Connell sold out his interest in the fire brick business and went to making fire brick and gas retorts in Cincinnati. In June, 1880, he organized and became largely interested in the Peabody coal mines in West Virginia, and was president of that company until his death. On November 12, 1850 he was married to Catherine A. Wilhelm, of Hancock county, West Virginia. Their children are: Julia, the wife of A. C. Davis; George, James, deceased, Anna, Louise, William, Mamie, deceased, Daniel and Arthur.

On August 1, 1891, about 2 o'clock in the morning, Mr. Connell was in his berth on a sleeper on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad between Waynesboro and Basic City, Virginia, going east. An unknown white man opened the curtains of his berth and demanded money. Mr. Connell gave the party a kick and the thief fled. The bullet struck Mr. Connell in the groin and ranged upwards, striking the rib and reflecting toward the spine. The intestines were perforated. He called for help for fifteen minutes before any one came to him. The sleeper was the rear car of the train and both doors were unlocked. All the passengers were searched and no revolver found. Mr. Connell was taken off the train at Charlottesville, Virginia, and his three sons, who were then at Craig City, went to him. A few personal friends and Doctor Cotton, his family physician went to him immediately from Portsmouth. Mrs. Connell, daughter Anna and son Arthur, went to him on Tuesday morning. An operation was had Sunday. Mr. Connell survived until Wednesday, the fifth day of August, when he died at nine o'clock in the morning. He was cheerful and rational, talking freely with those about him and died without a murmur. For several years prior to his death, Mr. Connell had been largely interested in mineral lands about Craig

City, Virginia. He was a man of great business ability, integrity and had been quite successful in his undertakings. He was a communicant of Christ Church, Portsmouth, Ohio. The funeral was conducted from the church on August 7th, at Portsmouth Ohio. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Francis Simmons Connolley

was born in Mansfield, Ohio, on May 24, 1852, the son of James S. Connolley and Jane Simmons, his wife. He graduated in the Portsmouth High School. He had clerked in his brother's dry goods store from the age of fourteen while he was still attending school and from the time he graduated in the High School he remained there until his death, April 23, 1883. He was married October 18, 1876, to Emma A. Davis, the daughter of George Davis and Sarah Claypool, his wife. They had two children: Fred Davis, born July 1, 1877 and Augusta.

His son Fred attended the Portsmouth High School two years and then enlisted under Professor Lowes for one year. In 1894, he entered the Ohio State University and took Electrical Engineering for two years. He then went into the Columbus Saving and Trust Company and was there for eight months. In September, 1897, he went into the employ of the Central Paper Company. He began at the bottom and has been promoted a number of times and now has charge of the correspondence. Miss Augusta Connolley, daughter of our subject, entered the Ohio State University in 1898 in the Latin-Philosophy course and graduated in 1902. Frank Connolley was popular in every circle in which he was known. His excellent qualities made him admired and respected. His death, in the midst of a life of usefulness and honor cast a great gloom over his friends, which even time could not dispel.

Patrick Henry Conley

was born at Cross Roads, near Jackson, Ohio, March 2, 1861, the son of James and Margaret (Finn) Conley both of whom came from county Clare, Ireland. While Pat was a child his parents emigrated to this country and settled in the neighborhood of Otway. He worked on a farm and attended the district school at Oppy until he was twenty-one years old. He then went to Michigan, where he remained two years. Having by hard work saved a few hundred dollars, he came home and went into business for himself at Rarden. He remained here some time and then removed to New Boston, where by his own industry and ability he has accumulated considerable property. He is known and respected as a liberal and public spirited citizen. He and his brother John are large buyers of ties and lumber.

P. H. Conley is fifth in a family of eight children: Michael, Catherine, Ellen, Thomas, James, John and Martin. The mother and all except Patrick and John reside near McCulloch creek. The father died in January, 1898, at the age of ninety years. "Pat, as he is best known, is the soul of honor. He would not do a mean thing under any circumstances. He is honest to the core, not only with himself but with the neighbors as well. He gave a minister of the Gospel as a character reference and the minister said of Pat: "About twenty years ago, while living at Rarden and doing a general lumber and timber business, the late W. K. Thompson, of this city, then in business at Henley, recommended to me Patrick H. Conley, then quite a young man, as a competent and responsible work hand in teaming or otherwise as might be desired. Soon after I met "Pat," as he was familiarly called, and employed him. He continued in my service for three years teaming by the job and employing others to assist him. In all his services, I found him a superior hand; skillful, thorough, honest and upright in deportment; and withal a very pleasant and agreeable man with me and others. There was never an occasion for finding fault, nor need a watch be set on him to see that his work was well done, or that he was putting in full time. Nor was there ever a misunderstanding as to time of work or amount of payment. He got his wages and was satisfied. At the close of the time mentioned, I moved to Portsmouth, and young Conley branched out into lumbering for himself and as I learned, was quite successful."

was born in Pennsylvania, February 28, 1821. He came to Dry Run in Scioto county, with George Williamson's father and was too young to recollect. He was raised in the vicinity of Portsmouth, and learned the saddler's trade with James Salisbury. Mr. Cooley remained with Salisbury for seven or eight years. He went into business for himself on March 15, 1846, on Jefferson street. He had a sign made,—a golden saddle,—which he kept in front of the shop for years, until time destroyed it.

Mr. Cooley has been continuously in the same business ever since, and probably has been in one business longer than any man now living in Portsmouth. At the time he started in for himself everything used in his trade, that of saddler and harness, was made in his own shop and made by hand. Mr. Cooley never had a partner. He moved from Jefferson street, to where Mr. E. J. Kenrick now keeps his grocery store, and was located there until 1862. In that year, he moved into his present location, on Market street, and has been in business in the same place since.

He was married in 1847 to Mary Montgomery, the daughter of Robert Montgomery. They had three children: one son and two daughters. The son died in infancy, and the daughters still survive; one Miss Hattie, and the other, Mrs. Callie Simpson, widow of George Simpson. Mr. Cooley went to housekeeping on Market and Fifth streets and lived there two years, and then moved over his shop and lived there twenty years. In 1879, he moved to his present residence number 40 west Second street, residing there ever since. In politics, Mr. Cooley was a whig during the time of the whig party, and when that went out he became a republican. He is a communicant of the All Saints church. He remembers very well the stage coaching days, when the stage went to Columbus every day, and changed horses every sixteen miles, and when the return stage came in every evening. He can remember when the passenger boats on the canal were made of cedar. Mr. Cooley has a very full recollection of the olden times, and enjoys fair health for his age. He is one of the citizens of the town who enjoys the respect of all his townsmen.

Andrew Jackson Cooper

was born October 27, 1835 in Adams county, Ohio, near Wamsleyville. His parents were William and Minerva (Boldman) Cooper. He was one of six sons, the four eldest of whom were in the Civil War. Jas. M. Cooper, Company C, 5th Cavalry; Andrew J. our subject, Corporal of Company D, 1st Ohio Heavy Artillery; Robert Samuel, Company D, 22nd O. V. I. and Jeremiah, Co. D, 22nd O. V. I. Peter and William, the youngest sons, did not succeed in enlisting though they tried to, but were too young. James M. was wounded twice, first in the hand and afterward in the foot. Our subject had but a meagre education. He was six or seven years old when he came to Scioto county and at twelve years of age went to Pond creek. His father and mother died when he was ten or eleven years of age. He made his home with James Boldman and David S. Newman before he enlisted. He enlisted July 10, 1862, for three years in Co. D, First Ohio Heavy Artillery and on August 24, 1863, was appointed Corporal and mustered out June 20, 1865. After the war he worked for D. S. Newman for three years. He came to Portsmouth in 1868, and to 1872 he had been a house painter. In that year he went to Lombardsville where he engaged in the lumber business and has lived there ever since. He has also been a farmer.

He was married in 1860, to Julia Ann Conley. She died in November 1862, leaving one son Samuel, who resides near Kelley's Mill. Andrew J. was married the second time to Lucinda Boldman on September 4, 1872, and has had six children: Alice, married Amos Mullan, and resides in Union township; Anna; Walter, who is engaged at Reitz's quarry; Myrtle, died at seventeen years; Harry, working for The American Telephone Line; Herbert, working for the same company; Gertrude, died at four years. Our subject has been constable and was school director for fifteen years. He is a member of the Christian church. During the war he was a democrat, but since that time has been a republican.

son of Abraham and Mary (White) Coriell was born November 17, 1851. His mother was a daughter of Daniel White, a pioneer of Scioto county. Our subject was born in the First National bank building, which stood where the Washington hotel now stands in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father Abraham Cor-elli was a native of Portsmouth, Ohio, and by trade a watchmaker and jeweller with whom his son, Edward, learned his trade. On completing the last grade of the grammar department he was sent to college at Wilmington, Ohio, where he studied during the year of 1868 and 1869, at the end of which time he came back to Portsmouth and entered the Recorder's office as deputy. Here he was employed from 1869 to 1874 under three different Recorders. The following year he began the jewelry business for himself and continued up to 1899. He organized the Second Scioto Building and Loan Association Company in 1885 and has been its secretary and treasurer since. He has held a Notary's commission for the past thirty years, and is an equal partner with J. F. Strayer under the firm name of Coriell & Strayer in the Fire Insurance business.

While a member of the Republican party, he is thoroughly in sympathy with the prohibition movement.

He was married June 14, 1873, to Anna Price of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Edward C., a jeweller at Nevada, Ohio; Charles S.; Walter S., Otto Y., shoeworkers; Mabel A., married to David A. Noel, a farmer.

William Brown Coriell

was born in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, May 23, 1843. His father was Ira Coriell, and his mother's maiden name was Sirena White, a daughter of Daniel White, and a granddaughter of Abel White. His grandfather Elias Coriell settled in this county from New Jersey about eighty years ago. Our subject has one brother Alfred J., living in Harrison township; a sister, Mrs. Farney, residing at Sciotoville and another sister, Mrs. Harriet Wilcox, deceased. He was educated in the common schools, and was brought up to be a farmer. In 1867, he was a contractor on the pike from Sciotoville to Munn's Run. In 1868 he built a pike up Salt Lick in Lewis county, Kentucky.

He was married January 19, 1868, to Miss Ann Amelia Crull, a daughter of David Crull, who was a son of Judge Samuel Crull. They had the following children: Hattie May, married Dr. T. H. McCann of Adams county, O., in 1895, and died in 1896; Charlie died in his eighteenth year; Lida B., married Dr. T. H. McCann on November 28, 1901; Ella, married Charles E. Hayward, living in Vernon township; Frankie, died in infancy; Louis A., married to America Mansfield, living on the Folsom farm; Edward H., married Ella R. Gemp; Ira and Henry at home. His wife died August 6, 1901.

He had been Trustee of the township for two years, and Treasurer of Harrison township for five years. He has been interested in the Scioto Fire Brick Company for ten years last past. He was a stock holder and director one year. Mr. Coriell has always been a republican. He was a delegate to the State Republican Convention of 1891, when President McKinley was first nominated for Governor of Ohio. He is a member of the Christian church. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias of Harrisonville. He owns a farm in Madison township of 150 acres, one in Green township of 180 acres, and has 300 acres in his home farm, which is four miles on the Harrisonville Pike. He is an ideal citizen, careful, conscientious, industrious and capable. He is and has been from early life a success, a man of pure and exalted worth, a truly honored and honorable gentleman.

Edward James Corson

was born January 13, 1845, at Jasper, Pike county, Ohio. His father, Joseph Corson, was then a practicing physician at that place. His mother's maiden name was Martha Hyde Cutler daughter of Jonathan and Persis Cutler. When Edward was a year old his father removed to the city of Philadelphia. When he was three years of age his father removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, where he remained until his death. Edward attended the Portsmouth schools until 1859, and then went to Dr. Locke's school at Norristown, Pennsylvania, for one year. In the fall of 1861 he went to clerking in the grocery business at Blake's corner, on Second and Chillicothe, for W. H. Corson & Co. He remained there until May, 1864, when he enlisted in Company E, 140th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until September 2, 1864, when he was discharged. When he returned from the army he was made assistant postmaster under Col. John Row and served four months. He went to traveling for A. W. Buskirk in the wholesale grocery business and remained in his employment for four years. In 1868, he began traveling for Damarin & Company, wholesale grocers and traveled for them for a period of fifteen years. In September, 1883, he began business as a retail grocer at the northeast corner of Second and Chillicothe streets, and has remained there in the same business to the present time.

He was married April 26, 1873 to Miss Ellen Louise Peck, daughter of the late Judge William V. Peck. He has had three sons; Allen Wright, died in 1878 at the age of four years; Louis Damarin, now in business with his father and George Walter aged eleven years. He is a republican, a communicant and vestryman of All Saints church. He is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine, an Elk and a member of the Royal Arcanum. He has never held any public office except as before noted. Mr. Corson is a gentleman whom it is always pleasant to meet. He has all those social qualities which make him an agreeable companion.

He infuses life and spirit in any enterprise he undertakes, and at the same time, he is conservative, prudent and careful. He has the natural business qualities of a safe trustee. With these characteristics he has made a success in his own business, and managed well every trust confided to him.

Frank Brown Mussey Corson

was born February 6, 1855, in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was Dr. Joseph Corson and his mother was Martha Hyde Cutler, a daughter of Jonathan Cutler of Pike county. His father was reared a Quaker and was a member of the Plymouth meeting at Montgomery. There were three sons and one daughter of his family.

Our subject was brought up in Portsmouth. He left school at 18 and went into the shoe business of G. W. Anderson for two years. On October 11, 1877, he went into the employment of C. P. Tracy & Co., wholesale dealers in shoes. He became a partner in the firm on January 1, 1892. On December 1, 1901, the company was changed to a corporation. He then became a stockholder and a director. He has charge of all the men traveling for the company. He is a successful business man.

He is a communicant of All Saints church and has been a vestryman. He is a Blue Lodge and Chapter Mason, an Elk, and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

He was married January 31, 1877, to Mary Jane Hempstead Lodwick, daughter of John K. Lodwick. He has had two sons, one of whom died in infancy, and the other, Weston L. Corson, is traveling for the Portsmouth Shoe Company.

John William Craig

was born in Hardy county, Virginia, February 8, 1840. His father was Charles Craig, and his mother's maiden name was Nancy Hickey. When our subject was six years of age, he came with his parents to Scioto county, Ohio, and located on the Caldwell farm.

His grandfather Craig was in the Revolutionary war for seven years. He was from that part of Maryland in which Geogetown, D. C., is situated. He is buried at Geogetown.

Our subject resided on the Caldwell farm from the age of six to fourteen years with his parents. His father died in 1852, and his mother and the family went to Carlinville, Illinois. They were there for fourteen months and then came back and located in Washington township, where he resided until 1872, when he went to Brunswick, Missouri, and was there for eight months.

He enlisted in Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery, November 5, 1861, for three years. He was appointed corporal December 24, 1862, and was appointed sergeant October 30, 1864. He re-enlisted at the end of the three years and was mustered out July 4, 1865. He was in every one of the engagements in which the battery participated, a list of which appears under the title of Battery L 1st Ohio Light Artillery. The 'Squire says he never missed a meal in the army when he could get it. He was never sick, nor in the hospital. He never applied for a pension until 1899 when he asked it on account of his age. He is able to be about and attend to his business and looks to be as hearty a man as lives in the county. When he returned from the war he went to farming in Washington township, and with the exception of the time he went to Missouri, in 1872, he has been there ever since.

He was Justice of the Peace in Washington township for two years and resigned on account of the pressure of other business. He has been Trustee of the township for four different terms. He is a republican in his political views and has always been such, but never an office seeker or politician. On January 1, 1866, he was married to Armina V. Macnamar, a native of Virginia. Her parents moved to Pennsylvania when she was four years old and then came to Ohio and located in Scioto county. They have had seven children as follows: Charles, who died at four years of age, Lily, John W., Jr., George E., Orson Franklin, (died at thirteen years,) Austin and Lora Emma. None of his children are married.

The 'Squire, as he is best known, is a man of powerful physique. He could overcome an enemy by falling on him, but he is one of the best natured men who ever lived. As a soldier he was one of the best. He was always ready for rations, or battles, whichever offered. He never made any complaints and took all events in his army service as a matter of course. He makes as good a citizen as he did a soldier, and when he receives the final call he will respond with as much earnestness and bravery as he did the "assembly" in the late civil war.

was born at Franklin furnace in Scioto county, Ohio, June 17, 1849. His father, of the same name, was a native of Ireland, as was his mother, Rebecca Hamilton. His father and mother were married in Ireland and emigrated to America in 1848. They located in Adams county, near Vaughn chapel, but his father, being an iron founder moved to Franklin furnace shortly before his son Charles' birth.

Our subject was reared at Franklin, Junior and Ohio furnaces, as his father was employed at all three. The son went to school until he was ten years of age when he went to work pounding lime at Empire furnace. In 1860, his father removed to Adams county and lived there two years on the Ellison place, near Stone Chapel. In 1862, the father removed to Junior furnace and resided there until 1865, when he removed to Marion county, Illinois. From there he went to Brownsport furnace, Tennessee. The family came back to Ohio and located at Ohio furnace in 1867. Our subject remained at Ohio furnace until 1878. In 1877, he was married to Medora A. Foster, daughter of James Foster, of Killenstown, Adams county. In 1878, he located in Portsmouth, Ohio, where he has since resided.

When he first went to Portsmouth, he drove a horse car for five months. He then went into the employment of the Portsmouth Transfer Company for three years, at the end of which time, he took an interest in the business. He and Mr. Frank B. Kehoe conducted the business under the name of The Portsmouth Transfer Company for eleven years. In 1894, he bought Mr. Kehoe's interest and since has conducted the business alone. He keeps moving-vans and transfers all kinds of goods and merchandise. He has twelve teams and his place of business is on Washington street in the city of Portsmouth, Ohio. He has seven children, five daughters and two sons. He has always been a republican. From April, 1897, to April 1899, he was Street Commissioner of Portsmouth, Ohio, and never held any other office. He is known to and respected by every one in Portsmouth as an honorable man and a good citizen. He has always prospered and it is because he conducts his business on right principles. He is a public spirited citizen, always ready to do his part in any matter for the public good.

John Phillip Albert Cramer

was born in Winterleest, Westphalia, Germany, May 13, 1831. His father was Joseph Cramer and his mother was Teresa Pulte both natives of Westphalia. The eminent Doctor Pulte, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a relative of his and met him in Cleveland on his arrival in this country in 1852. Doctor Pulte secured him employment as a railroad agent first in Cleveland and afterwards in Crestline. He came to Portsmouth in 1856, as express messenger on the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad. He served in that capacity but a short time and then became local agent for the Adams Express Company and Harnden Express Company. He held that position fifteen years.

In 1858, he was married in Chillicothe, O., to Miss Louise Crone daughter of George Crone the first German citizen of Chillicothe. In 1868, he engaged in business with Edward J. Kenrick, as Kenrick & Cramer, in the manufacture and sale of mineral waters. He was engaged in this business until February 5, 1882, the date of his death. He died of consumption and took the disease from exposure to acids in the course of his business. His widow survives. They had the following children: Emma, a teacher in the Portsmouth High School; Albert, in Ellamon, Alaska; Caroline, widow of Wimer Folsom; Anna, teacher of music; Lucy, wife of Robert Baker; William, foreman in the Norfolk & Western car shops. Mr. Cramer was a communicant of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, while his wife and children were Lutherans. He was always a republican, and as such was a trustee of the Water Works from 1876 to 1879. He was highly respected for his sterling qualities. He was noted for his integrity and his faithfulness to his trust in every position. His accounts were always correct. He was a first class business man and had the confidence of all with whom he had business connections.

Benjamin Cranston

was born June 6, 1856. His father was Jeremiah Cranston, and his mother was Abigail Dautremont. His grandfather was Judge Edward Cranston, who has a sketch herein. His father had six children of whom he was the third. He was born at Wheelersburg, Scioto county, Ohio, and attended school there till he became nineteen years of age. He then attended a commercial school in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, for one winter. After leaving the commercial school he went into his father's woolen mill at Wheelersburg, Ohio, and learned that business. From 1879 to 1888, he was in the state of Oregon and the territory of Washington. In the latter year he returned to Wheelersburg and engaged with his brother James J. in the merchandising business until 1896. Then he bought the old Cranston woolen mill and operated it one year. In 1897, he disposed of the woolen mill machinery and turned the business into a flouring mill which he has continued to operate till the present time. He was married May 15, 1884, to Miss Alma daughter of Delmont Locke. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and is a model citizen. He has been successful in all his undertakings.

James Jeremiah Cranston

was born June 18, 1862, at Wheelersburg, Ohio. His father was Jeremiah Cranston, and his mother's maiden name was Abigail Dautremont. His grandfather was Judge Edward Cranston. Our subject was reared at Wheelersburg, and had a common school education. From the time he was nineteen years of age until he was thirty-five he was engaged in operating a woolen mill in Wheelersburg. He was engaged as a merchant in Wheelersburg for ten years, until 1900. Since then he has been a farmer on "dogwood ridge," and has conducted a dairy. He was married November 6, 1885 to Miss Addie N. Merrill, daughter of John P. Merrill. They have three children: Louis Pearl, Jessie Lee, Effie Cadot. He has always been a republican. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge and Knights of Pythias at Wheelersburg, Ohio.

Mr. Cranston by sterling integrity and application has established a reputation second to none in the business circle with which he associates. He sustains the fair name of his ancestry in this respect.

He takes much interest in public affairs and his support is always given to measures that will promote the welfare of his community. His well known independence of character and sound judgment give him an influence that is not confined to his immediate neighborhood. He is particularly domestic in his nature.

Jackson Cropper

was born at Esculapia Springs, Lewis county, Kentucky, October 11, 1862. His father was Wheatley Cropper, a native of Maryland, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Frame. His mother was born in Brown county, Ohio. His grandfather, George Cropper, was in the Indian war from 1791 to 1794. He had one daughter killed by the Indians. He had been a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject spent the early part of his life in Kentucky, and had a common school education. He came to Portsmouth at the age of nineteen years and was employed about saw-mills until he was twenty-seven years of age. He was engaged in the grocery business for three years and since then has been engaged in the liquor trade, except from 1898 to 1900, when he was Fire Chief. He was a member of the City Council in 1897 and 1898. He is a democrat in his political views. He was married May 19, 1882 to Katie C. Bostwick, daughter of Sumpter Bostwick. He has had nine children, of whom Clarence, Ethel, Isabel, Clara, and Thomas W. are living. Mr. Cropper is now engaged in business at New Boston.

Allen Dorsey Crossland

was born June 29, 1835, at Connellsville, Fayette county, Pa. His father was Richard Crossland a native of Ellicott's Mills, Anne Arundel county, Md. His mother was Rebecca Strawbridge. His grandfather, Richard Crossland, was in the battle of Stony Creek under Capt. Barnes, of Maryland in the war of 1812, and received a land warrant on account of his services, and located eighty acres near Springfield, Ill.

Our subject had a common school education. He left Connellsville at the age of eighteen. He was a farmer as was his father. He came down on the Alleghany landed at Ironton, and was examined for teaching at Ironton by Ralph Leete. He taught at Cutright's Mills, South Point, where Gen. Sam Thomas was a pupil, and at Lawrence Furnace, where Cambridge Clark was a pupil. He taught also at Kelley's Mills. While there he bought the mills with Wiley Baldwin, of Tennessee, and H. W. Davidson. He was there until he married. He sold out the mill to John Smith, and moved to Franklin furnace, and was in the store with Elias Crandall at Empire furnace. He was married in 1857, at Powellsville, by Rev. Daniel Tracy to Miss Sarah Ellen Barnet. He went to housekeeping at Powellsville.

He enlisted in the 91st Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Company F, July 22, 1862, at the age of twenty-seven, as Second Lieutenant, for three years. He was promoted to First Lieutenant and Reg't'l Quartermaster Feb. 8, 1863. In September, 1865 he went to Jackson and engaged in selling clothing, and continued that until 1869. He then went as a salesman on the road and kept at that until 1872. He was then appointed in the postal service on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad from Grafton to Cincinnati and served seven years. He was then appointed special inspector of Customs at Montreal, Canada, which he continued until 1882. He lost his health there and was transferred to the United States Marine Hospital service located at Parkersburg, and was there until 1884. Then he went in the Roster Department of the Adjutant General's office and remained there until James E. Campbell came in as Governor. After that he went into the notion business, which he continued until March, 1890, when the Citizens' Building & Loan Association of Jackson, Ohio, was organized, and he was made secretary, and has been such ever since.

He has always been a republican. He is a member of the Grand Army. The following are his children: Louella, died at the age of nineteen years; Margaret, wife of John L. Davies, superintendent of the coal works at Chattanooga, Tenn.; Edward E., salesman for McKeehan & Hiestand, at Hillsboro, O.; Anna I., wife of Nara White, of Jackson, O.; Samuel C., residing in Jackson, is in the dry goods business with D. C. Martin; Blanche, stenographer; John D., employed at the Union Grocery Company at Hillsboro, O.; Jesse, at home. His first wife died March 31, 1885, and he was married the second time to Mrs. Rosa Sherwood, nee Reigel, November 18, 1888. There is one child of this marriage, Lillian.

Mr. Crossland has a kind and sympathetic disposition. He is industrious and enterprising in his business and a patriotic and public spirited citizen. He is a good neighbor, a friend who can be trusted and a man who has many friends and few enemies.

Samuel Hammet Crull

was born October 27, 1841, the son of Samuel Crull and Sally Dodge, his wife, daughter of Daniel Dodge. He is the grand son of Judge Samuel Crull, sketched herein. His father and mother had seven children, Thomas J., deceased; John A., died unmarried; Samuel H., our subject; John R., deceased, who was a member of Company F, 140 O. V. I.; William L., deceased; Lydia J., deceased, the first wife of the late David Richardson and Elizabeth J., who died in childhood. Mr. Crull had only a common school education and was brought up a farmer. He enlisted in Company F, 140th O. V. I., May 2, 1864, and served until Sep. 3, 1864. There were five persons of his name in the company. His brother Thomas J., enlisted in Company A, 39th O. V. I., and was a sergeant. He was transferred to Company F, February 24, 1864, and was mustered out August 12, 1864. He was married to Caroline Stockham, daughter of Joseph Harvey Stockham, Dec. 20, 1866, and she died June 7, 1870. Mr. Crull ever since his return from the army has been a farmer, residing a few rods from Harrisonville, on the Long Run road almost on the spot where he was born. His maiden sister, Julia A., and he reside together. He is a radical republican, and is not a fraternity man. He enjoys the respect and confidence of all who know him, is on good terms with all his neighbors, and takes life easy.

Mr. Crull is a gentleman of sterling worth and is held in high esteem by all of his neighbors. He is generous to a fault and is ever ready to lend a helping hand to the needy. He is a law-abiding and exemplary citizen and in his business as a farmer he ranks among the best in his methods and business principles.

William J. Crull

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, September 16, 1836. His father was John H. Crull and his mother's maiden name was Sally Squires. He was raised on a farm and educated in the common schools with the exception of a term in the University at Delaware, Ohio. After leaving school he taught school and clerked in a store for about five years, when he opened out a store for himself in Harrisonville, Ohio. He sold out his store and moved to a farm in Clinton county, Indiana, in the spring of 1880, engaged in farming and has been a farmer ever since.

He enlisted in Company F, 140th O. V. I. May 2, 1864, as a private and served until September 3, 1864, when he was mustered out with the company. In politics, he is a republican. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln for President, in 1860. In 1878, he was married to Emma D. Allen, in Colfax, Indiana. They have two sons: Finton A., born March 30, 1882, graduated from the Frankfort, Indiana, High School, in 1901 and William J., born December 5, 1886, a school boy.

Henry H. Cuppett

was born August 22, 1841, Preston county, W. Va., the son of Daniel Cuppett, whose father, Adam Cuppett, came to W. Va. from Beaver Pa. Adam Cuppett was a "Pennsylvania Dutchman" and spoke the language of his father. His mother was Mary Scott, a daughter of John Scott, a Revolutionary soldier. Nothing is known of his record except that he was a prisoner on board a prison ship at Halifax, N. S.

Our subject was one of ten children, seven boys and three girls. Of the seven boys, six served in the Union army during the Civil War. The youngest, Isaac starved in Andersonville prison. Alpheus, who lives in Preston county, W. Va., is the only son living. One sister is living, Lucinda Smith, widow of Josiah Smith, at Bruceton Mills, W. Va. Mr. Cuppett attended the country schools of W. Va. about three months in the year until he was seventeen and then came to Portsmouth and worked at farming until 1861 when he enlisted in Company G, First Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Captain Bailey, and went to Lancaster, Pa., but was returned on account of too many men. He re-enlisted in Company B, 22nd O. V. I., Captain Jesse J. Appler for three months. He was discharged at Athens, Ohio, August 2, 1861. He re-enlisted under Capt. O. Wood, September 2, 1861 in Co. B, 13th Missouri, and served until the summer of 1862. The regiment was then changed to 22nd O. V. I. and was mustered out at Camp Dennison, September 12, 1865. He has always been a republican. He served as Treasurer of Upper Nile township from 1897 to 1902. He was married August 22, 1868, to Sarah D. Webb, daughter of John Webb, who came to Adams county, Ohio, from Virginia. Of ten children born to them, seven are living: John S.; W. Benton; Nora, wife of Joseph Odle; Lucy B., wife of J. W. Hisel; Harry; Maggie and George C. Mr. Cuppett formed a partnership with D. L. Webb in the lumber business in 1872, which was continued until 1900. He now resides on his farm on Turkey creek. He has been a member of the M. E. church for twenty years and at present is a trustee of Wesley chapel, Friendship, Ohio. Mr. Cuppett is noted for his remarkable resemblance to Gen. John A. Logan. He is a gentleman of quiet tastes. He has always been industrious and a hard worker. He is honest to the core and expects to find the quality in others. He prefers the life of a farmer to all other occupations and enjoys it. He made a most excellent soldier and makes equally as good a citizen, and what is more he knows just what good citizenship is worth to the state. Mr. Cuppet is highly esteemed by his neighbors and observes the Golden Rule every day of his life.

Frederick Charles Daehler was born at Hoechst, Hesse-Darmstadt, April 14, 1836. His father was Frederick Wilhelm Daehler, a carpenter, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Clarius. They had eight children, five sons and three daughters. Frederick was their third child. He attended school in Germany till his fourteenth year, when he was apprenticed to the cabinet maker's trade at Frankfort-on-the-Main. He spent three years learning his trade, and then worked at it one year, a part of the time at Lindheim, and a part at Hochstadt. When he was eighteen years of age, John Leichner, whose daughter he afterwards married, was about to take his family to the United States, and young Daehler asked to go along. He was made welcome and the party went down the Rhine to Rotterdam, thence to Hull, in England, thence to Liverpool, where they embarked on the ship Dreadnaught, and after five weeks on the ocean, landed at New York. From there, they journeyed to Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Portsmouth.

They landed in Portsmouth, June 15, 1854. Young Daehler earned his first dollar in Portsmouth, by working in the "red" mill, where the Times office now stands. Then he worked for Legler and Mesmer in building the Star Hotel, on Front street. In the fall of that year, he hauled corn from the bottoms for George Coffrin. Young Daehler was always ready to do anything which offered. That winter, he worked at the United States hotel. In 1851, he went to Louisville, Kentucky, then to Henderson, Kentucky, but returned to Portsmouth and worked two years for Grassman and one year for John Herder. About the time the war broke out, he started in business for himself, in the Kricker building, which stood where the postoffice now does. He made, sold, and repaired furniture. He was in this location for about three years, and then moved on Front street, west of Damarin & Company's grocery. Soon after this, the Cabinet Makers' Union was formed and Mr. Daehler became the manager. At the end of two years, he concluded he could do best for himself, and sold out of the Cabinet Makers' Union. He then opened business for himself at Fourth and Chillicothe streets. He remained there some three to four years and then bought out John Herder, on Market street. He remained there till 1884, when he purchased and built the warehouse now occupied by David Stahler which he still owns.

All the time, he kept extending his business and on June 1, 1900, he removed to the handsome five-story building, erected expressly for him at 82, 84 and 86 west Second street. He confines himself to the furniture and undertaking business. He has been successful from the start and has at all times made money and increased his trade.

In 1859, he was married to Margaret Leichner, daughter of John Leichner, and has had ten children. His daughters are Ellen, the wife of Prof. John Dieterle, of the University of Michigan; Emma Catharine, Louisa Augusta and Clara Amelia, unmarried and at home. His sons, Charles, Daniel, William and Albert Christian, are in business with him. His son, Edward Jacob, is an attorney in Portsmouth, Ohio. John Walter is a student of law in the Michigan University at Ann Arbor.

Mr. Daehler was formerly a democrat, but in recent years has acted with the republicans. He is a member of the German Evangelical church, and the Masonic lodge. Mr. Daehler is an excellent business man and he and the members of his family conduct his business. He is highly esteemed by all who come in contact with him, as an honorable citizen, and for his ability and success in his business career. In recent years he has almost retired from active business life.

Louis Charles Damarin

was born September 24, 1827. He received his education at St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. At the age of twenty, he entered the wholesale grocery house of C. A. M. Damarin, at Portsmouth, Ohio. He soon became a partner, and after the death of C. A. M. Damarin in 1860, he was the head of the house which prospered greatly under his management. The remarkable rise in iron that had done so much to promote the prosperity of the firm of Damarin & Company, afterward, became the cause of reverses in the private fortune of Mr. Damarin. In 1881, he retired from the firm of Damarin & Company, and entered the insurance business. He was postmaster at Portsmouth from 1882 until 1886. During his term as postmaster, he was stricken with paralysis from which he never recovered. Other strokes followed the first one and he died November 12, 1888.

He was married December 27, 1852, to Mary Catlin Peck, daughter of Judge William V. Peck. His wife and three daughters survived him: Mary, the wife of William C. Gregg of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Louise, the wife of James Huston Varner of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Jessie, the wife of Henry T. Bannon of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. Damarin's life was an eventful and energetic one. He was a public spirited man and while health lasted, was either at the head, or an active participant in all the schemes for the prosperity and good of Portsmouth. He was for many years a member of the city Council and was ever ready to assist in municipal reforms. He was the father of the steam fire service of Portsmouth. He was a member of All Saint's church and one of its vestrymen for nine years. Kind and courteous, he made friends everywhere. Those who knew him best, admired him most and loved him for his sterling qualities. He was always a republican, a man of strong will, conservative in his views, calm and respectful in the expression of his opinions and firm in his convictions. His friendship was of the strongest character and could be relied upon at all times. His intense application to business in the period of his activity, caused the failure of his health. When in his prime his energy and activity was limitless.

was born in Ross county, Ohio, October 9, 1830. His father was Charles Davis and his mother, Elizabeth Hayes. He was the second son of six children. He was reared on a farm and from youth, was connected with farming interests. He obtained his education in the common schools and attended the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware for a short time. His father died when he was eight years of age. He began life for himself at the age of sixteen, when he associated himself with his brother, Charles Davis who rented a farm in his native county and engaged in its cultivation. At the age of eighteen, he and his brother purchased a farm in Fayette county, Ohio, and carried it on for a year, when they sold it.

In 1850, he came to Scioto county, with his brother, Charles, and purchased a farm near Portsmouth, of six hundred and twenty acres for $27,250. This partnership was profitable and harmonious and the brothers continued this association until the death of Charles in 1862. Not long after this, they purchased other farms adjoining them, and they were among the heaviest land holders in Scioto county. In 1884, Mr. Davis owned nearly 4,000 acres of land in Scioto county of various qualities. In 1859, he and Lucien Newton Robinson bought the flouring mill and distillery in Washington township. In 1861, Robinson retired from the firm. In 1867, Stout Morris and Stephen Morrow went into the business. They retired in 1880, and after that date, he conducted the business alone. The distillery closed down when the Cattle Feeder's Trust was organized.

When the Farmer's National bank was organized in February, 1865, Mr. Davis was a director and continued such until his death. In 1871, he became its president and held that office until his demise. There was scarcely any business of a corporate nature conducted in Portsmouth between 1865 and 1894, in which he was not a stockholder or a director. He was always ready to take stock in anything to add business to the city. In 1873, he became a stockholder in the Burgess Steel & Iron Works and was president of the company. He was also a large stockholder and director in the Scioto Fire Brick Company. He carried on a flour and feed store in Portsmouth, Ohio, for years.

Mr. Davis married Sarah Claypool of Ross county, Ohio, and she had two children: Charles and Emma. The former lived to the age of twenty-six years, married and died in California, July 7, 1885. Emma, the daughter, married Frank Connolley, who died April 28, 1883. He has a sketch in this work. She has a son, Fred and a daughter, Augusta, and all of them reside in Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Davis' first wife died May 25, 1862. On February 18, 1869, he married Miss Martha Lewis, daughter of the late Thomas C. Lewis. There were two children of this marriage: George and Edna. They reside with their mother on the Davis farm six miles north of Portsmouth. Mr. Davis died suddenly at his residence in Portsmouth, January 11, 1894.

JOHN FROST DAVIS, M. D.

He was not an educated man in the sense of book learning. He was a plain farmer all his days. He was a citizen of great public spirit. No public enterprise was ever put forth in his time which he did not aid and assist. He was liberal to all charities and generous where generosity was suggested. He went on every officer's bond in the city or county and lost but little by it. He was a republican in his political views; took a great interest in the party contests, but never held any office. He was not a member of any church but attended the Methodist Episcopal church regularly. He knew everyone in the county and was courteous to all. At one time he was a witness in court and it was necessary for him to state his occupation. At that time he had a half dozen occupations and was equally busy at each. Counsel insisted that he should state his occupation and he said that if compelled to name one occupation, he would name that of a farmer, as he liked that best and was best fitted for it. Then counsel proceeded to examine him as an expert at farming and he was able to tell all about the subject enquired of.

was born December 28, 1828, in Williamson county, Tennessee. His father was Wilson B. Davis and his mother's maiden name was Capland. They had seven children of whom he was third. His father was a farmer. When he was but eleven years of age, his father died; and his mother died two months later. He was sent to an uncle Stokely Davis, who lived nine miles from Franklin, Tennessee. This uncle had a number of children of his own, but he was willing to take the care and rearing of our subject, but his aunt at that time had to make all her children's clothing on a loom and she did not think she could provide for an extra child and required her husband to send him to Franklin. He walked to Franklin alone with a walking cane and left it outside of the city and went back after it on Sunday. He carried all his effects in a bandana handkerchief, costing 12 1-2 cents. His uncle apprenticed him to Richard and Franklin Gordins, tailors, in Franklin. They had shops in Franklin and Columbia. He was apprenticed until of age but he remained with these parties four years.

At that time he made an agreement with his master to buy his time and gave them his note, payable when he came of age, which he afterwards scrupulously paid. Having a great thirst for knowledge, he went to Franklin College industrial school, near Nashville, and remained there until he was eighteen years of age. He then spent one year at Harpeth Academy in Williamson county and after that began the study of medicine with Doctor Kimbrough of Franklin. He had inherited $400 from his father and his uncle Stokely Davis was his guardian. He persuaded his uncle to pay him the money before he became of age. With this money, he attended the Medical College in Cincinnati in 1848 and 1850. While in Cincinnati studying medicine, he fell in love with the state of Ohio and thought he would make it his home. In 1850 he obtained his diploma from the Botanical Medical College of Cincinnati.

He located in Charlotte, Tennessee, and was married there to Miss Arabella C. Collier. They had two children born in Charlotte: Mary L. who married Rev. O. F. Erb and died January, 1881, and a son Frank who now lives in Portsmouth. He left Charlotte and located in Nashville in May, 1861, and remained there for two years. Directly after Nashville was taken by the Federal forces, he went into Giles county and gathered up all the Confederate money he could find and invested it in 100 bales of cotton for which he paid $900 and sold it on the ground without moving it for $5,000 in gold to one of the descendants of the patriarch Jacob. His purchaser made more out of it than he did.

In December, 1863, he removed to Cincinnati and went into the drug business on Pearl and Vine streets. He was engaged in the drug business for seven years and lost from $2,400 to $3,000 while in it. He quit the drug business and went into the spice business and lost $2,500. He was never discouraged and came to Portsmouth in 1873 and bought an interest in the drug store then owned by J. W. Ricker and David Jones. In 1875, he bought out his partner and continued in the drug business alone until 1895, when the J. F. Davis Drug Company was formed and he became president. He retired November 10, 1900.

His wife died in 1875 in Portsmouth and he was married a second time to Mrs. Susan Fay. In 1844, he joined the Christian church in Franklin, Tennessee, at the age of 16 years and was baptised in the Harpeth river. During his residence in Cincinnati he was an elder in the Richmond Street Christian church and has been an elder since his residence in Portsmouth. He was largely instrumental in building the new church in Portsmouth, and gave over $5,000 to it and it cost $10,000. He has given away large sums in charity since he has been in Portsmouth. He became a trustee of the Children's Home in 1900 and has continued such ever since.

Prior to the war he was a whig, since that time he has been a prohibitionist. Doctor Davis is a man of remarkable judgment and is a first class business man in every respect. Whenever a situation is presented to him, he investigates it in all of its features and then passes judgment on it. If he undertakes anything, it will succeed. If he determines any measure is not feasible, he will have nothing more to do with it. He has made a wonderful success in his business, no one ever prospered more than he and it was because he gave his entire time and attention to its details. In the Christian church he is a power and in the community as an individual Christian, he is a power. As a worker in his church he is not excelled. He is in no way responsible for this article and these comments are the tribute of a friend who knows him well and judges him impartially. He has a faith in his religion which would move mountains and he carries it out in his daily life. The Christian church in Portsmouth in the period of his residence in the city has had a most remarkable growth, more so than any church in the city, and it is largely due to the start which he gave it. While the work is now being conducted by others principally, the foundation and early growth of the church was largely his. There is no better example today of true Christian manhood than Doctor John F. Davis.

Lot Davis

was born November 8, 1856, in Gallia county, Ohio. He was educated at Gallia Academy, Gallipolis and Rio Grande College. He began the study of law under his brother David Davis, at Jackson, in 1881. While studying he removed to Chillicothe, Missouri, and was admitted there in June, 1883. He practiced there until 1884 when he located in Ironton, Ohio, in the month of April. He held the office of Probate Judge of Lawrence county, Ohio, from February, 1888 till February 1894, since which time he practised law until 1891, when he removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, and engaged in the manufacturing business. He manufactures a compound for cleaning boilers. The firm is H. Kohlsrud & Company of Norwood, Ohio. As a lawyer and a business man, Mr. Davis has been energetic, enterprising and thorough in everything he has undertaken.

He was married in August, 1883 to Ellen I. Salter of Thurman, Gallia county, Ohio. The children of this marriage are: Margaret E. attending St. Mary's school at Columbus, Ohio; Benjamin H. attending school at Philadelphia. His wife died in August, 1891. In September, 1893, he was married to Ida W. Dean, daughter of L. T. Dean, of Ironton, Ohio.

Robert Kenton Day

was born November 11, 1859. He was the son of David Day, and the grandson of David Day, a native of New Jersey, who came to Mt. Joy, with his family, about 1854, from Venango county, Pennsylvania. His mother was Mary Elizabeth (Jones) Day, daughter of James and Eliza (Smith) Jones. He attended the public schools and prepared himself to teach. He entered the profession and has taught regularly ever since. He attended school a short time at the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, and at the Ohio Normal University at Ada, Ohio. During all this time, he has improved himself and has become one of the best teachers in the county. He has been employed the past two years as principal of the public schools at Otway, Ohio, giving good satisfaction. He was elected Mayor of Otway in 1902, and also Justice of the Peace of Brush Creek township the same year. He is a follower of the democratic faith, but votes for the man and the measure as often as for the party. He is a member of the Christian church at Mt. Joy, Ohio. On June 4, 1885 he was married to Malina Adams, daughter of Hugh and Emily (Long) Adams, of Mt. Joy. Their children are: Monford Earl died at the age of ten; Millie Belle, age twelve; Mettie, deceased in infancy; and Ruth, age six.

Jacob Deemer

was born in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, November 2, 1841. His father Jacob Deemer was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and was of German ancestry. His mother was Susan Bunzo, whose mother was a native of France. Our subject's life, until he was sixteen years of age, was spent in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, where he received all his school training. In 1857, his father with his family came to Scioto county, and located in Madison township. August 21, 1862 he enlisted in Company F, 1st Ohio Heavy Artillery and was made a corporal, August 1, 1863. He was discharged July 25, 1865. After the war, about 1871, he was engaged in the lumber business, and lived in Washington township, where he operated a saw-mill for several years. He also owned a good farm on Carey's Run. He was a Trustee of Washington township, in 1875. December 4, 1870, he was married to Samantha McKinney, daughter of Lorenzo Dow McKinney. Mr. Deemer has two children, Charles D. and Lucy Jane. In 1880 he removed to the northwestern part of Rush township, near McCulloch creek, where he has one of the finest and best equipped farms in the county. His farm buildings are models of usefulness. He is known all over the county as an upright, honest, successful man and is esteemed for his genial manners and obliging disposition.

Francis Marion Dever

was born March 17, 1843, in Jackson county, Ohio. His father was Solomon Dever, and his mother's maiden name was Chloe Mault. He received a common school education. He was raised a farmer, and has been engaged in farming, ever since. He owns the farm of 840 acres on which he was born. He was married October 22, 1883, to Margaret Slavens. He has two children: Sadie, married Floyd Purdy, a farmer, residing at Lucasville; Frank S., married Sadie Shurd, resides with his father, and is engaged in farming. Mr. Dever owns a farm of 170 acres in Madison township. He is also engaged in stock raising. He has always been a republican.

At the age of eighteen years, he was as ambitious and anxious to succeed and as much inclined to hard manual labor upon the farm as any member of the large family. At about that age, he met with an accident that lamed him for life. It was really a fortunate circumstance for him in one sense. It took him out of the furrow and gave him an opportunity to think. Instead of going on doing the manual work of one man, he has been enabled to give such employment to many. He now owns and operates the largest and best equipped farm in his county, and also does a large business in the handling of live stock.

He is of a lively and cheerful disposition, and has always been a great lover of children. Without letting his most intimate friends know anything about it, he delights in helping a deserving boy in getting an education or obtaining desirable employment and has spent much money in that direction.

While he is strictly business-like in his trades and financial transactions, exacting and giving full measure he is most liberal with his family, and exceedingly generous to the numerous young friends, whom he has seen fit to assist in various ways.

He takes great interest in the betterment of the condition of all the people in his employ, or in any manner connected with him and while he has succeeded himself, and justly prides himself upon his success he takes equal pleasure in the success of those around him, and in whose welfare he has interested himself. His friendships are marked and strong, and his animosities decided. There is no distance he will not go to oblige a friend, and he will go about as far to punish one who has done him a deliberate wrong. But he is quick to make reparation, if he finds himself in the wrong. He is what may be called a strict man of affairs, of sturdy honesty and of a positive, aggressive nature, yet most liberal and indulgent with his family and generous and helpful to all deserving persons with whom he comes in contact.

John Newton Dever

was born September 13, 1858. His father was George Dever and his mother Mary White, daughter of John White, one of the pioneers. His grandfather was Solomon Dever. He was born in Madison township. He received a common school education. He taught school from 1876 to 1895, most of the time in Madison township, but he taught two terms in Vernon township and one in Hamilton township, Jackson county. He was married July 1, 1881, to Clara Gertrude Rigley, daughter of John Rigley and Jane Titus, his wife. John Rigley enlisted in Company F, 91st O. V. I. on August 11, 1862, for three years, at the age of twenty-three. He was wounded at the battle of Stevenson's Depot, Virginia and was mustered out April 27, 1865, at Cumberland, Maryland. His death in 1869, was due to his army service.

Our subject's children are: John Harrison, Blaine, Gertie Mahala, Amy Ethel, Ida Ione, Walter McKinley, Samuel Hobart and Roy Homer. Mr. Dever is a republican and a member of the Christian church. He has never held any office except that of member of the Board of Education of his township for four years, and the president of the same board for two years. He is a fine looking specimen of the Scioto county farmer and as good as he looks. He has good health a great surplus of energy and industry, which he is capitalizing into property, and if he lives out his expectancy, he will die leaving a competency.

William Thomas Dever

was born in Morgan township, Scioto county Ohio, August 11, 1867. He is the son of Joseph Dever, grandson of William Dever, and great-grandson of John Dever. John Dever, the great-grandfather, and his two brothers, George and James, came from Virginia, and settled in Scioto county in 1800. He had three sons, William, James and John, who were born in Virginia. William Thomas Dever's great-uncle, John Dever, was a soldier in the war of 1812. William Dever, grandfather of William Thomas Dever, was born March 7, 1794, and died November 24, 1834. His wife, Asenath McDougol, was born in Ireland, October 12, 1797, married to him May 16, 1816, and died November, 1877.

Joseph M. and wife had seven children. Of their children, Joseph M. married Rebecca F. Wheeler, a native of Virginia; Belle, is the wife of Frank Simpson; Mary E. is the wife of G. F. Lauman; William T., our subject, and James F., sons, reside at Clifford, Ohio; Catherine, is the wife of Dr. M. J. Beard, of Lucasville, Ohio. Mrs. Blanche M. Dodds resides at Butler, Pennsylvania, and Louisa, deceased, was the wife of H. C. Starr.

William T. was reared in Morgan township, where he always resided. He has always been a farmer and makes a specialty of raising fine Chester White hogs. Since 1892, he has taken more than 400 premiums, at State and County fairs, for fancy swine and for three years past has taken first premiums at the Ohio State Fair. He is a democrat and his forefathers were democrats. Mr. Dever has been for several years a member of the Board of Education of Morgan township. He married Ida B. Harwood, daughter of Daniel and Hannah (Darlington) Harwood, December 27, 1888. They have one child Mary Frances. Mr. Dever is a representative man of his neighborhood and has the esteem of all for his sterling qualities. Honorable and upright, kind and courteous he makes friends wherever he goes.

was born October 18, 1841 in Wurtemberg, Germany. His father was George Dice, and his mother's maiden name was Fredericka Horn. His parents emigrated to the United States when he was five years of age. They located in Cincinnati. He attended the public schools in Cincinnati until he was thirteen years of age, and was then apprenticed to Isaac and Benjamin Bruce to learn carriage making. He remained with them five years. From 1859 to 1864, he worked as a journeyman in Cincinnati, except during his army service. In 1864, he came to Portsmouth and opened a shop of his own and he has carried on that business in Portsmouth for thirty-eight consecutive years and is still in it, though he has also been concerned in other business.

He enlisted in Company G, 6th, O. V. I. three months men, the Cincinnati Guthrie Greys, in April, 1861, but was rejected on physical examination at the camp of rendezvous and was thus deprived of a military career. In 1862 and 1863, he was in government service at Corinth, Mississippi, as an expert mechanic, for seven months. His first location in business in Portsmouth was on Jefferson street. In 1868, he built his three-story carriage factory on Second street, and has occupied that ever since. He went into the livery business in 1870, with Thomas T. Yeager, and has been in that business ever since except from 1895 to 1898. On November 6, 1898, his livery stable at the old Maklem stand on Market street was burned down, and he built the three story brick building now occupied by him at 16 and 18 East Fourth street. He went into the undertaking business in connection with his livery and is now conducting three businesses in Portsmouth; livery, undertaking and carriage repairing. He was married in 1863 to Elizabeth Lind, a native of Hesse, Germany. He has six children: John W., who is in business with him; Anna, at home; Kate, married to Harry Doty, son of Theo. F. Doty; Louis, in his fourth year at West Point, United States Military Academy; Jessie and Essie, twins; Jessie is at home, and Essie is a student at Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts. Mr. Dice has always been a republican. He was a trustee of the City Water Works from 1893 to 1899.

George Allen Dickens

was born at Tiffin, Ohio, June 6, 1864, the son of Simon and Sarah L. Dickens. When our subject reached the age of six, his parents moved to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he attended the public schools for the following ten years. He then started on his business career, remaining in Milwaukee until reaching the age of nineteen when he moved to Minnesota and accepted the position of assistant secretary of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, which position he filled with marked ability for three years, after which time he moved to Chicago and received his first introduction into the stone business. He represented the company, with which he was then connected, at their various agencies and remained with them for eight years, when he severed his connection with them for a year's trip abroad, during which time he visited England and South Africa.

On returning to America he again took up the stone business, locating in Chicago, where he remained one year. He then came to Scioto county, in 1897, as the representative of the McDermott Bros., and purchased the properties which have since been developed into one of Scioto county's most important business industries, that of The McDermott Stone Company at McDermott, Ohio. He has been a director and officer in this company since its organization. Mr. Dickens resides at McDermott and in politics is considered a staunch republican. He is a member of all the Masonic bodies, a Shriner and an Elk.

An associate in business says of him: "He possesses many enviable qualities both as a citizen and as a business man. In business he is eminently capable, honorable and successful, and as a citizen he stands high and ever ready to take an active part in whatever tends to advance the best interests of his town and county."

Rev. John William Dillon

was born October 18, 1835, in Mason township, Lawrence county, Ohio. His father was Samuel Dillon, son of Micajah and Mary Dillon, and was reared in Franklin county, near Rocky Mount. His mother Mary Dillon was the daughter of John and Nancy White and was born and reared in Fincastle, Botetourt county, Virginia. Both families came to Ohio in 1830 and settled in Lawrence county. August 14, 1832, Samuel Dillon and Mary White were united in marriage. Our subject was their second son. His early life was spent on the farm. At the age of fourteen, the family moved to Millersport. He had such educational advantages as the common schools afforded at that time. He was under the tutorship of Judge Sylvester McCown and Doctor I. T. Monahan for sometime. Later, under the direction of such critical and scholarly examiners, as Doctor George W. Brush and President Solomon Howard of the Ohio University, he mastered very thoroughly the four years literary and theological course prescribed by the church.

In the fall of 1857, at the age of twenty-one years, he was admitted into the regular itinerant ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church. His appointments have been as follows: In 1857-8, Rockville; 1858-9, Jasper and Spencer M. E. church, now Sixth Street M. E. church, Portsmouth; 1859-60, Rockville; 1860-61, Waverly; 1861-3, Piketon circuit; 1863-6, Burlington; 1866-9, Ironton; 1869-72, Newark; 1872-5, Zanesville; 1875-7, Presiding Elder of Gallipolis District; 1877-9, pastor Gallipolis; 1879-81, Presiding Elder of Portsmouth District; 1881-4, Pastor Bigelow church, Portsmouth; 1884-6, St. Paul's Delaware; 1886-90, London; 1890-95, Lancaster; 1895-6 Gallipolis; 1896-98, Mt. Vernon Ave., Columbus; 1898 to the present, Presiding Elder of the Portsmouth District, now closing his fourth year. His term on the district will expire in September, 1904.

January 10, 1864, he was married to Mary C. Cox, eldest daughter of Martin and Catharine Cox of Sandy Springs, Adams county, Ohio. They have raised five children, two daughters and three sons: Mary C., is the wife of Morgan Mollohan of Marion, Kansas; Sarah J., is the wife of Gilbert D. Wait, superintendent of the Wait Furniture Company; John Grant, secretary and treasurer of the Wait Furniture Company; Edmond Bothwell is a lawyer in Columbus, Ohio; Benjamin Hood, president of the Wait Furniture Company. Mr. and Mrs. Dillon have eleven grandchildren, three girls and eight boys.

Mr. Dillon is in no way responsible for these comments and will not see them till he opens his copy of this work. He is the living, walking exemplification of all the Christian virtues, and to his friends, it seems to be natural for him to be such. He is kind hearted, sympathetic and ever ready to say words of balm which come from his heart and go to the hearts of those to whom he speaks. He is the ideal of the old fashioned itinerant Methodist minister, a class which is fast passing away. He is a good edition of St. John, the evangelist and beloved disciple. He loves the whole world and will do good to all with whom he can come personally in contact. His influence has always been for the best and for the advancement of Christianity. He does not deserve to have any enemies and has none. There was never anything in his composition which would invite strife or contention. His gospel has always been peace and love and to teach men to live as Christ, his master, taught. He has ordered his own life according to the teachings of the Master and that life is a standing, ever present invitation to others to do the same. In his church and in the community, he is a beacon light ever pointing the way Heavenward. He has reared a family of sons and daughters, of which not only he and his wife can be proud, but of which the whole community can be proud. The sons are not only magnificent specimens of physical manhood, but they are model citizens and first class business men. The writer believes that the minister who brings up his own children successfully is the best qualified Christian teacher, and as such the Reverend Dillon has no superior.

John Grant Dillon

was born in Burlington, Lawrence county, Ohio, November 21, 1863. His parents were Rev. John W. Dillon and Mary Catherine Cox, his wife. His boyhood and youth were passed, three years at Ironton, three years at Newark, three at Zanesville and four at Gallipolis. He then came to Portsmouth and attended the public schools until he was twenty years of age. He took a course in book-keeping and since the organization of the Wait Furniture Company has been its secretary and treasurer. He has always been a republican and is a member of the Methodist church. He was married September 23, 1897, to Miss Estelle Tynes. They have one son, Donald Tynes Dillon.

Physically Mr. Dillon is built on a liberal plan. He could take the part of Milo and Hercules and fill it well. Nature has been as generous to him in the bestowal of mental qualities as she was of physical gifts. He is a man of keen, quick perception, of excellent judgment and large executive ability. As a business man he has succeeded well and has won him an excellent position among his cotemporaries. He is a strong factor in anything he undertakes and a most valuable citizen.

Edmond Bothwell Dillon

was born at Ironton, Ohio, Feb. 9, 1869. His father was Rev. John W. Dillon and his mother's maiden name was Mary Cox. She was the daughter of Martin and Catherine Cox of Adams county. Mr. Dillon's early life is illustrative of the active American boy who is willing to work. At fourteen, he was messenger in the First National Bank of Portsmouth, O., while the venerable John P. Terry was president, and whose constant advice to the young man was "promptness and honesty." He received a public school education in the various cities of the state where his father a Methodist minister, was from time to time located. In 1884, he entered the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. While attending school there he assisted himself to a small extent in outside work. He was graduated in 1889.

He studied law in the office of Hon. S. W. Durlfinge of London, Ohio, working as assistant postmaster from 6 a. m. until 7 p. m. and doing all his studying at night and on holidays. He was admitted to the bar of Ohio in 1891 and began the practice of law in Columbus, Ohio, though a perfect stranger to every person there. The Supreme Court of Ohio appointed him a member of the State Law Examining Committee in 1897 and continued to re-appoint him until 1901 when he was made Chairman of the Board. In politics, Mr. Dillon is a republican, but has only recently sought office. He is a member of the Columbus Board of Trade, the Columbus Civil Service Commission and numerous secret societies. For many years he has been counsel for the State Dairy and Food Department, which with his active membership in the Ohio State Bar Association has given him rather an extended acquaintance throughout the state. In 1898, Mr. Dillon was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States.

He was married May 9, 1895, to Marian D. Whitney, daughter of Calvin and Marian Dean Whitney of Norwalk, Ohio. There were two children born of this union: Edmond Whitney, aged five, and Mary C. aged two years. He is an able lawyer and possesses the confidence of all who know him. At the November election, 1902, he was elected a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio.

Benjamin Hood Dillon

was born in Newark, Ohio, Aug. 23, 1871, the son of Rev. John W. Dillon and Mary Catherine Cox, his wife. His boyhood and youth were passed at Newark, Delaware, Zanesville, Gallipolis, and London, Ohio. He graduated at Carmichael Business College, Delaware, Ohio, and came to Portsmouth in 1889. He is president of The Wait Furniture Company. October 7, 1897, he was married to Miss Cora Waller Selby, daughter of George D. and Lydia (Webster) Selby, of Portsmouth, Ohio. They have one son, Edmond Selby Dillon.

Mr. Dillon is a gentleman esteemed by all who have the pleasure and honor of his acquaintance. He has a remarkable insight of business matters, which stands him well in his dealings with his fellowmen. He can come as near reading the thoughts of his associates as any man who ever lived. He is one of those fortunate men, who cannot be imposed upon, and on whom it is useless to try imposition. He is not self conscious of the wonderful faculty he possesses and is a most engaging companion and a good neighbor.

Frank F. Dinsmore,

attorney-at-law, now of Cincinnati, Ohio, was born December 22, 1869, in the same city where he now resides. His father's name was Henry Dinsmore and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Jane Watkins. His father was a native of county Antrim, Ireland, but of Scotch ancestry. He came to the United States in 1848. His mother's parents were among the first settlers at Portsmouth, coming from Virginia. His parents resided in Portsmouth for some years, afterwards removing to Cincinnati. They returned to Portsmouth in 1873. His boyhood and youth were spent there. He is a graduate of the Portsmouth High School. He was a clerk in the County Auditor's office under Filmore Musser from 1887 to 1890 during which time he taught a night school in Portsmouth and studied law with Theodore K. Funk.

He attended the Cincinnati Law School, graduated in May, 1891, and was admitted to the bar on graduation. He began the practice of law in Cincinnati.

On the first of May, 1894, he was appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel of Cincinnati, by Frederick Hertenstein, Corporation Counsel. He held this position until January 1, 1897, when he was appointed Assistant County Solicitor of Hamilton county under William Rendigs, County Solicitor. He held this position until January 1, 1900, since which time he has been in general practice of law in the Atlas Bank Building, Cincinnati.

He has always been a republican and has always taken great interest in political matters. In religion, he is a member of the Presbyterian church.

He was married at Ironton, June 24, 1896 to Miss Mary E. Campbell, daughter of Joseph H. Campbell, a granddaughter of Hiram Campbell, a well known iron-master of that city. He has had three children, the oldest, a boy, born in 1897, died in infancy. The second, Joseph Campbell, born March 29, 1899, and Jane, born March 26, 1900. He resides at 838 Hutchins avenue, Avondale.

Mr. Dinsmore has always been noted for his remarkable industry and energy in everything he has undertaken. In all his professional labors, he is thorough and is one of the most promising lawyers of the Hamilton county bar, for his age and experience. His word is as good as his bond and his bond is gold standard all the time. He is one of the directors of the new Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth Electric Railroad. He is a force and power in any enterprise with which he is associated. No one of his friends will ever be startled by any promotion he may obtain.

Here is what his tutor in law, Major H. P. Lloyd says of him, "He is a lawyer of unusual ability. He came to Cincinnati as a student in 1890, and entered my office. He applied himself with industry and unflagging zeal. He graduated from the Law School of the Cincinnati College with high honors, winning the first prize on general examinations, and also the first prize for best legal essay. This record had never been made by any other student. He early established a reputation for integrity and ability of a high order, and his moral character is unblemished. No one of his age ranks higher at the Hamilton county bar, and no one has a brighter future.

Ephraim Marion Dixon, M. D., was born November 9, 1866, in Scioto township, Jackson county, Ohio. His father was Griffie Dixon, and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Schellenger. They had four children, of whom our subject was the third. His father was a farmer and served in the Civil War in Company D, 43d O. V. I. He entered that company March 25, 1864, and served until July 13, 1865.

Our subject had a common school education, and attended the Jackson Academy. He began teaching in the common schools at the age of nineteen, and taught six years in Jackson county. He began the study of medicine in 1890, with Dr. L. D. Allard of Flat Post Office, Pike county, Ohio, but now of the city of Portsmouth. He entered the Medical University at Louisville, Ky. in September, 1892, and graduated in March, 1894. He located immediately at Wilkesville, Vinton county, and practiced medicine there for two years. He located at Flat, now Stockdale, in June, 1896, where he has since resided. He married Hattie L. Brown, daughter of Nathan Brown, June 18, 1899. He is a republican, a member of the Methodist Protestant church, and of the Knights of Pythias. In the summer of 1902, he took a post-graduate medical course at Baltimore, Maryland, at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Josiah Carroll Dodds

was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, November 5, 1829. His father was William Dodds, and his mother's maiden name was Nancy Eakin. His parents had eleven children, ten sons and one daughter, and our subject was the eighth child. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, and followed the double occupation of farmer and brick-layer. The Dodds family came from Scotland into the north of Ireland, in 1614, and emigrated to America in 1748. Josiah received a common school education in Pennsylvania. He resided in Butler county, Pa., until he was twenty-one years of age. He taught school from 1850 to 1861, in Scioto, Pike, and Adams counties, Ohio. He was married April 14, 1853, to Margaret Hutchinson, of Clintonville, Pennsylvania.

He enlisted in the 179th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Company E, at the age of thirty-four, August 31, 1864, for one year, and was mustered out with the company June 17, 1865. He was a farmer at Mt. Joy, from 1853 to 1890. He has four children: Robert Clarence, a Presbyterian minister, located at Lansing, Michigan, married and has a family; William Homer a lawyer at Pittsburg, Pa., located at No. 518 Fourth Avenue; Armina, died at the age of nine years; Ann Blanche, married S. T. Vanmeter, residing at Mt. Joy, a farmer; John Gilmore, attending medical college at Chicago, Ill. In 1897, he left Mt. Joy and moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he remained fifteen months. From there he went to Pittsburg, and from there to Butler county, where on February 23, 1900, his wife died. He came to Portsmouth to reside April 25, 1900.

In his political views, he was first a whig, and then a republican. He is really a prohibitionist, but wants to see prohibition come through the instrumentality of the republican party. He takes life easily. His greatest ambition has always been to be a first class citizen and he has realized it. As a member of the United Presbyterian church, he lives up to its teachings and is ready to respond when the Master calls.

Robert Henley Dodds

was born September 25, 1850, at Baden, Beaver county, Pennsylvania. His father was Thomas Henley Dodds and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Charleston. They were both born in the county of Down, Ireland, and came to America, settling in Pennsylvania about 1844. They came to Scioto county about 1851, and settled in Madison township. Robert attended the public schools until the age of eighteen and then took a teacher's course at Lebanon, Ohio. He began the profession of teaching in 1872 and has continued it to the present time, with the exception of one year. He held the office of Clerk of Madison township five successive terms. He was School Examiner of Scioto county from 1887 to 1893. He was reared a democrat, but became a republican in 1872. He is a member of the Regular Baptist church. He married Rachel A. Lair, December 7, 1872. He has six children: Heber H., Charles C., Marion, Roscoe, Emma and Grover.

William Homer Dodds

was born near Mt. Joy, Scioto county, Ohio. His parents were Josiah C. and Margaret (Hutchison) Dodds, of Butler county, Pennsylvania, of Scotch-Irish descent. He began teaching in the public schools at the age of sixteen, first at New Lebanon, Lawrence county, then in Scioto county, at Henley, Simpson and Sedan. He entered the preparatory department at Westminster College, Pennsylvania in April, 1877, and graduated in the classical course in 1882 receiving the Bachelor's degree in the Arts course. Five years later, the same college conferred on him the Master's degree. After graduating he had charge of McElwain Institute, Mercer county, Pennsylvania, a college preparatory school, but resigned at the end of one year to accept the principalship of the High School of Alleghany City, Pennsylvania, where he taught for nine years, resigning in 1892 to pursue the study of law. He edited the "Pennsylvania Teacher" from 1883 to 1888; represented the Alleghany City educational exhibit at the Paris exposition 1889; and was for three years secretary of the University Extension Society of Western Pennsylvania. He read law with Hon. Walter M. Lyon, then Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, but owing to ill health did not finish the course for three years, when he was admitted in 1895, to the Pittsburg bar, where he has since practised. In politics he is a republican.

As a student he was faithful; as an educator he distinguished himself and took a leading position. As a lawyer he has taken high rank in his seven years practice. He has earned the respect of the members of the bar with whom he has practiced and of the judges before whom he has appeared as an advocate. He is a clear thinker, a sound lawyer and an esteemed citizen.

Jonathan Sherman Dodge

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, April 9, 1867. His father was George Lyons Dodge and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Louise Tibbs. He was educated in the common schools and afterwards attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, graduating there in 1890 in the Classical course. In 1892, he graduated in the Cincinnati Law School at which he received the highest grade ever attained at that school, an average of 99.4. He stood at the head of a class of 90, and won a prize of $100 for best scholarship. He was married January 17, 1892, to Miss Mary A. Fritz, of Darke county, and located in the city of Portsmouth in September of that year. He built up a remunerative practice and was noted for his industry at the Portsmouth bar, but on account of his wife's health he left Portsmouth and opened a law office in El Paso, Texas, October 16, 1899, and is engaged in the practice of law there. He never held any public office. He was a candidate in El Paso, in 1901, for County Judge on the republican ticket, but had no show for election. His children are Alice Cora, Anna Louise and Charles Anderson. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Dodge is one of the most active and energetic men who ever adorned or elevated the legal profession.

was born October 26, 1844, in Ross county, Ohio, the son of John M. Doty, a prominent democrat politician. His mother's maiden name was Sarah H. Jones. Until the age of 15 he attended the schools of Chillicothe. At he age of 21 years he entered the employ of the B. & O. Railroad Company at Chillicothe, and remained in its employ till 1886, when he came to Portsmouth Ohio, and became freight agent of the Scioto Valley Railway Company and is holding the same position under the Norfolk & Western Railway Company. In 1893, he was president and one of the directors of the Scioto Fire Brick Company, of Sciotoville, Ohio. He was president of the Scioto County Agricultural Society for the years from 1890 to 1892. He was president of the Board of Trade from 1896 to 1901. He was a member of the City Council in 1896 and 1897, and was a member of the City Board of Education from 1898 to 1899. He was president of the Garfield Club from 1893 to 1894.

He was brought up a democrat, but when he came of age he became a republican and was active in political circles in Chillicothe while he lived there, and has been prominent in his party ever since his residence in Portsmouth. He has served on the Republican Executive Committee of his county. He is a Mason, Past Eminent Commander of Calvary Commandery, Knights Templar and a Past Exalted Ruler of the Elk lodge at Portsmouth.

He married Miss Martha E. Weaver, July 9, 1868, and has six children: Frank, Harry, Lucien and Charles; Elizabeth, wife of J. I. Hudson, superintendent of the Portsmouth Public Schools, and Edith, wife of Addison Minshall, a young lawyer of Chillicothe, Ohio. Mr. Doty is one of the foremost and most energetic citizens of Portsmouth. When any public enterprises are proposed he is always to the front and ready to do all he can for the public good.

Thomas W. Doty

was born at Clinton Furnace, Scioto county, Ohio, April 10, 1847. His father was William Doty, and his mother's maiden name was Emeline Swarr. His parents were married in the year 1836. He attended the district schools at Etna Furnace and Ohio Furnace. At the age of seventeen, he left school and went to work and worked till he was twenty-one years of age. He attended school at Lebanon when he was twenty-two years of age for one year. He returned to Ohio furnace and became the overseer of the ore banks until he was twenty-eight years of age. Then for a year he was engaged in hauling ore for the Ohio furnace. He took charge of the Ohio furnace store in March, 1877, and held the position till September, 1878. From 1878 to 1882, he was foundryman of the same furnace. He was then foundryman of Vernon furnace for one year. He returned to Ohio furnace in the spring of 1884, and took charge of the store which he retained till 1885. He was elected Treasurer of Green township in 1884, and held the office for fourteen consecutive years. In 1885 he became book-keeper of Ohio furnace and remained as such till 1895. From 1891 to 1895, he was also manager of the furnace. In the latter year, his son, Lewis, took charge of the books, and he continued manager till his death on September 5, 1900.

He was married May 5, 1874, to Julia Maria Shepard, daughter of Lewis Cass Shepard, Ex-Sheriff of Lawrence county, Ohio and Julia Frances K. (Eidwell) Shepard, his wife. Mr. Shepard died in 1901. The children of Mr. Doty were: Lewis William, store keeper at New Castle, Lawrence county, Ohio; Oliver Perry, student of mining engineering at the Ohio State University at Columbus, Ohio; Alfred Spalding, store clerk at Otway, Ohio; Thomas W., engaged at New Castle, Ohio. Mr. Doty was a republican in his political views, was a strong supporter of his party, and as true as steel to his friends. While not a member of any church, he was a loyal supporter and regular attendant. He was benevolent to all, never turning away the needy without help. He was a member of the Masonic order and held his membership at Wheelersburg, Ohio. He was killed accidentally on a tramway at Ohio furnace.

Elmer Dover,

secretary to United States Senator, M. A. Hanna, was born April 14, 1873, at McConnelsville, Morgan county, Ohio, the son of J. W. Dover and Frances (Winn) Dover. He received his education in the public schools of McConnelsville. Immediately after finishing the course he entered the field as a newspaper reporter in McConnelsville. He left there in 1890 and engaged in newspaper work at Akron, Ohio, where he remained two years. From there he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and was employed on the Portsmouth Times for five years. He was with the Republican National Committee during the campaigns of 1896 and 1900. After the former campaign he became secretary to Senator M. A. Hanna, in which capacity he still serves.

He was married to Martha Steele Peebles, daughter of John Peebles, January 25, 1898. They have one child Mary Elizabeth, born October 5, 1899. Our subject is a republican and a Presbyterian.

He is a young gentleman of the most versatile talents. He has demonstrated his ability to fill well one of the most difficult places in the government, that of secretary to Senator Hanna. Mr. Dover is a natural-born diplomat. He accords to every man the attention and consideration he deserves. There is no person mentioned in these pages whose life is more busy or active than his, nor are there any who deal with more complex and difficult questions, or who dispose of them more happily. Mr. Dover gives great promise of the highest success in political life.

Samuel Pangburn Drake

was born February 16, 1823, near Georgetown, Brown county, Ohio. He was raised on a farm until he was sixteen years of age. In 1839, he began his career as a printer on the Western Whig at Wilmington, Ohio, his brother Stephen being the owner of the paper and its founder. In 1840, he went to Hillsboro and was an apprentice of James Brown, publisher of the News. He finished his trade there and in 1843, he was in West Union as proprietor of The Intelligencer. He remained there but one year and then began teaching in a country school. He taught one year and then went back into the printing business.

In 1845 and 1846, there was an attempt to organize a new county to be called Massie of which Bainbridge should be the center and county seat. He went there and started the Ohio Spectator which was to be the Whig organ of the new county. Everybody within the limits of the proposed county wanted to run for office in it, and their jealousies killed the measure. Le Grand Byington, a representative from Pike county, was to have put the bill through the legislature, but instead of that, he defeated it. When asked the reason of his unexpected action, he said that the people to be in the new county wanted everything, but did not want to pay for anything.

In 1848, Mr. Drake went to Washington, C. H., and started the Fayette Intelligencer. He sold out to George B. Gardner in less than one year and became foreman on the Clinton Republican at Wilmington. The next year he went to Georgetown and worked for W. B. Tomlinson on a newspaper there. In 1850, he was in Rainsboro, Highland county, keeping a country hotel. He remained there but a short time, and returned to Hillsboro and became foreman on the News. He went from there to the Hillsboro Gazette owned by Jonas R. Emrie.

In the winter of 1851 and 1852, he came to Portsmouth, where his brother Stephen had recently started the Scioto Valley Republican. Sam Burwell, afterward of the West Union Scion was a journeyman in the office and Tom McAllister, now an inmate of the County Infirmary, the "devil." Our subject afterwards went into partnership with his brother who went into the army and was killed by Mosby's men. He then conducted the paper alone.

In May, 1864 at the age of forty-two years, he enlisted in Company G, 141st Ohio Volunteer Infantry and was mustered out with the company September 3, 1864. On April 24, 1865, he became Second Lieutenant of the 198th Ohio Volunteer Infantry and served until May 8, 1865, when he was mustered out.

He was elected Treasurer of Wayne township in 1867. The vote was 614 for Drake and 585 for John Thompson, better known as "Coal" Thompson and "Sawdust" Thompson. Drake served two terms and was legislated out of office by the township being abolished. May 27, 1869, he was appointed postmaster at Portsmouth, through personal friendship with General Grant, but owing to local influence, the appointment was withdrawn. He was a deputy United States Marshal at one time, and as such took the census in Portsmouth. February 11, 1847, he was married to Miss Sophia Kelley, of Ross county. He was a member of the Sixth Street church, a whig, a republican and a member of the Bailey Post. He died December 5, 1891.

Ulysses Grant Drake

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, March 29, 1868, the son of Samuel Pangburn and Sophia (Kelley) Drake. He was named for Grant on account of the close friendship between his father and the President. Our subject spent his boyhood and youth in Portsmouth and attended the public schools until he was fifteen years old, when he commenced working with his father in the printing office. He continued at this business until 1890, and then took charge of the business. He is a republican and a member of the First Baptist church and one of its deacons. On September 3, 1889 he was married to Miss Eliza Mathews, daughter of J. R. Mathews, foreman of the "ad" composing room of the Blade office. He has five children: Grace, Grant, Madeline, Mabel and Harry M. Mr. Drake is one of the most industrious young men in Portsmouth. He is a model for others in his business to follow. He leads an exemplary life, is liked by all who know him and is a model citizen.

Edgar F. Draper.

one of the twelve children of A. E. and Lorenda (Hodge) Draper was born Mch. 23, 1846, at Akron, Erie county, New York. His father was born in 1808 and was the youngest of a family of two sons and six daughters. His paternal grandfather, Gideon Draper, moved from eastern New York to the western part of the state in 1828. He was brought up on a farm till he was sixteen and attended the common schools. After studying two years in Genesee College, Lima, New York he came to Portsmouth, November 4, 1864 and learned railroading under his brother, W. C. Draper, who was Chief Agent for the Portsmouth branch of the Marietta and Cincinnati railroad.

He was appointed agent of this railroad at Jackson in February, 1865, and served there one year when he was sent to Portsmouth. He was ticket agent and telegraph operator here for this road until 1890, when it was known as the Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore. After leaving the railroad business he took up insurance and real estate. In 1892 he organized the Portsmouth German Building and Loan Association and has been its secretary and treasurer since. He was treasurer of the Ohio Valley Agricultural Society many years and its secretary the last five years of its existence. From 1877 till 1893, and from 1895 to 1897, he was a member of the Board of Education and was its clerk from 1884 to 1886, and from 1888 to 1897, and its president in 1878-9.

He was married June 16, 1869, to Mary Ellen Adams, only daughter of Elmer W. Adams, a banker of North Canton, Connecticut, and Mary E. Smith, his wife, of Hatfield, Massachusetts. Her parents removed to Duquoin in southern Illinois shortly after their marriage, on account of the health of her father and purchased a large stock farm. Here Mrs. Draper was born. Her parents died before she was two years old and she was adopted by her mother's brother, a Presbyterian minister, then pastor of a church in Belpre, Ohio, and later of Oxford, New Hampshire, where most of her childhood and youth was spent. She was educated at the Western College at Oxford, Ohio, but received her musical training, chiefly in Boston, Massachusetts, where for seven years she was under the tutelage of the best masters. She came to Portsmouth in 1864 as organist at the First Presbyterian church and has been one of the leading organists in the city ever since. During all this time she has been prominent not only in a social way but in all worthy causes where a woman's aid and sympathy is needed. She has the most advanced ideas on the subjects of music, art and literature.

Mr. Draper is a member of the Second Presbyterian church. He has always been a republican. He is a Mason of long standing and a Past Presiding officer in all the Masonic bodies in the city. He always takes a great interest in any matters committed to his charge. He was one of the most efficient members of the Board of Education the city ever had. The measures he proposed in the Board were adopted because they were well considered and for the best interests of the schools. Mr. Draper has managed the German Building and Loan Association of which he is secretary and treasurer with great fidelity, skill and ability and has made it one of the best in the city. He has acquired the use of the German language to a degree attained by few Americans. Mr. Draper has cultivated literary tastes and devotes as much time as possible to their culture. He is a gentleman of fine physical presence and appearance and great natural dignity. As a public speaker, Mr. Draper is calm, deliberate and argumentative. When he speaks he is master of his subject. One great characteristic of Mr. Draper is his love of children and his friendships for them. He never misses an opportunity to add to the pleasures of the little people of his acquaintance. While a member of the Board of Education he personally knew a majority of the school children in Portsmouth and children are his welcome friends and companions at all times.

William C. Draper

was born near Akron, Erie county, New York, March 17, 1832. He spent his early life on the farm owned by his father, A. E. Draper who was one of the pioneers of western New York. William C. received a common school education and took a select course at Genesee College, at Lima, New York. At the age of twenty, he came to Ohio and taught school several years in Ross and Jackson counties. At the latter place he married Harriet Cavett. They had one son and three daughters: Frank E., Jessie, Nellie and Hattie. His wife died in 1889, since which time he and his daughters kept house until his death which occurred April 1, 1902. In the year 1856, Mr. Draper was employed as conductor on what is known as the Baltimore & Ohio South-western railway. After serving in this capacity for quite a number of years, he was appointed agent of the road at Portsmouth and remained until 1890.

Soon afterward he was elected County Treasurer and served two terms which was his last engagement in business. His health soon failed and after several years of suffering, he died. Mr. Draper was widely and favorably known throughout this section, and enjoyed the confidence of his friends, who were legion. He was true to his friends and possessed a strong fraternal feeling for his fellow-beings, seeing their good qualities and overlooking their bad qualities. He never could see distress without endeavoring to relieve it. He had no enemies and deserved none. He was a strong temperance advocate and took a lively interest in everything good for his adopted city. At the time of his death, he was one of the oldest members of the Bigelow Methodist Episcopal church in which he held official positions for more than thirty years, and was punctual in attendance upon all its services.

was born at Rowley, Mass., July 27, 1849. His parents were Frederick Drew and Sarah G. Bailey, his wife. The ancestors of the Drews in this country first settled in New Jersey and afterwards moved to Portsmouth, New Hampshire, where the great-grandfather of Irving Drew, Samuel Drew, was born, his son being Joshua Drew, born in Durham, New Hampshire in 1793 and died in 1843. Frederick Drew, father of our subject was born at Durham, February 1, 1817 and died at Rowley, Massachusetts, October 17, 1896. His mother, Sarah G. Bailey, was a descendant of James C. Bailey, who came to Massachusetts about 1630. His descendants in a direct line were: John Bailey, Nathaniel Bailey, Deacon David Bailey, Ezekiel Bailey, Ezekiel P. Bailey and Sarah G. Bailey Drew, the mother of Irving Drew.

Frederick Drew remained in his native place until eighteen years of age and then removed to Rowley, Massachusetts. He was married there November 27, 1843, and came to Portsmouth in 1851, where he was foreman for R. Bell, and remained about nine months, then he returned to Massachusetts. In March, 1854, he again went west, this time taking his family and locating at Ironton, Ohio, where he was engaged in the retail shoe business until 1862. Then he went to Granville, Ohio, where he was in the retail shoe business and farmed a part of the time. In 1869, he came back to Portsmouth and engaged in the employ of R. Bell & Company.

Our subject worked in the shoe factory from 1869 to 1871. His father then associated himself with the firm of Riftenberick, Drew & Gregg who succeeded to the manufacturing department of R. Bell & Company, with which he remained until January, 1874. Mr. Irving Drew then with others organized the Portsmouth Shoe Company of which he was secretary and treasurer and general manager. Henry Padan was president, William Koblenz, vice president. The other stockholders were: George Padan, Henry Cook, Frederick Drew, John Bourgholtzer, Nicholas Ames, Nicholas Reeg, Valentine Pressler and William Bierley. The capital stock was $4,500. This company succeeded Riftenberick, Drew & Gregg. After a period of three years, Irving Drew and his father drew out of this company and left Henry Padan and others to operate it.

In January, 1877, Mr. Drew and his father organized the firm of Irving Drew & Company, composed of himself, his father, Bernard Damon and Henry Cook. They began operations in the third story of the Huston stone front on Second street and continued there for three years. About the close of the year 1879, the firm changed to Drew, Selby & Company. Mr. George D. Selby went into the firm, but did not take an active interest in it until 1885. From the organization of the Portsmouth Shoe Company in 1874 until 1885, Mr. Irving Drew was the managing spirit of the whole business. When Mr. Selby came into the business in 1885, Mr. Drew confined himself principally to buying and superintending the manufacturing department and Mr. Selby took charge of the correspondence, sales and credits. The success of this firm in business is related under the article, "Drew, Selby & Company."

Mr. Drew was married to Ella A. Gates, daughter of William Wallace and Alvira (Nye) Gates, June 30, 1879. They have seven children: Roy Irving, engaged in the factory of The Irving Drew Company and a director; Mabel Arelie, a graduate of the Western College, Oxford, Ohio; Marjorie Gates, a student at the same school; Rowena Nye, Hazel Bailey, Frederick Wallace and Everett Austin, at home.

He is a member and a ruling elder of the Second Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, Ohio. Prior to 1884, he was a republican, since that date he has been a prohibitionist. The only fraternal society he is a member of is the Royal Arcanum, an insurance society. In June, 1902, Mr. Drew was appointed a trustee of the Western College at Oxford, Ohio.

Mr. Drew is a gentleman who courts no public notice whatever. He prefers to attend to his business, in which he has been thoroughly absorbed, and to concentrate his efforts to making his business successful. He has encouraged others in the same line of manufacturing till shoe manufacturing has become the leading industry in Portsmouth. He prefers to leave other problems and schemes, both public and private, to be worked out by those more familiar with them, believing that energy, system and perseverance, as applied to the cost, quality and endless detail of the shoe business, would lead to success for himself and associates and as a result largely beneficial to the city.

In his manners, he is quiet and reserved. He prefers that the one who is seeking him shall do the talking and shall present his case without any aid from him. He does his own thinking and is of positive convictions. His New England training, ingrained for ten generations, stands him well in hand. It enables him to reason correctly on every subject presented and to come to wise and just conclusions as well about matters of business as matters of public policy.

As a business man, he is conservative and takes the safe and sure course. He has been fortunate and successful in his business career because that career was governed by correct principles. Mr. Drew's most prominent characteristic, shown in his every day life, is his great earnestness and wonderful purpose.

IRVING DREW.

He sees the end from the beginning and his plans never fail, while his plan proceeds from beginning to accomplishment. He is surrounded by a most interesting family and his entire influence in the community is for Christian character and training. He believes that to be the foundation of all that is good, true and lasting, and all of his time, work and effort, outside of his business, goes in that direction; so he finds but little time for pleasures that do not legitimately come with a successful business, a happy home, reform and Christian work.

Simon Bolivar Drouillard

was born in Gallipolis, Ohio, August 21, 1829, the son of Joseph Drouillard, who has a sketch herein. He was originally named by his parents Simon Kenton, in honor of Simon Kenton, whom his grandfather, Pierre Drouillard, ransomed from the Indians, but for some reason best known to himself, he saw fit to change the name from Kenton to Bolivar. He was educated in the schools of Gallipolis and at Gallia Academy. During his minority in the intervals of attending school, he assisted his father in a clerical capacity in the office of Clerk of Courts at Gallipolis. In 1848, he was elected Recorder of Gallia county and served until 1854. He was married November 27, 1850, to Miss Evaline Long, daughter of George Long, of South Side, West Virginia, in the Kanawha valley. He was admitted to the bar some time during his residence in Gallipolis, but the date has not been preserved. In 1850, he took an interest in Gallia furnace, went there as book-keeper and resided there until 1858, when he went to Portsmouth and took a position in Dugan's bank, as book-keeper and continued to reside there the remainder of his life.

He was a whig and a republican in his political views. In 1863, he was placed upon the Republican ticket as candidate for Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of Scioto county and received 2,263 votes to 1,745, for his competitor, Benjamin F. Cunningham. He was re-elected Clerk in 1866 and received a vote of 2,631 to 2,119 for his opponent, J. C. Stimmel. He was re-elected the third time in 1869, by a vote of 2,367 for himself to 2,283 for John W. Lewis. During his residence in Gallipolis, he united with the M. E. church, and when he came to Portsmouth, he united with the Sixth Street church. He was a member of that church until 1867, when on account of his wife who was reared a Presbyterian, he became a member of the First Presbyterian church. He was a member of all the Masonic bodies in Portsmouth and at the time of his death, was Most Eminent Commander of Knights Templar and had been for several years. While Clerk of the Courts, he published a lawyer's docket, one of the most useful ever devised.

On June 19, 1873, he was accidentally killed in the vicinity of Gallipolis. He had gone there some days before on a vacation, and with his brother-in-law, Captain James Harper, on that day had gone hunting. He was using a double barreled gun and thought he had discharged both barrels. It seems that one of the barrels had not been discharged and his foot accidentally struck the hammer and the contents were discharged through his head, causing his instant death.

His first son was George Long, now a resident of Cincinnati, and engaged in the coal business. He has six children: William Kenton, Emily, Martha, Clifford, Clyde and Leslie. His daughter, Emily, makes her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Drouillard, the widow of our subject, in Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Drouillard's daughter Emma, born in 1854, at Gallia Furnace, married John Miller in 1878, and died January 14, 1888, leaving three children: George Scudder, Evelyn and Catherine. His second son, James W., born in 1860, was educated in the Portsmouth public schools, studied law with Moore and Newman, was admitted to the bar in Columbus and went to Chicago to practice law in 1892, where he still resides.

When Mr. Drouillard was about to retire from the Clerk's office, the members of the bar, as a testimonial of their high appreciation of him, presented him with a gold watch and chain. As Clerk of the Common Pleas Court, he had no superior, if an equal, in the state, and the members of the bar who had business with his office have borne ample testimony to the efficiency with which he discharged the duties of his office. Mr. Drouillard was a man who never sought publicity in any thing, but he was always faithful to every duty imposed upon him. He was kind and considerate to all. As a book-keeper he had no superior. He devoted his whole waking time to whatever business he was engaged in. While he had as much capacity as any one for recreation and pleasure, he rarely indulged in it. Urged by his friends to take some rest, his attempt to do so in 1873, resulted in his death.

was born August 18, 1833 in Lager, East Friesland, Germany. His father was Jacob Duis and his mother's maiden name was Rosina Gruben. When a year old his father removed to Rina in Prussia. When he was five years old his father died. Five years later his mother married Frederick Sant. They came to the United States in 1845. They left Bremen on a sailing vessel and arrived at New Orleans March, 1845. In the party were his step-father, his mother and his brothers, Henry and Benjamin Duis and himself. He lost one sister in infancy and another at the age of ten years, in Germany. The emigrant party referred to came to Cincinnati where they remained but a few months. His step-father and brother Henry, went to Hanging Rock to find work, and from there went to Lawrence Furnace, where they only stayed about a month. From there they went to Aetna Furnace and remained three years, after that they went to Vesuvius Furnace and lived for about three years; from there they went to Buckhorn Furnace living there two years. At the latter place our subject married on September 11, 1853, to Mary Ann Verigan, daughter of Henry Verigan.

He attended school in Germany for six years before coming to this country, and also attended school at Buckhorn Furnace. After his marriage he removed to Washington Furnace and in 1854, to Hamden Furnace. In 1855, he went to Limestone Furnace and remained there for the winter. From there he went to Madison Furnace and remained until March, 1859, when he removed to Lawrence Furnace. He remained until January, 1860, when he removed to Wheelersburg, where he has since resided. He purchased William McKinney's farm adjoining the village of Wheelersburg, and has resided on it ever since.

Mr. Duis is, par excellence, the model farmer of Scioto county. He has read all that is obtainable on the subject of farming. He takes the leading agricultural papers and magazines and tries to keep up with the times. Many of his neighbors think he has gotten slightly ahead of the times. He was converted years ago to the theory of tile draining and has at least fourteen miles of tile drainage on his farm. When he bought his farm it was unimproved. He built a house on it, built all the barns and out buildings, and has improved the property fully two-hundred per cent and brought up his farm over two-hundred per cent in its productive capacity. Mr. Duis believes in machinery, tools and appliances; and he has all the modern machinery which a farmer could require. He keeps tools of all kinds on his farm; and is able to do about all of his repairing, which is a great saving of time and expense. He requires that his farm products should be the best, and usually attains that end.

His children are: Rosina, the deceased wife of Charles H. Ketter, of Iron-ton; William, deceased; Lida, the wife of W. W. Meeks of Santiago, Texas; Lizzie, wife of George Bell; Ann, the second wife of Charles H. Ketter; John, farming for himself; and Winifred, wife of Christian Herzog of Canton, O.

Mr. Duis voted for Buchanan in 1850, which he said was due to ignorance, and which he has regretted many times since. In 1860, he became a republican and has continued such. He is a member of the Methodist church in Wheelersburg, and has been since 1860. He was reared a Lutheran and confirmed in that church. He has had several responsible offices in the church at Wheelersburg. Mr. Duis is a man noted for his honesty and integrity. He is also noted for his remarkable industry and energy. To know what kind of a farmer he is, one should visit his farm and inspect his buildings and fields. Everything is in perfect order and a self respecting weed will not grow any where on, his place.

John Kline Duke

was born at Piketon, Pike county, Ohio, August 20, 1844, the son of Samuel Duke and Elizabeth Ware, his wife. His father died in March, 1846, and left him in the care of his mother who died in May, 1883. His father was a Pennsylvania German, a radical old-line whig, and very active in support of that party. He came to Ohio and located in Piketon, in 1825. He was a man of excellent judgment and one whose opinions were much sought after. He was a hat maker by trade. He married Elizabeth Ware, a native of Virginia, born in 1832.

Mr. Duke's early life was passed in the quiet village of Pike-ton, Ohio, until the alarm of war, when at the age of 17, he enlisted, but was discharged on account of his youth. In the second year of the war, at the age of 19, he enlisted in Company F, 53rd O. V. I., for three years, and was mustered out with the regiment at the conclusion of the war, August, 1865. He, with his regiment, followed Gen. Sherman during the last two years of the war. He participated in quite a number of battles and was with Sherman on his famous march to the sea. He was at the final surrender of General Johnson, in April, 1865. He also made the forced march through from North Carolina to Washington for the grand review with the 15th Army Corps. He has in his possession his gun and accoutrements which he carried throughout his enlistment. He is the author of the Regimental History of the 53d Ohio, which evidences his capacity as well as his loyalty to his command.

The year following the war, he was employed in the public schools of Logan county, Illinois, as a teacher. In October, 1866, he came to Portsmouth in search of employment and D. N. Murray tendered him the position of accountant in his hardware house. This position he occupied for about two years, when he was tendered the position of book-keeper in the First National bank. He accepted the same and remained in the employ of said bank for a period of about nine years. At that time he was tendered a position with a Chicago manufacturing plant, which he accepted and filled to the satisfaction of his employer; so much so, that at the end of the first year he was promoted and sent to the New York office of the same firm as financial manager and general book-keeper, which position he held until he became a physical wreck from the strain and over-work of said office.

He returned to Portsmouth, in 1878, and took a position with the Singer Manufacturing Company as an accountant, in which position he served about five years. In 1883, he established an insurance and real estate agency. He now represents one of the largest agencies of this kind doing business in Portsmouth. On February 8, 1890, he inaugurated The Royal Savings and Loan Association Company. This financial institution is one of the solid ones of the city.

Mr. Duke occupies an eminent position in the ranks of the G. A. R. He has the distinction of having been the installing officer of every Post established in Scioto county, and in many of the surrounding counties of southern Ohio. He has been honored twice by being a delegate to the National Encampment, and is known as one of the great workers of Bailey Post No. 164. He has been all his life identified with the Methodist Episcopal church, and has been for years a teacher in the Sabbath school of Bigelow, as well as an official member. He has organized many of the fraternal organizations of southern Ohio. He was treasurer of the Board of Education of the city of Portsmouth for several years. In politics he is an ardent republican.

October 27, 1870, he was married to Miss Lola C. Lloyd, a daughter of Thomas G. Lloyd, a pioneer of Portsmouth. Their only son, John K. Duke, Jr., is associated with his father in business. He was recently married to Miss Jessie Henderson.

Mr. Duke, as a boy was earnest, serious and studious. He was always anxious to learn and wanted to know the reasons of things. He has carried his trait of seriousness and earnestness through life. He made an ideal soldier. He was always in the place of duty. When he ceased to be a soldier he became a patriot and he is always found ready to do anything and sacrifice anything for his country. He is of very strong likes and dislikes. If he has prejudices either way they are intense. He is faithful to every duty and in everything he undertakes. If there is any one characteristic of his which overshadows all others, it is his tireless energy and industry. He works incessantly and when other men are resting. His resistless, limitless, boundless, capacity to work and disposition to do so, coupled with his doing it, has made the Royal Building Association of Portsmouth, Ohio, the leading one in southern Ohio. He reminds the editor much of that sterling character of Whittier's, Abraham Dav-enport. Mr. Duke is noted for the purity of his life and for his high ideals of citizenship. His business character is built on the highest integrity and sense of honor. Mr. Duke has always been a strong republican. He is a power in the community for good, and he makes his influence in that direction felt in every organization with which he is connected. His influence is to build up and strengthen every organization with which he is connected. He is a strong and powerful factor in the community and it is hoped his career of usefulness may be a long one.

John Wesley Dunham

was born at Harper's Ferry, W. Va., in Jefferson county, June 18, 1815. His father was John Dunham, who came from Harper's Ferry to Ohio and settled at Piketon, when our subject was only five years old. His mother was Mary (Holliday) Dunham, who was born near Sheperdstown, W. Va., in 1797, and died in February, 1859. She was a member of the Holliday family which was prominent in that section of West Virginia. Her mother's maiden name was Mary Carr. She was born near Herring Bay on the shores of Chesapeake Bay, thirty or forty miles from Annapolis. Mr. Dunham had only a common school education. In his younger days he was a clerk, but afterwards went into general mercantile business at Piketon for himself. During the time he was in business he had several partners, one of whom was James Jones. He continued in business at Piketon until 1864. About this time the county seat of Pike county was moved from Piketon to Waverly, which took all the business from Piketon to Waverly, and he was compelled to close down his business there which he did and came to Portsmouth. He clerked for C. D. Elden in the dry goods business for a few years, and afterwards engaged in the grocery business for himself. In 1875, he took charge of the dry goods department of the Gaylord rolling mill store, and was employed there until his death, June 1, 1881. He was a whig and a republican. He was never prominent in politics and never held office. He was a very prominent member and earnest worker in the Bigelow M. E. church and Sunday school.

He was married to Miss Jane Clough, daughter of Hon. Nathan K. Clough, (a sketch of whom is found elsewhere in this book,) May 14, 1846. Four children were born to them as follows: Edward Henry, died in Colorado, June 10, 1890; Mary Clough, widow of H. P. Pursell, now residing on west Fourth street in Portsmouth; George Holliday, died in his tenth year at Piketon, Ohio, and Charles Lodwick, now residing in Portsmouth.

Andrew Jefferson Duteil

was born on a farm in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio, near Chaffin's Mill, June 25, 1859, the oldest son of John and Maggie (Gifford) Duteil. His father John Duteil was born in the French Grant May 13, 1826 and a grandson of Francis Charles Duteil, who drew lot No. 32 in the original French Grant. John Duteil was raised on a farm and during his early manhood bought the Chamberlain and Emory farms in Vernon township where he was engaged in farming and stock raising until his death on August 10, 1888.

Our subject was raised on a farm and attended the common schools at Chaffin's Mill until he was nineteen years of age, when he attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, and prepared himself for a teacher; but not liking that profession he came back to his father's farm where he was engaged in farming and buying and selling stock until December, 1885, when he entered the Iron City Business College of Pittsburg, Pa., and was graduated February 26, 1886. On September 7, 1886 he was employed by the Campbell Iron Company at Mount Vernon Furnace, Lawrence county, Ohio, as furnace clerk, which position he held up to January 1, 1894. In the year 1894 he and Colonel W. C. Amos leased the Vesuvius furnace in Lawrence county, Ohio, and operated it till December, 1894 when he sold his interest in the furnace and accepted a position as general manager of Madison furnace in Jackson county, Ohio, which position he held up to October 19, 1898, when he was appointed Receiver of the Clare, Duduit & Company which position he now holds.

He was Constable of Vernon township from 1881 to 1885 and Clerk of Decatur township, Lawrence county, Ohio, from April, 1888, to January, 1894, when he resigned on account of leaving the township. He was appointed Postmaster at Rempel, Jackson county, Ohio, January 29, 1898 which office he now holds. His political views have been republican and he takes an active part in politics, being usually a member of the County Executive Committee. He has never belonged to any church, but is a firm believer in the teachings of the Bible and always helps keep the church and Sabbath school up in his community. He belongs to the Masonic Order and Jackson Commandery No. 53 at Jackson, Ohio. He also belongs to the Benevolent and Protective order of Elks, Jackson Lodge, No. 466.

Charles Francis Duteil

was born in Bloom township, Scioto county, Ohio, July 2, 1869. His father and mother are Lemuel Duteil and Ruhama (Emory) Duteil. His grandfather was Louis Duteil and his great-grandfather was Francis Charles Duteil, one of the original settlers of the French Grant. His father, Lemuel Duteil served from June 4, 1861 to June 19, 1864 in the Civil War, Company F, 2nd Kentucky regiment, V. L., participating in the battles of Chickamauga and Shiloh as well as other smaller engagements. At Shiloh, his brother, William, was wounded and as Lemuel was carrying him across a swamp, two stalwart "Rebs" came rushing up and demanded his surrender. Instead of complying with their request, he dropped his brother and acting under that impetuosity characteristic of him all his life he clubbed his musket and knocked one senseless; the other ran. Lemuel Duteil died in South Webster, November 18, 1899. William entered the service June 4, 1861, in the same company with Lemuel, and was discharged at Louisville, Kentucky, on surgeon's certificate of disability, November 23, 1862.

The subject of this sketch received a common school education. He is a republican and takes an active part in local affairs. He is a member of the Bloom Baptist Missionary church. He married Cloey B. Kuhner, August 17, 1897. Her father was a merchant at Bloom Switch for forty years. They have two children: Selma R. and Elizabeth C. Duteil. Mr. Duteil is an excellent young man, noted for his push and energy. He is prosperous and has a very comfortable home in South Webster. He is a member of South Webster Lodge, Knights of Pythias, No. 724.

Mack Eakins

was born at Pine Grove Furnace, Lawrence county, Ohio, August 13, 1861. He is the son of William C. and Susan (Chatfield) Eakins. His great-grandfather came from Ireland and was one of the early settlers in Adams county. William Eakins is the son of a Thompsonian physician and has three brothers who are physicians. Our subject received a common school education at the Franklin Furnace school. He came to Sciotoville in 1887 and commenced the mercantile business. In 1894, he and his father commenced business under the name of W. C. Eakins & Son. They have now a large business which is rapidly increasing. The son is a republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. On June 14, 1888, he married Amasetta Price. They have two children, Elva and William.

was born in Klingerberg, Bavaria, on the Main, near Frankfort, Germany, June 28, 1837. His father was John Andon Ebert, a brewer, and his mother's maiden name was Barbara Krentzman. They had four children of whom our subject was the eldest. He attended school in Germany until his twelfth year, when his father put him in the brewery to learn the trade. He learned it in three years and then traveled and worked at it for five years, in Mannheim, Bremen and other places. He then went home and stood his chance in the conscription. He however drew a high number and got off. At the age of twenty, on January 6, 1858, he married Matilda Uilchin, daughter of John Uilchin. Then he brought his wife and came to the United States. He landed in New York and worked nine months at his trade. Then he went to Cincinnati, and worked in a brickyard one summer. He afterwards found a place in a brewery and in two months was made foreman. He worked in Cincinnati sixteen months as a foreman and then went to Ironton and started in business for himself, and has resided and been in business in Ironton ever since. He has six children: Fannie, married; Margaret, the widow of Michael Rauch; Matilda, the wife of Charles Jones; Emma, the wife of Frederick Wagner, a farmer on Pine creek near Powellsville; Bertha Hocke, widow of Andrew Hocke; Otto, in business with his father. Mr. Ebert was a republican till 1872, and since, has been a democrat. He is an Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias, and an Elk. For seventeen years, he was in public office in Ironton, as Councilman, member of the School Board, and a member of the Board of Health. For eight years he was president of the Ohio Brewers' Association, and for two years has been president of the National Association of Brewers.

Jacob Arthur Eckhart

was born August 7, 1843, in Jackson county Ohio. His father was Jacob Eckhart, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Sherer. They had fourteen children, twelve of whom grew to maturity. Our subject was the third child. His parents moved to Madison township, Scioto county, when he was about three years old. He received all his schooling in Madison township. He enlisted in Company K, 91st O. V. I., August 13, 1862, at the age of nineteen for three years. On May 9, 1864, at the battle of Cloyd's Mountain, Va., a gun was discharged so near him that he lost the hearing in his right ear. On July 20, 1864, at the battle of Stevenson's depot, he was wounded in the right hip, and was sent to Maryland Heights hospital, where he remained for three months. He was never fit for any duty after that, and never rendered any service; but was discharged May 6, 1865 at Cumberland, Maryland on surgeon's certificate of disability.

When he came home in December, 1865, he married Jermima Busler, a native of Carroll county, Ohio, but who then resided in Jackson, a daughter of Samuel Busler. He engaged in farming in Madison township, and followed it until March 20, 1900, when he moved to Harrison township, where he has lived ever since. He was appointed postmaster at Scioto (Harrisonville) July, 1900, and holds the office. He has had eight children, five of whom are living, three deceased. Daniel Webster, died at the age of fourteen years; George Washington, died at the age of eighteen years; Margaret Ellen, married Dr. S. W. Rick-ey, and both are deceased, leaving two children with our subject. Their names are Naffa Eckhart, aged eight years and Anna May, aged six years. Dr. Rick-ey, their father, was killed at Sinking Springs, in a runaway accident, August 2, 1900. The mother died May 11, 1901. The fourth child of our subject is John Franklin, aged thirty-two years, lives in Portsmouth, and conducts a broom factory; Minnie, married Warren Coriell superintendent of the fire brick works on Chillicothe pike, near the old Norfolk & Western railroad station. Another is Sampson Douglas, teacher of common schools on Lawson Heights. Andrew Jackson, a farmer who resides in Madison township, near Massie P. O., and Bertha, married Russell Frowine, lives in Madison township.

Mr. Eckhart has been a member of the United Brethren church for twenty-eight years, and at present holds his membership at Harrisonville.

A comrade of his who was through the service with him, by his side, says he made a most excellent soldier; that he was always brave and ready for duty.

was born in Tredegar, Wales, September, 24, 1837. His father John Edmunds, came to the United States in 1840 and brought his son along. His mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Thomas. They remained in Toronto for two years and then came to Pittsburg, Pa., where they remained for ten years. In 1858 they removed to Centerville, Gallia county, Ohio. His father was a mechanical engineer and iron worker. After he removed to Centerville, he took stock in Limestone furnace, when it was organized. Then he sold out and went to Kansas, but on account of the troubles in Kansas, stopped short and located in Missouri, in Sullivan county, and was there when the Civil War broke out. He was a Union man and found it impossible to remain in Missouri, so he came to Gallia furnace and remained there until 1865. Then he moved to Sciotoville and lived there until his death.

In 1861 our subject went to the mines in Colorado and was there eighteen months, then he went into the Quartermaster service of the United States and remained in that until 1866, in which year he went to Richland Furnace, Vinton county, where he was an engineer. He remained there three years. In June, 1870, he went to South Webster to superintend the South Webster fire brick works, and was there until 1898. After a few years he became secretary and general manager of the works. He sold out his interest in 1898, went to Lucasville, engaged in the mercantile business and sold farming machinery. The firm is Martindale & Edmunds. He was married in September, 1869 to Susannah Hill. His children are: Olive, the wife of Charles Martindale, his partner; Carrie, the wife of Edward Butler; John, yard master for the Norfolk & Western railway of Portsmouth; Gertrude and George at home. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and of the Masonic fraternity. He is a republican.

Daniel Henry Egbert

was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, May 20, 1854. His father's name was Daniel Egbert, born May 8, 1824, in Hunteburg, Kingdom of Hanover. He came to Lawrence county on November 1, 1847. His mother's maiden name was Louisa Appel, born at Santover, Baden, March 25, 1831. She came to this country in 1849, with her parents. They were married October 26, 1849, in Lawrence county, Ohio. In October, 1858, they located in Valley township, Scioto county. Daniel, Senior, bought a farm of 124 acres on Millar's Run of Blackson Farmer, on which he has lived ever since. He has now 370 acres of land. He has had four children: William, resides at Clifford, O., Daniel H., our subject; Lucy, wife of John M. Johnson, resides on Beck street, Columbus, is connected with the street car business; George, was accidentally killed in 1897, and left a widow and five children. He was a resident of Valley township at the time of his death.

Daniel Egbert, Jr., was married October 27, 1880, to Mary B. Wooster, daughter of John Wooster. He has seven children: George, born December 19, 1881; Albert, born November 4, 1883, died June 13, 1886; John E., born December 17, 1885; Louella, born October 23, 1888; Walter, born April 26, 1890; Dora, born May 11, 1892; Marion, born September 15, 1895; Charley and Margaret, twins, born May 7, 1897; Margaret died July 12, 1897. Mr. Egbert is a democrat in his political views. He has been Trustee of the township and a member of the school board of his district a number of years. He is a member of the German Lutheran church at Portsmouth, Ohio.

Richard Burton Eglin

was born in Spencer, Medina county, Ohio, April 10th, 1868. His father was John Eglin, a native of England and his mother Harriett Ann Hendee. He was the second of a family of four children. He attended the public schools at Wellington, Ohio, and afterwards the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. In 1889 he went South engaging in manufacturing and exporting of hard wood staves from Arkansas and Texas, and later returned to Ohio and the stone business. In 1899 he entered the McDermott Stone Company becoming one of the directors and president of that company. He was married in 1889 to Miss Netta Santley of Wellington, Ohio. He has four children: Ralph Burton, Mary Evelyn, Harriet and Netta Elizabeth. Mr. Eglin is a republican and a member of Bigelow M. E. church.

The success he has already won in the business world is but the legitimate fruit of an honest, cultured man doing his duty both to himself and those associated with him. The domestic life of Mr. Eglin and his fine family is as ideal and beautiful as his business life has been successful.

He is a factor for good in the social, political, business and Christian activities of any community in which he makes his home.

John Eisman

was born January 20, 1839, in the city of Forcheim, Kingdom of Bavaria, the son of Smiley Eismann and Eva (Friedmann) Eismann. He spent his boyhood in Forcheim and received his education in the public schools of that place. After leaving school at the age of eighteen, he learned the trade of a baker and followed this vocation at Frankfort and at Mainz until he was twenty.

He left his native land in the spring of 1861, and landed in the United States March 22. He proceeded at once to New Brunswick, New Jersey, where he worked at his trade for about a year; then, going to New York, he was employed on Bleeker street, at the same occupation for eight or nine months.

From there he went to Scranton, Pa., where he remained about six months. His brother Leopold Eisman had come to America in 1859 and had established a clothing and dry goods business in Portsmouth, Ohio. At his request, his brother, our subject, came to Portsmouth in March, 1864, where he has since resided with the exception of a few months in 1865 when he resided in St. Louis, Missouri.

In 1865, the brothers formed a partnership branch store. Leopold still conducted his main store and John managed the branch store, which was located in the basement of the Taylor House which stood where the present Biggs House stands, but was destroyed by fire in 1871. The business was temporarily removed to the Spry block after the fire. Leopold then erected a three story brick building just below the Timmonds baker shop on Front street, and the entire business was removed to the new building, the brothers becoming equal partners in the business. The dry goods line was soon dropped and they carried on a clothing and merchant tailoring business exclusively. The sales were mostly retail, though a local wholesale business was done. The business flourished and the partnership continued until the death of the senior partner, Leopold, September 6, 1886, when our subject bought out the interest of the widow and assumed exclusive control of the establishment.

The business has since been run in the name of J. Eisman & Company, though Mr. Eisman is the sole owner. In 1895, he removed to the Brushart building on west Second street. The business continued to grow and wholesaling was given more attention. In 1900, the quarters becoming too small a removal was made to Chillicothe street between Fourth and Fifth streets, where an extensive wholesale and retail clothing and gents furnishing business is carried on. It is one of the largest and most substantial business houses in Portsmouth.

Mr. Eisman has always been a republican in politics, but has never sought publicity in this line preferring to give his whole time and attention to his business. He is a member of the Jewish church congregation of Portsmouth and has always been one of its most liberal contributors. He held the presidency of the church for two years. He was united in marriage, January, 1869, with Fanny Meyer daughter of Jacob Meyer, of Portsmouth. She died, December, 1869. In April 1874, he was re-married to Eliza Dryfus, daughter of Wolf and Eva Dryfus, of Zanesville, Ohio. She died February 24, 1892, leaving four children, two sons and two daughters, all of whom are living, and have reached maturity. They all reside with their father on west Fourth street. Carrie E., and Eda E., manage the home and the sons, Leon M., and Sidney J., are associated with their father in business. The sons show remarkable business ability and have a promising future.

Major David Elick

was born June 29, 1839 on the Damarin farm, in a house long since destroyed. It stood on the east side of the Damarin hill, with an orchard about it. His father, David Elick, and mother, Anna Leser, were stricken with cholera in 1854, both dying within a week, leaving six children, of which he was the oldest. The family was then divided, and David was taken into the home of Mr. Albert McFarland, Sr., then editor and proprietor of the Portsmouth Tribune. At the age of fourteen, he became carrier of the Portsmouth Tribune delivering the whole edition weekly on his little pony. As a boy, he was industrious and faithful, with great emphasis on these terms. He began at the bottom of the ladder, became office boy, roller boy, printer's devil, a fine expert compositor, and a job printer. He was then taken into partnership with Mr. Albert McFarland, Sr., and for many years owned a half interest in the Portsmouth Tribune, and continued as such until his removal to Minneapolis, Minn. Notwithstanding he was a newspaper man all his life, he never could tell a lie. That was a part of the business he could not learn. He was noted for his integrity. He was amiable and generous and if there ever was a Christian, he was one. Anything mean, low or wrong, shocked his entire nature. He never had an enemy because no man in his senses could be his enemy. He had all the virtues of a perfect character. He was a lover of poetry, and often quoted it. He gained the notoriety of being the author of a short poem, "Beautiful Snow." He served in the militia during the Morgan raid and by his comrades was given the title of "Major" by which he was afterwards known. On November 21, 1879, he was married to Miss Amelia Meyers, of Portsmouth, Ohio. In 1883, they removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he and Mr. Alvord founded the "Commercial Bulletin," still in existence. In connection with this they published a musical journal, "The Church Choir," in which they were successful. No one ever left Portsmouth with more regret than he, for he was remarkably attached to his home and friends. In February, 1893, he contracted the grippe, bringing on other complications which terminated in an abscess of the left lung, thus causing his death, May 17, 1895, aged fifty-five years. He left a widow and two sons, Roy and Earl, the latter of whom died June 4, 1900, aged fifteen years and eleven months. Roy married Bessie, daughter of William A. Sherman of Milwaukee, Wis., January 1, 1903. Wherever Heaven is, the spirit of David Elick must be there for there would be no other suitable abode for it.

was born July 12, 1852, on Brush creek, Union township, a son of James Ellis, who has a sketch herein. He attended the common schools of his vicinity and started out for himself in 1873. On the 12th of February of that year, he began work in the Burgess rolling mill at Portsmouth, Ohio, as a puddler of steel and had charge of a furnace until 1878. For eleven years, he remained with the Burgess rolling mill, working in the open-hearth department. He quit their employment on February 13, 1898 just twenty-five years from the time he began. From that time he has worked in many different rolling mills in the country, first at Indianapolis, then at Ensley, Alabama. In April, 1898, he took charge of the steel department in Birmingham, Alabama, at the Republic Steel and Iron Company, and was superintendent of the open hearth department for one year. He came back to Portsmouth in May, 1899. He then went to Pittsburgh and worked for the Crucible Company for one month, and from there to Birmingham, where he worked for four months, but again he came back to Portsmouth, and went to Ensley, Alabama, in 1900. At this place he began with the Alabama Steel and Ship-building Company, April 1, 1900, and did efficient work for them during the period of his stay. He began work for the Portsmouth Steel and Iron Company, May 1, 1902, and is foreman of the open-hearth department.

Mr. Ellis is a single man. He resides with his brother William Ellis. He is a great student of Masonry, has taken the 32d degree, is a member of the Elks, and belongs to the Scioto Lodge of Odd Fellows, of Portsmouth. He is very fond of fraternal orders, and is a most useful man in them. He has never been a candidate for any office. He is a republican, a most congenial companion and a good friend.

He possesses high sense of honor and his dealings are most punctilious with all men. He is as good a representative of true manhood as can be found anywhere.

James Ellis

was born in 1817 in Ireland. He emigrated to New York in 1832. His father came later. On arriving at New York, he apprenticed himself to a marble cutter for seven years. In 1839, he came to Ohio. He married Margaret Garvin, daughter of Hugh Garvin, who came from Ireland, and directly after his marriage located on Brush creek on a farm. He had four sons: William, who works in the Portsmouth steel works; John Ellis, a foreman of the clay pottery works, at Findlay, Ohio; James, formerly an engineer of the Cincinnati division of the N. & W. railroad, but now a private watchman on Chillicothe street, and Hugh, a foreman of the open-hearth department of the Portsmouth steel works. Mr. Ellis gave up his farm in 1875 and resided in Portsmouth from that time until his death in 1884. His wife survived till 1893, when she died at the age of eighty-four years, ten months and fourteen days. They were both members of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. He was a republican, a man of the highest character, noted for all the cardinal virtues, and a man respected by all his friends.

Philip Emmert

was born at Bloom Furnace, Scioto county, Ohio, May 24, 1864. His parents were Peter and Catharene (Werd) Emmert, who came from Hesse, Germany, in 1848. His father was a trained gardener, but worked at Scioto furnace as collier. Philip's educational advantages were limited because he began hard work at an early age. His father died in 1874 and came to Portsmouth in 1876 and worked in the Ohio stove foundry for 12 years. He also worked some time at the Hanging Rock stove foundry and at the Portsmouth stove and range works. He left the foundry in 1890 and began business for himself in Portsmouth, where he remained two years and then went to New Boston at which place he has been the past ten years. In the spring of 1902, he and Charles Berchem opened a fine livery barn at New Boston. He has been a member of the school board of Clay township since 1898 and was elected trustee in 1901. He is a republican, and a member of the German Lutheran church. He married Emma Dielman, of Portsmouth, Ohio, daughter of John and Philipina Dielman, March 20, 1888. They have five children: Carl, Alma, John H., Maggie and Wilbur. Mr. Emmert is liberal minded, free hearted and sociable, and is well liked by his neighbors.

Oliver E. Emory

was born near Chaffin's Mill in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio, December 11, 1845. He is the son of Dearborn G. and Juliette (Chamberlain) Emory. His mother was the daughter of Wyatt Chamberlain, a soldier in the war of 1812, who came from Vermont in 1817, and settled on Pine creek. His father was born on Pine creek, in Vernon township. His paternal grandfather came from Connecticut in 1815. When Oliver was eight years old, his parents removed to the French Grant, and remained there for ten years returning to Chaffin's Mill in 1863. He attended the district schools in winter and worked at the furnace in the summer.

He earned his first hundred dollars by digging ore at Howard furnace, and spent it in order to finish his education at Wheelersburg. He taught school in 1867, and the same year opened a general store at Chaffin's Mill, where he continued eighteen months and then rented the mill which he operated one year. He contracted at Howard furnace in furnishing charcoal for one year, and then removed to California, Pike county, and opened a general store on a capital of $1,500, and has been engaged in the mercantile business ever since. He was Clerk of Marion township, Pike county from 1872 to 1875, Assessor in 1881, Justice of the Peace from 1887 to 1896, Treasurer in 1897 and 1898, and was elected Auditor of Pike county in the fall of 1901. He is a democrat, a member of the Alhambra Lodge K. of P. at California and a trustee of the Free-will Baptist church of that place.

He married Amanda A. Adams, daughter of Dr. H. Adams, of South Webster, February 16, 1868. She is the niece of Dr. J. B. Ray, Sr. He has but one child living Charles Merton who is attending the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. He had a daughter, wife of Dr. William Samson, now deceased.

The following is from one who knows him well: "He is a man of honest convictions, unusual courage, public spirited, unselfish and progressive. Nature favored him with endowment of health, which he never wasted by dissipation, or idleness. He improved all his opportunities in youth to secure the best education he could obtain. He is regarded by all who know him, as well as those who have dealt with him, as a model business man."

Frank Bliss Enslow

was born August 4, 1853, at Wheelersburg, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Andrew J. Enslow and his mother Nancy Bliss. He had a common school education. He left home in 1869, and was a civil engineer and surveyor in Tennessee until 1871. In that year his father moved to Huntington, West Virginia, and attended Marshall College there in 1871 and 1872. In 1872, he engaged in railroad contracting on the Chesapeake and Ohio, grading and masonry.

In the fall of 1873, he began the study of law with the Hon. Eustace Gibbons and was admitted to the bar in August, 1876. While a law student, he attended the ice business to support himself. Upon admission he opened a law office in Huntington. The firm was Gibson, Sims & Enslow for one year, then it became Sims & Enslow and has so continued ever since. He has been counsel for the Chesapeake & Ohio and for C. P. Huntington, in West Virginia, and generally engaged in corporation practice ever since he began the practice of law. He never has been a candidate for any office. He has been a democrat all his life. He was chairman of the State Gold Democratic committee in 1896. He is a vestryman in the Episcopal church at Huntington. He was married on November 30, 1881, to Mrs. Julia Buffington. They had one child Frank Jackson Enslow, now aged twenty. She died August 31, 1899. He was married the second time on April 16, 1901, to Mrs. Juliet Baldwin.

Mr. Enslow is a man of sterling character and integrity and one of the first men in his city. He is a good friend and always ready to assist his friends. As a lawyer he stands among the first in the state. He has an extraordinary will power and his energy is inexhaustible. When he takes up a subject he follows it to the end and his clients' interests are always safe in his hands and their interests receive every attention they deserve.

William C. Erwin

was born in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, November 30, 1866. He is the son of Robert Erwin and a great-grandson of Robert Erwin, who came to Ohio from Pennsylvania. He was of Irish descent, and settled first in Scioto county, near Portsmouth, at Jeffordsville, and removed from that place to Madison township about 1835. His son, Robert Erwin, was one of a family of eight children, as follows: Andrew, Samuel, Margaret, Robert, William, Eliis, James, and Julia. The mother of our subject was Hulda Rockwell, daughter of Jonathan and Martha Brown Rockwell, from New York and Virginia respectively. The paternal grandmother of William was Elizabeth Wallace who died in Madison township, at the age of eighty-four. Robert Erwin, the father of William, was a soldier in the civil war, in Company F, Ninety-first O. V. I. He entered the service August 22, 1862, and was mustered out with the company June 24, 1865. William spent most of his boyhood and youth in Madison township, where he received a common school education. He worked on the farm and attended school until 1890, when he engaged in business in an installment house at Columbus for about one year. He spent two years as a conductor and motorman on the street railroad at Portsmouth. In the spring of 1893, he removed with his parents to Harrison township. In 1899, he commenced the merchandise business which he still continues. He was Clerk of Harrison township in 1901 and 1902. He is a republican.

was born in Duerkheim, in the Palatinate, Germany, in the year 1835. He came to the United State in 1850, and located in New York city, where he engaged in business, continuing it until 1865. The following year he repaired to Cincinnati, remaining there until he came to Portsmouth, which was in 1889. February 23, 1889, he purchased the local brewery of Conrad Gerlach associating himself in this business with Oscar Knorr. He was actively connected with the brewery the remainder of his life. By his business sagacity and enterprise, he succeeded in making this brewery the best of its kind in this section of the state. He organized and was president of the Portsmouth Brewing and Ice Company. He was married in 1870, to Miss Pauline Rehfuess, of Cincinnati, Ohio. They had four children: Emilie, the wife of Doctor Crane, of Cincinnati; Paul, Juliet and Laura. The only fraternal order of which Mr. Esselborn was a member, was the Elks. He was for many years an esteemed and active member of Portsmouth Lodge No. 154. He was a progressive man. He was always ready to do his share in public enterprises and more than his share, in fact. He was honorable and upright in all his business dealings and was respected and esteemed by those with whom he came in contact. He was a man of loveable character and he had the sincere affection of the circle of friends who knew him best and appreciated him as a cultured, refined and kindly gentleman. He died May 6, 1900.

was born in Bracken county, Kentucky, October 29, 1820. His parents were Abraham and Esther (Turner) Evans, natives of Maryland, who died when he was very young. He remained in Kentucky until he was five or six years old, when he removed to Scioto county, Ohio, where he has since resided. He received a common school education. He has always been a farmer. He was township clerk for several years. He was a whig and is now a republican. He is a member of the Independent Baptist church at Friendship, Ohio. In November, 1854, he was married to Maria, daughter of Abel Bradford. He had three children by this marriage: Charles, deceased; Emory F., and Maria, the wife of James Tinsley, of Friendship, but now deceased. His wife died February 7, 1867.

In May, 1868, he was married to Miss Ella Murphy, daughter of David Whitman and Caroline McCalli Murphy. They have three children. His son Ernest graduated at the Ohio State University in the scientific course in 1892, and is now superintendent of the National Steel Company at Zanesville, Ohio. His son, William D. Evans, who was reared a farmer, is now engaged with the same company at Zanesville, Ohio. His daughter, Anna, has developed great talent in music. She is the organist of Bigelow M. E. church, and a teacher of music in the city of Portsmouth. Mr. Evans has one of the best farms in Scioto county, and devotes himself assiduously to its cultivation. He takes all the agricultural papers and magazines and tries to keep abreast with modern ideas in farming. He not only believes in doing his best in farming, but in the church and in the community as well. He keeps himself well informed on all subjects of current and general interest. He is an analytical reasoner on any subject he considers and his opinions on matters of public interest are always well considered and worthy of being followed. It is always pleasurable and profitable to converse with him. He is noted for his good judgment and wisdom in the every day affairs of life.

John William Evans

was born May 21, 1865, at Grayson, Carter county, Kentucky. His father was John Evans and his mother Mahala Ward. They were slaves and were freed by President Lincoln's proclamation in 1863. He resided in Kentucky until he was six years of age, when he came to Portsmouth, and lived with old Jerry Washington, a blind Samson, who turned the presses for the Times, Tribune and Press. His mother died when he was only four years old and he came to Portsmouth alone. He attended school in Portsmouth from 1871 until 1877, and then went to the Biggs House as dish washer until 1880. That year he became second barber on the steamer Bostona, and was on her for nine years. In 1889, he became head porter at the Biggs House, under George Babcock, and was there until 1900, when he was appointed janitor at the Court House, which employment he still holds. He was married June 26, 1900, to Henrietta Justice, a teacher in the Portsmouth public schools. Since 1889, he has been a Blue Lodge Mason, Trinity Lodge, No. 9, and has been Master of the lodge seven years. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias, Harmony Lodge, No. 33. He is a republican and is president of the Bruce Club, a republican political club, composed of colored men which was organized in 1897. He belongs on the outside of Allen chapel, M. E. church of Portsmouth. Mr. Evans is highly respected among the people of his race and possesses their confidence.

Ernest E. Everling

was born on Long Run, Scioto county, Ohio, January 19, 1864. He is the son of Ernest E. and Christine Everling, both of Hanover, Germany. His boyhood and youth were spent on the farm on Long Run, where he attended the district school near Peter Somer's. As a youth he was a farmer's helper. He is a democrat, a member of the Lutheran church and of the Portsmouth Lodge, A. O. U. W. He married Miss Lou Shearer, daughter of Joseph Shearer, of Munn's Run, March 1, 1885. They have six children: Gertrude, Geneva, Firman, Leslie, Howard and Gilbert. Ernest Everling has always been a hard worker. He settled on Munn's Run soon after his marriage, where he has cleared and improved a large area of land, most of which he cultivates in fruits. He has one of the best peach and apple orchards in the county and his strawberries are the finest in the market. He is a pleasant neighbor and well liked by those who know him best. He believes in the gospel of hard work and lives it. He makes no pretensions, but simply seeks to fill all his time with useful work. If he lives a long life, he will be rich and all the time will have set an example worthy of emulation.

Elmore Ellis Ewing

was born Feb. 16, 1840, at Ewington, Gallia county, Ohio. His father, George Ewing, was a farmer, mechanic, and merchant. His mother was Ann Knox, a daughter of William Knox. For his ancestry see the Ewing family in the Pioneer Record. Our subject was reared on his father's farm until he was seventeen years of age, attending public schools during the winter. He attended the Ewington academy for one year. He taught and attended the public schools until he was twenty years of age, when he entered the Ohio University as a freshman.

On July 31, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company A, 91st O. V. I. He was made Second Lieutenant on July 13, 1863 and First Lieutenant on July 20, 1864. On July 24, 1864, while leading his company in the battle of Winchester, he was shot through the left lung and left by his comrades for dead. He was taken to the home of a Union man, John Cooper, who with his wife, nursed him back to comparative health. His friends in the meanwhile mourned him as dead. Upon reaching his home in Gallia county he found his mother preparing the church for his funeral sermon the next day. During the war he strove to uplift the camp life of his soldiers. As they sat by the camp fire, he instructed them in branches they had not learned. This instruction gave to many a thirst for education which was satisfied on their return from the war. He was engaged in all the battles in which the regiment participated up to the time of his wound. On December 4, 1864, he was discharged on account of his wound. Directly after his discharge, he came to Scioto county.

In September, 1865, he was married to Miss Minerva Folsom, daughter of James S. Folsom. In October, 1865, he was elected a teacher in the Portsmouth High School at a salary of $30.00 per month. He taught less than one year, and then went into the retail and wholesale queensware business in Portsmouth, Ohio, and continued in it until 1895, a period of thirty years. He was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth in 1873 and 1874. In the same year he was trustee of the property assigned by Charles Slavens for the benefit of the city of Portsmouth. In 1875 and 1876, he was a member of the Board of Education. In 1876, he published his history of the schools of Portsmouth, which was published by the state and used at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. On June 7, 1878, he was elected to the City Council of Portsmouth, to succeed John P. Terry, who had resigned. In April, 1880, he was elected a cemetery trustee of the city of Portsmouth, for three years, and on June 1, 1883, was reappointed to the same position. On May 8, 1882, he was appointed a trustee of the Scioto county Children's Home and served until March 1, 1893.

He was a republican in his political views. He was a member of the city Board of Elections in Portsmouth, from 1889 to 1895. He was a prominent member of Bigelow Methodist Episcopal church in Portsmouth, during his entire life in the city and was superintendent of the Sunday schools of that church for twenty-seven years. He was Grand Regent of the Royal Arcanum of Ohio, from 1892 to 1893, and representative to the Supreme Council 1894 to 1896. He was always interested in his surviving comrades in the civil war, and took great interest in the Grand Army of the Republic. He served as Post Commander of the local Post. He was a member of the Loyal Legion. In 1895, he accepted a position with the Welsbach Commercial Company, and removed to the Pacific coast, where he became prominent in all the fraternal organizations to which he belonged in Ohio. Mr. Ewing was a man of fine and commanding presence. In all parliamentary bodies his genius shone. He was a fluent, easy speaker and could always command attention in any deliberative body or public meeting. His remarks were uniformly apropos and to the point. He was a born poet, and could compose poems whenever the occasion demanded. As a toastmaster at banquets and social functions, he was much in demand and there his talents for such occasions shone resplendent. He has left poems of which any poet might be proud. He had fine literary tastes and cultivated them all the time. He was genial and courteous to all, a pleasant and agreeable companion. He was highly esteemed by the public as will appear by the numerous municipal offices he was called upon to fill; and he discharged the duties of all of them in the most complete and efficient manner. His church and fraternal work he took up on the Pacific coast with the same interest and zeal he manifested at his home in Ohio. In San Francisco, he was on the official board of the Central M. E. church, chaplain of the Grand Army Post, to which he belonged there, a District Deputy of the Royal Arcanum, an officer of the Ohio Society, etc. He was not happy except when fully employed, and social functions were his delight, and his part in the same was pleasing to all concerned. He was a man of a high sense of honor and of the most tender sensibilities. He died in the midst of his labors, October 20, 1900, and was interred in the Oak Grove cemetery at Delaware, Ohio. He left a widow and one daughter, an only child, Mrs. Jessie Ewing Stokes, wife of Professor Horace A. Stokes, superintendent of the schools at Delaware, Ohio.

James Henderson Farmer

was born November 10, 1850, at Hanging Rock, Ohio. His father was James William Farmer and his mother was Elizabeth (Griffin) Farmer. He is the third of fifteen children. His father is living at the age of seventy-seven and his mother also, at the age of seventy-two. Of the fifteen children there were five sons and ten daughters, of whom four sons are living and six daughters. The daughters are all married. He was raised at Pine Grove Furnace while John G. Peebles was manager, and attended the Sunday school of which Mr. Peebles was superintendent. He attended school at Pine Grove and received only a common school education. He entered the employ of Means, Kyle & Company at the age of twenty-three, as assistant manager of the furnace and remained three years. He then became book-keeper and storekeeper for the company at New Castle and was there seven years. During the year of 1883 he worked as salesman for J. J. Towell & Company, dry goods merchants. He was storekeeper at Little Aetna during 1884 and 1885. He farmed opposite Hanging Rock in Kentucky, from 1885 to 1888. He kept a general store in Haverhill from 1888 to 1894, and came to Portsmouth where he has since resided. He owned and operated the East End feed store till November, 1898, when it was burned. He then started a coal business and implement store which he gave up in 1901, and opened a general store.

He was married March 15, 1875, to Naomi M. Williams daughter of Henry Williams, of Greenup, Kentucky. She is a descendant of James Williams, a Revolutionary soldier. (See his sketch on page 214.)

They have five children: Henry, Jane Myrtle, Mary, Sarah and Elizabeth. Our subject is a republican and a member of the Manley M. E. church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and also of the Masonic order. Mr. Farmer is a citizen highly esteemed in the entire circle of his acquaintance.

Ira C. Farney,

one of the prominent citizens of Sciotoville, is a native of that place, born November 23, 1867. He is a son of Van B. Farney, who died November 5, 1872, and Minerva (Coriell) Farney, with whom he makes his home on a farm in the eastern part of the town. His father, Van B. Farney, was a native of Virginia, born March 21, 1836, and came to Sciotoville with his parents when four years old. He obtained a good common school education, and at the age of 17 he entered the employ of the late Robert S. Wynn, a prominent contractor on public works in those days. At the age of eighteen, he commenced contracting himself and built many of the bridges, piers, etc. that were constructed during the fifties and sixties. At intervals, during the winters, he taught in the public schools of Sciotoville and Harrison township. He was the prime mover in the organization of, and the largest stockholder in the Salamander Fire Brick Company, which was operated by the partnership known as Farney, Murray & Company; and he was instrumental in organizing the corporation of the Scioto Fire Brick Company, which absorbed the Salamander and in which, he was a charter member.

His mother, Minerva (Coriell) Farney, was born in Harrison township September 3, 1838, and was the daughter of Ira and Serena (White) Coriell. She taught five years in the public schools, and was married to Mr. Farney September 30, 1860. She is a sister of William B. and Alfred J. Coriell of Harrison township, and Mrs. Harriet Wilcox, deceased.

Ira C. Farney, the subject of this sketch, is one of five children, viz: Mrs. Serena Shump, born August 30, 1861, wife of Theodore Q. Shump, of Portsmouth; Ella Winnifrede, who was born June 30, 1863, and died April 2, 1878; William L., who was born October 16, 1865, and is now living in Cincinnati; and Hattie Amelia, who was born October 24, 1869, and died June 20, 1901. He was reared on the farm and attended the public schools of Sciotoville, obtaining a good common school education. On January 1, 1890, he entered the employ of the Scioto Fire Brick Company as office assistant under the late C. P. Lloyd, president. On May 1, following, he was promoted to chief storekeeper, which position he filled until January 1, 1894, when he returned to the office and was given sole charge of the books. He continued in this capacity until January 1, 1900, when he became assistant superintendent and traveling salesman, which position he now fills.

Our subject is a member of the Christian church and is now and has been superintendent of the Sciotoville Christian Sunday school almost consecutively for the past fifteen years. In politics, he is a staunch republican.

Mr. Farney is a man of fine physical build and appearance. He is rather domestic in his habits and tenderly cares for his widowed mother. They together occupy the home of his boyhood days. He is an active Sunday school worker and cheerfully supports all movements for the improvement and elevation of society.

William Evert Feazel

was born at Barboursville, West Virginia, April 10, 1860. He is the son of William E. Feazel and Amancetta Virginia Lusher, his wife. He lived in West Virginia and received a common school education at Ceredo. He came to Scioto county in 1887 and located at Sciotoville. He married Elizabeth Kleffner, October 30, 1888. He engaged in the mercantile business in 1891, at first on a small scale, but now his business has grown until he has one of the largest general stocks in the county and employs several salesmen. He is one of the live, active, pushing, driving, go ahead members of the community. He is progressive in business and is ever enlarging and extending. He has the talent of combining and would make an excellent manager of any extensive combination in business.

Daniel H. Feurt

is a farmer in the French Grant and was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, January 22, 1836. His father, Daniel Feurt, was the son of Francis and Mary Feurt of the French Grant. The mother of our subject was Frances Henry, daughter of James Henry, of Virginia, and granddaughter of Rev. John Lee, also of Virginia, a pioneer Baptist preacher in southern Ohio, in the twenties and thirties. The parents of our subject moved from Lawrence county to the French Grant in 1848, where he spent his boyhood. He received a common school education, and on reaching his majority followed farming until the winter of 1863 and 1864 when he engaged in flat-boating for one year. In the spring of 1865, he accepted a situation with James Forsythe & Company, of Empire Furnace as storekeeper, remaining with the firm until they decided to wreck the furnace and discontinue business.

In the spring of 1870, he accepted a position with the Charcoal Iron Company at Howard Furnace as book-keeper, which he held for two years. He was then given the position as manager of the furnace, holding the same for five years, and in the meantime purchasing stock in the concern to the amount of $2,000. He then sold his furnace stock and moved to the farm where he now resides. He remained on the farm for two years.

In the winter of 1879 and 1880, he accepted a position with Means, Kyle & Co. at Pine Grove Furnace as book-keeper and assistant manager, which position he held until March, 1884 when he returned to his farm where he still resides. In the fall of 1896, he engaged in the grocery, implement and hardware business with W. H. McCurdy, at Wheelersburg, Ohio, which business is carried on by Mr. McCurdy.

Our subject has always been a republican. He was raised a regular Baptist, but identified himself with the Methodist Episcopal church to which his wife and children belong.

He was married to Caroline McNeal of Scioto county, September 24, 1857. They have five children, one of which died at the age of ten months. Their names are Mary Luella, married to G. W. Fay of Richmondade, Ross county, Ohio; Carrie E., deceased; Frank Lee, of Seattle, Washington, married to Grace Mackintosh of Lawrence county, Ohio; Clara C., married to W. H. McCurdy, Jr., and now resides at Wheelersburg; Bessie H., a teacher in the public schools.

Mr. Feurt is a citizen who always undertakes to do his part in the community and in the opinion of his neighbors, succeeds. He is a good example of munity and, in the opinion of his neighbors succeeds. He is a good example of what the American citizen should be.

Henry Clinton Feurt

was born October 7, 1839, in Scioto county, Ohio, in the French Grant. His father was Henry Feurt, and his mother's maiden name was Mary A. Winkler, a sister of John A. Winkler. His great-grandfather was Peter Feurt, a native of the state of New Jersey. His great-great-grandfather was Francis Feurt, a native of France who emigrated to this country before the Revolution. See notice of Francis Feurt, in the Pioneer Record in this work. Peter Feurt came to the Northwest Territory in 1795. He acted as an Indian Scout between Maysville and Pittsburg. He married Iavinia Critzer, in New Jersey. He brought his wife and settled in the French Grant where all of his children were born.

Henry Feurt, father of our subject was born October 6, 1815, and died October 6, 1873. His wife, Mary A. Winkler, was born in 1817, and is still living.

Henry Clinton had only a common school education, and was always a farmer. From his birth till 1865, he resided in Green township, in the French Grant. He resided in Clay township, north of Portsmouth, twenty years, where he was a member of the School Board for nine years from 1875 to 1884. In 1885, he purchased one-half of lot 19, all of lot 20 and one-half of lot 14, in the French Grant, and moved to his present residence in Green township. He was married in January, 1867, to Caroline, a daughter of John D. Feurt. They have two children: Albert L., a farmer in the Scioto Valley, and Jennie O.

Mr. Feurt is a member of Lucasville Lodge, 465, F. & A. M. He has always been a farmer and a successful one. He is a republican in his political views. In 1893, he was elected one of the Commissioners of Scioto county on the Republican ticket, by 4,356 votes, to 3,131 for his opponent, William H. Kinker. In 1896, he was re-elected by a vote of 5,463 to 2,671 for his opponent, William J. Bennett, Jr., and served until September 20, 1900. When his first term expired January 11, 1897, he was appointed to serve till September 20, 1897. He made a most efficient officer. As a citizen, Mr. Feurt believes in progress and public improvements. He tries all new methods and adopts the best. He is a useful citizen, highly respected by the entire circle of his acquaintance. As a farmer, he has been very successful and has set a good example to his neighbors.

William Oldfield Feurt

was born March 10, 1858, in Scioto county, Ohio. His father was John D. Feurt, and his mother's maiden name was Maria Oldfield. He was brought up a farmer, and resided on the same place all his life. He received a common school education. In 1878, he took a commercial course in a Pittsburg Business College, and since then has followed farming. He was married September 30, 1890, to Miss Fannie Crawford, daughter of Andrew Crawford. They have one child, a daughter, Catharine, born March 23, 1891. In his political views he is a republican, but is not a member of any secret societies.

Mr. Feurt is regarded as one of the model valley farmers. He knows how to manage and does it, and as a result has been very successful in his business. He possesses all of the domestic virtues and is the ideal citizen.

John Findeis

was born in Bavaria, Germany, December 17, 1827. His father was John Findeis. He came to the United States in 1851 and located in Pittsburg, remained there three years and went to Louisville, Kentucky, where he married Mary Hormikel, a native of Germany. He subsequently removed to Monroe, Ohio, and remained there seven years and then came to Portsmouth and went into the liquor business from which he retired in 1892. He has nine children: Charles; John; Lizzie; Mary, deceased, wife of George Fuchtinger; Margaret, deceased, wife of Herman Miller; Annie, wife of Charles Harwood; Minnie, wife of William Galtz; Jacob and Rosa at home. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and Harugari societies. Mr. Findeis was always noted for honor and fair dealing with all whom he had business. He has a circle of old German friends whom he meets almost daily and when they get together they have most enjoyable times. The "fatherland" is not forgotten and the old German customs are duly observed. No one gets more pleasure from the society of his friends than Mr. Findeis and no one is respected more than they do him.

Andrew Jackson Finney

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, October 2, 1840, the son of George H. Finney, who was also a native of Scioto county, born in 1818. His mother's maiden name was Eliza Fullerton. His education was received in the common schools.

On the 20th of April, 1861, he enlisted for three months, in Co. D, 22nd O. V. I. and served until August 19, 1861. On October 27, 1862, he enlisted for three years in the 8th Independent Company of Ohio Volunteer Sharp Shooters. He was appointed Sergeant, March 9, 1863, First Sergeant, November 19, 1864, and was mustered out with the Company, July 19, 1865. His father, George H. Finney, enlisted August 10, 1862, at the age of forty-four, for three years, in Co. D, First Ohio Heavy Artillery. He was appointed a Corporal on the 1st of October, 1864, and was afterwards made Sergeant. He was mustered out June 20, 1865.

Our subject engaged in farming until 1871, when he sold his farm and moved to Greenup county, Kentucky. He returned to Scioto county in 1872. In 1873 he became a merchant in Powellsville and remained there ten years. He was postmaster at Powellsville from January, 1873, until December, 1882, when he resigned. He was elected land appraiser of Vernon township in 1870 and served for one year. He served as Justice of the Peace in Greene township from 1873 to 1879. He was Treasurer of Greene township from 1881 to 1883. In 1882, he was elected Sheriff of Scioto county on the republican ticket. The vote for him was 3,286, and for his competitor, William B. Williams, 2,915, a majority for Finney of 371. In 1884, he was re-elected Sheriff, by a vote of 4,241 to 3,080 for his opponent John Neudoerfer, his majority being 1,161. He was a very obliging and capable officer and discharged the duties of the office to the satisfaction of every one.

Upon retiring from the Sheriff's office, he engaged as a clothing merchant for about sixteen months, when he entered the retail grocery business, continuing the same until 1892, when he established a wholesale department under the firm name of A. J. Finney & Sons. The members of the firm were Oscar T. Finney, traveling salesman; Walter A. Finney, city salesman; and Captain Finney, general manager. He was elected Clerk of the Common Pleas court, November 8, 1898. He received 3,984 votes to 2,847 for Thomas B. Lawson, majority, 1,137.

On February 22, 1862, he married Levina Wait, daughter of Benjamin Franklin Wait of Wait's Station. They have had eleven children, five of whom are deceased. Those surviving are: Eliza, the wife of James Chabot; Mary, the wife of Dustin W. Gustin, City Marshal; Frank B., an attorney of Portsmouth; Walter in the grocery business; Ora, engaged in the telephone business in Chicago and Clay.

"Jack" Finney, as he is best known, is the most genial man in Scioto county. He knows everybody and all their relations. He is the greatest hand-shaker in the county, and it is all genuine and not put on. The fact that he has held numerous public offices and trusts, demonstrates that the people appreciate a man of his character; and with all this he has administered well every office he undertook, and has been true to every trust imposed upon him. At this time no one enjoys a greater measure of the confidence of the people of Scioto county than Capt. A. J. Finney.

James H. Finney

was born May 27, 1868, in Scioto county. His father's name is George H. Finney, and his mother's maiden name was Alice Staten. His grandfather, George H. Finney, Sr., came from Vermont. When our subject was nine years old, his father moved to Sciotoville, where he attended the schools and obtained such an education as the Sciotoville schools could give him. He began teaching at the age of eighteen. His first school was in Union township, in the Vogel district. He continued district school teaching for six years, when he became superintendent of the Lucasville schools in 1893. He remained there until he resigned December 21, 1901, and took employment with the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. He was married to Miss Lillian C. Wheeler, August 1, 1894. They have one child James Vaughn born August 6, 1897. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the Methodist church at Lucasville. He has been County School Examiner since August 1, 1899.

Mr. Finney is a progressive young American who believes in doing his best all the time and in every work before him. As a teacher he achieved distinguished success and in the insurance field he bids as fair to achieve distinction as in the other. He will be found in the front rank in any enterprise he undertakes and combines all those happy elements which insure success.

Walter Andrew Finney

was born April 19, 1876. He is the son of Andrew Jackson Finney, Clerk of the Court. His mother was Levina Wait, daughter of B. F. Wait. His father moved to Portsmouth when he was six years of age and he attended school in Portsmouth until he was fifteen. He then clerked in a retail grocery for his father for three and a half years when his father went into the wholesale business. He was clerk for him in that business for four years. He then went into business with James A. Chabot, his brother-in-law, for one year. At the end of that time he went into partnership with his father in the wholesale grocery business as A. J. Finney & Son. He was manager of the Portsmouth Telephone Company from October, 1890 to 1891. He then went into the retail grocery business at 122 Gallia street and has been in that ever since. He was married May 6, 1897, to Cora Fullerton, daughter of William Fullerton, of Wheelersburg, Ohio. He is a republican but not a secret society man. He is not a member of any church but believes in the broad doctrines of humanity, and thinks he can make his fortune by attending to his own business and he is working on that line.

was born in Bavaria, Germany, April 31, 1830. His father, Joseph Fisher, was a farmer. He died in 1830, at the age of 38. Our subject came to the United States in the spring of 1847, and located in Portsmouth. He had learned the shoe-maker's trade in Germany and worked as a journey-man two years in Portsmouth. He then opened a shop in Greenupsburg, Kentucky, but not liking it, removed to Wheelersburg, Ohio. He remained here for 13 years and while there became acquainted with the late Dr. Cyrus M. Finch, and they became very intimate friends. While in Wheelersburg, Mr. Fisher carried on a shoe store.

On October 29, 1850, he was married to Louise Herndon Welch, a native of Bath county, Kentucky. She was born on September 26, 1828. Her parents located at Wheelersburg, in 1835. She was a sister of Mrs. George W. Flanders. They had no children but reared a niece, Miss Libby Kennedy, who married James T. McCormick. She died a few years afterwards, leaving two children.

On October 11, 1863, our subject enlisted in Co. M, of the 9th Ohio Cavalry as a private, was immediately made hospital steward, and served until the close of the war. He was mustered out at Lexington, North Carolina, July 20, 1865. Dr. Cyrus M. Finch was appointed surgeon of this regiment October 5, 1863, and as the surgeon was always allowed to choose his own steward, he selected Dr. Fisher.

The regiment participated in the following battles: Florence Ala., April 13, 1864; Center Star, Ala., May 16, 1864; Rousseau's Raid in Georgia and Alabama, July 22, 1864; East Point, Ga., Aug. 30, 1864; Waynesboro, Ga., Dec. 4, 1864; near Savannah, Ga., Aug. 30, 1864; Aiken, S. C., Feb. 11, 1865; Winnsborough, S. C. Feb. 22, 1865; Monroe's, N. C., March 10, 1865; Averysboro, N. C., March 16, 1865; Raleigh, N. C., April 13, 1865.

He developed quite a liking for his position in the service and on his return from war he studied medicine for a period of two years for the purpose of qualifying himself as an expert druggist. He opened up a drug store in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1867, and continued the business on Second and Washington streets until 1871. In 1873, he purchased the property on the north-west corner of Sixth and Chillicothe streets and built a drug store, which he occupied. He continued in the business there along until February, 1890, when he entered into a partnership with Philip M. Streich. The firm was known as Fisher & Streich. This business continued until July, 1901, when he sold out to Mr. Streich.

As a citizen and business man Dr. Fisher was very popular. He never had any enemies. He was always a democrat of the very strongest kind but never made himself offensive as such, to his friends in the opposite party. He was a candidate for member of the Board of Education in his ward in Portsmouth, Ohio, a number of times and was always elected, serving for a period of ten years. He was a very useful member, generally serving on the committee on school supplies and school buildings, and every duty connected with that office was faithfully performed by him. He was always at the command of his party and was a candidate for office whenever they needed him, but never for any office which would interfere with his business. He was a member of the city Hospital Board for several years. He was better qualified for Cemetery Trustee than any man in Portsmouth, as he took a great interest in having the cemetery kept in the very best order. He was a candidate for that office in 1891 and 1897, but owing to being a democrat he was defeated. He was a candidate for Water Works Trustee on the democratic ticket in 1898. He received quite a large vote, but was not elected. He is a member of the G. A. R. and has always took a great interest in the affairs of that organization. His heart is always warm for his comrades among the old soldiers of the Civil War.

He was uniformly successful in business and made a great deal of money. He was an excellent business man in everything he undertook. He was at one time president of the Central Savings bank of Portsmouth, Ohio, and afterwards vice-president of the same institution, and has been a member of the Board of Directors. His wife died August 6, 1891.

On September 30, 1895, he was married to Mrs. C. Bowers, of Cincinnati, Ohio, widow of William P. Bowers, who was born in Stark county, Ohio, and came to Portsmouth in 1871, to act as foreman in the Agricultural works. He had served for three years in the army in the 76th O. V. I. He died September 4, 1884, in Portsmouth. His daughter, Lillian, married Charles W. Zell, of Newport, Ky., formerly of Portsmouth.

Since 1900, Dr. Fisher has been unable on account of failing health to attend to any business. He spends his winters in Florida and his summers at Portsmouth and takes life easy. He has a host of warm friends and no known enemies. He was never a man to provoke or create antagonisms. His course has been run and he is simply waiting the final call, but has had as much pleasure and enjoyment out of this life as any of his contemporaries.

Henry Folsom

was born February 10, 1847 at Junior Landing. His father was James Smith Folsom and his mother was Sarah Bennett. He was the youngest of ten children. He was brought up on his father's farm and attended the district school until he was 16 years of age. He then attended an academy at Sewickley, Pennsylvania, and then spent one year at the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, Ohio.

In 1865, he engaged in farming on his father's farm and continued until 1878. In 1879 he went on the Vincent farm. From 1880 to 1887 he had charge of the flour and feed mill at Ironton, Ohio, which he operated. In the latter year, he returned to the Folsom home farm and has been there ever since. He farms 326 acres of the very finest land, located in the French Grant, Green township. He makes a business of raising Hereford cattle, and has been engaged in that for ten years. He has always been a republican.

On October 22, 1879, he was married to Effie A. Marshall, daughter of Alfred Marshall, of Marietta, Ohio. They have nine children: James Alfred; Anna M.; Edith who died at the age of 3 years; William Henry, died at the age of 18 months; Grace B.; Effie May; Pearl Louis, Nancy Helen, and Lucy Jeanette.

Henry Folsom is today one of the substantial farmers of the county. He is strictly honorable in all his dealings, in which he is very conscientious. He is always obliging, and his standing in the community where he lives, is the best. He is loyal, patriotic, public spirited, and always well up to the front in all matters for the good of mankind. He has a delightful family and home.

Abraham Forsythe

was born in Adams county, April 24, 1837. His father was Jacob Forsythe, and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Chapman, a daughter of John Chapman. He received a common school education. He was brought up a farmer. He studied surveying and taught school from 1855 to 1873, in Adams and Scioto counties. He came to Rarden in 1868, and has resided there ever since. He bought the farm where he now resides, in 1877. He served in the 141st Ohio Volunteer Infantry Company K. He was married April 25, 1861, to Mary Jane Moore. They have the following children: Sarah Rebecca married William Keyes, resides at Rarden; John Jacob, married, lives at Rarden; Mary Alice, married John Burkett, resides near Rarden; Minnie, married Franklin R. Wallace, resides at Rarden; William F., married, was killed in a stone quarry by accident in 1898, leaving a widow and four children; Evaline, married William Penn, and resides near Otway; Nola, married Grant Willard, resides at Otway, Ohio; Corda, married Truman Newman, resides at Rarden; Mabel, at home. Mr. Forsythe is a democrat in his political views, and is a believer in the Methodist doctrines.

John R. Foster

was born in Richland county, Ohio, near Mansfield, at the old family homestead of the Connolleys, in 1850. His father was William Foster and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Connolley, who died from cholera in 1851, leaving our subject and his little sister, Anna, to the mercy of relatives. His uncle Mr. James Connolley, brought them to Portsmouth, at the ages of six and four respectively. His education was obtained in the Portsmouth Public Schools. He was employed in his uncle's store in Portsmouth until he was twenty-five or twenty-six years of age. He then attended the Commercial College in Cincinnati, and was afterwards in the employ of Lehman, Richmond & Co., for two years. He lost his position here through a prolonged siege of typhoid fever.

He visited Mr. J. C. Staggs, of Frankfort, Ross county, Ohio, and while there a partnership was formed under the name of Staggs & Foster. They bought the old and well established dry goods business of Mr. D. C. Anderson, in 1878, and here he met Miss Belle Gunning, a teacher in the Public Schools of Frankfort. She was a daughter of James A. Gunning. They were married June 3rd, 1880. Mr. Foster left Frankfort in 1884, and went to Chillicothe, and engaged in the wholesale hat business, under the firm name of Foster, Gunning & Fullerton.

In the fall of 1885, this firm dissolved by mutual consent, and Mr. Foster and family moved to Portsmouth. In January, 1886, he engaged with the wholesale firm of Towell, McFarland & Sanford, as a traveling salesman, remained with the firm when it changed to Sanford, Varner & Co., and to Sanford, Storrs & Varner, and is still with them. In the sixteen years that he has been with this firm, he has played no small part in helping to build the solid foundation of their business.

He has two sons: Ralph Akin born October 31, 1881; Louis Adair, born July 28, 1890. Formerly he was a democrat, but since the Blaine campaign, he has been an out and out republican on national elections; but in local elections, he votes for the best man. In his youth and early manhood, he was a member of All Saints church; but on going to Frankfort he united with the Presbyterian church of that village. While he lived in Portsmouth, he and his wife were members of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Foster was always a prominent Sunday School worker, and was generally superintendent of the Sunday school wherever he was. In 1900 Mr. Foster removed with his family to Columbus, Ohio, where he now resides.

John Robert Foster

To use this name only, no one would understand who was intended, but when it is said this is "Boss" Foster, every citizen of Scioto county will think at once of the distinguished citizen of Carey's Run on the west side, who bears that pseudonym. In fact, Foster has borne the name of "Boss" so long and so persistently, that he thinks it is his real name and "John Robert" is a myth of his childhood. He was born March 8, 1844, at Maysville, Ky., but is not proud of the fact. "Boss" is about the staunchest republican to be found anywhere and is not proud of Kentucky, his birthplace, because it is a democratic state. His father was Joshua Foster and his mother was Eliza Frizell, a cousin of the late Dr. Frizell, of Buena Vista.

Our subject spent the first four years of his life in Maysville, Ky., and then his parents took him to Black Oak Bottom, in Lewis county, Kentucky, opposite Buena Vista, and resided there till he was eight years of age. It was while residing at Black Oak Bottom that the name of "Boss" was fastened on to him. There were about a half dozen John Fosters in the neighborhood and it was perplexing to distinguish between them. One of these Johns discovered a masterful spirit in our subject and gave him the name of "Boss." Every one who knew the boy, recognized the appropriateness of the name and gave it to him. It is now a part of himself.

In 1852, his father removed to Scioto county, and our subject has resided in Washington township ever since. There he obtained his schooling and all the ideas which have dominated his subsequent life. His father was a Justice of the Peace of the township in 1857 and 1859, and it was then that "Boss" obtained his predilection for the administration of Justice. His father was also assessor of the township from 1857 to 1859, and died in 1862. Nothing ever went on in the community but what "Boss" Foster was in it. So when the civil war broke out, he enlisted August 30, 1861, in Co. B, 22nd O. V. I. commanded by Capt. Oliver Wood. He remained in the service till November 1, 1865. He served as a private till October 31, 1864, when he was made a corporal and transferred to Co. B, 22nd Battalion. An error in the Ohio roster puts him as enlisted in September 1861, when he enlisted in August and it has August 28, 1865, as the date of his discharge, when he really served till November 1, 1865. He is proud of his military record and does not want it abbreviated in the slightest. Today he is physically one of the best preserved of the survivors of the war of 1861.

"Boss" had an ambition for township honors and in 1876 and 1877, he was a constable of his township. Hanging about the throne of Justice in Washington township, made "Boss" ambitious to occupy it and he was Justice of the Peace from 1882 to 1897, a period of fifteen years. His administration of the office was unique. He would give parties justice whether they wanted it or not and woe to the offender to whom Justice Foster was called on to punish. Once while Justice, one of the Culp's went up the run with a howling jag. He was offending and terrifying every one. As he came opposite the residence of Justice Foster, the latter went out and commanded the peace. This only made Culp worse and Foster thereupon pounced on Culp and gave him one of the worst beatings he or any one ever had. Culp had Foster arrested for assault and battery. The writer defended "Boss" and had the complaint dismissed on the ground that when a Justice commanded the Peace, he had the right to maintain it by physical force. Foster worked a stone quarry till 1870. He then moved on Carey's Run and has resided there ever since.

On February 25, 1872, he was married to Lydia Crain, daughter of Ora Crain. He has three children: Rachel, the wife of John Millison, who resides with him; Oscar R. and Nat V.

He was doorkeeper in the Ohio Senate in 1894 and 1896. "Boss" is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He does not aspire to be prominent in spiritual matters, but thinks his strongest point in religion is what he can do when the contribution box passes. "Boss" makes a first class citizen.

He likes to be a leader and if Washington township should ever relapse into barbarism, "Boss" would be a chief over there. The newspapers are very fond of writing up "Boss's" peculiarities every now and then. They seem to enjoy it and so does "Boss." He is as impervious to newspaper criticism as a rhinoceros hide. He is never sensitive on any subject and is always willing to be criticised to any extent. He possesses an inexhaustible stock of self-confidence.

Otho Davis Foster, Sr.,

was born August 18, 1836, in Maysville, Kentucky. His parents were Joshua F. Foster and Alice (Flusant) Foster. He resided there until 1848, when his father moved to Black Oak Bottom, Ky., where he resided until 1852, when he came to Washington township, Scioto county, Ohio, where our subject was reared a farmer and followed that occupation until he enlisted in Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery October 22, 1861, as a private. He was promoted to First Sergeant October, 1864, and to First Lieutenant February 10, 1865, and was mustered out July 4, 1865. The battles in which he participated will be found under the title "Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery." After the war, he spent two years in Missouri. From 1867 until 1880, he was on a farm in Washington township. In 1880, he became city agent for Cuppett & Webb, lumber dealers, and remained in their employ until March, 1888, when he was made superintendent of the Infirmary. He held this position until his death.

September 9, 1860, he was married to Miss Lucinda Shaw. There were six children of this marriage, two deceased and four surviving: Otho D. Jr., Ora and James, living in Scioto county, and William in the west. Our subject had been a member of the Baptist church since 1832. He was a prominent Odd Fellow and an earnest member of the G. A. R. He died December 15, 1894. He was a man liked by everyone. His army history and his history in connection with the management of the county Infirmary demonstrated, that he was a man true to every duty. He was modest and retiring, but always did his duty in every situation.

Otho Davis Foster, Jr.,

son of Otho Davis Foster, whose sketch is above, was born in Washington township, Scioto county, February 22, 1862. Our subject attended the schools of Washington township. At sixteen, he began life on his own account as a farmer. Then he turned his attention to carriage painting. From 1885 to 1887, he worked at carriage and house painting in Lincoln, Omaha and Kearney, Nebraska. He was married March 22, 1887 in Omaha, Nebraska, to Euralia North of Franklin county, Missouri. They came to Portsmouth soon after where he has resided ever since. He has had two children; one died in infancy, his surviving child is Alma Virginia. He has always been a republican and is a member of the Baptist church and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He follows the trade of a house painter and is regarded as one of the best workmen in the city. He is a member of the Commercial Club and is esteemed as one of the best citizens.

James Gault Freeman,

of Otway, Ohio, was born at that place March 3, 1835. His father was Moses Freeman and his mother's maiden name was Margaret McCormick. His father and mother were both born in Adams county. His grandfather, Michael Freeman, was born in Maryland. His father and mother had four children, three daughters and one son. Mary Jane, who married Joseph W. Tracy; Elizabeth H. Jones, wife of T. H. B. Jones, who resides near Otway, and Sarah E., married Joseph Reynolds, a resident of Otway. The father died August 10, 1851 at the age of 43 years and six months, of a fever. The mother survived until March, 1900.

Our subject was the fourth child. He had a common school education. He was one of the teachers of the public schools of the county for about twenty years. He began this occupation at the age of sixteen and gave it up at the age of thirty-six. During his life, from time to time, he has followed the occupation of farming, and later merchandising. He was a Justice of the Peace of Brush Creek township for eighteen years and Clerk of the township for twenty-seven years. He was made Clerk and Justice of the Peace of the township as soon as he became of age. In his political views he has always been a democrat. In 1873 he was the choice of the party for representative of the county, the late George Johnson being the republican candidate. The vote stood 2,510 for Johnson and 2,183 for Freeman, majority 327, a very complimentary vote to Mr. Freeman, and the number of votes he received was precisely the same number as for the democratic candidate for Governor, at the same election, the Hon. William Allen.

He was a member of the Methodist church from the age of thirteen until the age of thirty-five, then he severed his connection and became a member of the Christian Union church, and has been a member of it ever since. In the Methodist church, he held the office of circuit steward. In the Christian Union church, when each local organization had three elders, leading, financial and recording, he occupied in turn all three of these positions.

He was married September 11, 1856 to Eliza Tracy, and she died February 21, 1899. He has had five children, all sons, two of them died in infancy. His son, Joseph A., survived until 1897, when he died at the age of thirty-three, unmarried, a most estimable young man. His son, James W., residing at Nocatee, Florida, is a gardener and orange grower. His son, William F., is a merchant and farmer at Otway.

Mr. Freeman has resided at Otway all his life except the years 1865 to 1867, when he was in the state of Iowa. He is most highly esteemed for his honesty and integrity and high character. For about a year past, he has been a member of the County Board of Elections.

No man possesses the confidence of those who know him to any greater extent than he. His character is a tower of strength in the community of his residence, when he gives his word, it is sacred. He lives all he professes.

George Harrison Freshell

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, January 10, 1852, the son of George and Josephine (Beaumont) Freshell. His father came from Germany in 1846 and his mother from France in 1847. He spent his boyhood in Portsmouth and attended the public schools. From 1862 to 1865, he was a general "roustabout" at the Green Post, kept by Amos Engils. From 1865 to 1869, he worked for Pat Kenrick at the Exchange on Market street. From 1869 to 1871, he was employed by "Dutch Mike" in the same business. From 1871 until 1876, he worked at various places in Portsmouth. From 1876 until 1879, he worked as steamboat cook between Cincinnati and Pittsburg. From 1879 to 1888 he was employed in his present place of business. In 1888 he commenced business for himself and has continued ever since.

In October, 1882, he was married to Jane Vernier. She died in March, 1889. He was married again to Elizabeth Redinger. He is a republican. He is industrious in his business and has been very successful. He is very generous and contributes to every good cause. He has one of the most popular restaurants in Portsmouth. He devotes himself to his patrons and they appreciate his efforts to please and serve them. No man has more friends than he and everyone of them will stand by him under any and all circumstances. The ability to command such devotion is Mr. Freshell's best recommendation.

Jacob Fritz

was born in Harford county, Maryland, February 25, 1845, three miles from the city of Baltimore. His father, Gottlieb Fritz, was born in October, 1811, and was a native of Wurtemberg, Germany. His mother's maiden name was Christina Zeller, who was born March 12, 1817, also a native of Wurtemberg, Germany. They were married June 27, 1841, and emigrated to Maryland about 1836. They had ten children, part of whom were born in Maryland, part in Pennsylvania and part in Ohio. The family came to Scioto county, Ohio in 1856, when our subject was eleven years of age. He was reared a farmer and received a common school education. When his parents came to this county they settled on Dogwood Ridge, where he has since resided. He entered company I, 140th regiment, O. V. I., at the age of nineteen, May 2, 1864, and served until September 8, 1864.

He was married March 11, 1869, to Eliza Griver, daughter of Fred Griver and his wife, Sophia Ransdahous. They have the following children: George W., born February 7, 1870, lives in Ironton, and is a commercial salesman for Green, Joyce & Co., of Columbus; Charles H., born May 17, 1872, conducting a farm near his father's home; Albert F., born August 10, 1874, a farmer with his father; Edward, employed in the office of the Heer shoe factory of Portsmouth, Ohio; and two daughters, Emma C., and Wilhelmina.

Our subject was engaged for seven years on the B. & O. railroad from 1866 to 1873. He was a section hand except one year, when he was foreman. He helped to change the gauge of the Portsmouth branch of the B. & O. It was done in five days; and while he was working on the railroad he helped to change the gauge of the Ohio & Mississippi to the standard gauge between Cincinnati and St. Louis. This work was done in a half day by distributing a sufficient force of men along the line, and by beginning work at the same time and ending it at the same time. Jacob Fritz is a good farmer, a good neighbor, a good Christian and a good citizen. This is the general verdict of all who know him.

James Savage Frizell, M. D., is the son of W. A. Frizell, M. D., and Artemisia Kenyon, his wife. He was born at Buena Vista, Ohio, January 3, 1848, and was educated in the schools of that place. His grandfather, Joseph Frizell was a soldier of the war of 1812. He married Mary Savage. Doctor Frizell attended the Ohio Medical College for three years and was graduated March 2, 1880. He practiced with his father for four years and then went to Philadelphia and took a course in Jefferson Medical College. He was graduated therefrom in 1884. When he had completed his medical education, he was $3,000 in debt, but managed to pay out in three years. He has practiced at Buena ever since he began practice. He was appointed a member of the Board of Pension Examining Surgeons of Scioto county in 1902.

Mr. Frizell has been a democrat the most of his life and a very active worker but became a republican at the end of Cleveland's first term on account of the policy of the Democrat party on the money question. He was Treasurer of Nile township in 1899.

He was reared a Methodist, but never joined the church. He has always been a contributor to the church and a worker in the Buena Vista Sunday school. He has filled every office and has taught every class in the Sunday school and has kept this up for a period of forty years. He is a Royal Arch Mason and an Odd Fellow.

He married Caroline Miller, eldest daughter of John Miller of Buena Vista, October 31, 1888. At the time of his marriage he had his home bought and furnished and moved into it immediately. On account of so much sickness in the neighborhood, he was compelled to forego the pleasure of a wedding trip. Dr. Frizell is a lover of out door sports and always has his dogs and guns and fishing tackle and when the seasons are ripe, he takes a vacation whenever opportunity affords.

Doctor Frizell was born into the profession, his father having been a successful and well known practitioner in the town where our subject is now, and has for years followed his profession. Before commencing the practice of medicine, he fitted himself in an eminent degree for his work by taking his course in medicine in the best schools in our land. In his work he is active, careful and painstaking. Often thrown on his own resources in the most of his career he has had to paddle his own canoe and as a result is trained in the school of experience as well as that of theory. His relations with his patients are of the most cordial and sincere character. His opinions are asked for in civil and religious matters as well as in medicine. His good offices are extended to all men alike regardless of creeds, politics or station in life.

was born in Germany, in 1828. He came to the United States in 1849, with his brothers, William, Fred, Charles, August, and his father. The family located first in Texas, and then came to this county. They were all farmers. On August 14, 1862, Robert enlisted in Company C, 91st O. V. I. and served till June 24, 1865. He was a Corporal of his Company, and carried the colors of the regiment and they were always in place, and at the front. He was wounded at the battle of Opequan, September 19, 1864. He was born to be a soldier and made a most excellent one. He lives a mile and a half south-east of Harrisonville and has a most delightful home. He married a Miss Kirschner after the war and his six daughters: Mary, wife of James White, of Portsmouth, Ohio; Flora, widow of Jenkins Pool; Rosa, wife of Henry Race; Minnie, wife of Samuel Moore, and Etta at home. Robert Frowine is a successful farmer and his farm indicates it to any one who visits him. He is honest to the core and cannot do too much for an old comrade of the civil war.

Albert Atwood Fuller

was born at Marietta, Ohio, September 15, 1846. As to his parents see sketch of A. J. Fuller. Our subject attended the public schools of Marietta until he was eighteen years of age, at which time he went in the dry goods business, and remained there until 1876. He was salesman and buyer and conducted the whole business. August 1, 1876, he came to Portsmouth with John G. Hathaway, and started a photograph gallery, as Fuller & Hathaway. They were in the Trotter building until 1879, and then moved to the Vincent building. In the spring of 1882, our subject sold out to Hathaway and moved to Springfield. He remained there during the summer season, and then came back to Portsmouth, and bought out the Nichols undertaking business. He conducted that business alone until 1884, when he took in his brother, A. J. Fuller, and added furniture. They started in the Huston stone front building and remained there three years, then they moved to the Gerlach building and remained there until 1898, when they went into the building at No. 75 West Second street, which they built and own. They conduct one of the oldest undertaking businesses in the city. Our subject was married August 5, 1873 to Flora Protsman, daughter of Leroy Protsman. They have one child, Mrs. Flora Maher. They also lost one son at the age of four years. Mr. Fuller is a republican, and a Mason.

Andrew Johnson Fuller

was born April 18, 1849, in Marietta. His father, Samuel Fuller, was born near Marietta, and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Judd. His father was a cabinet maker and followed it until furniture making drove him out of business, and then he became an undertaker. Our subject attended the schools at Marietta and the Marietta College until 1869. He was clerk in the postoffice after he left school for three years. He was clerk in the rolling-mill store for one year. He went to Central, Indiana, and railroaded with General Dawes until 1874. In 1874, he came to Portsmouth with the intention of going into the postoffice as clerk, but went in the Wait Furniture Factory as book-keeper and salesman. In the fall of 1884, he engaged with his brother in the furniture and undertaking business, and has been in that ever since. He was married September 22, 1878, to Miss Mary Smith. They have three children, Gilbert, Floyd and Mary. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the Bigelow Methodist church. He is a Mason and an Odd Fellow. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the Bigelow Methodist church. He is a Mason and an Odd Fellow. Mr. Fuller's wife died January 17, 1886.

Joseph Warren Fulton, M. D., was born October 24, 1810, at Schenectady, New York, the son of Robert and Nancy (Hewitt) Fulton. His father was a cousin of Robert Fulton, the inventor. He moved to Ohio and settled at Cleveland and lived there during the war of 1812. His father removed from Cleveland to Athens county, in order to give his sons the advantage of the Ohio University at Athens, but died in 1825. His sons were unable to attend the Ohio University and each obtained only a common school education.

Our subject graduated at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, in 1832, at the age of twenty-two. He commenced the practice of medicine in Fairfield county in 1832, and his first patients were victims of the cholera. He was very successful in his treatment of them. He practiced medicine until 1846. He then engaged in mercantile pursuits and carried on a large coal mine in the Hocking Valley, at Nelsonville. In the spring of 1860, he moved to Greenup county, Kentucky, opposite Portsmouth, locating on the farm on which Fullerton is now situated.

When the war broke out, he formed the idea of raising a regiment among the miners in the Hocking Valley, and received authority for that purpose from Governor Dennison. He visited the Hocking Valley and found a regiment had been raised there. He helped raise the 53rd O. V. I. but on account of his age, he declined the office of Colonel. He was appointed Quartermaster with the rank of First Lieutenant, September 6, 1861. He resigned December 11, 1862, because he could not endure the hardships of the service. At the time he was appointed, he was forty-eight years of age, or three years past the age required for military duty. He was engaged in the battle of Shiloh and during the same was assigned to special duty by General Buell who in his published account of the battle, gave him credit for having materially contributed to the success of the Federal Army. No man in the war was more intensely loyal than Doctor Fulton. His brother, Robert R. Fulton, was made Lieutenant Colonel of the 53rd O. V. I. at the age of fifty-two and served for two years. His nephew, Joseph W. Fulton was First Lieutenant of Company B, and afterwards Captain of Company G, 53d O. V. I. He had a brother Lorenzo Fulton, who was Captain of Company G, 53rd O. V. I.

In 1867, Doctor Fulton removed to Springville, Kentucky and operated a tan yard. He removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1868, bought the Pacific Mills, near the Baltimore and Ohio station, and operated them for four years. Then he bought the Offnare Mill on Front and Chillicothe streets, and operated that until 1883. In that year, he removed to Kentucky, to develop lands near Louisa, which he had purchased.

He was married May 22, 1843, at Chancy, Ohio, to Augusta M. Cutler, daughter of Colonel Charles Cutler. They had three sons: Doctor Charles C. and Robert, now of Elliott county, Kentucky, and Joseph M., of Columbus, Ohio.

In politics, Doctor Fulton was a whig and afterward a republican. He cast his first vote for Henry Clay in 1832. He was always active in politics. He was a forceful and entertaining speaker, but never aspired for an office. In the city of Portsmouth, he was a prominent member of the Board of Trade and was for a time a member of the City Council. He was an original thinker and advocated measures far in advance of the times. When the water works were first talked of in Portsmouth, he advocated a reservoir on one of the hills instead of the Holly system. He advocated flood defenses thought unjudicious by others. He died in Elliott county, Kentucky, March 20, 1893. He was one of the most public spirited citizens who ever lived in Portsmouth and far ahead of his times. He had the courage to undertake what he recommended. His arguments in favor of projects presented by him were unanswerable. He was not appreciated as he should have been in his life time, but the citizens of Portsmouth realize now that he was one of the city's best friends.

Eugene Melvin Funk

was born in Greenup county, Kentucky, January 1, 1852. He is the son of Thornton A. and Anary (Gray) Funk. She was the daughter of John Gray of Kentucky. Mr. Funk's maternal great-grandmother died at the age of 114. Her husband was a soldier of 1812. On the paternal side, he is the great-grandson of Martin Funk, who settled on the land west of Lawson's Run or Funk's Gut. His son, John Funk, was our subject's grandfather. The boyhood of Mr. Funk, until he was six years old, was spent in Kentucky. His parents removed to Portsmouth and remained four years and returned to Kentucky. He received a common school education. He worked on the farm until 1870 and began dealing in timber, fire clay, tan bark and general merchandise, which business he continued until 1875, when he came to Portsmouth and went into the Portsmouth Planing mill on Gay street. He continued here six years and then engaged in the same business with H. Leet & Company which he continued until the present.

He has been elected city councilman for the fourth ward, three terms. He was defeated for Sheriff of Scioto county by W. G. Williamson. He is one of the prominent democrats of the county. On January 23, 1878, he was married to Amanda Turner, daughter of Robert and Sarah (Murphy) Turner, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and granddaughter of Arnold Murphy, an early settler of Jefferson township, who came from Columbiana county, Ohio, about 1810. They have five children: Earl D., Mabel E., Richmond, Thornton and Carl. He is one of our best citizens, a plain conscientious business man, well liked by his associates and the community in general.

Joshua Madison Gammon, son of Joshua L. and Harriet (Stewart) Gammon, was born at Tygart, Ky., about four miles from Portsmouth, December 13, 1839, one of eight children. He received a common school education, working on his father's farm until 1865, when with several companions, among them, John Shackelford of Portsmouth, he started to the gold mines of Montana. He had reached as far as Sioux City, Iowa, he determined to return to his old home in Kentucky, and gave up his dreams of gold. Since then he has lived the life of a Kentucky farmer.

On the 13th of October, 1867, he married Louisa Kendall, second daughter of Milton and Ruth (Lawson) Kendall. They had nine children: Nellie Ruth, married M. F. Mackoy, on the 8th of March, 1893, and died October 3, 1895, leaving one child, Bessie Louisa, living with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mackoy; Milton Smith, married, has two children; Elbert, married, living in Sciotoville, has one child; Olive, married Charles F. Aeh, who resides near Yorktown, Ohio, and is engaged in the dairy business. They have had two children, but one is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Gammon have five children at home: Lola May, Clara Belle, Lilly Ione, Irma Alice, and George Madison. In politics, Mr. Gammon has always been a democrat, and he is earnest in his views and political conduct. He is a member of the Christian church of Siloam, Ky., and has been for many years a member of the Portsmouth Aurora Lodge of Masons. He is highly respected in the entire circle of his acquaintances. In his manner, he is quiet and unostentatious. He is a good husband and father, a good neighbor and his rough side is his outside.

Samuel Glenn Garvin

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, July 21, 1850. He is the son of William and Harriet Garvin. He was one of four children, three sons and a daughter. His mother died when he was a child and his father married again. There were four children of the second marriage, three daughters and a son. He attended the country schools and worked on his father's farm. His father was also a cooper as well as a farmer. He died in 1861 at the age of fifty-five years. Samuel worked on a farm until 1872, and on July 12, 1872, he went to work in the Burgess rolling mill. He continued to work in the Burgess until 1898, and then he began to work in mills in different places. He was in Indianapolis, Indiana, from the fall of 1898 till the spring of 1899. He then went to Chester, Pennsylvania, and worked for eight months in the American Steel Casting Works. In 1901, he went to Pittsburg, remained there one month and went to Birmingham, Alabama, in the fall of 1901, and then came to Portsmouth and worked in the Portsmouth steel works. He started as a puddler, and worked for eight years. He then had charge of a forge for three years, and for another three years he worked at the open-hearth steel furnaces.

He was married March 15, 1877 to Catharine Bowman, daughter of Joseph Bowman. They have two children: Alma, married to William Wamser, pattern maker for the Drew-Selby Company, and Arthur, a laster at the Drew-Selby shoe factory. He has always been a democrat. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and a member of Scioto Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Erastus Gates

was born July 28, 1829, in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was Wilson Gates and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Kinney. He obtained his education in the Portsmouth schools and then went to clerking in his father's dry goods store, which was in a frame building on Brunner's corner. He was a

"dude" then, though the term was not yet invented. In 1843, Wilson Gates took his family to Memphis and they lived there until 1849. His father died soon after their return to Portsmouth and Erastus then went as a steamboat clerk on the southern rivers. He was on the steamer Kate Fleming when she was blown up in the lower Ohio. He left the river and became a clerk in Henry R. Kinney's hardware store. On March 16, 1854, he was married to Mary Laura Thompson, daughter of Washington Thompson, of Kentucky. He farmed for awhile after his marriage. In 1855 he and Uncle Reuben Thompson and kept a confectionery store on Front street.

He enlisted in Company H, 56th O. V. I. on December 9, 1861, and was made a Quartermaster Sergeant the same day. On September 5, 1862 he was made Second Lieutenant of Company G. He was promoted to First Lieutenant April 2, 1863, and resigned July 26, 1863. He died June 13, 1892.

William W. Gates, Jr.,

was born in Gallia county, Ohio, March 13, 1863, the son of William W. and Alvira (Nye) Gates. William W. Gates, Sr., was born near Marietta, Ohio, October 16, 1827 and is the son of Samuel Haskell and Mary (Wheeler) Gates and grandson of John Gates. Alvira (Nye) Gates is the daughter of Melzar and Phoebe (Sprague) Nye and granddaughter of Ebenezer Nye who came to Marietta in 1790 and lived for five years in the stockade there. He was born in Tolland, Connecticut. His sister was the first white woman to set foot in Marietta. In 1869, William W. Gates, Sr., moved from Gallia county, Ohio, to Cabell county, West Virginia, near Guyandotte, where he lived until 1876, when he moved to Scioto county, locating on a farm three miles east of the city.

His son, William W. Gates, Jr., attended the Portsmouth public schools, helping his father on the farm during vacation, until he was seventeen years of age, when he entered the Drew-Selby shoe factory, October 26, 1880. After spending thirteen years there, during which time he had gained a general knowledge of shoe manufacturing, having been employed in the different departments, he became a member of the firm, continuing in this relation, until the firm's dissolution in 1902, when he, with Irving Drew and others, bought and reorganized the Star Shoe Company.

In politics he is a prohibitionist. He is a member of the Second Presbyterian church. In 1897, he was made an elder and has been clerk of the Session since 1898 and Sabbath school superintendent since 1900.

He was married in 1888, to Harriet S. Chick, daughter of Charles and Sarah (Lawson) Chick and great-granddaughter of William Lawson, a pioneer of Scioto county. She is of the sixth generation of the Lawson family in this country, her great-great-great-grandfather, Thomas Lawson, an Englishman, having settled near York, Pennsylvania, about 1715. She is also the great-great-granddaughter of Joseph Moore, a native of New Jersey, who emigrated to Hampshire county, West Virginia, and then in 1790 to Adams county, Ohio. He was the first preacher in the first Methodist church in Ohio.

Mr. Gates is one of the foremost business men of this city. He has been successful and prosperous in his business and his ambition is to do the most good he can for the opportunity about him.

was born May 10, 1818, in Bonte, in the province of Hunteburg, Germany. He attended school there until he was sixteen years of age, when he learned the cabinet-maker's trade. He came to the United States in 1839, in his twenty-first year, and landed at New York. He came to Pine Grove Furnace and was engaged at the furnace for several years, when he went to Junior furnace and became the engineer. He afterwards became a wagon-maker and followed that occupation for eleven years. He removed to Lawrence furnace in 1849, and lived there for eleven years when he bought the Ball farm in the French Grant on which he resided for thirty-five years.

He was married on March 7, 1844, to Julia Witte, in Cincinnati, Ohio, the daughter of Claumer and Elizabeth B. Witte. They had four children: John F., who married Rosina J. Andre, and resides in Kentucky, near Portsmouth, Ohio; Lewis H., who married Caroline Messer and resides on "Dogwood Ridge," in Porter township; Henry H., who married Hattie Stewart, and resides at Sciotoville, Ohio; Mary, who married William Reif, and resides at Wheelersburg, Ohio.

Mr. Gerding was a republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died January 5, 1897, aged seventy-eight years, eight months and twenty-three days. His widow still survives and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. William Reif. Mr. Gerding was an honest man, a law abiding citizen, a pleasant and obliging neighbor and a consistent christian. He accumulated a modest fortune, all by the toll of his hands. He brought up his children according to Solomon's ideas and they are a credit to his training. His dealings with his fellow men were all according to the Golden Rule. He left a memory, a comfort to his children, and a pleasant retrospect to his friends.

George Edward Gibbs

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, September 5, 1853. His parents were Dr. George W. and Susan (Gilbert) Gibbs. His mother's people came from New York. His father's people were of German ancestry and came from Pennsylvania. His mother was the daughter of Giles Gilbert, Sr. Edward's boyhood was spent in Portsmouth, where he attended the public schools. From 1870 to 1875 he was clerk in the Marietta and Cincinnati freight offices. He was deputy recorder of Scioto county from 1873 to 1875. From 1875 to 1878 he worked in a railroad office at Chicago, Illinois. He was postal clerk of Portsmouth from 1878 to 1881. He was in the railroad service from 1881 to 1902, except during Cleveland's first term. He is a republican and a member of the First Presbyterian church, of Portsmouth.

He married Miss Ella Dircks, daughter of Augustus Dircks, October 27, 1891. They have two children: Susan Louise and Jessie. Mr. Gibbs is wonderfully proficient in his occupation as railway mail clerk. He has traveled over the Portsmouth branch of the B. & O. railroad, the fifty-six miles between Hamden and Portsmouth, till he knows almost every man, woman and child on the line. He travels 112 miles every day, 3,756 miles in a year and in the seventeen years of his service has traveled 63,852 miles, or as much as twice around the world and half way around the third time. He enjoys excellent health and tries to do the duty nearest him.

John Adam Giesler

was born January 22, 1845, in Westheim, Bavaria. His father was Andrew Giesler. There were six children of whom our subject was the eldest. From the time he was six until he was fourteen, he attended school in Germany, and then he was apprenticed to the butcher's trade until he was twenty-one years of age when he came to the United States. The same year he came to Portsmouth and worked with George Daum at his trade. In February, 1869, he went into the business for himself on Market street, and continued in it successfully all his life.

He was married March 4, to Elizabeth Rauter, daughter of Frederick Rauter. Their children are: Anna Maria, wife of Jacob Hetzel, engaged in the butcher business with Adam Geisler; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Findels; Adam, in business for himself at 221 Market street, as a butcher, and Lena. Frederick and Catharine died in infancy. Rosa died in 1895, at the age of seventeen. Mr. Giesler was a republican and a member of the Evangelical church at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets. He died February 19, 1901.

John Gilgen

was born in Ross county, near Kingston, in 1849. In 1866, he came to Portsmouth with his parents, and for awhile was employed at his father's liquor store, located in the house now occupied by the Portsmouth Steam Laundry. Later he worked at the Johnson Hub & Spoke Works, and while there had his right hand nearly cut off. In 1875, Mr. Gilgen was in the grocery business on Eighth and Chillicothe streets, but failed. He then engaged in the liquor business and was very successful, amassing quite a competency. He had a beautiful home and only recently began the erection of a business house. He was married in 1878 to Miss Lizzie Hook. They had two sons, Joseph, of Chicago, and George of Portsmouth. He died September 26, 1901. He was a member of of the Royal Arch Masons. Mr. Gilgen was an honorable and upright citizen; fair, just and honest in his dealings with his fellow men.

Captain Coleman Gillilan was born in Jackson county, Ohio, November 19, 1837. His parents were Jesse Gillilan, a native of Greenbrier county, West Virginia, and Elizabeth (Coleman) Gillilan, a native of Ireland. His grandfather, James Gillilan, was a native of Greenbrier county, West Virginia.

Our subject received a good common school education, and passed through the Ewington Academy, thus qualifying himself for the noble work of teacher, but notwithstanding his attachment to his profession, he responded to the second call of President Lincoln, and during August and September of 1861, he and Captain M. Mannering recruited Company A, of the 56th O. V. I., in which regiment he was mustered in as Second Lieutenant November 8, 1861, for three years. While the regiment was on duty at Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, he was taken sick with typhoid pneumonia and was sent home, with little hopes that he would ever recover, and on July 31, 1862, he resigned on surgeon's certificate of disability. The summer and fall of 1863, he spent with the army in West Virginia. In July, 1864, he was commissioned by Governor Brough to recruit a company for the 173rd O. V. I. On July 27, 1864, he was appointed Captain of Company C, 173rd O. V. I. and was discharged June 26, 1865.

After his return from the army, he went into the mercantile business at Wales, Ohio, with Emerson McMillan, now in New York. Then he taught two terms of select school at Wales. In the fall of 1866 he went into business with Richard Lloyd & Company, shoe dealers, of Portsmouth, Ohio, as salesmen, and was with them until 1870, when he became a salesman for J. L. Hibbs, in the shoe and hardware business. In 1876, he went into business in Thurman, Ohio, with Charles Smith and was there from 1877 until 1880. In 1880, he became a partner in the firm of J. L. Hibbs & Company. From 1883 to 1889 he was with W. F. Thorne & Company of Cincinnati, Ohio. From 1889 till 1902, he was in the shoe trade as a salesman.

On May 15, 1902, he took the management of the Murphy Shoe Company of Portsmouth; and on the first of November, 1902, when chosen President and General Manager of the Company.

He first came to Portsmouth in 1868 and has resided here ever since, except a few years at Sinking Springs on account of the health of the family. On February 14, 1890, he was appointed a member of the Board of Managers of the Ohio Penitentiary and was re-appointed for five years in April, 1902.

On August 27, 1868, he was married to Mrs. Sarah K. Fry, daughter of John Amen. His eldest child, Grace, the wife of Dan C. Jones, died at the age of twenty-five and left one daughter, Grace. The other children of Captain Gillilan are Bertha Sisson, Robert Starkey and Harry Coleman.

He is a member of Bailey Post, G. A. R., Portsmouth, Ohio; and of the Ohio Commandery Loyal Legion. He belongs to Calvary Commandery, Knights Templars, of Portsmouth. He is a Past Master of River City Council No. 11, United Commercial Travelers of America. He is a republican in politics and a member of the Republican State Central Committee. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. In all the relations of life he does his part well. No man is more favorably known or more highly respected in southern Ohio than he.

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, March 5, 1867. His father was George Gims a native of Hesse Darmstadt, Germany. His mother was Anna B. Miller, a native of the same place. They came to the United States in youth and were married in Portsmouth. His father was twenty-two years of age when he emigrated, and had been a weaver in Germany. They had six children, of which our subject was the second. He has two sisters in Portsmouth who married two brothers, sons of Adolph Brunner, the dry goods merchant.

Mr. Gims attended the Portsmouth schools until 1881, and then engaged as a grocery clerk for "Father" C. C. Hyatt. He was with "Pap" Hyatt for five years and he attributes all his success to what he learned and to his instructions during the five years he was with him. He was clerk for Charles Wilhelm for one year. In 1886, he went into the business for himself on Twelfth and Gay streets, and has been in it ever since. In 1891, he changed his location to Twelfth and Findlay streets and has been there ever since. He was Councilman in the fourth ward in 1895 and 1896. From 1896 to 1899 he was a member of the Board of Health. In 1891, he was again elected Councilman for the sixth ward. He is a member of the Evangelical church, and of the D. O. H. He is a republican in his political views. He married Sadie C. Koch, daughter of Eli Koch, March 5, 1890. He has two children, Karl and Selma.

Alexander M. Glockner

was born April 9, 1866, in Portsmouth, Ohio, the son of Bernard Glockner and Magdalene (Beck) Glockner. His father came to America in 1847 and his mother in 1853. They were married in 1854. He received his early education in St. Mary's Catholic school which he attended for six years at the end of which time, he entered his mother's hardware store to work but he did not like it, and learned the moulder's trade at which he worked for five years. He then took a course in the Portsmouth Business College and again entered the hardware store owned and conducted by his mother.

His father engaged in the hardware business in 1872, succeeding J. B. Rottinghaus. He died October 27, 1876, and the business was conducted in the name of his mother, Mrs. M. Glockner until October 22, 1891, when she died. The business was then purchased by our subject who has owned and managed it since. It is now one of the largest and most substantial retail businesses in Portsmouth and it is a credit to the town as well as to its young and energetic proprietor.

Our subject was married to Adelaide Lange, daughter of John Lange, January 11, 1892, by whom he has two children: Edward, aged seven, and Helen, aged five.

He is a member of St. Mary's Catholic church and a member of the Knights of St. George. He was reared a democrat but does not follow his early teaching very closely. On the contrary he is very liberal in his political views. While nominally a democrat he votes for the man and the measure oftener than for the political party. Mr. Glockner is an excellent example of what is called American energy and push. Starting with but little more than the ordinary boy, he has by constant application, industry and acute business insight established a business which is a shining index to his business ability. Besides being a first class business man he is a true sportsman and takes as keen interest in his dogs and gun and fishing tackle as he does in his business. One of his chief delights is to follow the hounds or hunt beside a blooded pointer or setter.

Frank A. Glockner

the son of Bernard and Magdalene (Beck) Glockner, natives of Bingen, Baden, Germany, was born August 26, 1855, in Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended St. Mary's school and later took a course of study in a business college. He learned the tinner's trade at H. Eberhart's and after finishing his trade assisted his father in the hardware business. His father died in 1876 and he took charge of the business for his mother until 1884. In that year he moved to Lexington, Kentucky, and was engaged in the shoe business in that place for five years. In 1889, he went to Cincinnati where for four years he carried on a grocery business. In 1893, he returned to Portsmouth and since that time has been engaged in the stove and hardware business at 121-123 Gallia street. On May 15, 1889, he was married to Mary E. Lang, in Lawrenceburg, Indiana. She died November 5, 1901, aged thirty-nine. They had eight children: Magdalene and Frank, who died in infancy, Mary, Herbert, Frank, William, Catherine and Gertrude.

Charles Colburn Glidden

was born January 20, 1855, at Covington, Kentucky. His father was Daniel A. Glidden and his mother was Ellen Robinson, a daughter of Joshua V. Robinson, a prominent business man of Portsmouth, Ohio. Daniel A. Glidden, his was a son of Charles Crichton of New Hampshire. His father was drowned on the ferry at Cincinnati in October, 1861. His mother died in March 1867.

Our subject made his home with his aunt, Mrs. Charlotte E. Turley, from the time of his father's death until he was married. He attended school at Portsmouth, Ohio, until the age of seventeen, and then went to the Pennsylvania State Academy at Chester, Pennsylvania, for one year. At the age of 20, he went to work at the Burgess Steel & Iron Works as a clerk and remained with them until 1880, when he went into partnership with Jacob Becker in the wholesale and retail candy and grocery business. A short experience in that satisfied him. From 1884 to 1888 he was engaged in a railroad office in Kansas City, Mo. He left there in the latter year and went to Cincinnati and worked for the Cincinnati, Portsmouth & Virginia Railroad for one year. In 1890, he returned to Portsmouth and went to work for the Burgess Steel & Iron Works as a laborer. He was soon promoted to shipping clerk, which position he held for three years, when he was promoted to book-keeper and pay-master. He held this position until 1897.

On the 5th of April, 1897, he was elected Mayor of Portsmouth by a vote of 1,742 for himself to 1,477 for Volney R. Row, republican. He was re-elected on April 4, 1899 by a vote of 1,654 for himself and 1,623 for C. C. Brown, republican. In the spring of 1897, he advocated the system of flood defenses and employed men at his own instance to keep the flood out of the city by levees and it has been kept out ever since. Since then he has had the pleasure of having the city adopt the flood defenses officially. Since retiring from the Mayor's office he has been employed with the Portsmouth and Kentucky Fire Brick Company.

On January 8, 1880, he was married to Helen M. Crichton, daughter of Andrew Crichton, a son of Andrew Crichton, the druggist. They have five children: Daniel A., employed by Spellacy & Co.; William Crichton, employed in the Excelsior Shoe Company office; Henrietta M., John B., and Bertha. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church. He has always been a democrat and was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1900 from the Tenth Ohio District.

Charles Austin Goddard

was born in the town of Norwich, Windsor county, Vermont, May 25, 1841. His father's name was Henry Goddard, and his mother's maiden name was Laura Esther Egerton. His father was a native of Concord, Vermont. His grandfather, Samuel Goddard, was a native of Millbury, Massachusetts. His great-grandfather was Nathaniel Goddard. Henry Goddard, his father, was a farmer and a shoemaker. Samuel Goddard, the grandfather of our subject, was a merchant; and was for thirty years a Congregational minister of Norwich, Vt., where he died in 1844 at the age of seventy-two years. He was blind the last two years of his life.

Our subject, Charles Austin Goddard, went to school at Norwich, Vt., where he obtained his education. On September 15, 1861, he enlisted in Company B, 6th Vermont Infantry at Norwich as a private. He was mustered in October 15, 1861, and was made a Corporal in September, 1862, and a Sergeant in 1863. He served in the 6th Army Corps, Second Brigade, Second Division. General N. L. H. Brooks was his brigade commander and General N. E. (Baldy) Smith was his division commander. His division was also under the command of General Winfield S. Hancock. General Sedgwick was commander of his corps part of the time. Our subject was wounded May 5, 1864, at the battle of the wilderness. He was struck on the chin by a minie-ball, but this wound was but a scratch. On the second day of the battle May 6, 1864 he was shot on the left ankle and the bone shattered. As a result of this wound he was compelled to use crutches for four months. He was discharged November 27, 1864.

On his return to his home in Vermont he engaged in farming. He remained there until January, 1866, when he came to Fronton, Ohio. He engaged in contracting on the streets and was very successful in the business. In November, 1866, he purchased a farm of 250 acres in Union township, Lawrence county just opposite Huntington, and fronting on the Ohio river, where he resided for five years. He was married November 16, 1871 to Miss Eureka Kimball, of Union township, Lawrence county, the youngest daughter of A. H. Kimball, a native of Vermont. On March 17, 1872 he bought the Junior furnace property and 400 acres of land about it and he has resided there ever since. He has the following children: Charles A., the editor of a newspaper in Fayetteville, West Virginia; Henry K., a farmer, who is married and resides in Green township; Arthur S., a student at the Ohio University; and two daughters, Minnie L., and Nellie who are school girls, residing at home.

Mr. Goddard has always been a republican and has always taken an active interest in politics. He cast his first vote in 1864 at the state election in Vermont, and afterwards voted in the November election for President Lincoln for a second term. He was land appraiser in Green township in 1880. He was elected a County Commissioner in the fall of 1881, and re-elected in 1884. He resigned in September, 1887, to accept the position of superintendent of the Ohio canal from Columbus to Portsmouth, Ohio. He held this office until 1896. He was elected a member of the State Board of Public Works in the fall of 1897, and was re-elected in 1900.

Mr. Goddard has an easy pleasant way of getting along with his friends and enemies alike. He is a citizen of great public spirit and always in favor of public improvements. He believes in the most modern methods in everything. He is liberal to all charitable objects. He believes in cutting across lots to do the right thing, and does not believe in any small ideas in public matters. He has been very successful in politics because he always gave everyone's views proper consideration. Everyone who has business with him is sure of an audience and of full consideration of his claims, and that when Mr. Goddard acts, he will act after being fully advised. Another remarkable fact about Mr. Goddard is that while he has devoted years of his life to public business, he has never neglected his private business and all the years he has resided in Scioto county, he has been a successful farmer. He has one of the pleasantest homes in the county and in it exercises a generous hospitality. He is always glad to welcome his friends to his home and makes their visits full of pleasure. He has demonstrated that a Vermont Yankee can be transplanted to Ohio and be transformed into one of Ohio's most valuable citizens.

He enjoys the respect and confidence of all his neighbors. A man's standing at his own home is the highest test of his worth and usefulness and according to this test, Mr. Goddard is a perfect man.

Archie Proctor Goldsmith

was born June 3, 1860, in Newark, New Jersey. His father was Henry A. Goldsmith, a native of Baltimore, Maryland. His mother was Sarah Motte, a native of Newark, New Jersey. He went to school in Newark till he was seventeen years of age, and then remained at home for three years. In 1880, he went to the Pacific coast and made his fortune, mining for gold. He placer-mined awhile and then learned the veneer business in Washington territory. He tired of the west and came back to Philadelphia and engaged in traveling for the hardware business of the Bonney Vise and Tool Company, and was with that company till 1886. He came to Portsmouth in 1887, and engaged with the Veneer Works till 1892, when he went to Antigo, Wisconsin, in the same business till 1894. Then he returned to Newark, New Jersey, till 1899, in the same business. In the latter year he came to Portsmouth and became interested in the Portsmouth Veneer and Panel Company, and is its superintendent. The present company was organized in 1889, and has $45,000.00 capital. It employs seventy-five men. Mr. Goldsmith has been nineteen years in the Veneer business and is proficient in it. He has made it his life work and understands all its details. Mr. Goldsmith was married October 24, 1883, to Miss Minnie E. Bonney, of Philadelphia, a daughter of Charles S. Bonney. Her mother was Mary J. Greenleaf, of the well known Greenleaf family of Maine, and the New England States. They have one child, Lela Bonney, a young lady. Mr. Goldsmith is a republican, but not a member of any orders.

George A Goodman, of the Gilbert Grocery Company, is an example of the self-made man. He was born October 23, 1862, at Portsmouth, Ohio, and is the son of Michael and Theresa (Amberg) Goodman, both of German descent. Brought up in straightened circumstances, he was compelled to leave school at the age of twelve, and go to work for himself. Commencing on a farm, where he worked for a year, he worked his way up to the position of a grocery and dry goods clerk. He followed clerking till he was nineteen when he went into the employ of M. B. Gilbert and drove an ice wagon. He was advanced to clerk and city salesman in 1883, by reason of his merit and held that position until 1895, when at the death of Joseph H. Gaston, a member of the firm, he was again advanced, and given charge of the travelling salesmen. In 1894, he became a partner in the firm composed of Mrs. M. B. Gilbert, George M. Appel and himself. When the Gilbert Grocery Company was incorporated January 1, 1901, he became a stockholder in the corporation and was elected its vice president. He still retained charge of the travelling salesmen department.

He served as City Councilman from 1889, to 1895, representing the First ward. He holds to the democratic faith and was formerly very active in politics. Yet he was never of the orthodox type.

He was raised a Catholic and is a communicant of St. Mary's Catholic church of Portsmouth. He has been a member of the Knights of St. George for twenty years and for nineteen years an officer in the same, having filled all the offices from trustee to president.

He was married June 5, 1895, at Chillicothe, to Katharine A. Schilder, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Schilder. Mr. Goodman is well named, as his name is fully descriptive of his qualities. He is quiet and unassuming in his manners, but makes friends of all who become intimate with him. He is admired for his good qualities as a citizen and a business man.

Benjamin Franklin Goodrich, son of Richard Goodrich and Jane Bonker, his wife, was born June 2, 1865, at Sciotoville, this county. His mother was a granddaughter of Colonel Isaac Bonker, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this book. His father was born in 1819, on the site of Mr. Irving Drew's residence in Portsmouth. Richard Goodrich was a plasterer by trade and worked in Sciotoville and the country around there. He enlisted in the Mexican war, but was never called out. The brother of our subject, Nathan B., was a member of the 53d O. V. L. Company C. He was wounded in front of Atlanta, July, 1864. Our subject received his education in the schools of Sciotoville. He learned the plasterer's trade of his father, and came to Portsmouth in April, 1878, where he has resided ever since. He still works at his trade. Richard Goodrich, his father, was a whig and afterwards an abolitionist. The son is a republican in sentiment, but is not active in politics. He was married May 7, 1874, to Lucinda Johnson, daughter of Joseph and Lucretia Johnson. He had six children, as follows: Ida May, married Charles Wood; Clarence, at home; Joseph R., in San Francisco; Anna L., deceased; Earl E., and Henry E. at home. He is a Knight of Pythias.

John Frederick Gordon, M. D.,

was born December 4, 1864, near Stockdale, Pike county, Ohio. His father was Charles McKendree Gordon, and his mother's maiden name was Harriet James. His grandfather Gordon came from New Jersey. His father, Charles W. Gordon was in the 33rd O. V. L. Company E. He entered the service September 25, 1864, at the age of twenty-five, for one year, and was mustered out June 5, 1865, at Washington, D. C., by order of the War Department.

Our subject was educated in the common schools. He began teaching at the age of eighteen years, and taught school five different terms of six months each. He began the study of medicine at the age of twenty, and studied with Dr. L. D. Allard. He attended the Louisville Medical School, and graduated in 1894. He began practice in Otway, July 5, 1894. He was married March 29, 1896 to Mary Annis Jackson, daughter of John Jackson, deceased, who lived near Mahees, Jackson county. The child of that marriage was Ronald Frederick. On November 27, 1898, his wife died. He was married the second time to Miss Daisy Opal Pieper, daughter of John F. Pieper of Otway, August 26, 1900. Mr. Gordon is a democrat, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is also a Knight of Pythias.

Doctor Gordon has a sociable and congenial disposition and is always willing to make a sacrifice to promote the happiness of others. As a physician, he is establishing for himself a good reputation and has a growing practice. He is one of the most prosperous as well as most promising young physicians of the county.

Orin Barron Gould, Jr.,

was born at Franklin Furnace, Ohio, January 30, 1863. His father was Orin B. Gould who has a sketch herein. His mother's maiden name was Levinia Seeley. He attended the Portsmouth public schools and graduated in the Portsmouth High School in the class of 1881. He took a course in Duff's Commercial College in Pittsburg, in 1882. He went to Wellston May 1, 1882 and has been there ever since. He has been in the furnace business most of the time and was connected with the Milton furnace until the summer of 1888, when he was engaged with the Superior Coal Company and was its superintendent until November, 1901, when he sold out his interest and is now engaged in developing coal mines in Meigs county.

On November 26, 1888, he was married to Frances McGee, the daughter of James M. McGee. He is a republican. He has often been a delegate to the city and county conventions of his city and county and was also a delegate to the National convention in 1900. He is now a member of the city council of Wellston and has been for four years.

Mr. Gould is one of the most powerful factors in Ohio politics. He inherited both his republicanism and his political ability from his father, Orin B. Gould, Sr., "the Nestor of republicanism in southern Ohio." He has proven a most worthy successor to a most illustrious sire. His early political training was secured in Scioto county. Later he became the unquestioned leader of his party in Jackson county. Mr. Gould has grown to be the commanding figure in the affairs of the Tenth Congressional District. The reasons for this pre-eminence are not difficult to find. Personally, he is very popular possessing the element of personal magnetism which draws men to him. In politics as well as in business his word is his bond. His promises are never broken. With rare talent for combination, with great fertility of resource, cool, unexcitable, ready and prompt of action, he possesses every element of leadership. His marked executive ability and unusual mental vigor are the great factors however in the successes he has achieved. The causes which have brought about his political supremacy explain equally his success in business and in the other walks of life. He is one of the natural leaders of men and his greatest success yet awaits him. He is a member of the Republican State Central Committee, from the 10th Congressional District and one of the trustees of the Ohio hospital for epileptics at Gallipolis, Ohio.

William H. Grady

was born October 6, 1860, in Pike county, Ohio. At an early age, his parents moved to Ross county, Ohio, where he resided until 1864, when they removed to Highland county, near Hillsboro. After a few years they removed to South Webster, Scioto county. Here Mr. Grady attended the public schools until he was sixteen years of age, when, on account of his father's death, he was compelled to begin teaching, which occupation he has followed since, with the exception of one year, when he was engaged as a clerk for the Norfolk & Western railway at Columbus, Ohio.

He is and has been for a number of years, one of the leading educators of Scioto county, having filled some of the most responsible positions in the county, outside of the schools of Portsmouth. He has served as principal of the Union Mills, Otway and Wheelersburg schools, and always with credit to himself and the school. He was also superintendent of the West Union schools in Adams county, for two years.

On November 2, 1881, he was married to Miss Mary P. Burke, youngest daughter of Oliver H. P. Burke of Burke's Point. He with his wife and two children now reside in Wheelersburg, where he is engaged in teaching. He has long been a member of the Methodist church and a member of the official board of said church for a number of years. Mr. Grady affiliates with the republican party, but is not an offensive partisan. He has been honored with local officers in Porter township. He is a Knight of Pythias and a member of the Masonic Fraternity in Wheelersburg. Mr. Grady is honored and respected for his sterling qualities of true and honest manhood.

William Remington Graham

was born November 10, 1867, near East Springfield, Jefferson county, Ohio. His father was John C. Graham and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Richardson. His father was a farmer, a blacksmith and a local Methodist minister. He received his education in the district schools until he was sixteen years of age when he attended an academy at Harlem Springs, Carroll county, Ohio for one year and then attended Scio College, Harrison county, Ohio, for five years and graduated in the literary course in 1887. He began teaching at the age of seventeen and taught a part of each year for five years and in the same five year was attending school. He was principal of the schools at Salem, Ohio, in 1888 and 1889. He then taught his home school one year. From 1890 to 1892 he was at Scio College taking a post graduate and business course. On May 4, 1893 he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and took charge of Hudson's Business College for one year. At the end of a year, he bought out Hudson's school and has since conducted it alone as Graham's Business College.

He teaches all the common branches, business, penmanship, stenography and typewriting. The business course includes merchandise and banking. He has been very successful with his school and has established it on a firm foundation. He enjoys the confidence of all who have patronized him. The old adage is "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," and as Professor Graham's pupils all do well in the positions they obtain, that is the best recommendation of his school. The latter has not reached its present position of high excellence without great effort. In the numerous conflicts it has had for its existence and usefulness, it has come out superior to all criticism and attacks of enemies. It is now one of the well established institutions of the city, and the only one of its kind.

Professor Graham was married October 22, 1896, to Miss Ida E. Phillips, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips, and granddaughter of the venerable John Flowers. Our subject is a member of the Sixth Street M. E. church, and is a democrat in his political views.

Professor Graham is one of those men who will always succeed and at the same time enjoy the respect of the community. His occupation, his habits and devotion to hard work command the esteem of all who know him. He is a conscientious christian gentleman and faithful to every trust. His word is as good as his bond. He is sincere and honest.

Hiram Doyle Gregory,

the son of John Belli Gegory and Catharine Smith, his wife, was born in Portsmouth, January 29th, 1858, at the northwest corner of Offnere and Gallia streets, then in the country, on the Gallipolis road. The house is still standing, but is remodeled and now occupied by Win Nye. Mr. Gregory is a grandson of Moses Gregory and a great-grandson of Major John Belli and Cynthia (Harrison) Belli, a cousin of William Henry Harrison.

Mr. Gregory spent his boyhood and received his early education in Portsmouth. He attended its public schools and a private school under Rev. Franklin, at Christ Episcopal church. He was one year in the postoffice under Mrs. Adair. He received his first business education under Harry Grimes, for whom he clerked in the commission business, in the days of steamboats and blast furnaces, when Portsmouth was the emporium of northeastern Kentucky, West Virginia and southern Ohio. He thinks that experience was the best part of his education.

In 1876, he entered the Ohio State University, then in its third year of existence, and was a room-mate and close friend of Robert S. Towne. He graduated in 1880, and the same year was employed as a civil engineer in locating railroad lines in Indiana and Illinois, and the next year in Ohio and Alabama. In 1882, he was engaged at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, as a bridge engineer; and in this capacity he traveled extensively for several years over the Middle and Western States.

JOHN BELLI GREGORY.

In January, 1886, he located in Carter county, Kentucky, and assisted his father with his property. Here he began the study of law. He was examined at Frankfort, Kentucky, by Judges Pryor and Holt, and admitted to the Kentucky bar in January, 1889, and opened an office at Grayson, Kentucky.

In October, 1893, he was married to Miss Louise Bailey, a daughter of Judge James P. Bailey, county Judge of Lincoln county, at Stanford, Kentucky.

In 1895, after having been engaged in the practice of law for six years, he went to Cornell University Law School, and took a course of lectures, but did not graduate. He was elected Police Judge of Grayson, Ky., in 1893, and served one term. In January, 1895, he was appointed United States Commissioner at Grayson, Ky., and tried some of the most noted "moonshiners" of the Kentucky mountains. In December, 1897, he moved to Covington, Ky., where he opened a law office and is now residing there and engaged in the practice of law. Mr. Gregory has two daughters, Catharine and Clara, and a son John B. Mr. Gregory is regarded as one of the best lawyers of the Kentucky bar. He is a man of great force of character, excellent judgment, a good trial lawyer and advocate.

John Belli Gregory

was born in Scioto county, May 29, 1830. He is a son of Moses and Harriet E. (Belli) Gregory, the former of whom was a native of Ross county, Ohio, and the latter of Scioto county. The maternal grandmother of Mr. Gregory, Cynthia Harrison, was a cousin of the hero of Tippecanoe. Her husband, Major John Belli, has a separate sketch herein. His paternal grandfather, David Gregory, was a mechanic, a machinist, and a man of powerful physical endurance. He built one of the first mills ever constructed on the Scioto river. His residence was near Jameson's Tavern not far from the historical spot called the "Hermit's Cave." He died about the year 1801. His widow removed to Chillicothe, where she was married to Henry Sheely, who in 1805, removed with his family to Portsmouth, where the father of the subject of this sketch, Moses Gregory, was brought up. He has a separate sketch herein.

John B. Gregory was brought up in Portsmouth, where he received his academic training, graduating from the High School of that place at the age of twenty. In 1850, he was employed as division engineer on the Scioto & Hocking Valley railroad, and in 1853, was promoted to assistant civil engineer, superintending the completion of the road from Portsmouth to Hamden. He remained in this position until 1856. In the following year, he was employed as engineer and surveyor in the construction of a blast furnace in Carter county, Kentucky, of which he was one of the projectors and part owner. In 1857, he was appointed by the Board of Public Works, resident engineer for the southern division of the Ohio canal. In 1858, and 1859, he was engaged in railroad engineering and in the running of railroads. From 1859 to 1860, he was Surveyor of Scioto county.

In 1859, Mr. Gregory was elected a member of the Board of Public works, a position he held for three years. He was renominated in 1862, but was defeated with the rest of the Republican State ticket. From 1862 to 1864, he was deputy Surveyor of Scioto county. In 1859, he was made financial agent of the Boone Furnace Company, filling the position until 1864, and at the same time rendering valuable service to the cause of the Union, as military agent of the government, keeping watch of rebel movements and reporting whatever was discovered to the Federal officers in the field and to Governor Dennison. In 1864, he was appointed by the Treasury Department at Washington, to make a survey and execute a plat of the country along the Mississippi river, with a view to confiscation. In 1865, he removed his family to the furnace site in Kentucky, where he remained as manager of the business until 1867.

In this year, he sold his interests in the furnace and returned to Portsmouth. In 1868 and 1869, he was engaged in engineering and constructing a turnpike road two miles out of Portsmouth, now forming a part of the Portsmouth and Buena Vista road. This was a work of considerable labor, and one of the most difficult of the kind in Ohio, and was made under the greatest possible disadvantages.

In 1869, the Atlantic and Lake Erie Railroad Company (now the Ohio Central) was formed, Mr. Gregory being selected as its chief engineer. In the autumn and winter of that year, he made the survey from Pomeroy to Toledo, and completed them the following year, when the work was begun, and continued under his supervision until the fall of 1871, when he resigned.

In 1872, he was appointed on a committee for the inspection of the public works of the state, and was directed to report on their condition to the legislature. He was subsequently employed in laying out the Columbus and Ferrara Railroad, now a branch of the Ohio Central Railroad. He continued engineering and surveying during 1873 and 1874. From 1876 to 1880, inclusive, he was city civil engineer of Portsmouth, and was Deputy Surveyor of Scioto county in 1871, 1874, 1876 and 1879 and in the meantime contracted and built twenty miles of the grading of the Scioto Valley railroad, between Portsmouth and Big Run. May 20, 1880, he was appointed by Governor Foster and confirmed by the Senate, as chief engineer of the public works of the state, which office he held until May, 1884.

On December 2, 1854, he was married to Miss Kate Smith, daughter of Thomas Smith, of Wheeling, West Virginia. They had three children, two of whom are now living. Harry Gregory, the older son, died at the age of sixteen. The other two are Hiram D. and Mrs. Harriet E. Barney. The son has a separate sketch herein. The daughter, Harriet, married Ariel D. Barney, of New York, and is now a widow.

After retiring from public office, Mr. Gregory resided in Columbus until the spring of 1887. He then moved to Carter county, Kentucky, to look after some large property interests he had there. He opened a marble quarry, but abandoned it. He then undertook to ship timber from his lands, which was sent to Liverpool, England. He spent the remainder of his life in his Kentucky home, where he did much good both in church and state affairs. He gave the land and built the Methodist church in the vicinity of his home. He took great interest in politics, being always a strong republican. He was a delegate to the State Republican Convention in Louisville, Kentucky, which met in June, 1895, and nominated William O. Bradley, for governor. At that convention Mr. Gregory was prominently mentioned for one of the State Railroad Commissioners. He was chairman of the Election Commission for Carter county, appointed under the Goebel law. He was a very useful citizen in his community. Mr. Gregory died on the 17th of January, 1902.

During his residence in Kentucky he was noted for his hospitality. He was always careful to entertain travelers and especially the ministers of any and all denominations in the vicinity. Mr. Gregory had a great many friends in Kentucky, and was beloved by all sorts and conditions of men, his neighbors and acquaintances. While he took an interest in all churches, he remained a faithful communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church. When he made a friend, that friend remained his friend always, and no one ever lived who possessed a greater list of excellent qualities of mind, heart and character.

Harry Shackelford Grimes

was born September 5, 1851, in Portsmouth, Ohio, on Jefferson street between Second and Third streets, in a frame house on the west side of the street. His father was James Grimes, and his mother's maiden name was Mary A. Tobin. His father was a native of Birmingham, England, born in 1805. His mother was a native of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. His father came to the United States in 1832 and located in Philadelphia. Afterwards he went to New Orleans, Louisiana, and subsequently returned to Pittsburg, Pa., where he commenced business and was married. He was a man of great inventive genius, and for many years he was engaged in the iron foundry business. He came to Portsmouth in 1837, and was very active and enterprising in his business. He bought and sold real estate, and built many fine residences. He built the house lately occupied by the late J. D. Clare. He died September 27, 1877. His wife died November 15, 1896.

Mr. Harry S. Grimes is his youngest son. He attended the schools of Portsmouth as a boy and youth until the year 1868, when he was in the High School. In that year he left school and began traveling. At the age of twenty he engaged in the commission and grain business in Portsmouth, Ohio, under the firm name of Gibbs & Grimes, and he has been in that business ever since, together with agricultural implements. He was a member of the

HARRY S. GRIMES.

City Council of Portsmouth from 1883 to 1885 and from 1895 to 1897. He was elected a cemetery trustee of Portsmouth in 1889, and has been re-elected for the same office tri-ennially ever since, his last election being in 1901. He has been a director of the State Board of Agriculture for eleven years. He was president one year of that time, and treasurer one year. He has been president of the Board of Trade of Portsmouth for six years, and is now occupying that position. He has been the president of the Portsmouth Savings and Loan Association ever since its organization. He is now president of the Ohio Grain Dealers' Association, and vice president of the National Grain Dealers' Association, and the Portsmouth Hotel Company, of which project he was the originator.

He is president of the Ohio Grain Dealers' Insurance Company, and president of the Commercial Club of the City of Portsmouth. He has been a vestryman of the Christ Episcopal church.

Mr. Grimes was married December 9, 1873 to Miss Mary C. Vaughters, daughter of John A. Vaughters, of Friendship, Ohio. They have three children: two sons, Shirley V., and John Alexander; and one daughter, Leah Pauline, who married Harry E. Taylor of the Portsmouth Times.

Mr. Grimes is a republican in his political views. He is noted for his wonderful industry and energy in any business matter or any matter of public interest. If he fails in anything he has the happy faculty of making his failure the ground of success in the next venture. His failures he never tells. He possesses vim and vigor to a remarkable degree, and so plans all his operations as to bring success in every outcome. He is one of the leading citizens and business men of Portsmouth. He is always in favor of any measure for the public benefit or public good, and if anybody has a scheme to benefit the town. Mr. Grimes is one of the first men who should be consulted upon the subject. It is not difficult to interest him in anything of that character, and when once interested he will do everything in his power to make the project a success.

Dustin Willard Gustin

was born at Junior Furnace, Green township, Scioto county, Ohio, April 1, 1857. His father was Benajah Gustin and his mother's maiden name was Ann B. Isaminger. She was the daughter of Philip Isaminger. His boyhood and youth were passed on a farm near Powellsville, and at Empire and Junior furnaces until he was eighteen years of age. He attended the district schools and one term at Lebanon. He read medicine two years with Doctor Sjagel from 1884 to 1886. He was appointed Deputy Sheriff in 1886 and served one year under A. J. Finney. In 1887, he was re-appointed and served four years under Yeager. In 1890, he was elected Sheriff and served for four years. From 1895 until 1901 he was engaged in the real estate and lumber business. He was elected City Marshal of Portsmouth in April, 1901. He is a republican. He was a delegate to the Congressional Convention that nominated H. S. Bundy. He was a delegate to the State Republican conventions of 1891 and 1892. August 15, 1899, he was married to Mary W. Finney, daughter of A. J. Finney. They have two children: Willard and Edith.

Mr. Gustin is a man of sterling integrity, a citizen much respected and highly honored by his fellow citizens. He makes an efficient officer and is of a most determined and resolute disposition.

Felix Haas,

son of Michael and Clara (Eisman) Haas, was born in Waldorf, Saxe-Meiningen, Germany, August 21, 1867. He was educated in the public schools of Waldorf and attended a short period in the gymnasium at Meiningen. He left school at the age of fourteen, and went to Eisenach and became a clerk in a dry goods store serving an apprenticeship of three years. After serving his apprenticeship, he came to America and directly to Portsmouth, where he received employment with his uncle, Leopold Eisman, in his clothing store. For nine years he worked for his uncles and then formed a partnership with Will H. Schwartz and Abraham Smith under the firm name of Haas, Schwartz & Smith. The business flourished under efficient management and in 1900 a department was added for the manufacture of men's clothing.

The business grew so rapidly that it became necessary to find new and larger quarters. In March, 1892, the Connolly building on the corner of Chillicothe and Fifth streets was fitted up and the entire business was concentrated under one roof. The trade is both wholesale and retail and it is one of the largest and most prosperous firms in Portsmouth.

Mr. Haas is a republican in his political views and is a member of the Jewish Congregation of which he has been secretary for the past twelve years. He served as a member of the City Board of Elections from 1895 to 1899 and was president of the Board for one year. He is a member of Aurora Lodge, F. and A. M., Past Chancellor of Massie Lodge K. of P. and a member of the United Commercial Travelers and of the Royal Arcanum. He was married to Clara Labold, daughter of Henry Labold and Fanny (Rosenfeld) Labold, June 23, 1891. They have had three children: Esther, deceased, Miriam and Julia.

When a person knows Felix Haas, he is soon recognized as a man of noble determination, stimulated only by lofty aspirations, of keen intellect and quick perception, of literary tastes necessarily giving way to business duties, a man true and just to the country of his choice and adoption, a man of devotion to his friends, to all that is pure and beneficial to mankind, and above all to his family and home whose ties he holds most dear, even in sacred reverence. In Felix Haas is found a worthy representative of self made, but nonetheless well made men: one whose energy, ambition and integrity any boy might safely emulate.

William Timothy Hackworth

was born February 1, 1866, at Forestdale, Lawrence county, Ohio. His great-great-grandfather, Thomas Hackworth, emigrated from Roanoke county, Virginia, to Wayne county, West Virginia. His son, William emigrated to Lawrence county, Ohio, and located near Forestdale in Perry township. George Hackworth, son of William, and father of our subject, removed to Mt. Joy, this county, in 1877, with his family. George W. and his father William were both members of Company C, 5th W. Va. Infantry. George W. enlisted September 14, 1861, at the age of twenty-three and entered service as a Corporal. He re-enlisted February 14, 1864 and was finally discharged September 21, 1864, with the company. William entered the service August 12, 1861, at the age of forty-four, re-enlisted December 24, 1863 and was discharged with company September 21, 1864. William was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run, in both legs by gunshot. He received another gunshot wound in the head at Winchester, Virginia, and another wound in the elbow was received in a later battle. He carried this bullet in his elbow until his death, July 20, 1890. The mother of our subject was Susan (Carry) Hackworth, daughter of Timothy F. Carry and Mary J. (Wooten) Carry. Her father was a member of Company F, 56th O. V. I. enlisted October 31, 1861, at the age of forty. He was wounded by a horse's hoof at Pittsburg Landing in a cavalry charge. He was drowned at Cincinnati while being transferred with his company from one boat to another July 28, 1862.

Our subject was raised on a farm and attended the country schools. He commenced the mercantile business in April, 1897, at Mt. Joy, where he did business for five years. He removed to Rarden in 1902 and is now conducting a general store there. He is a republican and a member of the Mt. Joy Baptist church. He is also a member of the Improved Order of Red Men. He married Nora McBride, daughter of A. B. McBride of Rarden, January 25, 1894. Their children are: Ruth, aged six and Hazen, aged two.

Henry Hall

was born October 11, 1829, in the Aaron Kinney homestead. His father was William Hall and his mother, Margaret Kinney. They were married November 30, 1828, at the Kinney homestead. He has lived all his life in Portsmouth. He graduated from the Portsmouth High School in 1846. A. L. Childs was superintendent of schools and his teacher. R. S. Silcox was also one of his teachers. He attended school first at the Fourth street school. A Mr. Sample was superintendent at that time. There were then nine schools,

After leaving school at 16, he went into his father's store, on Front street, where Webb's saw mill formerly stood. In the spring of 1846, he went east to buy goods and afterwards bought all the goods and managed the store until 1855. In 1853, he became a partner with his father and the firm was W. Hall & Son. In 1855, the firm sold out to the Scioto Rolling Mill Co.

In the fall of 1855, he went into the banking house of Dugan, Means, Hall & Co. composed of Thomas Dugan, Thomas W. Means, Hugh Means, William Hall, J. L. Watkins, Wm. and George Wertz, J. M. Shackelford, W. V. Peck, Wm. and John Ellison and Wm. Means. He was teller. It was located where the Farmer's National Bank stood, for a while and then moved where the First National is now. In 1858, the firm became Means, Hall & Co., and Watkins was manager, and Henry Hall, Cashier. The Bank continued until 1862 and Hall was Cashier until that time.

In 1862, he was appointed First Lieutenant and Quartermaster of the 91st O. V. I., but did not serve over six weeks. When D. McFarland was made U. S. Assessor, our subject became editor of the Portsmouth Tribune, and remained two years. In 1864, he was made special agent of the Treasury Department, and continued so to the close of the war. After the war, he made wheelbarrows for four years. He ran a canal packet from Portsmouth to Chillicothe for ten months. From 1874 to 1876 he was clerk of the Water Works Board, and superintendent. From 1876 to 1881, he was a flask maker at Neill's foundry.

In 1881, he was elected Justice of the Peace for Wayne township and served ten years. He was elected Mayor of Portsmouth in 1891, and served two terms. In 1896, he was elected Justice of the Peace for Wayne township, and re-elected in 1898. He was a whig and is a republican.

On February 19, 1852, he was married to Miss Caroline Clark Thompson, a native of Portsmouth. Her father was John C. Thompson, a soldier of the Mexican war. Her grandfather was Moses Thompson, an early citizen of Portsmouth. He has two children, George W. Hall, of Cincinnati and P. Kinney Hall of Portsmouth. He was made a Mason in Aurora lodge in 1851 and has been such ever since, and was secretary of the Portsmouth lodge, No. 395 until it united with the Aurora Lodge in 1902.

John Wikoff Hall

was born about two and a half miles above Rome on the Ohio river, on the old Wikoff homestead, June 30, 1861. He is the son of Charles N. and Calista (Wikoff) Hall. She is a sister of General A. T. Wikoff, formerly Secretary of State. The grandfather of our subject was James H. Hall, son of Benjamin Hall. His maternal grandfather was John Wikoff, son of Peter Wikoff, born in Shelby county, Kentucky, of Welsh descent.

His father enlisted in Company I, 91st O. V. I., August 9, 1862, for three years, was appointed First Sergeant October 28, 1862; promoted to Second Lieutenant February 17, 1864; and to First Lieutenant November 3, 1864, discharged March 21, 1865. He was wounded at the battle of Opequan. After his discharge from the army, he was elected Clerk of Adams county in 1865 and served for one term. After this he was Deputy Sheriff for a time.

Our subject attended the public schools at West Union until the family removed to Columbus, Ohio in 1872, when he entered the High School there and was graduated in 1876. He immediately entered the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College there and attended for the two years following. During this time, his father was Chief Clerk in the office of the Secretary of State. The family returned to the farm in Adams County in March, 1878, where our subject labored for two years and then became a clerk in the United States Pension Office at Columbus, Ohio. He only remained here about six months and then took a position with the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo railroad. He did clerical work there for eighteen months. After this he spent one year at home in Adams county and three years in Missouri and Kansas and then settled in Scioto county and has been a farmer ever since. He has always been a republican and is a member of Dirigo Lodge, No. 702, I. O. O. F. at Rome, Ohio. He was married June 30, 1885, to Elizabeth F. Kirk, daughter of T. J. and Eliza (Glass) Kirk. Their children are Horace L., Gracie E., Bessie P., Mary Susan, William A. and Lulu I.

Vallee Harold

was born at Fredericktown, Madison county, Missouri, June 4, 1857. His father was Doctor John Harold, a native of Ireland. His mother was born Almee Vallee. She was descended from distinguished French and Spanish ancestry. Her great-grandfather was the last Commandant of the Province of Louisiana and her grandfather the last Commandant of the post of Ste. Genevieve, under the French government. Both of Mr. Harold's parents died before he was eight years old and he was given by his mother to her sister Eleanore, the wife of Col. Joseph Bogy. Although she had reared twelve children of her own, this gentle and lovable woman gave the orphan the same affection and care as if he were of her own flesh and blood, and never, in word or deed, was he regarded as other than the child of this generous and noble couple. By them he was reared and taught, by tutor and in private school, and finally sent to finish his education in the college of the Christian Brothers, at St. Louis. From this institution he graduated, the head of his class, at seventeen years of age.

At the age of twenty, he was licensed to practice law. In 1880, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Ste. Genevieve county, Missouri and re-elected in 1882. In the year 1884, he resigned the office and moved to Greenville Illinois, where he devoted himself to the newspaper business, which he had entered upon in Ste. Genevieve in 1880. At Greenville, he held the office of Master-in-Chancery from 1886 to 1891, and resigned that office, in the latter year, to become editor of the Portsmouth Times, having bought a half interest from the late Hon. James W. Newman.

On November 25, 1891, Mr. Harold was married at Greenville, to Miss Anna Belle Tiffin, who was a relative of Governor Tiffin, of Ohio. She died October 13, 1895.

In religion, Mr. Harold has always been a Catholic and in politics he is a democrat. He is opposed to character comments in a work like this, but the editor wishes to say that Mr. Harold is one of the energetic and enterprising citizens in Portsmouth. Socially he stands the best and as a newspaper man, he has made the Times one of the best journals in the state.

Benjamin Gaylord Harris

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, May 8, 1867. He is the son of William and Ann (Lewis) Harris. His father was a foreman of the Gaylord Mill for a number of years. Our subject spent his boyhood and youth in Portsmouth where he attended the public schools. He learned his trade of J. W. Lutz and worked with him for six years. In 1892, he started in business for himself as a photographer at Springfield, Ohio, and remained there three years. He then went to Osborn, Ohio, and remained there four years. He was a member of the City Council of Osborn for two terms in 1896 and 1897. In 1899, he removed to Portsmouth where he has conducted a photograph gallery since.

In December, 1898 he was married to Miss Laura Hershey. They have one child, Louis, age seven. Mr. Harris is a republican and a most excellent friend and citizen.

Paul Howard Harsha

was born August 19, 1859, in Harshaville, Adams county. His father was William Buchanan Harsha and his mother Rachel McIntire, daughter of General William McIntire. He was the second son of his parents. He has a common school education. He learned the practical business of milling from his father. From the time he arrived at the age of twenty-one years, until 1884, he was employed in his father's mill at Harshaville, and had charge of the entire milling operations. In 1884, he took an interest with his father, under the firm name of W. B. Harsha & Son, which has continued until the present time.

On January 11, 1884, he was married to Miss Ada Barnard, of Cincinnati. He resided at Harshaville from 1884 until 1892, when he removed to the city of Portsmouth, Ohio. In 1889, he formed a partnership with John

P. Caskey, under the firm name of Harsha & Caskey, built a flour mill in the east end of the city, and that business continued until October, 1901, when he and Mr. Caskey dissolved. Since that date he has conducted the business alone. He is one of the progressive men of the city. He is a member of the United Commercial Travelers, Elks and Knights Templars. He was in Portsmouth from August, 1889, but did not remove his family there until April, 1892. He has four children: Edith Armstrong, Elizabeth Lucile, William Howard and Philip Barnard.

He and his wife are members of the Second Presbyterian church. He has always been a republican. He has never held a public office except that of member of the City Council of Portsmouth.

Daniel H. Harwood

was born February 3, 1828 in Twin township, Ross county, Ohio, near Bourneville. His father's name was Benjamin Harwood. He was a native of Maryland. He died in the autumn of 1848, aged fifty-five years on what is now the Davis farm, then the John A. Turley farm. His mother's maiden name was Mary Ward. She was born in Twin township, Ross county, Ohio, in 1799, and died in Lucasville in 1884, being over eighty-five years of age.

The subject of this sketch never received any school training. When twelve years of age, he hired as a jigger boy at $4.00 per month on public works, building the turnpike from Chillicothe to Bainbridge. His work was to go around with a jug of whiskey and a pepper box and give each man the full of it with whiskey six or eight times a day. The next year, when thirteen years old, he drove a cart making a cut through a hill. When he was fourteen, he worked on building the turnpike between Kingston and Tarleton. In 1843 and 1844, he worked on the turnpike from Chillicothe to Portsmouth. He drove a two horse team and his wages were $6.00 per month. Men on a farm at the same time were receiving $7.00 per month.

In 1850, he married Hannah Darlington. In the spring of 1854, he rented the Marsh farm and farmed on it for twenty-six years. In 1880, he bought the farm where he now lives on the Canal opposite Lucasville. His wife died in April, 1886, leaving seven children, as follows: Sarah Ann, deceased; William H. living on the old home place; Benjamin F., a resident of Portsmouth; Mary E., deceased, wife of John Marsh; Daniel L., at home; Charles M., a member of Company A, 9th Regiment, United States Infantry now in the Philippines; Ida B., the wife of William T. Dever, residing on the Dever farm opposite Lucasville.

In November, 1888, he was married to Emma Double, a daughter of William and Margaret Double of Sedan, both natives of Butler county, Pennsylvania. Her mother's maiden name was Margaret Alsworth. Mrs. Harwood was a teacher in the public schools for six years and attended one term at the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1881. In 1877, she was united with the Salem Regular Baptist church and in 1896 transferred her membership to Bethany Regular Baptist church at Rushtown, Ohio.

Mr. Harwood's father was a Jackson democrat, but to use his own language, "he was born a republican" and has always been one, never voting any other way. He is a man who is outspoken and pronounced in his views on any subject. He is kind to his family and accommodating to his neighbors. His home is the stopping place for his many friends and not even a tramp was ever turned away hungry. Generous to a fault he is always ready to donate to any one in need.

Francis Edward Hayward

was born May 13, 1848, in the Little French Grant. His father was Eliphaz Hayward, son of Moses Hayward and his mother was Mary Cadot, daughter of Claudius Cadot. Moses Hayward and Claudius Cadot both have sketches herein. His childhood and boyhood were spent at the place of his nativity. He attended the common schools and took a course in Duff's Commercial College in Pittsburg, which he completed in 1870. The first actual business he engaged in was selling sewing machines for George D. Selby in Jackson county, Ohio. This he regards as the most successful effort in business he has ever engaged in. Subsequent to this, he spent three years in the Mercantile department of the Los Gatos Manufacturing Company, Los Gatos, California.

He located in Ironton, Ohio, in the retail grocery business in the spring of 1874. He followed that for 26 years and merged it into the exclusively wholesale grocery business, March 26, 1900 with Drake S. Murdock at Ironton, Ohio. For twenty years, he has been a stock holder in the Ironton Fire Brick Company. He was its secretary and treasurer for eighteen years, and has been its president for the past two years. He has been a director in the First National Bank of Ironton for about ten years and has been vice president of the bank for the past six years. He is also secretary of the Lawrence Telephone Company. He is an uncompromising republican.

He was married June 28, 1874 to Julia A. Work. Their children are: F. R. now assistant superintendent of Siegel, Cooper & Company's house in New York; Claude C. a practicing attorney in Ironton, Ohio; Mary Elizabeth at home. Mr. Hayward is one of the most respected business men of Ironton. He is a power and a force in every enterprise with which he is connected.

Alonzo Wesley Hazelbaker

was born near Otway, Ohio, September 5, 1876. His father's name was William Hazelbaker, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Thompson. Our subject was one of five children. He was brought up at Otway, and was a farmer's boy. He attended the common schools near his home, and at Lebanon one term, in 1893. He taught school from 1893 to 1900. In 1899 and 1900, he studied telegraphy, and was appointed agent at Newtown, Ohio, in August, 1900, and remained there until November, 1900. He has been agent at Otway since November, 1900. He is unmarried, and is a democrat in his political views.

John Heer

was born Feb. 2, 1854, in Chillicothe, Ohio. His father was Samuel Heer, and his mother's maiden name was Catharine Wilhelm. His father was a native of Bavaria and his mother was from Hesse, Germany. Our subject is the oldest of six brothers and three sisters. His father moved to Portsmouth when he was four years of age, and from the age of six attended the public schools of Portsmouth until he was fifteen. He then went into the employ of Rumsey, Rhodes & Reed, wholesale dry goods. He was with them until 1873, and then was engaged with Voorhels, Miller & Co. When they moved to Cincinnati in 1874, he went with them, and remained in their employ sixteen years. He left this firm in 1890, and was with Henry Giershofer & Co., for one year. He then came to Portsmouth, and opened a clothing house at Nos. 307-309 Chillicothe street, and has been engaged in that business ever since.

He was married Nov. 8, 1880 to Jessie L. Miller, a daughter of William Miller of Hillsboro, Ohio. He is a member of the Masonic bodies in Portsmouth, Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council, Commandery and is an Elk.

Mr. Heer is one of the most energetic, enterprising and industrious business men of Portsmouth, and a man of the highest character and standing in the community. He believes in strictly attending to his own business, and does not seek public attention in any way. He is regarded as one of the successful merchants in the city, and one of the most valuable citizens.

Frederick Held

was born January 19, 1831, at Colmar in Alsace. His father was Frederick Held, and his mother's maiden name was Hauser. His father and mother had five children, four sons and a daughter. Frederick was the second child. His father was a weaver by occupation. Young Held had no ambition to serve in the French army and so he left the country privately, and determined to go to America. He sailed from Havre in the French sailing vessel "Liberty." After forty days he landed at New York, and then went to Cincinnati, and from there to Barboursville, Virginia, where he remained for eighteen months working at the cabinet maker's trade. Then he went to Ironton and worked at his trade there, and from there he went to Clifton furnace and dug ore.

Among other places he visited Portsmouth and stayed a short time, and went to Scioto furnace. He was married here to Christina Graffer, in August, 1855. He worked about the furnace until 1855, when he went to Bloom furnace, and was there when the war broke out.

He enlisted October 18, 1861, in Company B, of the 56th, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was appointed a Corporal and afterwards made a Sergeant. He is a firm believer in the idea that thirteen is an unlucky number. He participated in twelve engagements, and the thirteenth was the battle of Champion Hill, May 16, 1863. There his good right arm was shattered, and was so mangled that it had to be amputated close to the body. For two weeks after the battle, he was on the field where he was shot. He was then taken to the hospital at Memphis, and from there to Jefferson City. Subsequently he was sent to the government hospital in Indiana. There he obtained his discharge, November 5, 1863. He was in every battle and engagement participated in by his command until he lost his arm. He came back and located at Gephart's, where he has ever since resided.

He has eight children: Kate, the eldest daughter, is the wife of John Doll, who lives on the west side near Union Mills; his second daughter, Mary, is married to George Jenkins, and lives on the west side; his son Herman is a farmer near Gephart's station; his son William works in the car shops at Huntington, W. Va.; his sons John and Fred, are at home and single; his son Charles is at work in Wheeling, W. Va.; his daughter Anna Cordella is at home.

Since his injury in the military service, he has necessarily been compelled to live a life of retirement, but no one enjoys himself any more, and no one is more independent and respected. Mr. Held, of course, receives a pension for his injury. He works a little, as he is able with his one arm. He is a republican. When asked regarding his politics, he said that he voted as he shot. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is faithful and diligent in his profession.

George W. Helfenstein

was born in London, Ohio, March 20, 1836. His father moved to Jackson, Ohio, when he was a child. He came to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1854, and became a clerk with R. Bell & Co. Then he clerked for Jefferson & Kepner, C. D. Elden, and James M. Ramsey, and was for a short time at Jackson Furnace. He went into the employment of C. A. M. Damarin & Co., and remained with them for over twenty-one years. He became a member of the First Presbyterian church on locating in Portsmouth. He was superintendent of its Sunday school for many years. On January 28, 1863, he married Miss Frances E. Spry, daughter of Richard Spry. They had one daughter, Grace, born in 1864, who grew to young womanhood and died December 25, 1887.

He entered the 173 O. V. I. Company D, as First Lieutenant, and was appointed Adjutant December 21, 1863. He was mustered out June 26, 1865. About 1878, he went into partnership with John Richardson in the grocery business, and remained in that until his death. No truer man ever lived. His great-grandfather, Peter Helfenstein, was Major of the 8th (German) Virginia regiment, in the Revolutionary war. He had a son William, and his son Henry, was the father of our subject. The revolutionary ancestor died February 4, 1778, from the hardships of the service, and is interred at Winchester, Va.

Here under the green grass of the lovely valley of Virginia rests the mortal part of the brave and good major, guarded by the hazy wall of the Blue Ridge on one side, and the towering Alleghany on the other with the Massanutten looking over from the south. And in the valley of the Ohio, guarded around by the silent, everlasting hills, with the river like a thread of yellow gold between, lies the mortal part of his grandson, our subject, whose life was likewise cut short by his service to his country. George Helfenstein lived a pure, honest and honorable life. His whole career illustrated his religious profession. No one could know him without respecting, admiring and loving him for his noble qualities of mind and heart. It could never be said that his profession and his life were inconsistent. He was of the salt of the earth, and all his life he acted on principle and conscience.

Emil John Helt

was born January 29, 1875, in the city of Portsmouth, Ohio. His father is George Helt and his mother was Barbara P. Herder, a daughter of John M. Herder. His parents were both of German ancestry, but born in Scioto county. Emil attended the Portsmouth schools until he was of the age of eighteen. He dropped out of the B class in the High School, and went into the grocery business, at 513 Chillicothe street, in 1893. He did not like it and gave it up in six months. He clerked in the same business for C. Masters & Company and F. B. Clark, and then engaged in the wholesale commission business until 1896. Since that year, he has been in the huckster business, buying and selling produce. Mr. Helt would never be selected for a handsome man. In fact, he is the very reverse, but he knows everybody and is generally liked. He is not ashamed to work and to keep at it. He is a hustler and has a voice just modulated for the crying of his wares on the street. He is a republican, a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, and an Odd Fellow. He was married December 30, 1897, to Miss Norah Lewis, and has two sons, Emil C., and George O. He is a whole-hearted, whole-souled, liberal minded citizen and believes in doing his best every day in the week.

George Allen Henry

was born May 9, in Gallia county. His father was Charles W. Henry, and his mother's maiden name was Susan Burnett, daughter of James Burnett. He received a common school education in Gallia county. At the age of twelve years he went to work on his father's farm, and continued that until he went into the army. He enlisted in the 2nd Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, Company F, February 25, 1864, for three years, and was mustered out with the company August 23, 1865. After he came home from the war he went to work on his father's farm, and continued that until September, 1868.

He was married April 12, 1868, in Mason county, W. Va., to Miss Jane Kyle, daughter of George and Nancy Kyle. They have had eight children: Albert F., married, resides in Green township on a farm; Mary Ellen, married Albert Feurt, a farmer, resides on the Chillicothe pike; Florence, married John Butterfield, a farmer, resides near Haverhill, in Green township; Nannie J., married Henry Goddard, a farmer, resides near Wheelersburg; George P., a farmer; Millard, clerk in a hardware store at Ironton; Perry, at home; Willie, died at the age of five years. In 1868, he rented a farm and farmed in West Virginia for nine years. In 1877, he went to Kentucky and farmed a year. He then moved to Scioto county, Ohio, and rented a farm near Haverhill, and is still engaged in farming. He is a republican, and a member of the Methodist church. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at Wheelersburg, and of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Meshech Herdman

was born January 5, 1836, near old Steam furnace, in Adams county, where his father Michael Herdman, who came from Pennsylvania, had settled. Michael was in the war of 1812. He received a land warrant which he traded for a piece of land in Adams county. The mother of our subject was Jemina Downing, of near Locust Grove, Ohio. His brothers and sisters were: Philip, William, Rebecca, Susan, John, Sarah, Joseph, Elizabeth, Robert and Ruth, all of whom grew to maturity, were married and raised families. Our subject lived with his father on the farm until he was twenty years of age, when he came to Nile township, where he has since resided. On coming to Scioto county he learned the carpenter's trade. Besides working on houses, he built flat boats for A. F. Givens. For seven or eight years, he worked at flat boating for Givens. He afterwards became a contractor and built several wooden bridges for the county and a number of school houses. He formed a partnership with D. C. Givens in 1883, in the saw mill business. After several years, he bought Givens out and has since been in business by himself. He built a saw and grist mill near McGaw P. O. in 1889, and buys timber and saws it into lumber. He was a trustee of Nile township from 1884 to 1887, and served a number of terms as school director. He is a democrat of the "dyed in the wool" sort.

He was married February 1, 1866, to Mary J. Givens, daughter of William and Elizabeth Givens. Their children are: Nora, died June 5, 1883; George; Alfred; Elizabeth, wife of Robert Jeffreys; Clara; Fred; Harry; John and Clyde. Mr. Herdman has the natural qualifications of a good citizen, honesty, industry and thrift. He always stands for the right, is a firm believer in religion and has raised a large family of respectable children. He possesses a large amount of mechanical genius.

Rev. Joseph D. Herron

was born in Kirtland, Lake county, Ohio, November 4, 1853. His father was Samuel Herron, a native of Scotland, and his mother's maiden name was Martha Dunkley. She was born in Northampton, England, and her early home was in London. The Dunkleys were originally Norman-French. The subject of this sketch was the last of five children, and the only son. When he was six years of age, his parents moved to Carrollton, Missouri, where he lived until their death in 1864 and 1865. For six years he made his home with a married sister in Newcastle, Pennsylvania, and in Marietta, Ohio. During this time he completed the upper grades of the public schools at New Castle, attended St. John's Academy, Camden, New Jersey, for one year, and clerked for three years in the dry goods store of Bosworth, Wells & Company, Marietta, Ohio. At this time, his talent for music, which he inherited from the Dunkleys, played an important part in his career. Through a former classmate at St. John's Academy, he was offered the position of organist at St. Stephen's College, Annandale, New York. He accepted, as a way was thus opened to secure a college education. He was graduated, with the degree of B. A., in 1876, secundus, and metaphysical prizeman of his class.

He then entered the General Theological Seminary, New York city, graduating in 1879 with the degree of S. T. B., and receiving the degree of M. A. in course from his alma mater. During this time he was a member of the New York Choral Union, a musical society of 300 voices which was led by P. S. Gilmore. He was also choir master at the Church of the Transfiguration (The little church around the corner). He was ordained to the diaconate at his final graduation, by Bishop Horatio Potter, on Trinity Sunday. His first ministry was in Trinity Parish, New York city, as curate of St. Augustine's. In 1882, he was called to Trinity church, New Castle, Pennsylvania, where he served for fifteen years. Here, for three years, he was a member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese and for six years, chairman of the Committee on the state of the Church. In 1897, he was called to All Saints church, Portsmouth, Ohio, his present charge. Here he organized and drilled a vested choir of boys, girls and young men, which now numbers sixty voices, and is one of the best in the diocese.

While an opponent of state rights, and a "stalwart" in the days of Grant and Conkling, he has voted the Prohibitionist ticket since 1884. Mr. Herron is a clear, easy and fluent speaker. He is one of the best sermonizers in his diocese. His words are well chosen and easily understood and his thoughts are carefully considered before expressed in words. Whatever he has to say is interesting and instructive. He is a teacher in the very highest sense of the word. He is an earnest and persistent worker, always active and full of nervous energy. He is passionately fond of music and of teaching it. He has composed and published a number of pieces of sacred music. Mr. Herron's sole aim and object in life, to which everything bends, is to do his whole duty, in the position he occupies.

Harry D. Hibbs

was born November 15, 1865, in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father's name was Jacob C. Hibbs, and his mother's name was Barbara Ann Williamson. He attended the public schools of Portsmouth until he was fifteen years of age.

He then engaged in the hardware business with his father, and has been engaged in it ever since, except one year. From 1880 to 1889 he was connected with Hibbs, Angle & Co. From 1889 to 1890, he was connected with the Woolen Mills Company at West Superior, Wisconsin. In 1890, he returned to Portsmouth and again engaged in the hardware business. In 1899, the firm became a corporation, and he became general manager.

He was married January 26, 1888 to Miss Sadie Watkins. They have one child, Marjorie. In his political views, he is a republican. He is a member of the following Masonic bodies: Knights Templars, Council, Chapter and Blue Lodge, and of the Elks. In social life he is an excellent entertainer. His humor is ever bright and sparkling. He is the soul of any social function. As a business man, he is energetic and tireless. He has built up a large and successful business and understands every detail of it. While he has done wonderfully well in his own matters, he has at the same time done well for the public. He always favors and promotes public enterprise and will always be found in the front in every measure for the public good.

Jacob C. Hibbs

was born April 3, 1830, in Union township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father, Jacob Hibbs, was a native of Pennsylvania, and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Lucas, a native of Virginia. Our subject was reared in the county and attended the common schools. He took a partial course at the Dennison University, Granville, Ohio, in 1852. He resided on his father's farm until 1860, and in that year he entered the service of his brother, Gen. Joseph Lucas Hibbs, as salesman in a hardware store at Portsmouth. He remained with him as an employe until 1866, when he became a partner. In January, 1870, he went into the hardware business on his own account and continued until 1873, when he took in Mr. Wm. H. Angle as a partner, and the business was conducted as Hibbs, Angle & Co., for a period of twenty-one successful and prosperous years. In 1894 he bought out his partner Wm. H. Angle, and continued the business alone. In the spring of 1899, the business was incorporated as The J. C. Hibbs Hardware Company, capital stock, $60,000. He became the president of the corporation, and has remained such ever since. Owing to Mr. Hibbs' poor health he is compelled to spend the winters in a warmer climate, usually El Paso; but his business is successfully attended to by his son Harry D. Hibbs, in his absence.

He was married April 30, 1857 to Barbara Ann Williamson of Washington township, Scioto county. They have the following children: two died in infancy, and those surviving are: Flora E., wife of Edward R. Peebles, a salesman in the city of Portsmouth; Lou Grace, wife of Alva Agee, a lecturer of the Farmers' Institutes; and a son, Harry Dixon, conducts the J. C. Hibbs hardware store in Portsmouth.

Mr. Hibbs was brought up a democrat and remained as such until 1860, when he became a republican. The same year he joined the Baptist church, and has been a faithful and active working member ever since. As a business man he has had a wonderfully successful career and has richly earned that leisure in his old age which he is now enjoying.

William Lois Hitchcock

was born in Muscatine, Iowa, December 12, 1866. His parents were Charles and Alma (Lee) Hitchcock. His father died before William was seven years old and he came to Sciotoville and worked in the Fire Brick Works before he was twelve years of age. He received a common school education in the Sciotoville schools. In politics, he has always been a republican. In 1886, he married Lily Purdy. He has served in nearly every capacity as a firebrick worker, beginning at the bottom of the ladder and working his way to the top. He is now superintendent of three yards: Scioto Fire Brick Company, Webster Fire Brick Company, and the Blast Furnace Fire Brick Company.

To begin as a day laborer and at thirty-six to be a superintendent of three separate businesses is a career to which any young American could proudly aspire. It demonstrates what can be attained by a close study of and application to business.

John Hogan

was born March 3, 1843 in New Orleans, Louisiana. His father was Cornelius Hogan, who lived and died a resident of New Orleans. His mother's maiden name was Mary J. Lee, a native of New York state. His parents emigrated to New Orleans from the state of New York in the early thirtys. Our subject was the oldest child of the family. His father died when he was twelve years old, and his mother died when he was thirteen years of age. His father had been a soldier of the Mexican war from Louisiana, had been wounded in the knee, in one of the battles, and died from the effects of the wound. Our subject attended school in New Orleans. One John Adams was his guardian, and he sent him and his sister to the Ironton schools about 1856. Their aunt Catharine Payne came along and took charge of him. He went to school in Ironton about two years, and then ran away from his home and located in the French Grant and worked for Travis Herrel. From there he came into the Scioto valley and worked among the Noels, as a farm hand, until the war broke out.

He enlisted August 5, 1861 in Company "A," 33rd O. V. I., and served until July 12, 1865. He was promoted from private to Sergeant November 1, 1864, in the Atlanta Campaign. July 2, 1863, he was wounded twice at the battle of Stone river. In the same battle he was lying down and a ball struck his right elbow, and then passed into his right thigh where it has since remained. July 5, 1864, at the battle of Chattahoochee river, he was wounded in the right thigh in the same place as the other wound, only the ball went through. March 16, 1865, when the war was almost over he was wounded in the left foot at Averysboro, North Carolina. He was the first man to be inside the line at Savannah, Ga., and he was at the surrender of Gen. Joe Johnson. He was mustered out July 12, 1865.

December 6, 1865, he married Maria J. Noel, a daughter of Peter Noel, the oldest son of Philip Noel, who died in 1850. Our subject has had seven children, four of whom died in childhood. His surviving children are William Everett, a practicing physician at Frederick, Mahoning county, Ohio, who married Abigail Groniger; his daughter Martha Jane, who married Frank Ford of Portsmouth, Ohio; his son Edwin Winfield is a farmer residing near his father. Mr. Hogan was a democrat until 1877, when he became a republican, and has continued such ever since. He belongs to the Aurora Lodge, Mt. Vernon Chapter, Solomon Council and Calvary Commandery, Masonic bodies in Portsmouth. He was a school director in his district for nineteen years, and trustee of the township for sixteen years. Mr. Hogan is one of those who can always be depended on. He gravely considers before he gives his word, but once given, he will live up to any agreement made by him. He is always good company and knows how to entertain his friends.

George Willis Holman

was born August 1, 1851. His father was John Holman, a native of England. His mother's maiden name was Laura Curtis a native of New York. Our subject was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, went through the schools of Portsmouth and was graduated from the High School in 1870. At the age of twenty he started in as a clerk in Peter Brodbeck's dry goods store and remained there two years. In 1873, he went to Keystone furnace in Jackson county, and clerked in a store. He remained there two years. After this he was one year in the milling business in Portsmouth, Ohio with Dr. C. C. Fulton. In 1876 he went to Quinimont, West Virginia, and was clerk in a furnace store. In 1880 he went to Longdale, Virginia, Alleghany county, and became a store keeper and purchaser of supplies for the furnaces and has been engaged in that business ever since. He was married Dec. 15, 1851 to Sadie Wait, daughter of John H. Wait, an old resident of Portsmouth. The names of his children are: Natalie and George. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Holman is esteemed by all who know him for his high character. He is one of the most genial and companionable of men, valuable in church, lodge and community and one who can always be depended on to do his share of work and do it to every one's satisfaction.

John Henry Holman

was born August 9, 1860 at South Webster, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Herman Holman and his mother's maiden name was Isabel Mittendorf. He attended the common schools until he was sixteen years of age, when he went to Delaware for a year. At the age of nineteen he went to Sciotoville and worked in the store of the Sciotoville Fire Brick Company where he remained two years. He went west in 1882 and was gone about a year. In 1883 he engaged in the brick business in Sciotoville and was there until May 16, 1892 when he went into the employment of J. F. Davis druggist and remained there during his life. When the business was incorporated he became secretary and treasurer. For two years before his death, he traveled for the company. He was taken sick May 12, 1901 and died July 8, 1901 of typhoid fever after one relapse. He was married June 2, 1886 to Lillias Seva Smith, daughter of the late L. P. N. Smith. They had one son David Harmon who died in infancy and one daughter, Stephanie S. Mr. Holman was a member of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias and a member of the Commercial Club. He was a republican in his political views.

As a clerk and as a manager he has developed wonderful business ability and had he survived, would have made as great a success in the business as his predecessor, J. F. Davis had done before him. His death was one of the saddest events which ever took place. He was so full of life, so full of energy, with wonderful capacity and ability for business, it seemed the irony of fate that he should have been taken away in the flower of manhood. All of his friends loved him and could not say too much in his praise.

Cornelius Honaker, M. D.,

was born in Bath county, Kentucky, October 11, 1831. He is the son of Charles Wesley Honaker, a native of Virginia, and Sarah (England) Honaker. His father was a Judge of Carter county, Kentucky. His boyhood and youth were spent in Carter county Kentucky, where he obtained a common school education. He studied medicine with Drs. W. England and Samuel Ellis of Lewis county, Kentucky. He took a first course in the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, in 1859 and 1860. He came to Nile township, Scioto county, Ohio, in 1861. He attended a second course in the Ohio Medical College in 1883 and 1884 and graduated on March 7, 1884. He has been a farmer and has practiced medicine in Nile township ever since 1884. He was married June 8, 1863 to Emily J. Storer. They have two children: Morris Simpson, killed in a wreck on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad in 1890 and Lucy, wife of A. King Veazey. He was a democrat before the war, a republican in 1864 and until 1876, when he became a democrat, but he voted for McKinley in 1896. He is a member of the M. E. church and for ten years was a class leader and Sunday school superintendent. He is a very excellent citizen and is so esteemed in his own community.

Hermann Huels, Sr.,

was born October 31, 1834, at Rhede, Westphalen, Prussia. His parents were Hermann and Elizabeth (Knipper) Huels. He attended the schools of Gronau, Westphalen until he was fourteen years of age, when he was apprenticed to learn the dyer's trade and served an apprenticeship for three years. He remained one year after his apprenticeship with his master, and traveled as was customary, in his country, until 1863, working in a great many towns in Germany, France, Switzerland, and Austria. Then he determined to go to the United States. He left Bremen, July 31, 1864 and landed in the United States the August following. He went to Springfield, Illinois, and remained until the following October, when he went to Cincinnati and followed his trade for one year. In October, 1865, he went to Chillicothe where he worked for a Mr. Dueber, and on September 10, 1866 he married his daughter, Pauline.

On February 15, 1870, he came to Portsmouth and purchased the dye house belonging to F. Zehner. He enlarged the business, and purchased machinery for dyeing with steam. He has been very successful in business. He has been a member of the German Benevolent Society for over thirty years, and is a member of St. Peter's Benevolent Society. He is a director of the German Buiding and Loan Association. He was a member of the City Council from the Second ward from 1899 to 1901, and is now president of the non-partisan Fire Board of the city of Portsmouth. He is a democrat, and a member of St. Mary's church. He has the following children: Hermann, born in 1869, at Chillicothe, Ohio; Emil J., born in 1872, a druggist, now in Brooklyn, New York; Charles, born in 1875, who served in the Spanish War in the 6th United States Infantry; Anna, the wife of Dr. J. E. Bickle, of Fort Wayne, Indiana; Otilie, at home; Albert, born in 1886, now in Brooklyn, New York, learning the drug business with his brother Emil.

Jesse Clough Hurd

was born December 1, 1839 at Jackson Furnace. His father was Jacob S. Hurd, who was born near Concord, N. H. His mother's maiden name was Sarah E. Clough, a daughter of Dr. Abner Clough, who is buried at Franklin Furnace. His grandfather's name was John Hurd, who came to the French Grant, and is buried at Portsmouth, O. His grandfather Clough came to Scioto county in an early date. John Ricker Hurd was the oldest child. The other three are: Jesse C., Alice Riggs and Joseph H. Our subject remained at Jackson Furnace until he was five years of age. His father was book-keeper and clerk at Jackson Furnace. In 1884, the family moved to Franklin Furnace, where he was a partner in the furnace with the Goulds and was clerk. A few years later the family moved to Junior Furnace, where he went on the river as captain. In 1852, the family moved to Portsmouth, where they remained until 1870.

Our subject enlisted in Company F, Second Kentucky V. I. May 17, 1861 as a private for three years. He was appointed Sergeant May 17, 1861, promoted to 2nd Lieutenant January 25, 1862; First Lieutenant February 6, 1862; and then was made Captain of Company I, June 13, 1863, and was mustered out with the company June 19, 1864. This regiment was in West Virginia, and at the battles of Shiloh and Murfreesboro, and Chickamauga. He came to Jackson in the fall of 1864, and has lived there ever since. He was engaged at the Diamond furnace as clerk until 1869. He was at Orange furnace, as a clerk until 1874, then went into the coal business until 1887, when he went into the Iron Bank as a partner and assistant cashier. He afterwards became president, which position he has had for three years. He was married in September, 1866 to Julia Dungan, daughter of Levi Dungan. They have six children. Jesse, superintendent of the coal mines at Jackson; Alice C., at home; Levi Dungan, a medical student at Columbus; Harold H., a student at Ada, Ohio; Ethel H., and Bertha at home. Mr. Hurd is a republican, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In the town of Jackson, Captain Jesse C. Hurd is held in the very highest esteem. He possesses all the qualities that make a good citizen, father and husband, and is above reproach in every respect.

Colonel John Ricker Hurd

was born January 4, 1838 at Jackson Furnace, Jackson county, Ohio. His father was Jacob S. Hurd and his mother's maiden name was Sarah E. Clough. Until he was 14 years of age, he lived in the furnace region near Portsmouth. Part of the time he attended the furnace schools, and the remainder, he played and hunted. When he was 14 years of age, the family moved to Portsmouth, and he attended school there a short time, and then went to boating on the western rivers, and was out on the plains and in the mountains of New Mexico, Arizona and Utah. He returned from there, and went into the employment of Joseph M. G. Smith in the construction and operation of his distillery in Greenup county, Ky., and remained there until the war broke out.

When the war began, he entered the service May 17, 1861 as Captain of Co. F, in the Second Kentucky Infantry. He was promoted to Major January 25, 1862, and was made Lieutenant Colonel January 13, 1863. He was mustered out with the regiment June 19, 1864, (see Co. F., 2nd Ky. Infantry, page 226.) He was captured by the enemy in July, 1861, and incarcerated in Libby Prison at Richmond, Va., from which he escaped with Col. W. H. Raynor and a Lieutenant Murphy in September, 1861, an account of which was published in "Harper's Monthly Magazine." Col. Hurd was in the battles of Shiloh, Stone river, Chickamauga and many smaller affairs. He was appointed Colonel of the 173 regiment O. V. I., September 18, 1864 and served as such until June 26, 1865.

Col. Hurd returned to Portsmouth directly after the war. He was married October 13, 1867, to Miss Alice R. Tracy, daughter of Charles O. Tracy. In the same year, he was a candidate for representative on the republican ticket against the late Hon. James W. Newman, and received 2,290 votes; Newman received 2,547 votes and a majority of 257. That was the year, in which the Republican party suffered a Waterloo defeat in Ohio, on account of the advocacy of Negro suffrage, but Col. Hurd has no regrets for the part he took in that campaign. He canvassed the county, and spoke in almost every school district. He made a most active and creditable canvass, and was defeated only because the entire ticket was defeated. In January, 1868, Col. Hurd moved to Albia, Iowa, where he resided for a number of years; from there, he removed to Fort Dodge, Kansas, and from there to Pueblo, Colorado, where he now resides. Col. Hurd has two children, Tracy S. Hurd of Newton, Kansas, and Mrs. John H. Shaw of Pueblo, Colorado. He was the beau ideal of a soldier and it would have been better for his country if he had made the profession of arms his life vocation.

Adolph Hurth

was born June 17, 1838, in Germany. He came to the United States in 1854 and was thirty-five days crossing the ocean. His father, Jacob Hurth was a carpenter and died in Portsmouth in 1856. His mother died when he was very young. He attended the common schools in Germany until he was sixteen years old. In the meantime, he learned the baker's trade and worked a short time at that before he came to America. On arriving at Portsmouth, in 1854 he commenced, at once, to work for M. & S. Timmonds and worked for them until 1862. He then began work as a clerk in Cutler & Brown's liquor store. He remained in this same place under different employers until December, 1895. He commenced business for himself December 1, 1895. He is a democrat. He is a member of St. Mary's church and a trustee of the same and has been for twenty-four years. March 28, 1864, he was married to Elizabeth Reitz, daughter of John and Amelia Reitz. They have three sons: Edward, Adolph and Lewis.

Andrew J. Hyland

was born April 11, 1863, on Pine creek in Green township, this county. He is the son of John and Mary (Doyle) Hyland, both natives of Ireland, who located first in Cincinnati and afterwards in Scioto county. Andrew was raised on a farm and educated in the country schools until he was sixteen. He attended school two years after he became of age. He went to Montana in 1884, and was given charge of the machinery in the concentrator of a mining plant near Gregory. After eighteen months of mining experience, he came back home and learned telegraphy. He was employed by the Norfolk & Western Railway Company as agent at Franklin Furnace until 1901, when he resigned his position to turn his attention to a mercantile business which he had been carrying on for some years as a side line, and which had grown so as to demand his undivided attention. His store at Franklin Furnace burned in 1898, causing a loss of $2,000, but he rebuilt immediately and now handles a large line of general merchandise as well as machinery and farm implements. He has been postmaster at Franklin Furnace for three years past. He is a republican and a member of St. Peter's Roman Catholic church near Wheelersburg, Ohio. He was united in marriage with Myrtle Eakins, daughter of W. C. Eakins of Sciotoville, September 22, 1892. By this union three children have been born: Orville Ray and Stanley, boys; and Dein, a girl. Mr. Hyland is a citizen highly valued by all who know him. He is upright and straightforward in all things. He is a true friend and an untiring worker in any cause he espouses. He is a positive working factor in everything with which he is connected.

John W. Jackson

was born in Bloom township, near Bloom Furnace, Scioto county, Ohio, in 1836. His father, Evan Jackson, came from Fayette county, Pennsylvania, to Ohio, in 1815. After living in Adams county about four years, he removed to Scioto Furnace and then to Bloom Furnace. His mother's maiden name was Rebecca Whuey, a native of Kentucky. Her parents both died in Louisville, Kentucky. Our subject received a common school education and when nine years of age, removed to Kentucky and remained there until he enlisted in the 14th Kentucky Infantry, Company E, October 15, 1861. He was discharged January 31, 1865. After his return from the army, he came to Scioto county and has been a farmer in Madison township since. He was elected a Justice of the Peace in Madison township in 1898 and was re-elected and is now serving on his second term. He was a whig until 1854 and then became a republican. On October 29, 1859 he was married to Josephine Smith, daughter of David and Rebecca Smith, natives of Virginia and Kentucky. They have six children: Emily, the wife of Andrew McWilliams of Rush township; Caroline, late wife of William Allen; Charlotte, wife of Monroe Lambert of Lawrence county; Ella, deceased, wife of P. K. Martin; John of Jackson county; and Albert at home.

Archibald W. H. Jamieson,

our subject was born in August, 1862, at Movanager Castle, near Kilrea, county Derry, Ireland. His father was Hugh Jamieson, a gentleman farmer, and his mother was Elizabeth Henderson, aunt of Mrs. Capt. N. W. Evans, of Portsmouth, Ohio. He was started out in the cold world with the name of Archibald William Henderson, as a pnenomen and has managed to struggle along with it to the present time. He attended the national schools in Ireland from five to eighteen years of age. After that he was dubbed a gentleman farmer, but in reality spent most of his time in athletics and won several medals. Football was his particular vanity. In 1887, he quit the business of farming and in 1889, came to the United States on a visit. He really came, like the spies in Canaan, to view the land. Soon after his arrival, he made up his mind that the United States was the best country for him and remained. He thought he could make a better citizen to study one year and did so at the Normal School at Lebanon.

In 1890, he went into the employment of Lowry & Goebel, in the carpet trade, in Cincinnati, and remained there until 1892. In July, 1892, he started in the oil business with the Standard Oil Company, and remained with them till 1893, when he went into the employment of Charles H. Moore & Co., manufacturers and dealers in oil, in Cincinnati, and has been with them ever since. In 1893, he revisited Ireland and spent the three summer months. In June, 1895, he revisited Ireland, and voted for a Member of Parliament, the day after his arrival. On June 5, 1897, he visited the Probate Court of Hamilton, and declared his intentions to become an American citizen. At the same time he concluded to attend to some other business, in the same court, and took out a license to marry Miss Nellie Haight, a daughter of the late Jared Haight, of the firm of Burbeck & Haight, who furnished the "hard tack" in the late civil war.

On the next day, June 8, 1895, he was married to Miss Haight, and the two started to Ireland for a three month's honeymoon trip. He spent that time visiting his mother, brother and sister at Kilrea, Ireland, and in traveling in Ireland and Scotland. On his return, he went to housekeeping at 1575 Pullen Avenue, Northside, Cincinnati, where he has since resided. He has one child, Elizabeth Henderson, born June 8, 1896, on the first anniversary of his marriage. He and his wife visited Ireland in 1900. While he would like to spend every summer in "old Ireland," yet he is at heart as loyally American as if he were born of six generations of citizens of the United States.

In his political views, he is a republican, and in his religious views a Presbyterian. His mother, brother and sister reside in a home in Ireland on the river Bann, on the site of Movanager Castle. A portion of the castle tower and walls are still standing, though the castle proper was destroyed by Cromwell in 1649. Within 500 yards of his birthplace was an old Danish Fort, Coneybery. The river Bann in the vicinity of his former home, is noted for its eel and other fisheries. Mr. Jamieson's home in Ireland has been in the family for over two hundred years and there is no wonder at his attachment for it which takes him back every few summers. But one in each generation of his family became an American citizen and he is the representative of the third generation. His uncle, Joseph Henderson and his great-uncle of the same name, represent the two former generations. Mr. Jamieson is of that class of north of Ireland Irishmen, descended from Scotemen, who located in Ireland in the seventeenth century which makes the world go, and he proposes to do his share of that work. Where Alexander Stewart and Alexander McDonald, men of his nationality, succeeded, he thinks he will not fail. We predict a successful and prosperous future for him.

William Henry Washington Jenkins

was born at Harrisonville, Scioto county, Ohio, September 15, 1830, and was the only son of William Jenkins, who died September 5, 1855. His mother's maiden name was Polly Shumway, born at Reading, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1816, and died September 9, 1892. His early life was spent near his childhood home. He was married September 9, 1871, to Samantha Robertson, youngest daughter of Samuel S., and Jane (Taylor) Robertson. He obtained a good common school education and taught in the public schools of this county from the fall of 1869 to December 23, 1881. He studied surveying and in January, 1884, was appointed deputy County Surveyor, and has held that position, or special deputy, a great portion of the time since.

He served one term as clerk of Madison township from April, 1881, also one term as assessor of Harrison township, from April, 1890. Having studied civil engineering, he entered the city civil engineer's office under B. C. Bratt, city engineer, on July 13, 1895, and served as rodman and assistant civil engineer until May 1, 1899. Though of different political views, he was retained as assistant city civil engineer by Mr. Bratt's successor, Major John I. Hudson, during his entire term of service, ending January 4, 1900. During Mr. Hudson's term the sanitary sewer was built, Gallia street was paved from North Waller street to Young street, Offnere street was paved from Gallia street to Twelfth street and Second street from Market to Chillicothe street and Chillicothe street was re-paved from Second street to Ninth street, making the largest amount of public improvements ever done by the city in any one year.

A flood defense commission was appointed by the City Council in the spring of 1901, to make surveys, plans and estimates and embody the same in a report to said City Council for placing valves in the sewers, building dykes, pumping stations, etc., for the protection of the city from all floods in the Ohio river of sixty feet or less. Mr. Jenkins was selected as civil engineer for the flood defense commission, and under their instructions, made the surveys, plans and estimates for the same. The report of the commission was adopted by council and made the basis for all future improvements in that direction and districts Numbers 1 and 3 have been practically completed according to said plans. At present he is civil engineer for the Ohio Valley Traction Company, having charge of the improvements of the old line and building the new extension eastward. Mr. Jenkins is a faithful and conscientious officer and a good citizen.

Sanford Bundy Jennings

was born in Vinton county, Ohio, near Hamden Furnace, July 3, 1846. He was named for the Hon. Hezekiah Bundy. His father, Enos Jennings, was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, March 5, 1794. His mother, Catharine Murphy, was born December 25, 1802. They were married April 2, 1820. His father died May 4, 1857, near Hamden Furnace, and his mother died at the same place August 15, 1868. They are buried at the Bundy cemetery, near Wellston, Ohio.

Our subject attended the public schools near his home, and for a short time at the Ohio University at Athens. At the age of seventeen he enlisted in Company G, 7th Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, September 16, 1862, for three years, and was made Commissary Sergeant of the Company. He gave his age as nineteen, though in reality he was in his seventeenth year. After the battle of Nashville, December 15, 1864, his company was detailed as body guard to Gen. John M. Schofield. He served until June 22, 1865.

After the war he received an appointment as express messenger on the Portsmouth Branch of the Marietta and Cincinnati railroad, and afterwards on the main line. On January 20, 1870, W. H. H. Cadot resigned as the Adams Express agent at Portsmouth, and Mr. Jennings was appointed in his place. In April, 1872, he and Pat Prendergast took the Biggs House, under the firm of Prendergast and Jennings. June 8, 1873, they leased it for five years and run it until 1876, when Mr. Prendergast died, and Mr. Jennings conducted the hotel alone until January, 1879, when W. H. Williams went into partnership with him, under the firm of Jennings and Williams. This continued until December, 1881, when Mr. Jennings sold out to Mr. Williams and left Portsmouth in March, 1881.

He was married March 29, 1881, to Miss Emma Johnson, daughter of the late George Johnson. His health had given signs of breaking down, and in the summer of 1881, he managed the Manitou House at Manitou Springs, Colorado, and spent the winter in Portsmouth. On May 2, 1882, he started west. At Kansas City, July 3, 1882, he was taken very sick. He got better, but was found dead in his bed July 17, 1882. He was a Knight-Templar Mason. As an express agent and as a hotel landlord he was very popular with all with whom he did business. The hotel business was successful in his hand.

Albert Tracy Johnson

was born May 18, 1857 in Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was George Johnson, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Ruth Tracy, a daughter of Samuel M. Tracy. Our subject attended the public schools of Portsmouth through the Grammar grades, went to Kenyon College for four years, and left at the close of the junior year. In 1875 he came back to Portsmouth and engaged in business with the Scioto Fire Brick Company at Sciotoville, as assistant in the store. He remained there two years and then went into the Portsmouth National Bank, where he remained until 1883. Then he went into the First National Bank of Portsmouth as cashier, where he remained until 1892, when he became president of the Portsmouth Fire Brick Company. On June 1, 1901, the Portsmouth Co., the South Webster Fire Brick Co., the Blast Furnace Fire Brick Company and the Kentucky Fire Brick Company, were incorporated as the Portsmouth & Kentucky Fire Brick Company, and Mr. Johnson has since been its president.

He was married October 25, 1882, to Miss Margaret F. Tewksbury, daughter of Moor R. Tewksbury. Their children are: Ruth Baird, a graduate of Harcourt Seminary in June 1901, now a student at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; George Tewksbury, now a senior in the University School at Cleveland; Jean T., a student in the public schools at Portsmouth.

Mr. Johnson is a member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, O., and is a republican in his political views. He is a 32nd degree Mason, and a member of the Syrian Temple of the Mystic Shrine in Cincinnati. He has well filled every position held by him. He has shown great executive and administrative ability in all business entrusted to him. He has been successful, financially and socially, and is one of the most popular men in Portsmouth.

Isaac Johnson

was born March 6, 1838 in Scioto county, Ohio, the son of James O. and Phoebe (Jeffords) Johnson. His grandfather, Henry C. Jeffords, was a pioneer of Scioto county. He moved to Portsmouth in 1822 and in 1832 he kept the Scioto Inn. Our subject received a common school education and was raised a farmer. In 1892, he sold his farm of 236 acres in Scioto county and removed to Fayette county. In March, 1893, he located on a farm near Bloomingburg, Ohio and remained there until 1896, when he sold this farm and removed to Washington, C. H. Ohio, where he has resided since. He has been township trustee and held various other township offices at different times. He was made a Master Mason in 1873, and has been a trustee of Lucasville Lodge, No. 465. He is a republican.

In February, 1864, he was married to Fannie L. Yeager, who died in January, 1866. In 1867, he was married to Rachel Kendall, daughter of Milton and Ruth Kendall of Portsmouth. They have three children: Idora B., the wife of Frank B. Thomas, who resides in Del Norte, Colorado; Elmer E., is a telegraph operator for the Midland division of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. and resides at home; Bessie Maude, a graduate of the Washington C. H. High School in the class of 1901, resides with her parents. Mr. Johnson is an excellent citizen, one who always does his part in the community, and who leads rather than follows. He is a man of positive force wherever he is placed and his influence and acts always count for the best for himself and those about him.

Jesse Johnson

was born October 26, 1849, at the mouth of Bear creek. He is the son of Isaac Newton Johnson and Sarah Cockrell his wife, daughter of Jesse Cockrell of Lucasville. His grandparents Isaac and Jane (Clark) Johnson were natives of Hampshire county, Virginia. They were married February 28, 1805 and came to Scioto county, in 1807, and located near Scioto Inn, where Clifford now is. Their son, Isaac N. was born August 16, 1821. Isaac Johnson died February 18, 1832 and his wife July 11, 1845. The first was of English descent and the latter of German descent. His grandfather Cockrell was of English descent and his grandmother of Scotch descent and her maiden name was Anna Marsh.

Our subject was raised on a farm and attended a country school. Later he attended the Iron City Commercial College, at Pittsburg. He commenced farming in 1873 for himself and has been engaged in farming in all of its different phases ever since. He would be rated as a first class farmer judging from his industry, methods and success. Although not an active politician, he holds to the democratic faith and has never sought office. He was married February 12, 1873, to Miss Rebecca Simpson, youngest daughter of Elias Simpson of the West Side.

John Jones (Plumber)

was born in Wales in 1844. His father was Henry Jones and his mother's maiden name was Jane Thomas. When he was three or four months old, his parents came to this country and located near Oak Hill, Gallia county. His father was a farmer, and remained near Oak Hill for a short time, when he purchased a farm near Gallia Furnace. There, Jones went to school until 1862.

On September 20, 1862, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in Co. D, 1st regiment, Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, as a private, but was mustered in Co. H. He did duty with Co. D from the start and was transferred to Co. D, April 1, 1863, and was mustered out with the company July 25, 1865, at Knoxville, Tennessee. He was captured by the enemy February 23, 1865, with twelve companions at Mosier's Mill, East Tennessee, but he was a prisoner only eighteen hours, just long enough to render him eligible to join the "Society of the Prisoners of the Civil War." He and five companions escaped from their captors on the night after they were captured; the other six who were captured, were taken to Richmond, Virginia.

After his discharge, Mr. Jones went to Louisville, Kentucky and started to learn the plumber's trade in March, 1866, with the Angell & Cochran foundry and machine works. He worked for them for a few months. After this, he became a street car driver, for a time and then went to Cincinnati and afterwards to St. Louis, where he took care of horses for the Adams Express Co. He again went to Louisville and from there took a plumbing job at Hopkinsville, Kentucky. He came to Portsmouth, on November 1, 1866 and has been here ever since. He worked for Richard Spry, the plumber, until August 1, 1870, when he went into business for himself. On June 1, 1895 he sold out to E. S. Jenkins, and he has not been in any business since. When he occupied the Gerlach building, he carried the largest supply of plumbing goods of every kind and mill supplies ever carried in southern Ohio. Mr. Jones was a coppersmith. He worked in sheet-iron and set boilers and engines whenever required by any of the furnaces. He has acquired a competence and is trying to live easy. He is one of the few soldiers of the Civil War who never applied for or obtained a pension. He has greatly preserved his youthful appearance, and proposes to put off old age just as long as he can.

John Jones (Ex-Postmaster)

was born January 1, 1848 at Mt. Sterling, Ky. His father was David E. Jones and his mother Elizabeth Edwards, daughter of the Rev. John Edwards. His father and mother were both born in Wales. He lost his mother when he was but eight months old. His father, David E. Jones enlisted as a private in Company A, 12th regiment, Connecticut Infantry, September 18, 1862, at New Orleans. He was captured October 19, 1864 at Cedar creek, Virginia and died November 25, 1864 in prison at Salisbury, North Carolina.

Our subject came to Portsmouth in 1853 and spent his boyhood and received his education in the public schools of the city. He commenced business by clerking in the hat store of J. H. Johnson, in 1866. In 1870, he started a men's furnishing store on West Second street, Portsmouth, and was engaged in that business for thirty years. Mr. Jones, though of Welsh descent, was always a democrat in his political views and a very strong one. He always took a great interest in the affairs of the party. He was a member of the Board of Education from 1888 until 1894. From 1892 to 1894 he was president of that board. He was Postmaster of Portsmouth from 1894 to 1898, and a member of the City Council from 1899 to the present time. He was president of the council for two years, 1899 to 1901. He was elected president of the Board of Education when his party were in the minority. On June 2, 1902 he was appointed a member of the Board of Review for the city of Portsmouth for three years.

He was married November 4, 1873 to Miss Maggie M. Shaw, daughter of William and Ellen Lynn Shaw. They have two children, Ralph W., a salesman in Columbus, Ohio, for the C. J. Craig mens' furnishing store, and Blanche Thomas, wife of A. E. Thomas, of Columbus. His son, Ralph, is married to Miss Irene Jordon, daughter of the late William Jordon of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. Jones was very popular and very successful as a business man. All of his acquaintances are his friends and strange to say, some of his very best friends are his political opponents. He has always been a leader in the affairs of the Democratic party, and is usually a delegate to the county, district and state conventions of the Democratic party. If there is any hard work to do among the democrats of his county, it is usually put on him and he does it just the same as if it was the most important thing that he had to do in this world. Since 1900, Mr. Jones has not been actively engaged in any business but has been taking life easy. He is a model citizen, always in favor of public improvements and anything for the benefit of the public.

Lafayette Jones

was born in Brush Creek township, October 26, 1852. His father was Paul Karr Jones and his mother was Elizabeth (Clark) Jones, daughter of James Clark. Our subject received his early education in the common schools and afterwards attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, where he was graduated in 1880. He began teaching in 1872, and continued to teach until 1896. While at Lebanon, he studied surveying and civil engineering. In the fall of 1880, he began work as a surveyor and has continued it since. He was deputy surveyor of Scioto county from 1888 till 1891. He was elected County Surveyor in 1897, and took the office in September, 1898. He was re-elected in 1890 and is the present incumbent.

He was married October, 1881, to Margaret McDermed, daughter of David McDermed. They have two children: Mary Winifred and Ada. He is an enthusiastic republican and an active politician. He is a member of the Methodist church known as McKendree's Chapel near McGaw, Ohio. He is a good plain, common, every-day American citizen with a well-developed and highly educated conscience which he tries to live up to. He tries to do every duty apparent to him.

Thomas Hart Benton Jones,

son of Andrew B. and Vienna (Williams) Jones was born on his father's farm on Scioto Brush creek, four miles west of Otway, March 5, 1838. His father was a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Cain) Jones. Andrew Jones was a soldier in the War of 1812 and came to Adams county, Ohio, from Virginia. His father was a native of Wales. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Jones were James and Elizabeth (Murphy) Williams. James Williams was a soldier in the Revolutionary war (see Revolutionary Soldiers) and was one of the pioneers of Adams county. He died July 5, 1842 and his wife November 11, 1855.

The subject of this sketch was reared on the farm on which he was born and attended the district school. In 1859, he received a certificate to teach.

He taught school three winters and then went back to farming, at which he has been engaged up to the present time. In 1860 and 1861, he was Assessor of Brush Creek township. He was then elected Trustee and served until 1865 and was elected township Clerk the same year, and re-elected in the succeeding year. In 1867, he was again elected Trustee and served several terms thereafter. He is now one of the Trustees of the township and has been a member of the Board of Education for several terms. He is a democrat and his office holding would indicate that he has been prominent in local politics and that his friends have much confidence in his integrity. Mr. Jones is a member of the Christian Union church.

He was married to Elizabeth H. Freeman, daughter of Moses and Margaret (McCormick) Freeman, April 12, 1863. They have six children, as follows: Emma Estella born January 5, 1864, married William H. Davis of Farragut, Iowa, December 23, 1896; James Moakley born August 1, 1865, married March 5, 1891 to Martha A. Liston; Bertha Ethel born March 24, 1872, married William E. Brown and resides at McDermott this county; Thomas Carew born June 16, 1874 is at home; Edwin Watson, born January 2, 1878, at home; Alva Burton born April 6, 1882 is a teacher in the country schools. He is progressive in his ideas and has most excellent judgment in all matters of the practical affairs of life. He is always interested in questions of social, moral and educational improvement. He is hospitable in his home, prudent in home affairs, temperate and industrious. He is generous on all occasions where such quality is in demand.

Captain John Kaps

was born November 2, 1835, in Bavaria. His father was Kasper Kaps, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Helman. They had six children, of whom our subject was the second. His parents left Germany when he was six weeks old, and located at Buffalo, New York. Soon afterwards the family came to Piketon, because Michael Nessler, who resided there, was a cousin. Mr. Nessler recommended him to locate in Portsmouth, and he did so in 1836. In 1845, he went to reside with George S. Pursell and to learn the brick business, and while there he attended the Portsmouth schools until the year, 1856 when he formed a partnership with Mr. Pursell, as Pursell and Kaps. He remained with him until 1858, when he went to Virginia and engaged with the Kanawha Company, working at his trade until January, 1860, and then returned to Portsmouth.

He enlisted April 16, 1861 in Company G, 1st O. V. I. and was mustered out August 1, 1861. On his return from the first three months' service, he went into the grocery business at Portsmouth, with Philip E. Hard, as Hard and Kaps. He continued in that until 1862, when he entered Company C, of the 91st O. V. I., as First Lieutenant. He served as such until July 6, 1864, when he was transferred to Company D, as its Captain, and was transferred again to Company C, on the 1st of September, 1864. He was mustered out June 24, 1865.

On March 1, 1866, he entered into partnership with Peter Kaps, his brother, in the manufacturing of brick and in building, continuing in that until April, 1894, when the firm was dissolved. This firm of Kaps Brothers was known for its integrity and reliability, and it built most of the important structures in Portsmouth during the time it was in business. Since 1894, Mr. Kaps has been engaged in the manufacture of brick. From January, 1887, to January, 1893, Mr. Kaps was one of the County Commissioners of Scioto county. For the five years last past he has been a member of the County Tax Commission.

He was married February 13, 1873, to Jennie McIntyre, daughter of Daniel McIntyre. They have had two sons: John D., a lawyer in New York city. His second son, Harry, is engaged in the brick business with his father. Mr. Kaps is a republican and a member of the Bigelow Methodist church. For integrity Mr. Kaps stands second to none. He is perfectly reliable and is always certain to meet any and all obligations.

Peter Kaps

was born in Bavaria, May 19, 1833. His father was Kasper Kaps, a stock dealer, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Helman. Both were natives of Germany. In 1836, he came to Scioto county and located in Portsmouth, Ohio. He received a common school education and learned the brick layer's trade. While a boy he worked for Daniel Parsley, at farming and brickmaking. He made hay on the land above Court and Seventh streets. November 9, 1861, he enlisted in the 15th Kentucky Infantry, and served three years and three months. He was made First Sergeant April 3, 1862. He was promoted to First Lieutenant July 13, 1863, and was mustered out January 14, 1865, at Louisville, Kentucky. He served in the City Council of Portsmouth from 1872 to 1873, and from 1875 to 1878. He was the author of the city garbage and hog ordinances. He has always been a republican. January 1, 1871, he was married to Elizabeth Evans. They have three children: James E., George P., and Henry H.

Mr. Kaps is a typical working man. No man was ever busier than he or has done more hard work in the same length of time. He is one of the most kind hearted and obliging of men. He has always possessed the respect and confidence of those in his employment and he has had the good will and friendship of every person for whom he ever worked. He has built as many brick structures as any man who ever worked in Portsmouth, and has given satisfaction in every case. For six years he has been living on a farm on the west side and has carried on farming there and at the same time has worked at his trade in Portsmouth.

Lieutenant Zenis Keller

was born July 30, 1841, in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Francis Keller and his mother's maiden name was Delilah Culp. He attended school in Madison township until he was sixteen year of age. From that until he was twenty he worked on his father's farm. On August 5, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, 33d O. V. I., under Captain Samuel Currie. His brother, Sylvester, who has a sketch herein, was a member of the same company. He was wounded on November 25, 1863, at the battle of Mission Ridge. He was shot through the right wrist and right hip with a minie-ball. This wound disabled him from further service. He was in the hospital, in consequence of it, until August 27, 1864, when he was discharged. He entered Co. H, 191st O. V. I., as Second Lieutenant March 8, 1865. He served until August 27, following. The regiment served in the valley, near Winchester, Va., all its time. The officers and soldiers of the 33d Ohio recommended him to be commissioned in the last named regiment.

As soon as he left the army, he went to Kirksville, Missouri, and took up the occupation of a farmer. He remained there fourteen years when he located in Johnson county, Kansas, in 1879, as a farmer. He remained there twelve years, till 1891, when he went to Winfield, Cowley county, Kansas, where he has resided ever since. He was city marshal of Winfield in 1900 and 1901, and has followed various occupations there. He was married in 1869, at Kirksville, Missouri, to Mrs. Christina McGill (born Curry) widow of James McGill. He has three children: Martin Luther, in the harness business, residing in Newton, Kansas; Julius Curry, engineer on the New York Central railroad; Oliver Perry, a book-keeper.

Mr. Keller made an excellent record as a soldier. As such his conduct was all that could be desired. In his service to his country he had the entire confidence of all the officers and comrades. Having fought for his country and received honorable wounds in its service, he knows its value of citizenship, and conducts himself at all times as a law abiding and patriotic citizen.

Captain Sylvester Keller

was born July 5, 1845, in Scioto county, Ohio. He was the son of Francis and Delilah Keller. His mother's maiden name was Culp. His great-grandfather was Francis Keller, who came to West Virginia before 1800. He made salt at the Kanawha salt works and took it to New Orleans to market. He also took many boat loads of pork. He made much money and invested it in lands in Scioto county. Jacob, the grandfather of our subject was born in Pennsylvania, and located in the southern part of Jackson county, Ohio. He started to Missouri in 1865, and died on the way. Francis, the father of our subject, was born in 1808 and lived in Greenup county, Kentucky, on Tygart, until 1806 when he came to Scioto county. He died in 1881, at the age of seventy-three years. School facilities were very meager when our subject was a boy and his education therefore was limited. He enlisted in Company A 33 Regiment O. V. I. August 5, 1861, and was mustered in at Camp Morrow, Ohio. He was appointed Sergeant September 19, 1863, First Sergeant August 26, 1864, promoted to First Lieutenant January 28, 1865, Captain May 23, 1865, but was not mustered. He re-enlisted at Chattanooga, Tennessee, January 12, 1864. He resigned January 27, 1865.

Mr. Keller has been twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth C. Welch, of Jackson, Ohio, whom he married December 6, 1867. Their children are: Ida Alice, died at the age of thirty-two, wife of Joseph Crabtree; Mary Frances Stephen and William. His first wife died May 4, 1884. He was married a second time to Mrs. Polly Alexander, September 3, 1885. She was a daughter of John Rockwell. The children by this second marriage are: Merton E. aged fourteen; Bessie Florence, age twelve, Isa Edith and Ida Ethel twins, age eight years. His second wife died October 3, 1894. Mr. Keller cast his first vote for John Brough, for Governor of Ohio, and has ever since been a staunch republican, and an active member of the party but has never held any office. He has been postmaster at Koran, Ohio for the past twelve years. He is a member of the United Brethren church.

Philip H. Kelley

was born April 9, 1823, in county Tipperary Ireland. His father was Timothy Kelley and his mother's maiden name was Bridget Maher. His father, a stock raiser and buyer, died when he was eighteen. He had one sister, Mary, but no brothers. He learned the trade of a stone cutter in Ireland. In 1848, he brought his mother to the United States and located in Auburn, New York. Four years after their arrival his mother died. In 1849, he went to Cleveland, Ohio and followed his trade. In 1851, he began working on the railroad and continued that for two years. In 1853, he determined on beginning for himself and became a contractor for railroad work and on other public structures, usually bridge masonry.

In 1855 he was married to Miss Anna Hayes of Delaware, Ohio, sister of Captain Thomas Hayes of the 30th O. V. I., who has a sketch and picture herein. They had eight children, eight of whom survive: John, Timothy, James, Joseph, William, Edward, Mary and Mrs. Will S. Myers. Thomas and Philip are deceased. Mrs. Kelley died November 24, 1887.

Mr. Kelley first came to Portsmouth in 1857. He came to Portsmouth to build the piers of the Suspension bridge at the mouth of the Scioto and concluded to remain. He purchased the Massie block in the sixties and owned it for many years. In 1863, he purchased the home on Jackson street. In 1871, he built the Portsmouth water works and was one of its first board of trustees for three years. In 1871, the Biggs House fire destroyed the Massie block and he rebuilt it at once. In 1881, he built the abutments of the great railroad bridge over the Ohio at Point Pleasant. In 1883, he built the piers of the Cincinnati & Eastern railroad bridge across the Scioto river, two miles north of Portsmouth for $26,000 and lost every dollar of it. He was a devout communicant of the church of the Holy Redeemer and in his political faith, he was a democrat. He was for many years a director of the Farmers' National Bank of Portsmouth, Ohio, but was entirely innocent of any knowledge of the facts of its management which led up to its failure. He was a heavy loser when it went down. He also lost in the failure of the Citizens' Savings Bank and of George Davis.

Mr. Kelley was strictly honest in all his dealings and believed every one else was. Because of his unlimited faith in his fellow men, he suffered many financial losses, but he never repined, nor regretted, nor lost faith in humanity. He knew his trade well and could figure up well in any stone work, and beyond that he did not claim extensive knowledge. He was most candid in his feelings and expressions, always being himself and never assuming any character which was not his own. He was affable and courteous to all. As a neighbor, he was obliging respected and liked. As a citizen, he was liberal minded and public-spirited. His faith in his party and his church was childlike and admitted of no doubt, or question. He was always ready to grant every favor asked of him. He was incapable of hating any one, and simply pitied those who robbed him. His losses by fire and failures, he bore with the utmost composure. He always met disaster with honor. He died June 15, 1900. In his dying hours, his faith sustained him. He was one of the purest, most simple-minded men who ever lived in Portsmouth. If he had any enemies, he never deserved them. He always did the best he could under any circumstance and never worried about results. No more truthful, sincere, honest, or upright man and citizen ever dwelt in Portsmouth.

Andes Jones Kellogg

was born in the French Grant, near Haverhill, November 21, 1845. His father, Hiram Kellogg, was born at Franklin Furnace July 28, 1816, the son of William W. and Nancy (Lamb) Kellogg. William Kellogg came to Franklin in 1815 from Vermont, of which state he was a native. He died in 1844. The mother of our subject was Luna (Jones) Kellogg, daughter of Andes and Lucy Jones, natives of Kentucky. Our subject was one of a family of seven children. The wife of Stephen Winkler, of near Hanging Rock, is one of these. Mr. Kellogg received his early education in the district school and later spent three years at the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio. He entered the teaching profession and continued for a period of ten years, and during that time was considered one of the best educated and most practical teachers in the county. Though he has been a farmer for many years, he has never lost his interest in schools and education. Besides, he is a thoroughly practical and up-to-date farmer and gardener. He is an interesting writer and speaker on subjects of this nature, and takes a delight in doing so. He was married to Alice Bumgarner, in June, 1876. The children of this marriage are: Laura, deceased, Roy, Amy, Hubert, deceased, Grace and Claire. His first wife died in 1893. He was again married, October 26, 1897, to Sarah Bumgarner, a sister of his former wife.

Mr. Kellogg is a member of the republican party and has been one of the workers in the party for a number of years. He was elected Clerk of Green Township in 1893, and has held the office continuously to the present time, and he makes a most efficient official. He is a member of the Haverhill Grange, the only order of the kind in the county.

Captain Alva Finton Kendall

was born May 28, 1832. His father, Jefferson Kendall, was the oldest child of William Kendall and Rachel Brown Kendall. Jeremiah Kendall, the father of General William Kendall, served as a private in Captain William Washington's company, 3rd Virginia regiment, commanded by Colonel Thomas Marshall, father of the Chief Justice, in the Revolutionary war. He enlisted February 23, 1776, to serve two years; was transferred in August, 1777, to Captain G. B. Wallace's company, same regiment; was wounded in September, 1777, and was discharged in January, 1778. Jefferson Kendall enlisted in Battery L, First Ohio Light Artillery, on August 19, 1861, at the age of fifty-four, and was discharged September 27, 1862, on surgeon's certificate of disability.

Our subject was born at Junior Furnace, Ohio, while his father was storekeeper there. As a boy he lived at Clinton, Buckhorn and Franklin furnaces, where his father was engaged as book-keeper and store-keeper. The family moved to Wheelersburg, Ohio, prior to 1840, where his father kept a hotel, grocery and drug store. Wheelersburg at that time was a place of considerable importance, as it was the business center for Clinton and Buckhorn furnaces. In the spring of 1849, our subject went to California overland, with a party made up at Wheelersburg. Among them were William McKinley, Worthington Enslow, William Crichton, Dr. Thomas Moxley, William Reddick, William Fenton, Thomas Burt, and Garrel Duke. They had three wagons, made at Haverhill by Lenninger. The party sent their wagons to St. Joseph, Mo., by steamboat. They bought four yoke of oxen in Illinois for each wagon. They left St. Joseph, Mo., in April, 1849, and drove from ten to twenty-two miles a day. They were four months and four days on the way. Mr. Kendall says there was a continuous procession of wagons all the way to California. Their journey was stopped at Deep Hollow, California, where they dug for gold. They found plenty of gold, but spent it. Our subject came back to Portsmouth, in 1853. He returned to California in 1855, and remained until 1859. He was mining during his first four years in California. The latter four years he drove a team and kept store most of the time. He returned from the first trip by way of the Isthmus of Panama, and on his second trip west went by way of Nicaragua, and came back through Mexico by way of the Gulf.

From 1859 to 1862, he kept a grocery in Portsmouth for George Oldfield. On the sixth of August, 1862, he entered the service as First Sergeant of Company F, 91st O. V. I. On December 2, 1862, he was made Second Lieutenant of Company F; and on May 1, 1863, was made First Lieutenant of Company F; May 26, 1864, he was transferred First Lieutenant of Company B. On December 28, 1864, he was transferred to Company F, as First Lieutenant. On March 29, 1865, he was made Captain of Company G, of the same regiment. He was mustered out October 16, 1865, by order of the War Department. During a considerable part of the service, he was acting commissary of musters of the department of West Virginia.

On his return from the army, he went to clerking on a steamboat on the Ohio river until October, 1866, when he went into the revenue service as assistant assessor to Colonel John A. Turley. When Colonel Coates was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue, he was made a deputy collector. He was out under Cleveland's two terms, but with that exception he was in the revenue service until his death. At the time of his death, he was a deputy under John C. Entrekin, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eleventh District of Ohio. He was in the collector's office twenty-seven years, handled over $30,000,000 and never lost a cent. His books always balanced. His father and mother moved to Portsmouth in 1850. His father kept a store on the southeast corner of Seventh and Chillicothe streets until he enlisted in Battery L. Our subject was married in 1870, to Miss Louisa Koen, and resided till his death on Ninth street in Portsmouth. He died September 28, 1901.

Charles Kendall

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, November 3, 1839, the son of Thomas Kendall and Anna M. Glover, his wife. His father was the son of General William Kendall and Rachel Brown, his wife, and his mother was the daughter of Elijah Glover and Catherine Jones, his wife. His father has a separate sketch herein. He spent his childhood and boyhood in Portsmouth and obtained his education in her public schools. He attended the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, one year. Mr. Kendall was in business at West Liberty, Ohio, for several years, but in 1868, returned to Portsmouth, where he has been in the shoe business ever since. He has always been a republican in politics. He has been a member of the city Board of Education. He is a member of the Second Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, Ohio.

On November 19, 1861, he was married to Miss Emily H. Lloyd, daughter of Thomas G. and Lola Lloyd. They had four children: Addie L., who married Henry Padan, Lola married Albert G. Padan, and Charles Franklin Kendall married to Laura V. Gilbert, daughter of the late Martin B. Gilbert. He has a son, Thomas L., a young man at home. Mr. Kendall had the misfortune to lose his wife, December 8, 1890, and his daughter Addie, Mrs Henry Padan, lost her husband, October 1, 1895. She has two children, Charles Franklin and Henrietta Craig. Mr. Kendall, his widowed daughter, her two children, and his son Thomas L. make their home together, and it is one of the pleasantest homes in Portsmouth. His daughter, Mrs. Albert G. Padan, and her husband, live in Los Angeles California. His son, Charles Franklin, has three fine boys, Gilbert, Richard and Charles Franklin. Surrounded by his children and grandchildren, and kept employed in a good business, life is very pleasant to Mr. Kendall.

He is known well and favorably to every one in the county, for his agreeable manners and genial disposition. In the enjoyment of the esteem of all his neighbors, old age has no terrors for him. It is to him like the evening of a long summer day. He has had his troubles, but Christian fortitude and patience has enabled him to bear them and live through them. No one in Portsmouth has pleasanter family surroundings than he, and no one enjoys them more, or is more deserving of them.

Captain Chase Wilmot Kennedy, is the son of Milton Kennedy and Josephine Hutchinson, his wife, and was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, January 4, 1859. His paternal ancestors are of Scotch-Irish and Scotch extraction. His father died July 10, 1896. His maternal ancestors are of Irish and German descent. The great-great-grandfather of our subject, Hugh Kennedy, was the first immigrant of this branch of the Kennedy family in America. The boyhood and youth of our subject was spent in Portsmouth. His first schooling was at a school conducted by Mrs. Crichton on Sixth street. He completed the course in the public schools and graduated in the class of 1875. After graduation he entered the employment of the Portsmouth Tribune and continued therein until the spring of 1879.

In May of that year, he received the appointment of cadet to the United States Military Academy at West Point, as the result of a competitive examination held at Portsmouth, Ohio. He entered the United States Military Academy June 19, 1879, and graduated therefrom June 13, 1883. He was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the 3d United States Infantry and served in Montana, Dakota and Minnesota until the spring of 1898, participating in the expeditions and campaigns against the Kootenai, Crow and Sioux Indians during that interval. He was promoted First Lieutenant, 3rd Infantry, November 13, 1889; Regimental Adjutant, 3rd Infantry from March 13, 1891, to March 12, 1895.

During the Spanish-American war he took part in the campaign against Santiago, Cuba, being in command of Co. C, 3rd Infantry; was present at the Battle of El Caney, July 1, 1898, and at the subsequent attacks on Santiago from July 2 to July 11, 1898. He returned to the United States in August, 1898, and participated in the campaign against the Leech Lake Indians in the fall of that year in Minnesota. In the meantime he had been promoted captain and assigned to the 8th United States Infantry. He joined that regiment in Huntsville, Alabama, in November, 1898, and accompanied the regiment to Havana, Cuba, in December, and was present at the formal transfer of the government of the island of Cuba from the Spanish to the American authorities, January 1, 1899. He remained on duty in Cuba until July, 1900, when the regiment was transferred to the United States, en route to the Philippine Islands. He arrived there October 25, 1900, and was on duty there from that date to July 28, 1902. He is now on duty with his regiment at Governor's Island, N. Y. He was appointed Adjutant, 8th Infantry, June 13, 1900.

He was married November 13, 1889, at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, to Elizabeth Lord Jewett, daughter of Colonel Horace Jewett, United States Army.

Wade Stanton Kennedy

was born March 11, 1867, in Portsmouth, Ohio, the son of Milton Kennedy and Josephine Hutchinson, his wife. His father has a separate sketch herein. His son above named was given his two front names in honor of those great statesmen, Benjamin Wade and Edwin M. Stanton. Wade, as he is best known, was always a sturdy boy and has made a sturdy man. He attended school in Portsmouth until he was twelve years of age. His father then moved to Clay township and he attended there for two years. At fourteen years, he went into the employment of Henry Vincent to learn the butcher's trade, and served at it for three years, but did not like it.

In 1884, he went into the employment of Drew, Selby & Co., and has made the shoe business his life's work. He commenced as a cutter and worked at that for eleven years. He then became foreman of the cutting department and a buyer of upper leather, and held that position with Drew, Selby & Company for seven years. On April 12, 1902, he went into the Star Shoe Company, which has since become the Irving Drew Company. He is a stockholder in the company and its vice president. He and Mr. Will Gates are superintendents under Mr. Irving Drew, who is general manager. Mr. Kennedy has the oversight of the cutting department and is a buyer of upper leather for the new company. He has mastered all the details of his department, and is a force and power in the shoe business. He enjoys the entire confidence of all his former employers and present business associates.

He was married September 30, 1890, to Miss Sylvia Flowers McKeehan, daughter of T. J. McKeehan, of Sinking Springs, Highland county, Ohio. He has one child Mary Terese, aged eleven years. He had the misfortune to lose his wife May 26, 1902. Mr. Kennedy is a member and trustee of the Second Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. He is a republican in his political views.

He is a man of strong and earnest conviction. He has a fine sense of duty, and meets every obligation—business, social or religious—upon his conscience. He has all the elements to make a good citizen and makes one. No one values good citizenship more than he, or lives closer to his ideals.

Edward John Kenrick

was born in April, 1835, in county Limerick, Ireland. His father, John Kenrick, was a farmer. His mother's maiden name was Katharine Killey. He received all his education in Ireland and when he was thirteen years of age, he came to America with his father, mother, brother Patrick, and sister Nancy. They landed at Quebec, where his father suffered a sun stroke and died, later, at Niagara Falls. The family then removed to Black Rock near Buffalo, and remained there two months. They then went to Cleveland and from there to Portsmouth, Ohio, by canal, landing there October 28, 1849. Edward first work on the farm of William McColm below town. He continued to work at farming for a time and then was employed as receiving clerk, watchman and train dispatcher for the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad at Portsmouth. He was in this employment one year and then went to weighing iron at the lower mill. In 1855, he went to work for Horace Leet, in the lumber business and continued that for five years. Then he was on the police force for four years.

February 1, 1863, he was married to Miss Eliza Mulligan, daughter of Edward Mulligan, and sister of Edward Mulligan, Jr. Mrs. Kenrick died February 13, 1867. They had two children, John and Kate. In 1864, he went on the river. In 1866, he went into the mineral water business with Edward Mulligan, Jr., and they continued that for three years. Then J. P. Albert Cramer bought out Mulligan and the firm became Kenrick and Cramer. They were together thirteen years when Mr. Cramer died. Kenrick carried on the business alone until 1882 when he went into the wholesale grocery business, which he is still engaged in. In 1892, he was appointed a director of the First National Bank and has held that office since. In politics, he is a democrat. In his religion, he is a communicant of the Mother Church. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

was born in 1839, in the parish of Kilcommon, county Limerick, Ireland. His father was John Kenrick and his mother's maiden name was Katharine Killey. His father was a farmer. His parents had three children: Edward, now doing business in Portsmouth and residing on Ninth street. Nancy, who afterwards married a Wm. Boswell and resides in Cincinnati and our subject. The family emigrated to Canada, in the summer of 1849. There in the city of Quebec, the father received a fatal sunstroke. From that city, the family went to Black Rock, N. Y. near Buffalo. They remained there two months and went from there to Cleveland. From there, they came to Portsmouth by canal. They landed at Portsmouth, Ohio, October 28, 1849, and the remainder of our subject's life was spent there. It was necessary for the boy to work and he went into the employment of T. M. Patterson to learn the book-binding business. He did learn it, but it did not suit his taste and he gave it up. It was, however, a consolation to him that he had a trade on which to fall back if necessity required it.

On April 16, 1861, he enlisted in Co. G. 1st O. V. I. first three months service and served till August 1, 1861. He made a good soldier and was much liked by his comrades. On June 10, 1862, he was made Quartermaster of the city of Portsmouth and of the several militia companies stationed there and held the position so long as such an officer was required. The city had quite a supply of military stores and equipments. After the war, he followed the river and was very popular with all who met him and knew him. In 1867, he started the St. Charles Exchange, on the east side of Market street and conducted it for 17 years. He was a very popular landlord and restaurant keeper, and served as good meals as were ever put up in Portsmouth. Every one liked him and he had a pleasant welcome and a gracious adieu to all who visited him. He was one of the most liberal and sympathetic of mankind. A woman or child, a crippled or disabled person, always called forth his sympathies. If any one had a tale of woe, he had a sure listener in Pat, and if ministering to the poor and needy constituted the best Christian, he was the best in town. Pat was always a democrat and in 1889, he was a candidate on that ticket for County Commissioner against John Kaps on the Republican ticket. The vote stood, Kaps 3,683; Kenrick, 2,949. Majority for Kaps, 734. James E. Campbell, the Democratic candidate for Governor, was elected and Pat was one of the dead and wounded to be taken care of. He wanted the stewardship of the Penitentiary, but in the division of the spoils, obtained the superintendency of the kitchen, a very good place. He had numerous opportunities for making money, but insisted on honesty and integrity and required that the state should be justly served. However he did not like the place and in eighteen months gave it up.

On October 28, 1875, he married Miss Sarah J. Rhodes, daughter of John Rhodes, and his married life was a very happy one, though not blessed with children. When he left the employment of the state, he located in New Boston, on the Rhodes place and lived there almost all the time till a few days before his death. He died Sunday, November 13, 1898, at his residence on the south-east corner of Washington and Seventh streets, of Bright's disease. He died in the communion of the Roman Catholic church, in which he had been reared. Pat Kenrick was a man of emphasis in all he did. He had a heart full of sympathy for all mankind. He was always fond of children and never could do too much for them. He loved to be surrounded by them and to minister to their pleasures. He never, from his standpoint, injured any human being. His life was spent in Portsmouth and he was a familiar figure in it for thirty-four years.

William Sanford Kent

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, July 22, 1866. He is the son of Vincent L. and Celina D. Bondurant Kent, the former of Meigs county, and the latter of Jackson county. Our subject's paternal grandfather and grandmother were John and Jane Longshore Kent, and his maternal grandfather was Thomas Bondurant. The boyhood and youth of our subject was spent on the farm in Madison township, and in attending the district schools, where he obtained a fair education. He married Una Bennett, daughter of Rolla E. and Sarah A. Pool Bennett, February 5, 1897. They have three children: Irma Avel, Louis Warden, and Essel Selma. For the past six years, Mr. Kent has been engaged in the lumber business, and is now conducting a general store, in Pike county, where he does a large amount of business. He is a democrat and a member of the Knights of Pythias.

was born in Ripley township, Huron county, Ohio, May 27, 1836. His father's name was Isaac and his mother's name was Anna. He studied preparatory for college at Hayesville and Hudson, Ohio. He entered Western Reserve, now Adelbert College, in July, 1862. The day following matriculation he enlisted as a private in Company B, 85 O. V. I. for three months. He was honorably discharged September 27, 1862 at Columbus, Ohio. He graduated from college in July, 1866. In the fall of that year he entered Lane Theological Seminary at Cincinnati and graduated in the spring of 1869. He was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church of New Richmond, Ohio June 10, 1869. On August 25th of the same year he was married to Miss Ansley J. Blackman of Hudson, Ohio.

He remained at New Richmond three years and in the summer of 1872 he resigned his pastorate at that place and accepted the co-pastorate of the First Presbyterian church at Portsmouth, Ohio, Rev. E. P. Pratt being the regular pastor. In February, 1875, he was installed pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, the membership of which consisted of one hundred and ninety members from the First Presbyterian church. He continued as pastor of this church for almost ten years, when he resigned to accept a call from the Second Presbyterian church at Urbana, Ohio, where he was installed pastor April 28, 1885. During this pastorate he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from his Alma Mater. In the spring of 1891, he received a unanimous call to become the pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Berkeley, California, where he was installed pastor October 18, 1891. This pastorate continued for six years when he accepted a call to the First Presbyterian church at Salem, Oregon, and was installed pastor October 28, 1897, where at the present writing July, 1901, he is near the close of his fourth year as pastor of that church.

Mr. Ketchum has four daughters and one son, William F., born August 15, 1870; Mary E., born December 17, 1872; Bertha, born February 7, 1875; Edith, born February 8, 1878; and Marguerite Ruth, born September 4, 1886. Rev. Ketchum has been successful in all his pastoral work, all of which has been characterized by the most intense zeal, great earnestness and deep piety.

Frederick Charles Ketter

was born at Gephart's, December 15, 1873. His parents were William H. and Mary E. (Crosser) Ketter. His grandparents came from Germany. He spent the first nine years of his life at Gephart's and then his father removed to Harrison township and located on the old Dan White farm, where they lived for twelve years and then returned to Gephart's. During this time he worked on the farm and attended school in the winter. In 1894, he and his brother William commenced a general store at Gephart's and Fred continued in this business until 1897. He then learned telegraphy with William A. Tripp at South Webster. He worked with him for five months, and went to work with Walker Marsh at Eifort where he remained for two years. He was Assessor of Bloom township in 1895. In 1898, he was elected a member of the county Republican Central Committee. In 1899, he was appointed Deputy Sheriff, under Sheriff Williamson. In the Republican primary in March 1902, he was nominated for Sheriff and was elected in November. He is a republican and a member of the German M. E. Church, also a member of the A. O. U. W. of Portsmouth. He was married June 16, 1898 to Theodosia B. Cross, daughter of Doctor P. B. and Eliza (Howell) Cross of South Webster, Ohio. They have one boy, Eugene. Mr. Ketter is a popular officer and citizen. He aims to do his full duty in every relation in life, a fact which is appreciated by all who know him. He is earnest and serious in all he does and will succeed in anything he undertakes.

William Ernst Ketter

was born at Gephart's, November 21, 1871. His father was William Henry Ketter, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Crosser. He went to school at Gephart's, and such times as he was out of school, he worked on the railroad as a section man, with his father. In 1891, he engaged in the general merchandise business with F. C. Ketter his brother at Gephart's, and was in business there until 1898. Since then, he has been engaged in mining fireclay. He ships the clay to Massillon, Newberg and to the companies near Portsmouth. He has twelve men in his employ all the time and ships from one to two cars a day. He married Lucinda Jenkins, December 20, 1885. He has three children, Grace, Wells, and Marie. He is a republican in his political views.

Charles A. Kiefer

was born in Alsace, France, now Germany, March 5, 1814. He was reared on the Roman Catholic church and remained in that faith till after his marriage. He was married in 1832, to Elizabeth Rosenmyer, who was reared a Protestant. She was a native of Hanover, and two years her husband's senior. They had five children: Mary, wife of Louis Blomeyer, Louis, Edward, and Frederick, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and Amelia, wife of William Campbell, of Columbus, Ohio. He emigrated to the United States in 1848 and located at Pine Grove Furnace and followed his trade of stone cutting. He worked two years each at Hanging Rock, Ohio, and Ashland, Kentucky. He came to Portsmouth in 1863, and was employed at Gaylord's mill until it shut down and then worked at Wait's furniture factory and at Johnson's hub and spoke factory. He joined the German Methodist Episcopal church in 1850 and became a local preacher. He was noted for his honesty and his sincere piety. His faith was sublime and his life was a benediction. The children of his acquaintance revered and loved him. They lovingly called him, "Grandpa Kiefer." He died March 13, 1889. His wife died August 30, 1894.

Charles Kinney, son of Charles and Elizabeth (Cox) Kinney, grandson of Washington Kinney, was born in Springville, Kentucky, July 7, 1850. His grandfather, Washington Kinney, has a sketch herein. After the death of his father, in 1861, he removed with his mother to Columbus, Indiana, where he received his primary education in the public schools. When sixteen years of age, he entered the office of the Columbus (Indiana) Bulletin, to learn the printer's trade. He was employed there for a term of nine years. In 1871, he returned to Portsmouth and was employed in Reilley's book store for four years. He afterwards became a traveling salesman for the Cabinetmaker's Union, holding this position until he accepted the appointment as Deputy Treasurer of Scioto county in 1876.

In 1883, he was elected Treasurer of Scioto county, by a majority of 485 votes, and upon the expiration of his term, was chosen as his own successor,—this time by the very flattering majority of 1,347. Upon the expiration of his second term as County Treasurer, he accepted the position of Chief Assistant to Hon. Daniel J. Ryan, Secretary of State, at Columbus, Ohio, and served from 1889 to 1892. In that year he served as secretary of the Board of Ohio Commissioners at the World's Columbian Exposition. He was also chief clerk under the Hon. S. M. Taylor, Ryan's successor, as Secretary of State till 1896, at which time he was elected to that office by a handsome majority. He was re-elected in 1898.

In June, 1901, he formed a law partnership with George H. Jones, under the firm name of Jones & Kinney, at Columbus, Ohio. He was chairman of his county committee in 1888, and has been a delegate to numerous state conventions. In his fraternal relations he is identified with the Masonic order and the Knights of Pythias, having attained the Knight Templar degree in the former.

He was married October 8, 1879, to Letitia H. Yoakley, daughter of John Yoakley, of Portsmouth, Ohio. In all his public stations Mr. Kinney has reported himself as becomes a public servant. He has been faithful, capable and upright. His actions have merited the approval of all people, irrespective of party affiliations.

Captain Thomas Waller Kinney, son of Washington Kinney and Mary Waller, his wife, was born March 14, 1842, the youngest child of a family of nine children. He grew up in Portsmouth, left the Portsmouth schools at the age of sixteen and went into the State Bank of Ohio, as an errand boy. He was there until he was nineteen years of age, when he enlisted in Company G, 56th O. V. I., October 30, 1861, for three years. He was promoted to Sergeant-Major the same day. He was made Second Lieutenant of Company H, June 11, 1862. He was made First Lieutenant December 27, 1862, and Captain February 14, 1863. He was mustered out May 15, 1864, at New Orleans, La., on expiration of his term of service.

On his return from the army, he went into the W. Kinney & Co. bank, and was in that bank and its successors, until the bank failed in November, 1877. Directly afterwards he became the first agent of the Scioto Valley railroad at Portsmouth, and served one year. Then in 1879, he moved to Kansas, located near Council Grove and engaged in farming, for a period of three years; but he concluded that his old home was the best place for him, and in 1882, came back and engaged with the Portsmouth Fire Brick Company, in supplying fire clay for the company. The company merged into the Kentucky Fire Brick Co., in 1901, and he has been with the two companies ever since 1882, in the same capacity. In April, 1873, he was married to Miss Lida Adams. They have one daughter, Julia. He is a Blue Lodge Mason, and holds his membership in Pogue Lodge, Ashland, Ky.

Mr. Kinney is a great collector of curios and old relics. His collection is referred to, and a part of it mentioned, elsewhere. He is a gentleman who despises notoriety in any form. His tastes are quiet and he prefers the social enjoyment of his own immediate circle. He is fond of history and historical reminiscence, and would have made an excellent historian. He is an amateur geologist. He has studied the subjects theoretically and practically all his life, and the editor of this work is indebted to him for a contribution on that subject, which will be found herein properly accredited to him. He is content to be simply inscribed on the good citizen roll and otherwise to follow his own inclinations. Like Diogenes, all he asks is, that no one shall stand in his sunshine. He will take care of the rest.

Wellington R. Kinney, son of Henry Richie Kinney and Mary McNairn, his wife, was born November 30, 1847, on Font street, in Portsmouth, where Hibbs' hardware store was. His mother was born in Scotland and was the daughter of Joseph McNairn, who conducted a hardware business in Portsmouth for many years. Mr. Kinney was educated in the public schools of Portsmouth and first entered business with Frank L. Gilbert in the wholesale grocery business in 1868, as a clerk. He remained here only a year and then went into the hardware business with his father on Chillicothe street as H. R. Kinney & Son. He retired in 1875 on account of ill health and traveled in Nevada and California for two years. In 1877, he returned to Ohio and since then has been engaged in raising small fruits.

On October 9, 1889, he was united in marriage with Miss L. Epworth Briggs, daughter of Samuel C. Briggs. Two children were born to them: Wells Pearl, born December 19, 1890, died October, 1898; Briggs Richie, born February 17, 1891. Mr. Kinney lines up with the principles of the Democrat party, and is a communicant of All Saints church in Portsmouth. He takes the part of a good citizen in the play of Human Life and fills out the character.

William Kinney, son of Washington Kinney, was born October 26, 1835, at the old home on Second street, Portsmouth, Ohio. He went to school to Miss Birge in the Fourth street building. He attended Kenyon College and was a member of the class of 1854, but did not remain to graduate. He left Gambier and went first as a clerk for S. R. Ross and then into his father's bank. He was First Lieutenant of Company E, 140th O. V. I., from May 2, to September 3, 1864. Directly after the war, he made the tour of Europe. He remained in the bank until his father's death in 1871, and then conducted the bank under the same name until it was merged into the Iron National Bank in 1872. He was cashier of that bank until January 23, 1876, when it surrendered its charter. The Iron National Bank was succeeded by W. Kinney & Company, composed of our subject and his brother. That continued until November 17, 1877, when it made an assignment. Afterwards all the claims against the bank were settled and released. From 1871 to 1874, Mr. William Kinney was one of the County Commissioners and made a most excellent officer. Since 1877, Mr. Kinney has resided most of the time in West Virginia. He is a gentleman of rare literary culture and taste and could grace any circle in the land. All his friends who know him best regret his determination to live in retirement.

Captain Isaac Kirby

was born at New Bedford, Massachusetts, November 19, 1802. He attended school there and at the age of twenty-three years, he went to sea as a common sailor in the coasting trade. He arose in the service until he became master and owner of a vessel. His vessel, a freighter, struck an iceberg on the New Foundland banks, and sunk in twenty minutes. He saved only his spy-glass. His vessel was bound from New Bedford to Glasgow, Scotland. He was seven days in an open boat and was brought back to the United States. His shipwreck determined him to be a landsman. He started west and went to Cincinnati, and there he met Dr. McDowell, who persuaded him to locate at Portsmouth. He had two daughters with him, Isabel and Catharine. Isabel married John Renshaw, and Catharine died single. He started in the grocery business at Portsmouth, and in the making of brick with Eben Dole. He had married in New Bedford, and had three children, George and the two daughters mentioned above.

On December 14, 1841, he married Rosina Dole, daughter of Eben Dole, born March 2, 1825. Their children were as follows: John Renshaw, who resides at Watseka, Ill., a farmer; Henry, died at the age of thirty-three. He had been a soldier in the civil war; William, died at the age of thirty-eight, and left a family; James A., in the marble business at Portsmouth, with the Bode Granite Company; Edward J., a grocer, and Ida May, who died at the age of eighteen years. Capt. Kirby died May 9, 1865, and his wife January 29, 1888. He was a whig and a republican. He was a member of the Methodist church, and was a Justice of the Peace in Washington township a number of years. He was highly esteemed as a good citizen by all who knew him.

James Albert Kirby

is the son of Captain Isaac Kirby, a native of New Bedford, Massachusetts, and Rosina Dole, the daughter of Eben Dole, one of the pioneers of Portsmouth. He was born September 3, 1852, on his father's farm in Washington township, and attended school there. He started out for himself in 1865, in the employment of George W. Cole. There he worked on a farm for three years. He then went to Watseka, Illinois, and was a farmer's boy there for three years. In 1871, he returned to Portsmouth, and became an apprentice with Charles C. Bode, in the marble business. He learned the business in three years, and then he and his brother-in-law, Joseph Bowman, set up in the marble business as Bowman and Kirby, and continued it for twenty years.

In 1894, Mr. Kirby tried the confectionery business and continued in it for four years. In 1898, he re-entered the employment of Charles C. Bode in the marble trade and continued it till the latter's death. Since the last mentioned event, Mr. Kirby and Mr. Charles J. Bode formed the Bode Granite Company, which they conduct. Mr. Kirby married Leona, the daughter of Joseph Bowman, September 29, 1874, and has had five children: Katie, the wife of Thomas Crooks, of Portsmouth; William, Grace, Edward and Lloyd, shoe cutters at Heer's. Mr. Kirby was a democrat till 1884, when he became a republican. He never held any political office, but that of councilman.

Frank Kleffner

was born in Niedermashberg, Province Westphalia, Germany, May 9, 1832. His father died when he was a child and his step-father's name was Anton Willike. His mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Brange. He attended the elementary schools until he arrived at the age of fifteen years. Having left school, he went to Paderhorn, Westphalia, where he went into the business of baking, and served in that for three years, and then for this purpose he went through other parts of Germany and several countries of Europe. In about a year after this, he established a bakery for himself at Neidermashberg, where he conducted it until September, 1854, and from there he went to Buffalo, New York, where he found employment in a brewery for about four months. Then he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and was employed in the bakery business for five months. He heard of Portsmouth and went there and engaged in business. In 1857, he visited Germany and remained a year. On December 29, 1861, he was married to Miss Barbara Adams, widow of Thomas H. Muehl. He then went into the brewery business in Portsmouth and was engaged in it for twenty years. He served as a councilman for two years. His wife died August 11, 1871, leaving three children: Lizzie, Frank and Anna. He was married a second time to Anna Hatman, of Indiana, January 25, 1872, and the children of that marriage are: Otto, Josephine, Edward and Catharine. From this time till 1896, he followed his trade successively in Cincinnati, Sciotoville, Hamden and Columbus, O. He again returned to Hamden, where he has since been engaged in the liquor business. He is a democrat in his political views, and a communicant of the Roman Catholic church. He has always conducted himself as a good citizen, obedient to the laws, and faithful in the performance of all his civic duties.

Frank Anthony Kleffner

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, January 2, 1868. His father was Frank Kleffner, and his mother was Barbara Adams. He went to school in Portsmouth till 1881, when he finished up in the A Grammar, and then went to the Saint Francis Gymnasium in Cincinnati, with the idea of becoming a priest of the Roman Catholic church, but after remaining there for one year, he came to the conclusion that he was not fitted for the work. He says he was in jail four days and nights, in 1884, on account of the Cincinnati Court House riots, but was discharged after examination, as an innocent man. He was clerk in the Galt House at Cincinnati, for two years. He then worked for the Western Union Telephone Company, in Kentucky. In 1887 and 1888, he worked for his father in Sciotoville. From there he went to Hamden and was employed, with his father, for four years. He was in Columbus for a while in 1894, and visited New Orleans, but finally concluded that Portsmouth was the best place. He is engaged in the liquor business at 16 West Sixth street. He was married to Catharine C. Eal, of Columbus, Ohio, July 28, 1897. He has three children: Francis Gregory, Sylvester Emmett, and Helen Cecilia. He is a communicant of the church of the Holy Redeemer.

William S. Klink

was born December 13, 1871, at Piketon, Ohio. His parents were John and Amelia Klink, natives of Germany. His father was a bridge contractor and worked with Philip Kelley, in Pike county. Our subject attended the Piketon schools in winter and did farm work in summer. He worked for James English until he was ten years of age. From 1886 to 1892, he was engaged in Portsmouth at Moeller's butcher shop. He then worked as a shoe cutter for about a year in Portsmouth. Then he labored at a packing house, Tokee & Son, in Dayton, Ohio. He conducted a butcher shop here one year, came back to Portsmouth in 1896, and commenced working again for Moeller. He continued with him two years and in 1898, he commenced business for himself in Portsmouth, and continued for three years. In June, 1901, he took a partnership with Edward Moeller in the meat business, as Moeller & Klink. On February 16, 1898, he was married to Emma Voelker, daughter of Lewis and Eliza Voelker. He is a republican. He is a member of the United Brethren church. He is active, industrious, energetic and does the best he can to honorably fill the position in life in which he finds himself.

Louis Knapp

was born in Hanover, Germany, September 8, 1840. His father's name was Henry Knapp, and his mother's maiden name was Caroline Schukky. He came to this country with his parents in 1845, who located near Chillicothe on the old Adams farm, where they remained two years. In June, 1847, they moved to Clinton Furnace, where his father dug ore at the furnace. They remained there seven years, and in 1853, moved to Center Furnace, in Lawrence county, where his father engaged in digging and mining ore. In the fall of 1855, the family moved to Clinton Furnace, where they remained until 1859, in the spring of which year they moved to Empire Furnace. His father resided there until his death in January, 1884, and his mother died in 1888. At Empire Furnace our subject began ore contracting, and continued this until 1860. He also took contracts of hauling charcoal.

In 1860, he took a contract of ore for Empire furnace, which in 1861, he turned over to his father, and enlisted in the army July 20, 1861, with a recruiting officer, at Empire furnace. The organization first intended was abandoned. On August 10, 1861, he enlisted in Company E, 5th Virginia regiment, but was not mustered in until September 2, 1861. He was in the battles of Trout's Hill and Cross Keys, where one color bearer was shot, on his right side and a soldier on his left. Two men were wounded near him, and he had several holes shot through his clothes, but he was not touched. There were thirty-seven men killed and wounded out of his regiment in this battle. He was promoted to corporal in 1862, and was made Sergeant in July, 1863. He was in the battles near Culpepper, C. H., and Cedar Mountain, Virginia, and was under fire for thirty days. The members of his company were the sharpshooters of the brigade and were with the advance guard at the beginning of the second battle of Bull Run. He took part in the battle at Lynchburg, Va., and shortly after at Winchester, Va. He was with General Crook and later under General Sheridan in the Shenandoah valley. He took part in the battle of Berryville, September 2, 1864, and was mustered out October 15, 1864, at Wheeling, W. Va.

After he came home he engaged in teaming at Empire furnace, contracting and delivering ore, and in 1868, he went to Buckhorn furnace and took a contract hauling iron and ore, where he remained until 1870, when he went to Center furnace, and took a contract hauling charcoal.

On January 1, 1871, he bought a tract of Empire furnace, consisting of 107 acres of land. He has improved it extensively and added about 370 acres to it, and has now over 400 acres in one body. He engaged in general farming until about 1890, when he turned his attention to raising fine stock and cattle. He raises black Aberdeen Angus cattle, and has about fifty head of full stock and grades.

Mr. Knapp was married January 25, 1865, to Miss Mary Fitzsimmons, at Empire furnace. She lived until December, 1881. There were seven children of this marriage: Lizzie, married Vinton Andre, died at the age of twenty-seven; May, the wife of Frank E. Hudson, traveling salesman for the Murphy Shoe Company, of Portsmouth, O.; Anna, died at the age of twenty-four; Joseph, died at the age of twenty-eight, married; Charles, died at the age of one year; Ruby, aged twenty-four, at home; James L., now teaching school, was in the Spanish-American war, 2nd United States Infantry in Company L. Mr. Knapp was married the second time in August, 1882, to Miss Hannah C. Fitzer. To this union two boys were born: John L., and Oliver W. He has always been a republican, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Henry Chapel, M. E., from 1874 to 1898, since then he has held his membership at Wheelersburg. He has been class leader and steward since 1875. He is a member of the Grand Army. In the county generally, Mr. Knapp has long been recognized as one of the most substantial, successful and progressive farmers. He belongs to that wing of agriculturists who seem to know instinctively how to dig money out of the ground. This implies accurate perceptions—good judgment, industry, caution and the ability to manage well. He is one of those men who would have succeeded in any vocation. He is skillful in adapting means to ends, is a shrewd dealer, plans carefully and usually accomplishes what he undertakes. He is correct in all his habits and has a military record during the civil war of which he has a right to be proud. His moral and religious life is exemplary.

Frank Vincent Knauss

was born December 22, 1850 in Monroe county, Pennsylvania. His father was Joseph Knauss, and his mother's maiden name was Katharine Ann Mansfield. His father was born December 22, 1823, and was a country merchant. He was a member of the 77th Pennsylvania Infantry during the whole war. He was Sergeant Major of the regiment. He died December 23 1901. Our subject received a common school education in the vicinity where he was born at White Haven, Pennsylvania. In 1869 he became a moulder in the shops of the Pennsylvania railroad at Altoona, where he remained but a few months. From there he went to the Marietta & Cincinnati Railroad shops at Zaleski, Ohio, as a moulder. He did the principal part of the work there. In 1873 he came to Portsmouth and worked a short time with Murray, Moore & Co., but was invited to go to Jackson, by Peter Pickeral, to work in the foundry there. In that place he did most of the heavy work. While in Jackson he built a home; as a result of the panic of 1873 he sold his property in Jackson and bought a half interest in the foundry in Hamden. Not satisfied with that arrangement, he bought a flour mill in Zaleski, trading his interest in the Hamden foundry to H. S. Bundy. He remained in Zaleski in charge of this mill from 1879 to 1881. In the latter year he took charge of the Staiger Stamped Ware Factory at Washington, C. H., and remained there two years.

In the fall of 1883, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and went into the employ of the Ohio Stove Company. In 1889, he organized the Portsmouth Stove & Range Works, and has been president and general manager, since January 1890. The original capital stock was $50,000, and it now has a considerable surplus. This factory is the most steady running factory of its kind in the United States, having never closed down, except for repairs. It employs 150 men, having begun with forty. The buildings have been doubled since the start, and the concern uses up fifteen tons of iron a day, making as good goods as any factory in the United States. These facts are mentioned in connection with Mr. Knauss, simply to illustrate his wonderful business ability.

Mr. Knauss was married in September, 1872, to Miss Frances Beeching, a daughter of John Beeching of Cincinnati, in the wholesale, produce and commission business. He has the following children: Frank M., aged twenty-eight. John D., aged twenty-five and Harry A., aged twelve. He has been a republican all his life, as are all of his family. He was a member of the City Council for two years, and has been president of the Commercial Club for two years. He is now treasurer of the Gratz Lead Mining Company in Owensboro, Kentucky. He has been president of the Portsmouth Shoe Company for four years, and was first president and chairman of the Board of Trade.

A business associate says of him: "He is a man who can be depended upon under all conditions. He is a practical, competent business man, and thoroughly familiar with all the details of the business with which he is connected. He is energetic, has been very successful in his ventures, and knows no such word as fail. His word is as good as his bond, and he stands high in financial circles. He is an enterprising citizen, who has always been willing to devote his time and money towards any movement that is for the best interests of Portsmouth."

was born in Swaith, East Riding of Yorkshire, August 28, 1833. His father was John Knowles, a shoemaker, and his mother's maiden name was Jane Micklethwait, a sister of Joseph Micklethwait, an ancestor of the Micklethwaits of Portsmouth. His parents had ten children, five sons and five daughters. William was the third son and child. He attended school in England, learned the shoemaker's trade with his father, beginning at the age of fourteen years, and worked until he was twenty-one, then he came to the United States. William Raynor had married his aunt and located in Portsmouth, so he determined to come to the United States. Joseph Micklethwait was already located here, and young Knowles made the voyage. He came over in the "Robert Kelley," a sailing vessel. At that time there were only two steam vessels on the Atlantic Ocean, "The City of Philadelphia" and "The City of Glasgow." The "City of Philadelphia" was lost on a voyage she was making at the same time young Knowles crossed in the "Robert Kelley." He was eight weeks on the ocean, and the vessel encountered great storms. Twenty-nine passengers were lost on the way, washed overboard or died. The Captain of the ship was a personal friend of his, and he remained in New York a month as his guest.

He went up the Hudson to Albany, and traveled by rail to Cleveland. Then he came to Cincinnati, and came up the river on the "Old Scioto," in May 1854 with Capt. Bernard Kepner. At that time Wm. Raynor was conducting a shoe business in Portsmouth, and young Knowles went to work for him for a short time. Then he went to work for Robert Bell and worked for him for several years; then for Richard Lloyd several years, then he kept a shop of his own for a number of years. He made the first shoe that was made by machinery for Robert Bell, and he has been connected with the shoe business ever since. When Mr. Irving Drew first went into the manufacture of shoes, Mr. Knowles began to work under him, and has worked up to the present day. He is the oldest employe in the Drew-Selby factory, and the oldest shoe worker now living in Portsmouth. He works at any and every part of the business. He is sixty-nine years old and works every day.

He married Mary Katharine Kizer, daughter of Isaac Kizer, Sept 27, 1858. They have the following children: Lydia J., widow of Philip Iorey; Lucy, Floyd, Sallie, Laura, Mary, John, Robert, Ralph. He and his family are members of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, and have been for a great many years. Mr. Knowles and his family are highly respected in Portsmouth. He works hard every day, and when his Sunday and holidays come no man enjoys them more than he. He is a typical Englishman in his physical constitution and in his habits and manner of thought. He believes in doing the duties of every day on that day, and not postponing anything until the next. He lives in such a manner that if called away at any time, he would have nothing to regret. He keeps his conscience clear every day in the week. Mr. Knowles is a frank, candid man, and is just what he seems to be, nothing more or nothing less.

Louis Frederick Korth

was born in 1844, at Stettin, the largest seaport of Prussia. His father's name was Fred W. Korth and his mother's name was Amella Gesleau. His mother was descended from French Huguenots, who had located in Pomerania in 1687. He was educated at the Ecole Francaise in Stettin and learned the French language as well as his mother tongue. At nine years, he attended the City Gymnasium and at fifteen years of age the Nautical Academy at Stettin, until he was seventeen years old when he came to the United States, having fixed on Cincinnati as his destination. In Germany he had learned the English language. His father was a ship chandler at Stettin and many English and American sea captains did business there. Our subject is the only one of his family of six brothers and a sister who ever emigrated, though his brothers have visited this country. He landed in New York in May, 1861, and took up newspaper work.

He enlisted in the 8th N. Y. Vol. Infantry, July 6, 1861 for two years. His regiment was then in Virginia and he joined it at Arlington Heights some time in August. In a month after, he was detailed for topographical work and served in that capacity in Washington until his regiment, which was in Blenker's division of Sumner's corps, was sent across the mountains into West Virginia to join Fremont. He was in Fremont's campaign in Western Virginia and at the battle of Cross Keys on June 8, 1862. He went through the first Rappahannock campaign under Pope and Sigel and was in the second battle of Bull Run on the 29 and 30 of August, 1862. He was in Hooker's Rappahannock campaign and at Chancellorsville on May 24, 1863, on division staff service.

At Gettysburg, his command fought along the Mummasburg road on the first day of July, 1863, and captured forty men of Rhodes' division. He was sent back with a guard detail in the afternoon, but the rebel prisoners got away in the melee in the town and he rejoined his command that evening at the cemetery gate. During Early's attack on the Federal right center late on the afternoon of the second day his command went to the support of Rickett's and Wiedrick's Batteries. During the night of the same day, they were rushed to the right of Culp's Hill to the support of Gen. Green against Johnson's attack on the Federal extreme right. In the afternoon of the third day, his command was subjected to the terrific concentrated fire of the entire Rebel artillery on Cemetery Hill during Pickett's charge. Mr. Korth's two-years' time expired on July 8, 1863, but he remained with the command during the pursuit of Lee as far as Warrenton, Va.

He then concluded to go to Cincinnati and remained there until Kirby's raid when he assisted in laying out one of the redoubts south of Covington, Ky. He fell in with the 16 New York Artillery and enlisted in Company G for three years. Soon after he was sent to Gloucester Point at the mouth of York river. In the spring of 1864, his Battery joined the army of the James in the active campaign on Richmond under Butler. He was at Drury's Bluff, Dutch Gap Canal, Fort Harrison, Fort Brady, Darleytown, etc. In December, 1864, he was attached to the staff of Gen. Weitzel as topographer and served in this capacity until Grant's finishing campaign against Richmond. He went into Richmond with Battery C, 3rd R. I. Artillery on the morning of the 3rd of April. He was discharged late in July, 1865.

In October, 1865, he went with his former captain, who was appointed Indian Agent, to Fort Smith, Arkansas. In the fall of 1866, he located at Quincy, Ill., and later took up the editorial charge of The Daily German "Tribune." He remained there seven years, and in St. Louis one year, where he worked on both English and German dailies with Carl Schurz and Joseph Pulitzer.

In 1873, he visited Germany and resided there and in Liverpool England, about one year. In the fall of 1875 he returned to the United States for the Centennial Exposition, and took an editorial position on the Philadelphia "Daily Democrat," where he remained ten years. In 1885, he was called to Cleveland where he edited the German Daily "Waechter" four years. In 1889, he went to Springfield, Ohio, and started the "Adler," Republican. In 1895, he returned to Cleveland and took charge of the Cleveland German "Post and Press," (Republican), and published and edited it until 1899, when he came to Portsmouth and purchased the "Correspondent."

Mr. Korth was married the first time in 1870, to Rose Lambur of Quincy, Ill. He had two sons by this marriage; Frederick, at Tacoma, Washington, and George, connected with a New York Publishing House. His first wife died in 1878, and he was married again in 1886 to Caroline Raff, at Cleveland.

Mr. Korth is a valuable addition to any community. As his sketch indicates, he comes of good German stock. With all his acquirements and experience, he is a gentleman of modest demeanor. His education fits him well for the position he holds.

George Engelbert Krick

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, December 19, 1858, the son of Matthias Krick and his wife, Margaret Myers. His father has a separate sketch herein. He attended school at the parish school of the Holy Redeemer, and the public schools of Portsmouth, Ohio, until 1874, when he began for himself as a clerk in the store of Rudolph Brunner for three years. Then he clerked in a store for J. N. Leedom for a year. In 1879, he went to Waverly and clerked for Emmitt, Myers & Company. Myers was his uncle. He remained in this employment until 1881 when he clerked in a dry goods house in Springfield. In 1882, he was in Columbus, in the employment of R. G. Dunn & Company. In 1884, he returned to Portsmouth and kept books for Stanton & Balmert. From 1885 to 1887 he was deputy United States Collector under the late James W. Newman. In 1887, he resigned the office to become manager of the Spring Lane Distilling Company. In 1889 he was elected to the City Council of Portsmouth, and served six years. In 1892, he organized the Central Savings Bank and began business with it in 1893. He has been its cashier from the start.

He was married in 1884 to Miss Isabel A. Dunn, daughter of William Dunn, and has eight living children: Helen, Sadie, George, Seva, Louis and Leo, (twins) Edmund, and Paul. He has lost two children, one an infant son and another son, William at five years. He is a communicant of the church of the Holy Redeemer, and a democrat in politics, with the proviso that he is for the gold standard. Mr. Krick is thin and spare, of a dark complexion and very earnest in his manner. He has been very successful in his management of the Central Savings Bank and has built up an institution of which he may be proud and of which the community is proud. He is one of the best business men of the city. He has the banker's faculty of taking one look at a man and then telling him what he wants, without the man's ever speaking. He possesses the confidence of the entire business community and has demonstrated that he deserves it.

was born in Rhenish Bavaria, near Worms, January 14, 1853. His father was George K. and his mother's maiden name was Ella Andone. His parents had three children: Andrew, John and Barbara. His father was a farmer and died in 1869, at his home in Germany. John learned the cooper's trade, and served as an apprentice for three years. He began his apprenticeship the year his father died, and left Germany on January 14, 1872, and went to Antwerp in Belgium, where he took a ship for this country; he crossed the English Channel, went to Liverpool and then came to New York. The entire voyage from Antwerp occupied fifteen days. He went from New York to Cincinnati, remained there two weeks, and then came to Scioto county and located on Dogwood Ridge, where he had an uncle. He went to work on the B. & O. railroad as a section hand, and worked at it for fifteen months, when he was made a foreman for nine years—near Jackson for two years and near Gephart's, for seven years. He then was a farmer on Little Scioto, on the old William Marting farm, until 1890 when he went to Gephart's, and engaged in a general store. He also has a grist mill there.

He was married December 5, 1875 to Mary Marting, daughter of William Marting. His children are: Henry Marting, who lives with his father; Charles engaged in milling at Gephart's; Nellie, Carrie, Katie, and Hilda, at home. He is a democrat in his political views, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Gephart's.

Mr. Kriick is a citizen of the most sterling character. He is industrious, energetic, liberal-minded, and of broad and charitable views. He is one of the strong elements in the community where he resides, and would be an important factor in any community where he chose to reside. He makes all enterprises he takes up succeed. He is a prosperous and successful farmer and keeps up with the most advanced notions in farming. He is successful as a country merchant. His neighbors believe in him and he enjoys their confidence to the fullest extent.

was born September 29, 1856, at Portsmouth near the mouth of Lawson's Run. His father was Jacob Kugelman, a native of Eidenkopen, Bavaria. His mother was Anna Margaret Deinser, a native of Mergnes, Bavaria. He grew up in Portsmouth and went to the city schools until he was twelve years of age, when his father removed to the Hatch farm, now known as the Peebles farm, east of Portsmouth. He lived the life of a farmer there for two years, when his father purchased a farm near Powellsville, Ohio, now owned by William Duis and resided there from 1870 to 1896. Our subject farmed for Dan Harwood on the Marsh farm from November 24, 1878 till May 1, 1880. Then he worked for Milton Buck, on the Damarin farm for awhile. He went to Texarkana and came back from there to Illinois and Indiana, where he worked until August 1, 1880. Then he came to Portsmouth and went to working for Gilbert Stewart and worked for him until September 1, 1881. At that time he went into the employment of McFarland, Sanford & Company, as a salesman, and remained with them until August 1, 1885. He was then employed by the Chicago house of Miller, Cissna & Company, and was there until July 1, 1889. He was then employed by Clement, Vane & Company, of Chicago, till December 15, 1889, when he came to Portsmouth and was employed by Sanford, Varner & Company, where he remained until February 1, 1900. He then tried the insurance business for one year. On February 10, 1901, he purchased a grocery at 205 East Third street. He later sold out and took employment with Haas, Schwartz & Co.

He was married to Kate A. Buck, daughter of Milton Buck, March 8, 1882. He has a son, Charles Wynn, born May 18, 1883. His daughter Alice Stewart, was born February 25, 1886, and died January 31, 1889. He has a son, J. Emerson, born June 8, 1889. He is a member of Bigelow M. E. church. Prior to 1880, he was a democrat; since that time he has been a republican. He is a member of the United Commercial Travelers. Mr. Kugelman is one of the most active and energetic business men of his age. He found his true career as a salesman and if he cannot sell goods, no one can.

was born in Covington, Kentucky, December 20, 1855. His father was Henry Labold, a resident of Portsmouth, and his mother's maiden name was Fannie Rosenfeld, a native of Bavaria. His father was a native of the same place. Our subject attended school in Covington, Ky., and Cincinnati. At the age of fourteen he was in the High School of Covington, and his father wished him to continue going to school and get a good education; but the former having met with reverses, Simon determined to do something for himself and to go into business. He quit school and engaged in buying wool, hides, country produce and anything to which he could turn his hands. His very first venture was to buy $500 worth of goods on credit, when he had but $30. He followed this business in and about Covington and Cincinnati until 1875. From 1875 to 1884 he traveled continuously in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee, buying produce. In the summer he bought country produce and in the winter he bought furs. When he was at the age of seventeen, he clerked for a year at Vincennes, Indiana.

He came to Portsmouth in 1884. He then began to carry on the business of S. Labold & Co., buying hides, wool, etc., and is still a member of that firm. In 1894, he became a director in the First National Bank of Portsmouth; and in 1896 he was elected its cashier, and has been that ever since. He was married June 23rd 1886 to Miss Lena Riesman, daughter of David Riesman. They have one child Leona, a daughter. Mr. Labold is president of the Chicago Fire Brick Co., Chicago, Ill., a director of the Portsmouth and Kentucky Fire Brick Co., of Oak Hill, O.; of the Davis Fire Brick Co., at the same place; and of the Davis Drug Co., of the Excelsior Shoe Company and of the First National Bank, all of Portsmouth, Ohio. He is president of the Star Fire Brick Works and director and treasurer of the Portsmouth Savings and Loan Association. He is a director of the Board of Trade, and of the Commercial Club. He was a member of the City Council for two years, from 1895 to 1897. He was chairman of the Finance Committee during the time that the debt was reduced by $35,000, when the city built the new engine house and paved Market street without borrowing money. He is also a Director of the Black Fork Coal Co., which is developing coal mines in the vicinity of Washington Switch.

Mr. Labold is a gentleman of wonderful executive, administrative and financial ability. He knows what to touch and what to let alone and he knows it instinctively. His judgment is made up instantly on a case being presented to him, and like the Rothchilds, he makes no mistakes. If he backs an undertaking, it will be accomplished. If he declines to endorse a measure, it is because it has the element of failure. In all he has undertaken, he has been successful. It is his labors which have largely contributed to make the First National Bank of Portsmouth, Ohio, the strong, financial institution it is, and his skill and judgment have been of great benefit to all other businesses with which he is connected.

Professor John Powers Lacroix

was born near Haverhill, Ohio, February 20, 1833. His father was Alexander Lacroix, son of the French emigrant, Andrew Lacroix, who has a sketch herein. He attended the common schools of his vicinity until the age of eighteen when he entered the preparatory department of the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. Two years later he entered the college. In 1857, he graduated, one of a class of twelve. He was a member of the Athenian Society and was noted for his literary productions. During his college course, he was very fond of Chaucer and Spencer and the early English authors. He composed many poems which were published in the Cincinnati papers. In the winter of 1857, he went to New Orleans and for two years was engaged in teaching, and spent much of his time in the study of the French language and literature. Some of his correspondence with his college friends was in Latin. In 1860, he returned to the North and was made a minister of the Methodist church, and preached for three years. In 1863, he was elected tutor of Modern Languages in the Ohio Wesleyan University and was later made assistant professor.

In August, 1863, he was married to Corintha A. Irwin. She was born near Irwin station, Union county, Ohio, September 19, 1837 and died October 5, 1878. She translated "Gustavus Adolphus" from the French of L. Abelous. She was the mother of five children, four of whom survive her.

In 1865, he made a trip to Europe and studied at Berlin and Halle. He returned in the fall of 1866 and was elected Professor of Modern Languages and History, which chair he held until his death, September 22, 1879. He was a constant contributor to the Western, Pittsburg, Northern, Central and California Advocates; and he wrote occasionally for the Transcript, Independent, Zion's Herald, Methodist Recorder, Ladies' Repository, Southern Quarterly, Bibliotheca Sacra and the Methodist Quarterly Review. A list of his books will be found under "Bibliography of Scioto County."

Physically, he was a man of weak constitution, but he performed a wonderful amount of labor. He was all mind and no body. It is said not a day passed that he did not write something for publication. He was a constant contributor to the papers of the Methodist Episcopal church. It was a favorite work of his to review French and German books of great length. President Payne said of him: "No man ever wrote more or better. He was one of the most productive writers of the day. I never met from his pen a weak or puerile sentence." He maintained an extensive correspondence with men of learning and letters, in German and French.

Doctor Merrick said of him: "As a scholar his learning was various and correct; as a thinker, he was independent and profound; as a writer, ready and forcible; as a preacher, eminently instructive; as a teacher, successful; as a Christian, profoundly devout and sincerely pious. He believed the Bible to be God's word—God's teaching to him. His religion was not a mere form, but a life; that life had its roots in God and was nourished by communion with God. His addresses before God's throne were peculiarly impressive. He was remarkably conscientious. As a friend he was open and frank; no scheming about him. He was what he seemed to be, perfectly open, a friend, a true friend. Many of us found him such."

While a student at Delaware in his Junior year, he prepared a number of articles on the early French inhabitants of southern Ohio. To do this he traveled over Scioto, Lawrence and Gallia counties and interviewed all the old French settlers then living. From the material he gathered he prepared a series of sketches which appeared in the Ironton Register in the fall of 1855. These sketches were republished afterwards by James Keyes in his pioneer record, herein noted, and all of them have been used in this work as the basis of the sketches of the French settlers. The Editor desires to say that in his researches he has been able to find but very little to add to what Professor Lacroix prepared and found in his investigations that he had exhausted the material accessible.

Frank B. Lair

was born in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, June 5, 1866. His father was William Lair, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Welch. They had five sons and five daughters, of whom Frank was the second child. His father enlisted in Company F, 56th O. V. I., November 20, 1861, at the age of twenty-five years. He was transferred to Company A, January 26, 1864, having re-enlisted for three years. He was captured April 8, 1864, at Sabine Cross Roads, and mustered out June 30, 1865.

Frank, his son, obtained his education in the common schools of his vicinity, and at South Webster. He has been a farmer all his life, excepting in 1898, when he was a clerk at Hoskinson Furnace in Logan county. He is not married and makes his home with his father. He has been a member of the Township and County Republican Committee many times. He has always taken an active interest in the Republican party, of which he is a member. He is connected with the Free-Will Baptist church at Bloom township, and is highly esteemed by all his neighbors.

Constant Lake

was born May 29, 1849, at Wooster, Ohio. His parents were Constant Lake and Eleanor Jones, his wife. His grandfather was Constant Lake. The name "Constant," as a baptismal name, was constant in the family for seven generations back. The family came from England to the United States in 1638. In that year, William George Lake settled in Massachusetts from England. His wife was Mary Gardner. They had two sons, Elijah and James, and a daughter Mary. In 1679, Elijah married Rebecca Ellerton. They had five children: Constant, Ellerton, Jane, Elizabeth, Annabell and Marty. In 1703, Constant Ellerton Lake settled on the eastern shore of Maryland, and in 1709, married Eliza Willis. Their children were: Chloe, Winnifred, Constant, Eliza, Mary, Martha and Norton. Constant married Mildred E. Mont, of Annapolis. This Constant was a Major of the Maryland state troops in the Revolution. He served in Carolina with General Greene. Their children were: Mary, Ann, Hannah, Joseph and Constant. In 1756, Constant, son of the Revolutionary Major, married Anna Weir. Their children were: Constant and Joseph. This Constant settled in the Shenandoah Valley. In 1796, he moved to Penn Yan,

New York, where he married Anna Straughn. He removed to Trumbull county, Ohio, and then to Wayne county, Ohio. His children were: Joseph Straughn, Mary, Elijah W., and Constant, the father of our subject. Later he went to Wooster.

The present Constant went to school at Wooster until he was sixteen years of age. He then attended Bethany College, Virginia, for one year. From 1867 until 1872, he was a planter in Yalobusha county, Mississippi. In the year last named he returned to Wooster and was in the livery business until 1887. He spent two years in the Ontario Veterinary College in Canada and graduated there in April, 1888. In May, 1888, he located in Portsmouth, where he has since resided and has practiced the profession of a veterinary surgeon. September 12, 1871, he was married to Anna Nachtrieb, daughter of Jonas and Nancy (Punghe) Nachtrieb. He has three children. One daughter died in infancy. His son Joseph F. is a veterinary surgeon in Ironton, Ohio, and his daughter Ella, is the wife of John Bell Woods. He is a democrat in his political views, but more inclined to be independent. He lives up to the traditions of his New England ancestry and consequently is a most excellent citizen, highly esteemed for all the civic virtues.

Willard Lamb,

son of Reuben and Lavina (Chaffin) Lamb was born June 28, 1844, on the Lamb farm just below Franklin Furnace. His great-grandfather, Reuben Lamb, emigrated from Massachusetts about 1815, and settled on what has since been known as the Lamb farm. The farm is still in the possession of his descendants, one of whom is our subject. One of his sons, Willard, was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch. Reuben Lamb, Sr., died May 10, 1838, in his seventy-second year. Willard Lamb, Sr., died October 2, 1840, aged fifty. Reuben Lamb, Jr., died January 19, 1854, aged thirty-six years, ten months. Persis Lamb, the great-grandmother, died January 17, 1854, at the advanced age of eighty-six. The mother of our subject is still living at the age of eighty-one. Mr. Lamb received his education in the "Ball" school house in Green township. He enlisted August 23, 1864, as a private in Company D, 173d O. V. I., at Nashville, Tennessee, and was honorably discharged June 26, 1865. He has been a merchant for over fifteen years. He is a member of the Wheelersburg Baptist church, and has been one of its Trustees since 1896. Politically he is a republican. He was president of Green township School Board from 1899 till 1901.

June 18, 1868, he was united in marriage to Rebecca May Stumbaugh, daughter of Jacob and Lucetta (Courtright) Stumbaugh. To them have been born twelve children, only eight of whom are now living. The children are as follows: Emma May, deceased; Reuben Thomas, married Eyle V. Mooney, is now living in Bradford, Pa., and is a train dispatcher; Clara Etta, married John A. Oakes and lives on Pine Creek; Lucinda Oma, married Henry J. Barrett, who is principal of the High School at Toronto, Ohio; Hattie Marcie, is a time-keeper for Drew, Selby & Company, Portsmouth, Ohio; William Walter, is studying telegraphy at Bradford, Pa. The others are: Bessie Alice, H. Harrison, Amanda Lois, Mary Lavinia, (deceased), Persis Lena, (died in infancy) and Luther Leonard, (deceased).

Winfield Scott Lambert, son of Jeremiah and Eliza (Bandy) Lambert, was born in Greenfield township, Gallia county, Ohio, December 9, 1849. His father's maternal great-grandfather, John Harper, was born in England, in 1740, and came to America in 1770, and settled in Maryland, near Chesapeake Bay. His father's maternal grandfather, Hamilton Harper, was born in Maryland in 1777, and emigrated to Logan county, Virginia, in 1804. His father's mother Jincy (Harper) Lambert was born in Logan county, Virginia, in 1806, and came with her parents to Greenfield township, Gallia county, Ohio, in 1810.

Our subject's paternal great-grandfather, Philip Lambert, was one of the early settlers of Gallia county. His grandfather, Pearsol Lambert, was born in Wythe county, Virginia, in 1805, and came with his parents to Greenfield township, Gallia county, Ohio, about 1810.

When Mr. Lambert was six years old, his parents moved from Gallia county to Richland Furnace, Vinton county, remaining three years. They moved from there to Monroe Furnace, Jackson county, where they remained until 1872, when they moved to Madison township, Scioto county.

In 1862, he entered school at Ewington Academy at Ewington, Gallia county, Ohio, where he attended four terms, after which he attended school at the Wilkesville Academy, in Vinton county. He commenced teaching in 1872 in sub-district, No. 9, Madison township. He taught continuously during each consecutive school term until 1899. During this time he taught in Scioto, Lawrence and Jackson counties, and in Stafford and Reno Counties, Kansas, and in Dent county, Missouri. He served as assessor of Madison township in the year 1895-6. He was appointed Supervisor of Census for the Tenth Congressional District in the taking of the twelfth census in 1900. He has always been a republican and may be counted on at all times to work for the success of his party. He is a member of the United Brethren church, of South Webster, where he resides. He was united in marriage to Tenie Miles Allen, daughter of James M. and Matilda (Sargent) Allen, September 28, 1873. They have one son, James N., who has reached his majority and is a telegraph operator at Jamestown, Ohio.

John Herman Lange

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, November 17, 1866. His father was Joseph Herman Lange and his mother's maiden name was Adelheid Fisher. She was the daughter of Joseph Fisher. Both were natives of Hanover, Germany. He received his education in St. Mary's school of Portsmouth, up to the age of fourteen, when he went into the hardware business as a clerk for one year. He worked two and a half years with J. L. Hibbs & Company, and then went with John B. Rottinghaus and kept books until 1890, when he was engaged as book-keeper in the Citizen's Savings Bank and remained there until 1893. He worked for the assignees of the bank until 1894. On April 1, 1894, he became assistant postmaster of Portsmouth, under John Jones, and served as such until March 31, 1898. On April 23, 1898, he went with the Burgess Steel and Iron Works and remained with them until they sold out, August 1, 1900, and was then employed by the Crucible Steel Company until December 15, 1900, at which time he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Mingo Coal Mining Company and remained with it until in February, 1902, when it sold out. He was then elected secretary and treasurer of the Portsmouth Street Railway and Light Company, succeeding Samuel B. Timmonds, and is now holding that position.

He was married October 18, 1892, to Theresa Snyder, daughter of Joseph Snyder, and resides at 14 East Second street. He is a democrat, and a member of St. Mary's church. As a book-keeper, there are few more expert, and he is regarded as one of the best business men of Portsmouth. He is faithful to every duty and trust imposed upon him.

Captain Henry Lantz

was born February 22, 1831, in Athens county, Ohio. His father, Aaron Lantz, was a descendant of a German emigrant who came from Scotland to Athens county, Ohio, in 1790, where Aaron was born in 1793. The father of Aaron was George Lantz, one of three brothers who emigrated from Scotland. His mother, whose maiden name was Leah Claypool, was born in Greenbrier county, Va., in 1803, and was married to Aaron Lantz and settled in Jackson county in 1818. They soon after removed to Athens county, where our subject was born. Aaron Lantz died in 1842, and his widow died at McArthur, Vinton county, in 1890, at the age of eighty-seven.

Our subject continued to reside in Athens county until 1851 when he came to Bennett's mills which he undertook to operate. His father had been a maker of millstones. On December 21, 1852 he married Lovina Bennett a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Mills) Bennett. Joseph Bennett was the son of Thaddeus Bennett (see his sketch in this volume). Joseph was a soldier in the war of 1812.

After his marriage Capt. Lantz located three miles from McArthur, and engaged in milling. He was there until 1857, when he moved to McArthur. In the year 1857, he returned to Scioto county.

On April 27, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, 22nd O. V. I., at the age of thirty, for three months. He was made a Sergeant and mustered out August 19th 1861. He entered Company F, 56th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, November 21st 1861, as First Lieutenant. He was mustered out November 21st 1864, at New Orleans, on expiration of his term of service. March 14th 1865, he was appointed Captain of Company K, 194th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, for one year, and served with the Company until October 24, 1865. This Regiment was organized at Camp Chase, O., in March, 1865. It was first ordered to Charleston, W. Va., and assigned to General Egan's Division, composed of one Brigade of Eastern and one of Western troops. The surrender of Lee's army caused the Division and Brigade to be broken up, and the Regiment was ordered to Washington City, where it remained performing garrison duty until October 24, 1865, when it was mustered out. After his discharge, Captain Lantz went to McArthur, and engaged in the undertaking business. In the year 1866, he went to Bennett's Mills, Ky., and spent four years there as an undertaker and a carpenter. In 1873, he returned to Harrison Township, and has lived there for twenty-eight years last past. His business in that time has been that of an undertaker. His children are: Henry Clay, married and lives in Harrisonville; Mary Edna, wife of Alexander Shuter, who lives in Harrisonville; Benjamin Franklin, aged thirty-two, married, a merchant in Harrisonville; Thomas C., aged thirty, a teacher, living at Portsmouth. All of his children are married and have children of their own. He never was sick during his army service, and never had wounds of any consequence. Up to 1856, he was a democrat, after that he became a republican, and has remained such. He is a member of Delta Lodge, F. and A. M. at McArthur, Ohio, and an Odd Fellow.

Henry Clay Lantz

was born at Scioto, Ohio, September 10, 1863. He is the son of Henry and Lovina H. (Bennett) Lantz, (see sketch of Henry Lantz). The boyhood of our subject was passed at Scioto, except four years from 1869 to 1873, which were spent in Greenup county, Kentucky. He obtained a good education and commenced teaching in 1881. He followed the profession, with one intermission of two years, until 1900. He spent two terms at the National Normal University, at Lebanon, Ohio. He went west in the spring of 1887 and remained till the fall of 1889. For several years he was engaged in the mercantile business at Harrisonville. He was Clerk of Harrison township from 1885 to 1887 inclusive. He was Treasurer from 1896 to 1898 and School Examiner of Scioto county from 1894 to 1900 inclusive. He is a republican and very liberal in his views.

He married Emma J. Samson the adopted daughter of David and Susan Samson, of Harrisonville, February 9, 1893. Her parents were William and Martha J. (Fox) Dalton, of Pomeroy, Meigs county, Ohio. Her mother died when Emma was a little child and she was reared by Mr. and Mrs. Samson. Our subject has three children: Wenona Goldine, Gladys Sylvia, and Clay Dalton. Mr. Lantz is one of the best qualified of the teachers in the county. He was always bright and quick, ready to take up new ideas and make them his own. He is noted for his sincerity and straightforwardness. This quality in him is pronounced and has made him both enemies and friends. As a public official, he has always acted without fear or favor. He is true to his convictions and to the right as he sees it.

Thomas C. Lantz

was born near Bennett's Mills, Greenup county, Kentucky, October 8, 1871. He is the youngest son of Henry and Lovina (Bennett) Lantz. He spent all his early life in Harrisonville except the first two years which were spent in Kentucky. He attended the schools of Scioto county until 1889, when he commenced teaching which pursuit he has followed continuously since. From 1892 to 1900 he conducted a series of normal schools at Scioto. In 1901, he conducted a normal at Sciotoville. He was for six years a member of the firm of Lantz Bros., merchants, at Harrisonville. He is a republican, a Past Chancellor of Ives Lodge No 472, Knights of Pythias, a Past Captain of LoIs Camp,

No. 16, Sons of Veterans, and a member of Lucasville Lodge, No. 465, F. and A. M. He married Rosa B. McKinney, daughter of William and Rachel (Odell) McKinney, December 19, 1892. They have three children: Lowell Liston, Leroy Marcus, and Lyle Ray.

He possesses rare gifts, or endowments, of an artistic nature, being one of the best native pencil artists in the county. He is one of the most successful teachers in the schools of the county. His efficiency as a teacher is due to the untiring efforts he puts into the work; and in all other vocations in which he has been engaged, the same energetic spirit characteristic to himself, has clearly shown itself. He stands for those lofty principles which characterize every true American citizen. Mr. Lantz ranks among the best teachers in the county, judged both by his scholarship and his uniform success.

Delos Velos Larkin

was born in Galena, Delaware county, Ohio, August 20, 1826. His father Stephen Larkin was from Albany, New York, and his mother from Essex county, New Jersey. His mother's maiden name was Mary Jane Rosecrans and she was a cousin of General and Bishop Rosecrans. When a lad, his parents moved from Fairfield county, and as a youth he drove cattle to the Eastern markets. It took from twenty to sixty days to make the trip. September 18, 1850, he married Miss Sarah Margaret Johnson of Ross county and shortly after came to Scioto county and located on the McArthur farm. He returned to Ross county in 1851 and remained until 1853. He returned to Scioto county in the year last named and leased 40 acres of the New York land. Subsequently he leased 300 acres for twenty-three years.

On May 2, 1864, he enlisted as a private in Company I in the 140th regiment O. V. I. for one hundred days. He was mustered out with the Company, September 3, 1864. In 1865, he purchased the farm on which he resided until his death, January 31, 1884. He made a specialty of raising broom corn and in 1886 had 100 acres all of which he manufactured into brooms. He was at one time a Trustee of Washington township.

His children are the following: Charles, Effie, wife of John A. Williamson, Harry, Catharine, Mrs. Alice Stephenson, of Columbus and Mrs. Charles McFarland, of Los Angeles, California. They had six other children now deceased. He was a Universalist in faith. He was originally a whig and a republican but afterwards acted with the Democrat party for a few years. He was at all times a good citizen, generous and kind with all his neighbors, a believer in good fellowship, a lover of his country, and a devoted friend to all the soldiers of the Civil War.

Gordon Frank Lauman

was born in Fleming county, Kentucky, November 17, 1840. His father was George Mim Lauman, born in York, Pennsylvania, in 1805. His father was a tanner and was taken to Chillicothe, Ohio, by his father, Barnet Lauman, at the age of four years. His great-grandfather was Christopher Lauman, a soldier of the Revolution. His record will be found in the article entitled Revolutionary Soldiers.

George M. Lauman was reared at Chillicothe and learned the tanner's trade there. He followed the same trade after locating in Fleming county, Kentucky, and was there married to Anna Shanklin, a native of Kentucky. There were eight children of this marriage, three sons and five daughters, of whom our subject was the seventh. The family left Kentucky in 1845 and went to Aberdeen, Ohio, where Mr. Lauman worked at his trade. In 1846, he went to Chillicothe and remained there following his business of tanner until 1849. In that year, he located in Waverly and carried on a tannery for G. and G. L. Armstrong, and remained there until his death.

Our subject went to school for one year in Chillicothe and a short time in Waverly. In 1850, he went to work at Emmitt's Mills tending gate at $5.00 per month. Then he was a cob-picker at the Distillery for three years and in the meantime was advanced to head sheller. He was taken into Emmitt's store and worked there ten years.

He enlisted April 17, 1861, in Company G, 1st O. V. I., for three months. He was wounded June 17, 1861, at the battle of Vienna. He was standing up on a flat car, when the moving train was fired on by a masked battery. A solid shot struck his gun and completely mangled his hand. The same shot struck and tore away the clothing and accouterments on his left side and bruised his side so badly that he was unfit for further service. He was discharged at Washington, D. C., at expiration of his service.

On his return from that service, he re-entered Mr. Emmitt's employ and remained there until 1864, when he became Provost Marshal and served as such until 1865. He then went to Jasper and clerked for Peter B. Hayes until 1872. In that year he came to Portsmouth and worked in the grocery store of Thomas Brown for four months. He heard of a store at Bear Creek and purchased it and carried it on till 1900. After he located at Bear Creek, he engaged in buying and selling railroad ties and made a fortune at it. He has always been a republican and is a member of the Masons and Elks.

He was married first, October 6, 1864, to Mary Lucretia Watkins, daughter of John Watkins. She died October 22, 1892. November 28, 1895, he was married to Elizabeth Dever, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Wales Dever.

Mr. Lauman is a liberal minded, public spirited citizen. He is always ready to aid in any good cause. He always regretted he could not serve his country during the war, but his honorable wounds received at the outset, prevented. No man has a kinder regard for his comrades of the Civil war, than he.

Thomas Benton Lawson

was born May 16, 1843, in Portsmouth, Ohio, the son of Thomas Lawson and Rebecca Jane Tillow, his wife. His grandfather, William Lawson, was one of the original proprietors of Portsmouth. Thomas B. received his education in the old brick school house on Fourth street. He enlisted April 16, 1861, in Company G, 1st O. V. I., commanded by Captain George B. Bailey. He served three months and was mustered out with the company August 1, 1861. He then enlisted in October, 1861, in the 75th New York Infantry, Company A, and served two years. He re-enlisted again in Company A, 160th New York Infantry, for three years and served until the close of the war. He was in the grand review in Washington in May, 1865.

After the war he went to work as fireman on the New York Central railroad and fired a locomotive for three years. Then he came to Kentucky and fired a locomotive on the old Kentucky Central railroad running from Covington to Lexington, Kentucky. He received his promotion to engineer. One day he had a little mishap and knocked some cars off the track. The company stopped his pay and laid him off. He got angry, quit railroading and returned to Portsmouth, Ohio. He worked for T. M. Lynn as book-keeper and collector for two or three years. He also worked a year or two for Yeager and Dice, who were engaged in the livery business. In March, 1872, he went into business for himself at Middleport, Meigs county, Ohio. He went into the mercantile business in which he was very successful. He remained there in the same business for twenty-three years, or until 1892, when he returned to Portsmouth, Ohio, where he has since resided. He had always had a strong love for his native place and returned to spend the remainder of his life here.

On July 22, 1873, he was married to Miss Ada Eliza Horn. They have three children living, two sons and a daughter: Earl Benton is a shoe cutter; Ernest Charles travels for Biggs, Watts & Company, of Huntington, West Virginia, and Maude is a student in the High School. His oldest daughter Ina, died at the age of seventeen, and his youngest daughter, Frieda Marie, at the age of eleven. Mr. Lawson was a member of the council of Middleport, Ohio, for two years. He is a democrat, a member of Bigelow M. E. church, of the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Elks, Bailey Post, G. A. R. and of the Mystic Circle.

was born in 1818, in Tioga county, Pennsylvania. His father was Uriah Leete, and his mother's maiden name was Polly Ives. They lived on a farm and Horace was brought up to be a farmer. At fifteen, he went into a printing office in Wellsboro, and worked there for three years. He afterwards carried the mail from Belfont, Pennsylvania, to Olean, New York, a distance of 126 miles through the wilderness. He made one trip a week. The winters were severe and there was danger from wild animals. He was a chain carrier when the Pennsylvania railroad was surveyed through to the lakes. Their work took them through a dense wilderness, inhabited by deer, elk, bear and panthers. There was much hunting and the streams were full of fish. There were fifty engineers in the party and many were related to distinguished men. While on this business, Mr. Leete met Thaddeus Stevens, then Canal Commissioner of Pennsylvania. He clerked for a while for an uncle in Potter county, Pennsylvania. He was also editor of the first paper ever published in that county. His first vote in 1840, was for Martin Van Buren. He has always been a democrat. He was one of the auditors of Potter county, Pennsylvania, and resigned the office to come to Ohio.

In the spring of 1850, he landed at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, with a raft of lumber. He remained there until November, 1850, and came to Portsmouth. He engaged in the lumber business in Portsmouth with his brother Ralph Leete, for a partner. Their office and lumber yards were west of his present residence on Sixth street. Later his brother retired and his nephew, Horace L. Chapman, went into the business with him. The first bill of lumber he sold in Portsmouth was to James Pursell, then a dry goods merchant. In the fall of 1864, Mr. Leete quit business in Portsmouth, and went to Alleghany county, New York, where he bought a stock farm. He operated this until May 18, 1869, when he returned to Portsmouth, and re-engaged in the lumber business with Daniel McIntyre, as Leete & McIntyre. They had a lumber yard and ran a planing mill on West Fifth street. In 1870, they were burned out, but immediately rebuilt at Ninth and Washington streets. From 1870 until 1880, Carl Lehman was his partner.

In 1874, he was elected a member of the School Board for two years. In 1881, he was a candidate for Water Works Trustee, but was defeated by John I. Mercer. The vote stood: Mercer, 1,212, Leete, 996, majority, 216. In 1883, he was a candidate for Cemetery Trustee, but was again defeated. His opponent, Wilson, received 1,267 votes to 1,229, for Leete, majority, 38.

In 1858, he was married to Miss Ellen Weatherby, of Coudersport, Pennsylvania. They had four children, two of whom are living: Mrs. Mary Small, and Phelps Leete. On his eightieth birthday, he was notified that all his employees wanted to meet him, that they had decided to work no longer at their present wages. He met them and began to explain why he could not pay more, and they cut him short and presented him with a gold headed cane. Though eighty-four years of age, he works every day and still holds all the threads of his business in his own hands. He is considerate of every one's opinions and feelings. He enjoys the respect and affection of all those connected with him in business, and is highly esteemed by the general public. The article on the Leete family in the Pioneer Record, shows that he is from a long line of sturdy ancestry, of men who have been important factors in the world's work, and is a good example of the old adage that blood will tell; but Mr. Leete is essentially a modest man and never speaks of his ancestry. His enviable position in the community has been obtained by a long life of living up to correct business and social principles.

the son of Fredrick Legler, was born December, 1857, in the Eagle hotel, on Front street, and has resided on that street all his life. He was the eldest of his family. He attended St. Mary's Parish school and the public schools. He engaged in business for himself, in 1890, in conducting the Legler house, formerly managed by his father. He continued this until 1893, when he started a shoe store on Second street. After a year he sold out his business to W. A. Connolley and entered the Central Savings Bank as a bookkeeper and served as such in 1894 and 1895. In 1895, he purchased the Hotel Portsmouth and renovated it and has conducted it ever since. It accommodates one hundred guests and Mr. Legler has proven a very popular landlord. His house is as well patronized as any in the city.

He was married October 5, 1882, to Anna Maria Schwartz, of Portsmouth. He has had three sons born to him: Harry, his second son, died at the age of three years and two months, and Clifford and Ralph are still living. Mr. Legler was originally a democrat but when President McKinley ran for his second term for Governor of Ohio, he became a republican and has continued as such every since. He is a member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. He is noted for his honor and his integrity and for his excellent qualities. As a business man and good citizen, he possesses the confidence of the entire community.

was born June 27, 1832, in Baden, Germany. His father was Joseph Legler. His mother died when he was a boy. His father brought him to this country when he was only six years of age, in the year 1838, and he located in Scioto county. He had a brother James, now deceased, and a sister Mary now living near Pana, Ill. He began the hotel business in Portsmouth, in 1855, with a Mr. Wolford from Mt. Joy, the Eagle hotel on Front street, near where Fred Brodbeck now resides. In 1863, he took the White Bear, and kept it until 1866, when he purchased what is now the present Legler House. In 1867, he started a restaurant in the building and was so well patronized, that he turned it into a hotel. In 1867, he rebuilt the house at a cost of $7,000. He purchased the lots in the rear of the present Hotel Portsmouth, which fronted on Second street, and kept stables and wagon yards there for his patrons. He opened the Legler House on June 20, 1868, as a hotel, having previously conducted it as a restaurant.

On January 8, 1867, he was married to Elizabeth Eck, daughter of Adam Eck, an old citizen of Scioto county. The children of that marriage were: Charles J., Fred and Frank, both living in the city of Portsmouth; George who is a resident of Berwyn, Ill.; and William, who died at the age of three. His daughter, Clara, is the wife of Albert J. Reitz. In 1875, he was appointed a member of the City Annual Board of Equalization and re-appointed in 1876 and 1879 and was a member of that board at the time of his death. In April, 1880, he was appointed a member of the Decennial Board of Equalization and was appointed a member of the Board of Health at the same time, for a period of three years. On April 29 1880, he died in his forty-eighth year. He began with-out anything and amassed a competence for his family. He was a democrat in his political views and a member of St. Mary's church, in Portsmouth. Mr. Legler was a man of quiet and retiring disposition. He made a good impression on all who knew him. He was honest to the value of a pin and honorable in all his dealings. When he made a friend, that friend remained such. He was liked by the public generally and was very successful in his business.

William H. Leive

was born in South Webster, Ohio, March 22, 1870, in the house where his parents still live. His father and mother are Henry W. and Mary (Sudbrook) Leive. William's father came from Southern Germany to South Webster in 1856, and learned the trade of wagon-maker. He served in the Civil War in Company B, 10th O. V. I. from June 3, 1861 to June 17, 1864, and was at the siege of Chattanooga, battle of Chickamauga and other important battles in which his company was engaged. William's education was received in the South Webster schools. He taught school for two terms, but did not like it and quit to become a carpenter and funeral director. He qualified himself for the business by a course of study. He was graduated from the Portsmouth Business College in book-keeping, July 13, 1897. In politics he has been a republican and has always taken an active interest in local affairs. He held the office of Township Clerk in Bloom from September, 1896, to September, 1900. He is now Clerk of the village of South Webster, having been elected April, 1901, for a term of two years. He is a member of the Evangelical St. John's church of North America and also of South Webster Lodge No. 724, Knights of Pythias. He was married to Miss Nan Zimmerman, August 14, 1901. Mr. Leive is a promising young man, honest, industrious and upright. He enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him.

was born September 1, 1844 in Jackson county, Ohio. His father's name was Lemuel Lemon, who came to Portsmouth in 1832 from Belmont county. His mother's maiden name was Rebecca Stiffler. His grandfather's name was George Lemon. When our subject was seven years of age his parents moved to Scioto county, where his father died Jan. 14, 1900, at the age of eighty-four years, and his mother died six years prior in 1894. Our subject received a common school education. He was raised a farmer, and is a farmer still. At the age of eighteen he enlisted in Company D, 1st O. V. H. A., Sept. 8, 1862, for three years as a private. He was promoted to Corporal in April, 1864, and mustered out June 20, 1865, at Knoxville, Tenn., by order of the War Department.

He was married August 5, 1866 to Mary S. Boren, daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth Boren of Pennsylvania. They have the following children: David F., married, living in Vernon township, a farmer; Rebecca Jane, at home; Amanda married John Somers, residing in this county; Cora A., married Edwin G. Turner, residing in this county; Effie, a school teacher; Florence, at home; Louis F., John W., Ida and Amelia all at home. Mr. Lemon is a member of the Christian church at Lyra. He is a republican in his political views, and has always been such. He owns a farm at Lyra of about 400 acres, where he has resided since 1867.

Charles Leonard

was born December 12, 1839, at Alleghany City, Pennsylvania. His parents were Patrick and Laura (Crosby) Leonard. His father was a native of Scotland and his mother was a native of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania. He was the youngest of seven children. He went to school in Alleghany City until he reached the age of sixteen, when he worked in a foundry and learned casting. He was there two years and then went to learn the trade of a carpenter at which trade he worked until he was twenty-four. He enlisted in Company K, 13th Pennsylvania Infantry, three months service, at Pittsburg, Pa., April 26, 1861, and was discharged August 6, 1861, at the expiration of his term. He re-enlisted in Company I, 102d Pennsylvania Infantry, August 15, 1861, to serve three years. He was honorably discharged June 24, 1862, at Philadelphia, by reason of a gun shot in the left arm, which he received in the battle of Williamsburg. This was his first battle and the shot which struck him was a canister shot.

He then went back to Pittsburg where he remained a year and then came to Portsmouth, afterwards going to Scioto Furnace, where his sister, Mrs. George Williams, resided at that time. He has been a resident of Scioto Furnace ever since, with the exception of the two years from 1866 to 1868, when he was at Brownsport Furnace, Tennessee. He was connected with the Scioto furnace as part owner until it blew out on December 25, 1890. He has been postmaster at Scioto Furnace since 1868, and agent for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad from 1868 until January 31, 1902, when he resigned. He has always been a republican and is a Blue Lodge Mason of the Western Sun Lodge of Wheelersburg. He is a member of the G. A. R. at South Webster.

Mr. Leonard is a man highly appreciated by those intimate with him. He has a heart to take in the whole world and is charitable to a fault. And yet with these qualities, he is most modest and retiring. His qualities alone proclaim the man.

Richard Gregg Lewis

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, February 28, 1850. His father was Thomas Cotton Lewis, Jr., and his mother was Nancy Anderson (Gregg) Lewis. He was graduated from the High School in 1867 and attended the academy at South Salem, Ross county, Ohio. He also taught school in Kansas and graduated with honors from Marietta College in June, 1876, and from Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, in May, 1879. The Presbytery of Chillicothe ordained him an Evangelist in September, 1879. He was stated supply for the Hamden Junction, McArthur and Wellston Presbyterian churches in 1879 and 1880, and for Mona chapel, Ross county, Ohio, in 1883 and 1885. From 1883 to 1893, he was president of the Union Shoe Company, of Chillicothe, Ohio. From 1886 to 1891, he was proprietor and part of the time editor of the Scioto Gazette. He was for years one of the trustees of the Chillicothe Presbytery, also of Salem Academy. In 1898, he moved to Missouri and was graduated in June, 1900, as Doctor of Osteopathy from the American School of Osteopathy, at Kirksville, Missouri. At once he begun the practice of Osteopathy in Cincinnati, where he is located at this date.

Harvey Oscar Lindsey

is the eldest son of the seven children of Barton B. and Tamer Elizabeth Lindsey. Barton B. was the oldest son of William J. Lindsey, born at Blue Lick, Kentucky, in 1821. William J. was the son of John Lindsey, who emigrated from Scotland in 1810, and afterwards served in the war of 1812. He settled in Virginia and removed to Blue Lick, Kentucky, in 1824. The mother of our subject was the eldest daughter of Peter Cooley Aldred and Sarah Ann Freeman, his wife. Peter C. was the son of David Aldred, of near Manchester, Ohio, and served in the 182nd O. V. I., Company G, and afterwards was transferred to the 64th O. V. I. David was the son of Henry Aldred a soldier of the Revolution.

Sarah Ann Freeman Aldred, the grandmother of our subject, was the daughter of Tamer Freeman, of Cedar Mills, Ohio. A history of the Freeman family can be found in the Portsmouth Public Library.

Our subject was born July 4, 1878, at Manchester, Adams county, Ohio. He received a common school education from the schools of Monroe township, afterwards graduating from the West Union High School in 1896. He moved with his parents to Pond Run, this county, that year, and began teaching the following year. He followed this profession for two years, and then located in Portsmouth, and engaged as a clerk for M. Lehman & Brother for a year. From there he went to Burt, Hall & Company's, where he was salesman until May, 1901, when he entered the employ of J. Eisman & Company, in the same capacity. Later he became traveling salesman for the latter firm for southern Ohio and West Virginia, which position he now holds. He was married July 2, 1902, to Miss Florence Weghorst, daughter of Christopher Weghorst, of Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Lindsay is a young man of more than ordinary intelligence. He possesses a good amount of business ability, although yet a young man, and has a promising future before him. He is honest, upright, and energetic, and by his congenial ways has won a host of friends.

son of John Liston and Sarah Robinson his wife, was born April 2, 1821, on Brush creek, in Scioto county, Ohio. His father was a son of Perry Liston, who came from Wales to Maryland and afterwards removed to Philadelphia. Shortly afterwards he came to Scioto county, and settled on Scioto Brush Creek, near Otway, being one of the first settlers in that vicinity. At that time the country was still inhabited by Indians and some of them came to see him often. Our subject never went to school until he was eighteen; and he helped to build the first school house in which he was a pupil. It was built of logs and greased paper was used for windows.

He was married in 1850, to Nancy Thompson. She died in 1855, and he was married the second time to Eliza Jane Cox, a daughter of Jacob Cox and Cynthia (Smith) Cox, January 17, 1856. By this second marriage there were ten children, six boys and four girls. Of these five boys and two girls are living: Margaret, William Jasper, Allen T., Nancy J., William Sherman, Charles Wesley and Firman M. Margaret married William Brown. Nancy J. married John A. Davis.

Our subject enlisted in Company I, 28th O. V. I., under Captain William Hessin, and Colonel G. F. Wyles, September 27, 1864. He was attached to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Seventeenth Corps. He was with Sherman on his march to the sea. He was honorably discharged at Washington, D. C., May 30, 1865. He was a whig and afterwards a republican. He was a Methodist during a greater portion of his life, and afterwards united with the Christian Union church. It was said, he never swore an oath in his life nor took a drink of intoxicating liquor. He lived a devout christian life and gave freely to the building of churches and the support of them. He died November 7, 1898, and is buried in the family cemetery, near the old homestead, on Scioto Brush Creek.

James Little

was born in Stirling, Kilsythe, Scotland, August 26, 1838. His father's name was James Little, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Cameron. Both of his parents were natives of Scotland. Our subject came to this country alone at the age of fourteen. His parents came afterwards. He located in Cumberland, Alleghany county, Maryland, and attended school there. In 1860, he brought his parents to this country. In this vicinity he was engaged in mining coal, and at the age of twenty-two he became a boss master miner, which occupation he continued until he left in 1881. He then went to Piedmont, West Virginia, and became a mining superintendent for the Big Vein Coal Co., and remained with this company sixteen years, until 1897. He then went to Dingess, West Virginia, and operated for himself in mining coal. He left there in October, 1899, and located in Portsmouth, and is conducting a business under the firm name of Little & Wilson.

He was married April 23, 1863, to Janet Stewart, a native of Scotland. They have had five children: John Stewart; William C. was killed at the age of thirty-two in a railroad accident in July, 1901; Margaret, married Frederick Fredlocke, residing in Portsmouth; Mary, died in infancy; Mary, married H. T. Wilson, residing in Portsmouth, of the firm of Little & Wilson. Mr. Little is a republican in his political views, and has always been. He is a Blue Lodge, Knight Templar, Chapter and Council Mason. He is also an Odd Fellow.

Smith S. Littlejohn

was born at Diamond Furnace, Jackson county, Ohio, June 18, 1858, the son of James and Cynthia (Smith) Littlejohn. His father was a native of Porter township, Scioto county, Ohio, born in 1820. His mother was a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Gray Smith, born in Greenup county, Kentucky, April 22, 1824. The maternal great-grandfather of Mr. Littlejohn was Godfrey Smith, a soldier of the Revolution, who has a sketch in the article, "Revolutionary Soldiers." Our subject received a common school education and afterwards attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, for one year. When nineteen, he began to teach and followed that occupation for six years. In October, 1887, Mr. Littlejohn moved to Steece, Lawrence county, Ohio, where he now resides and has been employed by the firm of E. B. Willard & Company, at that place until the present time. He is a member of the Lawrence Lodge, F. and A. M., No. 198, Ironton Commandery, Knight Templar, No. 45, Ironton, Ohio. He is also a member of the Syrian Temple A. A. O. M. S. of Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1881, he was married to Amelia Ranshahous, a native of Portsmouth, daughter of William and Augustia (Fisher) Ranshahous. They have one daughter, Addie A.

Charles Perry Lloyd, son of Richard and Anna Canfield, his wife, was born June 10, 1840. He attended the schools of Portsmouth until fifteen years of age, and then entered the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, and was graduated in June, 1860. He read law six months with Colonel O. F. Moore, and then concluded the law did not suit him. In the spring of 1861, he went to Iowa, and was a farmer for three years. In 1864, he returned to Portsmouth, Ohio, and entered the shoe business with his father as R. Lloyd & Son. The firm was afterwards changed to Lloyd, Tracy & Company and then to R. Lloyd & Company. On February 26, 1863, he married Miss Laura Jane Bentley. They had two children: Richard Bentley, who lived to young manhood and died Jan. 18, 1889, aged twenty-five years, and Genevieve, now a young lady. In 1877, Mr. Lloyd became president and superintendent of the Scioto Fire Brick Company. He was for a long time a director of the Portsmouth National Bank. He was a Mason, a republican, and a member of the Sixth Street Methodist church. He was an excellent business man, a pleasant neighbor and devotedly attached to his home and family. He died suddenly March 27, 1893.

Margaret Lloyd

went into the millinery business in Portsmouth, Ohio, in April, 1866, and has been in it ever since. She is now located at No. 308 Chillicothe street. She is a member of the Bigelow church. As a member of the business community, she is favorably known to the public and has been very successful. No one is esteemed higher than she. Her word and obligation, in a business way, or otherwise, is better than gold, because the gold may be lost or stolen, but her promise or obligation will be met to the moment, without any question. She has demonstrated the fact that a woman can go into business and succeed, and do as well, or better than any man.

Lucien G. Locke, M. D., was born at Haverhill, Ohio, September 11, 1866, the son of Delmont and Elizabeth (Trumbo) Locke. His ancestry is directly traceable to John Locke. His boyhood and youth were spent on the farm. He attended the district school. He spent two years, 1885 and 1886, at Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio. He taught school for two years, (1890 and 1891,) and in 1892 entered the University of Michigan and took up the study of medicine. He remained there until 1896, when he was graduated. He located in Haverhill, Ohio, the same year, and has practiced there since. On June 24, 1896, he was married to Miss Ella L. Murray, at Milan, Michigan. They have one child, Cranston, a son.

As a man, Dr. Locke enjoys the respect and esteem of his neighbors and of the community at large. As a citizen, he is public-spirited and progressive, always ready to help when the public good is concerned or private charity necessary. As a professional man, he has the confidence of the entire community in which he works and he applies himself assiduously to his duties and to his own advancement in his profession.

Robert Warren Lodwick

was born September 15, 1866. He attended the Portsmouth public schools till 1881. He was compelled to leave school to earn his living. He began working for John B. Nichols as a varnisher. Afterwards he worked for the Whiteley Company, at Springfield, Ohio. He returned to Portsmouth in 1888, and became stage manager at the Opera House, and continued that occupation for ten years, when he engaged in business for himself, as city bill poster. He became a member of the Ohio State Association and the International Association of Distributors and operated one of the best plants in the state. He had been a member of Company H, 14th O. N. G., and was on duty at the miners' strike in 1894. He was a republican, a charter member of the Elks, and a member of the Portsmouth Board of Trade. He was in all respects a self-made man, and had built up a character and business for himself of which he and his friends had just cause to be proud. He was married December 2, 1892, to Mrs. Nellie Reiniger, widow of Louis Reiniger, and eldest daughter of the late Judge Martin Crain. He died December 27, 1901, of acute Bright's disease, after a two week's sickness.

Silas Oscar Losee

was born July 18, 1830, at Troy, New York. His father was Isaac Losee, a native of Scotland. His mother's maiden name was Roxana Jarray, daughter of Anthony Jarray. The family went to Detroit when Silas was five or six years of age. In 1838, they left Detroit and his father went to work as a stone mason on locks of the Ohio canal, between Potsmouth and Cleveland. He built the "elbow" lock. Mr. Jarray was also a stone-mason, and worked on locks of the Ohio canal. He died of the yellow fever in 1840, in the northern part of Ohio. Elizabeth, his widow, died in 1860, in Portsmouth, and was interred in Greenlawn. Anthony Jarray came from France prior to 1812, and went into the war of 1812.

Silas Losee came to Portsmouth in 1838. His father died in 1845, and he was reared by Moses Wilson, who taught him the brick mason's trade. He was married June 30, 1859, to Sarah E. Weatherwax, daughter of Jacob Weatherwax, and Louisa Wilson, daughter of Moses Wilson. Mr. Losee enlisted July 12, 1861, in Company A, 39th O. V. I., and was made a Sergeant. He was promoted Second Lieutenant, October 6, 1862, and First Lieutenant May 9, 1864. He was mustered out, October 28, 1864, on the expiration of the term of service. He was shot in the right foot with a minie ball July 22, 1864, before Atlanta. His children are: Jennie E., wife of Eugene Herbert Clare; Nellie I., book-keeper at the Hibbs Hardware Company; Silas O., resident of Portsmouth; and Ada B., wife of Algernon McBride. Mr. Losee made an excellent soldier and officer. He was a quiet, industrious and law-abiding citizen respected and liked by all who knew him.

George Washington Lowry

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, December 2, 1856. His parents were George and Eliza (O'Neil) Lowry. His mother came from Ross county, Ohio. His father's people came from Virginia, in 1837, and settled at Portsmouth. Our subject's father, George Lowry, married Eliza O'Neil, in 1842, and lived on Ninth street, where their son George, was born. He attended the Portsmouth schools and secured a fair education. He worked in the Maddox woolen mill from 1870 to 1875. He gardened for Mr. Ward till 1878, and then farmed until 1884. He then engaged in the grocery business and contract carpentering. He and his wife continued the grocery until 1895, and since that time he has followed carpentering. One of Mr. Lowry's paternal ancestors was in Washington's army. Mr. Lowry is a republican and has done good work for the party. He is quite a politician, but never has had any important positions. He is a member of Scioto Lodge, I. O. O. F., and also a Forester.

He married Carrie Isabel Noel, daughter of Isaac H. and Mary E. (Jones) Noel, October 29, 1879. They have six children living: Edwin Earl, Bessie May, Pearl Isaac, George W. Jr., Clifton and Erma I. The deceased are: Maude and Blanche. Mr. Lowry is an industrious, painstaking workman, of a genial, social turn, a good talker and an agreeable companion.

Shadrach Chaffin Lummis

was born at Bloom Furnace, Scioto county, Ohio, March 16, 1862. His father was John W. Lummis, born near Vineland, Cumberland county, New Jersey, September 15, 1813, and has a separate sketch in this work. His mother was Elizabeth Chaffin, daughter of Shadrack Chaffin, one of the pioneers of Scioto county, and a farmer of Vernon township. Our subject lived on his father's farm until he was nineteen years of age when he went to Iowa in 1881, to learn the grocery business with Boggs Brothers & Company at Vinton. He did not like it, it was too humdrum for him. He returned to Ohio, in the fall of 1881, and entered Oberlin School of Telegraphy March, 1882, and graduated in June, 1882. He then accepted a position with the Scioto Valley railway at Ironton, Ohio, and was there until 1888, when he resigned and took a position with the Chesapeake & Ohio, at Hawk's Nest, West Virginia, and stayed there a year. Then he took an attack of the western fever, resigned and accepted a position with the F. E. & M. V. railway in Nebraska, and was afterwards transferred to Buffalo Gap, South Dakota, where he remained until 1898. He was elected Treasurer of Custer county, South Dakota, for two years at the November election, 1898. He was re-elected in November, 1900, for two years.

He was married June 24, 1891, to Emily D. Buck, daughter of Nathan Buck, of Suffolk, Virginia. He has one son, Jacob Chauncy Lummis, born August 7, 1894. He says he has always voted the straight republican ticket, and always will. He is a member of no church, but a Protestant in his views. He is a member of Lawrence lodge and LaGrange Chapter, F. and A. M., of Ironton, Ohio, and of Deadwood Consistory. He resides at present at Custer, South Dakota. As Mr. Lummis is in no way responsible for this sketch, and will not see it until it appears in print, the editor purposes to do as he pleases with him. Physically, Mr. Lummis is one of the finest looking young men who ever grew up in Scioto county. He is a most agreeable companion, a good man, and liberal in all his views. There is no limit to his industry and perseverance. Whatever he takes up, he does with a determination to succeed. His friends in Ohio expect great things from him in the state of South Dakota, and if they do not hear from him as one of the most prominent men in the state, in the course of a few years, they will be very much disappointed. To the people of his adopted state, his friends in Scioto and Jackson counties, Ohio, will endorse him in any respect which may be hinted at. No request or demand is necessary. His friends in Ohio regret his removal to the west, as his genial presence was like sunshine and mountain air, but they have the consolation that he is doing for Custer county, South Dakota, what he would have done for his native county had he remained.

John Mearns Lynn

the oldest son of James and Margaret (Mearns) Lynn, was born near Coleraine, Londonderry county, Ireland, November 24, 1829. His parents were descendants of Scotch-Irish Covenanters, who had come into northern Ireland during the day of religious persecutions. He came to this country with his parents in 1846. Shortly after settling in America, his mother died and his father removed to Pittsburg, where he learned the molder's trade. He worked afterward in foundries at Wheeling, Louisville and Cincinnati. In the latter place, he made the acquaintance of the late John Mill and together they made the first metallic casket produced in the United States. In 1852, he came to Portsmouth and worked in the Eberhardt foundry. It was here he met Miss Alice Richardson, a native of Zanesville, Ohio, who was visiting her sister, Mrs. John Neill. She was the daughter of Jeremiah D. and Rebecca (Pritchard) Richardson. They were married at the Neill residence on Front street, May 4, 1854. Their children are as follows: Elizabeth E., now Mrs. George Padan; Rev. B. Frank, a minister in the Christian church; Mattie H., a teacher in the Public Schools; Jennie S.; James S.; Trustem M.; John R. and Edith A., now Mrs. H. O. Barklow. One daughter, Annie N., died in 1863.

In 1865, Mr. Lynn was the Democratic candidate for Wharf-master and received 497 votes to 573 for Thomas T. Yeager, republican. After several years of service in the City Council, he was elected Mayor of Portsmouth on the Democratic ticket, in 1867, receiving 737 votes to 649 votes for F. J. Griffith, republican. In 1869, he was again a candidate for Mayor on his party ticket, and was elected, receiving 800 votes to 745 for his opponent, H. T. Newton. In 1871, he was again a candidate for Mayor on the party ticket, but was defeated by John A. Turley, republican, receiving 978 votes and John M. Lynn 782 votes. In May, 1872, he was appointed a member of the City Board of Equalization. In April, 1874, when the Board of Education was first organized by wards, Mr. Lynn was elected from the First ward for two years without opposition. In 1877, he was again elected mayor of the city on the Democratic ticket. The vote stood, Lynn, 1,058, Samuel P. Nichols, 953. In 1879, he was a candidate for re-election for Mayor, but was defeated by H. A. Towne, republican who received 1,093 votes to his 1,031. In 1881, he was a candidate for Probate Judge, but was defeated by H. C. Turley, republican, who received 3,445, to his 2,359.

Mr. Lynn in his active life was prominently identified with the political life of the community. He was always an unswerving democrat. He had a generous disposition which made him numerous friends. In his political career, he was noted for his honesty, integrity and sincerity. He was strong and courageous for the right, as he saw the right. We have given the votes on the offices at the different times he was a candidate in order to show the confidence the people had in him. When he was not elected, he was usually very nearly so. He was a very good parliamentarian. Many of his political opponents were his best friends. His domestic life was commendable and he was very devoted to his family. He was brought up a Scotch Presbyterian, but in early manhood united with the Christian Baptist church and remained connected with that all his life. Mr. Lynn was always ready to aid in any charitable work and in accordance with his means, he was one of the most liberal men of the community. He was especially prominent with the Odd Fellows and in the meetings of the encampment filled positions of honor. He was one of the organizers of the Iron Molders Union of North America in the early days of its existence and maintained his membership in the local Union, serving as its President for many years. Physically he was a fine specimen of manhood. He died August 14, 1890, and was interred in Greenlawn. Mr.

James W. Newman said of him, "He was a man of sturdy character. He never abandoned a principle or betrayed a friend. He loved his home, and was proud of his children, and watched their progress with solicitous care."

John Richardson Lynn

the youngest son of the late John Mearns and Alice (Richardson) Lynn was born October 21, 1870, in Portsmouth. He graduated from the Portsmouth High School in June, 1889. On the paternal side, his ancestry is the sturdy Scotch-Irish, while on the maternal side it is a combination of Pennsylvania Dutch, Quaker, Welsh and old Virginia stock. The subject of this sketch, upon leaving school, engaged actively in the gas business, serving on the engineering staff of the Detroit (Mich.) and Memphis (Tenn.) gas companies. He has also managed gas plants in the following places: Decatur, Alabama; Penn Yan, New York; Benton Harbor and Port Huron, Michigan, and Portsmouth, Ohio. In August, 1901, Mr. Lynn became manager of the Fremont Gas, Electric Light and Power Company, of Fremont, Ohio, where he now resides. He has made a specialty of construction work and is recognized as one of the best in his line in the country. He is a member of the Western, Michigan and Ohio Gas Association, one of the directors of the former and also a director of the Portsmouth Gas Company. He was married to Anne Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of Thomas Franklin and Ruth (Williams) Lloyd, June 28, 1900, at Portsmouth, in which city Mrs. Lynn was born December 28, 1872. She was a member of the Ironton High School class of 1891, and for several years a popular teacher in the Portsmouth public schools. Mr. and Mrs. Lynn are members of the Baptist church of Clyde, Ohio, and are interested in its work.

Trustem Mearns Lynn

was born July 1, 1833, at Malatrakill, Londonderry county, Ireland. His father was James Lynn, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Mearns. The whole family emigrated from Ireland to the United States when our subject was fourteen years old. They were six weeks and two days on the ocean. They landed in New York, twelve miles from Harper's Ferry and there Mr. Lynn's mother died and was buried. After remaining here one summer, they went to Pittsburg, Pa., where they remained five or six years. There Mr. Lynn was apprenticed to the tailor's trade and worked at it about five years. At the end of that time, his brother John was located in Portsmouth, and he came to Portsmouth in 1854. The first year in Portsmouth he peddled cook-stoves, and the next year he drove a notion wagon. He opened the livery business in 1854, on what is now the vacant lot east of his present stable, and has been in the livery business in that locality ever since, a period of forty-four years.

He was married March 14, 1859 to Susan Cockerill, daughter of Jesse Cockerill. Mr. and Mrs. Lynn have never had any children born to them, but reared six. Of these, three were adopted. They reared John Shaw, Emma Shaw, living in St. Louis, Mo., and Margaret Shaw now the wife of John Jones. They adopted Susan Shaw, now Mrs. Charles Micklethwait, Una McCauley, a niece, and Roy McCauley, a nephew.

Mr. Lynn was a member of the City Council in the First ward for a period of thirteen years and a member of the School Board in the same ward for a period of fifteen years. He was a democrat until 1880, and since then he has been independent. He was reared in the Presbyterian church, and became a member of it within three years past. Between 1861 and 1887 he had the fast horse craze, and says that if he had never had it, he would have had $40,000 that he does not have now. He has handled, bought and sold, made and lost money, on many fast horses. The most notable one was "Dan Rice," which he bought in 1862 for $800, and sold him in 1866 for $16,000. After Mr. Lynn parted with him he was called "Rhode Island," and while Mr. Lynn owned him he won eleven races out of twelve. Mr. Lynn has come to the same conclusion as to fast horses that Solomon did as to things in general, that they are all vanity and vexation of spirit. Mr. Lynn is a liberal minded man, always ready to give his last dollar in any manner where he is interested, a very good talker and full of dry humor. The last two qualities he brought with him from Ireland. He is a gentleman who makes good friends, and they stand by him.

Alexander Bryson McBride

was born Jan. 22, 1845 in Butler county, Pennsylvania. His father's name was Robert Scott McBride, and his mother's name was Eliza J. Bryson. His grandfather Thomas McBride came from Scotland with his parents when he was only eight years old and on July 14, 1777, he emigrated to Pennsylvania (see sketch of Thomas McBride.) Our subject was six years old when he left Butler county, Pa., and located in Pike county, Ohio, on Yankee Hill, where he resided until he was twelve years of age, when he moved to Mt. Joy, and has lived there ever since. He was brought up a farmer. His father died when he was sixteen years old, and he managed his father's former business from that time on.

Our subject enlisted in Company A, 53rd O. V. I. October 3, 1861 for three years at the age of seventeen. He was appointed Corporal January 23, 1864. In the summer of 1862, while at Memphis, Tenn., he was detailed a color guard of the regiment and served with the colors from that time until he was wounded on June 27, 1864 at Kenesaw Mountain. He was in all the battles of the Regiment until disabled by his wound. He was unable for duty until the December following, when he joined his regiment at Rowland, North Carolina on the march from the sea to Washington. He was mustered out of service August 11, 1865, at Little Rock, Arkansas. After the war he engaged in farming at Mt. Joy. He went to Rarden in August, 1897, and was appointed postmaster and has held that office ever since. He was Justice of the Peace of Rarden township from 1891 to 1897, a period of six years. He was elected Mayor of the village of Rarden in April, 1900.

He was married December 5, 1864, to Miss Margaret Smiley, daughter of Nathaniel Smiley. They have the following children: Della May, wife of Thomas Armstrong of Delavan, Ills.; William Alton, in the mercantile business at Mt. Joy; Mertie E., wife of Clinton Armstrong, of Delavan, Ills.; Nora H., wife of William T. Hackworth, of Rarden; Niman S., residing at Delavan, Ills.; Ila, wife of John Perry, of Rarden, a clerk in Mr. Blackburn's store; Emma, aged twenty, Vernon, aged eighteen, Alcie, aged fifteen, and Clyde, aged eight years at home. Mr. McBride has always been a republican, and is a member of the Christian church.

For loyalty, patriotism and devotion to country and flag, A. B. McBride was not excelled by any man who wore the blue. He stands deservedly high in his community and for morality, character and integrity, he ranks among the most substantial citizens of the county. As a soldier, citizen and official, his life stands without blemish or reproach.

Thomas Benton McBride

was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, four miles from the town of Butler, February 20, 1849. His father was Robert Scott McBride, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth J. Bryson. His grandfather, Richard Bryson, was of Irish descent, and a native of Butler county, Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Thomas McBride, was born in Scotland, and was eight years old when he with his father's family landed in America. They proceeded immediately to Mercer county, Pennsylvania, July 1, 1774. Thomas McBride had two brothers and one sister: Charles, Walter Scott and Margaret. He married a McGill and had ten children, as follows: Archibald, William, Charles, Thomas, John, James, Robert, Samuel, Eliza Jane and Sarah Ann.

Our subject came to Yankee Hill, Pike county, Ohio, in 1850, with his parents, where they remained six years, afterwards removing to Mt. Joy. Here he attended school and worked on his father's farm until 1872, except the time spent in military service. He enlisted in Company F, 1st O. V. H. A., June 25, 1863, at the age of fourteen, and was discharged March 7, 1864. He enlisted in Company E, 179th O. V. I., August 11, 1864, and was appointed Corporal September 27, 1864, and mustered out June 17, 1865. He began teaching in Scioto county, in 1872 and continued to teach, though not continuously, for six years. A part of this time was spent in Scioto county, part in Armstrong county, Pa., and part in Mason county, Kentucky. He gave up the profession of teaching to become a store clerk and was employed for some time by W. A. McGeorge at Mt. Joy, and subsequently by J. E. Blackburn at Cedar Mills, Ohio. Since then he has been a farmer of Mt. Joy. He is a republican and a member of the Christian church. October 16, 1886, he was married to Mary J. Strickland, daughter of Jacob and Nancy (Ferran) Strickland, of Pike county.

Oliver Coughlin McCall

was born August 20, 1834, in Cincinnati, the son of Archibald McCall and Anna Coughlin, his wife, who was an only child. Her grandparents, Van Houghton and G. G. Van Blarcom, came from Holland in early days and settled in New Jersey, a direct descendant of Anneke Jans, Queen of Holland. The father of Archibald McCall came from the Highlands of Scotland.

Our subject spent his boyhood days in Cincinnati, and was educated at Herron's Seminary, one of the best schools in the city. He also attended St. Xavier school and finished his education at Wittenburg College at Springfield, Ohio. After leaving college he studied architecture with Mr. William Waller, his brother-in-law. In 1857, he became acquainted with C. A. M. Damarin, who induced him to leave the profession of architect and go into his employ. He served with the firm of C. A. M. Damarin & Co. as a book-keeper, until 1880. He was a partner until 1890 when the firm retired.

Mr. McCall was a very modest man and of retiring disposition. He served on the Portsmouth Board of Health for several years. He was also a member of the Tax Commission of the city of Portsmouth. In his political views he was always a republican. In 1859, he became a member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth, Ohio, under the ministry of Rev. E. P. Pratt. He was a deacon for a number of years, until the Second church was organized, when he connected with it. He was a teacher in the First church Sabbath school from September, 1857, until he connected with the Second church and from that time he was connected with its Sabbath school until his death. He was superintendent of the Second Presbyterian Sunday school for ten years. He was elder in the Second church from its organization until his death and was a trustee from the first until he was made executor of the J. L. Hibbs estate. He was a liberal supporter of the church and of all public measures.

On April 7, 1858, he was married to Sarah A. Merrell, of Cincinnati, Ohio. She was the second daughter of William Stanley Merrell, M. D., President of Eclectic College and one of the oldest druggists and citizens in the city of Cincinnati. Her ancestors came to the British colonies of North America prior to the French and Indian war, and participated in the war of the Revolution and the war of 1812. The mother of Mrs. McCall was Mehetabel Thurston Poor, a New England woman from Newberryport, (Byfield) Massachusetts. The revolutionary ancestors of our subject and of his wife will be found named under the title "Revolutionary Soldiers" in this work. Mr. McCall had three children born in Portsmouth, Ohio. Oliver Clifford, who died at the age of three years, Anna Merrell, wife of William S. Calder, of Connorsville, Indiana; Louis Damarin McCall, of No. 6,321 Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Calder have two children, Rachel and William Stanley.

Our subject died January 5, 1898, of hardening of the liver. Mr. McCall was a man of the very highest character, and lived every day up to the christian principles he professed. As a business man he had no superior. He was accurate in all his work and in all his dealings. He was respected and loved by all who knew him, and will long be remembered as an exponent of true manhood. He was interred in the Spring Grove cemetery, in Cincinnati.

John Jay McCall

was born March 13, 1844, in Gallia county, Ohio. His father, Hugh McCall, was a native of Adams county and his grandfather, Michael McCall, was a native of Scotland. His mother's maiden name was Margaret Bennett. She was a daughter of Gilbert Bennett. Our subject was the fourth of a family of twelve children. His father was a collier and worked at Gallia Furnace Gallia county, until John Jay was eight years of age. Then the family lived at Jef-erson Furnace for one year. When our subject was nine years of age the family moved to South Webster, where his father was employed as a miller. He attended school until he was twenty, and then engaged in store keeping at Clinton Furnace. He was there for six months and then went to Washington where he remained for six and a half years. He then went to Center Furnace, Lawrence county, and clerked for one year and a half. In 1873, he went to Oak Hill and engaged in the mercantile business. He remained there for eighteen months and then went to South Webster, where he was in the mercantile business until 1875. In that year, he commenced traveling for Eisman & Company and traveled for them nine years. In 1885, he went to South Webster and remained there until December, 1891, when he returned to Portsmouth and opened a grocery in the east end.

On January 1, 1873, he was married to Susan Cole, daughter of James M. Cole. Their children were: Harriet, Nellie, Dollie and Ada. His wife died January 5, 1884. In May, 1885, he was married to Augusta M. Griffith. Their children are: Edith, Augusta, Florence Esther and Richard Dudley. Mr. McCall is a democrat and a member of Bigelow M. E. church. He is also a member of Aurora Lodge, Masons in Portsmouth and of the Royal Arch Chapter at Jackson, Ohio. Mr. McCall is a good citizen and a valuable working member in the community. He does every duty before him and lets consequences take care of themselves.

Moses David McCall

was born in the old stone house one mile above Buena Vista, July 2, 1842. His father was David McCall, and his mother was Sarah (Silvy) McCall. His grandfather was William McCall, Sr., born in Argyle, Scotland. David settled at Rockville in Adams county in 1802 or 1803. He afterwards owned a large body of land there. He built the stone house now standing in the Loughry orchard and gave it to his brother Solomon. He built the stone house just above Buena Vista and had a boat yard there. The lumber used in building his boats was gotten out with a whip saw. He built two water mills, one on the upper stone house farm and the other on upper Twin creek on the John McKinney farm. They were operated as late as 1862. He also kept a store at the stone house and sold liquors.

He married Mary Caraway. They had eleven children, five sons and six daughters, as follows: Solomon B. who lived and died in Kansas; Henry, Justice of the Peace for so many years in Nile Township; William died a young man; John, unmarried, living at White Cloud, Brown county, Kansas; David lived and died in Scioto county; Mary married Isaac Stockham; Penina and Sarah single; Martha married Simon Nolder whose son is a blacksmith at Buena Vista; Maria married Lewis Dunn, lives in Brown county, Kansas; Mary married William Williams of Brown county Kansas. After the death of his first wife he married Mrs. Sarah Worley, widow of Jefferson Worley. By that marriage were born Moses David, our subject; Rachel, deceased; Eliza, married W. F. Kenyon, of Vanceburg, Kentucky; Emily, married John Gillett, and Penina, married John W. Givens of Salina, Kansas.

William McCall, the grandfather, and his wife are buried in the McCall graveyard. They had a large family of sons and daughters, as follows: Moses, Solomon, William, David, Duncan, John, Millie, Martha and Polly. William, Sr., had a brother Solomon who was the father of Duncan and grandfather of Enoch McCall.

Our subject attended the country schools and lived on a farm most of his life but has been conducting a store at McGaw for the last ten years. He is a republican and is a member of the McKendree Chapel Methodist church at McGaw. He had the McGaw postoffice established in 1893 and has held the office since. He is an honest, honorable man, a good neighbor, a good citizen, a good Christian. He has lived in the same neighborhood all his life. He was married January 4, 1872 to Elizabeth A. Gillett. They have four children: Arthur G. a chemist in the United States Bureau of Soils, Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C.; C. Herbert now in his last year in the Ohio Dental College at Cincinnati, Ohio; Eddie A. clerk in a wholesale grocery in Portsmouth and Otto M. also a clerk in Portsmouth.

Thomas Homer McCann, M. D., was born near Mt. Joy, Pike county, Ohio, Sept. 9, 1864. His father was Henry McCann, and his mother's maiden name was Amanda Lawwill, daughter of Johnson Lawwill. His grandfather, John McCann, was born in Scotland and emigrated to Pennsylvania. His grandmother was Mary Rose. His great-grandfather McCann came from Scotland with his father in about 1768 and settled in Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Johnson Lawwill, married Mary Collings. His great-grandfather, Stephen Lawwill, was one of the first settlers at Manchester in 1791. Robert F. Rose, the father of Mary Rose his grandmother, was a surgeon in the Revolutionary war from Virginia. The parents of our subject had seven children, six sons and one daughter. He was the fifth child.

He was educated in the common schools and attended the North Liberty Academy, in 1882 and 1883. He attended a Normal school in Piketon in 1884. He taught public schools from 1882 to 1890. He began the study of medicine in 1890, with Doctors Berry and Wittenmyer of Peebles O. He attended medical lectures at Louisville Ky., in the School of Medicine there for one year. He graduated from the Louisville Medical School June 21, 1894. He first located in Loudon, Adams county, in March, 1895. He was married June 5, 1895, to Hattie Coriell, daughter of Wm. B. Coriell, of Harrison township. They have one child Ida May. His wife died April 27, 1896. He was married a second time on November 27, 1901 to Lida B. Coriell, another daughter of Wm. B. Coriell. Dr. McCann was a democrat in his political views until 1896, and after that became a republican and has remained such. He is a member of the Christian church at Mt. Joy, of the Masonic Lodge at Lucasville and the Knights of Pythias at Harrisonville.

Frank C. McCole

was born August 8, 1863, at Muscatine, Iowa. His father was John D. McCole and his mother, Lida Edgington, both of Adams county. His grandfather was James McCole at one time Probate Judge of Adams county. His grandfather, on his mother's side was Oliver Edgington who resided near Manchester. His mother died when he was but eleven months old. He was taken by his grandfather, Oliver Edgington, and reared in Adams county. He went to school at Manchester. He engaged in the marble business at Manchester when he was but seventeen years of age, and has been there in the same business ever since. He has $10,000 invested in it and employs sixty-five men. He has the largest establishment of the kind between Cincinnati and Pittsburg, and, in his business, he has the latest tools and the most modern and very latest inventions. He sells monuments all over the United States. He also maintains a branch sale-office and marble yard in Portsmouth, Ohio, conducted by W. A. Plummer and is as well known in Portsmouth as in Manchester.

In 1887, he was married to Ida Varner, of Mason county, Kentucky, and they have three children, two boys and a girl. In politics, he is a republican. He deserves a great deal of credit for having built up the wonderful business he has, and it is demonstrated that he is one of the best business men who ever resided in Adams county. Mr. McCole has the confidence of all his neighbors and acquaintances.

Charles Albert McCormick

was born September, 1850, in Rome, Adams county, Ohio. His father was George S. McCormick, a well known merchant of Scioto county, and his mother was Nancy Fleak. He was one of seven children, of whom only two are now living. He spent his boyhood in Rome until he was nine years of age. His father then removed to a farm still owned in the family, where he remained until he was twenty years of age. His father then removed to Portsmouth and engaged in the grocery business, where our subject remained as an assistant for two years. At the age of twenty-two, he returned to his father's farm and lived the life of a farmer for about four years. At the age of twenty-six, he removed to Buena Vista and went into business with his father. The latter died in 1889, and in the fall of that year, he went into business for himself, in conducting a general store in Buena Vista, and has been engaged in that ever since.

He was married first on September 25, 1872 to Rosa Hamilton, daughter of James Hamilton, of Walker's Landing. There were two children of this marriage, both daughters, Maud and Genevieve, now at home with their father. His wife died on May 17, 1890. He was married the second time in May, 1891, to Anna Eakins, daughter of Isaac Eakins, deceased. Their marriage occurred at Captain Kirker's, in Pomeroy, at Lincoln Hall. From his majority until 1896, Mr. McCormick was a democrat in his political views. In that year, he changed his political affiliations and became a republican. His first vote was for Horace Greely in 1872. Mr. McCormick is esteemed as a good citizen.

Edward Oscar McCowen

was born in Bloom township, Scioto county, Ohio, June 29, 1877. His father William H. McCowen enlisted in Company E, 117th O. V. I. August 9, 1862, was transferred to Company F, October 18, 1862 and was mustered out June 20, 1865 at Knoxville, Tennessee. This regiment was changed in May, 1863, into the First Ohio Heavy Artillery. His paternal grandfather, Nathan McCowen served in the 56th Ohio from November 16, 1861 to January 20, 1864, when his term expired and he re-enlisted and became a member of Company A, 56th Battalion and was finally discharged November 15, 1865 at New Orleans, Louisiana, on surgeon's certificate of disability. His great-grandfather, David McCowen, built the first flour mill on the Little Scioto river, but it had been built only a short time when a flood carried it away. The remains of the old mill dam may yet be seen from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad bridge across the Little Scioto. His mother is Frances (McCammon) McCowen.

Edward attended the village schools of South Webster until he was seventeen years of age and was a newsboy continuously from 1887 to 1892. He secured a teacher's certificate when he was seventeen and began teaching. His first school was taught in sub-district No. 6, Harrison township, where he taught two years. The patrons desired his services again, but the Board of Education of his home town, South Webster, employed him. He is now principal of the South Webster schools and has been in charge of them for five years. He has attended the Ohio Normal University at Ada, Ohio and expects to graduate there soon. What education he has, has been obtained through his own efforts. He is a republican and takes an active part in politics. He is a member of the Western Sun Lodge, No. 91, F. and A. M. and has held important offices therein. He is also a member of South Webster Lodge, Knights of Pythias, No. 724. He had the honor of being elected first Chancellor Commander of this Lodge, and held the office two terms. Mr. McCowen is a young man universally respected by those who know him. He is especially characterized by truthfulness, honesty and uprightness of character. As a teacher he ranks among the best in the county and performs his duties with a consciousness of the responsibility of his position. He was married August 19, 1902 to Miss Clara Edith Smith of Russell, Kentucky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Smith.

was born at Hanging Rock, Lawrence county, Ohio, September 10, 1847. His father, John McElhaney, was a native of Ireland, and his mother, Sarah Ann (Ketchum) McElhaney was a native of Scioto county. He was the eldest of two children. He was reared in Portsmouth, Ohio, being but three years of age when his parents came to Portsmouth. His father was a molder. He attended the public schools of Portsmouth until 1860. In that year, he became a cook on a steamboat on the Ohio river. He followed that occupation and worked in the Gaylord mill until the war broke out.

He enlisted in Company I, 56th O. V. I. as a drummer and stayed with the regiment until they were ready to leave, when his father took him out on account of his age. He was not quite fourteen years of age. In July, 1862, he enlisted in Company D, 117th O. V. I. for three years. In May, 1863, orders were issued changing the organization into the First Regiment Heavy Artillery, Ohio Volunteers. He served as a drummer and as a private until June 20, 1865, when he was mustered out with the rest of the regiment. After his return from the army, he went into his father's foundry at Jackson, Ohio, and learned the iron molder's trade. He remained there for two years and then came to Portsmouth and finished his trade with Murray and Moore. He was with them for two years and then went to Zaleski, Ohio, and worked there two years for the old Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad Company. He then came back to Portsmouth and remained two years and then went to Huntington, West Virginia, and remained there two years working for the Ensign Manufacturing Company. He again returned to Portsmouth, where he has resided ever since. He was a molder until 1891, when he became a letter carrier.

October 24, 1867, he was married to Miss Kate L. Keough, daughter of Thomas and Mary Keough. They have four children: Georgiana, the wife of Leonard Zell Neff of Portsmouth; Kate May, the wife of James L. Dinsmore, of Portsmouth; Mary Estelle, wife of Charles Scott of Portsmouth; Emma Maude, wife of W. R. Price of Covington, Kentucky.

He is a member of Bigelow M. E. church. He has been a member of Scioto Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Portsmouth, since 1869. He is a member of Bailey Post, G. A. R. and was a charter member of the Iron Moulders Union, No. 147, of Portsmouth, Ohio. He represented the Iron Moulder's Union of North America in convention at Buffalo, New York, in 1882. He represented the same organization in London, Canada, in 1886, and in the Trade and Labor Assembly at Columbus, Ohio, in 1886. He is a republican. He was a member of the School Board from the Fourth ward in 1889 and 1890. He was chairman of the Relief Committee in the G. A. R. for four years. He was a delegate from Bailey Post to the encampment at Toledo and is its Commander at present. He has been drum major of the post almost every time since it has been organized. He was alternate delegate to the National encampment of the G. A. R. at Washington, D. C. October, 1902.

Albert McFarland, Senior, was born at York, Pennsylvania, August 1, 1823, a son of Daniel and Rachel (Owen) McFarland. The father of our subject entered the privateer service on the opening of the war of 1812, and was captured by the British. He escaped from his captors and enlisted in the military service of the United States, and was one of the defenders of Baltimore. Our subject's parents were married at York, Pennsylvania, August 9, 1819. His father died at Portsmouth, Ohio, May 14, 1863, aged seventy-five years, and his mother died at Columbus, Ohio, October 21, 1865 aged about seventy.

Our subject remembers seeing the celebration of the commencement of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Baltimore in July, 1828, in which Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, participated. Soon after this event, his parents emigrated to the "far west" in a one-horse wagon through the wilderness and over the Alleghany mountains to Columbus, Ohio. It was a long and novel journey and as taverns were few and far between they generally camped out at night most of the time. The only company they had was the teamsters with their big wagons and horses rigged out with bells, transporting merchandise, hardware and glass to the western towns. Ohio was then a vast forest. Mr. McFarland attended the common schools at intervals until he was twelve years of age, and worked as printer's devil "between times" for $2 per week. His father was an expert maker of womens' fine shoes but could obtain no work at that trade among the pioneers. Spermin oil or whale oil, lard oil and home made candles afforded the only means of illumination. This suggested to Mr. McFarland's father the manufacture of candles on a large scale, and such an enterprise was organized by him. A contract was secured for furnishing the Asylum for the deaf and dumb and the subject of this sketch delivered the goods from time to time on a wheelbarrow.

But when hope seemed the brightest the family were suddenly overwhelmed with sorrow. The father was attacked by cancer or blood poisoning in the right arm and suffered for long, weary months. The business was crippled and every available dollar spent on doctors until they all gave up the case but one, who said amputation of the right arm was the last resort. His associates said the patient would die under the operation, and the sufferer was of the same opinion. But the mother never despaired, and by brave example and earnest entreaty induced her husband to consent to the operation, which proved to be successful and he recovered within a month and lived thirty years afterward. Soon after the father's recovery, he was appointed collector of tolls on the National road, and the family removed to the government building, three miles west of Columbus, where the parents resided happily for many years. The children in the meantime, had grown up and were self-supporting. The father was a man of noble character and died a Christian. The mother of the subject of this sketch was a woman of deep religious convictions and a faithful member of the Methodist church, enjoying the confidence of the leading ministers to such an extent that they would call upon her on public occasions in large assemblies, to give testimony of her faith.

In our subject's boyhood, there were no "lucifer matches." Fire was started by sparks struck from a flint and steel over a "tinder" box containing burnt linen. In handling candles the necessity for more convenient lighting was suggested, and a "factory" was installed by preparing bunches of small pine slivers and dipping one end in melted brimstone. These our subject peddled from house to house, and pocketed many a good six-pence. He undoubtedly started the first "match factory" west of the Alleghany Mountains. He does not remember going to school at any one time longer than three months, and the last term he walked six miles per day to drink at the fountain of knowledge. At the age of seventeen he entered the Ohio State Journal office, as an apprentice, to learn the printing business. He worked ten hours per day for four years for four dollars per month and "found." For two years after becoming twenty-one, he remained in the Journal office as type setter at $10.00 per week; and in October 1846, he purchased a half interest in the Circleville Ohio Herald, an old and well established Whig Journal, and started in business for himself.

October 20, 1847, he was married to Miss Eliza Jane Doddridge, daughter of Joseph Doddridge, a prominent merchant of Circleville, Ohio. The daughter was a graduate of the Granville, Ohio, Female Seminary, and a granddaughter of Rev. Joseph Doddridge of Wellsburg, Virginia, a faithful minister of the Episcopal church and a physician as well. He is well known as a historian of pioneer times, and the author of "Doddridge's Notes on the Settlement and Indian Wars of Western Virginia and Pennsylvania, from 1763 to 1783 inclusive."

In July, 1848, he became sole proprietor of the Circleville Herald which he successfully edited and published until the spring of 1853, when he sold out and retired to a farm on the National Road, seven miles west of Columbus, where he remained until October of that year, when he purchased the Daily and Weekly Tribune of Portsmouth, Ohio. The paper was originally Whig but when that party collapsed it followed the American party and in 1856 supported Fillmore for the Presidency, a great mistake. In 1860 it supported the Republican party. In the fall of 1861, Mr. McFarland received an appointment under Colonel John W. Forney, Secretary of the Senate. He sold the Tribune to his brother Daniel and went to Washington. In January, 1864, Mr. McFarland was appointed by Chase, Secretary of the Treasury, to a position in the Treasury Department as Assistant Special Agent. He resigned this clerkship in the Senate and accepted the other office. His duties required him to spend his time in the southern states, in leasing deserted plantations and securing abandoned cotton and other property. In the discharge of his duties he saved the government many thousands of dollars and secured the poor freedmen large sums of money, realized from sales of cotton they had raised after their masters had abandoned their plantations and joined the Confederate army.

In November, 1865, Mr. McFarland adjusted his accounts with the government and resigned his Treasury position and returned home. In 1868, he purchased a half interest of the Tribune from H. R. W. Smith, and re-entered newspaper work. The paper was then published at No. 112 West Second street, over the Adams Express office. In the summer of 1870, Mr. McFarland erected the Tribune Building on the Northeast corner of Second and Court streets and the office of the paper was removed there. Mr. McFarland and David Elick continued to publish the Tribune until August 9, 1876, when the "Republican" was consolidated with it, and the paper called the "Tribune Republican." From October 1, 1877 until January 1, 1881, W. H. Bonsall conducted the paper. At that date Mr. McFarland purchased David Elick's interest and was editor and publisher alone until January 1, 1883, when he became the manager of the "Tribune Publishing Company." In July, 1885, he sold out to the "Blade Printing Company."

Mr. McFarland through the columns of the Tribune while he was editor, contributed more to the material in his columns than any other editor who ever presided over a newspaper in Scioto county. His facts could always be relied on, and he was as truthful as any successful editor could be. Mr. McFarland was always a gentleman and conducted his paper with a high tone. It was uniformly readable, always interesting and fit to be in the best household in the land.

Mr. McFarland was a good business man, and he kept the credit of his paper gilt edged all the time he was connected with it. He was a communicant of the All Saints Episcopal church while a resident of Portsmouth, Ohio, and maintained a high character. While in his seventy-ninth year, he has excellent health and is able to attend to all of his business. He enjoys the confidence and respect of a large circle of friends both in this city and the city of Los Angeles. He is a good example of remaining in the harness, active as a young man when in sight of his seventy-ninth milestone. In September, 1885, Mr. McFarland took his Lares and Penates and set them up in Los Angeles, California. Most of the colony there from Portsmouth have eaten of the seductive lotus and forgotten their old home and friends in Portsmouth, but Mr. McFarland has never partaken of that memory obliterating fruit and cherishes fondly the memory of his good friends and his happy hours in Portsmouth. He keeps in touch with the survivors of his times in Portsmouth and the memory of his departed friends is his most sacred treasure.

In April, 1886, Mr. McFarland purchased a large interest in the Times Mirror Company, publishing an independent Republican daily and weekly at Los Angeles. He was elected Vice President and Treasurer of the Corporation, and in addition discharged the duties of assistant business manager until April, 1888, when he retired from business until November, 1889, at which time at the solicitation of Colonel Harrison Gray Otis, (his old partner and President of the Corporation) he again became a member of the company, and resumed the duties of treasurer, which position he is filling at the date of this article.

During his connection with the Times it has grown from a small affair of forty shares of par value of $1,000 each to a corporation of nine hundred and sixty shares, par value of $1,000, or $960,000.

Mr. and Mrs. McFarland have had the following children: Ellen Doddridge, born at Circleville, Ohio, February 16, 1849, married to William Harts-horn Bonsall at Portsmouth, Ohio, October 2, 1871. They have three daughters and two sons: Jennie J., Bessie, Mary Elisa, Samuel Newbold and Albert McFarland. All reside in Los Angeles.

Albert Owen, their second child, was born at Circleville, Ohio, November 30, 1851, married at Portsmouth, Ohio, to Martha Densmore, 1875. They have two daughters and one son: Ella, Jennie and Donald.

Their daughter Jennie, born March 30, 1854, married Charles C. Damarin at Portsmouth, Ohio, February 2, 1876. She died at Los Angeles, California, December 14, 1890. Mr. Damarin died in December, 1888.

Their son Dan, born at Portsmouth, Ohio, June 25, 1856, married Louisa Towell, at Portsmouth, Ohio, February 8, 1877. They have the following children: Katherine, who died at the age of sixteen, Louise and Sallie Plater. All reside at Los Angeles.

William Anderson McGeorge

was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, January 8, 1852. His father was William McGeorge, and his mother was Eliza Anderson. They came to Scioto county in 1864, and brought our subject with them. His father was born in 1819 and died in 1888. His father located at Mt. Joy and the family have resided in that vicinity ever since. Mr. McGeorge learned the carpenter trade. He taught school in the winters from 1872 to 1888, and worked at the carpenter trade in the summers. In 1879, he moved to what is known as the "English farm" which he purchased and has resided there ever since. He was married September 13, 1877 to Harriet Davis, daughter of John Davis. They have four children: Frank, John Davis, James and Mary Florence.

Mr. McGeorge conducted a general mercantile business from 1889 to 1897. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church. He was elected commissioner of Scioto county in 1897, and re-elected in 1900. From 1894 to 1895, he was secretary of the Fair Association at Mt. Joy. Since 1895, he has been president of the Scioto County Fair Association.

James Madison McGillivray

was born January 21, 1846, in Carroll county, Ohio. His father was James McGillivray, who was born in Scotland in 1815, and came to the United States when he was sixteen years of age. His mother was Nancy Bartholomew. Her family came to the United States in 1867, and landed in Massachusetts. His father and mother had eight children, of whom our subject was the eldest. His father was a saddle and harness maker. When he was three years old, his father moved to Vinton county. J. M. attended the common schools in Vinton county for six or seven months in each year from the age of six until he was thirteen. At the age of eighteen, he became a school teacher, and taught for six consecutive winters. He began to study law January 1, 1867, and was admitted to the bar September 15, 1868, at McArthur, Ohio, but did not begin practicing there until 1869.

In the fall of 1869, he was elected prosecuting attorney in Vinton county and served one term. He has always been a strong democrat in his political views. He was a candidate for his party for Common Pleas Judge in his subdivision, in 1878. The district was 1,500 republican. James Tripp, senior, was his opponent, and his majority in the five counties was only 293. Mr. McGillivray was nominated by his party for Common Pleas Judge again in 1886, against Noah J. Dever, but was defeated. In 1878 and 1879 he was in partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Pugh, and afterwards with Henry W. Coultrap, from December, 1884 to January 1, 1890.

From December, 1884, until April, 1888, he was a resident of the city of Portsmouth, and while there he practiced law with A. C. Thompson and A. T. Holcomb, under the firm name of Thompson, McGillivray and Holcomb. In 1892, he was nominated for Circuit Judge, but was defeated by Thomas Cherrington. Mr. McGillivray has practiced law in Jackson, Hocking and Athens counties for the last twenty years.

He was married November 2, 1869, to Miss Ada M. Pugh, of McArthur, Ohio, daughter of Ellis B. Pugh. They have four children: Flora, wife of Albert L. Ullom, resides at McArthur; Ellis, Elizabeth and Donald at home.

He is one of the ablest lawyers in southern Ohio. He never misses a point when he goes into a case, and makes it a rule to know all of his own side and all of his opponents. He is one of the most rapid and brilliant cross-examiners in the state, and a very able advocate. Any lawyer who is opposed to him in a case may expect to meet any arguments which could properly be brought up. He enjoys the confidence of the business public in the county of his residence and the adjoining counties. Mr. McGillivray is a man of easy manners, generous and frank in his intercourse with his fellowmen and possessed of an unusual amount of good common sense. As a lawyer, he is an untiring worker with great natural ability for the practice. His clearness of conception enables him at once to grasp the strong points of a case and to distinguish all the shades of difference between cases that bear a strong resemblance and to determine what the law is from what the other fellow may think it is. His style as a speaker, is terse and perspicuous. He goes right to the controlling and decisive points without any preliminaries, and often by a single blow wins his case. He enjoys a large and lucrative practice and is regarded as one of the strongest lawyers of his district.

David McJunkin

son of David W. McJunkin and Elizabeth Double, his wife, was born Feb. 23, 1836, on the waters of Muddy creek, near Butler, in Butler county, Pa. His father was of Scotch descent and was a native of Butler county, Pa. His mother was a daughter of John Double, an emigrant from Germany to Pennsylvania. He had four brothers and five sisters. He landed at Portsmouth, Ohio, May 2, 1844, with his parents and on the next day they went to Mt. Joy and settled there for a short time, afterwards moving to Sedan, where our subject was reared and educated. His father died in July, 1854, and is buried in the cemetery at Mt. Joy.

Our subject was married on the 8th of November, 1860, to Mary Minich a native of Germany, who was brought to Pike county, Ohio, by her parents when only a child. Her father was Leonard Minich. To them were born nine children, four girls and five boys. Only five of them are living: Altie E., wife of E. L. Mechlin, at Camp, Pike county, Ohio, James M., William E., Elmer C. and Frank A.

Mr. McJunkin cast his first vote for Taylor. Later he became a republican, and was elected twice as trustee of Camp Creek township, in Pike county. Though a resident of Scioto county he votes in Pike county. He formerly resided in Pike county and owns a farm there. He became a member of the 8th Independent Company, Volunteer Sharp Shooters on the 19th of July, 1863, at the age of 27, served in the department of the Cumberland, took part in the battles of Mission Ridge, Chickamauga, Nashville and Franklin and was mustered out July 19, 1865. Mr. McJunkin is a man of excellent character, a careful, conservative and law-abiding citizen and punctual in the fulfillment of his business obligations.

Isaac Milton McJunkin

was born in Morgan township, Scioto county, Ohio, December 16, 1845. His father's name was David McJunkin and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Double. His father and mother were both natives of Butler county, Pennsylvania. Our subject had four brothers and five sisters. He had a common school education and was brought up a farmer. On August 21, 1862, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in Company C, of the Ninety-First O. V. I., and served until June 24, 1865, when he was mustered out with his company. He did not miss a single battle the regiment was in. He was only in the hospital for ten days and that was on account of the mumps. After the war was over he went to his former home and has lived in the same neighborhood, carrying on the business of farming, ever since.

He was married in May, 1887, to Lavinia Hopper, daughter of George Hopper, of Sun Fish, Pike county, Ohio. He has had seven children, three of whom are living: Dora, wife of Newton Bare, Nettie and Jennie, unmarried. He lost a son, Isaac Merton, at the age of eighteen, in 1893. He lost one son and one daughter in infancy; Anolia at the age of five, and David at the age of five years; also a son George at the age of thirteen. He is a republican in his political views. He is a member of the Baptist church at Sedan, and has been for twenty-two years. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. McJunkin is a man of sterling character and an agreeable and good neighbor. He has always been a careful, conservative, and law-abiding citizen. He is in for anything that will advance the condition of his community. In business, he is punctual in fulfilling all his obligations.

Emmett K. McKeown, son of John H. and Pauline (Ashton) McKeown, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, April 17, 1879. His education was received principally in the schools of this city. After taking a course in book-keeping and stenography in the Portsmouth Business College, he took a position as assistant in the office of the Portsmouth Veneer Works. He had been there but a short time, when war was declared with Spain and Company H, of which he was a member, was ordered to report at Columbus, Ohio. He entered the army ambitious to excel as a soldier. Soon after reaching Chickamauga, he received an appointment as orderly on General Haines' staff. He served in the same position under General Fred Grant. He was detailed by Adj. Gen. Fenton and carried the news of peace from General Brooke to General Haines at Guayama and thus prevented what might have proved a very disastrous battle. On his return from Porto Rico he re-entered the office of the Portsmouth Veneer Works as book-keeper and stenographer, which position he still holds.

On December 27, 1899, he was married to Miss Estelle Smith, a most beautiful and accomplished woman; but their happiness was short lived, his wife dying suddenly July 15, 1900. Mr. McKeown is active in politics and has a promising future in store as a business man.

John H. McKeown

was born in Franklin county, Indiana, April 11, 1849. His father was Frances T. McKeown, of county Tyrone, Ireland, and his mother was Catherine Hardin, of Cedar Grove, Indiana. Shortly after his birth, his father bought a large farm seven miles east of Brookville, Indiana. As John was the second of a family of eight children, he was obliged to quit school early to assist on the farm. He remained at home and managed the farm until 1873. About that time he met Miss Pauline Ashton, whom he afterwards married. He then removed to Portsmouth and for a short time was engaged in teaming. After the election of his father-in-law to the office of Justice of the Peace, he was prevailed upon to run for Constable. He was elected and re-elected for several terms, having shown special qualification as a detective. In this respect he became very well known throughout southern Ohio. He was serving as Deputy United States Marshal at the time of his death. He was a republican, and served his friends and party well. He was true and loyal in his friendships, both political and social. In the spring of 1891, he was a prominent candidate for the position of City Marshal. Exposure during this campaign aggravated an attack of gripe that ended in pneumonia. He died in the prime of manhood, April 2, 1891.

John Calvin McNelly

was born in Scioto county, May 2, 1836. His father was William McNelly, a native of Kentucky, and his mother's maiden name was Hannah Deaver, a daughter of William Deaver, a Revolutionary soldier from Virginia. His mother died October 30, 1883 in her 91st year. His father and mother had eight children, of whom our subject was the youngest. The following is the list: James married Martha Monroe; Catherine married James Monroe; Margaret married Richard Walden, a soldier in the Mexican war; William married Mary Monroe; Elizabeth married Wesley Boyer; Mary married Henry Colegrove, who was in Company A, 39th O. V. I.; Eliza married Stephen Crabtree; John Calvin, our subject.

Our subject had a common school education. He learned to be a farmer, but has worked at all occupations where he could find anything to do. He enlisted in Company C, 91st O. V. I., August 1, 1862 for three years. He was discharged January 4, 1863 for physical disabilities. He was drafted May, 16, 1864 and was assigned to Company F, 126th O. V. I. and was discharged September 8, 1864, when the government discovered that it had made a mistake in taking him in the service a second time. He received a pension on account of the disabilities received in the 91st O. V. I. He had two brothers in the service, James M. in Company H, 1st Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and William in the 100 days service, 140th O. V. I.

He was married October 1, 1863 to Phebe Ann Miller, daughter of Samuel Miller. They had six children: Henry Calvin, born in January, 1865, and died July 13, 1893, leaving a widow, whose maiden name was Anna Foster; Hannah Belle, m. N. Riley Burton of Bloom township; Eliza E., m. Henry Prior, of Portsmouth, Ohio; William S., resides at Columbus, Ohio; John Davis Wesley resides in Bloom township, m. Ettie Ward; and Joseph L., resides at home.

Mr. McNelly was formerly a republican, but is now a prohibitionist. He, his wife, and five children are all members of the United Brethren church at Pinkerman. Mr. McNelly is noted for his earnestness in anything he undertakes. He is a believer in progress and improvement in all things, in farming and arboriculture, in politics and religion. He believes in doing all the good he can, in view of his opportunities and lives up to his belief. He is highly esteemed by all who know him.

James H. McWilliams,

the son of James M. McWilliams and Margaret Linn, his wife, was born in Sewickley, a town twelve miles below Pittsburg on the Ohio river, in the year 1838. His father was of Irish birth and was born in 1810. He came to the United States when a boy only ten years old with his parents, and afterwards learned the carpenter's trade and became a carpenter. The mother of our subject was born in Scioto county of Scotch and Irish parents. Mr. McWilliams was educated in the country schools and took up the trade of his father. He made a special study of stair building and contracted for a number of years, working a great deal in Pittsburg.

In 1859, he went to Rochester, Beaver county, Pennsylvania and in June 21, 1861, he enlisted in the first company that was raised, for three months, but the quota was full. He enlisted in Company F. Pennsylvania Volunteer Reserve Corps, June 21, 1861 for three years. He was hurt at Bell's Landing, Virginia, while loading Quartermaster's stores and was transferred to the Sixth Veteran Reserve Corps at Washington, D. C., until his term of service had expired. He re-enlisted in the 16th Veteran Reserve Corps and during the time of service, on account of the injuries received in his former service, he was employed to hunt deserters and to take prisoners north to New York and Fort Mifflin. His last term of service was for one year. During his service he was in the following battles: Seven Days' battle in front of Richmond, Virginia; Fredericksburg, South Mountain, Antietam and Gettysburg, and received three flesh wounds, one on the head, one in the calf of left leg and a buckshot in left breast.

After the war, he returned to his home in Rochester, Pennsylvania and resumed his trade, but found that his injury received at Bell Plain Landing had disqualified him for hard work at his trade. In 1873, he came to Scioto county, Ohio. The last work he did at his trade was as foreman under Jacob Dewey, who built the Scioto county Infirmary. He now lives on a small farm at Diffen Postoffice, Ohio. He was appointed Postmaster at that place in 1890 and still holds it. He was elected Justice of the Peace of Jefferson township in 1888 and has held the office by successive re-elections to the present time. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln and has always been a republican. He is a member of the Christian church at Fallen Timber.

On May 5, 1880 he was united in marriage to Harriet E. Dever, by whom he has three sons and one daughter: Hugh Edward, working in the Excelsior shoe factory, Charles Arthur, Jesse Pearl and Margaret Ann at home.

John Boughton Maddock

was born July 18, 1834. He was the son of William Maddock and was with his father in the woolen mill for several years. May 12, 1864, his wife, Ella H. died at the age of 25 years and 9 months. He was married again on May 16, 1865 to Marie Raynor, daughter of William Raynor. In 1879, he was appointed a member of the Board of Health and served three years. June 16, 1897, he was made Infirmary Director. He served for five years in the City Council. He was a democrat in his political views. He died June 3, 1898. He was a man of the most positive views, and never hesitated to express them. When a subject was presented to him, he considered it carefully and when he had investigated it fully, made up his mind. When once his mind was made up, it was not subject to change, except on new evidence. He had mastered all the details of his own business that of manufacturing woolen goods, and was an authority on that subject. Had he cared to have used his knowledge of that business in certain directions, he could have amassed a great fortune, but he had no ambition in that direction. To live comfortably and keep on honorable terms with the world, was satisfactory to him. He was a good neighbor and a good citizen.

August Maier

was born May 5, 1849, in Rietheim, Engen, Baden, Germany. His father, Vitus Maier was a farmer. His mother's maiden name was Theresa Houk, the daughter of Doctor Houk. They had eight children, five daughters and three sons. Our subject was the fifth child. He attended school in Gemany until he was fourteen years of age, then his father apprenticed him to the brewer's trade, to his oldest brother, Carl Maier. He served an apprenticeship of three years and then travelled as most of the apprentices did in Germany. He worked one year at Basel, Switzerland, and one year at Hessen. He came to Philadelphia, November 18, 1868, and worked there two years. In 1870, he went to Cincinnati and worked there until 1878. In that year he came to Portsmouth and started a brewery under the title of Kleffner & Maier, which continued until 1881 when the firm became Kleffner, Maier & Gerlach for one year, then Maier & Rogers. He then went into the liquor business until 1888, when he became agent for the Lion Brewery of Cincinnati and has been in that business ever since.

On November 26, 1872, he was married to Rose Smithline. He has five children: William in Portsmouth; Thresa at home; Albert, a brewer; Mary, the wife of George Lehman, a druggist of Chillicothe; Bertha, the wife of William Payne of this city. He is a republican and a communicant of St. Mary's church. A neighbor who has had business transactions with him for twenty-two years says, that he is honorable in all his dealings, a first class citizen, and in favor of progress and public improvements. He always sustains his part well in the drama of life and obtains as much pleasure as he can as he goes along. He also wants his neighbors to have as much enjoyment of the good things of this world as himself.

John Riegel Markel, D. D. S., was born in Pickaway county, Ohio, near Adelphi, Ross county, Ohio, October 6, 1876. His father's name was William Markel, a farmer by occupation. His mother's maiden name was Sarah Ann Riegel, daughter of Solomon Riegel, of German nativity. His parents had three sons and three daughters, all living. Our subject attended school at his home and at the Adelphi High School in 1894, when he graduated from the latter. He attended the Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1894 and 1895. He then taught school from three to four years and attended the Ohio State University in 1898 and 1899. He took up the study of dentistry in 1899 and graduated from the Ohio College of Cincinnati in May, 1902. He located in Portsmouth for the practice of his profession at 160 East Ninth street, where he keeps his office. In his political views, he is a republican. He is a member of the German Reformed church. He is not a member of any fraternity. Dr. Markel believes in every good work. He is careful and prudent in all things and has a keen appreciation of what is best for himself and for those in whom he is interested. His motto is, "careful and sure." He will succeed in whatever he undertakes, because he gauges his own ability and has the will, the courage and the persistence to carry out his plans. [This sketch should have appeared among the dentists on page 578 but it was received too late for that purpose and is inserted here.]

Walker Elijah Marsh

was born near Kittanning, Pennsylvania, July 17, 1856. His parents located in Jackson county, Ohio, soon after his birth. His father, William Stremel Marsh was born near Strasburg, Pa., December 24, 1822, and is still living. His grandfather, Elijah Marsh, was born in New Hampshire in 1800 and died at Oak Hill, Ohio, in 1862. His paternal grandmother, Mary Stremel was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1801, came to the United States in 1814 and died at Oak Hill, Ohio, in 1857. His mother, Rebecca Moorhead, was born August 6, 1825, in Clarion county, Pennsylvania, and was married to his father in 1845. Her father, John Moorhead, was a native of Pennsylvania, and of Scotch lineage. His mother's mother, Sarah White, was of Irish descent. His mother died at Oak Hill, Ohio, in April, 1888.

He was educated at Oak Hill, Ohio, and was a school teacher for four years. On February 22, 1879, he was married to Alice McNeel. She was born September 27, 1860 and was the daughter of Finley and Mahala McNeel. Finley McNeel was born near Oak Hill, Ohio, April 5, 1819 and is yet living. He was the son of Doctor Gabriel McNeel, an eminent physician. Alice McNeel's mother, Mahala Johnson, was born April 10, 1827 and is yet living. She married Finley McNeel, February 8, 1849. John Johnson, Mahala Johnson's father, died at the age of ninety-four.

Walker Marsh located at Eifort, Ohio, in March, 1880 and began to get out limestone and ore for the furnaces. There was nothing there but a small side track. In 1881, he had a station established and called it Eifort and in 1882 had a postoffice established and was made postmaster. In 1883, he had a school district established and a school house built. In that year, he adopted the idea of introducing the number four or limestone coal. He shipped a few cars each year and in 1890 had a good trade in this coal, which has increased ever since. In 1896, he bought 640 acres of mineral lands, half in Washington township, Lawrence county and half in Bloom township, Scioto county. In the Fall of 1899, his health failed on account of strenuous labor. He leased the mines and quarries, closed out his business and went to Seattle, Washington. He spent five months there and came back to Eifort and assumed the duties of station agent on the B. & O. railroad. He has one daughter, Amy Vernie, who is telegraph operator and Postmistress at Eifort. He was a voter in Bloom township, from the spring of 1880 to the fall of 1890, but having built his new station over the line in Washington township, Lawrence county, he became an elector there.

As the facts mentioned indicate, Mr. Marsh is a first class business man. He is highly esteemed in the entire circle of his acquaintance. Mr. Marsh is willing to consider every man's claim with consideration. He is courteous and obliging to all. He is always ready to aid and help every project for the public good and he passes none by without assistance. He is for the upbuilding of his home community. His influence is uniformly and positively for the good of his fellowmen. He is a valuable citizen in any light in which he may be viewed. If he cannot find a way, he will make one. The wealth of nature must yield its secrets to him, and to him more than anyone, is due the development of the coal interests of this county, now so rapidly going forward.

Charles Hoyt Martindale

was born June 1, 1872, in Springfield township, Gallia county, Ohio. He is the son of William W. Martindale and Lucretia Weed, his wife. His father enlisted as a private in the 53d O. V. I. November 18, 1861, and was appointed Corporal March 1, 1862; transferred to 1st Louisiana Colored Infantry June 6, 1863 to accept promotion; mustered out October 21, 1864. From 1878 to 1882, he served as Treasurer of Gallia county and later was elected Mayor of Gallipolis. He was also engaged in the mercantile business in Gallipolis for a number of years. He retired from active business in 1886, and died on his farm at Keer, Gallia county, in December, 1887.

Our subject spent his early boyhood in Gallipolis and attended the public schools there. Later he attended Ewington Academy and Rio Grande (Ohio) College. He was connected with the Kentucky Fire Brick Company as store-keeper from June, 1891, to February, 1896 when he moved to Lucasville and engaged in business under the firm name of Martindale & Edmunds. The firm still continues in business. He has served as Treasurer of Valley township since 1897 and his present term expires in 1903. He has always been a republican and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was married in October, 1900 to Olive S. Edmunds, daughter of George Edmunds of Lucasville. They have two children: Chester E. born in January, 1893 and died July 25, 1895 and Ruth born March 9, 1891.

Frank Lewis Marting

was born August 27, 1856, at Jackson Furnace, Ohio. His father was Henry Marting and his mother was Mary Elizabeth Knaper. Both were natives of Osnaburg, Hanover, Germany. A fuller account of the family will be found under the sketch of Colonel Henry Marting his brother. When Frank was a babe of six weeks, his parents removed to the valley of the Little Scioto in Scioto county. He received his education at Tick Ridge and Kettle's school houses. When he was sixteen years of age, his father located in the city of Portsmouth and engaged in the grocery business with Frank C. Herms, his son-in-law as Marting and Herms. Frank L. became a clerk in this business.

In 1873, the firm changed its business to dry goods. In 1877, Frank L. became of age and took a partnership in the business and it became Marting & Son. His father remained in the business until 1893, when he retired and the business became Marting Brothers & Co. The firm is composed of Frank L. Marting, John C. Marting, his brother and Mrs. Eliza Volker, his sister.

Mr. Marting has been in the same business in Portsmouth, Ohio for thirty years and has prospered all the time. He has one of the best business houses in the city at 515 Chillicothe street, and one of the best selected dry goods stores. Henry Marting, Senior, died May 1, 1899. Mr. Marting has been a member of the City School Board for nearly six years. He is now one of the City Board of Tax Review. He was married September 6, 1877 to Miss Ellen Scheuerman, daughter of George Scheuerman and has six children, five sons and one daughter. Their names are: George, Albert, Edna, Ralph, Henry and Royal. Mr. Marting is a director of the Royal Building Association, a member of the German Methodist Episcopal church, and a member of the Royal Arcanum. He resides at 705, Findlay street, in the Sixth ward of Portsmouth.

Colonel Henry Adam Marting

was born December 17, 1850, in Greenup county, Kentucky. His parents, Henry Marting and Mary E. Knapier, his wife, were natives of Germany. He was the fifth of his parents nine children. They removed to Jackson Furnace when he was an infant and remained there five years. They then moved to a farm near Wheeler's Mills on the Little Scioto. Our subject attended the schools there. At the age of nineteen, he began working on the railroad as a section hand. He worked at this for two and a half years and then started a store in company with his brother John C. at Gephart's Station. He was there for two years and then sold out and went to Ironton. In 1873, he started in the dry goods business in Ironton and remained in the same business part of the time alone and part of the time with partners until January 1, 1902. His brother John C. was a partner for three years from 1875 and then began to study for the ministry.

In 1882, with J. D. Foster, he organized the Foster Stove Company of Ironton and became treasurer and held that position until 1892, when he resigned. He organized the Eagle Iron & Steel Company rolling mill which manufactured bar and sheet iron. He was president and general manager. In 1899, this company sold out to the Republic Iron & Steel Company. In 1896, with Joseph Clutts and Lewis Vogelsong, he organized the Wellston Iron & Steel Company and operated two blast furnaces. He sold out his interest in this company in 1898, to Clutts and Willard. While connected with this organization, he was secretary and treasurer. In 1889, he purchased Aetna furnace and organized a company known as the Marting Iron and Steel Company, of which he is president and general manager. In 1899, he organized the Columbus Iron and Steel Company and is president and general manager of that. In 1901, he organized the Ironton Lumber Company and is a director of that. He also organized and is a director and president of the Ketter Clothing Company of Ironton. He is a director of the Citizen's National Bank and of the Ironton Corrugated Roofing Company.

He is a senior member of the firm of Marting, Flehr & Company, shoe dealers; is a director and president of the Register Publishing Company, and a director of the Franklin Stove Company of Columbus. He is a director of the Crystal Ice Company of Ironton, Ohio, and of the Camden Interstate Railway Co. He was a member of the City Council of Ironton for six years, from 1888 to 1894, and was its president for two years. He has a genius for the successful management of business and has been successful in everything he has undertaken. He was a member of the German M. E. church, but in 1897 he connected with Spencer M. E. church, of Ironton, and is a member of the official board of that church. He is a Knight of Pythias.

He was married to Miss Margaret C. Duis, March 7, 1872. She is the daughter of Henry Duis. He has one child, Nellie M., the wife of Doctor Clark Lowry of Ironton, Ohio.

One who knows Colonel Marting best, says of him: "Colonel H. A. Marting is a self-made man. His school advantages were meager, his parents lacking the means to give him the opportunity of a higher education. His training was received in practical life. If his had been the opportunity enjoyed by many youths of our land, his career would have been envious. He has shown great energy, push and determination, which count mightily in making a mark in life. He always believed, that what others have done, he also could do, and when he undertakes anything, there is no swerving until the goal is reached. He is no pessimist; he believes in his fellowmen and is hopeful as to the future; therefore he dares and risks, but never without counting the cost. At one time, he bought at a high price on credit, 40 acres of timber land. A friend suggested that he was risking a great deal, when he replied, 'I have counted the trees on the quarter section.' From his boyhood days, he has been a great trader—jack-knives, his hat, his coat, his fathers' shot gun or horse—anything would be turned. In these deals, he always was fair and strictly honest. He could often, in later years, have enriched himself, at the expense of others, if he had not placed his good name and honor above money. In his financial ventures he always had in mind the giving of employment to others, their welfare. His generosity and philanthropy are not fully known by his own family. He enjoys giving for good causes, and is happiest when he can help some one struggling for relief. A more tender-hearted man can hardly be found. Back of that will power and energy is a soft, tender heart. His early training was strictly of the Methodist type, and he is today an active worker in the church. The key to the success Colonel Marting has achieved is to my mind, his faith in God and in his fellowmen."

was born February 1, 1859, on a farm near Nauvoo, Illinois. His father was Elisha Mathews, a native of Gallia county, Ohio, and one of the well known Matthews family of that county. His mother was Phoebe Ewing, of Gallia county, Ohio, a member of the Ewing family so prominent in the history of Gallia county, Ohio. His father and mother had ten children, five sons and five daughters. He is the youngest born of all. His father died when he was but seven years of age, and the family moved into Carthage, the county seat, where he resided and went to school till he was sixteen years of age. Then he assayed to try the cold world on his own account, and began by farm work. He thought he would like a strenuous life and went to Leadville, Colorado, at twenty years, and worked in the mines of Leadville, drove stage and turned his hand and brain to divers and sundry employments, but in 1884, he returned to Carthage, Illinois, and went into the livery business. In 1887, he concluded to try the great state of Ohio, and came back to Jackson county, and engaged in a hardware store.

In 1889, he came to Portsmouth and engaged in that business for the Hibbs Hardware Company, till 1891. Then he traveled for a hardware house in Cleveland for two years. He then tried the Pearl Barley business for two years. In 1894, he tried business in Columbus for six months and sold out. Then he had an accident and spent eighteen months on crutches. Most men would have preferred death to what he suffered, but George thought of Portsmouth and remembered the family stock he came from, especially the Ewing side, Swago Bill and Indian John, and made up his mind to live and get well and he did. In 1895, he went to work again and traveled for two coal companies till September, 1897, when he came to Portsmouth, and he hopes to spend his days here. He was a stock-holder in the Hibbs Hardware Company till 1900. Then he went to the Veneer Works where he had taken stock. He became a director of that company and is the buyer. He has been a member of the city council of Portsmouth since April, 1901, and its president. He is a republican in politics. He is a Master Mason and a member of the United Commercial Travelers and the Modern Woodmen.

Mr. Mathews has been successful in business in which he has displayed excellent judgment. He is public spirited in the strongest sense of the term. As president of the City Council he has made an excellent record. He is one of the working factors of his city and believes in public improvements. He is candid in all he does and his views on any and every subject are for the perusal of the public. He can be depended on to follow his views at all times. He is a valuable unit in his community and would be in any which he honored with his residence.

Aaron Mault

was born December 19, 1848, near Wallace Mills, Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio. His parents were Moses and Melissa (Darling) Mault. His ancestry is stated in the sketch of his brother George W. Mault. Aaron attended school at Mault's school house, sub-district No. 10, Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, and received a common school education. He has always been a farmer. He is a republican and a member of the United Brethren church. On December 24, 1876, he was married to Nancy J. Hanes, daughter of Archibald Hanes, a soldier of the Civil War. The following are their children: Archey M., Noah A., Stella E., Aaron N., Lewis H., George E., Melissa J., Margaret T. Mr. Mault has deserved and earned the good will and kind regard of all who have known him.

George Washington Mault

is the great-grandson of Moses Mault, a descendant of the early French colonists of South Carolina, who came to Scioto county and located in Madison township in 1819. His son Aaron Mault was the father of Moses Mault, who is the father of our subject. Aaron Mault, the grandfather of George Mault, was born in South Carolina in 1796. His father, Moses Mault, was born on Brushy Fork, in Madison township, May 27, 1820. Here on the farm on Brushy Fork, in the east end of Madison township, on September 20, 1850, George Mault was born. His maternal grandfather was James Darling, whose daughter Melissa Darling married Moses Mault in 1844. George spent his boyhood and youth on the farm and attended the district school. He has worked at the furnaces. He has always had a wonderful liking for the study and practice of the law. He has read law until he is well informed in its theories. He practices in cases before magistrates and has been fairly successful.

He married Harriet Sophia Titus, August 17, 1876. She is the daughter of Arthur and Harriet (Bennett) Titus. Her father came from New York, in 1824. Her mother was the daughter of John Bennett, who came from Virginia, in 1810, and located in Madison township. George Mault is a republican and a member of the Free Will Baptist church. He has seven children now living: Harriet, the wife of Ellsworth Lyons, Frank L., Roscoe C., Stella, Bessie, Rena and Waldo. Three of his children Laura, Kendall and Bont died of diphtheria inside of three weeks. George Mault is a man of sturdy character. He will not undertake what he cannot accomplish and he accomplishes what he undertakes. He has clear perceptions and cannot be imposed on. He is a close and analytical thinker and is able to express clearly and forcibly on every subject he studies. He is a good counsellor in business matters.

James Andrew Maxwell

was born April 3, 1842, in Mercer county, Virginia. His father's name was Mathias Maxwell, and his mother's maiden name was Juliet Brown. His father died in 1863. His grandfather, William Maxwell, was a Revolutionary soldier from the state of Virginia, who died in 1867 at the age of ninety. Our subject was raised a farmer, and never learned any trade. He had a common school education. When he was five years of age his father moved from Mercer county to Wyoming county.

He enlisted in the 11th West Virginia Infantry, April 3, 1862, in Company K, Captain William Gilton, Colonel Dan Frost. He served until May, 1865, and was never wounded. He is six feet two and one-fourth inches tall, and weighs 270 pounds. He was the heaviest man in his regiment and the second tallest. The regiment's service was rendered mainly in West Virginia and Maryland. Their operations were between Parkersburg and Washington on the B. & O. Railroad. He was in the battle of Cloyd Mountain, Lynchburg, and Snicker's Gap. Mr. Maxwell had the good fortune never to have been hit, notwithstanding his remarkable height and size. He was captured twice, but escaped from his capturer both times. He stayed with them a half night on one occasion and about fifteen minutes on another. Mr. Maxwell also had a brother John B., in the 7th Virginia Cavalry, who died in 1863, at Charleston, W. Va., in the service. Another brother, Robert H., was in the same company and regiment with himself. He was badly wounded and left on the field and captured. He was kept in prison eight months, and is still living at Hinton, W. Va. Another brother, William H., did not go into the service, but was seized by the rebels on account of his union sentiments, and kept in prison for thirteen months. He is still living in Jackson county, W. Va., but with a wrecked constitution. He had a brother Samuel, who was a scout for General Cox in West Virginia, and his father was also a scout in West Virginia for the Union army. His two youngest brothers were too young to go to the war.

After the war, our subject went to Cottageville, Jackson county, Virginia, and went into the saw mill business, where he remained about two years in the same business. He then moved to Portsmouth, O., in October, 1867, and went to work with M. B. Gilbert in the ice business, and continued that for three and one-half years, when he went to work for the Portsmouth Transfer Company, which he continued for three and one-half years. In 1874, he went in the commission and feed business on Market street. He afterwards removed his store to Gallia street, where he sold out in 1899. Since then he has been engaged in the real estate business, buying and selling.

He was married in October, 1867, to Lydia J. Rhodes, of Chautauqua county, New York. They have one adopted daughter, May, who married N. D. Bigelow, residing at Winchester, New Hampshire. He is a member of the Bigelow Methodist church, and lives up to it. He is a republican. He was raised a democrat, but when the question of secession was raised in Virginia, his family were opposed to it, and were in favor of the Union, and he became a republican, and has continued such ever since. He belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic, and takes a great pride in his record in the civil war, and has just reason to. Mr. Maxwell is one of the best natured men of the city. No one can quarrel with him. He is always in good spirits and communicates the same temper to those about him. It is a wise provision of nature which gives large men good dispositions. Mr. Maxwell is a good citizen from any and every point of view. He is a prime factor in his church and in the business associations with which he is connected.

Isaac Fullerton Mead

was so named for Isaac Fullerton, well known to the older citizens of Scioto county, as once county commissioner, a captain in the 56th O. V. I. and a lay Baptist preacher. He was born in Madison township, where all of the inhabitants of the county, who distinguished themselves in after life, were born. He made his bow to the world the 4th day of November, 1841. His father was Hezekiah Mead, and his mother was Lydia Dodge, daughter of Daniel Dodge, one of the pioneers of the county. His grandfather Judah Mead was an original settler in the county, coming from Olean, N. Y.

Isaac Mead was brought up a farmer, but at the age of twenty, he and his two brothers, Daniel and Jonathan enlisted in Co. A, of the 39th O. V. I. Daniel was wounded at Kenesaw Mountain and died from the effects of amputation of his shattered leg. Isaac and Jonathan served till July, 1865. He was wounded in the left arm by a ball, at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864. He served as a private soldier all through the war and did it with great honor. His regiment endured as many army hardships and saw as much fighting as any in the service and a reference to the battles in which the regiment participated will demonstrate this. No soldier who served in the Civil war saw more service than our subject, and the Civil war had no more modest or braver soldier.

Isaac Mead is in no way responsible for this sketch, and we propose to tell the truth about him, if it does make him blush when he reads it. When Isaac came home from the service, he felt like a boy out of school and determined to have a good time visiting around and did so. While he was so engaged, he was nominated by the Republican Convention of the county for Recorder without his solicitation, knowledge or consent. There was a contest over the office, in the Convention, and Moses Gregory who was a power at that time, nominated him before the Convention and he was made its choice. After nominated he learned of the fact. He paid no assessment and asked no one to vote for him and was elected. His wonderful soldier record was well known and that elected him. He served one term and was renominated and re-elected for a second term. He made as good an officer as the county ever had and retired in January 1872.

Then he had to adopt an occupation and he thought as the Savior of the world had been a carpenter, he could afford to take up that vocation and he did so. From that time to the present, he has followed that handicraft. He taught himself the business and has built over 600 homes of all sorts and conditions in the city of Portsmouth. If any one wants a strenuous example of the term "laboring man" Isaac Mead is "it." He and his brother Jonathan are two of the most industrious men in Portsmouth. No one ever knew them or either of them to be idle for a moment except from pure physical exhaustion. When Isaac gets to Heaven, (as he undoubtedly will), if they don't give him something to do and keep him hard at work, he will be positively unhappy. There will be no loafing around the throne with him.

He was married in June, 1873, to Sarah Jane Beatty, a granddaughter of Mrs. Judith Watkins, and has had six children. His eldest, Mary, died in infancy but the others are still living. His daughter Harriet is the wife of Eugene Gower, and has two children. His sons are Henry Edward, Alexander R. who was in the Spanish War, and Daniel. His daughter Georgia is at home. Mr. Mead's wife died on Feb. 14, 1892, and he never remarried. His married daughter, Mrs. Gower keeps house for him and his brother Jonathan and his sons and unmarried daughter all reside together and are a happy family. They all believe in the Gospel of hard work and practice it.

Mr. Mead is a republican, at all times and under all circumstances. In his religious affiliations, he is a Baptist and has been a member of that church for over thirty years. He is over six feet tall and all bone and muscle. He is a rapid walker and never goes slow. He greets all of his friends with a pleasant smile and is liked by all sorts and conditions of men. No man can find it in his heart to hate him. If anybody has a charitable work to do and wants to shift it on to any one else, it can always be put on Mr. Mead and he will attend to it. He is very popular with his party. In 1900, he was one of the decennial appraisers in the city of Portsmouth, and did his duty well. He is always ready to accommodate his neighbors, or the public, even to the extent of being imposed upon. As an example of industry, he is a model for the whole community and the whole world. Another trait of his is his modesty. He was never known to boast of any of his excellent qualities and they are found out, known and published by his intimate acquaintances. A friend of his said of him, "If Isaac Mead is not admitted by St. Peter at the wicket gate on showing himself, I won't make any application to enter." Mr. Mead may have his faults, but in thirty-five years of close observation we have not discovered them. He was a model soldier and is a model citizen.

John Rickey Mead

was born September 30, 1840 near California, Scioto county, on the old Rickey farm. His father was Ezra Mead who lived to reach 92 years and 5 months and died May 24, 1898. He was the son of Judah Mead who came from Tioga county, New York and located at the mouth of the Little Scioto, November 20, 1815. He lived there only one winter and then moved up the Little Scioto farther. He was a farmer and of English descent. His mother was Esther Rickey, daughter of Rev. Jacob Rickey, a Baptist minister. He came from New York about the same time Judah Mead did. At the age of sixteen, his parents moved to Sedan and located in the same spot where our subject now lives. His father was born December 24, 1806 and died May 24, 1898. His mother was born December 20, 1810 and died September 28, 1876. He received a common school education, and has been a farmer all his life. He had a brother Ebenezer in the 56th O. V. I. Company G, who enlisted October 29, 1861 and died May 15, 1862, at Shiloh, Tennessee. Mr. Mead has always been a republican and his father before him was a whig. He never held office nor dabbled in politics. He is a member of Salem Baptist church near Sedan and is one of its trustees. He was married May 20, 1876 to Mary Jane McLaughlin. She is a daughter of James and Elizabeth Huston. They have two children living and two dead. Ezra at home and Anna, the wife of Jas. A. Johnson. As a man Mr. Mead is quiet and unassuming, is a good citizen and is noted for his integrity.

John Frederick Menke

was born in Hanover, Germany, April 23, 1859. His father was Henry Menke, a farmer. His mother's maiden name was Emma Niehaus. They had four children, of which our subject was the second. His parents left Germany when he was three months old, and located at Harrison Furnace. His father is now living in Gales county, Nebraska. His mother died when he was seven years old, and his father married the second time. Mr. Menke was reared in Scioto county. He went to the country schools and began teaching when he was eighteen years of age and taught until he was twenty-three. He started in the grocery business at Eleventh and Gay streets in the fall of 1882. In the fall of 1883, he moved to Eleventh and Findlay streets and bought property there. He remained there in the same business until 1895, when he went into the Central Grocery on Gallia street with George J. Schmidt. They dissolved partnership in 1902, and he started business alone on the north-east corner of Eighth and Chillicothe streets.

He was married January 3, 1881 to Mary Strehle, of Powellsville, Ohio, daughter of Andrew Strehle. His children are: Katie, stenographer at Hibbs Hardware Company; Nellie, at home; Lloyd Henry, aged thirteen; and Howard Emmanuel, aged three. He has two children deceased. He has always been a republican. He was a member of the City Council for two years in the Fourth ward. He is a member of the United Brethren church and is a Quarterly Conference preacher in that church, and a trustee. If there is any one trait in Mr. Menke's character more prominent than another, it is his earnestness. He is earnest in everything he does. He is conscientious to a remarkable degree and lives strictly according to the dictates of his conscience. In his church he is a great worker, much valued by his associates. He is a true Christian and a model citizen. He has made an admirable success in his business and is esteemed by all who know him.

Martin Funk Micklethwait

was born November 13, 1837, at the old brick homestead of the Funk family in Clay township. His father was Joseph Micklethwait, and his mother's maiden name was Barbara Funk. He was the third child of five sons and one daughter. He attended the district school. His teacher who most impressed him was William R. Holmes, the father of Sidney Holmes. He was reared a farmer. From the ages of eighteen to twenty-one he was apprenticed to the carpenter's trade, but never followed it. On May 2, 1864, he enlisted in Company E, 140th O. V. I., and was made third Sergeant. He served until the 3rd day of November, 1864. He went into the retail grocery business in February, 1865, on the old Whitney corner at Second and Market streets, where now stands the Washington Hotel. The firm was M. F. Micklethwait & Brother, the latter being his brother John. The firm continued until the death of John, in July, 1893, and Martin retired from this business in 1894. On May 1, 1899, he went into the real estate business with Frank R. Keffer, as Keffer & Micklethwait, and located at 206 Chillicothe street, where they have quite an extensive business. Mr. Micklethwait has more acquaintances than any one in the city and as many friends as any one. He is one of the best natured men in the community.

George Bliss Millar

was born January 10, 1843 on the Millar farm where he now resides. His father was Abram Millar and his mother's maiden name was Harriet Peters. He was brought up on the farm and has resided there all his life except from 1869 to 1874, when he resided in the city of Portsmouth, and engaged in the lumber business. He had a good common school education only. On January 10, 1866, he was married to Annie Carre, daughter of Thomas W. Carre, of Portsmouth. Their children are: Abram F. a farmer with his father, Charles R. who is an electrician at the Central Insane Asylum at Columbus, Ohio, and Edgar Garfield, who is an attorney with Mr. Holcomb of Portsmouth. Their daughter, Nellie married Charles Thomas. Our subject lost two infant daughters. He has never held any office except school director in his township. He has always been a republican.

Mr. Millar is a good neighbor and a good citizen. He has been and is a very successful farmer. He has more confidence in his own judgment than any man in Scioto county, but can be controlled if any one can make him believe he is doing it himself. But the man who undertakes to drive him will find him the most obstinate, self-willed man in the whole world, and will fail in his undertaking. Whenever Mr. Millar makes up his mind to any course, he will follow it out regardless of consequences. He has an opinion on every subject and they are carefully formed and adhered to with the most wonderful tenacity of purpose.

Frank Miller

was born in Porter township May 29, 1862. His father was John Miller and his mother's maiden name was Barbara Moseman. They both emigrated from France to this country in 1853. Our subject was reared on a farm and attended the district school. He attended the Wheelersburg High School one year and afterwards attended a private normal at Sciotoville, conducted by Prof. White. At the age of nineteen, he engaged in the teaching profession and continued in it for eight years. During the summer months he farmed. He bought the home farm near Powellsville, and after much improvement has one of the most productive and well kept farms on Pine creek. He owns a beautiful country home and his farm is well fitted with modern buildings.

Mr. Miller is a straight republican and is one of the political workers in Green township. He has served as Clerk of Green township from 1884 till 1893 with the exception of one year. He is an active member of the Free-Will Baptist church of Powellsville. He was married February 26, 1887 to Caroline Wagner, a daughter of a prominent Lawrence county farmer. Their children are: William and Willard, twins, b. Apr. 13, 1888; Otto Earl b. Apr. 23, 1890, d. Nov. 19, 1890; Frederick Joseph b. Sept. 25, 1891; Edna Marie, b. Oct. 12, 1894.

Mr. Miller is in the fullest sense of the term an ideal citizen. By economy and good habits, he has accumulated sufficient means to live without the toil that persons of his occupation are generally required to perform. He has an interesting family and it is safe to say that his children will receive a liberal education, and by force of his example will become useful citizens. Few men of his age have, by means which were afforded him, accomplished so much. In his preparation for life and the care for his family, it must not be overlooked that Mr. Miller has acquired a liberal education. He is a worthy example and inspiration to all young men who start in life with little but character upon which to lay the foundation for a successful career.

John Theobald Miller

was born in Dietschweiler, Rhine Bavaria, July 29, 1833. His father, Philip Miller, was a village blacksmith. His grandfather followed the same business. His mother's maiden name was Louisa Diehl. His father also owned a small farm in Germany. John T. attended the schools in his vicinity, until he was fourteen years of age, when he went to work with his father in the blacksmith shop. He concluded Germany was too slow for him, and on April 5, 1852, he sailed for the United States from Havre De Grace, France. He was twenty-nine days on the ocean, on the sailing vessel Mercury.

He went from New York direct to Cincinnati by the way of Albany and Buffalo. From Buffalo to Sandusky by lake and from Sandusky to Cincinnati by rail. He had two married sisters in Cincinnati. He worked in Cincinnati for a few months, at the butcher trade, until the fall of 1852, when he went to Big Sandy and worked in the saw-mill, and then in a cabinet maker's shop at Louisa. He came back to Ohio in 1853 and farmed one year for General Samuel Thomas at South Point. He also worked for Benjamin Johnson, a brother-in-law of E. B. Greene, at the same place. From here he went to Pine Grove Furnace and took charge of Robert Hamilton's farm, near Hanging Rock. In the fall of 1856 our subject came to Portsmouth, worked in each one of the rolling mills a short time and drove team for David Davis. In 1857, he became a clerk in the grocery store of William P. Martin, and was also conducting the business of pork packing at the same time. June 16, 1860 he participated in the great Union meeting at Portsmouth, and was mentioned in the proceedings.

In February, 1862, occurred the celebrated "Cat Case" of William P. Martin vs. Giles Gilbert, which is fully reported in this book in another place. Mr. Miller affirms that the court decided the case wrong, and that the cat was Martin's not Gilbert's; and on February 22, 1862 he wrote a long letter to the Times on the subject of the "Cat Case." This is one of the subjects which should never be mentioned to Mr. Miller, and especially should any of his friends refrain the suggestion that the disputed cat belonged to Giles Gilbert.

On March 11, 1862, he left William P. Martin's and went into the liquor business for himself. July 22, 1863 he immortalized himself in the Morgan Raid, by capturing fifty-four rebels and bringing them all to Portsmouth and turning them over to the authorities. For further particulars on this subject, see the article on the Morgan Raid, but this is another subject which should not be mentioned to Mr. Miller by his friends. Mr. Miller made a great deal of money in the liquor business, and he also sank some of it.

We regret very much that we are compelled to tell one thing about Mr. Miller which is not entirely to his credit. On April 17, 1876, he and Dr. Pixley induced the City Council of Portsmouth to buy ten pairs of English sparrows, at $3.00 a pair, for the purpose of introducing them into the city of Portsmouth; and the Council being imposed on by Mr. Miller and Dr. Pixley did buy the sparrows, and ten years later the city had "sparrows to burn." The council would like to employ Mr. Miller and Dr. Pixley to get rid of the sparrows.

In the same year he bought the Correspondent, a German Weekly, and published it until August 15, 1880, when he sold it to the Reutingers of Chillicothe. He was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth, from the First ward, from 1865 to 1867, and from 1870 to 1882. He was president of the Council in the years 1874, 1879 and 1880, but he resigned on October 17, 1881. In 1871, he was a candidate on the democratic ticket for the office of County Treasurer, and was defeated by Charles Slavens. The vote stood Slavens 2,730, Miller 2,166, majority 564. He was a member of the City Board of Equalization in 1890 and 1900. Mr. Miller was always a democrat until 1885, when he became a republican.

He was married April 25, 1859 at Piketon, O., to Elizabeth Schmidt, daughter of John Schmidt, deceased, a former resident of Piketon. They have had the following children: Lucy, wife of Philo S. Clark, postmaster of Portsmouth, Ohio; John, died in 1896, at the age of thirty-two; Elizabeth M., wife of Albert Wurster, book-keeper for C. P. Tracy & Co.; Mary E., clerk at Philo S. Clark's insurance office; Charles E., rural free delivery mail carrier on the West Side. He has two daughters, Bertha and Laura, and one son, William F., at home. He also lost two children in infancy. Mr. Miller was reared in the Evangelical church, better known as the German Lutheran, and adheres to it.

Cread Milstead

Mayor of Portsmouth, was born January 15, 1847, in Amherst county, Virginia, near Lynchburg. He is the youngest of eight children of Newman Milstead and Clara England, his wife. His parents moved to Union township, Lawrence county, Ohio, when our subject was two years old. His father died in 1870, and his mother in 1872. He received a common school education in Union township, Lawrence county, O., and attended an Academy at Burlington, Ohio. He attended Marshall College at Huntington W. Va., in 1868 and 1869. He enlisted in Company E, 5th West Virginia V. L., July 13, 1863, as a recruit, for three years, and served until July 21, 1865. He was in the battle of Lynchburg, June 14 and 15, 1864; Kearnsstown, July 24, 1864; Berryville, August 8, 1864; Hulltown; Opequan, Sept. 19, 1864; Fisher's Hill, Sept. 22, 1864; Cedar Creek, Oct. 19, 1864. He was in the first brigade, second division, eighth army corps. In the brigade were the 5th, 13th, 23rd, and 36th West Virginia regiments. Gen. R. B. Hayes was the brigade commander; I. H. Duvall, division commander; and Gen. George Crook, corps commander.

From 1865 to 1867 he worked on a farm and attended school. He went on the river in December, 1869, to learn piloting, between New Orleans and the mouth of the Red River, and was in that trade for five years, and got his license as pilot in 1871. He served on a number of different steamboats, and was master on several. He was master on the Clifford and Hamilton running on the Red river trade. He came North in 1874, and took a position on the Eastern Kentucky railroad as agent and operator at Willard, Kentucky, and remained there five years. In March 1879, he came to Portsmouth and began to travel for L. Eisman & Bros., and was with that house eight years and one-half. In January, 1887, he began traveling for Abe Block & Co., clothiers of Cincinnati, and was with them until July 1, 1894. He then became a stock holder in the Portsmouth Hat & Glove Co., and was in that company until November, 1901, when he sold out. He was elected Mayor of Portsmouth, in April, 1901, which office he still holds.

He was married Sept. 22, 1872, to Ruhama Irwin, of Howard Furnace. She was a daughter of James C. Irwin, and Sarah Wilson his wife. They have six children: Charles Curtis, a shoe cutter, married; Sadie, the wife of R. John Williams, book-keeper for the Columbus Buggy Co.; James I., at home, a shoe cutter; Clara at home; Pearl a school boy and Jessie a school girl.

Mr. Milstead has always been a republican, and is a member of the Sixth Street Methodist church of Portsmouth. He is a member of the Blue Lodge, F. & A. M., Mt. Vernon Chapter and Calvary Commandery, Odd Fellows, the United Commercial Travelers, and also the Bailey Post, G. A. R.

"He is a man of most excellent character, honorable in all his dealings, honest in the fulfillment of his duties, firm in his convictions of right and wrong and loyal to his friends, enjoying a feeling of satisfaction in the consciousness of a duty well performed even at the risk of political or social ostracism." We have the foregoing from one who has an extensive acquaintance with Mr. Milstead.

Joseph Walter Mitchell

was born in Deavertown, Morgan county, Ohio, September 16, 1858. His father's name was George Washington Mitchell, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Ellen Richardson. His parents moved to Portsmouth in 1862, where he attended the public schools and in 1876 studied law with Judge Searl. He graduated at the Cincinnati Law School in the spring of 1858, and not being of age could not be admitted to the practice of law. Losing interest in the legal profession, he engaged in the newspaper business, and was traveling correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the Associated Press, local editor of the Portsmouth Tribune and other local papers, local editor of the Circleville Advertiser and editor of the Adams County New Era. Since 1885, he has published the Portsmouth City Directory and engaged in house number surveying, having numbered Portsmouth, Ironton, Ashland and a part of Cincinnati. In the National Census of 1900, he served as Chief Special Agent for manufacturing and mechanical statistics, having charge of the district including Portsmouth, Ironton and Ashland. He was married December 8, 1881 to Miss Josephine, daughter of George Wright, a prominent farmer of Ross and Pickaway counties. He has two daughters Elizabeth Wright, wife of Louis Zucker and Mary Ellen, recently married to Earl Musser.

John Moeller

was born at Braunhausen, Prussia, February 22, 1858. His father was Justice Moeller and his mother was Elizabeth Krieser. The family left Prussia in 1867. He attended school in Prussia three years before coming to this country. The remainder of his education was obtained in the Portsmouth schools. The family crossed the Atlantic in the year 1867 in a sailing vessel. The trip occupied six weeks. They located in Portsmouth in June, 1867, where John attended school until he was fifteen years old. He commenced work at the butcher business at the age of fifteen. He worked for Brandau, Brant & Brandau and Bandau & Vincent, until 1883, and then began business for himself on the corner of Ninth and Findlay, which he continued until June, 1901. He was elected Commissioner of Scioto county in the fall of 1898, and re-elected in 1901. He is a republican, a member of the United Brethren church, a member of the German Benevolent Society and of Portsmouth Lodge No. 416, I. O. O. F. He was a delegate to the Republican Convention, in 1897.

He married Abigail Klink, of Piketon, Ohio, November 10, 1897. They have five children: Edward, Catherine, Charles, Floyd and Clifford. Mr. Moeller is noted for his cheerfulness and good nature. No one ever found him in a fit of blues. If he was ever in one no record has been preserved. He treats all sorts and conditions of men well and is respected by all.

George Dinwiddie Moffett

was born August 20, 1875, in the famous old town of Alexandria, Virginia. His father was George Tate Moffett a native of Augusta county, Virginia, and his mother was Statira Drew, a native of Lynchburg, Virginia. He was one of the youngest of a family of eight children. He comes of the well-known Moffett family of Augusta and Rockbridge counties in Virginia, an account of which will be found in Waddel's History. This family has been identified with the History of the valley since its earliest settlement and much interesting matter in regard to it will be found in the recent historical publications, of Valley History. Our subject only lived on the soil of the "Mother of Presidents" till his seventh year, when his father's family came to Portsmouth. From Portsmouth, the family went to Hamden and in 1886 to Ironton, where he attended school for five years. In 1891, he began life on his own account, by entering the employment of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company and it speaks well for him that he has remained in the same employment ever since, and been advanced from time to time. First he collected transfers for the railroad ferry, at Ironton. Then he was a train collector on the trains. On March 1, 1896, he went into the Railroad office, at Ironton, as an Assistant, where he remained till October, 1899, when he was placed in full charge of the Company's offices in Portsmouth, and has held that important and responsible position ever since. He enjoys the full confidence of his employers and of the public and there has never been a more popular and accommodating railroad official in Portsmouth. He is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church and in his political views, is Democratic. He is a Master Mason and a member of the Royal Arcanum. Just at the moment of writing this Mr. Moffett is a bachelor but from the auspices known to the editor, he would not, under any circumstances, guarantee that social condition to continue over thirty days. The editor does, however, predict that if he marries soon, his bride will be the handsomest young lady known to him. Since the above was written Mr. Moffett has resigned his position with the C. & O. railroad and has accepted a position with the Black Fork Coal Company in the capacity of manager.

Charles E. Molster

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, November 21, 1862, the son of Henry Molster and Susan (Bennett) Molster. He was reared in this city, completed the full course of the public schools, and graduated from the High School in 1880. He was married June 3, 1885, to Helen Findlay, daughter of Alexander W. and Susan Lawson Findlay. They have six children: Ralph Robinson, Mary Helen, Elizabeth Findlay, Jean Lawson, Charles Bennett and William Alexander. Mr. Molster served six years with the Adams Express Company, one year in the local office and five years in the auditor's office at Cincinnati. He was in the law office of the editor of this work for over ten years, and for the past two years, from June 4, 1900, he has been in the United States Census office at Washington, D. C. He resides in Brookland, D. C. Mr. Molster is a member of the First Presbyterian church at Portsmouth, Ohio. His military service was limited to the two weeks campaign of the Ohio National Guard at Wheeling Creek and Stillwater valleys during the coal strikes of 1894, as a member of Company H, 14th regiment, O. N. G. He is one of the permanent census bureau at Washington.

Samuel Monroe

was born February 21, 1841, in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, and has lived there most of his life. His father's name was Aaron Monroe, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Marshall, a daughter of Samuel Marshall, Jr., who has a sketch herein. The great-grandfather of our subject was Samuel Marshall, Sr., a Revolutionary soldier. Samuel Monroe received a common school education in Harrison township, and worked on the farm while a boy. In 1867, he began contracting, which he has continued ever since. Among the first work he did, was the Portsmouth and Harrisonville turnpike, and the retaining wall at the foot of Second street. In 1874 he built the bridges at Turkey creek and Bear creek. He enlisted in the 140th O. V. I., Company I, as a private, at the age of twenty-two, May 2, 1864, for one hundred days, and was mustered out with the Company September 3, 1864.

He was married in July, 1860, to Miss Mary J. Dever, daughter of Michael Dever, of Harrison township. They have had the following children: Laura B., married George Luther, a farmer, resides in Madison township; John R., married, lives in Harrison township; Emma, married Charles Frowine, stock holder in the Smith Lumber Co., resides in Portsmouth, Ohio; David, died in infancy; Sarah C., married John Watkins, a foreman in the Excelsior Shoe Factory, resides in Portsmouth, O.; Clara May, died at the age of twelve years; Fannie, died in infancy; Ollie, died in childhood; Gilbert, married, lives in Portsmouth, O.; Kendall and Dessie, at home. Mr. Monroe is a democrat in his political views. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Scioto Post, G. A. R. at Harrisonville. He possesses the confidence of all who know him and is noted for his integrity and fair dealing.

Joseph C. Montavon

was born March 19, 1842, in Canton of Berne, Switzerland, the son of Peter Ignatius Montavon, a well to do peasant of west Switzerland, and Catharine Erhard, daughter of Joseph Erhard, a shoemaker. Our subject had three brothers and four sisters. He came to America and landed at New York, May 17 1852, and went to Vevay, Switzerland county, Indiana where his father died July 18, 1852 at the age of thirty-seven, having been killed by lightning while in the field working. His mother took him from there immediately to Stark county, Ohio, where they remained a short time, and then came to Scioto county in 1856 and located about two miles from French postoffice on Pond creek.

He received his early education in the public schools of Switzerland and afterwards attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio. He had learned enough English and knowledge of the common branches to teach school. He taught school for twenty-five years in Scioto county, twenty-three in Rush township and two years in Union township, which speaks well for his success as a teacher. He was a member of the National Guards at the time of the Morgan Raid. He has been a Democrat all his life but not much inclined to politics. He served as Justice of the Peace in Union township and also in Rush township. He served as Clerk of Rush township one term, and has been postmaster at French since 1882. He holds to the Catholic faith. His certificate of baptism bears date March 19, 1842. He is a member of the Holy Trinity church on Pond creek and has been a worker in the Sunday school for thirty-six years.

He was married August 8, 1874 to Catharine J. Duplain, a daughter of Francis Duplain an iron worker, who came to Portsmouth about 1872 from Switzerland. By this marriage they have eight children, three sons and five daughters, all living: Josephine, Mary, Margaret, Albert, Victor, Winnibald, Rosalie and Louisa. Mr. Montavon is one of the most respected and esteemed citizens of the county.

James Montgomery

was born May 3, 1842 near Wheelersburg, Ohio. His father was William Montgomery, by occupation a miller, and his mother's maiden name was Nancy Beloit, a daughter of Walter Beloit of Northampton, Virginia. She died Jan. 3, 1890 in her ninety-second year. His father was a native of Scioto county, and was born at Burke's Point, and died April 6, 1869, in his seventy-first year. His grandfather, also William Montgomery, was one of the first settlers in the county. He was an expert hunter and spent a great deal of his time in the county in hunting game for the French settlers in Green township. He also built the Giant Oak Mills, now owned by George Dixon.

Mr. Montgomery enjoys the distinction of having lived in the same community all his life time. He was a farmer's boy until August 5, 1861, when he enlisted in Company A, 33rd O. V. I., commanded by Captain Samuel Currie, and served three years. At the battle of Resaca, Georgia, May 16, 1864, he was wounded in the right wrist with a minie-ball. The wound was not apparently dangerous, but it gangrened and disabled his right arm for life. Every time he looks at his right hand and right wrist, he is reminded of his army service. Notwithstanding his desperately injured arm, he remained in the service until December 29 1864, when he was discharged. He came home and took up the life of a farmer, which he has followed ever since. He had one brother in the 39th O. V. I., who died in the service May 31, 1865.

Our subject has made his home with his sister, Mrs. Mary Montgomery, since 1861. Her husband was McLean Montgomery, who enlisted August 5, 1861, in Company A, 33rd O. V. I., was made a sergeant, August 27, 1861, and died November 1, 1864, of wounds received August 13, 1864, in a battle near Atlanta, Georgia. They had two children: Ella, wife of John Fritz, of Dogwood Ridge; Anna, married Byron James, living at Rockford, Illinois. He had another sister, Cynthia, who married Jesse Rowley, and died leaving a family. His sister Sarah, married Joseph Hopkins, and died leaving a family.

Our subject having lost a brother, and a brother-in-law by death in the service, and having been severely wounded and disabled from the effects of his wound, naturally is patriotic. He has had object lessons in patriotism which he can never forget. There is no citizen of Scioto county who is prouder of his army service, or has more reason to be. His heart is warm to every comrade of the Civil war. He is a man highly esteemed by his neighbors. He had no religious connections until about three years since, when he became a Seventh Day Adventist. He is a republican in his political views, and has been such all his life.

In his own neighborhood where he is well known, Mr. Montgomery is highly esteemed as an honest man and a good neighbor. Even the tongue of the gossiping busy-body can not find material here for evil speaking. He minds his own business strictly, religiously attends the services of his own church, looks after his farming interests and other business matters in a quiet, gentlemanly, unobtrusive way, and comes as near having absolutely no enemies as any man that can be found. Although he went to war in 1862, and carries a hand almost useless from the effects of Confederate bullets, yet he is a man of peace. He lives unmarried at his ancestral home on Dogwood Ridge, enjoying the products of his fertile lands, and surrounded on all sides by appreciative friends.

Charles Madison Mooney, M. D., was born February 22, 1870, at Wheelersburg, Ohio. His parents are John and Anatolie (Wolford) Mooney. His mother was a daughter of Joseph Wolford. Our subject was the eighth in a family of twelve children. He received his education in Wheelersburg, Ohio, and graduated in the schools there in 1889. Then he taught school for six years in Scioto county, four years of which was at the Ball school house, one year on the West Side and one year in Green township, above Powellsville. In 1895, he entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor and attended four years. He graduated in the medical course in 1900. In June, 1900, he began the practice of medicine at Wheelersburg and at Haverhill. In October, 1900, he located at Waverly and has practiced there ever since. He is a republican in his political views, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a Blue Lodge Mason, a member of Western Sun Lodge No. 91, at Wheelersburg, the Chapter at Ann Arbor Michigan, and the Council at Chillicothe.

Dr. Mooney is the fortunate possessor of a sunny disposition, a genial manner and good address which quickly wins the confidence and good will of every one he meets. This rare endowment combined with a stalwart frame and ambition for professional success is of most favorable augury for a high standard of excellence in his chosen profession.

Evan Emmanuel Moore

was born December 22, 1833, in Washington township, where he now lives. His father was Evan Moore. His mother's maiden name was Cynthia Pyles, daughter of John Pyles. His parents had two children: Clinton and our subject. His father was a farmer, and died in May, 1834, of the cholera, in Washington township. His mother died in 1859. He attended the district schools, and has always been a farmer. He owns 157 1-2 acres of land.

He was married the first time February 10, 1859, to Lavina Dole, and she died in September, 1866. By this marriage there were two children: Mary Elizabeth, who married William Vaughters, and died leaving two children; and James Moore, now in California. Our subject was married the second time to Lydia Mapes. They have eight children. Lavinia, married John Compton, and lives in Friendship; Enos, lives on the farm; Zora, married Harry Vaughters, son of George A. Vaughters; Maude, married Ed. Bodemer, and lives on Carey's Run; Ethel, Claude, Earl and John at home. Mr. Moore was first a whig, but voted for John C. Fremont and has been a republican since.

George W. Moore

was born November 28, 1827, in Harrison county, West Virginia. His father was Enoch Moore and his mother's maiden name was Rodah Ward. His grandfather was Enoch Moore, Sr., and a soldier in the Revolutionary war. His father died when he was five years of age and he was bound to Joseph Goodman, of West Virginia. He came to Ohio in 1846, and lived there till 1852, when he removed to Greenup county, Kentucky, and lived there until 1854, when he again removed to Scioto county, where he has lived since. Our subject served in Company F, 140th O. V. I. from May 2, 1864, to September 3, 1864, when he was mustered out with the company.

He is a republican in his views and is a believer in the Baptist doctrines, though not a member of the church. He was married March 30, 1847, to Susan Bennett, by whom he has two children: Ephraim now residing in Argentine, Kansas; and Jessie married to Rolla E. Bennett, residing near Harrisonville, Ohio. George W. Moore is well known in his county as an upright, honest man. As a contractor, he was fairly successful. His plain, blunt, sincere, kind-hearted ways endeared him to his friends.

John F. Morgan

was born June 9, 1842, in Cardiganshire, Wales. His father was John D. Morgan, and his mother was Margaret Evans. They had eight children, of whom our subject was the fifth. His father was a hatter by occupation. The family left Wales in 1848, and located in Madison township, Jackson county, where John was reared on a farm until he was eleven years old. In 1856, the family moved to Greenfield township, Gallia county, Ohio, where John remained with his father until 1864. He enlisted in Company E, 179th O. V. I. as a private, September 2, 1864, for one year and was discharged June 17, 1865. The entire service of the regiment was at Nashville, Tennessee.

In 1865, at the close of the war, he returned home and determined to get an education. He engaged in farming and attended school at Ewington, Ohio, for seven terms. He taught school for two years, one in Gallia and one in Lawrence county. He went to Duff's College at Pittsburg and learned book-keeping. From there he went to Olive Furnace and took charge of the furnace store and did part of the book-keeping. He came to Portsmouth, January 1, 1873, and commenced to keep books for John Jones, the plumber. He was with him until 1880. He went to Jackson and was engaged there in the Tropic Iron Company. He remained with them two years, and came back to Portsmouth, and kept books for the Portsmouth Brewing Company, until 1884. In 1885, he returned to Jackson and became superintendent of the Tropic Iron Company at Oak Hill, and has been so engaged ever since. He was a stockholder and director of the Tropic Iron Company while it was in existence. He resides in Portsmouth, Ohio, at the corner of Eleventh and Lincoln streets, and returns home at the close of each week.

He was married to Jane Herbert, of Oak Hill, Ohio, November 19, 1874. His children are: Jane Herbert, at home; John Stanton, at home, graduated from the Rio Grande College in 1902; James, a book-keeper at Olive Furnace. He is a republican and a member of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal church.

Stout Morris

was born at Brownsville, Pennsylvania, February 21, 1816, the son of Benjamin Morris and Hannah Stout, his wife. In 1828, he came to Ohio with his parents, floating down the Ohio river in a boat of his father's own construction, and settled at New Richmond. There he grew to manhood, receiving his education in the public schools. His father was a blacksmith and iron-worker, but the son early developed a talent for machinery. He soon became a skilled artisan, millwright and draftsman. He had few, if any, superiors in this region as a millwright, and his skill in this line was in great demand from central Kentucky on the south, to Put-in-Bay on the north. Along about 1840, Mr. Morris went from Rockport, Ky. where he was at work at his trade, to Lawrenceburg, Indiana. There for some time he was engineer of a large distillery and flour mill combined, but 1850 found him back to New Richmond. March 31, 1858, he came to Scioto county to superintend the erection of the Davis distillery and flouring mill at Union Mills.

While his coming was for that purpose solely, events so shaped themselves that he made the West Side his permanent home. At Lawrenceburg, Ind. he first met Miss Josephine McQuiston, who was born at Cincinnati, the very year Mr. Morris, a lad of twelve years, came to Ohio. On January 8, 1844, they were married and for forty-eight years their lives were as one. She survived him and resides at the old homestead on the West Side. Mrs. Morris's father, John McQuiston, was born in Scotland. He was a cousin of Gov. Thomas Hendricks of Indiana. Her mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Scott was a cousin of Gen. Winfield Scott. Mr. and Mrs. Morris had ten children. Two, Albert S., and Armel died in infancy, and one, Louisa R., died at the age of nineteen. The others are still living. They are: John M., who now resides at Columbus; Mrs. Josephine Calver, widow of the late Timothy Calver; Mrs. Amanda Calvert wife of Thomas G. Calvert of the West Side; Miss Luella and Harry R. (whose sketch appears elsewhere); Mrs. Clara Cummings, wife of A. J. Cummings of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Nora M. Ball, wife of Judge Harry Ball, of Portsmouth. John M. Morris, the oldest child was but sixteen years old when the Civil war broke out, but he enlisted in Battery L and served three years.

In politics Stout Morris was an ardent republican. He never aspired to political office and the only position of public trust he held was that of school director. In religion, he was a firm believer in the doctrines of the Baptist church and he gave much of his life and efforts to the up-building of that church. Mr. Morris died September 23, 1890. He was a man of large ability and counted among his intimate friends and associates, many of the prominent and influential business and professional men of this community. His many noble acts, his constant regard for the advancement and welfare of others, his many kind words and deeds secured him the affection of the people. The influence for good that he then had upon his community lives and is felt today.

Harry Robinson Morris

was born January 17, 1861 in Washington township. His father was Stout Morris, and his mother was Josephine McQuiston. He is the eighth of the eleven children of his parents. He was educated in the schools in his vicinity, and in the Portsmouth schools. At the age of eighteen, he went into the employment of Davis & Co. as a dry gauger at the distillery and was employed there for three years. At the age of twenty-one, he went into the store of Davis & Son at Union Mills, and was in that employment for three years. For one year more, he was with Spellacy & Company, contractors. He then became a farmer and has continued such ever since. He was married November 15, 1888, to Minnie Wilkins, the daughter of the late E. P. Wilkins, of Rush township. They have three children: Ethel, Inez and Alma. They lost one son, Harry in infancy. Mr. Morris is a republican. He is a member of the Baptist church, in Portsmouth, Ohio. The only order he belongs to is the A. O. U. W. Mr. Morris is a man of sensitive nature and deep feeling. He is of the strictest integrity—faithful and true in all things. His word is as good as his bond, and the latter is good for any amount for which he will give it. He would make no obligations he could not pay. His convictions are clear strong and well-defined; accommodating and obliging, it is impossible for him to do too much for his friends.

Albert R. Morrison

was born July 23, 1846, in Rockville, Adams county, Ohio. His father was David Morrison, and his mother's maiden name was Martha Mitchell, a daughter of Judge David Mitchell, formerly an Associate Judge of Scioto county. When he was five years old his parents moved to Covington, Kentucky, and he resided there until the year 1859. In 1859, his parents moved to the farm, where he afterwards resided and where he died.

He attended school while in Covington and at the Elm Tree school house until he was eighteen years of age, when he entered the military service of the United States in Company D, 173 O. V. I., on August 25, 1864. He was appointed Second Lieutenant Sept. 17, 1864, and was promoted to First Lieutenant Dec. 14, 1864, and mustered out with his Company June 26, 1865. When he returned from the service, he remained on the farm with his mother, then a widow, until he was married, February 1, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth McMasters, a daughter of James McMasters of Sandy Springs. He continued to reside on his mother's farm until 1875. In the fall of that year he began to travel as commercial salesman for J. L. Hibbs & Co., and then moved to Portsmouth. He resided in Portsmouth, Ohio, until July, 1864, employed as a salesman for Hibbs & Co., in the business of selling shoes, and a part of the time he was a partner.

In the year of 1884, he returned to the home farm in Nile township, and at the same time began as a commercial salesman with J. W. Thorne & Co., of Cincinnati in the shoe business. He resided on the farm until the spring of 1894, when he removed to Cincinnati and resided on Walnut Hills until 1898. He returned to the farm in 1899 and lived there until his death. He remained with J. W. Thorne & Co., until 1894, and then went into partnership with D. B. Sachs, in the firm of Sachs, Morrison & Co., in the clothing business. He was in that business until 1898, and then traveled for the firm of Stern, Auer & Co., in the clothing business, until the fall of 1899, when he gave up business as a commercial traveler.

About November 1899, he developed symptoms of Bright's disease, which caused his death on November 13, 1901. Mr. Morrison was a man of great industry, energy and enterprise. He had one of the largest and finest farms in the Ohio valley; and had placed on it a large, convenient residence. He was a man full of enthusiasm for everything which he undertook. He could have remained in the occupation as a commercial salesman as long as his health would have permitted and could command a handsome salary at any time. He had a wonderful influence over the men connected with him by business relations. As a farmer he was energetic and tireless. An inspection of his lands would demonstrate to anyone that he was a model farmer. He was a most excellent neighbor, a good friend and a good citizen. In his politics he was a republican, but never sought office nor would accept one. In his religious views he was a Presbyterian, and a member of the Sandy Springs Presbyterian church from 1870 until his removal to Portsmouth. In the latter city he was connected with the Second Presbyterian church.

He left quite a large family. His oldest son, William Kepner was born Dec. 14, 1870, and had grown up to be one of the finest young men in the county. He was taking care of his father's farm, and was conducting it in the very best manner. He was an active, energetic, enterprising, young man, respected and admired by all who knew him. On July 8, 1894, he was accidentally shot in the head by a farm hand with a Flobert rifle and died within twenty-four hours. At the time of his death he was engaged to Miss Alwena Caden. Our subject had one other son, his youngest, Roy, who died Jan. 28, 1897, aged ten months and fifteen days. His other children were daughters as follows: Martha Bell, widow of Dr. Charles Adams of Vanceburg, Kentucky; Susan Beard, wife of Morris Coe, residing in Nile township; Blanche, wife of Dr. Joseph C. Williamson of Sciotoville; Fannie, Annie and Bessie, residing at home with their mother.

James H. Morrison,

the third son of David and Martha Mitchell Morrison, was born at Covington, Kentucky, June 18, 1851. When he was six years old the family returned to the old Mitchell home in Nile township, Scioto county, Ohio. He attended school at Elm Tree school house and obtained his education there. He was a traveling salesman, and began as such in 1880 for J. L. Hibbs & Company, of Portsmouth. He traveled for them two years, then with McFarland, Sanford & Company, of Portsmouth, Ohio; for Vorheis, Miller & Rupel, of Cincinnati, Ohio; for Jacob & Sachs, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and for Sanford, Storrs & Varner.

JAMES H. MORRISON.

James Morrison was a republican, but took no active part in political affairs. On November 3, 1874, he was married to Miss Ara B. McCall, daughter of Henry McCall, of Nile township, Scioto county, Ohio. There are two children living: Louise, aged sixteen and James Hines, aged twelve. His son, Henry McCall, volunteered in the Spanish War in April, 1898, in Company H, Fourth O. V. I. The regiment was sent to Porto Rico and when about to return, he was taken sick and died on board the Hospital ship Missouri October 26, 1898, and was buried at sea. He was but nineteen years old at the time of his death.

Our subject was attacked by Bright's disease in September, 1899. He suffered with it for two years and died September 23, 1901. He enjoyed the fullest confidence of all his employers. He was one of the best salesmen who ever followed that vocation. He was a good father and a good neighbor and his death was a great shock to all his friends and a great loss to all connected with him.

Andrew Jackson Morrow

was born in Brown county, Ohio, five miles north of Georgetown, December 25, 1853. His father was John W. Morrow, and his mother was Marilla Staten, daughter of George W. Staten, the mother of sixteen children, of whom our subject is the eldest. She is living yet in Brown county. His grandfather William Morrow came from Ireland. His paternal grandmother was a native of this state. His father was a farmer and died in 1901. Andrew was educated in the Georgetown schools up till he was twenty-one years of age. He was married July 18, 1813 to Elizabeth Ellis, daughter of Duncan Ellis. There were three children of this marriage, Carrie, the only one living. She was married to a Mr. Gould, near Feesburg, Brown county, Ohio. His first wife died on June 2, 1889 and he was married again to Miss Mary Ellen Wilson, in Scioto county. Since 1891 he has been in the livery and cattle business at Georgetown, Ohio, also at Otway and Rarden. He moved to Portsmouth, February, 1901, and went into the livery business at 531, Gallia street. He was in business there for one year and then went into partnership with Thomas Haley under the firm name of Morrow & Haley. In his political views, he is a democrat. He is a member of the Methodist church, of the Red Men and Odd Fellows.

was born at Blessington, county Wicklow, Ireland, January 21, 1834. His father, Edward Mulligan, was educated for the priesthood and was a student at Maynooth College. He was a very intelligent man and gave his son a taste for reading and good literature. Our subject was the third of six children, one son and five daughters. He received his education in Ireland. In 1847, he came to the United States and landed at New Orleans. He went to Cincinnati and his father went into a stove factory there. In 1852 he and his father came to Portsmouth and secured employment in R. Bell's shoe factory and worked with him as long as he run the factory. He was then in business with Ed Kenrick for a short time. He worked in the shoe factory Henry Padan started and from there went to work for Drew, Selby & Company and worked there until 1892 when he stopped all work on account of bad health.

He was married August 27, 1867 to Miss Mary Ann Bannon. He and his wife made a trip to Ireland in May, 1894. The people at his old home in Ireland were amazed at the memory he had of the events of his childhood. He was a communicant of the Roman Catholic church from boyhood. He and Mr. Stanton purchased the cemetery for the Holy Redeemer church. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, but afterwards was a democrat. He died December 31, 1895. He was a very witty man and a great reader of politics and history. He was a good and true friend, wherever he made one. He was intensely pious and greatly devoted to his church. To know him was to like him. He was very tender hearted and his sympathies were easily roused and interested. He was single-handed and simple-minded. Such a matter as overreaching a neighbor would never occur to him. He was plain and straightforward with every one. To him all things were pure and good and evil never had any place in his mind. His life was an example of what a Christian's should be.

Leonidas H. Murphy

was born in Green township, Adams county, October 16, 1847, son of David Whitaker Murphy and his wife, Cynthia McCall. In 1849, his father moved to Buena Vista, in Scioto county. He attended the district school until he was fifteen years of age, and had the advantage of the township library, kept at his father's home, and he read all its books. In 1851, he took his first lesson in merchandising in the store of Major W. C. Henry. In 1862, he worked on a farm for six months. In 1863, he was employed as a foreman by Caden Brothers for six months. On September 16, 1863, he came to Portsmouth and entered the house of C. P. Tracy & Company, wholesale shoe-merchants, and for thirty-six years, from that time to December 1, 1901 was connected with it. From 1868, he was a partner in the same house until December 1, 1901, when he retired and formed the Murphy Shoe Company with a capital of $60,000, of which he is the president, Arthur Murphy, his son, vice president and John M. Wendelken, secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Murphy has always been a republican in his political views but has steadily declined to be a candidate for any office. He never served in a public appointment, but that of jury commissioner of his county from 1894 to 1897. He has been a member of Bigelow M. E. church since his residence in Portsmouth. He has been a steward of that church for thirty years and superintendent of its Sunday school for four years.

He was married February 2, 1870, to Mary Katharine, daughter of the late Daniel McIntire, who in former years was a prominent contractor and builder in Portsmouth. He has four children, Laura, wife of Louis D. McCall, of Chicago; Dr. Charles T. Murphy of the same place; Arthur Lee, now in business with him, and Julia Alice, residing at home.

Mr. Murphy, while confined closely to his adopted city by his business, yet finds time to read much and keep thoroughly abreast with the times. He is a steady and hard worker in his business and in the activities of his church, but every summer he takes a vacation of two to four weeks in which he rests himself by following the pursuit of fishing. He is an enthusiastic disciple of Isaac Walton.

Mr. Murphy believes that the highest duty to man is to perform well, every day, and from day to day, the obligations before him in business, in society, in the church and in municipal and state affairs. In following this guiding principle for over thirty years, he had aided in building up one of the most substantial business houses in the state. In following up this principle in the church, he has been an important factor in maintaining one of the most flourishing Methodist Episcopal churches in the country, and for himself has established a character in business circles and in the state, of which both he and his associates in business, his friends in the church and his fellow citizens may well be proud. In all matters, his word is as good as his bond and the latter is equal to the gold standard all the time. [Since the above was written Mr. Murphy has been compelled to retire from active business life on account of failure in his health caused by overwork. He still retains his former interest in the Murphy Shoe Company which is managed by other members of the company.]

son of John C. Musser and Isabel E. Jones, was born September 28, 1856, and has resided all his life in Portsmouth. His grandfather, John Musser, came to this city from Pennsylvania in the early part of the century. The subject of this sketch was educated in the public schools of Portsmouth, graduated from the High School with the class of 1875. At the age of nineteen, in the winter after his graduation he began teaching school, his first year's work being in Greenup county, Kentucky. The two years following he taught in Green township, Scioto county, and the next year, 1878-9, he taught at the historic "red school house," just east of Portsmouth in Clay township, closing his career as a teacher in 1880 as principal of the High School, at Hamden Junction, Vinton county.

From the time of giving up school work until the spring of 1881 he was employed in newspaper work as a reporter and compositor. In April, 1881 he became deputy under George L. Dodge, County Auditor, serving in that capacity until September, 1887, at which time he assumed the office of Auditor, having been elected the previous year as the Republican candidate over Laban W. Elliott, the Democratic candidate. Re-elected Auditor in 1889 over Wesley Reddish, he completed his second term in that office in 1893.

During his service as deputy and as Auditor, Mr. Musser devised and put into use entirely new systems in the management of that office, and in connection with the County Treasurer, Charles Kinney arranged a system of accounting between the Auditor's and Treasurer's offices. To such an extent was the work of the office systematized by him, that at the completion of his term the Auditor's office was regarded as a model for the State, and largely to the methods inaugurated by Mr. Musser, and which have been continued by his efficient successors, is due the fact that the offices of the County Auditor and County Treasurer of Scioto county are regarded as probably the most systematic and best conducted offices in the state. In addition to this, in connection with the County Commissioners, he devised the plan of funding the bonded indebtedness of the county, making a levy for the annual payment of a portion of the debt, the continuance of which plan to the present time, has resulted in the payment of the entire indebtedness of the county.

In 1893, Mr. Musser was elected to Council from the Sixth ward. Prior to the expiration of his term the Seventh ward was constructed of territory embracing his residence, and at that time, having engaged in newspaper work, he declined a re-election. Immediately after retiring from the Auditor's office Mr. Musser engaged in newspaper work, purchasing the Portsmouth Tribune. This proved an unprofitable venture, and after three years, in January, 1897, the control of the paper was sold to J. E. Valjean. In the years 1897 and 1898, Mr. Musser was employed as expert accountant by the Auditor of State, making an examination of the county offices of Holmes county, which resulted in disclosures causing the County Auditor of that county to become a fugitive from justice.

In 1899, Mr. Musser prepared the maps of the city of Portsmouth, and of the portion of Scioto county east of the Scioto river for the decennial appraisalment of 1900, and has since followed up the work of map making and preparing abstracts of land titles in which work he has become an expert. In addition to this, he is entrusted with the large property interests, in this city and county, of a number of non-residents. He has a pleasant suite of offices at 48, West Second street, corner Washington.

On December 29, 1885 Mr. Musser was united in marriage with Elona R. Oakes, the youngest daughter of Joshua Oakes, the drain-tile manufacturer of Haverhill, and now resides with his wife and two daughters, Ethel and Isabel at 135 West Fourth street, Portsmouth, O.

Joseph L. Myer

was born July 9, 1876 in the city of Portsmouth, Ohio. He is the son of Jacob Myer, now deceased, and Rosa (Loeb) Myer, both of whom were born in Rhenish, Germany. His boyhood was spent at Portsmouth attending the Primary, Grammar and High Schools there and he was graduated from the last named at the age of seventeen, with the highest percentage ever attained by a student at that school. Immediately upon graduation from the High School, he removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, with his mother and sister. He entered the Cincinnati Law School, completing the three years course in two years and was graduated in 1896, receiving the highest percentage of the class, at the same time being the youngest, 19 years of age. Compelled to wait two years before being admitted to the bar, because of his being under twenty-one, during the interval he was associated with Judge Clement Bates of the Cincinnati Bar in editing the Revised Statutes of Ohio; and was sole editor of the second edition of the same. He is now practicing law in Cincinnati as the partner of Judge Clement Bates, under the firm name of Bates & Myer. Mr. Myer is a man of extensive reading, both in and out of his profession, with a memory of great retentiveness united with unusual analytical and practical powers. He is already recognized as one of the most thorough lawyers of the younger bar of Cincinnati, of prominent ability and untiring energy, and he is winning ever year a more and more responsible class of business and a brilliant future is anticipated for him by his brother lawyers.

Robert Curtis Myers

was born April 5, 1866 at Curlsville, Pennsylvania. His father was Miles Ross Myers, and his mother's maiden name was Jane Henderson. His parents had five children of whom our subject was the second. He lived in Pennsylvania until he was sixteen years of age. He attended the common schools there, and at the Ohio Normal University, at Ada, Ohio. He graduated in the scientific course in 1886, and in the law course in 1889. In the year 1888, he taught school in the state of Mississippi. He was married December 31, 1888, to Minerva Parker, daughter of A. C. Parker, of Cambridge, Ohio. She died May 23, 1902.

Mr. Myers located in Greenup, Ky., in August, 1890, where he was the superintendent of the schools in Greenup for three years, and was also County School Examiner for the same time. He was admitted to the bar in Kentucky in 1892. He began his practice in the same year and formed a partnership with Col. W. J. Worthington, afterwards Lieutenant Governor of the State. He was elected to the Legislature in 1897, as a republican, by a majority of 160 votes to represent Greenup county. He served but two years. He was chairman of the Republican House Caucus. He was on the committee of Judiciary, Kentucky Statutes, Court of Appeals, State Prisons, House of Reform, and the Circuit Court. He left Kentucky in March, 1898, and located in Portsmouth, Ohio, to practice his profession. From May 18, 1902, until September 16, 1902, he was absent from the city of Portsmouth, in the west, and his sketch, not being furnished in that period of time, does not appear amongst the Bar of Scioto County, where it should properly appear, and for that reason it appears here.

General William Holt Nash

was born June 22, 1834, at Gallipolis, Ohio, the eldest son and child of Hon. Simeon Nash and Cynthia Smith, his wife. His father was a native of South Hadley, and his mother was a native of Granby, Mass. They were married in 1832, and he went to Gallipolis, and she followed the next year. Our subject attended the public schools in Gallipolis and Gallia Academy until 1849, when he went to Mariette College and remained until the fall of 1852, having completed the sophomore year. His health broke down and he was compelled to leave, and in February, 1853, he went into Derby's book store in Cincinnati, and was there until June, 1856. In October of that year, he started a book store of his own in Gallipolis, and remained there until 1859.

He was married to Sarah S. Forsythe, daughter of James Forsythe, January 1, 1857, at Junior furnace, by the Rev. Dan Young. There was but one child of this marriage, a daughter, Catharine, born July, 1858.

In the spring of 1860, he moved to Empire furnace, and taught school there until the spring of 1861. On June 1, 1861, he entered the United States service as telegraph operator at Parkersburg, W. Va. On June 22, 1861 he became a confidential cipher operator for General McClellan, and went to Clarksburg. He served in this capacity until November, 1862. On November 28, 1862, he was commissioned a Commissary of Subsistence of the Volunteers, with the rank of Captain, and served as such until December 15, 1865. He was then appointed as Commissary of Subsistence in the Regular army, with rank as Captain, until July 14, 1890, when he was promoted to Major. He was made Lieutenant Colonel June 10, 1896, and was made Colonel and Assistant Commissary General, February 4, 1898. He was promoted to Commissary General of Subsistence with the rank of Brigadier General of the United States army, April 21, 1898.

He retired May 2, 1898, and has been residing in Columbus, at No. 43, Lexington Avenue, ever since. During the Civil war he served with Gen. Sheridan and Gen. Crook, in the Army of the Cumberland, in the entire Chickamauga campaign, was ordered to West Virginia, April, 1864, and was in Hunter's Lynchburg campaign. After that he was in the Kanawha valley until November, 1865, when he served in Texas, from March, 1866 until March, 1868. He was chief commissary of the department of Texas. From 1867 to 1869, he was in Washington city. From 1869 to 1870, he was purchasing commissary of subsistence in Cincinnati. He also served in New Mexico, Omaha, Nebraska, Louisville, Ky., Cheyenne, Wyoming, Boston, Mass., from 1880 to 1881. In Washington city from 1882 to 1884 in New Orleans from 1885 to 1888, in Fortress Monroe in 1889. He then was sent to Vancouver Barracks, Washington, and was there from January 1, 1890, to April, 1897, and then at St. Louis from 1897 to April 21, 1898, and later in Washington city to May 2, 1898. He was then made Brigadier General without his request. When he was at Vancouver, he was chief commissary under General Elwell S. Otis.

His wife died in 1891, and he was married a second time to Mrs. Mary Maxon Wilson, February 22, 1892. She was the widow of Theodore Wilson, at Gallipolis, and a daughter of Dr. Darius Maxon, of Gallipolis, and a granddaughter of Gen. Louis Newsom.

Here is what a long time friend and intimate acquaintance of General Nash says of him, "He is slightly above average height, spare of person, grey eyes, with a philosophical, argumentative cast of countenance; a man of marked clerical and executive ability; of prepossessing manners, courteous and refined, and with a wonderful fund of information on all sorts of subjects, especially of a political or historical character; of fine education and thoroughly alive to all questions of the moment, whether of church or state; fluent of expression in either writing or speaking; most excellent company, humorous, instructive and entertaining, agreeable in temper, esthetical and tactfully discriminating in all the proprieties and amenities of social intercourse, a true believer in Christianity, a good friend with a good honest heart and stable in general character."

Here is what General J. F. Weston, Commissary General, says of him: "Genial and companionable as a man, he always gave a soldierly deference to his military superiors; vested at times with grave and pressing responsibilities his trust was always discharged with fidelity to the public interests."

He died December 2, 1902, at his home in Columbus, Ohio, of sciatic rheumatism. He was given military honors in his funeral and was laid to rest at Gallipolis, Ohio, among his people.

Green S. Neary

was born March 12, 1844, in Harrisonville, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Matthew Neary, a native of Ireland, and his mother's maiden name was Ann Vangorder. She was a native of New York. They were married in Tioga county, New York, and settled in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, in 1834. They had nine children, of whom our subject was the fifth. He received a common school education and was raised on the farm. He enlisted in Company F, 91st O. V. I., August 6, 1862, at the age of eighteen, for three years, and was mustered out with the company, June 24, 1865. He was not wounded but was captured at Winchester, Virginia, July 24, 1864, and was a prisoner at Libby, Danville, Lynchburg, and Belle Isle, and was then paroled to be exchanged.

For two years after the war, he followed the occupation of farming and then became a foreman for contracting on public works and was that and a turn pike contractor much of the time until 1890, since then, he has been a farmer. He has been a trustee and assessor of Harrison township. He was elected county commissioner in 1899, and took the office in September, 1900.

In 1871, he was married to Hester A. Tibbs. He had a daughter Florence, who lived to be two years and eight months old. She died of typhoid fever, October 5, 1876, and his wife died on October 9, following. He was married a second time in 1889, to Lizzie E. Humphreys, a daughter of Benjamin H. Humphreys. They have one child, Edna, aged ten. Mr. Neary was a democrat until 1883, when he became a republican, and has been such since. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Shumway chapel. He is a Mason. He is a liberal-minded public-spirited citizen. He is practical in all his ideas, and as a public officer he does the best for the public interests, knowing, as he does, all about the construction of public roads, from having built them, he knows how, as a public officer, to best preserve them.

John Neill

was born June 2, 1823, in the county of Londonderry, Ireland. His father was James Neill, and his mother's maiden name was Jane Gordon. His parents were natives of Ayrshire, Scotland. His father and mother had five children, Thomas who located in Wheeling; James; Nancy, who married James Brown, of Philadelphia; Jane, who married Arthur Glasgow, of Guernsey county, Ohio; and John our subject. His father died when he was eight months old. At the age of five years his mother took her children and located at Wheeling.

Mr. Neill attended school at Wheeling until he was sixteen years of age, when he learned to be a moulder. He was in the apprenticeship for three years under John Woodcock. At the age of twenty, he went to Zanesville, and worked one year. August 18, 1844, he was married in Zanesville, Ohio, to Elizabeth Richardson, daughter of Jeremiah D. Richardson and Rebecca Pritchett Richardson. She was born November 2, 1825. Immediately after they were married, he bought a foundry at Laurel, Indiana. He remained there two years, and then sold out. He located in Cincinnati and worked in the W. C. Davis foundry, as foreman for five years.

He came to Portsmouth in the spring of 1853, and purchased the Chandler foundry, located on the northeast corner of Massie and Front streets. He formed a partnership with Henry Eberhart, under the firm name of Neill & Eberhart, and they continued the foundry business as partners until 1865, when he sold his interest to Eberhart. At the same time he bought out the business of Harris and Terry, on Chillicothe street, just north of the present opera house. He carried on that business until 1870, when he bought the foundry site on Seventh street, and built a foundry there. Mr. Neill bought the Dr. Hempstead property in 1862, and resided there the remainder of his life.

He has had the following children: Anna, John Gordon, George Washington, William Edward, and Lizzie Richardson.

In 1889, Mr. Neill changed his business into a corporation, with a capital stock of $20,000. He was president until his death. After his death George Neill became the president and John Neill the secretary and treasurer. Mr. Neill's wife died September 13, 1897, and he died August 13, 1899. He was not a member of any church. His wife and daughters were members of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. In his political views, he was a republican. He was never a member of any fraternity, and always preferred to stand on his own merits. It will be fifty years the coming spring, since he started business in Portsmouth. Mr. Neill was a man who undertook to fulfill every duty before him, and he was a fair and typical representative of the north of Ireland Scotch-Irishman.

Charles J. Nelson

was born in Jackson county, Ohio, March 22, 1847. He is the son of Oliver J. and Martha B. (Kinnison) Nelson. His father Oliver J. Nelson was a soldier in Company B, 67 O. V. I. and died in the service, September, 1865, and was buried in the National Cemetery, at Stanton, Va. He took part in the battles fought near Petersburg, Virginia. The boyhood of Charles was spent on the farm. He received his education in the public schools of Jackson county. He came to Scioto county in 1877 and located in the north-western part of Madison township. He is a republican and a member of the Christian church. He was married September 9, 1875 to Mary J. Horton, of Jackson county. They have a large family of children. Arthur and Earl, the oldest sons, are two of the brightest young teachers in the county. Mr. Nelson is regarded as an industrious farmer, a kind and considerate neighbor and a most valuable citizen.

Andrew Jackson Newell, M. D.,

of South Webster, Ohio, was born in Jackson county, Ohio, May 4, 1839. His father was George Newell and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Stephenson, descended from the Stephensons of Virginia. Doctor Newell was reared on a farm till sixteen years of age; attended common schools till eighteen and afterwards attended the Jackson High School. He taught school for six years holding the highest grade certificate issued. His services were always in demand and he commanded the highest wages. In 1864 after six years teaching, he turned his attention to the study of medicine. He attended Ohio Medical College. He located at Mabee in Jackson county, in 1866, and practiced there for twenty-two years. He came to South Webster, April 16, 1888. He was elected Justice of the Peace in Hamilton township, Jackson county, in 1872 and held the office for seventeen years. He was township Clerk from 1878 to 1888. He was also a township Trustee and held other township offices. He has been a member of the village Council of South Webster for six years and is now holding that office. In politics, Doctor Newell is a republican.

He was married twice. His first marriage was to Francis Buckley, December 31, 1862. To this union four children were born: Warren, a physician in Idaho City, Idaho, and Treasurer of Boise county; Mrs. Bell Ankrom, now in Manila, Philippine Islands; Mrs. Jessie Heisel of Cincinnati and Wilbur, clerk for the South Webster Hardware Company. His first wife died January 26, 1881. His second marriage was to Miss Jennie McCoy, September 29, 1881. They have one son, Guy, who is yet at home.

Doctor Newell began the practice of medicine without capital in 1866, and is now, not only a very prominent physician with a good practice, but is very well endowed with this world's goods. As a man, Doctor Newell, is an excellent example of the self-made type. His honesty, industry and pleasing manners have made him hosts of true friends and have won him the respect and esteem of the country for miles around. There is no favor he would withhold from a friend. He is a member of Western Sun Lodge, F. and A. M. No. 91 at Wheelersburg and of Oak Hill Lodge Knights of Pythias.

John Bennett Nichols

was born at Port Isaac, Cornwall county, England, in February, 1822. His father's name was Thomas Nichols, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Ivey. His father was a merchant. There were six children in the family: William, Thomas, John B., Samuel, Elijah, James, all sons, and all have lived in Portsmouth. Thomas Nichols the father brought his family to the United States in 1832 and located in Honesdale, Pa., where he tried farming. Our subject came to Portsmouth in 1844, before his father. He went into the furniture business as a maker of furniture. Riggs & Wilcox furnished the lumber and helped him. He learned to make furniture in Honesdale. He was in the business of making furniture forty years. Wm. E. Williams went in with him soon after he opened out in Portsmouth. Mr. Williams made chairs, and Mr. Nichols made furniture. He began undertaking at the same time; but all coffins were made by hand, and were never made until some one was dead and needed one. They were made chiefly of walnut boards. Ready made coffins and caskets were not used until about 1856. Our subject was in the undertaking business until he sold out to the Fullers, but afterwards continued the furniture business.

In 1871, he was elected Cemetery Trustee for a period of three years. January 31, 1871, the Presbyterian church presented Mr. Nichols with a silver service and a family Bible in consequence of his having been chorister for twenty-eight years previous. The Bible cost $22, and the silver service $500. Mr. Nichols was the leader of the choir of the First Presbyterian church for forty years.

He was married February 13, 1851 to Maria Merrill, only daughter of John Merrill. The following are the children: Charles M., engaged in the lithograph business in Columbus; John Belden, a farmer in Scioto county, Ohio, married Charlie Davis, who is deceased, and left one child, Charlie; Louis Moore is in business with his brother, Charles M., at Columbus. Mr. Nichols retired from business about 1898, and since then has lived a life of retirement and leisure.

Isaac H. Noel

was born April 6, 1840, a short distance north of the present city limits in Clay township, on the farm on which he still resides. His father, Solomon Noel, was a son of Philip Noel, who with Jacob Noel and Gabriel Feurt in 1816 purchased from the government a section of land about four miles north of this city. In the division of the section among themselves, Philip was allotted the southern portion which now comprises the farm of John Hogan and Michael J. Noel. Isaac grew to manhood on the farm, performing the arduous duties which such a life involves, and participating with enthusiastic vigor in such sports as the times afforded. These sports were chiefly hunting and fishing, and few if any of the residents, even the pioneers themselves, can claim a more varied or successful experience in these sports.

When the call to arms in the defence of the government came, he enlisted in Captain Jacob Caldwell's Company C of the 91st O. V. I. Upon the muster of the regiment at Camp Ironton, July 7, 1862, he was made a Sergeant which rank he maintained until February, 1864, when he was promoted to First Sergeant.

On December 2, 1864, he was made Second Lieutenant, and on May 31, 1865, he became First Lieutenant, and was assigned to duty in Company D of the same regiment. On October 29, 1864, he was stricken with typhoid fever and was sent to the hospital at Winchester, Virginia; later he was removed to the general hospital at Clairesville, Maryland, where he remained until January, 1865, when he rejoined his regiment at Martinsburg, Virginia. He was mustered out of the service at Cumberland, Maryland, June 24, 1865. From the time of his enlistment in the service until his muster out he was never off duty, excepting for the brief period of illness in the hospital mentioned. He participated in every skirmish and battle of his regiment, the most important being Cloyd Mountain, Lynchburg, Winchester and Cedar Creek. The numerous marches through Virginia and West Virginia on which he accompanied his regiment aggregate a grand total of 1,300 miles. He was always in the heat of battle, but was never wounded, although at the battle of Winchester his hat cord was shot away. On another occasion at the battle of Lynchburg, the hard-tack was shot from his haversack. At the close of the war, he was recommended by Generals Hayes, Coates and Lightborn for appointment to the Regular Army with rank of First Lieutenant, but he declined the service and returned to his home upon the farm where he has since lived the life of a frugal, industrious tiller of the soil.

On April 23, 1872 he was married to Mary Ellen Jones. He is the father of two children: Charles, who was a member of Company H, 4th O. V. I. of the Spanish-American War, residing with his parents, and Irma D. wife of J. K. Nolder, residing in Portsmouth. Mr. Noel is a man of firm, but kindly temperament, modest, unassuming, and commands the respect of all his neighbors.

Michael J. Noel

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, about one-fourth mile southeast of his present home on the Chillicothe pike, February 22, 1842. His parents were David and Nancy (Morgan) Noel. His mother was a native of Virginia. His boyhood and youth were spent in Scioto county. He received such instructions as was afforded by the country schools of that time and graduated in book-keeping from a commercial school of Portsmouth about 1862. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was for years superintendent of the Sunday school and church trustee. About 1876, he was associated with Doctor Beard in the drug business in Portsmouth. March 16, 1879 he married Alice Crain of Campbell county, Kentucky. She was the granddaughter of Ora Crain, a soldier in the war of 1812. His father, Leonard Crain, served in the Civil war in the 22d O. V. I. Mr. Noel resides on his farm where he has conducted a dairy for the past eight years. He has two children, David and Clarence F. He is a good citizen, esteemed by all who know him. In his disposition he nearer resembles his kinsman, Jacob P. Noel, to whose sketch the reader is referred.

was born January 5, 1838, in a log cabin near where P. W. Noel now resides. He was a son of Solomon Noel and Mary Huston his wife. Her father was Joseph Huston, a pioneer of Scioto county. His grandfather was Philip Noel, a native of Virginia. Our subject had a common school education but he made the most of it and studied by firelight. He has been a farmer since he was nine years of age. He is not a member of any church but claims to be the best christian on the turnpike in his vicinity. As a boy he attended Sunday school for three years without losing a Sunday and won a prize for committing the greater part of the New Testament to memory. Mr. Noel's religious ideas are based on the Golden Rule, which he tries to live up to and his neighbors think he has succeeded. Mr. Noel has always been a liberal contributor to the churches and has uniformly favored public improvements. He has always been a public spirited citizen.

Mr. Noel was a republican until 1896, when he became a "free-silver" democrat, and at this writing adheres to it. He voted for William J. Bryan for President in 1896 and 1900. He never was a candidate for any office and never held any. He never served on a jury till April, 1901, when he was called on the grand jury. His fee for such service was the first public money he ever drew. Mr. Noel was not a soldier but his heart was with the Union cause. He volunteered in Captain A. B. Cole's Company in the Heavy Artillery in 1863, but was rejected on physical examination. He was told he would never see the age of thirty and would soon die of consumption, but the Doctor was mistaken for he is sixty-four past with as good a pair of lungs as anyone ever had.

Mr. Noel believes in honesty, not as a policy, but as a principle and lives it every day. He is highly esteemed by all who know him, if he is a bachelor. He has made his home with his brother Philip W. Noel, on the Chillicothe turnpike for many years. He is an example of a man who has lived at his birth-place all his life and maintained the esteem of his neighbors. He has never traveled, but is a great reader and well informed on current events. He is a good example of the American Citizen,— what he ought to be and what he is.

was born in Buena Vista, March 1, 1859. His father's name was Samuel Nolder, and his mother's maiden name was Martha McCall, daughter of David McCall. Our subject was the oldest of a family of four children. He attended the common schools of Buena Vista until he was twelve years of age, and then he started to work on the farm. He worked as a farmer until he was sixteen years of age, and then he learned the cooper's trade with Jake Willey at Buena Vista. He worked with him for a year, and then went to work for himself. In 1877, he went to Blue Creek and remained five years with John Newman in his store as a clerk. In 1882, he came back to Buena Vista again and worked for John Miller in the quarry. He began to run stone a while, and in 1885 took up the carpenter's and blacksmith's trades and learned both at once. In 1893 he started a blacksmith shop of his own in Buena Vista, which he has conducted ever since. He is also a wagon maker and paints buggies.

He was married October 24, 1883, to Anna Catharine Sonne, a daughter of Catharine Sonne, a widow of Buena Vista. They have four children: Willie, aged eleven years, Anna, nine years, Ralph, seven years, Carl, five years. He lost two children at nine and eleven, respectively, and three died in infancy. He is a democrat in his political views, and always has been. He has been a member of the school board of Buena Vista for eight years. Mr. Nolder has the faculty of being able to take up any manual occupation and learn it. He is a good neighbor, a good citizen and is liked by all who know him.

Alfred Locklin Norton, M. D.,

was born at Bennington, Genesee county, New York, August 9, 1824, the son of Charles and Amy (Knapp) Norton. Dr. Norton was of French and English extraction, and belongs to the Norton family that appears in the New England states and New York. His genealogy is traced to the French family De Norville. This, during the centuries, becomes anglicised and shortened to Norville, Northtown and Norton. He was educated in his native state, attending school until he was eighteen years of age. At the age of twenty he was a district school teacher. In 1843 he entered the Cleveland Medical College and graduated in 1847, and became a successful practitioner in his profession. He endured for eighteen years, that hardest of all lives, that of a country doctor, through the districts of Gallia and Jackson counties, and twelve years of that was spent at Oak Hill, Jackson county, Ohio.

Ill health compelled him to retire from his profession; and he entered into a partnership with Mr. John Campbell, of Ironton, Ohio, for the manufacture of charcoal pig-iron, the firm being Norton, Campbell & Company. The other members of the firm were: Simon Drouillard and Joseph Stafford. Dr. Norton was engaged in this business at the time of his death. He was a staunch republican in politics, showing a keen interest in all affairs of state. He was a faithful member of the Bigelow Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Norton was married to Miss Emily Drouillard, of Gallipolis, Ohio, May 10, 1855, and was the father of three children: Charles Joseph; Florence, who married Henry W. Verner, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Alfred Francis. Dr. Norton died November 27, 1882. He was a man of fine personality and all men of generous and lofty natures, who knew him, loved and honored him. His body rests in Greenlawn cemetery, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Winfield Scott Nye,

druggist of Portsmouth, Ohio, is the architect of his own fortunes and has every reason to be proud of the structure he has created. At the age of thirteen he started out for himself as an errand boy in a drugstore in Portsmouth, and he has stayed by the city, and it by him, until he is now the proprietor of two of the most attractive drug stores in the town. He was born at Pomeroy, Meigs county, Ohio, the son of Nial R. Nye and Sarah (Bower) Nye. His grandfather Othello Radogney Nye came to Ohio, from Pennsylvania, but was a native of Scotland. This statement accounts for our subject's skill in piling up the "bawbees." The ideas of the first five years of his life were obtained in Pomeroy. Then his father removed to Racine, where our subject resided until he came to Portsmouth.

When he struck the town he began working for J. I. Mercer, doing whatever a boy could do in a drug store. He then formed a friendship for Mr. Mercer, which has continued to this time, but their positions are reversed. Now Nye is the proprietor and Mercer the clerk. He remained the first eighteen months of his life in Portsmouth with J. I. Mercer, and was then with Enos Reed for a few months. He tried Columbus, Ohio for six months, but came back to Portsmouth, and went in with Harry Greene. He remained with him about one year and then on August 14, 1889, opened up a drug store on the corner of Fourth and Chillicothe streets, which he has kept ever since. Ten years later he opened a drug store on the corner of Gallia and Gay, and in July, 1901, he opened a third drug store on the southwest corner of Sixth and Chillicothe.

He is a good illustration of what one man can do by applying himself to a single business. Mr. Nye has one vanity which the conscientious historian, cannot overlook or conceal. He has a weakness or fondness for Secret Societies, and Fraternal Organizations. In other words, he is a "joiner." He is a Mason of all the degrees to Knight Templar. He is an Elk, a Knight of Pythias, a Woodman and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Mr. Nye was married November 30, 1899 to Miss Floy Mildred Batey, daughter of Harry E. Batey of Racine, Ohio. He has two children, Rustin Win Nye, a son and Helen Floy Nye, a daughter.

He has advertised and is known by the name of Win Nye, and he has made it good to this date, and his friends believe he will to the end of the Chapter. He is one of the most active, energetic and industrious of the young business men of Portsmouth.

George S. Oldfield

was born April 17, 1830, on a farm about four miles north of Portsmouth, Ohio, on the Chillicothe pike. His father, William Oldfield, was born December 30, 1790, and was a native of New York. His mother's maiden name was Marie Hemstead. She was born September 2, 1794, in the state of Connecticut. George S. Oldfield received a common school education. He lived on the farm until about sixteen years of age. In 1850, he went to California, where he worked in the gold fields and remained five years, returning to Portsmouth in 1855. He engaged in the retail grocery business which he conducted successfully until his death, August 21, 1891. He was an active member of All Saints church, and a member of Aurora Lodge, F. and A. M. In politics he was a staunch republican. November 15, 1864, he was married to Eliza J. Baker, a native of England. She died October 9, 1898. They had six children, four of whom are living: William S., of Portsmouth, Ohio; Frank C., of Denver, Colorado; Robert B., of Portsmouth, Ohio; and George G., of Denver, Colorado.

George William Osborne, M. D., was born at Locust Grove, Adams county, Ohio, October 3, 1853. His grandfather Enoch Osborne, was a native of Loudon county, Virginia, and emigrated from there to Highland county, Ohio. He was a soldier of the war of 1812. His father, George P. Osborne, was a private in Company B, Fourth Battalion, Ohio Infantry, enrolled May 13, 1864, to serve three years. He was discharged July 12, 1865. By occupation, he was a farmer. His mother was Elizabeth Early. His parents were married at Locust Grove, in 1850. There were but two children of this marriage, our subject and a daughter Emily, who married Peter Carter, but is now deceased.

Dr. Osborne attended the common schools of the county and the High School at Hillsboro from 1873 to 1875. He began the study of medicine with Dr. James S. Berry, at Locust Grove, in 1870, and continued it from time to time until 1878, teaching school and attending school in the meantime. He attended lectures at the Cincinnati College of Medicine in 1877, and in the summer of that year began the practice of medicine with his preceptor, Dr. J. S. Berry, at Locust Grove, and continued with him for one year.

On April 18, 1878, he was married to Margaret E. Briggs, daughter of John K. Briggs, of Dry Run, Scioto county, Ohio. They have the following children: Edith Fern, Arthur Flint, and Arleigh B.

In February, 1879, he located at Cedar Mills in the practice of medicine. In the winter of 1882-3 he attended lectures at Columbus, Ohio, and graduated March 1, 1883. In May, 1889, he was appointed one of the three Pension Examining Surgeons of Adams county, and served as such till July, 1893. Dr. Osborne has always been a republican. In the fall of 1893, he was nominated by his party unanimously for Auditor of Adams county, and made the race against Dr. J. M. Wittenmyer. It was a campaign of money on both sides, and he was beaten by sixty-eight votes. On January 1, 1896, the doctor removed to Dry Run, in Scioto county, where he has resided ever since and has devoted himself exclusively to the practice of his profession. He is a member of the Adams County Medical Society and of the Hempstead Academy of Medicine of Scioto county. He is an Odd Fellow and a Red Man. Dr. Osborne is highly esteemed as an excellent physician and a good citizen.

John W. Overturf,

son of Conrad and Rachel Overturf, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, June 12, 1839. After finishing his course of study in the public schools of that city, he taught a school in Union, now Rush township, when but seventeen years of age. In 1857, he entered the banking house of Thomas Dugan and remained until the summer of 1862, when he entered the army as First Lieutenant in Company F, 91st O. V. I., and served until the close of the war. In the winter of 1862, he was detailed as Aide-de-Camp on the staff of Colonel John T. Toland, commanding a brigade in the Kanawha valley, and afterwards served on the staff of Colonel Carr B. White, Generals Isaac H. Duval and R. B. Hayes, being continuously on staff duty during the remainder of his army service. He refused promotion, but was breveted Captain and afterwards Major for gallant and meritorious services. General R. B. Hayes in sending the last brevet says, "Enclosed I send you your commission as Brevet Major. I secured it by simply telling the truth about you." General George Crook offered him an appointment as a Captain in the Regular Army and a position on his staff, but he refused it. Had he accepted the appointment then and received the ordinary promotions since, he would be a Major General now. He was in the battles of Fayetteville, Cloyd Mountain, Stephenson's Depot, Opequan Creek, Fisher Hill, Cedar Creek and others. At the battle of Cedar Creek his horse was shot from under him, but he himself was not captured or wounded.

After the war he was a farmer with his father in Rush township, for about one year. In 1866, he went into the banking business with Thomas Dugan, and remained until 1873, when Mr. Dugan died and the bank was closed. In 1875, he with a number of others established the Citizen's Savings Bank Company, which did business until the panic of June, 1893, when it closed business. He was president of the bank at the time of its failure, and was the largest creditor it had. He and his family represented between one-sixth and one-seventh of its total indebtedness when it closed.

In 1866, he married Ella Kendall, daughter of Jefferson and Elizabeth Kendall, both now deceased, to whom were born one daughter, who died at the age of eight years. One son, Alva Kendall Overturf, now seventeen, is attending the Ohio State University, at Columbus, Ohio. In 1899, he removed with his family to Columbus, Ohio, where he now resides.

He was always a republican and active in politics. He represented his ward, the Sixth, in Portsmouth, for seven years in Council, and as a member of the Board of Education fourteen years. He was an active member of the Board of Trade and at one time its president. He was interested in many manufacturing plants in Scioto county, which are now each doing a prosperous business. As a book-keeper he had no superior. As a business man he was always courageous and hopeful. He was always ready to take a business risk which looked well. While the Citizens Bank went down under his management, it was due to causes he could not anticipate or control. He has never lost his industry, energy or courage, and today is as actively engaged in business as he ever was. If any one can retrieve his fortunes, he will do so.

Thomas J. Overturf, of the firm of Gurney & Overturf, of Buffalo, New York, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, October 8, 1853. He is the son of Conrad and Rachel (Kendall) Overturf. His mother was a daughter of General William Kendall. When eleven years of age, he went with his parents to a farm in Rush township. He did not like country life and in the winter of 1869, came to Portsmouth and entered the High School, making his home with his brother John, and graduated in 1873. After he left school, he was employed as clerk in the dry goods store of Reed & Peebles on Market street, for one year. He then became a book-keeper in the Citizen's Savings Bank of Portsmouth, later being advanced to the position of cashier.

He gave up this office to accept a position with the White Sewing Machine Company, in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1877. He worked in the home establishment for three years and was then sent as their foreign representative to London, England. He carried an autograph letter of introduction from Ruth-erford B. Hayes, President, to James Russell Lowell, then United States Minister at the Court of St. James. He remained abroad for a year and was then transferred to Springfield, Mass. Leaving the employ of the White Sewing Machine Company, he spent one year in Kansas City. He also resided for a short time in Cleveland, Ohio, and St. Louis, Missouri.

He went to Buffalo, New York, in 1888, and entered the insurance and real estate office of Hume and Sanford. After the death of Mr. Sanford, he and Mr. Gurney purchased the business and continued it under the name of Gurney & Overturf. Mr. Overturf attends more particularly to the real estate branch of the business. He is a republican in national politics but in local matters is independent. On April, 27, 1887, he was united in marriage with Ida J. Wiggins, daughter of Doctor D. B. Wiggins, of Buffalo, New York, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio. Dr. Wiggins was born in Vermont, taught school there and afterwards studied medicine in Cincinnati. He began practice at Locust Grove, Ohio, and located in Buffalo, in 1849, where he now resides. He is now eighty years of age. Mr. Overturf resides at 16 and 18 Swan street, Buffalo, New York.

Mr. Overturf is of a very mild and liberal disposition, particularly amongst his friends. He never forgets any benefits received. He is an energetic, tireless worker in his business, and has been successful in everything he has undertaken. He reversed Mr. Greeley's advice, and went east and has grown up in the city of Buffalo, New York.

Charles Walter Padan

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, April 10, 1862. His father was John Padan, and his mother's maiden name was Hannah Craig. He was educated in the public schools of Portsmouth. At the age of fifteen, he entered the employment of the Portsmouth Shoe Manufacturing Company, in which his brothers were the leading persons. He continued in their employ, advancing by regular stages, until he reached the very important position of assistant superintendent of the company, which he held at the time they discontinued business in the fall of 1896. He then removed to Chillicothe, Ohio, took stock in and entered the employment of the Union Shoe Manufacturing Company of that city, as its superintendent, and is now the vice president of the company.

He is a republican and took an active part in the politics of Portsmouth and Scioto county prior to his removal to Chillicothe, having served as a member of the executive committee of both city and county for several campaigns. He belonged to the Ohio National Guard for three years. He was First Sergeant of Company H, 14th Regiment, and was with that company when it was called out in 1894, on account of the labor troubles. He was brought up in the Presbyterian faith and affiliates with that denomination. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of the World. He was married on September 15, 1885, to Miss Etta Carmichael, daughter of John and Viola (Brown) Carmichael. They have two children, Hannah Lola, born March 3, 1891, and Charles Donald, born August 16, 1894.

George Padan

was born in New York City, February 24, 1850. His father's name was John Padan, and his mother's maiden name was Hannah Craig, daughter of George Craig. His parents were both natives of Ireland, and were married May 24, 1849 in Ireland, emigrating to America within one month thereafter and landing in New York City August 9, 1849. Our subject is the oldest of seven children; six sons and a daughter. The father came direct to Portsmouth, Ohio, in September, 1849, and engaged in shoe making. Part of the time he worked for others and part of the time he had a shop of his own. In 1861, he started in business on Chillicothe street, and continued in the same vicinity until his death. He received all his education in Ireland, and was a whig. He was brought up in the Presbyterian church, in Ireland.

Our subject was married on October 28, 1875 to Elizabeth Ellen Lynn, daughter of John M. and Alice R. Lynn. They had eleven children as follows: Alice Craig, Anna Lynn, Martha Hester, Georgia, Elizabeth Ellen, Henry, Arthur Trustem, Robert Samuel and Frank Lynn. Two children Jeanette and John Lynn died in infancy.

Mr. Padan is a member of the Second Presbyterian church. He is a republican in his political views. He is a Knight Templar Mason, and is Secretary of all the Masonic bodies in Portsmouth: Calvary Commandery, Mt. Vernon Chapter, Solomon Council and Aurora Lodge. He was a member of the Board of Education of Portsmouth, from October 1, 1892 until April, 1896. He represented the Fifth ward. He was president of the board, 1894 and 1895.

Mr. Padan is a very modest man. He is a hard worker in any business he undertakes, and never shirked any responsibility. His work is always done on time and well done. As a friend he is reliable and true. He is a man of domestic habits, and has a very interesting family. He is a good student and enjoys the pursuit of knowledge. He has an excellent taste in science, literature and music. His qualities make him a good citizen. If Mr. Padan has one weakness, it is his attachment to Masonry. He is one of the most prominent and active Masons in the community. He has occupied the chief offices in all the local bodies of the fraternity, and is an authority on Masonic history and jurisprudence.

was born June 28, 1851. He was the eldest son of John Padan. He was educated in Portsmouth, Ohio. In 1874, he and his brothers, Albert J. and George started a shoe factory. They succeeded R. Bell & Company, organized in 1869.

In January, 1886, he was married to Miss Ada Kendall. He was a member of the Second Presbyterian church, a Knight Templar Mason and a republican in his political views. He was president of the Portsmouth Gas Company for several years. On September 30, 1895, in the evening about 6:30 p. m., he was sitting in his yard in apparently perfect health. Suddenly he complained of feeling very unwell and in one half hour he was dead. He was an active and energetic business man of high character and it seemed the irony of fate that he should have been snatched away, without notice, in the meridian of his days, when he had given so much promise of a long life of usefulness. He left two children: Charles Franklin, aged eleven years and Henrietta Craig, posthumous, born December 24, 1895.

was born May 10, 1823, in county Monaghan, Ireland. His father was Henry Padan, and his mother's maiden name was Ellen Harper. He was the youngest of a family of eight children consisting of six sons and two daughters. He worked at farming for his father until he was nineteen-years of age, when he learned the trade of a shoe-maker, at which he worked for seven years in Ireland. He was married on May 24, 1849 to Hannah Craig, of Kilrain, near the banks of the Blackwater. They left Ireland June 23, of the same year, taking passage at Liverpool on the sailing vessel, "Waterloo", and landed at New York on August 9, 1849, where he worked at his trade for one month.

He then started for Portsmouth, Ohio, where his oldest brother Henry was located, and arrived on September 19, 1849, where he followed his trade, being employed by Henry Bertram, Richard Lloyd, C. P. Tracy & Company and others, until September, 1861, when he engaged in the boot and shoe business on his own account on Chillicothe street. He continued the business for twenty-nine years, until his death. He was a republican in politics and a member of the Presbyterian church. He was the father of seven children: George, who resides in Portsmouth, Ohio; Henry, died September 30, 1855; Robert Samuel, who resides in Chicago; John William, died November 4, 1863; Albert Joseph, who resides in Los Angeles, California; Anna Elizabeth, wife of Dr. J. B. Stephenson, of Ripley, Ohio; Charles Walter, of Chillicothe, Ohio. He died on October 13, 1890.

John Frederick Paeltz

member of the firm of Pieper & Paeltz at Otway, Ohio, was born January 28, 1860 in Clermont county, Ohio, near New Richmond. His father was Julius Edward Paeltz and his mother Minnie Lavinia (Knoehl) Paeltz, both natives of Saxony, Germany. After their marriage they came to the United States in 1835 and settled in Madison, Indiana, and from there they moved to New Richmond, Ohio.

Our subject was raised on his father's farm and attended the country schools. He became engaged in the leaf tobacco business, in 1881, in Adams county, Ohio. In 1887, he came to Scioto county and formed a partnership with J. J. Pieper in the leaf tobacco business and they have conducted the business together ever since.

In 1890, he formed a partnership with Mr. Pieper in their saw mill and timber business. Their plant manufactured chair-stuffs, rim-strips and all kinds of quartered and plain lumber. The firm of Pieper & Paeltz also owns and receives a royalty from a large stone quarry near Otway, operated by Bodemer Brothers. He has been a member of the School Board of Otway and its Treasurer since 1892. He is a supporter of Republican doctrines and interests himself in local politics, but does not seek office. He was married December 24, 1894 to Nancy Jones, daughter of A. J. and Effie Jane (Cable) Jones. Their children are Nellie Philippine, aged seventeen; Charles Andrew, aged thirteen; Maud, deceased, aged four; Horace J., aged eight; Carlos Edward, aged six; Arthur C., aged four; and Leo Edward, aged two. Mr. Paeltz is a man with many agreeable traits, of unquestioned honesty and an ideal citizen.

Charles R. Patterson

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, October 17, 1857. He is the son of Thomas McNutt Patterson and Caroline (Clugston) Patterson, his wife. (A sketch of T. M. Patterson will be found herein.) He attended the Portsmouth schools and learned the book binding trade of his father. For the last fifteen years, he has been in business in Birmingham, Alabama, and is at present treasurer and manager of the Dispatch Printing Company of Birmingham, Alabama.

June 27, 1883, he was married to Florence F. Hite of Clasinda, Iowa. They have had three children; Louise died at the age of one year, the surviving children are Callie and Elizabeth. Mr. Patterson has one of the largest businesses of the kind in the South. The county in which he resides has 140,420 population and the city of Birmingham has a population of 38,415. Situated in the prosperous manufacturing portion of Alabama at a railroad center, the conditions were favorable to his building up a good business and he has done it wonderfully well. His training in the business in Portsmouth insured his success in Birmingham. He is one of the young men of whom Portsmouth may justly feel proud. When he has made his fortune and retired, he will doubtless return to the home of his youth, where he has a host of friends.

Thomas McNutt Patterson

was born at Steubenville, Ohio, Dec. 13, 1826. His father's name was James Patterson, a native of Maryland, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret B. Johnson. Our subject attended school at Steubenville until he was fifteen years of age. Then he went to learn the trade of book-binding in Steubenville with James Turnbull. After he had been with Mr. Turnbull a year, the latter sold out to Abner L. Frazer, and Mr. Patterson remained in his employment for five years longer, until 1847. He went to Cleveland in the spring of 1847 and worked for Sanford & Hayward, and remained there until the fall of 1850. He came to Portsmouth in December, 1850 and worked for Stephenson & Huntington, of Columbus. The building where he was employed stood where Ben Davis now has his clothing store; the old Methodist church stood just east of it. He worked with them until 1855, when he bought one-half of the bindery from Stephenson. From the time Mr. Patterson arrived here until his marriage, he was one of the young society men of Portsmouth.

On December 24, 1852, he married Miss Caroline Clugsten, daughter of John Clugsten. In 1862, he bought one-half of the Stephenson book store, which was conducted under the firm name of Stephenson & Patterson. In 1866, he dissolved with Stephenson, and went into business for himself, over the Johnson hat store, on Market street. In 1871, he moved to the McFarland building on Second street. In December, 1882, he added the making of paper boxes to his business. In December, 1883, his business was burned out, but like the Phoenix, it rose at once from its ashes. In 1885, he moved to Front street, below the Biggs House, in the Wise Building, where he remained until 1896, when he purchased the old Gaylord Rolling Mill premises, and moved his book-bindery and box-factory to that place, where it is now conducted.

He has conducted his business successfully ever since he has been in Portsmouth. His business in book-binding has very largely increased in volume with the increase of the city; and the business of making boxes is entirely a new feature introduced by the operation of the many shoe factories in Portsmouth. He has $7,000 worth of machinery, and employs about sixty hands. Mr. Patterson has his business in such shape that he can leave it to his sons, and take time off and enjoy himself. He takes many trips away, which he deserves, after sixty years of hard work. He takes pleasure in going to various places in the United States for recreation and enjoyment.

Mr. Patterson's first wife died in 1865. She was the mother of his sons: James and Charles R. He was married December 4, 1866 to Miss Rebecca Taylor, daughter of W. H. H. Taylor. The children of this marriage are: Margaret B., now Mrs. A. E. Everard; Thomas M., Jr., and Walter K. He lost three daughters and one son of his second marriage in childhood. His sons James and Walter K., are connected with him in his business. (See sketch of Charles R. Patterson.) His son, Thomas M., is now studying for the ministry of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Patterson was a whig during the existence of the Whig party, and since that he has been a republican. He has been a member of the First Presbyterian church since 1862, and since the organization of the Second Presbyterian church, of Portsmouth, O., he has been connected with it. Mr. Patterson is president of the Western Paper Box Manufacturing Association, comprising all the principal Paper Box Manufacturers in the district from Pittsburg to New Orleans and Omaha. He has been successful in business and deservedly so. He is a man of most sterling character, and no man enjoys the confidence of his associates in the business community to a greater extent than he does. He is most highly esteemed by all who know him as a true, Christian gentleman.

Charles Peach

was born October 21, 1838, in Montbelliard, Department de Doubs, France. His father was Charles Peach, and his mother's maiden name was Genevieve Surmann. His parents left France in August, 1849, and came to New Orleans in a sailing vessel. They sailed from Le Havre, and were on the voyage sixty days. The family remained in New Orleans with relatives for a month, and then came to Cincinnati, where they remained a month. His grandfather, Peter Surmann was in Cincinnati, when our subject left France. He had purchased forty acres entered by him at government price at Wallace Mills, and used to spend his summers there. He sent for his son-in-law, Charles Peach, Sr., to come to the United States.

Peter Surmann was a molder and machinist in Cincinnati and worked at his trade, for twenty-five years. He was a member of the National Guards and was with the re-enforcements sent to meet the shattered army of Napoleon after the battle of Waterloo. He had two sons in the French service. John was in the Cavalry and served seven years. Jacob was a member of the First Zouaves and served seven years in France and seven years in Algiers. He afterwards came to the United States and at one time was a member of the Portsmouth Fire Department. Sylvester the youngest son was the Captain of a British merchant vessel for many years. At the end of which time his employers pensioned him off.

Charles Peach, father of our subject, was also a machinist, as well as a clock maker. He located on his father-in-law's land in 1850, and remained there during his life time except 1852 to 1854, when he was at Scioto Furnace. He died at the age of seventy-five. Our subject attended school in France and some little in this country. He could speak and read in French when he came here. His name in French is "Peaché," pronounced "Pash." Our subject worked at Scioto Furnace as soon as he was able to work, and continued there off and on for years.

He enlisted in the home guard in 1861 and was released, and on August 11, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, 91st Regiment, O. V. I., for three years. He was in all the battles until he was wounded, at Stephenson's Depot, July 20, 1864; and was in the hospital at Cumberland, Maryland until he was discharged, January 21, 1865. After he returned home he engaged in farming.

He was married first in 1861 to Lovine Hopkins. They had nine children, seven living and two dead, as follows: Charles F., James, John W., Sarah Hughes of Wheelersburg, Ohio; Mary Jane Garey of Jackson Furnace, Ohio; Alexander, Jacob, Emma Maynet of Lois; George, the youngest, died in infancy and the oldest, Charles F., died in Nebraska. He was married the second time in 1885, to Elizabeth Garey, and they have the following children: Myrtie, Annie, Bertha, Josephine, Ellen, Eliza, Charles, Jesse and Geneive all living. Mr. Peach has always been a republican. He is a member of the St. John's Roman Catholic church at Lilly, Ohio.

John Adam Pfau

was born in the town of Schopflah, Wurtemberg, Germany, on February 28, 1839. His father followed the occupation of farming, but being desirous of having his son learn a trade, apprenticed him at the age of fourteen to a master baker, in a near-by city. Young Pfau served four years of apprenticeship and at once emigrated to the United States. After working at his trade in several cities, he reached Portsmouth and secured work with the late Jacob Oehlschlager, who at that time had a bakery on Front street, near Madison, where afterwards Pfau carried on business for himself. He worked at his trade in Portsmouth until October 18, 1861, when he enlisted in Company B, 56th regiment, O. V. I. organized by Capt. Charles Reiniger. He was discharged upon surgeon's certificate of disability, September 30, 1862. He returned to Portsmouth from the army.

In the fall of 1862, he returned to his old home in Germany and established a bakery in Bessengen, Wurtemberg. In 1865, he was married to Johanna Schott, at Bessengen. He had ten children: One died in infancy and the remaining nine are all residents of Portsmouth, Ohio. In November 1868, he returned to the United States, and like every one who has resided in Portsmouth, he had a special desire to return there and did so. When Mr. Pfau landed in Portsmouth with his family, he had but fifteen cents in money. He soon found friends who assisted him in starting a bakery in the building on Front street, in which he had served as a helper for so many years. His struggle was a hard one but he succeeded. Possessed of a Herculean frame, he endured work which would have broken down a man of less physical power. He would work in the bake-shop all day, making bread, and in the evening would fill a large basket with it and deliver it walking from house to house. Next he used a hand cart in his business for several years, until through economy and increasing trade, he was able to have a horse and express to deliver his goods. He remained on Front street until 1889 when he purchased property on Second street near Jefferson, where he continued the bakery until his death, which occurred on April 9, 1896.

Mr. Pfau had for his motto, "Be honorable." When his word was given, he held that as sacred as a written contract. He had the confidence of the business men of the city. Mr. Pfau left his family in a prosperous condition. His sons are all good business men and doing well. Three of them, Jacob, Adam, and John H. are conducting flourishing bakeries in Portsmouth. Jacob is at his father's old locality, 175 W. Second street, Adam in a new establishment at 97 East Eleventh street and John H. in the East End.

Adam Pfau

was born April 26, 1871, in the city of Portsmouth. His father was John Adam Pfau, a baker by occupation, and a native of Wurtemberg, Germany. His mother was Joanna Shott, also a native of Germany. They had nine children of whom our subject was the fourth. He attended the schools of Portsmouth until he was thirteen years of age when he began life on his own account, ultimately learning the trade of a baker, with his father. He went into business for himself in 1896 on Tenth and Chillicothe streets, and was there four years. In September, 1902, he moved to 97 east Eleventh street where he has an up-to-date bakery and confectionery, with all the modern improvements. He has been very successful in his business and very active and energetic. He was married November 30, 1897 to Rosa C. Lauffer, daughter of Fred Lauffer. They have two children, Mildred and Hazel. He is a member of the German Evangelical church.

Jacob Pfau

the son of John Adam Pfau, who has a sketch herein, was born September 12, 1873, in Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended the public schools and began to learn his father's business. At the latter's death, he took charge of his business at 175 West Second street, and has carried it on successfully ever since. Jake Pfau, as he is best known, is wonderfully energetic in his business. He has accumulated considerable property, and thus projected a modern up-to-date new bakery on Second street. He is a member of the German Evangelical church, and of the Odd Fellows' Camp of the Uniform Rank, and Knights of Pythias. He was married August 10, 1899, to Miss Amelia Ridenour, daughter of Wesley Ridenour. He has two sons, Earl and Jacob, Jr.

Charles Pfleger

was born near Mabee, Jackson county, Ohio, May 23, 1857. His parents, Philip and Magdalena (Gallbrunner) Pfleger came from Bavaria, Germany, in 1854. Mr. Pfleger came in a sailing vessel to New York. The trip occupied forty-eight days. Miss Gallbrunner left Bavaria, in December, 1853. Bad weather and the leaky craft delayed her, at Antwerp seven weeks and at Cowes, England, four weeks. She reached New York five months after starting. Mr. Pfleger went from New York to Philadelphia, by ship, and from there to Pittsburg by rail. He worked at his trade as cabinet maker, three weeks at Pittsburg and came to Portsmouth. They were married in 1856 and removed to Jackson county and soon after to Madison township of this county. Charles Pfleger attended the public schools of this county and obtained a fair education. He has always followed farming. He is a democrat and a member of the German Evangelical church. He was Assessor of Madison township in 1890, and has been a member of the School Board of the township for fifteen years. He married Mary E. Russ of Jackson county, June 1, 1879. She is the daughter of William and Clara Katharine Russ. They have four children, Henry, C. W., Ella Charlotte, Frank P. L. and Anna Katherine.

Lewis Pieper,

the son of John Frederick Pieper and Henrietta (Small) Pieper, both natives of Jackson county, Ohio, was born February 23, 1860. His grandparents were born in Germany and came across in 1835 and settled near Jackson Furnace. They were married on the water while coming over. Mr. Pieper was raised on a farm, received his education in the common schools and left home at the age of twenty-one. After hauling ore for a short time, he came to Scioto county and farmed with his brother, John J., who had preceded him. After two years, he became engaged in saw milling. He worked at this for two years and then went to Otway with his brother, John J., Ed and Frank Gilfilian and built a planing-mill. Shortly after the Pieper brothers bought out the other members of the firm and operated the mill until 1891 when they sold out. Pieper Brothers then became engaged in buying and selling timber. From 1892 to 1894, they were engaged with John F. Paeltz in the leaf tobacco business. In the spring of 1895, Mr. Pieper formed a partnership with John Whistler and bought a flour mill at Otway. In 1899, Charles Nort took the place of Whistler in the firm and in 1901, Nort dropped out and Dr. J. F. Gordon took his place. The mill is now run under the name of L. Pieper & Company. He is a member of the Christian Union church at Otway, and has been a trustee since the church was built. He is also a member of Smith Lodge, No. 337, K. of P. He was married December 8, 1891, to Mrs. Anna Jackson, daughter of Jefferson Mossbarger and Eliza (Johnson) Mossbarger. They have one child, Charles Herbert, born March 10, 1893.

John J. Pieper

was born November 1, 1842, at Jackson Furnace, Ohio, son of John F. and Henrietta (Small) Pieper. (See sketch of his brother Lewis Pieper.) He was reared on a farm and received his education in a country school. He came to Scioto county in 1887 and settled on Brush creek where he farmed until 1886. That year he went to Otway and with his brother Ed and Frank Gilfilian built a planing mill. Later Pieper brothers bought out the other members of the firm and assumed control and operated the mill until 1891, when they sold out. Pieper Brothers were then engaged in the buying of timber in tracts and having it sawed for market. From 1892 to 1894 Pieper Brothers and John F. Paeltz bought and shipped leaf tobacco. In 1900, he formed a partnership with John F. Paeltz in the saw mill and timber business. Their plant manufactures chair-stuffs, rim-strips and all kinds of plain and quartered lumber. Pieper and Paeltz own a large stone quarry near Otway and receive a royalty from Bode-mer Brothers who operate it. Mr. Pieper is a democrat, but voting is the extent of his activity in that line. He is a member of the Otway M. E. Church and has been a trustee of the church since its organization in 1898. He was married November 18, 1880 to Eliza Bradney, daughter of James M. and Elizabeth (Peters) Bradney. They have the following children: Daisy, married Dr. J. F. Gordon and is deceased; Forest Pearl, aged 13; Mamie Olive, aged 11; John Dale, aged 3.

Francis Marion Powell

was born Oct. 22, 1852, in Adams county. His father was William Henry Powell, and his mother's maiden name was Mary McGowan. His father was a native of Pike county, Ohio. His grandfather, John McGowan, was a native of Big Sandy. Our subject had a common school education, and was brought up a farmer, and has been one all his life. He started out for himself at sixteen years of age as a farm hand. He was married August 29, 1872 to Drusilla White of Brush Creek township, a daughter of Paul White. He came to this township in 1863, and worked for different ones, and has made his home in the township ever since. He bought the Isma Freeman farm in 1882, and has lived on it since 1887. He has one child living, James Edmund, and one daughter, deceased at three years. Mr. Powell is a democrat in his political views, and a member of the Christian Union church.

Ezekiel Powers, Jr.,

was born October 9, 1828, on Bonser's Run, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Ezekiel Powers, Sr., and his mother's maiden name was Jane Simpson. He received his education in Wheelersburg, Ohio. He learned shoe-making and the trade of brick-laying and plastering, and followed the latter for many years.

He owned 200 acres of land in Porter township and two houses in Sciotoville. He lived in Wheelersburg until 1889, when he removed to Sciotoville. He was elected township trustee of Porter several terms. He was instrumental in procuring an act of the legislature for taxation to purchase and sustain township cemetery property. He had the Wheelersburg cemetery surveyed, with his own hands planted many trees therein, and did much to beautify the place. He was always active in furthering the school interests of his township and was at one time a member of the Board of Education of the township. He at one time was treasurer of the special district. In October, 1875, he was the Democratic candidate for County Treasurer. The vote stood Powers, democrat, 2,794 and Benjamin R. Miles, republican, 3,483, majority, 689. Mr. Miles and he were warm personal friends and traveled the county in the same buggy. Their friendship continued during their lives.

On November 30, 1851, he was married to Sarah Jane Dean, in Wheelersburg. She was born June 7, 1829, near Wait's Station, Scioto county, Ohio. She died October 6, 1868. They had three children: Frank, Horace and Kate. Frank is a resident of Grayson, Kentucky. Mr. Powers married Mary Bagby, May 25, 1873, in Wheelersburg. One child was born to them, John W., March 26, 1874, who joined the United States Regular Army, 16 Regiment, Company F, and went to Cuba in the Spanish-American war. He contracted malarial fever during the Santiago campaign and died from same, February 14, 1899, in Sciotoville. He was buried in Wheelersburg.

From 1862 to 1868, Ezekiel Powers was a partner with Stephen Pattengill and John McAleer, in the flat boat business between Ashland and Louisville, principally shipping pig iron. November 21, 1863, he was appointed Quartermaster of the First Regiment, O. M. in Scioto county, with rank of First Lieutenant by Governor David Tod. He was sworn in the service January 21, 1864. Mr. Powers was a prominent Odd Fellow, a member of Orient Lodge No. 337 of Wheelersburg, which he joined in 1866. He was also a member of the Orient Encampment No. 26. When quite a young man, he joined the Methodist church in Wheelersburg. He was a very strong democrat, well-informed and fair-minded, always earnest, but free to concede to others what he demanded for himself. For many years he was a member of the County Democratic Committee. He was a temperate, upright, honest man, highly respected by all. He was kind, extremely charitable, and thoughtful of the poor and needy, whom he constantly helped in an unostentatious manner. He died at Sciotoville, October 14, 1894, aged sixty-four years.

Frank Powers

was born September 17, 1852, at Wheelersburg, Scioto county, Ohio, the son of Ezekiel Powers, Jr. and Sarah Jane Dean, his wife. He attended school at Wheelersburg, till 1868, when he began as a clerk in the store of Horace T. Hall, his uncle. In 1871, he was a salesman for Mullins and Hunt, of Maysville, Ky. In this year he also represented the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Company. In 1872, he helped in building a telegraph line from Columbus to Ironton. In 1873, he went to Riverton, Ky., to construct a telegraph line and in the same year became agent of the Eastern Kentucky Railway Company, at Grayson, Ky., and held the position until 1878. In the latter year he became a special agent for the company, as a freight solicitor. In 1879, he engaged in making pig-iron at Charlotte furnace, in Kentucky, and continued that until 1881, when he became traveling agent for the Eastern Kentucky Railway Company. On July 1, 1882, he became general agent of the Eastern Kentucky Railway Company. He resigned this position in 1883.

July 2, 1879, he was married to Miss Juliet Lansdowne, daughter of Dr. A. J. Lansdowne. Mr. Powers has always been a democrat and on August 22, 1884, he was made the democratic candidate for Congress in his district against General W. H. Wadsworth, of Maysville. The district was composed of fourteen counties, and Mr. Powers was defeated by 102 votes. He was chairman of the democrat committee of his county for fourteen years. He has been district and state committeeman of his party.

In 1892, he was admitted to the bar and formed a partnership with Judge James R. Botts, as Botts & Powers, in the practice of the law. In 1895,

The Governor appointed him City Judge of Grayson, and he served one year. Mr. Powers comes of a long line of honorable ancestry. His great-grandfather, John Powers, served in the Revolutionary war and in that of 1812. His grandfather, Enoch Powers, Sr., served in the war of 1812. The Powers family settled in Massachusetts in 1666. From there they emigrated to the James river in Virginia and from there to what is now West Virginia. His mother's grandfather, Ebenezer Dean, served in the Revolutionary war. His name first appears on the records of the War Department at Washington on a return (not dated) of officers in William Heath's Massachusetts regiment without remark; again on a return (not dated) of vacancies in Gen. Heath's brigade. In the latter return he is reported as being a Lieutenant in the 30th Continental Regiment of foot soldiers, commanded by Col. John Groaton. The records show that Col. Groaton was a Lieutenant Colonel in Colonel William Heath's Massachusetts regiment. The Dean family settled in Massachusetts in 1635.

Mr. Powers is noted for his faithfulness to all duty and responsibility and is an excellent lawyer as he was an excellent business man. He possesses indomitable courage, tireless energy and a will strengthened by obstacles. He makes friends wherever he is known and retains them when made. He is useful and valuable in any service and does all he undertakes well.

Rev. Eliphaz Perkins Pratt, D. D.,

was a citizen of Portsmouth for thirty-four years and in that time no man exercised a greater influence on questions of morality, ethics and religion than he. His father, Daniel Pratt, and his mother Julia Perkins, were both from the state of Connecticut. They came to the northwest territory with the beginning of the century and they began their married life together in a log cabin in what is now Athens County Ohio. Our subject was the eldest of their six children, all of whom were living in 1882. He was born February 17, 1816. He was an active, industrious child, born with a good conscience. He learned his letters from newspapers hung on the wall of the log cabin in which he was reared. He worked in the forest, or on the farm, in daytime and he studied by firelight in the evening. He was born with a thirst for knowledge, which was never quenched. As a child he attended the ministry of Rev. John Spalding, whose sermons greatly influenced his future life.

He attended the Ohio University at Athens and graduated in 1837, under President Robert G. Wilson. He studied for the ministry under different professors. He reviewed mental and moral science under Dr. William A. McCaffry, studied Hebrew under Prof. Elisha Ballentine, D. D., and Theology under Prof. W. Hall, D. D. During his theological studies he was a tutor in Latin and Greek. He established the Cooper Female Seminary in Dayton, in 1840, assisted by his sister Mrs. Hay. He was licensed to preach by the Dayton Presbytery in October, 1841. He was called to the New School Presbyterian church at Paris, Ky., in 1842, and accepted. While there he married his first wife, Miss Elizabeth C. Mills, daughter of Judge Benjamin Mills, of Frankfort, Kentucky.

He came to Portsmouth in 1852, to preach for Rev. Hicks, the pastor of the First Presbyterian church. He had expected to return to Paris at once, but as it was winter the river closed and he was detained. There were a series of meetings going on and he was called to preach every day, which he did. The people liked him so well that he was called and accepted. He came at once, but was installed in May, 1852. His first wife died in 1850, and he married Miss Elizabeth Loughry, daughter of James Loughry, Esq., in 1853. He was pastor of the First Presbyterian church from his installment until March 29, 1886, the date of his death, and he died as he had wished, in harness. He was sick but ten days.

He was a preacher of great power and force. He was earnest in all things and enthusiastic in all he undertook. In his own church his word was law, and all acquiesced in his policies. There were never any quarrels or divisions in his church for he knew how to prevent them. Doctor Pratt was essentially a wise man. He possessed remarkable judgment, and when it was once given every one was satisfied. His church was the strongest and most influential in its Presbytery, and he was in his time the strongest minister in his Presbytery. He was one of the strong men of his Synod, and was highly esteemed in the General Assembly to which he was a delegate, a number of times. He was a regular and constant correspondent of the Herald and Presbyter and his initials E. P. P. were always a guaranty that the article so signed was interesting and instructive. Doctor Pratt never wrote anything but what was well worth reading, and never delivered an address but what was well worth hearing. He was not only well appreciated at home but away from home as well. He was a favorite to deliver a dedication sermon at any new church.

He was a director of the Danville Theological Seminary for fifteen years. He was a trustee of Lane Theological Seminary for twenty-two years. He was a trustee of the Western Female Seminary at Oxford, Ohio, for a number of years. He was also a trustee of Marietta College.

The First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth greatly prospered under his ministry. When he took charge it had 169 members, 1,079 were added during the first thirty years of his ministry. The Second Presbyterian church was sent out of his church fully equipped with a church paid for and a minister furnished. His degree of D. D. was given him by his Alma Mater and in 1860, it tendered him a professorship. He also received calls from wealthy churches in the cities but declined, as he felt his life's work was in Portsmouth.

His second wife died in 1870, and in 1876, he married Mary E. Urmston, daughter of Rev. N. M. Urmston, who survived him.

No account of Dr. Pratt would be just and fair to his memory or to the public which is interested in preserving it, without mentioning his great patriotism. He was one of the most ardent Union men during the Civil war, and his public speeches during that period were calculated to rouse and fire the patriotic heart. For the soldiers he could not say or do too much. He was always the last to say farewell in going, and the first to welcome them in returning. His devotion to the cause of temperance and to the interest of the public schools was the greatest, but there never was a public matter in Portsmouth, for the intellectual or moral good of the people, in which he was not at the front of it, aiding it with his powerful influence. He was for thirty years the secretary of the Scioto County Bible Society, and he was for many years a public school examiner, both for the city and county.

He had a public funeral, which gave the expression of the city of its estimation of his work. The venerable Doctor Burr conducted the rites and the ministers of other churches were his pall bearers. The large attendance showed that the people of Portsmouth fully estimated his work. While Doctor Pratt was a most positive man, always wanted his way, and nearly always had it, he made few if any enemies because of his judgment. He was always right, and any one who took time to think and consider, came around to his view.

He had a son, Prof. D. Perkins Pratt, of Portsmouth, of his first marriage, and three daughters of his second, Elizabeth, Julia and Mary. The first two daughters died in his life time, and the latter still survives, and on November 25, 1902, was married to E. W. McKenzie, and makes her home in California. His widow resides in Perth Amboy, N. J.

Pat Prendergast

was born in county Kilkenney, Ireland, March 14, 1831. Owing to the fact that his birthday occurred so near St. Patrick's day, his father, John Prendergast, gave him the name Patrick. His mother was Miss Catherine Muhall. He was the eldest of two children, having a brother named Martin. Our subject was educated in the public schools of Kilkenney. He came to the United States, in 1848, at the age of eighteen. His parents remained in Ireland. His mother died there in 1858, and his father in 1875. His brother emigrated to this country, in 1861, located in Newark, Ohio, became sheriff of Licking county, and died at Newark, in 1878.

Our subject remained one year after landing in this country at Perth Amboy, New Jersey. He then came to Newark, Ohio. He became a conductor on the railroad running from Newark to Mansfield, Sandusky and Cleveland, and remained as such for four years, when he became a clerk in the American House, at Newark, from 1853 to 1855. His employer was N. W. Bingham.

In 1855, Mr. Bingham came to Portsmouth and took charge of the United States Hotel and our subject accompanied him and remained as a clerk there till 1861. On April 16, of that year, he enlisted in Company G, of First O. V. I., and was made second corporal. He was the first man from Ohio to carry a flag of truce to obtain and bury the dead of the battle of Vienna. It was related of him that at one time, in the service he and his company reached a cemetery, after dark, where they all lay down and slept. He pillowed his head on a grave and slept soundly until morning. On waking, he remarked, that he wondered whose grave had furnished him a pillow. He read the inscription on the stone and found that it bore the name of a dear playmate whom he had known in Ireland.

On his return from the army, he went into the wholesale liquor business, in the place now occupied by Michael Stanton. He remained in that business until May 14, 1869, and then he bought the Biggs House lease of W. H. Taylor. He was there at the time of the great fire, on March 6, 1871, and in that lost everything he had in the world. He had just furnished fifteen rooms new and all his chattel property in the hotel was consumed, but he was not dismayed by the loss, nor did he lose his wonderful courage and energy. He had many friends, as he deserved to have, and they offered him numerous inducements to go into other business, especially Michael Stanton. The latter offered him a full partnership and said it should cost him nothing, but he declined. He said he had lost his money in the hotel business and he proposed to make it back there. Such courage has seldom been displayed in Portsmouth or anywhere else. He waited until the hotel had been rebuilt, took Sanford B. Jennings in with him, and went back in the same business. He remained there with Mr. Jennings until his death.

He was married to Harriet, the youngest daughter of Edward Mulligan, Sr., on June 6, 1866. She was born in county Wicklow, Ireland, but came to America with her parents, at the age of four years. Her father had resided in Portsmouth since 1851.

Mr. Prendergast was a man of fine appearance. He was broad shouldered, straight, and with a most firm and determined expression on his face, but nevertheless pleasing. He was a man of great force of character. He made up his judgments very quickly and adhered to them, but could not be called positive. His sympathies were easily enlisted. He was liberal to a fault. His private charities were great, but he made no boast of them. He was always in favor of public improvements, but the dominating element of his character was his wonderful courage in the face of difficulties. There was never a finer example of this trait, than he exhibited at the time of the Biggs House fire, when he determined to go in the same business after having lost all of his property. He was democratic in his political views, but never a partisan. He was a devout member of the church of the Holy Redeemer. He lived but forty-five years, but he lived them well and left a memory, a precious heritage to his friends.

In the fall of 1874, his health began to fail. He had stomach and bronchial troubles. He died September 24, 1876, in the Biggs House. He was conscious and self composed to the last.

Henry Prescott

was born at Bath, Grafton county, New Hampshire, May 19, 1840. His parents were Joseph Johnson Prescott and Phoebe (Page) Prescott. (See Prescott Family.) His grandfather was Joseph Prescott and his mother was a daughter of Asa Page and Phoebe (Noyes) Page of Landaff, New Hampshire. Mr. Prescott spent his early life in Bath on a farm and received his education in the country schools. At the age of twenty-three years, he came to Ohio unattended by any other members of the family, and located at Keystone furnace in Jackson county, where he obtained employment as store-keeper at the furnace store. He continued in this position for two years when he was promoted to book-keeper.

After three years more he left Keystone and went back to New Hampshire and was married to Mary S. Tewksbury, daughter of N. M. Tewksbury, of Bath, New Hampshire, January 22, 1868. He returned to Ohio with his young wife in the spring of 1868, and located in Portsmouth, where he was employed by Murray, Moore & Company, in the foundry and machine shops as book-keeper. He was thus occupied for a period of five years, after which he purchased an interest in Keystone furnace, where he had formerly been employed. He managed the store for a year and then became book-keeper. He sold out his interest and went back to Portsmouth in 1877, and resumed his former position as book-keeper at the foundry and machine works. He gave up this position in 1881, and engaged in the manufacture, of wheel-barrows. After seven or eight years he started a feed store on Second street, Portsmouth, Ohio, where he has since been in business.

Though a firm believer in the principles and policies of the republican party, he works and votes with the prohibition party. He is an ardent supporter of the temperance cause and of all things that tend to the betterment of mankind. He and his wife have had three children, but lost them all in infancy. Mr. Prescott is as fixed in his ways as the rugged mountains of his native state, are fixed in their places. When he has made up his mind on any subject, there is no variableness with him. He has his views on all subjects and they are well considered, but once fixed, his purposes are unchangeable. He believes in good citizenship and practices it. There is no better neighbor or citizen than he.

son of Isaac and Rebecca (Brown) Price, was born January 15, 1829, in a house near the bank of the Ohio a few rods below the mouth of the Little Scioto river. His boyhood and youth were spent in what is now the village of Scioto-ville. He had a good common school education, to which he added a knowledge of surveying. Soon after leaving school, he rented a farm in Kentucky opposite Scioto-ville, which he afterwards bought. After living there a few years, he moved to Ohio, having bought a farm owned by Jesse Marshall, on the Baltimore & Ohio South-Western railroad near Slocum's station, where he resided until his death on December 11, 1895.

He was married December 28, 1856 to Mary G. Marshall, daughter of Jesse and Mary Gabrielle Serot Marshall. Her mother was one of the first children born in Gallipolis, being born only five months after Marie Louise Cadot, who was the first child born there. She was named by Jean Gabriel Gervais who presented her with two town lots and a set of silver spoons. Her paternal grandfather, Samuel Marshall, was a Revolutionary soldier. His record will be found in the article entitled Revolutionary Soldiers. Her father, Jesse Marshall was a soldier in the war of 1812. She still resides on the home farm where she was born December 1, 1830. Five children were born to this union: G. Frank, who resides at home with his mother; Warren M. of Scioto-ville; Mrs. Mary A. Sherman living near Wait P. O.; Mrs. Anna P. Marting, who died August 5, 1892 and Ella R. living with her mother.

James Amos Pryor

was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, in February, 1847. His parents were Samuel and Agnes Pryor, both natives of Pennsylvania. His paternal grandfather died in the war of 1812. He came with his parents to Ohio, in 1854, and settled in Morgan township, near Sedan. His father enlisted October 21, 1862, in the Eighth Independent Company of Ohio Volunteer Sharpshooters, for three years and was mustered out with the company, July 19, 1865. Our subject has always been a farmer and lived in the same place all his life. He attended the schools of Mt. Joy and received a common school education.

When only fifteen years of age, he enlisted in Company G, 7th O. V. C., September 16, 1862, for three years. He was captured March 10, 1864, at Morris-town, Tennessee, by Longstreet's command. He was in prison at Richmond for two months, then at Andersonville, Ga.; and from there was sent to Millen, Ga. and was then taken to a prison at Florence, South Carolina. He was a prisoner for twelve months. He participated in all the battles his command was in until he was captured. He was mustered out June 9, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio.

He was Assessor of Union township one term. He is a republican and takes an active part in politics. He is a member of the M. E. church, Singer chapel. He was married January 6, 1870 to Amanda Cooper, daughter of Jacob and Rachel (Boyer) Cooper. They have six children: Stella, wife of Alfred Miller; Jacob; John; Annie; Alice, wife of William Journey; Janie. He is a member of the G. A. R., Robinson Post, of Rushtown.

Henry Potter Pursell

son of James and Amanda (Thompson) Pursell, was born April 12, 1851, in the old Pursell homestead on Fourth street, Portsmouth, Ohio. He received his education in the Portsmouth schools. In 1873, he started in the drug business at the northeast corner of Fourth and Court streets, under the firm name of Pursell & Stevenson. His store was known as the Opera House Drug Store. He remained in business several years. After going out of that business, he was deputy County Treasurer under Charles Kinney from 1884 to 1888, and again under M. B. Wells from 1888 to 1892. After leaving the Treasurer's office, he was connected with the Portsmouth Gas Company until his death. He was a member of the Portsmouth School Board for thirteen years, from April, 1886 to 1899. He was a republican and a faithful and active member of Bigelow M. E. church. He was one of the official board of that church and served as secretary of its Sunday school for twenty-two years.

On January 24, 1895 he was married to Miss Mary Clough Dunham, daughter of John Wesley and Jane (Clough) Dunham, who survives him. He died October 3, 1899. Mr. Pursell was a gentleman of retiring disposition, but of forceful character. He never pushed himself forward in any cause, but when he took up any work, he followed it with patience and zeal until he completed it. He was a valuable factor in his party, his church and his community.

William McClain Pursell

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, November 6, 1849. His father was James Pursell, born in Burslem, England. (See sketch herein.) His mother was Amanda Thompson, (see sketch) daughter of Moses Thompson. His education was obtained in the Portsmouth public schools. From 1863 to 1866, he was a clerk in the First National Bank of Portsmouth. From 1866 to 1868 he was a student at the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware. After his return from school, he took a position in the First National Bank as assistant cashier from 1868 to 1869. Since that time he has been general manager, secretary and treasurer of the C. P. Tracy Shoe Company. He is a republican, a member of one of the Board of Trustees of Bigelow M. E. church.

He was married to Miss Clara M. Morris, October 8, 1872. They have had eight children: Earl Tracy; Susan; Charles Morris, deceased March 7, 1898; Clara Mae; Henry Tracy, deceased Feb. 7, 1901; William Oscar, deceased June 7, 1892; Persis and Marjorie.

Mr. Pursell has made a record as one of the best and foremost business men of his city. He is always first in any movement for the public good, in church or in society, and on any public question he is sure to be found on the side for progress, for morality and for the greatest public good.

David Pyle

was born February 16, 1847, in Doddridge county, West Virginia. His parents were Eli Pyle and Rachel Seese, his wife. His father was a farmer and a miller. He was the sixth of fifteen children. He attended school in Doddridge county, until he was eleven years of age. In 1857, his father removed from Doddridge county, West Virginia to Scioto county, Ohio and located at Wheeler's Mills, now Hudson's. He attended school one term after coming to Scioto county. The family remained there for three years and then removed to Scioto Furnace where he worked about the furnace until the war broke out.

On June 4, 1862, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in Company B, 87th O. V. I. for three months. The Company was formed at Coshocton but he ran away from home at Webster and enlisted. He re-enlisted in Company D, 1st O. H. A., June 13, 1863 and served until July 25, 1865. While a member of the 87th O. V. I. on the 12th of September, 1862, he was wounded by a shell in the left ankle at Harper's Ferry. On the 14th day of September, he was taken prisoner and retained two days when he was paroled. After the war, he located at Dixon's Mills and engaged in teaming for about six months. Then he went to Wirt county, West Virginia, and engaged in the oil business. In 1869, he went to work for one year at Scioto Furnace, chopping wood and coaling. In 1870, he went to work for the Scioto Fire Brick Company at Sciotoville, and has since done everything connected with the mining of fire-clay and making it into fire-brick. At present he is mine boss and clay inspector for the company.

On October 4, 1874, he was married to Emma E. Edington, daughter of Nathan Edington. He has eight children: Ivan engaged with the Scioto Fire Brick Company as a contractor for delivering clay; Leslie is a book-keeper at Colville, Washington; Ethel, Mabel, Bertha, Samuel, Nathan, and David are at home. Here is what one of Mr. Pyle's neighbors said of him, "He is a good citizen. He was a Justice of the Peace of Porter township for several years, and was noted for his fair and just decisions rendered in cases tried before him. He has been employed in the fire-brick works in his section in various capacities, and has been found above the average, in his knowledge of the business. He is a very energetic man and is noted for the push he exhibits in anything he undertakes. He is considered one of the best judges of fire-clay in this section, so much so that he is now in the employ of the Scioto Star Fire Brick Works, in the capacity of bank-manager, whose duty is to inspect and to grade the clay.

Isaac Pyles

was born April 24, 1823 in Harrison county, West Virginia. He is the son of Jonathan Pyles and Elizabeth (Buher) Pyles, both of German descent. His grandfather, Henry Buher, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and had his thigh broken at the battle of Germantown. Mr. Pyles did not have the chances for an education which children of to-day have. When he was a boy the nearest school was five or six miles away. Consequently the only school he ever attended was the school of experience. His father died five months before he was born and the first thirteen years of his life was spent in his native county of Harrison, West Virginia.

He came to Ohio with his mother at the age of thirteen and settled in Jackson county in the Crabtree settlement. When he became old enough, he commenced work on the farm and later worked on the Portsmouth and Columbus turnpike. He then commenced to work on the furnaces, first at Jackson, where he worked for a year; then at Scioto Furnace, where he worked for thirteen years. He then moved to the French Grant and settled on Pine creek, two miles west of Powellsville, and bought a farm. Here he resided for about forty years and contracted hauling coal and ore at Ohio, Junior, Franklin and Pine Grove furnaces. He traded his farm on Pine creek for another on McCulloch, about 1882, and moved there where he continued to farm until his age compelled him to give it up.

He enlisted April 22, 1861 in Company E, 18th O. V. I. at Marietta, Ohio, for three months and was mustered out at Columbus, Ohio, August 28, 1861. He re-enlisted October 4, 1861, for three years in Company C, 53d O. V. I. and was mustered out with the Company, August 11, 1865. He was a Trustee of Bloom township for two terms. He has been a member of the Free Will Baptist church for forty-five years, and now holds his membership in that church at Rushtown. He has been a republican since the formation of that party.

He was married to Nancy Maria Martin December 23, 1847 who died March 31, 1887 and left three children: Thomas Pyles, the present Fire Chief of Portsmouth is one; Sarah married James Gallaher; Jacob lives in Portsmouth. He was again married October 18, 1888 to Elizabeth Hammonds who died September 3, 1897 leaving one child Irwin born July 10, 1892. On September 15, 1901 he married Mrs. Rachel Mershon.

Leonidas Pyles

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, in 1842, the son of William and Ellen (Brouse) Pyles. His father was a son of John Pyles, an early settler of Washington township, who died in 1837. Our subject was one of four children, but two of whom are now living. Almira and John are deceased and Allen is the other son living. John Pyles died in 1847, aged 32 years. Leonidas was reared on a farm and attended the country schools. He enlisted in Battery L, 1st O. L. A., August 2, 1862 and was appointed Corporal October 31, 1864 and mustered out with the Battery July 4, 1865. Upon his return to Ohio, after the war, he resumed work on the farm, and since 1867, has resided in Nile township where he owns a farm of 300 acres. Mr. Pyles is a republican. He served as a Trustee of Nile township for twelve consecutive years. He was County Infirmary Director from 1881 to 1887. He has been a member of the Nile township board of education and Deputy State Supervisor of Elections.

He was married in 1866 to Mary Burriss, daughter of Mathew Burriss. Her father was born in Pennsylvania in 1795, the son of Nathan and Sarah (Bradkit) Burriss. Mr. Pyles is the father of ten children: Alice, the wife of William Strachan, died December, 1899, aged 32 years; William A.; Sidella F.; Mary L.; James E.; Anna M.; Nella H.; Laura E.; John S.; and Martha E. Mr. Pyles is a good citizen and enjoys the respect and good will of all his neighbors.

Frank Paul Rais

was born in Scioto county, May 22, 1855. His father was Francis Rais, a native of Berne, Switzerland, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Montavon, also a native of Berne, in Switzerland. His parents were married in Switzerland, and had fifteen children of whom our subject was the fourth. He attended school at Pine Creek, Wheelersburg, Carey's Run and the red school house at Portsmouth. He left school at the age of sixteen and engaged on the Ohio river, in 1873. He was in such employment until 1878, when he enlisted in the U. S. Cavalry Troop G, March 20, 1878 and served five years in Wyoming, Montana, Utah, Indian Territory and Arizona. He was discharged in 1883, and engaged in the grocery business in Portsmouth for a period of ten years. In 1893, he went into the insurance business, first as an agent and in 1896 he became assistant superintendent. In 1899 he was made superintendent. He became a resident of Chillicothe in 1899. He was married to Jennie Rudity, October 2, 1883, the daughter of Eugene Rudity. They had four children: Matilda M., Earl E., Clarence, and Alma V. Mr. Rais is a democrat in his political views and a communicant of the Roman Catholic church.

Frederick F. Ranchous, son of Fred and Hannah (Cook) Ranchous, was born December 6, 1840, at Portsmouth, Ohio. He enlisted as a private in the Civil war, December 29, 1863, in Company F, 91st O. V. I. During his two years of service, he participated in the following battles: Cloyd Mountain, Cedar Creek, Goshen Bridge, Lynchburg and Stevenson's Depot. On July 20, 1864, he was wounded at the last named battle, and on the 31st day of May, 1865, at Cumberland, Maryland, he was discharged from service by reason of surgeon's certificate of disability. He has always been a faithful adherent to the policies of the Republican party and has been a life long Free Baptist.

February 5, 1865, while home on furlough, he married Emily Marshall, daughter of Elias and Anna (Beloat) Marshall and has ever since lived at Sciotoville, Ohio. They have three children: Anna, wife of Oregon Eakins of Columbus, Ohio; Doctor Walter E. M. Ranchous of Columbus, Ohio and Mayme who resides with her parents.

Walter E. M. Ranchous, M. D.,

son of Fred F. and Emily (Marshall) Ranchous, grandson of Elias Marshall after whom he was named, was born in Sciotoville, July 8, 1870. He attended the public schools at Sciotoville, graduating from the Porter township High School, and then from the Commercial Department of the University of Kentucky, at Lexington. After keeping books and traveling for three years, he commenced the study of Medicine, September, 1894, at the Medical College of Ohio, Medical Department of the University of Cincinnati, graduating there April 9, 1897. He located in Columbus, Ohio, April 14, 1897, becoming a member of the Columbus Academy of Medicine. In 1898 he became a member of the Ohio State Medical Society and in 1899 a member of the American Medical Association. In 1899-1900 he visited the Clinics of Vienna and Berlin and took some post-graduate work in New York. He attended the meeting of the Pan American Medical Congress at Havana, Cuba, in 1901 and became a member of that body. His standing in the profession is the very highest.

Jared Johnson Rardin

was born in Athens county, Ohio, November 30, 1848. His father was Levi Rardin, who was a farmer and a native of Athens county, Ohio. His mother's maiden name was Anna L. Selby. She was a daughter of Dyar Selby. His grandfather, William Rardin was a native of Virginia. Our subject attended the district schools and Bartlett's Academy in the winter and worked on the farm in summer until he was twenty years of age. On April 11, 1870, he came to Portsmouth and engaged with the Singer Sewing Machine Company. In 1895, he went into the Star Shoe Company as secretary and treasurer and on April 14, 1902 he went into The Drew-Selby Company as treasurer. He was married July 5, 1876 to Mary A. Webster, daughter of Isaac Webster of Meigs county, Ohio. They have three children: Irma B. who graduated at Delaware in 1901, married to Rev. George L. Davis August 7, 1902 and she is now a resident of Peking China, where her husband is a missionary of the M. E. church; Glen E. now a sophomore at the Ohio Wesleyan University and Earl W. a student in the same class. Mr. Rardin is a republican and a member of Bigelow M. E. church.

James Boone Ray, M. D., is a son of James B. Ray, Sr. M. D. and Hannah (Dunlavey) Ray. He received his early education in the common schools and attended the South Grammar school at Columbus during the winter of 1869, and Armstrong's select school in Columbus during the summer of 1860. The next year he attended a select school taught by a Mr. Finley. He entered the Ohio University at Athens, Ohio, in the spring of 1862, and remained until the spring of 1864, when he enlisted in Company F, 140th O. V. I. on May 2, 1864, and was made First Sergeant. He was mustered out September 3, 1864. He returned to the University in 1865 and remained until the spring of 1867. He read all of the classics in the regular course. He then took up the study of medicine, and after a year, entered the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati, and was graduated in the spring of 1872. He taught school several winters while attending literary and medical schools.

He first located at Sciotoville in the fall of 1872. In 1877, he removed to California, in Pike county where he practised until the spring of 1880 when he removed to Harrisonville, where he practised until 1895 and was associated with his father. In March, 1895, he came to Portsmouth where he practised until April, 1899, and then moved to his present location at Harrisonville. From 1893 to 1897 he was a member of the Board of Pension Examining Surgeons of Scioto county. He is a member of the Hempstead Memorial Academy of Medicine, the Ohio Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Doctor Ray has always taken much interest in political affairs as a member of the Democratic party.

He was united in marriage September 28, 1871, to Maria Wheeler, daughter of Isaac Wheeler. Her great-grandfather, Nathan Wheeler was a Revolutionary soldier. (See Revolutionary Soldiers.) They have one child, William Alexander Ray, M. D., now associated with his father in the practice of medicine.

Doctor Ray is a natural sportsman and takes great delight in hunting and fishing. While a lover of the sports, he is also a student, both of professional matters and general subjects. He takes a pride in keeping up in his profession. He is a man of manly principles. He is very deliberate, and searches for truth before giving utterance to his judgment. Integrity is the marked characteristic of his life.

General William Henry Raynor was born April 4, 1834 at Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was William Raynor, and his mother's maiden name was Mary K. Barber, daughter of Major Uriah Barber. His father emigrated from near Leeds, England about the year 1830 as a married man. The first Mrs. Raynor died very soon after their arrival at Portsmouth, and about 1832 Mr. Raynor married Miss Barber, before mentioned. She was born June 2, 1803, a twin, the other being Washington Barber. She was the first child born in the town of Portsmouth.

Our subject received only such an education as could be afforded by the Portsmouth Public Schools. His principal instructor was Prof. A. J. Rikoff. His school life ended on his fourteenth birthday when he entered the store of John Rowe & Son. He was afterwards for five or six years a clerk in the dry goods store of B. L. Jefferson, and for about the same period in the private banking house of P. C. Kinney until the beginning of the Civil war in 1861.

On April 16, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company G, 1st O. V. I., was made First Lieutenant April 17, 1861. After going to the front he was appointed as acting aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Robert C. Schenck, Brigade Commander. In this capacity he was in the engagement at Vienna June 16, 1861. After that battle, at his own request, he was allowed to return to his company, and was with it at the battle of Bull Run July 21, 1861. Here he had the misfortune to be slightly wounded, was captured and taken a prisoner to Richmond. Early in September, with two comrades, a successful escape was effected. An account of his escape was published in Harper's Monthly Magazine. He was mustered out September 14, 1861, at Washington, D. C.

On September 28, 1861, he entered the 56th O. V. I. as Lieutenant Colonel. He was promoted to Colonel April 2, 1863; wounded and captured May 5, 1864, on the steamer John Warner on Red river; discharged October 27, 1864, by order of the War Department. The foregoing is from the Official Record. The 56th Ohio Regiment left Portsmouth February 12, 1862, and reached Fort Donelson in time to take part in the surrender, but not in actual fighting. Immediately after this, the regiment took part with its Division commanded by Gen. Lew Wallace, in the Pittsburg Landing, Shiloh and Corinth campaign. In April, 1863, Col. Kinney resigned and Col. Raynor was promoted Colonel. Under his command the 56th took an important part in the battles and siege of the Vicksburg campaign. After this the 13th Army Corps (to which the 56th belonged) was transferred to the department of the Gulf, and the remainder of its service was there performed. From November, 1863, to May, 1864, Col. Raynor was in command of the 2nd Brigade, 3rd Division, 13th Army Corps. The regiment suffered severely during the campaign, and Col. Raynor was wounded at Snaggy Point, Louisiana, and a second time captured May 5, 1864. Some six weeks afterward most of the sick and wounded prisoners in the hands of the Rebels, on Red river, were paroled. Col. Raynor returned to his home—his wounds unfitted him for further military service and he was mustered out as before stated. From November, 1863, to May, 1864, he acted as Brigade Commander; and on March 15, 1865, he was breveted Brigadier General for "distinguished and gallant services" in the field. In the political campaign of 1860, Mr. Raynor was a Douglas democrat, but since that time he has been a consistent and faithful republican.

He was married September 9, 1855, to Rhoda O. Kendall, daughter of Thomas and Ann M. Kendall, of Portsmouth. Mr. and Mrs. Raynor have five children as follows: Charles, died July, 1892; Mary, now Mrs. J. B. Math of Chicago; Thomas K., married and now living at Nacogdoches, Texas; Catherine G., unmarried and living with her parents at Toledo; Will E., married, and living in Chicago.

At the close of the war, Gen. Raynor became engaged in mercantile and manufacturing pursuits. For the past ten years he has been assistant manager and in full charge of the Toledo office of the Lozier Manufacturing Company. He served one year on the Board of Trustees, Hyde Park, Cook Co., Illinois. He has been for years an earnest member of the Grand Army of the Republic and is an Ex-Commander of the Toledo Post No. 107, Department of Ohio. His residence is 3339 Cherry street, Toledo.

Joseph Gideon Reed

was born December 4, 1835, in the village of Piketon, Pike county, Ohio. He was a son of William Reed and a grandson of Judge Samuel Reed, who has a sketch herein. His mother was Rebecca Chenoweth. There were six children of his father's marriage, two died in infancy and four survived. He was the second of the four who grew to maturity. His father was the auditor of Pike county, and had been for several years at his death in 1840. At an early age Joseph acquired a taste for mercantile affairs. From the age of twelve to twenty-two, he was clerk in the store of his uncle Joseph Moore, of Piketon. When he was nineteen years of age, his uncle had such confidence in him that he sent him east to buy goods.

Our subject remained in his native village until August, 1857, when he came to Portsmouth. He and his brother Samuel Reed went into the dry goods business together, and hoped to make their fortune. They bought heavily in advance of the panic of 1857, and that caused their failure and drove them out of business; but they afterwards paid their debts in full. This experience proved very valuable to Mr. Reed. After that he became a clerk for Jefferson & Kepner, and remained in their employment until 1861, when the firm failed. He then went with Charles Elden in his dry goods store in Portsmouth and remained with him until 1862, when he went into the employment of J. M. Rumsey & Co. In 1865, he became a member of the firm which in the following year on the admission of Josiah Rhodes, became Rhodes & Reed. He remained with them until 1871, when he retired, but continued to be their buyer in the East for several years.

In 1873, the firm of Reed & Peebles was organized, composed of Joseph G. Reed and John Peebles. They engaged in the wholesale notion business and some years afterwards added dry goods. The firm continued in business until 1891, when they changed by the admission of Wm. Jordan and the firm name became Reed, Peebles & Co. In 1897, Mr. John Peebles went out, and the firm became Reed & Jordan, and was such at Mr. Reed's death on June 25, 1897. The business was conducted two and one-half years after Mr. Reed's death, when it was succeeded by the firm of Reed & Jordan, composed of the wife of Wm. Jordan, and his son Edward T. Reed. Mr. Reed never had any other business but this, and engaged in no outside matters whatever. He was always the buyer of the firm. Every spring and fall he would go to New York and spend from six weeks to two months. He had a wonderful talent for buying, which could have secured him a position in the best house of New York city; but he preferred to remain in Portsmouth.

He was always a republican in his political views. He was a devoted, faithful Christian all his life. He joined the Methodist Episcopal church at the age of sixteen. He was a steward of the Bigelow church, and taught the infant class a number of years. He was also a member of the official board. He belonged to no secret orders, except the Odd Fellows. He was a public spirited man, in favor of all public improvements. He was always cheerful and in good spirits. He was fond of good company, and was the very best company himself. He was industrious in everything he undertook, and especially in his own business. He married Miss Anne Newman daughter of the Hon. Wm. Newman, November 16, 1865. They had seven children: Sallie, wife of Dr. Edward M. Semans of Delaware, Ohio; Wm. Pursell; Edward Thomson of the firm of Reed & Jordan; Charles Newman; twin girls who died in infancy; and Bertha, wife of Earl T. Pursell. His sons Wm. P. and Charles were Corporals in Company E, 4th O. V. I., in the Spanish-American war. His son-in-law, Dr. Edward Semans was surgeon in the same regiment.

Samuel Reed

was born September 21, 1833 at Piketon, Ohio. His father's name was William Reed and his mother's name was Rebecca (Chenoweth) Reed. Her father was Abraham Chenoweth, who planted the first crop of corn ever planted in the Scioto valley, on the Pee Pee prairie between Piketon and Waverly. He came to the Northwest Territory, from near Blue Lick Springs, Kentucky. He was originally from the state of Virginia. Our subject had a brother Joseph G. Reed, deceased, and two sisters: Mary S. and Sarah who reside in Portsmouth.

He attended the schools at Piketon until 1846. His father died in 1840 and in 1846 he came to Portsmouth to reside with his uncle, John R. Turner. He attended school in Portsmouth at the Fourth street building under Supt. A. J. Rikoff for about three years. His schoolmates were F. C. Gibbs, Henry E. Jones, Abe Brown and others. He went into the Clerk's office in 1849 as a clerk, or copyist, for his uncle. He remained in the Clerk's office until 1851 and became a clerk for one Daniel Whittenmyer in his dry goods store. He clerked there for one year and then went into B. L. Jefferson's dry goods store on Front street, just east of the McDowell block. He was there a year or more and then became a clerk in the dry goods store of William Elden on Market street, on the site of the rear of the Washington Hotel. One year after, Mr. Elden moved into the upper building now occupied by the Davis Drug Company. He then went into the retail dry goods business with his brother Joseph G. Reed, as Reed Brothers, in the same building on Front street which had been occupied by William Elden. The firm bought a large stock of goods before the panic of 1857 and as a consequence failed in 1858. Mr. Reed then clerked with Charles and William Elden, a few months in 1859, at their dry goods store on Market street, where A. Hurth has his liquor store.

On November 21, 1859, Mr. Reed entered the Portsmouth Branch of the State Bank of Ohio, as book-keeper, and has been connected with that bank or its successor ever since. In April, 1865, this bank organized as the Portsmouth National Bank and Mr. Reed was elected cashier. He served as such till 1884, when he was elected its vice president and has held that office ever since. He has not been in any other business.

He has always been a republican, since that party was organized. He became a communicant of Christ Church, Protestant Episcopal in 1859. In 1874 he became a communicant of All Saints church and is now a vestryman.

He was married August 20, 1857 to Ellen, daughter of Washington Kinney. His children are: Mary Kinney, William L. and Mrs. Carletta Turley, wife of Leslie C. Turley.

Mr. Reed is a successful banker. He has seen many ups and downs in that business in his forty-three years of banking in Portsmouth. He has been longer in the banking business than any one who has ever resided in Portsmouth and in that time has been connected with but one bank and its successors. In his sixty-ninth year he is as attentive to business as ever and his head is as clear and his faculties as alert as the day he entered the business forty-three years past. From December 4, 1893 until March 1, 1901, he was a Trustee of the Scioto County Children's Home. Mr. Reed delights in work of that kind. He keeps up his health and maintains the spirit of youth by spending much time at Camp McCulloch fishing, boating and resting.

As a citizen he is always in favor of progress. As a churchman he is faithful. He aims to do every duty well and his friends say he has succeeded.

William L. Reed

son of Samuel and Ellen (Kinney) Reed, was born July 6, 1863, in Portsmouth, Ohio. He received his education in the schools of that city, attending school until the Junior year of the High School. He was married October 10, 1888 to Margaret B. Hiestand, daughter of Captain J. M. Hiestand and Elizabeth (Wharton) Hiestand of Hillsboro, Ohio. Their children are: Paul, Mary Kinney, Elizabeth and twin sons: Samuel Chenoweth and Joseph Hiestand. He was first engaged in the clothing business, but later has conducted a general fire insurance agency. He was clerk of the Board of Education of Portsmouth, Ohio, during the years 1901-1902. He is a member of All Saints Episcopal church and has been treasurer of the Sunday school for several years.

Captain William Wallace Reilly,

the son of Christopher and Margaret Young, his wife, was born in Philadelphia, August 5, 1825. He attended school in Philadelphia. He came to Portsmouth in 1839 and clerked in the first book store for Eli Glover, and in the first wholesale dry goods house for Stuart, Jones & Company until 1842. In 1842, he went to Pittsburg and from there to Philadelphia where he clerked in a dry goods store until 1846. When the Mexican war broke out, he enlisted in Company A. New Jersey Battalion, at Camden, New Jersey, May 29, 1847, and was honorably discharged at Jalapa Mexico, and mustered out at Castle William, New York.

In 1849, he returned to Pittsburg and on April 11, 1850 was married to Miss Anna Margaret Young. He went to Cincinnati in 1851, and after remaining there a year, went to Dayton and engaged in the grocery business with

CAPTAIN WILLIAM WALLACE REILLY.

Samuel B. Brown, McGee and Harshman until 1853, when he returned to Cincinnati, and with Drs. Newton and others published the first Ohio Business Directory, under the firm name of W. W. Reilly & Company, and in the spring of 1853 went east to solicit subscriptions for the work. He then returned to Dayton, and was with L. F. Claffin & Company, until 1854, when he went to Chillicothe, Ohio, and assisted Rev. H. R. Johnson to open a book store. Six weeks later, he returned to Dayton and was engaged with More, Clarke & Company in the book business, where he remained until 1857, when he came to Portsmouth and opened the Valley Book Store as an agent for E. A. & T. T. More, and in 1859 bought the stock.

In July, 1861, he raised Company A, Thirtieth O. V. I. He enlisted August 2, 1861, for three years. September 1, he joined Rosecrans and was with him at Carnifex Ferry and through the campaign until they went into winter quarters at Fayetteville, West Virginia. December 20, 1861 he resigned on account of his health, to take effect in April, 1862. He again resumed business in Portsmouth. May 2, 1864, he was ordered out by General Brough as Captain of Company G, 141st O. N. G. and was in command of the post at Guyandotte, West Virginia, until September 3, 1864 when he was mustered out with the company.

After returning from the army, he resumed his business, in which he remained until 1878. In November, 1878, he formed a partnership with his son-in-law, H. C. Murfin, in his old business, under the name of W. W. Reilly & Company, which continued till May, 1882, when Mr. Murfin retired. He continued business under the same name until his death.

His children are: Margaret, the wife of H. Clay Murfin of Jackson, Ohio; Kate More; William Wallace, Jr.; Helen Clark; Sara Louise; John Gordon; Marion Young. He died December 26, 1896, after three years illness. His wife survived him till January 15, 1897 when she died.

He was a member of the Masons, Knights Templars, Royal Arcanum and Odd Fellows, and a Past Commander of Bailey Post, No. 164, G. A. R. Captain Reilly was Commander of Bailey Post for the year 1883. It was during his administration, and owing largely to his influence that the City Council set aside by deed, and the Grand Army of the Republic dedicated what is now known as the Soldier's Memorial Circle in Greenlawn cemetery. From a Grand Army standpoint it is a suitable monument to the memory of Captain Reilly. In the zenith of his powers Captain Reilly was a notable man. He was always dressed neatly and tastily. Everything about him was and had to be "spick and span." He was a delightful companion, especially in traveling. He was a good story-teller and had an extensive vocabulary of fitting proverbs equal to King Solomon or Robert Christy. He could illustrate any subject by an anecdote or a proverb. He was uniformly courteous and genteel. To the public and his friends, he was always on dress parade. He had an inexhaustible fund of humor and it ever sparkled for the delectation of his friends. He was fond of Masonry and of the Loyal Legion. No man was more missed in Portsmouth than he when the afflicting hand of disease was laid on him.

Charles Frederick Reiniger, Jr.,

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, January 8, 1840. His parents were Major Charles Frederick Reiniger, a native of Germany, and Barbara Suiter, his wife. He was one of thirteen children. His boyhood was spent in Portsmouth where he attended the public schools until sixteen years of age. He was elected a Trustee of Clay township in 1866 but resigned in the spring of 1867 and moved to Portsmouth. In 1871, he was elected Street Commissioner. The vote stood: C. E. Edwards, republican, 823; C. F. Reiniger, democrat, 949; Reiniger's majority, 146. In 1873 he was a candidate for re-election. The vote stood: John McNeal, republican, 565; C. F. Reiniger, democrat, 1,307; Reiniger's majority, 742. In 1874 Reiniger was a candidate for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket. His opponent was Henry Raugh. The vote stood: Raugh, 2,275; Reiniger, 2,765; Reiniger's majority, 469. In 1876, he was a candidate for re-election against T. J. Pursell. The vote stood: Reiniger, 3,184; Pursell, 3,155; Reiniger's majority, 29. He was the only democrat elected that year. In 1880, he was his party's candidate for Sheriff and was elected. The vote stood: Reiniger, 3,563; T. J. Pursell, 3,263. In 1883, he was a candidate for Street Commissioner but was defeated by Josiah Barlow by a vote of 1,268 to 1,227. Barlow's majority 41.

Mr. Reiniger has been engaged in farming and teaming and is at present in the coal business. He was married in May, 1865, to Mary J. Ramsey. She was born in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, in April, 1840. They have six children: Jennie F., the wife of William Cooley, resides in Montana; Minnie M., the wife of S. A. Watkins, lives in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; Charles P. resides at Payne, Paulding county, Ohio; Ellen Esther, the wife of William B. Prather, resides in Cincinnati, Ohio; Grace is at home and Edgar James died in infancy.

Ignatius Reitz

was born February 4, 1845, in Hesse, near Hanau, Germany. His father John Reitz, a stone cutter, was born in 1812. His mother was Amelia Weber, born in the same place, in Germany. He was one of three children—himself and two sisters: Mrs. Adolph Hurth and Mrs. Joseph Vollmer of Portsmouth, Ohio. His parents came to this country in 1847, landing near Baltimore. They had friends at Portsmouth and came directly to this place. His father spent the remainder of his life in Portsmouth in died in 1866, and his mother in 1899. Mr. Reitz attended the public schools of Portsmouth for a time and then went to St. Mary's school, until he was fourteen years of age, when he went to learn the business of stone-cutting of his father, John Reitz, who built the first stone-sawmill in Portsmouth on Second and Massie streets in 1865. After his death, his son Ignatius undertook the business and has conducted it ever since.

He has been engaged in quarrying as well as sawing stone since 1866. The quarries are located at Carey's Run four miles from Portsmouth. He employs 75 men, 30 in the mill, 30 at the quarry, and about 15 teamsters. The mill has eleven gangs of saws which run day and night. It cuts 1,000 cubic feet of stone per day. The stone sawed in this mill is used for building purposes, caps, sills, steps, trimmings, and paving. Mr. Reitz also manufactures scythe-stones some of which are sent to Europe. The business is now confined to sawed stone. From 1872 to 1880, he conducted the business with Charles Bode as a partner. Since 1880, he has conducted the business alone. May 29, 1892, the business was incorporated under the name of The Reitz Stone Company. Its capital stock is $100,000, $60,000 of which is paid up. The officers of the Company are: Ignatius Reitz, president; Simon P. Reitz, vice president; Albert J. Reitz, secretary and treasurer.

Our subject was married June 9, 1874 to Mary A. Balmert, daughter of Simon and Elizabeth (Hauk) Balmert. They have the following children: Albert J., mentioned above; Eleanor, at home; Simon P., mentioned above; Mary Amelia; Antoinette; Cecilia; John and George. Mr. Reitz was a democrat until seven years ago when, dissatisfied with the financial policy of his party, he became a republican. He is a member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church and has never sought or held any public office except as a member of the City Board of Equalization.

Captain George Washington Rhodes

was born in Saratoga county, New York, March 23, 1830. His father was Ira Rhodes and his mother's maiden name was Lydia Deming. His grandfather, John Rhodes, was a Revolutionary soldier. (See Revolutionary Soldiers.) His grandfather on his mother's side, Daniel Deming, was also a Revolutionary soldier, whose record is published in this book. His father moved to a farm near Chautauqua Lake when he was four years old. His brother Daniel had come to Portsmouth in 1842 and our subject came here in 1844, his brother John came in 1846 or 1847.

In coming to Portsmouth, he came from Olean to Pittsburg in a skiff and from Pittsburg he came on a steamboat. He attended the Fourth street school in 1845. He went into the lumber business with Dan Rhodes, who operated the first planing mill in Portsmouth in 1850. It was situated on the northeast corner of Third and Gay streets. He remained with his brother until 1857 when the two went to Cottageville, West Virginia, having exchanged property with Colonel Oscar F. Moore. He remained there twenty years and his brother Dan died there in 1884.

In 1859, he went into the saw-mill business for himself and remained in it until 1862, when he rented the mill for one dollar per day, recruited a company and went into the army. His brother Dan was a prisoner for six months in 1861. George W. went into Company K, Ninth Virginia Infantry, for three years. He was in for one year and was discharged. He was First Lieutenant and was in several engagements.

After he left the army, he returned to Cottageville and was in his brother's store for two years. Then he moved to Syracuse and kept boarders. In 1867, he bought the "Mocking Bird," a propeller, and run her on the Ohio river. He was master and pilot. In 1869 he took this boat to Cincinnati and towed for the company which had the contract for building the Cincinnati Southern bridge. He made $35.00 a day there and afterwards his boat was sunk in the ice and he lost $5,000. He built another boat called the "Silver Star" but soon sold her and went on the wharfboat at Syracuse till about 1871. Then he ran on the "Humming Bird" for Captain Melvin Brown for six years, as pilot.

He came to Portsmouth in 1877 and went into business with Frank Keffer and Carl Lehman in lumber and was with them for three years. In 1880, he kept a feed store on Gallia street and was in that business until 1890. He was Truant Officer in Portsmouth for four years from 1889 to 1901.

He was married in March, 1854 to Annis D. Hicks, daughter of William Hicks, at Spencer Chapel. They have had the following children: Mary, wife of Lee Saltzer, died in 1894 and left two children, daughters, Annis Saltzer employed at Drew, Selby & Company's and Esther a teacher in the public schools; Garret Dow, died in childhood; William A. clerk in the gas office in Portsmouth; George H., accidentally killed at the age of sixteen; Lizzie married William Edwards, a book-keeper at Drew, Selby & Company's; Cora lives at home; Susie, the wife of Henry Farmer, a son of James H. Farmer. He has thirteen grandchildren.

He is a member of the Second Presbyterian church and has been ever since he returned to Portsmouth. He has always been a republican. Mr. Rhodes is a quiet citizen, modest and retiring. He tries to do every duty presented to him in every relation of life. He enjoys the respect and confidence of all who know him and is regarded as a model citizen.

Captain James Wood Ricker

was born July 15, 1841 at Jackson Furnace, Jackson county, Ohio. He was the only child of Jacob Hurd Ricker and Mary Frances Wood, his wife, a daughter of Benjamin Wood. His boyhood was spent at Ohio Furnace, Iron Valley and Madison Furnace, where his father was employed. He also attended school in Portsmouth, Ironton and Jackson, Ohio. He was store-keeper at Madison Furnace, Jackson county, Ohio, when the war broke out. On September 1, 1861 he enlisted in Company H, 2d West Virginia Cavalry for three years and was made first duty Sergeant, October 1, 1861. He was promoted to First Sergeant, June 1, 1862, and to Second Lieutenant of Company A, June 1, 1863. He was made First Lieutenant of Company H, May 24, 1864 and was mustered out November 29, 1864.

After his return from the army he went to Madison furnace and bought an interest and became Assistant Manager. The firm was Peters, Ricker & Company. They owned the furnace until the fall of 1868, when they sold out to Clare, Duduit & Company. Mr. Ricker came to Portsmouth in March, 1869, and bought an interest in the drug store of Bartram, Jones & Company, formerly the old Shackleford drug store on Front street. He remained in that business until August, 1873, when he sold out to Doctor John F. Davis. He was then in the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine Works for five years. He had charge of a ranch in Dakota for two years. He was clerk of the city Water Works Board from 1889 to 1894. In 1900, he was sergeant-at-arms of the State Decennial Board of Equalization.

On November 3, 1870, he was married to Miss Louisiana Moore, daughter of Captain William Moore. They have had five children: Margaret Tracy, a teacher in the Portsmouth High School; William Wood, now in Cleveland, a mechanical engineer; Robert Carleton, secretary and treasurer of the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine Works and of the Portsmouth Pressed Steel Company; Elizabeth Virginia, a teacher in the Portsmouth Free Kindergarten and Mary Frances at home.

Mr. Ricker has always been a republican. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Loyal Legion. He is also a member of the First Presbyterian church and assistant superintendent of the Sabbath school of that church.

James Silas Rickey

was born December 17, 1851. His parents were Ephraim Wanser Rickey and Anna (Rockwell) Rickey. He was born in Madison township, Scioto county, where he now resides. He had a common school education. He played truant as often as he studied. He was raised a farmer. In 1874, he became a partner with Oliver E. Emory, at California, Pike county, Ohio. He went into the cattle business, buying and selling cattle, and was engaged in that for twelve years, buying and selling only. In 1888, he lost all he had in the cattle business and was insolvent. It was caused by his having 600 or 700 head of cattle on hand when the price went down. He sold his farm and was not sued by anyone when his condition was known. The same year he went into the timber business and made back all he had lost. He was in the timber business until 1894, when he was nominated for Sheriff on the Republican ticket and was elected over C. A. Cole, democrat, by a vote of 4,227 to 1,463. He was elected again in 1896 over J. C. Shively by a vote of 5,495 to 3,622.

After he left the Sheriff's Office, he went to farming on the Emory place in Madison township and bought the Marshall, the Dawson and also the Hugh Wooten places in the same township. His house and all his farm buildings are new and are built on the most modern plans for convenience and comfort. His house stands on a commanding point just below the foot hills on the right side of the valley coming from California to Harrisonville, and occupies one of the finest building sites in the county. There he and his wife dispense a generous hospitality.

On March 16, 1873, he was married to Alice Wells, daughter of Elijah Wells. She died in 1890. He was married the second time to Harriet Alice Warren, daughter of Lewis Warren. He has a son Lewis Denver, aged twenty-five, residing in Pittsburg. His second son Charles Edmond is a book-keeper at the Excelsior shoe factory in Portsmouth. He has a son Ephraim Elijah residing at home. Of the second marriage, he has had two daughters Rosetta Frances and Margaret Adelaide who died in infancy. He has one surviving daughter Jessie Marie aged seven years. Mr. Rickey is a man of a generous disposition, genial and courteous with everyone, free-handed to every good and public enterprise. He is a man very popular in his neighborhood and throughout the county. He has as few enemies as any man could have who is extensively engaged in business as he is. He has a good farm, but his forte is stock raising.

Nathan T. Rickey

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, February 9, 1859. He is the son of Ephraim W. and Anna (Rockwell) Rickey. His paternal grandparents were Jacob and Tryphena (Strong) Rickey, who came from New York to Ohio in 1817. His maternal grandparents were Jonathan and Rebecca Mead Rockwell, natives of Madison township. The Rickeys are of Scotch-Irish descent. The boyhood and youth of Nathan was spent on the farm and in the district school. He completed his education by a two years course at Dennison University, at Granville, Ohio. He is a republican, and was at one time president of the Blaine Club, of Portsmouth. He is a Mason and a member of the Third Street Christian church.

He married Lois H. Brown, daughter of Nathan and Julia (Wells) Brown, of Pike County, August 3, 1880. They have four children, Anna, Nathan Ernest, Angus L. Sanford, and J. Huston Varner. Mr. Rickey was traveling salesman for Sanford, Varner & Company, clothiers, from 1887 to 1892 and for J. Elsmann, clothier, from 1892 to 1898. Since 1898, he has been engaged in the real estate business.

JAMES SILAS RICKEY.

Mr. Rickey has the happy faculty of adapting himself to any situation confronting him. He is noted for his even disposition and good temper. No one ever saw him angry or perturbed. He is a born philosopher without making any professions on the subject. As a result of this happy disposition, Mr. Rickey is popular with all sorts and conditions of men. But while he is philosophizing, he never lets any business escape him. Mr. Rickey is one of the most honorable of men. He can never do too much for a friend. He never lost any position he ever held, but made all changes of his own motion. He is one of the best types of the progressive, energetic, young American.

David Riesman, M. D., was born in Stadt, Lengsfeld, Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar, March 25, 1867, the son of Nathan Riesmann and Sophie Riesmann, nee Eisman. He attended the public schools in Salzungen until the age of twelve, and then the Gymnasium at Meiningen the two years following. He emigrated to the United States in the fall of 1881, with his mother and sister. They came at once to Portsmouth and our subject entered the employ of his maternal uncles, L. Eisman & Brother. He attended the public schools in Portsmouth and worked in the store before and after school hours. After completing the course in the High School, which he did in three years, he became a clerk in his uncle's store, where he remained for three years, having charge of the manufacturing, after the demise of Leopold Eisman.

He entered the Medical School of the University of Michigan in 1889 and remained there one year. The next two years, he studied in the University of Pennsylvania where he completed his course in medicine and was graduated in 1892. After graduation, he served for fifteen months as a resident physician in the Philadelphia hospital. He then located in Philadelphia and became attached to the University of Pennsylvania, first in the Department of Pathology where he was demonstrator for several years. At present, he is teaching clinical medicine, and is engaged in private and consulting practise.

Among the positions held by him are the following: Visiting Physician to the Philadelphia and Polyclinic Hospitals, Consulting Physician to the Jewish Hospital, Professor of Clinical Medicine in the Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine, Instructor in Clinical Medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, Visiting Physician to the Northern Day Nursery, and Neurologist to the Northern Dispensary.

He is a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the County Medical, Pathological, Neurological and Pediatric Societies, and of the American Medical Association; an honorary member of the Cumberland County, New Jersey, Medical Society; a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and of the German-American Society; president of the Northern Medical Association and a member of the University and Faculty Clubs.

James Richardson

was born in Ireland, December 24, 1825. His father was Robert Richardson, and his mother was Martha McDonald. His parents had four children of whom James was the youngest. His father was a farmer. He went to school in Ireland, and married Margaret Simmons, in the year of 1847. On July 4, 1847, he landed in New York, coming from Ireland with his wife. He had four children of his first marriage, but all died young. His wife died in 1860.

On reaching the United States he went to Lansingburg, New York, and engaged in business in a brush factory. He remained there till 1853, when his wife, having a sister in Portsmouth, wished to locate there, and he came to Portsmouth and became pay-master for his brother-in-law, James Connolley, on the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad. He remained as such for a year. In 1856, he engaged in the grocery business in Portsmouth, on the corner of Fifth and Chillicothe streets, and continued in that until 1875. In that year, he built the three-story building on the corner and retired from the grocery business. He continued farming until 1893, since which time he has been retired entirely.

Mr. Richardson has always been a democrat. In 1861, he was appointed Infirmary Director to fill a vacancy. In 1862, he was a candidate for that office, and was elected, receiving 1,862 votes to 1,294 for John McDowell. In 1865, he was again a candidate for the same office, but was defeated by Valentine Burkel. He received 1,760 votes to 2,185 for Burkel. In 1867, he was again a candidate for the same office, and defeated Silas W. Cole, receiving 2,532 votes to 2,306 for Mr. Cole. In 1877, he was a candidate for County Commissioner and received 2,699 votes to 2,777 for James Skelton. Mr. Richardson has always enjoyed the confidence of the business men of the city and county. He served as a member of the city Board of Equalization from 1875 till 1894, and made a most efficient officer.

On February 29, 1864, Mr. Richardson was married to Mary Jane Orme, daughter of John Orme. There are five children of this marriage: James, Jr., in New York city, engaged with Hill Brothers at the corner of Washington and Beach streets; Anna B., wife of John Ives, superintendent of the Tremper Shoe Company; Florence A., at home; William Benjamin, engaged in the store of Richardson, Neudorfer & Silcox; Alfred Hayward, with Brokaw Brothers, wholesale clothiers at the corner of Fourth avenue and Astor Place, New York. Mr. Richardson was once prominent as a Mason, but is now retired. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church of Portsmouth. Like all Irishmen, he has made money and saved it, and perhaps in this respect has done better than most of his countrymen. He is reluctant to create obligations, but when he makes one, he keeps it.

was born in Greenville, Clarion county, Pa., April 23, 1839. He was the son of Sylvanus Drake and Maria Parker Rifenberick. He grew up in Pennsylvania, and when very young came to Ironton, Ohio, and became a clerk in Clark Brothers' grocery.

In 1861, when the war broke out, he enlisted in Co. E, 18th, O. V. I., April 22, 1861, and was appointed First Sergeant and served in the regiment, until it was discharged August 28, 1861. He re-entered the service the second time on September 17, 1861, and was made First Lieutenant of Co. G, 4th Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and was promoted from First Lieutenant, June 2, 1862, to Captain of Co. I., and resigned February 13, 1864. The regiment was organized at Camp Dennison, November 6, 1861, and was in the following battles: Bowling Green, Ky., Feb. 15, 1862; Nashville, Tenn., March 8, 1862; Huntsville, Ala., April 11, 1862; Bridgeport Ala., April 29, 1862; Lexington, Ky., October 17, 1862; Murfreesboro, Tenn., January 1-2, 1863; Lebanon, Tenn., February 8, 1863; Bradyville, Tenn., March 1, 1863; Snow Hill, Tenn., April 2-3, 1863; Chickamauga, Ga., September 19-23, 1863; Middleton, Tenn., May 21, 1863; and Cleveland, Tenn., November 27, 1863. Captain Rifenberick was in numerous skirmishes incident to cavalry service, which are not given in the Ohio Roster. At Bradyville, Tenn., on March 1, 1863, he was in an engagement, in which he was wounded in the hip, and was absent from that time until February, 1864, on account of his wounds. He resigned at the latter date, his resignation being necessary on account of his disability from wounds. Captain Rifenberick has carried the bullet from this wound ever since he received it.

After his return, he made his home in Cincinnati, and engaged in the commission business. He was married to Miss Lucy Bell, the daughter of the late Robert Bell, of Portsmouth, Ohio, November 21, 1866, and he engaged in the shoe business in Portsmouth, in partnership with his father-in-law, and resided there until 1876. He was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth for four years. In 1876, he moved to Cincinnati, and was engaged in various enterprises until 1880, when he engaged in the railroad business with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad, which position, he still holds. He has two sons: Robert Bell Rifenberick, born March 30, 1868, at Cincinnati; and Richard Parker Rifenberick, born October 4, 1872, at Portsmouth, Ohio. Capt. Rifenberick is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Loyal Legion.

His son Robert Bell Rifenberick graduated at Chalfant and Marsh's school at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and afterwards entered Miami University. He made a special study of Civil Engineering and has been following that profession ever since, and has been in the employ of one of the largest street railway syndicates in the country. He now has an office as Civil Engineer in Cleveland. He was married to Miss Ada Cornelia Marsh, of Cleveland, and they have one daughter, Eleanor.

Captain Rifenberick's second son, Richard Parker Rifenberick, Jr., graduated at the military school at Gambier, Ohio, and afterwards attended Kenyon College. While at Kenyon, he received his West Point appointment and passed a very creditable examination, but was compelled to give up that career, for the time being, on account of trouble with his eyes. He traveled for the Wilson & McCallay Tobacco Co., of Middletown, Ohio, until 1899, when he received one of the four appointments of Second Lieutenant in the U. S. A., from civil life, allotted to the State of Ohio. There were not less than 8,000 applicants for the four appointments. He passed the necessary examination and received his commission April 10, 1899. He was assigned to Co. B, 16th Regiment, U. S. I. On May 30, 1899, he sailed from San Francisco for the Philippines and was there for eighteen months. His health, having broken, he was sent back to this country, and put on duty at the Columbus Barracks, where he was examined for promotion and made a First Lieutenant. He was transferred to the 29th Regiment and detailed as Adjutant of the First Battalion of the 29th, which position he now holds. The regiment was stationed at Columbus Barracks until February 22, 1902, when it was sent to San Francisco, Cal., from which place, it was sent to the Philippines.

Captain Rifenberick is honorable and upright and is faithful to all matters entrusted to his care. He is a loyal and patriotic citizen, and a capable business man. He is ambitious to excel and is zealous in the performance of all duties. He is a modest, high-minded and kind-hearted man.

Samuel Agnew Riggs

was born at Hanging Rock, Lawrence county, Ohio, March 1, 1835, and came an infant to Portsmouth with his parents. He received his early education in the public schools of Portsmouth, graduating from the High School in 1849. In 1851, he entered an academy at Marietta, Ohio, where he prepared for Marietta College, which he entered in the fall of 1852. He remained at this institution until the close of the second term of his junior year, when he entered Jefferson College, Canonsburgh, Pa., from which he graduated in 1856, with the degree of A. B., later receiving the degree of A. M. He studied law in Pittsburg for a time, and in 1858, graduated from the Cincinnati, Ohio, Law School and was admitted to the Hamilton County Bar.

In the spring of 1859, he located at Lawrence, Kansas, where he has since resided. From January, 1860, to January, 1862, he was County Attorney of Douglas county, Kansas; from January, 1862, to January, 1866, he was District Attorney of the Fourth Judicial District of Kansas, a district comprising eight counties and containing at that time, about one-fourth of the population of the state. In 1866, he was elected to the State Senate on the Republican ticket, was chairman of the Judiciary Committee and one of three commissioners appointed to "revise and codify the Civil and Criminal Codes of procedure and all laws of a General Character of the State of Kansas." The volume of "General Statutes of Kansas" of 1868, is the product of their labor. He resigned from the Senate in 1867, to become United States District Attorney for the District of Kansas, which office he held for two years.

In 1870, he left the Republican party, and in 1872, he was a delegate to the Liberal Republican convention in Cincinnati, which nominated Horace Greeley for the presidency, and was chosen as Kansas member of the National Committee. He was the candidate of his party in 1872, to represent the state at large in Congress. In 1878, he was a member of the Kansas House of Representatives, chairman of the Judiciary Committee and member of the Railroad Committee; and as the author of the "Riggs railroad bill" initiated the legislative effort to place the railroads of Kansas under the control of a board of Commissioners. In 1885, he was the Democratic candidate for Congress to take the seat made vacant by the death of Dudley C. Haskell. At the National Democratic Convention of 1896, he was a delegate and a member of the Committee on Organization. In the fall of 1896, he was elected, on the Democratic ticket, Judge of the District Court, for the Fourth Judicial District of Kansas, embracing the counties of Douglas, Franklin and Anderson. This district usually gives a republican majority of from 1,000 to 2,000. For the past ten years he has been connected with the Kansas State University as a lecturer in its law department.

He married in Pittsburg, Pa., December 31, 1861, Kate Doane, daughter of Henry and Jane (Kirkpatrick) Earle. Her father was for many years a wholesale and retail merchant and prominent citizen of Pittsburg. They have one child, Henry Earle Riggs, who graduated from the University of Kansas, in 1886, was for six years chief engineer of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Railroad, and is now a prominent sanitary engineer at Toledo.

Judge Riggs is a Congregationalist, while his wife is a member of the Episcopal church.

Charles F. Robey

was born February 4, 1834, near Wheeling, W. Va. His father was Isaac Robey, a native of Maryland, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Ann West, the daughter of Rev. Abel West. Isaac Robey disappeared in 1837, and was never after heard of. It was believed he was murdered. His wife survived him but three years, leaving our subject and another son, James H., who was taken by relatives to Pennsylvania. Charles F. was reared in Ohio county, West Virginia, and kept in ignorance of the history of his parents and their family. He was reared by a guardian, who was cruel to him and with whom he resided until 1860, when he learned photography, and became a traveling photographer. He followed this occupation in various places and in farming until 1888, when he located in Glouster, Ohio, and has since given his entire attention to the real estate business. In traveling about, Mr. Robey spent much time in attempting to solve the mystery of his life's history. He had a guardian who imposed himself wrongfully into the position and did all in his power to conceal from his ward the facts of his history. Mr. Robey is a republican and a faithful member of the Methodist church as his mother was before him. He tries to do the best he can for himself and those about him.

Joseph Rockwell

was born on the Judge Dawson farm, in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, November 22, 1847. His father was Charles Rockwell, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Norris. He was the oldest of eleven children of his parents. He attended school in the neighborhood and was reared a farmer. He was about fourteen years of age when he started to go out for himself, and engaged in farming. He went to work for James D. Thomas, where he remained seven years, then he started in farming for himself at the age of twenty-one and farmed one year. He then moved to Clay township and resided nineteen years on the James D. Thomas farm in that township, which was originally the Charles T. Mastin farm. He left there in 1890, and moved near Lucasville on the Wm. M. Thomas farm. He has lived there ever since, and has been a farmer all his life.

He was married in 1870, to Mary Field, daughter of James Field. They have the following children: Charles, residing on the James D. Thomas farm, married, and is engaged with his father in farming; Eli, residing with his elder brother on the Thomas farm; Leroy, at home; Mary Elizabeth; Bertha, married Arthur Moulton, the son of Hon. Chandler J. Moulton, and is engaged in the timber and mercantile business with his father; John Henry, at home; Mary Belle and Ethel Louise. All of his children are living and in good health.

Mr. Rockwell had a brother John, who died in the service of his country in the civil war. He enlisted in Company B, 173rd O. V. I., August 26, 1864, at the age of eighteen, for one year. He died January 14, 1865, in the U. S. General Hospital, Nashville, Tenn. He is buried in the National cemetery seven miles north of Nashville, on the Gallatin road. His father, Charles Rockwell, entered Company F, 140th O. V. I., May 2, 1864, and served 100 days, until September 3, 1864. He died in 1898.

Our subject would have been in the service himself but he could not pass physical examination. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge at Lucasville, and Mt. Vernon Chapter and Calvary Commandery at Portsmouth. He has always been a republican, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lucasville.

George Kinney Ross

was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, July 1, 1855, in the old family Ross residence where his father and mother went to house-keeping directly after their marriage in 1847. His father was Samuel Randall Ross, who has a separate sketch herein, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Kinney, eldest daughter of Washington Kinney, who was then a prominent banker and business man of Portsmouth. Our subject attended the public schools of Portsmouth until the age of sixteen, when he was in the Junior Class of the High School. He left school then and at once engaged in business with his father for whom he clerked for about five years. For two years afterwards he was a commercial salesman.

In 1878, he located in Warren, Ohio, and formed a partnership with John H. McCombs, a banker and capitalist, in the wholesale grocery business. The firm was McCombs & Ross. They carried on the business in Warren, Ohio, until 1890, when on account of Mr. McComb's death, Mr. Ross moved the business to Cleveland. In the latter city, Mr. Ross formed a partnership with Leonard F., and Solon Burgess, under the firm name of Burgess & Ross. In 1894, Solon Burgess died and L. F. Burgess retired from the business, which was purchased by our subject, William F. Sprague and Thomas Waller Ross. They conducted it for four years under the firm name of Ross, Sprague & Co.

In 1898, the business was merged into a corporation as The Ross & Sprague Co., with George K. Ross, president, Thomas Waller Ross, secretary and treasurer, and William F. Sprague, vice president. The business was capitalized at one-half million dollars and is now successfully conducted by the same corporation. The company is one of the largest in Ohio, with sales of over two millions annually. The Ross & Sprague Company occupies a whole block in Cleveland, and have railroad trains deliver their goods into their building in carload lots, and ship them out in the same way. Their business has every modern convenience and the Company is the only one in its line in Cleveland, having railroad connections with every railroad in the city. It employs twenty-five traveling men and over one-hundred other employees.

In 1901, the Knickerbocker Sugar Refining Company of New York, composed of some of the larger wholesale groceries of the West and Northwest, was organized, with a capital stock of of $1,500,000. Mr. Ross was elected its president, and spends much of his time in New York city in connection with its business.

Mr. Ross was married in Warren, Ohio, Dec. 24, 1879 to Miss Helen McCombs. She died in January, 1881, and in November, 1882, he married her sister, Charlotte McCombs. Mr. Ross has two children, John McCombs, who reached his majority in 1901, and the same year graduated from Harvard College. He has a daughter, Bessie.

Mr. Ross is a very busy man, and is highly appreciated wherever he is known. He is president of the American Exchange National Bank of Cleveland. He is a vestryman of the St. Paul's Episcopal church of Cleveland, a member of the Missionary Committee of the Diocese of Ohio, and a trustee of the Hiram House, in Cleveland. He is also a member of the Union and Colonial Clubs of Cleveland, and of the Manhattan and Merchants' Clubs of New York. Mr. Ross enjoys the singular distinction of never having had any reverses or backsets in his business career, but of having been uniformly successful.

Mr. Ross is everything that is noble and true. His greatest ambition is the welfare of his family and the happiness of his friends. He is a model churchman. He is active in every work he undertakes, whether it be business or social. In business he is most successful—of absolute integrity—does exactly what he agrees to do, and requires the same of all others. To all those under him, he is kind and firm, and he treats his business associates with the greatest respect. His relations with his associates in business are uniformly harmonious and pleasant. He is at all times a gentleman, has the highest ideals of life, and lives up to them. He is a prominent figure in the Chamber of Commerce in Cleveland. Not one does more work, or takes more interest, in charitable enterprises than himself. He is always level headed and cool, and is never perturbed or excited. From every point in which he may be viewed, he is a first-class citizen and business man. He endears himself to all his friends. He has taken a high position socially in Cleveland since his residence there. His residence is at 785, Prospect street.

Benjamin Franklin Royse

His earliest ancestors, on the paternal side, of which we have definite knowledge, were William Royse and Elizabeth Philson of Flemingsburg, Kentucky. Benjamin Royse, their son, married Rebecca Nichols of Adams county, Ohio, who was the daughter of William Nichols of Maryland, and Nancy Bacon, of Steam Furnace, Adams county, Ohio. To them were born William; B. Frank; George; Mrs. Elizabeth Teeters, afterwards Givens, late of Kansas; and John N. Royse. John Nicholas Royse, father of our subject, married Sarah Piatt, daughter of John H. Piatt, who came to Adams county, Ohio, from Virginia, and of Sarah Jones, a daughter of Andrew Jones, late of Brush Creek, Ohio. Mrs. J. N. Royse's grandparents were John H. Piatt of Virginia, a soldier of the war of 1812, and Sarah Caine.

John N. Royse was born March 6, 1833, in Nile township, Ohio. He was left an orphan at the age of six years, but, possessed of an unusual amount of energy and grit, by his own efforts, acquired considerable wealth. For several years, he engaged in general merchandising and lumbering at Friendship, Ohio. In 1870, he was elected County Commissioner and moved to Portsmouth. From 1873 to 1876, he served as County Treasurer. In 1878, he moved to his large farm near Harrisonville, Missouri. Of late years, he has resided in Kansas City, Missouri. His family consists of Benjamin Franklin, Portsmouth, Ohio; Lemuel E., Sumpter, Oregon; Otho O., Harrisonville, Missouri; Thomas B., Kansas City, Missouri; Orville D., Joplin, Missouri; Mrs. Roberta Von Volkenburgh, Kansas City; William Kinney, Kansas City, Missouri; Miss Nellie, Kansas City. Two daughters, Alice B. and Ina J. died in childhood.

B. Frank Royse, oldest child of John N. and Sarah Piatt Royse, was born on Carey's Run, Scioto county, Ohio, October 11, 1854. He received his early education at Friendship, Ohio, but on moving to Portsmouth, in 1871, attended its public schools. After leaving school, he went to work at the Court House in the Auditor's office, under Captain James Skelton, and afterwards in the Treasurer's office with his father and then served as Deputy Sheriff under Fred Reiniger.

On December 26, 1877, he was married to Miss Mary E. Feurt, daughter of James H. Feurt, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and a teacher in the Portsmouth Public public schools. For about a year thereafter, Mr. Royse was proprietor of the Massie House in Portsmouth, after which time he purchased a farm two miles below South Portsmouth, Kentucky, and removed thereto. After eleven years of farming, he returned to Portsmouth, and has since been engaged in the manufacture of red brick, being at present proprietor of the Royse Pressed Brick Works. With the exception of one year, he has been a member of the School Board for the past eight years, serving two years as its president. His children are: Edith a teacher in the Portsmouth public schools, Sarah Helen, and Benjamin Harold.

Mr. Royse is a gentleman who asks no political distinction. While a republican, he has no anxiety to follow a career of office holding. He devotes his whole time to his business and seeks success through it. He is a good neighbor and a good citizen. He is a very shrewd business man and can always hold his own in making a bargain. He has excellent judgment in all the affairs of life.

Henry Benjamin Ruel

was born at Burning Springs, West Virginia, June 10, 1861. He is a son of Jacob W. Ruel and Artemesia (Lankford) Ruel. His boyhood and youth were spent in Portsmouth. He attended the Fourth street school and obtained only a common education. His father was in the Civil war. He first engaged in liquor business in 1897. In 1900, he commenced in the feed and grocery business and is still engaged in that and the liquor business. He is a republican. At present, he is a councilman from the First ward. He was married December 31, 1900, to Barbara A. Gasele, daughter of Michael Gasele, a native of Germany. They have three children: Henry G., Hugh H., and Madeline. Mr. Ruel is an industrious, active and energetic business man. He makes a good impression on all his acquaintances. He is prompt to observe all his obligations and possesses the confidence of the business community.

Robert Charles Ruhlman

was born May 30, 1879 at Portsmouth, Ohio, and has always resided in his native city. His father was Philip Ruhlman and his mother's maiden name was Amella Goetz. His mother was born in Germany, and his father in Portsmouth. He is one of a family of two daughters and two sons. He obtained his education in the Portsmouth schools up to the B Grammar, when at the age of thirteen he left school and went to work in the Drew-Selby shoe factory, and worked there for eight years. He then went into Jenkins & Company's plumbing establishment and there learned plumbing and steam fitting. He worked with them until they failed in business in June, 1896. He then went into business for himself opening a shop at No. 98 Gallia street, August 13, 1900, and has conducted the business on his own account ever since. Sept. 1, 1901, he changed his place of business to No. 94½ Gallia street, where he is now located. He employs three men and carries on an extensive business. He is a steam fitter as well as a plumber, and puts up steam heating apparatus.

He was married May 14, 1901 to Catharine Bauer, a daughter of Philip Bauer, of Eleventh street, the well known broom-maker. Our subject resides on Kinney's Lane, No. 1,077. He attends the Second Presbyterian church and is a republican in his political views. He is a member of the Order of Red Men and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a young man of excellent character and habits, and bids fair to be one of the prominent business men of the city.

Oscar Taylor Rupel

was born at Chillicothe, Ohio, September 23, 1848, son of Oscar and Mary G. Rupel. The early years of his life were spent at Slate Mills, a few miles from Chillicothe; later he moved to Chillicothe and attended the public schools. Among his classmates were Rev. John Ely, Henry and James Taylor Franklin, and Angus L. Sanford. After a course in business college, he was given a clerkship in his uncle, Theodore Rupel's store in Chillicothe, his mother being a partner. He was industrious and ambitious. On September 20, 1866, he was made entry clerk for the wholesale dry goods house of Rumsey, Road & Reed of Portsmouth, Ohio and remained with them until 1869, when he entered the wholesale clothing house of Miller, Voorheis & Company of Portsmouth. In December, 1875, he bought an interest in that business, which at that time was removed to Cincinnati, Ohio.

On November 16, 1876 he married Miss Julia Pursell, daughter of James and Amanda Pursell.

In 1880, the firm became Voorheis, Miller & Rupel. Mr. Rupel devoted himself to his chosen work with great earnestness. As a result from overwork, he was taken sick, April 4, 1891, at his home in Avondale, and died May 24, 1891. He was laid to rest in Greenlawn cemetery, Portsmouth, Ohio.

His boyhood days were spent in Chillicothe, his manhood and commercial life in Portsmouth and Cincinnati. He set himself to be true to God and man and succeeded. The people who knew him, loved him; the aged were sure of his reverence, the children of his love and strength. In his business career of over twenty-five years, he kept his name untarnished and demonstrated that business prosperity is consistent with perfect integrity of character. He was quiet and unobtrusive in his manners, genial and true to his friends. He was active and useful in church affairs. He occupied important official relations in Trinity and Avondale M. E. churches, Cincinnati, Ohio. He was liberal and active in charitable and religious work, but without ostentation. He was called away in the prime of manhood and at the height of his usefulness. He left to his friends the memory of an honorable Christian life.

James Madison Russell

was born June 25, 1858, at Portsmouth, Ohio. His father's name was Henry Russell, and his mother's maiden name was Nancy Jane Grimes, daughter of William Grimes. Our subject received his early education in the common schools of Rush township. He attended the Lucasville High School one year. He has always been a farmer and fruit grower. He was married September 20, 1898, to Miss Mertie Chesnut, daughter of E. P. Chesnut. They have one child, Nancy Alice. Mr. Russell is a republican and always has been. He is a member of the Methodist church at Lucasville. He is mail carrier on the Rural Free Delivery Route No. 1 from Lucasville, Ohio. He owns a farm of 180 acres in Rush township.

Mr. Russell is honest, upright and truthful; of excellent habits, of high moral belief, and is an exemplary citizen in every way. He is public spirited and progressive, always ready to do that which will advance the interest of the community in which he dwells. He is always firmly fixed in his purposes, and treats everybody with kindness and courtesy. He has held positions of public trust with credit to himself and to the public service, and is a man of strong force of character, and good natural intellect.

Daniel Martin Ryan

a son of Michael P. Ryan, a native of county Clare, Ireland, and Bridget (Pat) Ryan, was born at Burlington, Ohio, July 18, 1861. His father brought him to Portsmouth when he was only five years old. His father died in 1888, and his mother died in 1898. Our subject attended the parochial school of the Holy Redeemer church of Portsmouth and the Portsmouth public schools until he reached the A Grade in the High School, when he went to clerk in Harry Buskirk's store on the corner of Second and Chillicothe streets. He remained here for a year, and then went into the employ of Drew, Selby & Co. The next year he worked for Padan Brothers, shoe manufacturers. He then went to Cincinnati and engaged in the same work for a short time there. He returned to Portsmouth and was engaged with Drew Selby & Co., for ten years, as a finisher. In 1894, he went into the general insurance business in Portsmouth, and has been in it ever since. He is also a real estate agent, and has his office in the Elk Building. Mr. Ryan was originally a democrat, but in 1884, he was "regenerated" and is now a republican. He is a communicant of the Holy Redeemer church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He is a member of the Columbus, Ohio, Council, No. 400, Knights of Columbus.

George Moses Sallady was born February 6, 1847. His father was John Miller Salladay and his mother's maiden name was Martha Hayward, the daughter of Moses Hayward. He was the youngest of three children. His eldest sister, Harriet Jane died at the age of seventeen. Mrs. Sam Bierly is also a sister. He was reared on a farm and attended the district school. He has never held a public office. He is a member of the Old Town M. E. church. March 11, 1874 he was married to Nettie Iams, daughter of John D. Feurt and Maria (Oldfield) Feurt. After his marriage he removed to his farm near Wharton station, Washington township, on the Cincinnati division of the Norfolk & Western railroad where he now resides. He has a farm of 190 acres of land, of which, 90 acres lie in the Scioto bottoms east of the canal. He has one child, Martha, wife of Charles F. Tracy. They have two children: Lucile and Harold. Mr. Sallady is a Mason. Mr. Sallady gives all his time and labor to his business and has been very successful. He is highly esteemed as a good neighbor and model citizen.

Enoch John Salt

was born in Covington, Kentucky, April 9, 1857. His father, Enoch Salt, was a native of Shropshire, England. His mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Davis and she was also a native of Shropshire England. They were married in England and came to the United States in 1845. Our subject had a common school education and left school in 1877. He then attended Commercial College in Cincinnati for one year. In 1878 he engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Covington, Kentucky, and remained there for two years. In the Spring of 1880, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and went into the Portsmouth Woolen Mills. The business was conducted under the name of The Portsmouth Woolen Mills, and the firm was composed of Enoch Salt, Sr., and Enoch Salt, Jr. The latter remained in the business ten years when he went to Superior, Wisconsin, engaged in the same business and was there for five years. In 1895, he came to Columbus, Ohio, and was advertising manager for F. R. Lazarus for seven years and then went into business with W. S. Moler, under the firm name of Salt & Moler, general advertising, at No. 508, Shultz Building, Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. Salt has directed many cantatas and operettas both in Portsmouth and Columbus. He is a composer of music. He composed the words and music of the following poems: "Mabel Gray," "Love's Regret," and "Blaine, the Light of Maine." He was at one time a contributor to "Flowers by the Wayside," a periodical since discontinued. He composed the poem, "He answered the Call on High," referring to General Grant. He composed the poem entitled "The Battle of Manila." He has written three works on advertising, "Over Rough Places," "Nuggets," and "My Advertising Partner." He has traveled all over the country, to South America, and South Africa. He has an autograph-letter from each of the Presidents, from Grant down, as to his writings, and has letters from Africa, South America and other countries as to his poems.

He was married June 16, 1880, to Ella Green, daughter of Charles S. Green, of Portsmouth. They have had five children: Clifford G., Nellie B., Lora B., died in infancy, Sara and Charles F. Mr. Salt is a republican and a member of the Baptist church. During his residence in Portsmouth, he was organist at Sixth Street M. E. church. Since he has resided in Columbus, he has been organist at Third Street M. E. church. He is an Odd Fellow and a Knight of Pythias.

Angus Lansing Sanford

was born in Chillicothe, September 8, 1849. His father was Joseph Sanford, a native of Chillicothe. His mother was Julia (Fleury) Sanford, a native of Washington, D. C. He was the fourth of his father's six children. He received his education in the Chillicothe schools, but quit one year before graduation. He went into a dry goods store in Chillicothe with Joseph Stewart and was there for two years. On July 9, 1866, he came to Portsmouth and was a clerk for Rumsey, Rhodes & Reed and remained with them for nine years. After that he went to Philadelphia and was with a wholesale house there until 1877. He came to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1877 and was with Tolle, Holton & Company. He was with Miller, Cissna & Company when they started in 1877.

When Colonel Varner died he came to Portsmouth and became a partner in the firm of McFarland, Sanford and Company in 1880. He bought Mr. Towell out and the firm became Sanford, Varner & Company and was composed of himself, W. H. and J. H. Varner. After Mr. Will Varner's death in May, 1896, he bought out his interest and continued to do business in Portsmouth until November 1, 1898, when his firm bought out Voorheis, Miller & Company of Cincinnati. The firm is composed of J. H. Varner, John S. Storrs and A. L. Sanford and is known as Sanford, Storrs & Varner. He is a partner in the firm of Burt, Hall & Company of Portsmouth. That firm succeeded Sanford, Varner & Company in 1889 and is composed of William Burt, Charles S. Hall and A. L. Sanford.

On October 11, 1870 he was married to Margaret Anna Varner, daughter of Colonel Sampson E. Varner. He has two sons: Clay Varner, aged thirty, in business with his father and Louis Angus, aged twenty-eight, also in business with his father.

He is a republican but has never held any office. He is a member of the Episcopal church and also a Mason, a Knight-Templar and an Elk. He was president and director of the Morton Club. He is a member of the Business Men's Club of Cincinnati.

The late Rev. James T. Franklin once remarked in the presence of Mr. James F. Towell that, "Mr. Sanford was a good son to his mother." Some time after, when the firm of Towell & McFarland had taken up the manufacture of clothing in addition to their dry goods business and were needing an experience salesman, the remark of Mr. Franklin was recalled to Mr. Towell, and as a result Mr. Sanford was invited to become a member of the firm of Towell and McFarland, which he accepted. The partnership was one of mutual confidence and esteem, and Mr. Sanford did his part of the business. The health of Mr. McFarland becoming impaired he was compelled to withdraw from the firm and take up his residence in California with his family. When Mr. Towell desired to withdraw entirely from business, he invited Mr. Sanford to take over the whole stock on credit, without any security whatever, in easy payments, thus manifesting confidence in one who had been "a good son" as well as a faithful partner. He was permitted to take an account of stock and place his own valuation on the same which he did to the entire satisfaction of Mr. Towell. Mr. Sanford was able to meet each and every payment to the day it was due and in the mean time he earned sufficient capital to purchase goods thereafter on a cash basis. His removal to Cincinnati, succeeding to the large and well established business of Voorheis, Miller & Company, was brought about by his success in Portsmouth and in recognition of his ability and integrity. This tribute from his late partner, Mr. James F. Towell, is as favorable as could be given to any person who has a sketch in this work.

John Stanton

was born May 1, 1840, in county Mayo, Ireland. His father was John Stanton and his mother's maiden name was Catherine O'Reilley. The family came to the United States in 1848, in a sailing vessel, and were six weeks on the ocean. They landed at New Orleans and came up the rivers to Portsmouth. They then went to Xenia and resided there one year and from there to Springfield, Ohio, where they resided two years. John Stanton, Sr., was engaged in railroad work. In 1851, he came to Scioto county and engaged in the construction work on the Scioto and Hocking Valley railroad, being then built from Portsmouth toward Jackson. John, Jr. began work on the line by carrying water for the men. The family made two moves in the meantime, one to Maysville, Kentucky, and one to Vinton county, O., but at the completion of the railroad from Portsmouth to Berlin Cross Roads, located at the latter place. John Stanton, Sr., died in 1858 and his wife survived until 1862.

Before he was of age, John Stanton, our subject, engaged in the mercantile business at Berlin Cross Roads and made a fortune by close attention to business. He enlisted in Company B, 196th O. V. I., for one year, on February 25, 1865. Soon after his enlistment, he was taken with the measles and unfitted for duty. He was mustered out May 13, 1865, at Cumberland, Maryland. He returned home and enlarged his business very much and continued in it until 1897, when he sold out to his sons, William and John, who conducted it as Stanton Brothers. Our subject had made a number of investments in Portsmouth. He also made investments in coal lands in Jackson county and after selling out his mercantile business gave his whole attention to the former.

On November 13, 1866 he was married to Miss Ellen Gallagher, daughter of Edward and Mary Gallagher, born in Donegal, Ireland. They had eleven children, six of whom grew to maturity. Their son, William, is a merchant at Berlin Cross Roads, Jackson County; John is a real estate agent at Portsmouth; Mary and Helen reside with their mother in Portsmouth; Robert E. is a student at Notre Dame, Ind. and Thomas Francis is a school boy at home.

John Stanton was always a democrat in politics. He was a communicant of the Roman Catholic church. He was very much devoted to his family and those dependent on him. He took great interest in all public improvements. He died August 19, 1898. His widow purchased the John W. Overturf property on the northeast corner of Ninth and Gay streets, soon after his death and removed to Portsmouth in November, 1899.

Peter Schafer

was born in Germany, in 1839. His father was Nicholas Schafer, and his mother was Agnes Fresh. When Peter was six years of age, his parents came to this country and settled in Brown county. His father had secured lands and was prospering when death overtook him. This changed the family fortunes and the mother took what was left after settling the estate and bought a small farm near Wrightsville, in Adams county. There he was reared on a farm. On September 8, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, 7th Ohio Volunteer Cavalry and served until July 1, 1865. While in the service, he had his skull crushed by a kick from a horse and has been permanently disabled. After the war, he was a farmer at Wrightsville till 1881 when he moved to Buena Vista. He resided there until 1896 when he removed to Portsmouth. He was married June 1, 1870 to Mrs. Maria Zimmerman, widow of Oliver Zimmerman. They have had five children. Their eldest, May Victoria, died at fifteen years. Cora Ethel, their second daughter is the wife of Noah Gray, a shoemaker. Flora E. is the wife of Charles Bussey, a carpenter. Kate is the wife of David Blenin, of Buena Vista. Their youngest, Curtis died in infancy. Mr. Schafer is a modest, retiring citizen. He carries on the business of package delivery in Portsmouth. He looks years older than his years, but he tries to make it up in cheerfulness, for he is one of the most cheerful men of the city and tries to put the best side forward at all times.

George Jacob Schirrmann

was born at Neiderhochstadt, Bavaria, Germany, November 20, 1834. His parents were George Theobold and Margaret (Miller) Schirrmann. His father was a farmer. He attended school in Germany until he was nineteen. In February, 1854, he started to the United States. He shipped from Havre de Gras on a sailing vessel, and after a voyage lasting forty-two days, he landed at New Orleans. From there he went to St. Louis, where he had relatives. He attended night school and the High School, in St. Louis, and studied languages, drawing and the higher branches. He attended school there for five or six years at night and learned the trade of carriage making in daytime. He also studied book-keeping. January 1, 1860, he went to Okolona, Miss., and was there until August, 1860, when he left, as there was too much war talk and he took a paper with Abraham Lincoln's name on it, as a candidate for President. He went to Cincinnati and was directed by a friend to go to Portsmouth.

He came to Portsmouth in August, 1860, and has been here since. He first worked for Metzger & Kricker, at his trade, where Fisher's drug store now stands. In 1864, he went into business with William Angle, a blacksmith. They took in John Heid and Fred Deutschle as partners, and the firm name was Schirrmann, Heid & Company. He continued in this business until 1878. In 1880 he went into the livery business, and has been engaged in the livery and carriage repair business ever since.

On April 13, 1862, he was married to Augusta Kaufman. They have the following children: Kate, the wife of Charles Grassman, baker and confectioner; Emma; Lena; Charles, book-keeper at Harsha's mill; Alfred, a book-keeper; Hattie, clerk at Grassman's; George, in business with his father; Henry A., a physician. The latter is a graduate of Ann Arbor; Theobold, is a carriage maker in Cincinnati; and Marguerite, is a graduate of the High School, class of 1901. Mr. Schirrmann was a republican before and during the war, but since 1872, has been a democrat. He is a member of the German Evangelical church.

George John Schmidt

was born in Baltimore, August 9, 1865. His father was George Schmidt, a minister in the United Brethren church. He was a native of Bavaria and his wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Dauman, was a native of Hanover, Germany. Our subject was the fifth of seven children. He attended school at Danville, Illinois, Zanesville and Cincinnati, Ohio. When he was twelve years of age, he began to learn the trade of confectioner and candy maker in Baltimore, and worked at it six years, two and a half years in Baltimore, and three and a half years in Portsmouth for B. Augustin. He was city salesman for B. Augustin for five and a half years. In 1889, he went into business for himself on Findlay and Ninth streets, and was there for seven years. In 1895, he formed a partnership with J. F. Menke, under the firm name of The Central Grocery Company, in the Kricker building. They remained partners for seven years and then dissolved. Mr. Schmidt has since continued the same business at the same stand under the name of The Central Grocery Company.

His father came to Portsmouth as minister of the United Brethren church in 1881. He died in Danville, Illinois, in 1897. His mother died in 1900, at Danville, Illinois, where they were making their home.

He was married September 22, 1888, to Kate Klink. He has two children: Gertrude and Elton George. He is a democrat in his political views, but liberal; is a member of the First United Brethren church of Portsmouth; has been superintendent of the Sunday school for ten years, and is a trustee of the same church. He is a member of Massie Lodge, Knights of Pythias. George J. Schmidt makes friends of every one with whom he becomes acquainted. He is most genial in his intercourse with his fellow men. As a business man, he is ahead with all modern ideas and improvements and has made a success of his undertakings.

Fred Schmitt

was born in Bavaria, Germany, November 7, 1836. His father was John Adam Schmitt and his mother was Elizabeth Margaret Wolfe. They had six children, of whom our subject was the fifth. He attended the schools in the old country for four years. At the age of ten, his parents emigrated to this country, starting from Havre de Gras in France. They came in a sailing vessel called the "Kate Hunter," and were thirty-nine days on the ocean. From New York they came direct to Portsmouth. Our subject attended school in Portsmouth and learned the blacksmith trade with his father, but not liking it, he began to learn the cigar makers trade at the age of nineteen. He followed that from 1856 to 1861 in Portsmouth with the Doerr Brothers.

On July 10, 1861, he enlisted in the regimental band of the 28th O. V. I. and served until October 23, 1862, when he was mustered out by order of the War Department. He returned home and worked with the Doerr Brothers in the cigar business until 1865. Then he entered into the hardware house of George A. Waller and remained with him until 1875. From 1875 until 1889, he was in the grocery business on Gallia street.

Mr. Schmitt voted for Lincoln in 1860 and in 1864, but in 1867, he became a democrat and has remained such. In 1886, the democrats placed him on the city ticket for Water Works Trustee, and he received 919 votes to 869 for Wm. Burt. He served in that office one term. In 1889, he was a candidate for Marshal on the Democratic ticket against John W. Lewis and received 1,247 votes to 1,099 for Lewis. In 1891, he was again a candidate for the same office and received 1,391 votes to 1,139 for Wm. A. Stokely. In 1893, he was again a candidate for Marshal against Samuel J. Williams and received 1,377 votes to 1,238 for Williams. In 1895, he was again a candidate for Marshal and received 1,223 votes to 1,440 for Frank H. Watkins, his opponent. Watkins' majority was 217. In 1897 he was again a candidate and was opposed by Frank H. Watkins. The vote stood 1,622 for Schmitt and 1,576 for Watkins, Schmitt's majority being 26. In 1899, he was again a candidate against Watkins and received 1,697 votes to 1,596 for Watkins, majority, 101. He was a member of the Board of Health of the city of Portsmouth from 1871 to 1889. He was a member of the Scioto Lodge of Odd Fellows from 1865 to 1869 and since that time has been a member of the Portsmouth Lodge. He is also a member of the encampment.

He was married May 26, 1864, to Miss Mary E. Buchert. They have the following children: John, engaged in the grocery business in Covington, Kentucky; Daniel, engaged in the manufacture of cellulose in Danville, Kentucky; Fred, a Presbyterian minister in Downs, Ills. His son Louis, was born January 19, 1877. He attended the schools of Portsmouth, Ohio, to the A Grammar and then engaged in the grocery business with his father. He was then engaged as a clerk for Brodbecks for two years from 1893 and then engaged with Reed & Jordon in 1895 and was with them until his death. He was drowned accidentally in the Big Sandy river near Pikeville, Ky. February 20, 1902. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church and was a most exemplary young man, was much thought of by his employers and of excellent habits. His death was a great misfortune to himself, his family and his employers. There was no more promising young man in Portsmouth than he. Mr. Schmitt's fifth child is Elizabeth, married to Oscar Schleifer, minister of the Evangelical church, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; Emma; Esther and Minnie, deceased; Philippine, a teacher in the public schools; Rosa, who died in infancy, and Clara, a student in the High School.

Mr. Schmitt is one of the most popular men in Portsmouth. He is polite and obliging. He treats every one with respect and consideration. He is an excellent judge of human nature and cannot be imposed on. He made one of the best Marshals the city ever had.

was born August 11, 1869, at Circleville, Ohio. His father, who died when he was five years of age, was Christian Schwartz and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Fisher. When he was nine years of age his mother moved to Portsmouth, Ohio, where he has since resided. He attended school in Circleville, Ohio, and in Portsmouth until he was fifteen years of age. Then his practical business education began. He went into the employment of G. W. Anderson & Company, in a general store, for two years. Then he engaged with J. Eisman & Company, in the clothing business, for seven years. In 1893, he determined to go into business for himself and the firm of Haas, Schwartz & Smith was organized.

In 1895, Mr. Smith retired, leaving Mr. Schwartz and Mr. Felix Haas to conduct the business, under the firm of Haas, Schwartz & Company. This firm conducted a merchant tailoring business at 102 West Second street for eight years. They added the manufacture of mens' clothing for the jobbing trade and had a manufactory on Front street. Desiring to combine the two, they leased the Connolley building on Fifth and Chillicothe streets and had it changed to suit their business. They occupied it in March, 1902, and have one of the finest establishments in Ohio. The two lower floors are occupied by their merchant tailoring business and the two upper by their manufacturing business.

If any one wishes to propound the question, "What can a young man do?", Mr. Will Schwartz can answer it and need only refer to his own career. He has been successful from the start and his success is due to his hustling qualities. Mr. Schwartz has always been noted for his integrity and his pure and honorable life. In starting out, he adopted high standards and has lived up to them. He has always done the very best for himself under any and every condition. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church and lives up to it. He is very fond of music and is a member of the choir of his church. He is social in his disposition and is a Mason, an Elk, and a member of the United Commercial Travelers. Mr. Schwartz is a very popular man and stands well with all who know him. He holds the confidence of the entire business public.

He was married November 28, 1900 to Miss Ethel Cotton, daughter of Doctor David B. Cotton. They have one child, Priscilla.

Orpheus Alphonso Searl

was born March 20, 1848, in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio. He is the son of Judge F. C. Searl and Julia A. Schoonover, his wife. His early childhood was spent in Vernon and Bloom townships where his father and his family lived until 1858 when they moved to Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended the public schools in Portsmouth, Ohio, and the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio.

He enlisted in February, 1864, in Company C, 91st O. V. I. On July 20, 1864 he was captured by the enemy at Martinsburg, West Virginia and taken to Richmond, Virginia and confined in Libby prison for three months where he experienced all the horrors of that rebel prison. When paroled he was reduced to a mere skelton. After careful nursing at Navy Yard hospital, Annapolis, Maryland and a short stay at home on furlough, gaining in flesh and strength, he rejoined his regiment at Winchester, Virginia and served until the close of the war, when he was mustered out with his company, June 24, 1865.

He taught in the public schools of the county from 1867 until 1891, a greater part of the time at Wheelersburg and Sciotoville. In 1874, he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in Porter township and continued in the Justice's office at Wheelersburg and Sciotoville until December 31, 1897, when he was appointed postmaster at Sciotoville. He was reappointed January, 1902. He received the nomination on the Republican ticket for County Recorder in 1882, but was defeated. In young manhood he joined the Methodist Episcopal church and was one of the stewards of that church for a number of years, while living at Wheelersburg, and has been one of the trustees of the church at Sciotoville since 1887.

In 1868, he was married to Mary F. McFann, daughter of David and Rachel McFann, early settlers of Vernon township. They have four children: Franklin D. Searl of Fire Brick, Kentucky; William A. Searl of South Webster, Ohio; Fernando C. Searl of Portsmouth, Ohio and Nellie S., the wife of W. J. Gaynor of Sciotoville, Ohio.

While our subject was employed as a teacher, he edited acceptably for some time the teacher's column in the county papers, took an active part in all institute and educational work and was recognized generally as a teacher of influence and ability. In the capacity of magistrate, which office he held for many years he was admitted to be just, capable and impartial. In whatever vocation he has been engaged he has discharged the duties of his position with fidelity and general acceptability. By nature he is open, generous and free-hearted, and this trait may be said to be the keystone of his character. In many instances, indeed, his well known generosity has been taken advantage of to his own detriment. All in all, Squire Searl is a useful citizen, an influential republican, a worthy representative of a prominent, widely known family, a consistent church member and a loyal true hearted friend.

was born October 8, 1844 in Kulmbach, Bavaria, Germany. His father was Michael Seel who died when he was 15 months old. His father was a blacksmith. His mother was left with four children. He was the youngest. They emigrated to the United States in 1856. There were two sons and two daughters and they came in a sailing vessel and landed at Baltimore. They were on the ocean fifty-seven days, from Bremen to Baltimore. They located in Hagerstown, Maryland and there Adam worked in the brick yard until 1857. He then resided with J. P. Crist for two years and went to school. At fifteen, he became apprenticed to George Bromon to learn the baker's trade and was with him two years and six months. He worked at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and in the spring of 1864, he came to Portsmouth and took employment with B. Sweitzer, who had a confectionery on West Second street, just west of where Fuller Brothers are now. He was with him until 1868 and then started in business for himself, on Sixth street near Chillicothe. In 1869, he moved to Second street, on the former location of B. Sweitzer. In 1872, he removed to 11 West Second street, and has conducted business there ever since. In 1882, he bought the lot just east of his present building and built there. In 1895, he built the building just above his bakery.

On July 10, 1866, he was married to Eliza C. Lease, daughter of Catherine Lease of Hagerstown, Maryland. Of this marriage there were two daughters: Clara at home and Kate the wife of Frank Legler. His wife died December 27, 1877. February 22, 1879, he was married to Harriet Wolfe. Of this marriage he has two daughters: Nellie, the wife of Walter Patterson and Norah a student in the High School. He is a democrat and a member of the Lutheran church. He is a Mason, a member of Aurora Lodge, Mt. Vernon Chapter, Solomon Council and Calvary Commandery. He was a councilman in the Third ward for eight years. Mr. Seel is one of our best business men, a good citizen, courteous and obliging to all, and highly regarded by all who know him.

George Dyar Selby

was born in Athens county, Ohio, April 1, 1846. His father was Hines Cone Selby and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Ann Rardin. His father was born in New York near Palmyra and his grandfather Dyar Selby was born in Connecticut. Doctor William Selby was the founder of the family in this country and settled in East Haddam Connecticut before the Revolution. His father and mother had twelve children, ten of whom lived to maturity. Our subject was the fourth in order. His father was a farmer and this son was brought up as such. He went to the common schools until he was eighteen years of age.

He enlisted in Company H, 186th O. V. I. on the 14th day of February, 1865, for one year. He was a Corporal and was mustered out September 18, 1865. The regiment's service was guard duty in Tennessee and Georgia. He returned from the army and attended the Miller's Seminary, ten miles east of Athens, for one year.

He came to Portsmouth, Ohio, in May 1867, as agent for the Singer Sewing Machine and canvassed for the sale of the machines. He was engaged in that business until 1885. On January 1, 1880, he became interested in the manufacturing of shoes with Irving Drew and B. Damon. The firm was Drew, Selby & Company. This history of his connection with the business of shoe manufacturing in Portsmouth from that date until the present will be found under the title of Drew, Selby & Company, elsewhere in this book. From 1885 to the present time, Mr. Selby devoted himself to the shoe business.

He was married September 26, 1867, to Lydia Verlinda Webster, daughter of Isaac Webster of Chester, Meigs county, Ohio. Their children are: Pearl Edgar, married and engaged in the manufacture of shoes, as one of the Drew-Selby Company; Cora wife of Benjamin H. Dillon, of the Wait Furniture Company; Mark Webster, married and engaged in the manufacture of shoes with the Drew-Selby Company; Homer Clifford a student at the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio; Roger Alfred, a student at the University School, Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Selby is a member of Bigelow Methodist Episcopal church and of its board of trustees. He is a republican in his political views. He is a trustee of the Scioto County Children's Home and has been since May 5, 1895.

Mr. Selby has had a career in Portsmouth of which he and his friends may justly be proud. He came to Portsmouth without any friends or acquaintances and without financial resources. He had plenty of pluck and perseverance. He had a capital of energy and industry which was limitless and he had a natural capacity for organizing and extending any business he took up. He had King Midas' power of touch, but was never conscious of it and it will be news to him, when he reads this. When he took up any business, he studied it in all its ramifications, never got tired of studying it. He was always of the disposition to do his utmost in anything he undertook and the habit with him has become a part of his life. He is fond of finding for himself those economic laws which govern trade and manufacturing and he understands more about these laws practically than a half dozen of the best professors of political economy in the land. By studying his business and uniformly adopting the safest and most conservative courses, he has made his own fortune and endeavored to add to that of the persons connected with him in business.

Mr. Selby in the best sense of the word is a public benefactor. He does not confine his benefactions to the direct results of his business, but in his church and in all the various organizations of which he is a member, he is an earnest worker. His work stands for religion, for morality, for temperance and for the public good. He aids every charitable or public enterprise which presents itself to his attention and does it without the least ostentation or pride. He can be approached by any one on any subject, with the assurance of a respectful hearing and if the cause has merit, he will aid it. He stands for the best in politics, in religion, and in society and his influence in the position he occupies, makes him an invaluable citizen. As he grows older, this influence for good widens and broadens till it is felt in every part of the community. His character and influence is a tower of strength, and it is to be hoped he may be blessed with a long life of good health to carry out the good works in which he is constantly engaged.

Pearl Edgar Selby

was born January 19, 1870, in Portsmouth, Ohio, the eldest child of his parents, George Dyar Selby and Lydia Webster, his wife. He attended the Portsmouth schools until 1889, in which year he graduated from the Portsmouth High School. He then went into Drew, Selby & Company's factory to learn the entire business. He began as a pattern maker and learned that. Then he mastered cutting, fitting, and bottoming. He kept on till he learned each part thoroughly. He became a member of the firm of Drew, Selby & Company in 1892. While with them, he was superintendent of the bottoming and fitting departments. When the company changed to a corporation in 1902, he became a director and superintendent of the entire business of the new corporation, The Drew-Selby Company. He was married June 8, 1892 to Miss Blanche Smith, daughter of Thomas L. Smith of Bedford, Indiana. They have one son, Harold Rea in his eighth year. Mr. Selby is a republican. He is a member of the Bigelow Methodist Episcopal church. He is a young man of great force of character, and large executive and administrative ability.

was born Nov. 19, 1834, in France. His father was Nicholas Seymour, and his mother's maiden name was Barbara Bernard. He left France at the age of thirteen years and came to America with his parents, and located on Pond creek. His father and mother died there. With the exception of the years 1858 and 1859, when he went to the State of Iowa, about thirty miles from Keokuk, he has lived on Dry Run all his life since 1850. He was married August 31 1869, to Miss Mary J. McKane, a daughter of John McKane, who was a native of this country. He had nine children: Flora and Rose of Portsmouth, dress-makers over Corson's grocery; Mary at home; Frank, who lives on Dry Run; Ernest, at home, aged twenty-one; Lena, Mary, Albert, aged thirteen, and Veronica.

He has been a farmer all his life. He is a democrat in his political views. He is a member of the Catholic church on Pond creek. He owns about 800 acres of hill land, about 65 acres of Scioto bottoms and forty or fifty acres on Dry Run. He can always be depended on to do anything he undertakes.

Andrew Sproull Shannon

was born July 20, 1823, in Butler county, Pennsylvania. His father was Samuel Shannon. He lived in Butler county, Pennsylvania, until 1854, when his father's family came to Scioto county and located at Mt. Joy. He married Margaret Dodds, daughter of William Dodds, in 1846, in Butler county, Pennsylvania. They had ten children: William John Shannon was born July 21, 1847, in Butler county, Pa.; James Shannon, born in October, 1849, and lives in California, Missouri; Samuel lives in Cedarville, Green county, Ohio; Nancy Elizabeth is the wife of Martin Luther Bonner; Louisa died at the age of seven years; Jesse lives at Sabina, Clinton county, Ohio, and is a farmer; Susannah Clarissa died in childhood; Jemima Adaline died in infancy, and Hattie is the wife of John Canter.

Mr. Shannon was always a republican, and a member of the United Presbyterian church. He enlisted in Company E, in the 179th O. V. I., August 31, 1864. He served until June 17, 1865. After the war, he returned to Scioto county, and resided on his farm until his death July 26, 1900. Mr. Shannon was a model citizen in every respect, a man who lived up to his profession in his church and elsewhere. He was respected by all who knew him for his civic virtues.

William John Shannon

was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, July 21, 1847. He came to Scioto county, Ohio, with his father in 1854, and has been a resident of this county ever since. He was married September 23, 1879 to Lucy Ellen Wolford, of Wheelersburg, Ohio. She was of French descent. He has the finest locality in Scioto county for a summer resort, and has probably the highest point in the county. Mr. Shannon is respected by all who know him. He is a model citizen. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church at Mt. Joy and a republican.

Jacob Shela

was born July 17, 1843 at Portsmouth, Ohio. His father, Jacob Shela, was born at Baden, Germany. His mother's maiden name was Margaret Franck, also a native of Baden. His father died when he was six years of age, and his mother remarried and survived until 1886. At the age of ten years he went to Pike county and began work with John Adams, a farmer near Beaver. He remained there until he was eighteen years of age. He then went to farming on the Big Scioto for John Baker and continued there until the war of 1861.

On November 13, 1861, he enlisted at the age of eighteen, as a private in Company B, 56th O. V. I., commanded originally by Captain Reiniger. He remained with the regiment from enlistment until June 15, 1862, when he was captured by the rebels near Memphis, Tennessee. He was paroled within a week after his capture and sent home. He was discharged March 5, 1863, and then enlisted in the Navy for two years as a seaman. He served on the gun boats on the Mississippi river until March 5, 1865, when he was discharged at Carlyle, Illinois. He served on two gun boats: "Little Rebel" and the flag ship, "Black Hawk." He was up the Red river in an engagement at the capture of Vicksburg. Thus he enjoys the distinction of having served one year in the Army of the United States and two years in the Navy, and was always able for duty.

When he came home he went to making cigars for Charles Schumann two years, and afterwards worked for David Strahn for over two years. He was married December 26, 1865 to Mary Dressler. There were two daughters of this marriage: Ella Margaret residing in California, a deaconess, and Elizabeth, living in Portsmouth, a dress maker. His first wife died on December 24, 1867. He was married the second time to Sophia Gabler, Sept. 22, 1870. There are the following children: Jacob Frederick, a mail carrier in Portsmouth; John William, died at the age of twenty-five, unmarried; Emma Christina, married John Messer residing on Dogwood Ridge; George Wesley, a farmer residing with his father; Louis Edward, a teacher at Wait's station; Mary Barbara, residing at home; Charles Samuel, aged sixteen; Stanton Elmer, aged ten.

In 1870, Mr. Shela concluded to take up the life of a farmer and rented land on Munn's Run for one year. He was not satisfied and then went as a foreman in J. E. Doerr's cigar factory for two years. In the spring of 1873, he bought the place where he now resides on Dogwood Ridge, and has lived on it ever since. At the time he purchased it, it had no buildings on it of any consequence, and all the buildings now, including a handsome residence and a model barn, have been added by him. It makes the heart of any one glad to look at Mr. Shela's farm; and it says for him, that he is a model farmer. He has been a republican all his life, and is a member of the German Methodist church on Dogwood Ridge.

Just why a large portion of Dogwood Ridge came to be occupied by a German Methodist Society in preference to some other locality may not be easily answered. But, however it came about, there they are now, firmly rooted in a pleasant, prosperous neighborhood, with their German church and minister. Their children intermarry and spread over adjacent areas, and together they form an intelligent, thrifty, industrious, prosperous community—one of the most desirable neighborhoods to live in that can be found anywhere. Honesty—old fashioned honesty—is a marked characteristic of this people, and Jacob Shela stands as a fair type of the better traits exemplified in the membership of this Methodist Society. He is a progressive farmer withal, as his tasteful, commodious residence, his large, well arranged barns and other buildings, and his neat, thorough methods of agriculture plainly indicate. If Mr. Shela agrees to do anything—it may be considered the same as already done. As Napoleon said of his Old Guard—he is one of the reliables. He exemplifies, in short, those principles for which his German Methodist Society stands. He is a respected citizen, a useful member of society, and a loyal friend.

John Shepherd

is a native of the good old reliable state of Pennsylvania. He was born in Green county, March 4, 1843. His father was Edward Shepherd and his mother was Louise Killen, a sister of Captain William Killen, who formerly resided in the Kentucky bottoms opposite Portsmouth, Ohio. His father was a carpenter. He had five children of whom our subject is the eldest. The family left Pennsylvania in 1853, and went to Kokomo, Indiana. There his father and mother died, and he was forced to seek the custody of relatives. He came to his aunt Killen when he was about fifteen years of age. He attended school in Kentucky and some in Portsmouth, but his education was very meager. In 1856, he began to work for himself and for five years he worked in Uriah White's livery stable in Portsmouth. Then he set up the teamster and hauling business for himself and has been in it for a period of forty-one years. In all that time, he has enjoyed the confidence of all who have employed him.

He was married July 7, 1877, to Eliza Kirkendall. They have had three children. Their eldest son, William, is married and lives on Lawson Heights. Their daughter, Nellie, is married to Arthur McCloud, and lives in Birmingham, Alabama. Their youngest son, John, is married and in business with his father. Mr. Shepherd is a republican, and has always been. He is as regular in his habits as the sun, moon and stars. He works every day in the week, and glad there is a Sunday for rest. He likes to take a day off occasionally, and attend some fair or public gathering, and no man enjoys a holiday more than he does. There is not a man who knows him, but will vouch for him.

George Wesley Sheppard,

Recorder of Scioto county, is the son of John Sheppard, a Baptist minister of Vernon township, of German descent, and a native of Floyd county, Kentucky. His mother was Eliza J. (Brown) Sheppard, daughter of George W. Brown, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland, who came to America in 1848, shortly after his marriage to Lily M. Foster, a native of the same country and town. His father served in the 22nd O. V. I., Company D, for three months, from April 22, to August 19, 1861, afterwards in Company B, 22nd O. V. I., from September 2, 1861, to September 5, 1862, when he was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability at Corinth, Miss. He afterwards re-enlisted in Company G, 27th O. V. I., February 28, 1864, and was finally discharged July 11, 1864.

Our subject was born near Lyra, P. O., in Vernon township, May 14, 1867, and received his early education in the country schools, later attending the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, for a short time. The greater part of his education was obtained through his own studious habits. The greater part of his life has been spent in teaching, commencing at the age of eighteen and continuing for seventeen years. He was appointed School Examiner August 31, 1897, to fill an unexpired term of one year and was re-appointed on August 31, 1898, and served two years when he resigned, August 31, 1900, having been nominated by his party (Republican) for Recorder, and the nomination meant his election. He has always been active in politics and has served his party in numerous capacities. He was assessor of Vernon township, from 1894 till 1895; clerk of same from 1892 till 1894. Justice of Peace of same from April 20, 1896, till April 20, 1899. He served as postmaster at Lyra from 1897 till November, 1900.

He is a member of the Mt. Hope Free Will Baptist church and has been such since he was ten years old. He is at present clerk of the Ohio and Kentucky yearly meeting of Free Will Baptists. He was married October 12, 1890, to Anna Bertha Cook, eldest daughter of Dr. Thomas C. Cook, deceased, of Vernon township, who came to Ohio from Virginia, and settled in Lawrence county, afterwards in Scioto county. They have one child, Arthur Preston, born July 25, 1891.

Mr. Sheppard is one of the most popular men in his county and deservedly so. He seeks to oblige whenever he can and the qualities of his character are such as to elicit admiration and respect. Nothing can be said of him or his qualities but what is good. His sympathies are strong, his impulses liberal and charitable and those who know him best, like him best.

Milton H. Shumway

was born January 5, 1861, at Scioto, Ohio. His father was John Q. Shumway, and his mother's maiden name was Mehetabel Snyder. His boyhood and youth were passed on the farm. He attended the district schools and spent one year at Oberlin College. He taught in the public schools of this county, fifteen years. He was Clerk of Harrison township from September, 1884, to September, 1889, and was Treasurer of the same township from 1889 to 1893. He was appointed Deputy Auditor April 9, 1894, and was elected to the office of County Auditor in November, 1898. He was re-elected in November, 1901, and is at present serving in that capacity. He is a strong republican. He is a member of the Sixth Street M. E. church of Portsmouth. He was married January 1, 1884, to Miss Emma L. Sampson, a granddaughter of the old pioneer Simeon Wood. They have four children, as follows: Herbert S., age seventeen; Morton, age fourteen; Roswell B., age eleven; and Harold B., age three years.

Mr. Shumway began his career as a teacher of the public schools. He at once showed a great aptitude for the work and placed himself in the first rank of that profession. He is possessed of a forceful character, strong will and excellent judgment. He aims to understand all details of every work set before him and to bring to it the aid of all his natural abilities. As Deputy Auditor he was faithful and efficient. As the County Auditor he has fulfilled the duties of the office in a manner acceptable to every one concerned. His attainments are such that he would fill acceptably any office or position he would accept. He comes from a long line of ancient and honorable Revolutionary ancestry, and acts out the good qualities of each generation which preceded him. He has an intelligent and well trained conscience and lives up to its dictates. In the moral and religious views Mr. Shumway's character is one for favorable comment and praise.

Reuben B. Shumway

was born in Harrison township, Scioto county, Ohio, January 3, 1844, eldest son of John Q. and Mehetabel Shumway. He attended the common schools of Harrison township, two terms of select school at Harrisonville, and took up teaching as a profession. He completed the study of book-keeping and surveying at the same time. He enlisted in Company F, 140th O. V. I., May 2, 1864, and was mustered out September 3, 1864. He was elected Assessor of Harrison township in 1865, re-elected in 1866.

He was married December 24, 1865, to Barbara Schuster, daughter of John and Margaret Schuster (nee Geyschel). They have had twelve children, of whom nine are living. They are: John W., chief clerk of the Wabash railroad, at Council Bluffs, Iowa; Mrs. Louella Thompson, of Galt, Kansas; Henry, Charles, and Edward, all prosperous farmers and stock-raisers in Rice county, Kansas; Mrs. Hettie Plauk; Mrs. J. M. Williams, of Lyons, Kansas, and Clay and James at home.

Mr. Shumway was always a republican. He was elected County Surveyor of Scioto county, in 1883, and resigned the office in April, 1885. He located in Rice county, Kansas, May 1, 1885, where he now resides. In the fall of 1885, he was appointed Deputy County Treasurer, which position he held for eight years, when he was elected to the office of County Treasurer and served two terms. In addition to his official work, he was made assignee of the Bank of Lyons, the largest institution of its kind in Central Kansas, whose affairs he successfully closed up. Mr. Shumway is a citizen of the highest character. He has acquired a competence, and is living the life of a christian gentleman, honored and respected by all.

Frank Lee Sikes,

son of Melvin Sikes and Marian Seeley, his wife, was born September 24, 1859, at Haverhill, Ohio. His grandfather, Levi Sikes, was one of the first settlers of Portsmouth. His grandmother Sikes was a sister of James Keyes, and daughter of Salma Keyes. His mother was a daughter of Amos Seeley from New York. Mr. Sikes had two brothers: Owen and Thomas. His sisters were Laura, wife of Walter Hope, of Kansas; Lorene, wife of Lewis S. Nourse, of Wheelersburg, and Flora, wife of Oscar M. Keyes, of Cripple Creek, Colorado; Ruby, unmarried, living at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Mr. Sikes received a common school education and began to teach in 1879, at Franklin furnace. He taught for ten years, the last five years of which he was superintendent of the schools of Sciotoville. On December 1, 1889, he was appointed deputy Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of Scioto county. He resigned after serving fourteen months. In the fall of 1891, he was elected Recorder over Simpson by a vote of 3,798 to 2,922. He served his term of three years and was appointed for eight months more. He left the office September, 1895. He was elected Clerk of Courts in November, 1895, vote: Sikes, 4,554, J. G. Basham, 2,260, and served till August 5, 1899. On August 5, 1899, he was elected Clerk of City Water Works and served one year. He was superintendent of the Water Works eight months. He was elected City Clerk, April 17, 1901, for two years, which office he still holds.

Mr. Sikes has always been a republican, and is a member of Bigelow M. E. church of Portsmouth, Ohio. He is a member of the Masonic, Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen Lodges.

On March, 4, 1886, he was united in marriage to Marie Emily Erlich, daughter of Charles W. Erlich and Laura Colegrove, his wife. In 1902, he was nominated by the Republican party of the county for Probate Judge and was elected. He is tall, of full habit, and of fine physical presence. He is full of energy and purpose and of great will-power. As a politician, he possesses all the qualities which insure success. He is a good organizer and knows how to deal with men. The people of Scioto county have confidence in his honesty and integrity. He has been faithful and honorable in the administration of every public office he has ever held. Owing to his strong discriminating powers and excellent judgment, he will undoubtedly make an excellent Probate Judge.

Colonel Thomas Sikes

was born March 11, 1836, at Wheelersburg, Ohio. His father was Levi Sikes, and his mother Mary Keyes, sister of James Keyes. Levi Sikes was born in 1794, in Massachusetts, and came to Ohio in 1804, with his father John J. Sikes and his mother Sarah. John J. Sikes went on a produce boat to New Orleans, in 1810, and after leaving Cincinnati, he was never heard from. John J. Sikes had served in the Revolutionary War and his record will be found under Revolutionary Soldiers. His widow Sarah, drew a pension in 1857, and survived until 1860.

Our subject attended the common schools until he was seventeen years of age, and then for two years attended school in Portsmouth, Ohio. He then learned the trade of brick-making and worked under Asa R. Cassiday and his son Ed., until the war broke out. He enlisted in Company G, 1st O. V. I., April 16, 1861, for three months. He was appointed a corporal April 29, 1861, and served until August 1, 1861. He entered Company E, 33rd Ohio, on September 3, 1861, and was promoted from First Lieutenant to Captain on March 3, 1865. He was promoted to Major on May 18, 1865, being the fourth Major in the regiment. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, June 6, 1865, but was not mustered out owing to the regiment not having enough men. He was mustered out July 12, 1865.

At the close of the war, he was offered a captain's commission in the regular army, by General George H. Thomas, and regrets very much that he did not accept it, for he believes, and all his friends believe, he would have made a most efficient officer in the Regular Army. He said that at the time he was offered a Captain's commission, General Miles was only a Captain and he believes that by this time, he might have worked up to where General Miles is now. He was wounded twice, once in the shoulder in May, 1862, by a minie-ball. He was wounded at Chickamauga, September 20, 1863, by a buck-shot, behind the right ear, which wound has never troubled him any at all. He was in all the battles in which his regiment participated during the war.

After retiring from the service, he followed his occupation of bricklaying in Portsmouth, until the spring of 1872, when the town of Huntington was laid out and he removed there. While residing in Portsmouth, he was a member of the Council from the Fourth ward from 1868 to 1872. He was Chief of Police in Huntington, in 1886. In 1887, he went to California, located in Los Angeles and staid there until 1890, when he came back to Huntington. While in California he was engaged in brick-laying. He followed the same occupation after his return to Huntington, until April, 1901, when he was elected City Treasurer of Huntington, for two years.

He was married in May, 1866, to Minerva J. Williams, daughter of Ewell Williams, of Scioto county, Ohio. He has six children: Ida M., widow of Samuel Johnson, resides in Huntington; Mamie K.; George H., married and lives in Central City; Maudie; Austin M., court stenographer for Cabell, Wayne, Lincoln, Mingo and Logan counties, West Virginia; and Herbert A., at Marshall College. Colonel Sikes is a member of the Methodist church. He has always been a republican and is a Blue Lodge Mason.

John Harold Simmons

was born September 23, 1839, at Marion, Lawrence county, Ohio. His childhood was spent at Burlington, Lawrence county. When "Jack" was about eight years old, his father moved to a large farm known as "The Homestead" in the valley, five miles below Marion. Here Jack resided until he was twelve years of age. His father became Sheriff, a second time through a tragedy, and afterward Treasurer, and the family moved to Ironton, where the county seat had been removed. Until he was eighteen, Jack attended the graded schools of Ironton, when not assisting his father in the office. His first vote was for President Lincoln, in 1860. He taught the home district school that winter, and in the spring of sixty-one entered at Lebanon, Ohio, intending to follow a short term there, with a full course at the Athens University, where he had the tender of a free scholarship, and beyond that he contemplated the law as a profession.

He and William Betts, a neighbor, shook hands, in a boyish way, over an agreement to practice law as a profession, in Kansas, as partners, in the coming years, but both volunteered under the President's call for three months troops, as soon as Sumter was fired on. Both enlisted in Company E, Sixth O. V. I., three months men, April 20, 1861. On June 18, 1861, Simmons enlisted for three years in the same company and regiment, known as the Cincinnati "Guthrie Grays." The war ended the proposed law partnership of Betts and Simmons, but their subsequent friendship was so ideal as to give rise to many a pleasant story among their associates. When honorably discharged, at Camp Dennison, in June, 1864, by the reason of the expiration of enlistment, "Jack" left a record without a flaw, and returned to Nashville and the service in the field, as chief clerk for Captain Leroy R. Hawthorn of Newport, Kentucky, U. S. Commissary of Subsistence. He was at Nashville during the siege and battle, and after the rout of Hood's Army by General Thomas, moved on to Columbia, and afterward to Pulaski, Tennessee, where, in sole charge of that branch subsistence post, when the Confederate's returned from war, he issued the government ration allowed by the Federal authorities to returned Confederates and their families, until December, 1865. He has a record to his credit, therefore, of almost five years of consecutive active service in the field.

His ability, accuracy and versatility was recognized by a special detail as amanuensis to General Ormsby M. Mitchell, during the organization of Buell's Army of the Ohio at Louisville. He was detailed as report clerk, after the battle of Shiloh, to General William Nelson, thought by Mr. Simmons to have been the greatest natural warrior developed during the rebellion. He was also detailed as report clerk to General Jacob Ammen, at McMinnville, Tenn., when Bragg broke through the mountains, on his Kentucky raid. He was detailed as report clerk to General Wm. Sooy Smith near Nashville up to the eve of the battle of Stone river.

After Stone river he was detailed to the Quartermaster's department, at the headquarters of General John M. Palmer, following which he was transferred to the same department to General Grose, returning to his regiment for Mission Ridge and refusing further details, a promotion by Governor Brough into another regiment, and a Captaincy in a Tennessee regiment by the governor of that state.

He returned home in December, 1865, was appointed Deputy Auditor of Lawrence county by Seth Sutherland, Auditor. In December, 1866, he became book-keeper and stock receiver at Olive furnace. In 1868, he made a slight effort for the republican nomination for Auditor for his county. He was unexperienced, relied too much on his father's acquaintance and popularity, and was defeated. He learned some political lessons which he put to victorious use in Scioto county at a later date. After this episode, he accepted a position tendered by the late John Paull, and moved across the line to Bloom furnace, in Scioto county.

There, at the age of thirty, he found his fate in Miss Susan Paull Cole, the twenty-year-old daughter of Allaniah Cole, deceased. They were married at the furnace October 14, 1869, and moved to Ironton, in 1871, where he had become interested in business. He was prospering rapidly, when the sudden death of John Paull, August 6, 1873, compelled him to give all his time to the furnace, as the only male survivor in the firm of John Paull & Company. He left his Ironton business in the hands of his partner, and the panic of 1873, made shipwreck of this enterprise. He made such provision as was possible for the management of the furnace and turned his attention to his Ironton affairs. After this he took up his residence at Bloom furnace, as a member of the firm of Clare, Amos & Company, subsequently J. D. Clare & Co., and now The Clare Iron Company, in which corporation he and his family are eighth owners. He has made his home in Scioto county since 1879.

In 1884, he was elected Clerk of the Courts for Scioto county, on the Republican ticket, and moved to Portsmouth in January, 1885. He was again elected for a three years term to succeed himself in 1887, but in 1889 resigned to accept the appointment of Marshal of the United States for the southern district of Ohio. After one term, he retired from office with his chief and his party, and has held no office since.

His happy family was broken up in 1895, owing to a fatal malady overtaking his wife, who died after two years pathetic lingering, January 27, 1897, leaving the husband and three young daughters. Clare, the youngest daughter makes her home at Ironton with her mother's sister, Mrs. Oscar Richey. Paula, the second daughter, graduated in 1902, at St. Mary's of the Spring, near Columbus and makes her home in Portsmouth, with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William V. Simmons. Carol, the eldest, is employed as a teacher of literature at the Ohio Institution for the education of the blind, at Columbus, and during vacations makes her home with her Uncle and Aunt Simmons, at Portsmouth. Since his wife's death, Mr. Simmons has made his home when in Portsmouth, at first with his warm friend, Judge James M. Dawson, and since the untimely passing of the Judge, he resides with his family, at 199 East Third street.

William Valentine Simmons was born March 20, 1848, in Lawrence county. For ancestry see sketch of John Harold Simmons. He attended school at the District schools and two years at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1871. He thinks the best part of his education was obtained on his father's farm. He began teaching school in 1871 and followed that for five years. Then he farmed the old Homestead on Symmes' Creek, Lawrence county till 1884, when he came to Portsmouth and was a deputy with Charles Kinney, Treasurer, for six months. In 1885, he went into the Tribune Company, purchasing the interest of Al McFarland, and has been engaged in the newspaper business ever since. The Company is now the Blade Printing Company, and Mr. Simmons is secretary, treasurer and general manager. He was married in 1880 to Nancy J. Cole, daughter of Allaniah Cole. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons reside at 80 West Sixth street, Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Simmons is a living, walking, speaking, every day contradiction of the idea that the management of a newspaper wears a man out. He is five feet, eight and one-half inches high, weighs 250 pounds, and is a handsome man. He takes life easy, and strange to say for a newspaper man, seems to enjoy it. He lets his neighbors worry, if they like, but he seems to appreciate all the pleasures of life, and enjoys them every day. The business of the company has largely prospered under his management.

Henry C. Simpson

son of Elias and Mary Howard Simpson was born July 17, 1863. His boyhood and youth were spent on his father's farm where he now lives. He received a common school education. He went to Kansas in 1888 and remained there until 1891. June 27, 1883, he was married to Agnes B. Ballingee, daughter of John Ballingee. They have five children: Bertha Lee, Margaret, Earl Elias, Ralph E. and Franklin. He is a republican and a member of Lucasville Lodge, F and A. M. No. 465.

Captain James Skelton

was born in Vernon township, Scioto county, Ohio, December 30, 1836. His father's name was John Skelton, and his mother's maiden name was Minerva Sperry. His grandfather, Samuel Skelton, came from Staunton, Augusta county, Va. His grandmother was Francis Wilson Skelton. Our subject was brought up in Scioto county. He received a common school education. At the age of eighteen years, he engaged in farming, and general labor. He also did work about Empire, Pine Grove, Ohio and Junior furnaces.

He enlisted in Company F, 27th O. V. I., July 19, 1861, as a private. He was soon made fourth Sergeant and later First Sergeant, and was promoted to the office of Sergeant-Major of his regiment June 27, 1864. He was then commissioned Second Lieutenant, and on the same day lost his right leg in the battle of Kenesaw mountain. He remained in the hospital until February 14, 1865, when he was honorably discharged with the rank of Captain, having been promoted to that position in recognition of his brave and meritorious conduct. He participated in many important battles, including those of New Madrid, Island No. 10, Hamburg Landing, the siege and battle of Corinth, Parker's Cross Roads and a number of others. He was in every battle from Chattanooga until he was wounded at Kenesaw mountain.

Captain Skelton returned to Powellsville, after the war, and engaged in merchandising until 1868. He then located in Wheelersburg, where he was postmaster, conducted a hotel and carried on a drug store. He was elected County Auditor of Scioto county at the October election, 1868, by a vote of 2,825 for himself on the Republican ticket, to 2,312 for M. G. Nichols, on the Democrat ticket, majority 513. He was re-elected in the fall of 1870, and served two years and ten months. His term was extended ten months by the Legislature. In 1875, he purchased and operated the street horse-car line in Portsmouth, being at the head of that enterprise for about eight years. He was elected Commissioner of Scioto county in 1877, by a vote of 2,777 to 2,699 for James Richardson, and served one term. Before the expiration of his term, he was appointed United States gauger, in which capacity he served for ten years. On his retirement from that office he turned his attention to the real estate business in connection with Hon. A. T. Holcomb, and laid out several town plats. He has always delighted in raising fine stock. He was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth from the Fourth and Third wards respectively for a number of years. It was while he was a member of Council that the first paving of the streets was done in Portsmouth. He was a member of the State Board of Equalization in 1900 from the Seventh Senatorial District. He obtained everything for his constituents which he asked for. He has been a member of the Republican County Executive Committee several times, and for two terms was chairman of the Congressional Committee of the Tenth Congressional District. He has been an alternate to the National Convention. In 1896, and was especially active as a campaign worker.

He was married first May 16, 1858, to Mary O. Remy, daughter of Thomas Remy. They had the following children: Berry, deceased; William W., resides at Scioto Furnace; Charles F., in Montana; James, in Chicago; Fannie, married John DeLotelle, resides at Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Skelton was married the second time to Mary E. Knittel, April 2, 1884. There were four children: John R., Samuel A., Dessie and Grace L.

Captain James Skelton is the noblest Roman of them all. He does not know fear. As a soldier, he was like Ney, "the bravest of the brave." Had he not met with the loss of his right leg at Kenesaw Mountain, June 27, 1864, he would undoubtedly have come home at the close of the war as a General. No one ever received greater meed of praise for his gallantry and bravery on the battlefield and no one ever deserved it more. If the Captain ever sets up a coat of arms, his motto will undoubtedly be, "Never say die," for he has lived up to that motto all his life. He is one of the most active, energetic and enterprising men of his time, or any one's time. Though only four mile posts from seventy, he has all the activity, vim, push and energy of a young man of twenty. He seems to overlook the fact that Old Age and its train of infirmities may overtake him, and with him Youth has lasted 66 years. He has laid out more additions to the city than any man who ever lived in it. He is the soul of honor and would die a thousand times before he would be guilty of a dishonorable action. He is always ready to stand up for the right, as he sees it, as were the immortal signers, with his life, with his fortune and with his sacred honor.

Calvin Slattery

was born at Scioto, Ohio, January 28, 1839. His grandfather, William Slattery was born in Ireland. He came to America in 1800, and settled in Maryland. His son, William Slattery, came from Maryland to Scioto county, Ohio, in 1820, and settled in Madison township, about one mile south of Harrisonville, where our subject, his son, was born. His mother was Maria Stockham, daughter of Joseph Stockham. His boyhood and youth were passed in Harrison township where he obtained a common school education.

He enlisted in Company A, 39th O. V. I. July 16, 1861 as a private, and was discharged July 9, 1865. He was in all the battles participated in by the regiment, except the last. At Kenesaw Mountain on June 9, 1864 at night, he was placed as a picket in an exposed part of the advance line. At day light, he saw a rebel chopping on a hill near by. He fired on him and thinks he killed him. This discovered him to the advance line of the rebels near and he drew their fire, not only of those in front but of those on each side. He was lying flat behind a log and a stump. The rebels kept up a fire until four o'clock in the afternoon. He was exposed to the hot sun, and was without anything to eat or drink and was covered with dirt from the bullets fired at him. It was impossible to send any guard to relieve him, and from daylight to four o'clock he laid there under this continued heavy firing, thinking about his young wife he had married but six months before and who would likely be left a widow. At four o'clock our troops made a charge over his position and thus relieved him. He thinks the rebels fired about a ton of lead in and about the stump and log which protected him.

After the war, he went to Missouri, and was there for two years, but did not like it and returned to his farm near Harrisonville. In 1868 and 1869, he farmed for his father. In 1870, he went to Sciotoville and was there and at Oak Hill until 1875. In the latter year, he returned to Harrisonville and bought a farm and has lived there ever since. He is a republican and a member of the M. E. church at Harrisonville. He is a member of Scioto Post, No. 287 G. A. R. He was Assessor of Harrison township from 1887 to 1890.

On January 28, 1864, he was married to Miss Emma J. Crull, daughter of David W. Crull and granddaughter of Judge Samuel Crull. His wife's mother's name was Rhoda Pool. They have four children: Clarence L. married and living near Uniopolis, Auglaize county, Ohio and engaged in contracting; Minnie F. wife of Gustavus A. Matz, who is a farmer and resides near Cozad, Nebraska. Wilbur V. is married and lives near Brighton, Pennsylvania, and is engaged in contracting. Walter D. is at home. In his advancing years Mr. Slattery is trying to take life easy. He is respected by all who know him, and enjoys the confidence of his neighbors.

Charles Slavens

was born in Madison township, Scioto county, Ohio, January 9, 1842. His father was Stuart Slavens, born in Greenbrier county, Virginia, in 1804. His father came with his parents to Ohio on pack horses and lived in Scioto county for sixty years. He died April, 1876. His mother's maiden name was Clarissa Schoonover. She was born at Horsehead, Chemung county, New York, in 1807, and died in Pike county, Ohio, February, 1891. Our subject received his education in the common schools of the county, at Jackson Academy and Ohio University, at Athens. He taught school until the war broke out. On August 12, 1864, he enlisted in Company G, 173d O. V. I. and on September 18, 1864, he was appointed Captain of that Company and served until June 26, 1865, when the Company was mustered out. After the close of the war he resumed his occupation as a teacher.

In 1867 he was married to Mary C. Noel, daughter of Aaron Noel. They have had five children: Albert Lincoln, Annie Ruth, Margaret W., Minerva Dean and Roscoe C. who died in infancy. In 1869, he was elected Treasurer of Scioto county. The vote stood Charles Slavens 2,530, Aaron Noel his father-in-law, 2,078, majority, 452. In 1871, he was re-elected to the same office, receiving 2,730 votes to 2,166 for his opponent, John T. Miller; his majority, 564. He has always been a republican and is a Protestant in his religious views. For many years he has held a position in the pension office as Special Examiner, and has resided in Missouri, Iowa and Ohio. His legal residence is now in the city of Columbus, Ohio. He made an excellent army officer and has always been a good citizen.

Charles Augustus Smith

was born August 18, 1876, at Buena Vista, Ohio. His father was Joseph W. Smith, County Surveyor and Commissioner, and was named for Capt. Charles A. Barton. His mother's maiden name was Harriet A. Cross, daughter of Lewis Cross. Our subject was the eldest of the children. He attended school near and at Otway, and attended a Normal school at Lucasville and one at Peebles. He taught school from 1894 until 1900 in Scioto county on the West Side. In the winter of 1899, he began the study of telegraphy. He secured work with the Cincinnati, Portsmouth & Virginia railroad, November 1, 1900, and was a temporary operator until June, 1901, when he became an operator and agent at Mineral Springs until January 10, 1902, when he was appointed agent at Rarden, Ohio. He is a young gentleman who has only to be known, to be liked. He is as steady as clockwork in his habits. He is temperate in word and deed. He is careful and conservative in all he does. He is prudent and self-reliant, firm of purpose and faithful in pursuing any course he adopts.

Colonel Floyd Locke Smith

the son of Charles Stratten Smith and Mary G. Locke, of New York, his wife, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, June 30, 1845. During his boyhood he made it unusually lively for the boys in Portsmouth, but managed to stay in school until he was fifteen years of age. In 1860 he went to Prof. White's Classical school one year. In 1861 he engaged in the milling business with his father on the spot on Second street where Storck & Hopkins now have a stove store. He enlisted August 11, 1862, at the age of eighteen, for three years in Company E of the 11th O. V. I., and served until January 20, 1863, at Chattanooga, Tenn., when he was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability. He was a private all the time of his service, but was one of the very best. He was with his regiment much of the time, but part of the time he was a clerk on Gen. Crook's staff. After his discharge from the service, he went into the Quartermaster Department at Cincinnati, where he remained until June, 1866, when he became chief clerk of the clothing, camp, garrison and equipage department.

He then returned to Portsmouth, and with his father engaged in the manufacture of vinegar until 1870. As this was too sour a subject to suit the sweet and agreeable disposition of the Colonel, he left it and engaged in the manufacturing of brown paper until February, 1872. Then he began his career as an insurance agent in Portsmouth with Samuel F. Reber, and has been in it ever since. Col. Smith, as he is best known, has organized many building associations and many companies, and he has been secretary of so many different associations, that he might be said to be a professional secretary. In 1879 he organized what is now the present Central Union Telephone Company, and built the exchange between Portsmouth and Ironton. He has been secretary of the Ohio, the Second Ohio and the City building associations. He has also been secretary of the Monarch and People's building associations. He was director of the Farmer's National Bank for a number of years, and up to its failure. For five years he was president of the Portsmouth Street Railroad & Light Company, prior to its present organization.

He was an aide-de-camp with the rank of Colonel on Governor Foraker's staff. It would be unjust to Col. Smith not to say in this connection that when he had his full uniform on that he was the finest looking man on the Governor's staff. He wishes that it should not be forgotten that he served two years as a member of the Portsmouth School Board, and was a friend of Prof. Vickers all the time. He would like to have it forgotten that he was Clerk of the Board of City Water Works for the year 1899. He was District Passenger Agent of the Cincinnati & Eastern Railroad Co., and its successor for fifteen years. He is secretary of the Board of Trade, of the Board of Underwriters, and of the Commercial Club. He was manager of the Telephone Company of Portsmouth for twenty years; and was clerk on steamboats for four years, and was one of the most accommodating and agreeable clerks who ever trod the deck of a steamboat. He served on the Victor No. 3, Kate Henderson, Jim Fiske and Mountain Bell.

He was married Dec. 24, 1867 to Cordelia Sickles. Their children were Charles, Harry and Floyd L., Jr. She died Oct. 27, 1887, and he married the second time June 22, 1891 to Miss Florence Slack of Charleston, W. Va. Their children are: Lowell, Kenneth, Osborne and Florence. Col. Smith is secretary of the Elks, a 32nd Degree Mason, a Shriner and an Odd Fellow. He has been representative of the Grand Lodge, and if there is anything comes around worth joining, the Colonel stands ready to join it.

General Jacob Hurd Smith

was born January 29, 1840, near Jackson Furnace, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Joseph Mills Glidden Smith, and his mother's maiden name was Charlotte Maria Hurd, both of whom have sketches herein. His boyhood was passed at Junior and Scioto furnaces, at Portsmouth, Ohio, and in Greenup county, Ky. He attended the public schools, one term at Miami University, and a Military Institute at New Haven. He was old enough to be impressed with the return of the Volunteer Soldiers from the Mexican War, which event fired him with military ambition. After attending the Military Institute, at New Haven, Conn. for three months, he was made First Sergeant, "for his soldierly conduct and bearing." This pleased him more than any other position or rank he has ever held. These were his happy days, as his tastes and inclinations had always been towards the profession of arms.

When the Civil War broke out, he was residing with his father at South Portsmouth, Kentucky. He entered Company F, Second Kentucky Infantry, May 8, 1861, as First Lieutenant. He was wounded at Barboursville, W. Va., on July 1, 1861. He was made Captain January 25, 1862 which promotion was due to his valorous conduct. He was transferred to the Veteran Corps, June 29, 1863 and was discharged therefrom October 31, 1865. He was severely wounded at the battle of Shiloh, and brought to his home at Portsmouth.

On March 7, 1867, he received a commission as Captain in the Regular Army and was assigned to the 13th Infantry. He served in Montana until the spring of 1868, and then served a year in the Judge Advocate's office in Washington. In 1869, he was transferred to the 19th Infantry and served until 1871, in Louisiana, during reconstruction times. He went to Kansas in 1871, and commanded Fort Larned and Fort Dodge, and took part in the Dull Knife campaign, in 1878, and the Uncompangre campaign in 1879. He went to Texas in 1881 and served along the Rio Grande, north from Brownsville to Fort Davis. In 1889, he went with his command to Jackson Barracks, La., and in May, 1890, was given command of the Island of Mackinac, Mich. He was next ordered on recruiting duty to David's Island, and thence to Columbus Barracks in 1890 and 1891. He was afterwards stationed at Fort Wayne, Mich., near Detroit, and in 1894 was promoted to Major of the 2nd Infantry. He served at Fort Omaha, Neb., and Fort Keogh, Mont., until April 20, 1898. He was in the several Indian Campaigns, and settled the out-break at Cheyenne Reservation in Montana, in 1897.

He went with the Second Infantry to Cuba, and was wounded in the battle of Santiago, July 1, 1898. He was promoted to be Lieutenant-Colonel of the 12th Infantry June 30, 1898, and Colonel of the 17th Infantry, October 20, 1899; made a Brigadier-General of Volunteers, in June, 1900, and Brigadier-General of the Regular Army on March 31, 1901.

He left the United States for the Philippine Island on February 19, 1899 and served with Gen. McArthur's Division during the whole campaign. The rainy season held his command at San Fernando, Luzon, until August 9, 1899, the date of general advance northward. Gen Smith (then Lieutenant-Colonel) commanded the 12th Infantry, which had the left wing, and sustained severe fighting. The insurgents, having been defeated, the advance halted at

GENERAL JACOB HURD SMITH.

Calulut, six miles north of San Fernando. On August 16, 1899, Gen. Smith was ordered to capture Angeles, five miles north of Calulut. Two commands had previously failed to accomplish this task and the engagement was a difficult one. The Twelfth again proved equal to the demand, and although the little band of Americans was surrounded by a force of the enemy, much superior in numbers, it was successful, after withstanding a siege of seven weeks. For this Gen. Smith was officially commended.

On November 5, 1899, in command of the right wing, he advanced to Magalan where a large force of insurgents were successfully attacked and dispersed, leaving our troops in possession of Mabalacat and Banban, two strongholds of the enemy. Gen. Smith was then kept at Bautista from which point his forces captured the bands of robbers which were terrorizing the natives. In April, 1900, he was ordered to capture the remnants of Aguinaldo's forces, under Gen. Macabulos, who were strongly entrenched in the mountains. Macabulos was put to flight and his entire command including Gen. Montenegro, surrendered after a short and decisive conflict. The command of the provinces of Tarlac, Pangasinan and Zambales was given him on August 1, 1900.

The work of Gen. Smith thus far was successful and highly commended. He brought peace to every district to which he was sent. About this time the War Department published a map of the Philippines, showing the hostile places in black and the peaceful districts, in white. Samar appears on that map as a black blot. Gen. Smith was selected to pacify it, after the horrible massacre of our troops at Balangiga. In four and a half months, he forced the surrender of all the savage tribes opposed to the United States, on this island, effectually removing the black blot on the Department's map. In this campaign, he acted in harmony with the orders of his superiors and General Order number 100, of 1863. The task was waged against a cruel, savage and relentless foe and under circumstances of the greatest difficulties and perils imaginable.

For words attributed to him while viewing the scene of the Balangiga massacre, at a time when his patriotism was stirred to its depths, and his kind heart was with the brave boys who had been massacred and mutilated, Gen. Smith was court-martialed. The verdict of the Court was in his favor, on all the serious charges made against him in the specifications, but he was sentenced to be admonished by the reviewing authority. Unfortunately at this time there was wide-spread criticism of the conduct of our Army in the Philippines, the Senate Committee was taking testimony upon alleged cruelties, and disclosures were made of the "water-cure" and other tortures. The matter assumed a political aspect and as a result of the hue and cry raised by certain politicians and others, the President placed Gen. Smith on the retired list of the Army. Neither the "water-cure" nor any other form of torture was ever administered to the natives by the command of Gen. Smith. He performed his duty to his country and his flag bravely, loyally and faithfully, and the heart and affections of the American people go out to him in the hope that he will be again recalled to active duty in the service of the country under whose flag he served for forty-two years.

He spent 1880 and 1881 in traveling in Great Britain and on the Continent and in 1894 and 1895 he traveled in Egypt, Greece, Italy, France, Germany and England. He was brought up an old line whig, and afterwards became a republican. When a boy, he attended the Methodist church but afterwards became a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, although he says he can only live up to it, as near as it is possible for an army officer. He married Miss Adelaide M. Hall, February 4, 1885. She was born in Calais, Maine.

Gen. Smith is small in stature, quick, active, and impulsive. He comes from a long line of soldiers, eight of his ancestry having served in the Revolutionary War. His strong characteristics are his intense determination and his kind, sympathetic nature. His intimate associates and old friends at home know he is exactly opposite the portrayal given him by those who do not know him personally. His reading, travel and study have given him a wonderful fund of information, and made him very companionable and a charming conversationalist. As a soldier, he faithfully performed every duty assigned to him and in bravery represents the true type of the American soldier. General

Smith does not know what fear is. He is cool, calm and collected under any and all circumstances. These statements were fully verified in the part he took in the attack on San Juan Hill. Withal, General Smith is a modest man and never boasts of his achievements. He is essentially a man of action. When the time comes for him to act, he is always to be depended on to take the best course. While a good fighter, when fighting is required, he is equally good as a tactician. He could always be depended on to make the best disposition of the forces at his disposal. When he was in command, the enemy could expect an aggressive campaign and all the blows he could possibly deliver with the forces of his command. He was sent to suppress the insurrection in the Island of Samar and he did it. The outcome was unfortunate to him, but, he has borne the reflections he did not deserve, with true soldierly fortitude. The American people understand the situation and their sympathies are with him in his forced retirement. They hope the time will come when his course as a General of the Army in the Philippines will be appreciated by all classes.

Captain James William Smith

was born in Pike county, Ohio, May 21, 1871. His father's name was Maximus Smith, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah A. Schoonover. His father was a native of Ireland. His grandfather Thomas Schoonover, was a native of Ohio. Captain James was the oldest child. Our subject received a common school education in the country schools in Pike county, Union township, near Galford, Ohio. His father died when he was five years old, but his mother is still living. At the age of fourteen, our subject commenced working in a saw mill for Peter Brushart. He remained in Pike county until he was seventeen years of age, then he went to the State of Illinois, at Springfield and Williamsville, where he remained three years. He spent the majority of the time among the farmers and stock raisers. He came to Portsmouth in 1891, in the spring of the year, and has been here ever since. He had learned the carpenter's trade while he was working at the saw mill, and when he came to Portsmouth, he took up this trade, and first worked on the Little Kanawha Lumber Company's building. He worked at the carpenter's trade two years, and in 1894, he began as a contractor and builder, which he continued until the time of the Spanish American war.

He enlisted in Company E, 4th O. V. I., April 25, 1898, for two years, and was made Second Lieutenant. He was mustered in the service May 9, 1898, at Columbus, Ohio. He was appointed First Lieutenant July 13, 1898, and appointed Captain, August 1, 1898, and was mustered out with the company January 20, 1899. Captain Smith has the distinction of having received three commissions during the short period of the Spanish American war.

After the war he engaged in the building of the Smith Lumber Company, on the corner of Tenth and Lincoln streets. The business was first conducted by Captain Smith alone, until June 1, 1900, when a partnership company was formed. On April 1, 1901 it became a corporation as the Smith Lumber Company, and Captain Smith has been the manager and president of the company ever since. He was married August 14, 1888, to Martha Galford, daughter of Alexander Galford, of Galford, Ohio. They have three children: Elsie B., Della M., and Homer James. Mr. Smith is a republican in his political views.

John Sewert Smith

was born at Alexandria, Scioto county, Ohio, August 23, 1866, the son of William R. and Margaret Smith. His grandfather was one of the earlier settlers of that historical town, having moved there with his parents from Massachusetts, when a boy, by boating down the Ohio river before the days of steamboats.

In the year 1886, our subject together with his father and brothers, became interested in the development of Scioto county stone and were the first quarry operators to develop that business in the Brush creek valley, where they continued operations until 1898, when Mr. John S. Smith moved to McDermott, Ohio, and engaged in the stone business with the McDermott Stone Company. He has been a director in this company since its organization and is its superintendent. He is a member of Smith Lodge, 387, K. of P., has passed the honors of the subordinate lodge and is a Past Chancellor of the order. Mr. Smith is a young gentleman of pleasant address and presence. He is thoroughly conversant with his business and is highly appreciated by his business associates.

Joseph Wemple Smith

son of Isaac P. and Diana Wintersteen Smith, was born October 31, 1848, in Adams county, about half way between Wamsleyville and Cedar Mills. His grandfather, Samuel Smith, served in the War of 1812, and his great-grandfather, John Smith, served in the Revolution and died in 1825. Samuel Smith was of German descent, and came with his parents, from Pennsylvania. Isaac P. Smith was born November 3, 1812, in Scioto county on Little Bear creek. Nicholas Wintersteen, grandfather of our subject, came from Canada to Geauga county, where he was married to Eliza T. Quiggle. They came to Scioto county, in 1834. The mother of our subject was born in 1822. His parents came to Scioto county when he was only six years old and located where he now resides.

His education was received from the common schools, before he reached the age of fourteen. He attended three months in the year. On March 7, 1865, he enlisted in the Eighth Independent Company of Ohio Volunteer Sharpshooters and was discharged July 19, 1865. He taught school during the winter of 1867 and 1868, and for three months in 1873, he studied surveying with Thomas Keyes, son of James Keyes, the historian. He followed surveying from this time until 1891. His work was mostly on the Virginia Military lands west of the Scioto. He became very familiar with all the lines and corners of the surveys in the county. He served as Deputy Surveyor under John B. Gregory and Charles A. Barton, County Surveyors, for a period of about two years. He was elected County Surveyor November 12, 1880, and served until 1883. R. B. Shumway was his successor, but resigned before his term was out, and our subject was appointed his successor, May 6, 1885, and served until the first Monday of January, 1886. He was then re-elected in 1886, and again in 1888, and served until 1891, when he resigned on account of his being a candidate for County Commissioner. He was elected County Commissioner in 1892, and served two terms, till 1898.

He is a republican, though not an active politician. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years, and has been a trustee of that church at Otway since its organization in 1897. February 4, 1875, he was married to Harriet A. Cross, daughter of Louis and Mary Cross. They have six children, all living: Charles A., is the agent for the Norfolk & Western at Rarden, Ohio; Estelle, married C. E. Wamsley, of Otway; Rosalie married J. M. Jones, of Otway; Frank A.; Lafayette T. and Joseph Oscar are still at home. Mr. Smith believes in doing all his religious, social and public duties without parade or ostentation. He is and always has been a very modest man. He has a good quantity of the philosopher in his make-up. He believes that what cannot be cured must be endured and endurance is his strong point. Had he lived in the palmy days of Greek philosophy, he would have been a Stoic. He is one of the best examples of the plain every-day American citizen and his life gives him the esteem of his neighbors which he enjoys to the highest extent.

Leroy Findlay Smith

was born June 3, 1846, in Scioto county, Ohio on the farm now owned by Peter Montavan. His father was Peter Jonah Smith and his mother's maiden name was Rebecca Foster Moore, daughter to Firman Moore. His father came to Ohio, from Maryland, with his father Joel W. Smith, who is buried in the Wilcoxen graveyard, east of the canal in Washington township. Our subject has always lived in this county. He was brought up a farmer and has followed that occupation all his life. He obtained a common school education.

He was married February 22, 1869, to Miss Hattie Bradford, the daughter of Cornelius W. Bradford, of the West Side, who was at one time Commissioner of Scioto county. Our subject has had four children. His oldest, Orsen, is aged 28 years, and resides on the Grimes' farm below Friendship. He has a son Howard, aged twenty-four, unmarried; Mary, a daughter at home and also Walter, a son of eighteen years. He has the most productive farm on the ana), just south of the George W. Cole farm. Mr. Smith is a republican in his political views and has always been such. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Cincinnati for thirty-three years and has lived up to his profession. He was a trustee of Washington township for eight years, and was a member of the school board in the same township for ten years. These offices he was elected to without any solicitation upon his part. His neighbors esteem him as a most honorable and estimable citizen.

Isaac Spears

was born in Washington county, Virginia, near Abingdon, April 27, 1825. His father's name was Isaac Spears, and his mother's maiden name was Catharine Summers, both natives of Virginia. In October 1850 he went to Hunnewell, Ky., and engaged in driving team at Hunnewell, furnace, where he remained until the next spring. He then went to Texas and became an overseer of negro slaves. He soon saw the meaning of slavery and he engaged in this business, and after eighteen months in this occupation he became a rabid anti-slavery man. He took this job because he could find nothing else to do. He regrets that it was ever required in the case of a woman, but he has the consolation that it made him a republican. He came back to Hunnewell, Ky., in February, 1859, and worked at different places until 1862, when he moved to Ohio, and located at Empire furnace.

He enlisted August 10, 1862, in Company F, 91st O. V. I. He was appointed Corporal, January 1, 1863. He received a wound in the left ankle at the battle of Stephenson's Depot, by a shot from the navy revolver of a rebel Lieutenant of a South Carolina battery. The Lieutenant shot at him six times, and hit him four out of the six. Three times the ball cut our subject's clothing, and the other he received in his ankle. The Lieutenant was wounded himself and was captured and sent to the same hospital with Spears. He was in the hospital seven months and then returned for duty. On account of his lameness he was made orderly for the Quartermaster, and served as such until June 24, 1865, when he was mustered out. He had four brothers in the rebel army, and all of them survived the service. One of them lives in Kentucky, and the other three in Virginia.

He returned to Sciotoville and engaged in working at Harrison furnace. In the fall of 1865, he returned to Empire furnace, and remained there until he was married, July 5, 1866, to Martha Boyer, daughter of Jonathan Boyer, and a sister of Alfred Boyer, at one time Treasurer of Scioto county, Ohio. He then went to Harrison furnace until 1869, when he removed to Sciotoville, and worked in the brickyard. He resided there for eighteen years, when he sold out and went to Nebraska; but he remained there only two months. This satisfied him and he came back to Findlay, Ohio, where he remained one winter. In 1887, he moved to Webster. The next year he came to Portsmouth and worked in the brickyard six years. In 1892, he bought the Gallus Cook farm near Pine creek, in Green township, and has resided there ever since.

He has one child, a son, Floyd Virgil, who is married and resides with his father. He lost three children in infancy. He is a republican and always has been. A gentleman who served in the war with him and who has known him intimately since says of him: He is a gentleman, hard working and industrious, a good citizen and a man who attends strictly to his own business. Were there more such men in Scioto county, it would be better for it.

James J. Spencer

was born in Jackson county, Ohio, September 19, 1844. He was a son of Thomas and Nancy (Stevenson) Spencer. His grandfather, William Spencer, came to this state from Greenbrier county, Virginia. The youth and early manhood of the subject of this sketch was spent in this county. For a number of years, he resided with his parents at Wheelersburg, and in the schools of that village he received his education. In 1861, at the age of seventeen, in response to the call of the Government for aid, he became a member of Company G, 27th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, November 28, 1861, and served till January 10, 1865, establishing for himself a record for bravery and faithfulness to duty.

He went to Rice county, Kansas, in 1868, and remained until 1872, when he returned to Bloom township, this county.

On February 6, 1872, he was united in marriage to Martha J. Thompson, daughter of Louis Thompson, an old furnace man of this county, and Catharine (Shelton) Thompson, and for a number of years afterwards resided on his farm in Bloom township, this county. Their children are: Louis T., Charles L., Nannie, Myrtle, Addie, Frank A., Chester A., Mattie and Mamie, all of whom except Louis, reside with their parents at their home on Gallia street.

Mr. Spencer has been a life-long, active republican. He was elected Sheriff of Rice county, Kansas, November 7, 1871, and served for two years. In 1895, he was elected to the office of County Recorder, and in the following year he removed with his family to Portsmouth, where he has since resided. He was re-elected to the office of Recorder in 1898, serving in that office through a period of six years, retiring in September, 1901. He is a man of unassuming ways, quiet, but genial, and has attached to himself many earnest friends throughout the county. He is a member of Bigelow Methodist church, of Portsmouth.

Allen Webb Spry

was born June 15, 1858. His father, Dr. John W. Spry, was a dentist and druggist of Portsmouth, Ohio. His mother's maiden name was Louisa Davey. Our subject was one of four children. He attended the primary and grammar schools of Portsmouth, and at the age of eighteen he started out in life for himself, and worked at whatever was available until July 28, 1890, when he was appointed as one of the letter carriers of Portsmouth, and has served in that capacity ever since. He was married in January, 1880, to Miss Martha Dailey. They have three children, Grace, Ada and Howard. He resides at No. 121 East Fourth street.

Daniel R. Spry

was born in Norwich, Shenango county, New York. His parents, lived in Honesdale, Pennsylvania, until he was eighteen months old, and from there floated in a boat down the Ohio river and landed at Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1845. Daniel received his education at the Fourth street school and stood at the head of his classes. In 1851, he entered the drug store of Shackelford & Crichton, located where J. F. Davis' drug store now is and learned the drug business. On the death of Mr. Crichton, he became a member of the firm and the name was changed to Shackelford & Spry, and continued as such until 1857, when he bought the entire business. In December, 1863, he removed to the northwest corner of Second and Market streets, where he has since continued in the same business. He purchased the property and rebuilt the building with a mansard roof.

In December, 1881, he was burned out. He then bought the engine house property west of him and rebuilt with elaborate improvements adding a tower for the telephone exchange. During the flood of 1884, his building with all his stock of goods was burned. He lost the whole stock and building, but in less than a year he rebuilt. He was a Sergeant in Company E, 140th O. V. I. He enlisted May 2, 1864, and was discharged September 3, 1864. Mr. Spry is a quiet and reserved citizen. He is now the oldest druggist in Portsmouth, Ohio. He conducts an old and well established business. He has friends by the score and is much devoted to them. He is noted for his genial and kindly disposition and is universally liked.

David Stahler

was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, December 8, 1862. His parents were David and Louisa (Lorbach) Stahler, both natives of Germany. They came to this country and located near Chillicothe, Ohio. When David was six years old, he removed with his parents to Waverly, Ohio, and completed a course in the Waverly schools. He clerked for his father in the mercantile business until he began business for himself in 1887, in Waverly as a dealer in hardware, from machinery, implements, vehicles, etc. He remained in Waverly until 1893, and then came to Portsmouth, Ohio, and engaged in the same business, where he has remained ever since. He is a very strong democrat, and was chairman of the County Executive Committee when John R. McLean ran for Governor. He is a member of the German Lutheran church.

April 6, 1884, he was married to Anna D. Jones, daughter of William D. Jones, the late editor of the Waverly "Watchman." He has four children: Charles Edward, Henry Lee, Clarence Robert and Louisa Elizabeth.

He is one of the active, energetic, pushing driving business men of Portsmouth. He will trade or buy anything which strikes his fancy, and he is always ready, willing and anxious for a trade at any time. He will have a half dozen projects all going at the same time, and will not neglect any one of them. Everything with him is sharp, short and decisive. When he undertakes anything he accomplishes it.

Michael Stanton

was born in the town of Ballinrobe in county Mayo, Ireland, September 16, 1843. His father was John Stanton, a carman, and his mother was Catharine O'Reilly. His parents emigrated to the United States in 1848, and located at Junior furnace, where they remained about a year, and then removed to Springfield, Ohio. Soon after his parents removed to Jackson county, Ohio. Here he attended school until he was fifteen years of age. He was a government messenger in the army from 1862 to 1865. On February 28, 1865, he enlisted in Company B, 196th O. V. I., for one year and was mustered out May 12, 1865, at Cumberland, Maryland.

In 1866, he and his brother John, went into the general mercantile business at Berlin, Ohio, where he remained till 1870, when he came to Portsmouth, Ohio, which has been his home since. From his arrival in Portsmouth, Ohio, he was in the firm of G. W. Brown & Company, in the liquor business. In 1872, he became a member of the firm of Stanton & Bagby, which was succeeded by Stanton Brothers in 1874. In 1877 the firm became Stanton & Balmert, the late Simon Balmert, being a partner. In 1888, the business was turned over to a corporation, known as the Spring Lane Distilling Company, in which he is a large stockholder, and which business he has conducted very successfully.

Mr. Stanton has always been a democrat in his political views, and has been very active and prominent in his party's councils. He was for twenty years a member of the City Council, most of the time from the First ward, but one or more terms from the Second ward. He was chairman of the Finance Committee of the Council for several years. He always took a great interest in municipal affairs and stood for public improvements. As a democrat, he was always at the command of his party, but would never accept any office which would interfere with his business. In 1890 and 1891, he was a member of the Board of State Penitentiary Managers, appointed by Governor Campbell. This is the only office he ever held outside of the City Council of Portsmouth. From 1894 to 1896, he was president of the Farmers National Bank of Portsmouth, Ohio.

He married Mary Jane Livingstone, November 14, 1876, and has had seven children, four of whom are deceased J. Oscar, Catharine, William B. and George. His surviving children are: Margaret, Michael and Edward. Mr. Stanton is a communicant of the church of the Holy Redeemer. He has always been a man of great decision of character. He makes up his mind quickly and acts at once. His executive ability has enabled him to achieve great success in his business. He is liberal in all his views and favors public improvement and advancement. In his business career in Portsmouth, he has largely contributed to the material advancement of the city.

George Henry Staten

was born December 22, 1847, at Mt. Vernon furnace, Lawrence county, Ohio. His father was William Harvey Staten, and his mother, Mary Ferran Staten, both natives of Adams county, near Marble furnace, where they were married February 22, 1844. She was the daughter of James Ferran, and was born April 14, 1824. Her husband was born March 11, 1819.

His father and mother had eight children, and our subject was the eldest of those who survived. His father died July 15, 1892, and his mother is still living. The family removed to Lawrence county, in 1844. Our subject received a common school education. He enlisted in Company B, 22d O. V. I., February 22, 1864, at the age of eighteen, for a period of three years. He was transferred to Company B, 22d Battalion, O. V. I., October 31, 1864, and was discharged February 17, 1865, at St. Louis, Missouri, on surgeon's certificate of disability. After his return from the service, for six years, he worked on the farm and on the railroad. In 1871, he began the career of a teacher and continued it for nineteen consecutive years in Scioto and Lawrence counties. In 1872, for part of the time, he attended the Normal school at Lebanon. In this period of teaching, he taught four years at Union Landing, three years at Haverhill, and also at Clinton, Buckhorn and Franklin furnaces, and at the Kettles school. He received an appointment in the revenue service in 1899, and in that year became a resident of the city of Portsmouth. He has been in the revenue service from that time to the present except during Cleveland's second term, when he operated a feed mill in Portsmouth in connection with John Blankenmeyer for four years.

He was married August 28, 1877, to Ellen Gillen, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Coyle) Gillen. Their children are: Edith, Flora, Winona, Stanley, Wendell and George. He is a republican, strong in the faith. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, the G. A. R., and Foresters. He is a gentleman of quiet tastes and highly esteemed in the entire circle of his acquaintance.

Joseph Green Steagall

was born December 29, 1851 in Jackson county. His father's name was Douglas Steagall, and his mother's maiden name was Amanda Walls. The family came from Virginia. His parents both died when he was six years of age. There were five children left in the family, and our subject was next to the youngest. He made his home with Hiram Bunn in Jackson county, while a child. He went to work as soon as he was old enough for Thomas Jones at Antioch, Monroe county doing farm work. He continued to do farm work for about four or five years when he learned the carpenter's trade with Robert Sutherland and continued to work at this trade until 1890. In 1889 he bought the Ruckman farm in Madison township. He has resided there ever since, and has carried on farming as part of his business.

He was married on April 14, 1876 to Eliza Ruckman, daughter of Abijah Ruckman of Madison township. They have the following children: Zela, a daughter, married George Deemer, residing in Madison township; Nonie married Edward Chaney, residing on Seventh street in Portsmouth; Herman, aged twelve years, at home. They lost one child, a girl in infancy. Mr. Steagall has always been a republican. He is a member of the Missionary Baptist church of Madison township. He never held any public office. He has been practicing law before the Justices of the Peace of his township and in the county, for twenty years past.

Allen Perry Stevens

was born April 15, 1858 in Lawrence county, Ohio. His father was Joshua Anderville Stevens and his mother was Elizabeth Ann Huston. They had twelve children of which he was the fifth. He went to school in Lawrence county until he was 14 years of age. His father was a blacksmith and brought him up to the trade. At the age of 14, his family moved to Cambria, Gallia county, Ohio. He then went to school there. He and his father worked at Cambria furnace and then went back to Wayne county West Virginia for a short time. Then our subject went to Buffalo furnace, Greenup county, Kentucky and worked at his trade under Col. Worthington. He went to Rarden in March, 1877 and worked for Jerry Newman. He was married December 20, 1877 to Sarah Frances Newman, daughter of Thomas Newman. In the Spring of 1878, he set up in business for himself and has been engaged in it ever since. He does the machine blacksmithing for the Rarden Stone Company. He has seven children: Thomas Truman, Rosa Ann, Flora, Gilbert Terrell, Eliza, Estella May and Mattie Fay. He was a democrat until 1900 when he became a republican. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Rarden, a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Red Men.

Robert Hamer Stevenson

was born at Georgetown, Ohio, the son of Judge and Mrs. S. H. Stevenson, July 27, 1869. Mrs. Stevenson is the daughter of the late General John L. Higgins, one of the pioneers of Brown county, brother-in-law to General Thomas L. Hamer, and successively the first Sheriff and first Probate Judge that Brown county ever had. General Higgins was a sterling democrat of the old school.

The subject of this sketch early in life became identified with newspaper work upon the local papers at Georgetown, Ohio. Before he was of age he went to Cincinnati where he was employed in some of the largest printing concerns in that city. In the latter 80's he went to Louisville, Ky., where he became identified with The Courier Journal, and in the campaign of 1888 wrote a series of letters from various points in the South upon the Intimidation question. These letters were widely quoted by many of the politicians of the north, few of whom, however, realized that the author was a young boy not yet a voter.

From Louisville Mr. Stevenson went to Augusta, Ky., then to Aberdeen, Ohio, and to Middletown, Ohio, in each of which places he conducted newspaper enterprises for various persons. From Middletown he went to Cincinnati where he was employed upon The Cincinnati Post. He advanced rapidly with this paper, and when The Tribune was started in that city, he was among the first Cincinnati newspaper men sought by the publishers of the new paper. He remained with The Tribune through its varying fortunes, until about the time that the first company which operated it made an assignment, when he went back on the Post. He left The Post in 1896, entering the field of politics.

At the Chicago Convention which nominated Mr. Bryan, Mr. Stevenson was placed in charge of Ohio headquarters, and was active in all of the negotiations and deals which involved the delegation from Ohio, in that historical meeting. At the close of the campaign he returned to Ohio, where he was urged to assist in the campaign work in the state.

He was appointed a member of the State Executive Committee, and also its assistant secretary in charge of the work of organization; Mr. McConville, the chairman of the committee, being absent a considerable portion of his time in Chicago where he was called as chairman of The Speakers' Bureau of the National Committee.

In 1897, during the famous McLean-Hanna fight, he was again placed on the State Executive Committee, and again active in the work of organization. After a rest at the close of that campaign he came to Portsmouth and assumed control of The Tribune, which paper he has since edited, as will be seen by reference to the history of that publication of this volume. Since his coming to Portsmouth Mr. Stevenson has made rapid advancements. He is a vigorous writer, a forcible speaker, and active at all times in Democratic work. In addition to the management of The Tribune and Press, Mr. Stevenson has established and built up one of the largest commercial printing concerns in Southern Ohio, catering to the higher order of business.

Mr. Stevenson was married May 1, 1893, to Janette, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Thomas of Adams county. They have one daughter, Martha Estelle.

Aaron Stockham, Jr.,

was born June 13, 1832 on the home place, two and a half miles from Sciotoville on the Little Scioto river. His parents were Aaron and Ruhama (Sikes) Stockham. He has resided continuously on the farm he now lives on with the exception of one year when he was occupied in flat boating on the Ohio. He obtained his education in the country schools. He enlisted in Company F, 140th O. V. I. (Henry Stockham) May 2, 1864 and was mustered out September 3, 1864 with the company. He was a republican up to the organization of the Prohibition party when he joined its ranks. In the last four or five years he has socialistic views peculiarly his own. He was a Free-Will Baptist until 1890 and has since held himself aloof from all churches.

He was united in marriage October 12, 1854 with Mary J. Crawford of Adams county, Ohio, daughter of Robert Crawford. Eleven children have been born to them: James P., Robert C., deceased, Eliza A., deceased wife of Oliver Batterson; Edward M., Jordan M., George L., Charles P., Addie B., wife of N. S. Mathews of Harrisburg, Illinois; William G., Samuel A. and Alva C. Mr. Stockham is a very eccentric person and his ideas are certainly unique. Yet he has a philanthropy about him such as few men have. He lends a helping hand to every one in his neighborhood that may be in need of help and to some that are not. He has written and published a book which he calls "Dynamite or The Impending Crisis." In this book he sets forth his views; and as an awful punishment for the crimes of the world he predicts the destruction of the earth by fire.

John Milton Stockham

seventh child of Joseph Harvey and Catherine (Dewey) Stockham, was born January 1, 1857, near Harrisonville, in Madison township. (See Dewey and Stockham Families.) He was brought up on his father's farm, attended the country schools and at the age of twenty, he entered the employ of M. B. Gilbert & Company and worked on an ice-wagon and as a clerk. After ten months here, he was married to Augusta C. Frowine, daughter of Charles and Catherine (Fisher) Frowine in February, 1878. In 1879, he went to Texas, where he remained until the death of his wife, December 1, 1879 and returned home bringing with him his motherless child, then two and a half months old. This child died shortly afterwards.

He again went to work for Gilbert & Co. and remained with them until 1886, when he entered the coal business on the corner of Front and Court streets and remained there until October, 1897, when he removed to the corner of Second and Court streets, where he has since conducted his business. He was Commissioner of Scioto county from 1893 to 1896 and was appointed to fill a short term of eight months, from January 6, to September 21, 1896 and was re-elected in 1896 for a second term which expired in 1899. He is an active republican and a member of Sixth Street Methodist church. He has been one of the most efficient workers in his church and has served on the Official Board since 1885. He is also a member of Magnolia Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

He was married the second time to Helen McAleer, daughter of John and Helen (Edwards) McAleer, October 18, 1883. Their children are: Vesta May, recently a graduate of the Portsmouth High School with first honors; Russell, Katharine, Paul, and Carrie Violet.

A prominent business man says of him: "He is a man of strict integrity, of good business principles and habits, and a conservative, safe and careful business man. He has been successful in managing his own business and while Commissioner of Scioto county carried out the same principles for the public in giving the county a careful and economical administration of its affairs. Mr. Stockham is one of those men who inspire confidence, and is just the kind of man to be selected for a position of trust. He has always been found attentive to all the duties and positions to which he has been called. He is a man of positive convictions and of strong Christian character; and one who is entitled to the respect and confidence of everyone. He is a man who has decided opinions of his own and when convinced that he is right he is not easily moved. He is what might be called a 'level-headed' man, not easily swayed and carried away by impulse."

Joseph Dewey Stockham

was born December 30, 1843 in Scioto county. His father was Joseph Harvey Stockham and his mother Catherine Dewey, a daughter of Doctor Joseph Dewey. He attended the common schools of Madison township and farmed for his father until he entered the service. He was mustered in Company E, 117th O. V. I. August 21, 1862 at the age of eighteen. He was transferred to Company F, October 18, 1862, and transferred to Company F, 1st O. V. H. A., August 10, 1863 and mustered out June 20, 1865. After the war he resumed the life of a farmer. He was married December 19, 1866 to Sarah Wallace, daughter of Samuel Wallace and Clara Ann Coriell, daughter of Daniel Coriell. He continued farming until 1868 when he kept a store and drove a huckster wagon for ten years. In 1870, he removed to Wallace Mills and that has been his residence ever since. He operated the mills for a number of years, but since has given his attention to farming and merchandising. He has seven children: William H. died January 4, 1875, aged eight years; Thomas Wesley, born March 4, 1870; John Lewis, born August 26, 1873; Clarissa Ann, born December 24, 1875, the wife of Edward W. Bower; Catharine, born September 8, 1878; Joseph Warren, born July 11, 1881; Samuel G., born November 10, 1885. He is a republican and a member of the Free Will Baptist church.

Wilbur Stout

son of Elihu M. Stout, was born August 1, 1876, at Chester, Meigs county, Ohio. His mother is Ruth (Stockham) Stout, daughter of David Jackson Stockham. They had three children: Edith who died in childhood; John who resides in Sciotoville and our subject. His father moved to Sciotoville when he was six years old. He attended the public schools of Sciotoville until he was nineteen and then began teaching. He taught for two years and then attended the Ohio State University at Columbus, Ohio, pursuing scientific studies and doing special work. He is now teaching at Forest Academy, near Franklin Furnace. Mr. Stout has been a special student of Geology for several years and has become well informed on the subject. He has been a collector of specimens at Sciotoville for four years and has become thoroughly acquainted with the geology of Scioto county through his own personal investigation and research. A sub-division of the Geological article in this work was prepared by Mr. Stout and can be found on page 17 and those immediately following. He is a member of the Republican party.

John Franklin Strayer

was born Oct. 1, 1856, near Logansville, Ohio. His father's name was James Wilson Strayer, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah Jane Plummer. His father was a dry-goods merchant, which business he was engaged in for thirty years at Logansville and Degraff. Our subject attended the common schools at Degraff, and also attended the Wittenburg College in 1874 and 1875, studying the classical course. In the fall of 1875, he went to Delaware, to attend the Ohio Wesleyan University and belonged to the Class of '79, but left at the end of the junior year. In March, 1878, he went to Columbus and spent two years on the Daily Ohio Statesman, then conducted by Jonathan Linton. While in Columbus during this period he was a writer for the Cleveland Leader. In March, 1880, he went to Chillicothe, Ohio and started the Chillicothe Daily News. He was the editor and Capt. John Putnam was the proprietor.

He came to Portsmouth, Ohio in June, 1880. He was with the Portsmouth Times two years, as local editor, until March, 1882. He was with the Blade and Tribune for fifteen years. In January, 1897, he quit the newspaper business forever and has had a clear conscience ever since. He spent one year with Mr. Coriell in the Fire Insurance business, and has been with him ever since. He was married January 20, 1886 to Miss Lizzie McNichols, of Lexington, Ky., daughter of John McNichols of the same place. They have the following children: Morris Kirby, aged fifteen, and Katharine Marie, aged twelve. Mr. Strayer is a republican in his political views.

Philip Melancthon Streich was born in Circleville, Ohio, August 16, 1860. His father was Casper Streich who has been a minister in the United Brethren church since 1863. His mother's maiden name was Catherine Rife. His father was a native of Stuttgart, Germany and his mother was born in Pickaway county, Ohio. Our subject was the eldest of twelve children, ten of whom are living. He lived at Circleville four years, at Pomeroy about eighteen months, at Zanesville three years, at Cleveland four years, at Cincinnati four years, at Dayton three years, in southern Illinois about eighteen months, and then he came to Portsmouth, Ohio. Between the age of fourteen and fifteen, he went into a drug store in Dayton and was there over a year, and was in the same business in Illinois.

His father was sent to Portsmouth in 1876, as minister to the German U. B. church and our subject followed him in 1877 and has remained here ever since. When he arrived in Portsmouth, he went into the employment of George Fisher, where he remained until 1879, when he went to Cincinnati and attended the Cincinnati College of Pharmacy. He was there two years and graduated in 1881. He then went into the J. F. Davis Drug store as prescription clerk and book-keeper until in February, 1890. He then went into business under the firm name of Fisher & Streich, having bought one-half interest. The firm continued under this name until July, 1901, then he bought out Mr. Fisher's interest and the business is now, Fisher & Streich Pharmacy, P. M. Streich, Proprietor. He was married September 30, 1884 to Louisa Ebert, daughter of Charles Ebert. He has two children Edna and Ralph. He is a republican and a member of the United Brethren church.

Mr. Streich enjoys the advantage of being well acquainted with every one in the city of Portsmouth and every one in the county, and he enjoys the good will and friendship of all who know him. He is a gentleman who makes no antagonisms. He is known for his uprightness, truthfulness and integrity as a business man. He has been very successful in business and has deserved it all, and no one stands any higher in the estimation of the community than he, and the better he is known the more he is liked.

Hadley Herbert Summers

was born July 30, 1866 at Dayton, O. His father is Lewis Augustus Francis Summers who resides on Robinson avenue in Portsmouth. His mother's maiden name was Elenor Mills. When he was three years of age, his father moved to Bellbrook, Green county, O. where he resided until he was 14 years of age. Then he resided in Xenia two years and in Jackson three years and attended the public schools of all these places. He completed his education in Portsmouth and here he has resided since he was 19 years of age. At the age of 20, he began as a stenographer and on July 1, 1886, took a position as such in the office of Drew, Selby & Co., shoe manufacturers in Portsmouth. On January 1, 1887, he began traveling for the same firm as a salesman and has been engaged in the same business ever since.

He was married to Miss Minta Lewis of McConnellsville, O. in March 1894 and has two children Ivan Harry Summers, aged four, and Herbert Julia Summers aged two. He is a member of the Sixth Street M. E. church. In his political views he is a republican on national and state affairs, but in municipal affairs he is a "free-lance." He has a most attractive home on the northeast corner of Fourth and Waller streets, and is happily situated in all respects. He is one of the most successful of the Drew-Selby Co's. commercial salesmen and enjoys the confidence of his employers to the fullest extent.

Joseph Jackson Sutton

was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, June 17, 1842. His father was John W. Sutton of Baltimore county, Maryland, who lived in Ohio for more than fifty years and in Scioto county twenty-eight years. He died in Portsmouth, Ohio, October 31, 1892. His mother's maiden name was Catharine Gard, of York county, Pennsylvania. She died November 14, 1900. Mr. Sutton received only a common school education in the schools, but was a great reader. He informed himself on all current events and is well read in history.

May 26, 1862 he enlisted in Company H, 87th O. V. I. for three months, was at the siege and surrender of Harper's Ferry, Va., September, 1862. He was paroled and honorably discharged Oct. 1, 1862, returning to his home in Jackson county, Ohio. He remained there until March 29, 1863, when he enlisted in Company H, 2nd West Virginia Cavalry at Charleston, W. Va., in a Company which had been raised in Jackson county, Ohio, the entire regiment having been recruited in Ohio. No regiment saw harder service than this. It was on the perilous Wytheville raid, the ill-fated Lynchburg raid, and numerous engagements in West Virginia. In July, 1864 the command was transferred to the Shenandoah Valley in the Army of Major-General Philip H. Sheridan. Our subject was in the following battles under that gallant commander: Winchester, Fisher's Hill, Cedar Creek, Appomattox Station, and Appomattox C. H., the latter, being the surrender of Lee. He was in fifty-five battles and skirmishes, was never wounded, although engaged in a number of hand-to-hand encounters and never missed a scout, nor fight in which his company was engaged. He prides himself in his army service in that, although not very strong physically, he was never sick nor in the hospital during the war. He boasts that he never cost the Government a cent for medicine or hospital treatment. He was honorably discharged June 30, 1865.

From the service he returned to Scioto county, where his parents had located in 1864. He was a resident of Portsmouth for a number of years. He was a member of the Board of Education in that city in 1893 and 1894, was a member of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal church and one of the official board of that church. He was also a member of Scioto Lodge No. 31, of Orient Encampment and a charter member and Captain of Canton Orient Patriarchs Militant I. O. O. F., of Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Sutton was married to Malissa Jane Westfall in Scioto county, February 15, 1866. Six children were born to them, two of whom survive, George C., of New York city, who was educated in the schools of Portsmouth, and Mrs. Ethel Trahelot of Chillicothe, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton are temporarily living in the mountain section of Pike county, Ky. Mr. Sutton is engage in the lumber business.

Mr. Sutton is one of the most agreeable companions. He is a good conversationalist on any subject upon which he has read. He has a fine sense of humor. He is one of the most genial and courteous of men. When he makes a friend, he retains him. If he has any weakness it is his pride of his army record and he is fully justified in that. In 1892 he wrote and published a history of the Second regiment of West Virginia Cavalry. It is a book of 262 pages and very interesting. This regiment while being designated the Second West Virginia Cavalry was really from Ohio. Mr. Sutton was not only a first-class soldier but is a first-class citizen. Whenever a duty is presented to him he always tries to do it, to the best of his ability. This has been characteristic of him from boyhood to the present time. He was reared a Democrat, but cast his first vote in 1864 for President Lincoln in the Shenandoah valley under the sound of the enemy's cannon. While he has usually been known as a democrat, his political views are liberal. He is universally liked and respected, and has no enemies he knows of. Certainly there has been nothing in his life and character which would invite the enmity of anyone.

William Swabby

was born April 6, 1849, at Center Furnace, Lawrence county, Ohio. His parents were Hiram Swabby and Ellen Brinkenmire. They were married in Germany. William Swabby was the fifth of a family of ten children. He received a common school education in the schools at Howard Furnace. Hiram Swabby was an engineer and our subject learned that trade. He began as assistant engineer with his father at the age of fifteen and worked at that until he was twenty-one. He then worked at Howard furnace as a teamster for four years. He decided to go west and went to Hamilton furnace, Missouri, and remained there for two months, then came back and ran the engine at Cambria furnace for two years. In 1877, he came to Scioto county. He worked for Peter Somers from 1876 until 1880. Since that time he has been a farmer.

In 1876, he was married to Barbara Somers, daughter of Peter Somers. They have five children: George, who is employed in the Portsmouth post-office; Charles, an assistant superintendent of a rolling mill in Pittsburg; Howard, employed at the Big Four depot in Cincinnati; Cora and Roscoe at home. He is a republican and a member of the Methodist church. He was a Trustee of Clay township in 1886. In 1901, he was elected an Infirmary Director. Mr. Swabby is a good example of the self-made man. Starting with industry and honesty for his capital, he has made a success of life. His reputation is that of an honest, capable, industrious and level-headed citizen. The respect in which he is held by the community is evidenced by his nomination and election as Infirmary Director, his majorities being a just tribute to his excellences as a citizen and his admitted qualifications for the place.

Rev. David Stanton Tappan, D. D., LL. D.

The name was originally Topham (Upper Village.) It is purely Anglo Saxon. The first Tappan of whom we have any knowledge, was Robert of Linton, near Paley Bridge, West Riding, of Yorkshire. Our subject is the twelfth in the direct line of descent from this Robert Tappan, who died in 1550. Out of the twelve in the line of descent, nine had Scripture names, Samuel, Abraham and Benjamin were among them, the latter being the favorite. Abraham, the fourth in descent from Robert, came to Massachusetts, in 1637, and settled in Essex county. He was made a selectman the next year. Benjamin Tappan, the grandson of Abraham, graduated at Harvard College. The Tappans have always believed in education, but the son of the last named Benjamin, great-great-grandfather of our subject, was a goldsmith. However, a goldsmith in 1770, was a very different occupation from a goldsmith now. The early goldsmiths were the bankers and money lenders of their time.

The first Tappan in this country had eight children; the next, ten; the next, twelve; the next, eleven, and the Doctor, our subject, has followed the family fashion, for he has had eleven. The Tappans have always been distinguished for three things, conscience, learning and piety, and these characteristics are as strong in the present generation as in the past ones. The Doctor is in a peculiar situation as to this sketch. He was not consulted about it. It is written by his classmate and he is not responsible for anything in it. He never mentions his ancestry unless directly questioned about it, and the writer has inflicted that part upon him.

His grandfather, Benjamin Tappan, afterwards Judge and U. S. Senator, came to the Northwest Territory, in 1799. In 1809, he located in Steubenville, and there his grandson, our subject, son of Dr. Benjamin Tappan and Oella Stanton, daughter of Dr. David Stanton and sister of the great War Secretary, was born, April 2, 1845, the third of five children. He attended the public schools of Steubenville, until September, 1860, when he entered the Freshman Class at Miami University. He was a faithful and diligent student and learned well all there was to be learned. It was known through his entire course that he had the ministry in view. He took the first honors in a class of twenty-five, at graduation, in June, 1864, and delivered the valedictory oration. While in college, he was a member of the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity and the Miami Union Literary Society. Directly after his graduation, he took up the study of Theology, in the Western Theological Seminary, at Alleghany, Pennsylvania, and graduated in April, 1867. In the summer of 1865, he had charge of the State Lick Academy, in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. In the summer of 1866, he was in charge of Callensburg Academy, in Clarion county, Pennsylvania. Alleghany Presbytery licensed him to preach, in the spring of 1866. In September 1867, he took charge of the Chariton Presbyterian church in the Presbytery of Des Moines, Iowa.

On August 12, 1869, he was married to Miss Anna Grandgirard, daughter of Rev. Emilius Grandgirard, at Hillsboro, Ohio.

In February, 1871, he took charge of the Presbyterian church at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, where he remained until April, 1890. While in Iowa, he was honored with the offices of Moderator and Permanent Clerk of his Presbytery in turn. He was permanent clerk of the Iowa Synod South, from 1870 to 1882, when the two Synods were consolidated. In 1882, he was made Stated Clerk of the Synod of Iowa, and served until his removal from the state. While a resident of Iowa, he received the honorary degree of A. M. from Wooster University. He received the Degree of Doctor of Divinity, from Lenox College, Iowa, in 1886. While a resident of Iowa, he was a commissioner to the General Assembly of his church three times. He was for six years president of the school board of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. From 1887 to 1890, he was a Trustee of the Presbyterian College, at Fairfield, Iowa. On April 1, 1890, he took the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church, of Portsmouth, Ohio, the largest and strongest church in the Presbytery of Portsmouth. He held this until September 1, 1899, when he became President of the Miami University.

In the Presbytery of Portsmouth, he was the leader among his ministerial brethren. He was often Moderator. In 1893, he was a commissioner to the General Assembly from the Portsmouth Presbytery, and was one of the Clerks. He was chairman of the Committee on Home Missions in the Portsmouth Presbytery during his entire connection with it. In the Synod of Ohio, he was for three years chairman of the Committee on Education, and for three years was chairman of the Committee on Home Missions. In November, 1899, he received the degree of LL. D. from Wooster University, Ohio.

His eldest child, Benjamin, died an infant, in Iowa. His eldest daughter, Oella, is the wife of Edgar H. Lowman, of Springfield, Ohio. His second daughter, Julia, is the wife of Prof. William B. Langsdorf, Ph. D., Lit. D., late Professor of Latin in Miami University, but now a Presbyterian minister. His second son Paul, is a graduate of Wooster, and a Doctor of Medicine, and an assistant physician at the Dayton Hospital for the Insane. His sons, Frank and George, are students of Washington College, Pa. His daughter Helen is at home. He lost a son, Edwin Stanton, aged eighteen months, while a resident of Portsmouth, and his daughter Lucy, aged sixteen, died since he has resided in Oxford. His youngest daughter, Margaret, is aged seven years.

Doctor Tappan is a well educated man. He is thorough in all his methods. What he knows, he is certain of and it is available to him at any time. He is strong physically and strong mentally. As a preacher and public speaker, he has a voice which can be heard and understood. His sentences are well chosen and expressive. Whatever he has to say is interesting. His discourses are full of treasures of thought. Dr. Tappan has had but three churches in a ministry of thirty-two years. He could have remained in either a life-time. Each change was a promotion and a call up higher. His call to the Presidency of Miami University, his Alma Mater, was a tribute to his thorough education and his love for and devotion to teaching. He is conservative in all things. He is the last minister in the Presbyterian church to be suspected of heresy or heterodoxy. He is no theorist and is always found on the safe side of every question presented to him. When one goes to hear him preach a sermon, he is sure to be instructed and edified. He is sure to hear every word uttered and that the diction will be perfect. He is sure that there will be no sensationalism and he is sure of the Orthodoxy of every utterance. Dr. Tappan is a man of powerful will, and of great strength of purpose and the trait is inherited from both sides of the home. But for the fact that he is a minister, he would be as overbearing as his grandfather, the Senator, or his uncle, the great War Secretary, neither of whom could tolerate opposition. He is a tower of strength at the head of any institution, whether it be a church or college. He is a safe man at all times and under all circumstances. In a number of courses presented to him, he can always be relied on to take the wisest and the most just. Since the above was written, in June, 1902, Dr. Tappan resigned the Presidency of Miami University and in November of the same year accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Circleville, Ohio.

Addison Taylor

was born in Harrisonville, Scioto county, Ohio, March 17, 1866, a son of Martyn Taylor, M. D., and Lydia J. Draper, his wife. Several of his paternal ancestors were soldiers of the Revolutionary War and his father was an acting assistant surgeon in the Civil war. Addison was educated in the common schools of the county and was a teacher for eight years, the last four of which he taught in the grammar grades at Sciotoville. He has been a consistent political prohibitionist since arriving at his majority, never having voted any other ticket, on a state, or national election, and has been a candidate for various offices in the county on the Prohibition ticket. He has been a member of the Methodist church for eighteen years. In 1890, he was married to Miss Anna Frank, of Sciotoville. They have two children: Wendell and Ella. Mr. Taylor is secretary and treasurer of the Scioto Star Brick Works, west of Sciotoville, and has been connected with the company for ten years, having worked his way up from a laborer in the yard. A good part of his time is spent traveling over the country selling fire brick. He has a large business acquaintance among the iron and steel trades. He is active in church work and what might be termed a "radical" in his opinions.

James Landon Taylor, M. D.

The Taylors are of English ancestry and settled first on coming from England in the state of Connecticut, in the early part of the 18th century. From there this branch emigrated to the wilds of central New York, where we find James Taylor, the grandsire of this sketch, organizing a Methodist Episcopal church in or about Elmira, then called Newtown, in 1807. His mother Anna Landon, was a member of the Landon family, now widely distributed through the United States. About 1835, he came to Scioto county with his family, one daughter, Olive, and seven sons, two of whom preceded him. Of the sons, four also became Methodist ministers: James, Harvey, William and Landon, the latter marrying Jane Vincent, daughter of A. C. Vincent, one of the original French Grant settlers. Landon and wife took up their residence at Franklin furnace, Ohio, where the subject of this sketch was born February 1, 1840.

JAMES LANDON TAYLOR, M. D.

Owing to the invalidism of his mother, the infant was taken by his maternal aunt, Mrs. John S. Baccus, near Wheelersburg, and reared in that family. Here he learned to speak French, which he ever after cultivated. His first recollection of school life was going to a subscription school in Wheelersburg, taught by Miss Elizabeth Crichton.

At the age of fifteen, he obtained a certificate to teach school and taught his first school in the Kettles district in 1856, at $33 1-3 per month. Mr. A. J. Finney, afterwards Sheriff and County Clerk, was one of Doctor Taylor's pupils, as well as many other gray-headed men and women out in that district which comprises part of four townships: Vernon, Bloom, Harrison and Porter. When the winter term was over, young Taylor started for a term in college. After completing the Junior year of his college course in Delaware, Ohio, young Taylor obtained from President Merrick an honorable dismissal, and a certificate of standing in college so flattering that it virtually passed him into the University of Michigan, where he graduated in 1863. From that time until 1870, he spent in teaching, and in 1872, took the degree of M. D. in the Ohio Medical College in Cincinnati. He then took up the practice of medicine in Wheelersburg, Ohio, following Doctor Arthur Titus, where he has resided ever since.

In 1867, he married Melissa Folsom, of Green township, a daughter of J. S. Fulsom, whose biography appears in this volume. There were born to them one daughter and two sons, both of the latter being physicians. The daughter Katy, died unmarried in 1900. The older son, Wesley, is rounding up his medical and literary education in the universities and hospitals of Europe, and the younger son John, has a similar course in prospect.

Doctor Taylor has now been identified with Wheelersburg, Porter township and vicinity, as a teacher, farmer, doctor and well known citizen for nearly half a century. For eleven years consecutively he served on the School Board. In March, 1870, he succeeded Captain N. W. Evans as County Examiner, serving for nearly a year on the Board with Doctor Burr and John Bolton. He is a member of the local medical societies, the National Association and the American Academy of Medicine, the Vice Presidency of which he held from 1901-2. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and is planning to attend the International Medical Congress of Tuberculosis to be held in Paris in 1903.

Doctor Taylor is still engrossed with the cares of his business, his lands and his profession, leading even a busier life than when he set out in the practice of his profession thirty years ago. He is of athletic build, six feet in height, an active mover, a republican in politics and a protestant in religion. Doctor Taylor is in no way responsible for what follows in this sketch. He is a very difficult subject to make a character estimate of and do him justice. The reason of that is, there are so many points of view, and our subject will show up well from any of them. Doctor Taylor is a well educated man. He has been trained to think and investigate. His mind is like a wonderful piece of mechanism. It is bound to accomplish certain results. Give him a subject to investigate and reason out and he will first ascertain all the facts and then he will reach the most logical and wisest conclusion. He was not only trained to this but he has given himself a thorough course of self-discipline and training. The facts he learns are always available to him. They will come to him and he can use them at any time. The Doctor has a reputation as a first class business man and financier. It is because he knows how to reason on predicates and thereby anticipate results. In all things he undertakes he does his work thoroughly. He never acts until he knows the uttermost facts, and when he has learned them all, he reasons out a course to pursue and that course is unerringly the wisest which could have been discovered or chosen. When he comes to a conclusion, he has faith in it and never hesitates. This habit of thought and action avails him in every thing he undertakes whether it be farming, medicine, literature or finance.

The Doctor is one of those rare characters who would succeed in anything they undertake. He is a first class farmer, he stands at the top of his profession and as a financier and business man he has no superior. The editor believes he would have acquired national distinction as a medical or historical writer, but no one could justly say that Doctor Taylor has missed his calling. To a layman, his medical essays, mentioned in the Bibliography of this work, show that he is master of every subject he has treated and that on a condition of facts given, his hypotheses are the most consistent with the highest wisdom in his profession, and his ideas are the most advanced. The esteem in which the Doctor is held by the fellow members of his profession, show that the layman's ideas of him are correct. But the Doctor is not only fortunate and successful in handling medical subjects; some years ago he was a contributor to the Ohio Farmer and his articles on Tariff Reform were unanswerable. He can write an essay on the money question which would command the respectful consideration of the best financiers. He would be equally interesting in writing on stock raising. The editor has read all of the Doctor's essays on Medical Topics with great interest and believes that the community in which he dwells does not appreciate his learning or his acquirements in his profession. Fifty years from now his learning and talent will be appreciated. As the Doctor has taken good care of himself in his present life, in the life hereafter, he will not be concerned at the failure to appreciate him while living. His neighbors do appreciate him now as a business man, and they have the utmost confidence in him in his profession, but they will never realize the extent of his acquirements until he has passed beyond this life and his finished career can be compared with others.

Harry Edmund Taylor

was born in McConnellsville, Morgan county, Ohio, September 29, 1873. He was the son of William and Frances Bell Taylor. William Taylor was the owner of various salt furnaces in the Muskingum valley, and was the first democrat elected to office in Morgan county after the war, being elected Sheriff in 1883. The subject of this sketch graduated from the McConnellsville schools in 1889, and then entered the office of the Morgan county "Democrat," where he learned the printer's trade. In 1891, he became a reporter on the Akron, Ohio, "World" and the Akron "Beacon and Republican." In 1894, Mr. Taylor came to Portsmouth to take charge of the city news work on the Portsmouth Daily Times, about to be started by J. L. Patterson. He has held that position up to the present time. In 1898, he, with Vallee Harold purchased the controlling interest in the Times Publishing Company, and upon the organization of the company Mr. Taylor was chosen Secretary and Treasurer. He married December 5, 1899, Leah Pauline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Grimes, of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Lafayette Taylor

was born December 25, 1856, in Susquehanna, county, Pennsylvania, near the town of that name. His parents were William and Mary E. (Kelley) Taylor, who resided on East Mountain in Gibson township, in the above named county. William Taylor was a son of Amos and Dolly (Starks) Taylor. They settled about a mile below Smiley, Pennsylvania, on the west side of Tunkhannock, soon after 1800. Amos was the son of David and Mercy Taylor, who settled at Smiley about 1804, and built a hotel which was then one of the three frame houses in Gibson township. Mr. Taylor is one of a family of twelve children. John F. resides at Scranton, Pa. Sarah Jane married S. C. Avery, and is deceased. Josiah resides on the old home farm in Pennsylvania and was in a construction corps during the Civil war. Freeman F. is a railroad contractor and a ranchman at Colorado City, Colorado. Leslie D. is deceased. Leroy Eugene resides in Lackawanna county and is the overseer of a coal breaker at

LAFAYETTE TAYLOR.

Winter, Pa. William K. resides at Ottawa, Kansas. Volney E. is a lumberman at Doane, West Virginia.

During the early years of our subject's boyhood, he worked on a farm and attended the district school. He very early developed the propensity and desire to make money. This is evidenced by the fact that when he had reached the age of sixteen, he had accumulated the sum of $400 or what would be considered a good fortune for a boy of that age. But with this desire for money came an overwhelming desire for a better education than he could obtain at home. In company with a boy friend of his age and against the will of his parents, he came to Oberlin, Ohio, to attend school. But a term there somewhat discouraged him; he thought an education should be obtained in a more rapid manner so he left this school intending to take up study again in some other school. In the meantime, he went to work chopping wood and sawing logs for a saw mill until school should open again. This was his first experience in the lumber business. When the time for entering school again came around, he did not go; but continued to work and save. Month after month passed away and all the time the desire to make money was overcoming and crowding out the desire for an education, until at the end of three years, he gave up his intention of educating himself and embarked upon his money making career which has been somewhat phenomenal and characteristic of all similar careers. In a short time he had saved sufficient money to buy several yoke of cattle and began taking logging contracts in Pike county. Success crowned his undertakings and soon he began to buy timber in tracts and to have it sawed, doing the logging himself.

In 1880, he came to Rarden, which has been the scene of his activities since, and which owes its growth and prosperity in large part to him. In 1885, he gave up logging and took up his residence in Rarden, having married the previous year. Here he opened a small store and engaged in the buying and shipping of lumber and at the same time owning and operating several saw-mills. He became a partner with Guilford Marr in the cooperage business in 1887. From this year until 1891, he had on hands at all times the enormous quantity of 2,000,000 feet of sawed lumber and his output each year during this time was 2,500,000 feet. Besides this quantity of sawed lumber, he handled railroad ties, tanbark and all kinds of lumber products. His trade gradually branched out until he had practical control of the lumber business in this section and nine-tenths of all the lumber shipped from Rarden in the last fifteen years has passed through his hands and has added thousands to his coffers. From 1887 to the present time he has reaped the harvest from something like 50,000,000 feet of lumber.

In 1895, he became the chief stockholder in the Rarden Stone Company, incorporated that year. He is exclusive owner of the Rarden Stone Mill. He owns a controlling interest in the Taylor Cooperage company. He is an equal partner with Charles S. Brown in the Taylor-Brown Timber Company. He owns and operates a large general store at Rarden. In 1900, he bought several thousand acres of valuable timber in Wayne county, West Virginia, and has since been engaged in sawing and marketing it.

Mr. Taylor is a republican and has always been such. He takes a deep interest in the management of local and national affairs, but is not a politician in any sense. His whole time is devoted to his numerous interests.

He was married July 4, 1884, to Almeda McNeal, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Watrous) McNeal of Pike county, Ohio. They have one child living, Volney S., born March 27, 1886. He is now in school at Valparaiso, Ind. Another child, Lynn, was born May 8, 1888 and died in infancy. His first wife died November 22, 1888, and he was again married to Lucinda McNeal, a sister to his former wife, January 27, 1890.

Mr. Taylor is a man of strong and rugged build and has exceptional powers of physical endurance. He is always active and pushes his work and never lets it push him. The one great secret of his success is his exhaustless, tireless energy. Coupled with this his admirable ability to keep well in hand and manage his diverse business interests. He has exceptional business judgment and tact and during the years of his rapid advancement in the business world it has been employed to wonderful advantage. He is the embodiment of honor and integrity—honest with himself, with his neighbor, with his employees and with those with whom he has business transactions. Some have a deep religious nature and a total lacking of the moral nature and vice versa; others have both in varying degrees, though one predominates. In our subject we find but a moderate degree of the religious but an unusually sensitive moral nature which answers the purpose which the religious nature does in others. Consequently we have a man liberal in thought about things supernatural but radical in questions of right and justice. He should be a shining example for the young man who has nothing but his hands and a sound mind and body for capital to start on.

Martyn Taylor, M. D.,

of Sciotoville, Ohio, was born in the town of Lewis, Essex county, New York, in 1828. His father Theodore Taylor was the son of Eliphalet Taylor, a soldier of the Revolution who was conspicuous for bravery at the battle of Bennington. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Lucy Jane Ballou, was a descendent of Maturin Ballou who came from Devonshire, England in 1640 to the province of Rhode Island and was largely influential in shaping the policy of this province. Hosea Ballou, the mother of President Garfield, and she, are of the same branch of the Ballou family. The boyhood and youth of Doctor Taylor, to the age of young manhood, were passed in his native state, where he received an academic education. At the age of eighteen years, the death of his father threw him upon his own resources, and he began, "single handed to strike out for himself, making his home in Adrian, Michigan. Enrolling himself as a student in the Medical College of the University of Michigan, he worked his way through that institution by teaching in the intervals of lectures and received a degree of Doctor of Medicine in the spring of 1852.

March 27, 1853, he married Miss Lydia Jane Draper and began the practice of his profession at Danby, Dupage county, Illinois. He located in Scioto county, Ohio, in 1860. His three children are: Ella, born April 15, 1854, married A. H. Stephenson, M. D., a resident of Fort Recovery, Ohio; Addison Taylor, born March 17, 1866, a commercial traveler and head of the sales department of the Scioto Star Fire Brick Works of Sciotoville, Ohio; Martyn Taylor, Jr., born January 28, 1869, a physician and surgeon residing in Fort Recovery, Ohio.

On September 12, 1861 he enlisted in Company E, 33rd O. V. I. and took part in the campaign on Big Sandy and in the battles of Perryville and Stone River. He was discharged May 28, 1863, by order of the department, to accept the position of Acting Assistant Surgeon. Returning home in 1864, he served as enrolling officer during the summer of that year, and after completing the draft of Harrison township on September 2, enlisted in Company F, 1st O. V. H. A. After his re-enlistment in September, 1864, he was detailed as Acting Assistant Surgeon for a detachment of four companies of his regiment, stationed at Chickamauga Junction, six miles south of Chattanooga and at stations between that point and Grayville, Georgia, on the railroad south of the Junction. His surgical duties ceased when these four companies rejoined their regiment, with which he remained until June 20, 1865, when he was discharged.

He has always been a republican but has never sought office. His highest ambition has been to attain the greatest excellence in his profession. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. After thirty years of laborious practice, he is disabled from further work, by disabilities resulting from military service, and is simply waiting for his summons.

Wells Teachnor, M. D.,

son of Henry W. Teachnor and Laura B. (Wells) Teachnor, was born September 5, 1869. His paternal grandparents Isaac and Susan Teachnor, born respectively in 1801 and 1814, were among the early pioneers of Adams county. Isaac Teachnor was a man of more than ordinary ability and was possessed of a good judgment. Both were of German descent. The maternal ancestors of Doctor Teachnor were Jacob M. Wells, born June 8, 1821, and Elizabeth J.

Wells, born May 30, 1826. Jacob M. Wells was for a long time one of the leading attorneys at the Adams county bar and was once a candidate for Common Pleas Judge in that district. He was a man of great force of character and a forcible speaker when thoroughly enthused.

Doctor Teachnor was raised on a farm until he was fifteen years of age and attended the district school. In 1885 and 1886 he attended the Presbyterian Academy at North Liberty in his native county. In 1888 he attended the National Norman University at Lebanon, Ohio, and completed the scientific course. He then began reading medicine with Doctor R. A. Stephenson, at Manchester, in 1889, and attended the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati from 1889 to April 7, 1892, when he was graduated with honor and distinction. He located at Portsmouth in May, 1892 but removed to Sciotoville, June 1, 1893. He was president of the Hempstead Academy in 1897. He received the appointment of physician of the Ohio Penitentiary, May 1, 1900 and entered upon his duties immediately and is still serving in this capacity. He is a republican and has taken an active part in politics since old enough. He was a delegate to the State Convention at Toledo, in 1897 and at Columbus in 1898.

He was married May 17, 1893 to Martha Anne Fox, daughter of John W. Fox, of Moundsville, W. Va. They have four children: Wells H. Jr., Margaret V., Galen and Martha A.

Louis Waller Terry

was born September 16, 1843, at Portsmouth, Ohio, on the lot where Irving Drew now lives. His father was John Pease Terry and his mother was Susannah Waller. He went through the Portsmouth schools before the age of sixteen and was in the first graduating class from the Portsmouth High School. He entered college in the fall of 1859. He remained in Kenyon College until December 1, 1861, when he enlisted in Company A, 33rd O. V. I. He was promoted from private to Sergeant of his company January 1, 1862. He was made Quartermaster Sergeant of the Regiment on the same day, a double honor. He was mustered out December 4, 1864. He went into the County Treasurer's office as a clerk and was there until he was married December 17, 1866.

His wife was Florence Tillow, daughter of John Tillow, a former merchant of Portsmouth. After his marriage he was book-keeper at Buckeye furnace, Jackson county, for three months. He then went to Hamilton furnace, Missouri and was book-keeper there for a year. From there he went to La Grange and Clark furnaces, Tennessee, where he was book-keeper. He was there one year and after that spent three years as book-keeper at Talladega furnace, Alabama. He returned to Portsmouth, in 1880, and became book-keeper in the First National Bank of Portsmouth and was there in that capacity and as Cashier until 1897, when he went to Seattle, Washington.

May 1, 1889 he was appointed City Collector at Portsmouth and was re-appointed on April 17, 1890. At Seattle, he engaged in the wholesale cigar business and continued in it till his death. He died November 15, 1899, of paralysis. He is interred in Greenlawn and his widow resides in Portsmouth, Ohio. He was an Odd Fellow, an Elk and a member of the Grand Army. He was a communicant of Christ Episcopal church. Mr. Terry was one of the best business men of his time. As a book-keeper, he had no superior. Wherever his father was interested, he kept the books. He was not a man to make acquaintances readily, but when he once made a friend, he retained him.

Samuel Thatcher.

merchant at McGaw, Ohio, was born November 4, 1843, in Adams county, Ohio. His parents were Richard Thatcher born May 28, 1811 in the same county, died at the age of eighty-seven years, and Christina (Rader) Thatcher, daughter of John and Catharine Rader, natives of Pennsylvania and among the early settlers in Adams county. Our subject enlisted October 14, 1861 in Company C, 70th O. V. I. for three years; reenlisted January 4, 1864; appointed Corporal April 20, 1864; wounded May 27, 1864 in the battle of Dallas, Georgia; appointed Sergeant October 19, 1864; mustered out with company August 14, 1865. He participated in the following battles: Shiloh, Corinth, Siege of Vicksburg, Jackson, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, Dalton, Lookout Mountain, Kennesaw Mountain, Atlanta and the charge at Ft. McAllister,

Mr. Thatcher has been a republican since he cast his first vote and is an active member in the Methodist church at McGaw known as "McKendree Chapel." At different times he has served as steward, trustee and Sabbath school superintendent.

He was married February 28, 1864 to Martha Wilmoth, daughter of John and Mahala Wilmoth, late of Adams county, Ohio. They have six children: John, Sarah J., William Wesley, Mary C., Ida B. and Charles. His wife died October 9, 1899 at the age of fifty-seven. Mr. Thatcher was married again December 23, 1901 to Mrs. Julia Harrigan of Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Thatcher is an honest and upright business man, a good citizen and a consistent Christian.

Miles Plummer Thompson

was born on the place where he now resides, near Young, O., August 5, 1838. His father was J. T. Thompson, and his mother's maiden name was Ellen Thompson. His grandfather was Thomas Thompson, born in Pennsylvania, but located on Brush creek. His grandmother Thompson's maiden name was Elizabeth Isaminger, from Pennsylvania. Our subject was raised a farmer, and always lived in the Brush creek valley, except when he was in the military service. He enlisted in Company H, 31st O. V. I., August 30, 1862, as a private for three years. He was appointed Corporal July 1, 1864, Sergeant May 1, 1865, and mustered out with the company July 13, 1865. He was not wounded in any of the battles, though in all of them. He was with his regiment in the Atlanta campaign and Sherman's march to the sea. When he came home he resumed his life as a farmer, and has been engaged in it ever since. He married Catharine Jane McCann, daughter of Isaac Rose McCann. Their children are as follows: Truman Evart, a farmer; Carey Marshall, a teacher; Olive, Minnie and Miles Homer, who died at the age of five years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He has always been a democrat, and is a first-class citizen in every respect, and is so regarded by all who know him.

William Jefferson Thompson

was born in Scioto county, Ohio, on October 10, 1847. His father was John Thompson and his mother Catherine Williams. His mother's father, Matthew Williams was born near Charleston, Virginia. Our subject has always lived in Scioto county and owns two fine farms about a mile below Rarden. As a boy he learned the blacksmith trade but followed it only occasionally. He is a Democrat. On November 23, 1869 he married Jane Freeman, daughter of Michael Freeman, a former well known citizen of Rarden. He has ten children, three of whom are deceased. John B., Ida, the wife of James Lanthom, living in Rarden township, Cora Ann, the wife of Marcus Hibbs, resides in Adams county, Enza Ethel, a boy at home, Harley, Jesse Earl, Dolly Olive, William Elden and Hartzell Everett.

Mr. Thompson is highly respected for his excellent qualities and is regarded as one of the best citizens of the township.

William Kennedy Thompson

was born at Brookville, Pa., June 25, 1834, the eldest son of Judge J. Y. Thompson, and Agnes his wife. The Thompson family was a large one. The brothers were, beside himself, John J. and Robert M., both of New York, Hon. A. C., Federal Judge, of Cincinnati, and the sisters were Mrs. J. N. Garrison of New York and Mrs. John L. McNeil of Denver, Col.

Our subject obtained his education in the town of Brookville and on January 4, 1857 was married to Miss Catharine Jane Porterfield of Emlenton, Pa. In 1859 he came to Portsmouth where he resided during the remainder of his life. He engaged in the saw-mill business on the river front and followed it for many years. He was a democrat, in his political faith, when all the remaining members of his family were republicans, but in 1867 he and the Hon. Wells A. Hutchins were the only two democrats in the county who advocated and voted for the State Constitutional amendment conferring negro suffrage. Thompson was one of the best natured of men, always obliging to his party, his church, his neighbors and his friends. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church, and a trustee for many years.

He was tall and of agreeable presence. When he was at his best, he was a faster walker than any other man in Portsmouth. No one could overtake him on foot. It was a proverb in Portsmouth, "Don't follow Thompson, and expect to overtake him." The only way to meet him when he was out in the city afoot, was to intercept him. He was a liberal and generous man. He would give his last dollar to a good cause. His willingness to oblige everybody was often taken advantage of, and among others who took advantage of him in that respect were his party friends. He knew everybody and was on good terms with all he knew, and never refused any demands made on him by his party. He ran for council several times to help his party. He was a candidate for Water Works Trustee four times, not that he cared for the office, or wanted it, or that it would be of any help to him, but simply because he was a good man to be on the ticket, and because, if he was on, he would work for himself and for the ticket.

In 1871, he was a candidate for this office and the vote stood J. F. Towell 851, Thompson 611, majority 240. In 1873, he ran again and was successful. The vote stood Thompson 1,065, Thomas W. Carre 815, majority 250. He held the office three years, and in 1876 was a candidate for a second term. The vote stood J. P. A. Cramer, 1,032, Thompson 987, majority 45. In 1879, he was again a candidate against Cramer and the vote stood Cramer 1,210, Thompson 855, majority 325. He was Postmaster at Portsmouth, Ohio, from May 5, 1886 until February 25, 1890, appointed by President Cleveland, and he pleased everyone by his administration of the office.

In May, 1890, he was appointed by the Commissioners of Scioto county, a trustee of the County Children's Home and was reappointed and served continually thereafter until his death. In making these appointments, the Commissioners appointed those whom they believed had the greatest sympathy for the unfortunate. It was on this idea that Thompson was appointed and reappointed while he lived. If Mr. Thompson took any interest in any subject, he took a great interest. This is true of his church and Oddfellowship. As a church worker he could always be depended upon. In Oddfellowship he was also a great worker. He was always fond of children and interested in their welfare. For several years he served as Truant Officer for the public schools. If any of his friends took sick, he was the first man to know it and the first one to visit them. He had his faults. Who has not? But they were strictly personal and were buried with him. His virtues shone during his life; they endeared his friends to him and their sweet incense survives him. Noble hearted, great souled Thompson, "vale mi frater."

Elijah Warwick Tidd, M. D.,

was born September 8, 1869, in Scioto township, Jackson county, Ohio. He received his name for Dr. John B. Warwick, of Lucasville, Ohio. His father was Elijah Tidd, born September 18, 1823, who enlisted January 28, 1865 for one year in Company H, 194th O. V. I., was appointed Sergeant and was mustered out October 24, 1865. He died January 22, 1902. Our subject's mother was Rachel Stockham, a daughter of David Stockham, who was a son of Col. Aaron Stockham, born August 3, 1787, in Pennsylvania.

His father and mother had six children, of whom he was the fifth. He had a common school education. He began the study of medicine in 1890 with Dr. Orin C. Andre, of Piketon, Ohio, now Waverly. He attended the Columbus Medical College in 1891 and 1892, the Ohio Medical University in 1892 and 1893, and graduated in the latter year. He located at Wakefield, in the spring of 1893, and remained there till 1899, when he located at Stockdale, Ohio, where he has been ever since. He is not married, but his friends say that he has reasonable prospects of being married soon. He is a republican, and a member of the Alhambra Lodge, 554, of the Knights of Pythias, and a member of the Pike County Medical Association.

Winfield Scott Todd

was born November 6, 1861, at Urbana, Champaign county, Ohio. He was a son of John E. and Mary Jane (Mumper) Todd. His grandparents on both sides were from Pennsylvania. He received a common school education and was two years in the Urbana High School after which, he took a complete course at the Miami Commercial College, Dayton, Ohio. He first entered business in the tobacco house of Lines, Roush & Co., of Cincinnati, where he had charge of their office. He located in Portsmouth, August 29, 1882, and took the position of time-keeper and bill-clerk in the Portsmouth Foundry & Machine Works. He became secretary and treasurer of that company in 1885, and remained with them until January 1, 1890, when he resigned to become the secretary and treasurer of the Portsmouth Stove & Range Co., with which he remained until March 1, 1899, when he disposed of all his interests in that company. Upon the re-organization of the old and well known firm of William Resor & Co. in Cincinnati, manufacturers of the celebrated line of "Monitor" stoves and ranges on September 19, 1899 he became identified with that corporation, and took the responsible position of vice-president and treasurer. The company then having a paid up capital of $225,000.

Mr. Todd is a republican in politics. At one time, he was a candidate for member of the school board of Portsmouth, but was defeated. He was brought up under the influence of the Presbyterian church, but is not a member. He was married October 13, 1886 to Miss Cosette Calvert of Portsmouth, daughter of Judge R. A. Calvert and he has two children Helen and Harold. The former graduated from the grammar department of the Mt. Auburn Public Schools, and was presented with a membership in the Mercantile Library under the Day bequest, having obtained that prize as one among 1,100 contestants. During Mr. Todd's residence in Portsmouth, he stood first among the business men, and was in every respect a first-class citizen. His abilities earned the promotion he received in obtaining the position he holds in Cincinnati.

Charles Oscar Tracy, son of Uri Tracy and Harriet Ellen (Lloyd) Tracy, and grandson of Charles Oscar Tracy, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, April 13, 1857. He was graduated from the High School in this city in June, 1875, and after spending several months in the West, returned to Portsmouth and was associated in the shoe business with his father and grandfather, Richard Lloyd.

September 25, 1884, he was married to Mary Ida Patton, at Columbus, Ohio. They resided in Portsmouth until June, 1885, when they moved to Columbus where he engaged in the wholesale notion business, afterward organizing The Tracy-Wells Co., of which he is president at this time.

Charles Packer Tracy,

son of Uri and Persis (Packer) Tracy, was born in Oxford, Chenango county, New York, December 5, 1829. He was educated at the famous old Oxford Academy of which his great-grandfather, Gen. Benjamin Hovey, was one of the founders in 1794.

Having spent his youth in the place of his birth, he removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1851, where two brothers of his father were then living. After a few years of clerkship with the jobbing shoe-house of Richard Lloyd & Co. he left that firm in 1855 and started the firm of C. P. Tracy & Co. in the same line of business, with F. J. Oakes as partner. A year later, the firm name was changed to Oakes & Tracy for a brief period.

In 1858, his brother, Henry R. Tracy, then a clerk in the house, bought out the interest of F. J. Oakes, and the firm name again became C. P. Tracy & Co., and thus continued for many years.

On December 20, 1858, Mr. Tracy was married, to Isabella McClain daughter of Capt. William McClain, who was long connected with steamboating interests on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. They had only one child, a daughter, named Persis McClain, who was born in 1861. She graduated in 1880 from the Bartholomew English and Classical School in Cincinnati, Ohio, and was married August 31, 1893 to Frank Burr Mallory, A. M., M. D., at present associate Professor of Pathology in the Harvard University Medical School. She has two sons, Tracy Burr, born October 26, 1896 and George Kenneth, born February 14, 1900.

Mr. Tracy was one of the best business men of Portsmouth and was very successful. He was a man honored and respected by all who knew him. He became a communicant of All Saints church, in Portsmouth in 1857, and at the time of his death was Junior Warden. His life was a lesson in christianity. He never sought any civil honors or held any public office, but was one of the prominent men of Portsmouth in good works. On the evening of January 15, 1874, he was stricken with paralysis and died at 6 A. M., January 16th.

Henry Reed Tracy

was born December 9, 1833, in Oxford, Chenango county, New York. His father was Uri Tracy and his mother's maiden name was Persis Packer. He resided at Oxford, New York till 1857, and was educated at the Oxford Academy, a famous and ancient institution of learning. He was engaged in his father's store from 1850 for a period of seven years.

In 1857, he came to Portsmouth, Ohio. His brother, Charles P. had preceded him six years and was engaged in a wholesale boot and shoe business with F. J. Oakes, under the firm name of Oakes & Tracy. Henry R. bought out F. J. Oakes' interest and the firm name became C. P. Tracy & Co. From the death of his brother, January 16, 1874 the business was carried on under the same firm name with Henry R. Tracy as the manager.

On May 2, 1864, Mr. Tracy entered Company E, 140th O. V. I. as Second Lieutenant and served till September 3, 1864. He was First Lieutenant in the State Militia but accepted a Second Lieutenantcy in this hundred days' service.

He was a director in the Portsmouth National Bank from 1873 and its vice president from 1875. He became a communicant of Christ church when it was organized and was a vestryman for many years. He left Portsmouth as a resident in 1886 and became a resident of Boston, Massachusetts, where he has resided since, but has always held his interest in the firm of C. P. Tracy & Co. and its successor, The Tracy Shoe Company.

He has been a republican all his life. He is a man of superior business abilities, and though beginning life with little or nothing has achieved a very gratifying success. With fine social qualities, and manners of more than ordinary polish and refinement, yet decidedly retiring, he combines a kindness of heart, thoughtfulness, benevolence and charity which have justly won for him the respect and esteem of all who know him.

John Bailey Tracy

was born in Chenango county, New York, April 12, 1837. He came to Portsmouth in 1851. When a boy he clerked with S. R. Ross. Later he conducted a store at Pioneer Furnace and has lived at Hale's Creek station many years. When he first came to the county he clerked at the Pioneer furnace store several years. He was a sergeant in Co. F. 140th O. V. I., May 22, 1864 to September 2, 1864. He was married in 1859 to Eliza Brady, daughter of Levi Brady. They have six children: Charles P., Emily B., Uri and Mary (twins), Albert and John. In 1860, he purchased a farm of 167 acres at Pioneer station and has resided there ever since. In 1872, he became a local Baptist minister and has preached at a number of appointments. He was Treasurer of Scioto county 1896 to 1900. He has always been a republican.

Mr. Tracy is rated as one of the staunch business men of Bloom township. He was a faithful, conscientious public officer and discharged the duties of his office in a very creditable way. His kind genial manner makes him a general favorite of all. Being a ready speaker and well informed on public questions, he is in demand in the political and ecclesiastical world.

Joseph Trimble Tracy, son of Noah and Nancy Ann Freeman, his wife, was born December 28, 1865, near Mount Pleasant, Henry county, Iowa. His grandfather was Jonathan Tracy, a native of Steuben county, New York. He was an old time physician in Scioto county, residing at Rocky Fork from 1834 until his death in 1888. His mother was a daughter of Milby Freeman of near White Oak, Adams county, Ohio. At the age of two years, his parents moved to near Bloomfield, Davis county, Iowa, and there our subject attended school until he was eleven years of age. They then removed to Rock Fork, near Otway, this county.

He resided there from 1876 until he reached his majority. He attended the country schools there, and became a teacher in the fall of 1884, and followed that occupation until April, 1891. He taught at Otway, McGaw and Dry Run. He was appointed County School Examiner in September, 1889, and served as such until September, 1893. In April, 1891, he was appointed deputy Clerk of the Courts, under William F. Whitney, and held that office until September 11, 1893. On that date he took the office of County Auditor, having been elected in November, 1892, and served until October 19, 1899. Since then he has assisted in the Auditor's office from time to time. On August 22, 1901, he was appointed Examiner for the State Auditor, and since then has been engaged in examining the financial transactions of the county of Auglaize. That task is now completed.

Mr. Tracy was married on April 11, 1894, to Alnore Arnold, daughter of George Arnold, of Rush township. They have four children: Stanley, Helen, Christine and Juliet. He has always been a staunch republican, and has taken a great interest in politics. He is a member of the Bigelow M. E. church of Portsmouth. On June 27, 1902, he was appointed one of the Deputy Inspectors and Supervisors of Public accounts, under the act of the General Assembly of Ohio, establishing a Bureau of uniform accounting in public offices.

Uri Tracy,

son of Charles Oscar Tracy and Maria Kinney, was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, June 16, 1831. In September, 1847, he engaged in the shoe business in the employ of Richard Lloyd, afterward becoming a partner in the firm of Lloyd, Tracy & Co.

He was married December 4, 1851, to Harriet Ellen Lloyd, who died October 14, 1901. They had six children, four of whom are living at this time: viz., Charles O. Tracy, Uri Tracy, Jr., Harriet E. Waughop and Elizabeth L. Lowes.

In 1889 he removed to Columbus, Ohio, where he still resides.

Cornelia Bruner Treuthart

was born November 29, 1851, in Wheelersburg, Ohio, of Swiss-Irish descent. Her parents, Samuel N. Bruner, born in 1812, a Jeffersonian Democrat, and Elnora Fischer Bruner, born in 1814, located in southern Ohio, in 1838. In company with Mr. Bruner's parents, they responded to the call of Westward! Ho!, and left New York, Pennsylvania, in 1834. Samuel Bruner operated a flour mill at Chaffin's Mills, Ohio, and from 1849 to 1869, conducted a general merchandise store in Wheelersburg, Ohio. Her grandfather, Owen Bruner, was identified with the early history of Scioto county, as Justice of the Peace, School Director and Methodist class leader in 1838.

Her mother, Elnora Fischer, was a devout Methodist and the daughter of George Fischer, a soldier of the Revolution and an aid in the removal of the Continental congress from Philadelphia to Lancaster and later to York, Pennsylvania, in 1777. She also saw Lafayette during his visit to America in 1825.

The subject of this sketch taught school in Waverly, Pike county, in 1869, and in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1871 and 1872. She was married November 27, 1873, to James L. Treuthart, born in 1838, a native of Zweisimmen, Canton Berne, Switzerland. He wrote "The Milliad, a poem of Liberty." He enlisted in Co. A, 104th O. V. I., August 7, 1862, and served until June 17, 1865. He was appointed corporal August 22, 1862, Sergeant, August 5, 1863, and First Sergeant, August 19, 1864. For twelve years, he was an examiner of city school teachers at Portsmouth, Ohio, and is familiar with the French, German, Greek and English languages. Mr. and Mrs. Treuthart's two sons, Willie and Elmer, died in infancy. Of the three eldest daughters, who graduated from the Portsmouth High School with highest honors: Alice C., 1878, is engaged in teaching; Bertha M., 1880, and Maude L., 1882, are proficient stenographers in the railway service. Flora B., 1885; Blanche I., 1887; and Edythe E., 1891, are students. Mrs. Treuthart is a member of the Woman's Literary Club, organized in 1891, and with her daughters, Alice C. and Bertha M. received a diploma of graduation in 1900 from the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. An interest in educational matters is shared alike by parents and children.

CHARLES W. TURNER.

Leslie Charles Turley,

the son of Col. John A. Turley and Charlotte E. Robinson, the daughter of Joshua V. Robinson, was born November 11, 1862. He was the youngest son and child of his parents. He attended the Portsmouth schools until 1878, then went to the Ohio State University for a term, then to Cincinnati to the Nelson Business College, and took one term there. When he came home from Cincinnati, he went to work for the Portsmouth Steel & Iron Company, on the old site of the Gaylord mill. He next went to work for Levi D. York, in the Burgess Steel & Iron Works, running the two hammers at the plate mill. After that he went to work for his brother at the fire-clay mines at Sunday Switch on the B. & O. railroad, for several months. Mr. Adams then offered him a job as weigher and time-keeper of the Portsmouth Fire Brick Company. During this time he was also secretary. He remained with this company until 1891.

After 1891, he engaged in business with George Davis and W. G. Beyerly in the Kentucky Fire Brick Works. They made the first paving brick that was ever made of shale in this district. This was continued until after the death of Mr. Davis, Jan. 11, 1894, but the administrator had his interest until 1896, when the property was sold and Mr. Watkins and our subject bought it. It was incorporated into the Kentucky Fire Brick Works, and Mr. Turley was made vice president and secretary. They operated it for about five years and in June, 1901, it was consolidated, and the Kentucky Fire Brick Works, the Portsmouth Fire Brick Works, the South Webster Plant and the Blast Furnace Company became the Portsmouth & Kentucky Fire Brick Company, of which our subject was first vice president and general manager. In 1902 this company was absorbed by the Portsmouth Harbison-Walker Company of which Mr. Turley was elected President. He is also President of the Black Fork Coal Co.

He served as a member of the City Council six years from 1894 to 1900, and was also president three years out of this period. He was married November 11, 1890, to Miss Retta Reed, a daughter of Samuel Reed. They have two children: Charles Leslie and Ella Retta. Mr. Turley is a Mason, an Elk, a member of the Sons of Veterans, of the Royal Arcanum, of the Woodmen of America, and the Woodmen of the World. He is a republican.

Albert Richard Turner

was born November 12, 1863, at Union Mills, Ohio. His parents were William and Mary (Daniels) Turner. His boyhood and youth were passed on a farm on the west side of the Scioto river. He attended the district school in winter and received a common school education. He was elected Clerk of Nile township in 1898, and served until 1902. He is a republican and an Odd Fellow. On March 11, 1890, he was married to Catherine Barbee, a daughter of William Barbee. They have three children: William, Leroy and Ethel. Mr. Turner lives two miles below Friendship and has a comfortable home and a large and profitable farm. He has one of the largest apple orchards in southern Ohio. Mr. Turner is one of those solid, substantial farmers who tends strictly to his own affairs and by doing so has become one of the most prosperous and respected citizens. He is of large portly build, weighs over two hundred pounds and is possessed of a most equable temper. While he is essentially a man of business, he is a lover of the sports, and in times of leisure he takes a special delight in hunting and in the fox-chase.

Charles W. Turner,

of Sciotoville, Ohio, was born in Piketon, Pike county, Ohio, September 6, 1840. His parents, Nelson Turner and Francis (Hopper) Turner, were married at Scioto furnace, Ohio, in 1836, and moved to Piketon during the following year. His father was an engineer and machinist and erected a blacksmith and machine shop in Piketon, which he conducted successfully. He died in 1843. After several years of widowhood, his mother was married in 1846, to William Sheets. In the spring of 1848, they moved to Randolph, Tennessee, where they were engaged in the hotel business for two years. In 1852, they moved to a plantation on the Mississippi river, where his mother died March 4, 1853.

In the spring of 1854, our subject left the parental roof and went west to near Little Rock, Arkansas, to live with a cousin. He worked on a farm there until the fall of 1860, when he went to see his step-father, who, in the meantime, had moved from Mississippi to a large plantation in Louisiana.

Hostilities between the North and South were at fever heat and he was an out-spoken Northern sympathizer. In the spring of 1861, the Confederates were organizing a company there to go to the front, and were bent upon pressing him into service. He out-witted them and skipped for the North between sun-set and sun-rise June 5, 1861. He intended to go up the river, but when he reached Memphis, he found it blocked at Island Number Ten, and had to change his plans and go by rail to Louisville. Coming up the river, he rode on a boat with the Tiger Bayou Riflemen from Milligan's Bend to Memphis, and to secure safety, he told them he lived in Memphis and would enlist with them upon reaching that port, which he neglected to do. While in the Memphis depot, inquiring the most direct route, he met a young man from Indiana, who had been in Mississippi, and who was trying to get home. As they were both in the same predicament and their efforts to escape were the same, friendship ensued and they became partners. They went to Bowling Green, Kentucky, and on June 10, while on the depot platform at Bowling Green, our subject overheard the officers tell the conductor to stop the train at Camp Zollicoffer, where the train would be searched. He told his partner this, who paid little attention to it. Our subject considered discretion the better part of valor and was also anxious to see the camp, so he was standing on the platform between the cars when the train reached the camp. Officers boarded the train and placed guards at the doors, but they evidently thought he was a member of the crew and did not molest him. He stepped off and sauntered up to the engine and boarded the cab, and thus came on safely. But, his partner, who had remained in the cars, was captured, and he never heard of him again. They had arranged that, if one met with misfortune, the other would notify his folks, and our subject wrote his partner's folks when he reached Missouri.

He reached the Union lines at Louisville, and, crossing the river to Jeffersonville, he drew one long breath, threw his hat into the air, and gave a yell. His plans were then undecided, but as his two half-sisters were attending school in Hannibal, Missouri, he went to see them. He then went to Ralls county, twenty-one miles away. He lived on a farm there until February 22, 1862, when he enlisted in the 31st Missouri State Troops and served until November 30, same year, when they were disbanded, subject to call. Our subject started to Indiana on horseback, but stopped in Iowa where he remained until July 28, 1863. He then went to Indiana, thence to Ohio and Pittsburg to see his mother's relatives. In the fall of 1863, he went to Camp Nelson, Kentucky, where he was employed in the Quartermaster's Department to drive teams. During the winter he operated from Flat Lick to Cumberland Mountain, taking supplies to the forces. In the spring of 1864, he went to Lexington, Kentucky.

Until then, he had been a driver and leader of pack mules in the mountains, but he was promoted to Wagon Master when he reached Lexington. His train started south with five hundred wagons and three hundred ambulances, and when it reached Decatur, Alabama, he was turned over with 25 wagons and 150 mules to the First Division of the Twenty Third Corps of the Army of the Cumberland. The drivers were sent back and soldiers were detailed to drive and he was retained as Wagon Master. He was with this division until February 16, 1865, was through the Nashville fight, and kept up the supplies from the time the army left Nashville until it was finally shipped from Grange's Landing on the Tennessee river to Louisville, from which place the Division was sent to Washington and our subject to Lexington. During March, 1865, another train was organized, which started to Little Rock, Arkansas, in April. It went to Louisville and went into camp to await transports, but, on May 20, they were discharged, the war being ended.

He then went to Berlin Cross Roads, Jackson county, Ohio, bought a team and hauled ore to La Trobe Furnace. In the fall of 1865, he took a contract with the Baltimore & Ohio South Western railroad to furnish them cross-ties in Scioto county. He came to this county and boarded at Henry Barrett's in Harrison township. In February, 1866, he came to Sciotoville and contracted with McConnell, Porter & Company to deliver fire-clay to their works.

On October 15, 1868, he was married to Miss Louella Byrn, who died November 15, 1901. They had three children, viz: Arthur M., who is assistant superintendent of Barnhart Brothers' type foundry in Chicago; James P., who is store-keeper for The Scioto Fire Brick Company; and Ella, who died December 23, 1894. On January 1, 1876, he was employed by The Scioto Fire Brick Company as assistant superintendent. On January 1, 1890, he became superintendent, and in September, 1894, he was also made treasurer; and on January 1, 1902, he became president, superintendent and treasurer.

He was reared a Democrat, but shortly after becoming a voter, he became a republican, in which he is firmly grounded. He is not a politician in the popular sense. He never aspired to political honors, although he served his township one term as Trustee in 1877. One of the regrets of his life is that he voted the democratic ticket one time.

Mr. Turner is one of the best specimens of the self-made man. On account of scant school privileges in the South during his boyhood, his education was limited, but by dint of a bright intellect and indomitable perseverance, he acquired a good, practical education since reaching manhood, and is to-day one of Scioto county's progressive and substantial men.

William Turner

was born in Washington township, Scioto county, Ohio, March 14, 1831. His father's name was Samuel Turner, and his mother's maiden name was Phoebe Wilson, a daughter of John Wilson. There were two boys and two girls in the family: John, William, our subject, Mary and Maria. John died in Portsmouth at the age of seventy-three; Mary, now deceased, married William Holt; Maria is deceased. Our subject attended the common schools. He commenced to work on the farm when he was nine years old, and has been a farmer all his life. In the spring of 1860, he located where he now resides.

He was married February 9, 1860, to Mary Daniels. They had the following children: Frank, Louisa, married Aaron Briggs, Albert, a farmer on the West side; Andrew Barry and Jennie Dunbar, twins. The latter married Christian Blair, a farmer; Lottie died in infancy. His first wife died January 29, 1898, and he married again November 2, 1899 to Mrs. Eldecca Wishon, a daughter of Robert S. Wynn.

He was township Trustee for a number of years. He was County Commissioner from 1876 to 1882. He owns about 500 acres of land along the Ohio river and the Scioto valley. He was a whig before he was a republican, and cast his first vote for General Taylor on the Whig ticket. He is an Odd Fellow. Mr. Turner is one of the most reliable citizens of Scioto county. While he was County Commissioner, he made one of the best in the whole succession. When he said "no" it was "no," but he was never arbitrary. He was always open to reason and conviction and took the best course. No man ever possessed better business judgment than he. As an economist, he has been a success. He has made a fair fortune and he knows how to take care of it, though at all times he is a liberal, public-spirited citizen. A dozen words from him as how to make money is worth a whole library from a writer on the subject who has not succeeded in practical life.

James Huston Varner

was born January 1, 1861 at Portsmouth, Ohio, the youngest son of Col. Sampson E. Varner and Maria Louise Huston, his wife. He attended the Portsmouth public schools until 1874, when, at the age of 13, he went into the Kinney National Bank. He remained in the employ of that institution until 1887 when he went to Muscatine, Iowa, as a clerk in the Commercial hotel, kept by his uncle, John W. Varner. From there he went to Kokomo, Ind., and was a clerk for eighteen months in the hotel kept by Joseph C. Gilbert, his uncle. In 1880, he went into the Express office in Portsmouth, Ohio. In the same year, he began as stock boy with Sanford, Varner & Company and continued with their successors, Towell, McFarland and Sanford, until 1886. In the latter year, Mr. Sanford, our subject, and William H. Varner bought out the old firm and conducted the business in Portsmouth, Ohio, as Sanford, Varner & Company until 1898 when the firm moved to Cincinnati and succeeded Miller, Vorhees & Company by purchase, since which time they have conducted the business as Sanford, Storrs & Varner. The firm is composed of Angus L. Sanford, John S. Storrs and James H. Varner.

Our subject was married on November 27, 1887 to Ellen Louise Damarin, second daughter of Louis C. Damarin and Mary Ann Peck, his wife. They have four children, Louise Pauline, Mary, James H., and Dorothy.

Mr. Varner was a democrat until 1896 when he became a republican on the money issue. He is a Mason, a member of the Elks, of the Business Men's Club of Cincinnati, of the Avondale Athletic Club and of the Cuvier Club. Mr. Varner is known among his contemporaries and associates as a gentleman of the highest character. His word is always kept with the utmost scrupulousness. In all matters of social life and business he is noted for a broad spirit of liberality.

James Sanford Vaughters

was born in Nile township, near Friendship, July 19, 1852. He is the son of Thomas G. Vaughters and Ara B. (Jennings) Vaughters. His father has a sketch herein. His mother was a daughter of Enos Jennings, who emigrated from Juniata county, Pennsylvania to Muskingum county, Ohio, where she was born April 12, 1832. The Jennings family later moved to near Hamden, Vinton county, Ohio, where at the age of nineteen, she was united in marriage with Thomas G. Vaughters, by the late Hon. H. S. Bundy, who at that time was a local Methodist preacher.

Our subject was very mischievous when a boy and that trait persists in exhibiting itself to this day. In attending the common schools, he was always considered a very apt pupil. He had an especial fondness for geography, spelling and history, mathematics being as dry as chaff to him. He taught the Friendship school four years and was successful in its management. After completing the common schools, he attended the National Normal at Lebanon, Ohio, the Central Ohio Normal at Worthington, Ohio, and at Oberlin, Ohio. Our subject was too young to be in the Civil war, but had three uncles: Ervin, Oren and Sanford Jennings, who were in the service and consequently he has a warm feeling for the old soldiers. He was Assessor of Washington township for two years. This is the only office he ever held, with the exception of being Postmaster at Dennis, Ohio, since September 15, 1893.

He is a republican but an ardent supporter of the "free-silver" theory. He is very independent in his political course and votes for the man rather than the party label. Though not a rich man, he owns a good farm, unincumbered, all under-drained, very productive, and with good improvements. He is a good financier in a small way. He is always liberal and willing to help those in need of help, and has always felt a pleasure in doing so. Mr. Vaughters was Editor of the Piketon (Ohio) Courier in 1879 and 1880. He says he did not accumulate two cents during that time, but had two million dollars worth of fun. He has been correspondent for several city papers before and since. He owns a general store at Dennis, Ohio, and has been conducting it since 1892.

Thomas G. Vaughters, M. D., was born in Caroline county, Virginia, in 1823. His father was of English descent but a native of Virginia. His mother Catherine Mason was of Scotch descent, but a native of Philadelphia. His father died when he was quite young and his mother, three brothers and a sister came to Ohio in 1830. They located in Jackson county. From 1834 until 1838 he attended the country schools walking three miles to the school house. He burned pine knots to study by at night. He got beyond his teacher and walked eight miles to another school. In 1842, he obtained a teacher's certificate and taught three months in Ohio and Kentucky and then began the study of Anatomy and Physiology. In the fall of 1842, he began the study of medicine with Dr. D. H. Mitchell of Jackson, Ohio. He studied there for three years and then went into the office of Dr. J. M. Keenan in Hamden and read, studied and practiced until 1850. He visited one of his brothers in Scioto county and met Dr. J. W. Dennis, who persuaded him to locate at Friendship, Ohio. In 1851 and 1852 he took a full course of lectures at Louisville, Kentucky. In March, 1872, he obtained the degree of M.

D. from the Ohio Medical College. He was President of the Scioto County Medical Society for two years and after the Hempstead Academy of Medicine was organized became one of the Trustees and was its first vice president. He was also a member of the Ohio State Medical Society and held a diploma from it.

He was married May 25, 1851 to Miss Ara B. Jennings, daughter of Enos Jennings of Vinton county. She was a sister of the late Sanford Bundy Jennings. Six children were born to them: James S., Enos J., married Anna Reinhardt, resides at Dennis, Ohio; John E., Alice H., Flora M., married T. J. Lauter, and Loulie K. the wife of W. L. Baker of Dennis, Ohio. John E. is deceased. Alice H. is married and lives in Wisconsin.

When Doctor Vaughters was about to die he made all arrangements for his funeral and selected his pall bearers. He was the true type of the humanitarian. He wore himself out in the service of others. The editor of this work often said to him, that he deserved one of the highest seats in heaven. The Doctor was a practical Christian. He believed in good works and performed them himself. He took the part of the good Samaritan every day of his life and acted it out to perfection.

Charles Wesley Veach

was born July 31, 1834, in Nile township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was William Veach, and his mother was Ruth (Burris) Veach. He received his education in the log houses of Washington and Nile townships. On April 2, 1861 he enlisted in Company D 22 O. V. I. for three months and was mustered out with the Company, August 19, 1861. On October 18, 1861, he was appointed Second Lieutenant and recruited forty men for the service and was assigned to Company D, 56 O. V. I. He was commissioned First Lieutenant February 5, 1862 to rank from November 11, 1861, and was discharged by order of the War Department June 2, 1862 and re-commissioned April 9, 1863 to rank from February 9, 1863. He resigned September 10, 1864.

He resided in Nile township until 1865 in which year he moved to Vinton county, Ohio and lived there until 1867. Receiving an offer of employment from the Quincy Bridge Company, he located in Quincy, Illinois, leaving there in 1869 for Grundy county, Missouri where he farmed until 1881 when he returned to Scioto county. Here his family suffered severely from the high waters of 1884 and he decided, in 1886, to go to Kingston, Ross county, where he has resided ever since.

He was married to Mary Ellen, daughter of George W. McKinney of Nile township, on the 28th of June 1863. The day following his marriage he returned to the army. He has six children living: Ruth, wife of Henry Snook, Mary E., Charles Walter, Maggie A., Nellie J., and Maude F. His son William W. was killed at the age of nineteen, by the explosion of a flour mill boiler at Kingston, Ohio.

He is a republican in his political views and has been a member of the Methodist church for twenty-five years. Mr. Veach is a citizen of the highest character and possesses the confidence of all who know him. He is of the strictest integrity and lives up to the golden rule every day. He is a credit to the community in which he dwells and would be a credit to any community. He takes life easy and is simply waiting the final roll call, when he will answer, "ready."

A. King Veazey

was born in Greenup county, Kentucky, November 13, 1857, the son of Joseph W. Veazey and Elizabeth Campbell, his wife. His father was a Mexican soldier and at the opening of the Civil war he was drill master for a long time at Ironton, Ohio. Our subject had two brothers in the Civil war, B. I. and W. W. Veazey. In 1858 his father removed with his family to near Ironton, Ohio. His boyhood and youth were spent at that place where he attended the schools at South Point, Ohio. He taught school in Lawrence county for four years and was a township Clerk for two years from 1890 to 1892. He has always been a republican.

He was married December 21, 1880 to Dollie H. Kennedy, daughter of John and Catherine O. Kennedy of Wheelersburg, Ohio. They had two chiltime. All of his life, but six years, he has been in the city of Portsmouth.

He was married first to Miss Kate Wetherbee, of Minnesota. There is one daughter of this marriage, Bertha. Mrs. Wait died February 28, 1878. He was married the second time to Miss Sallie J. Dillon, daughter of Rev. J. W. Dillon, February 23, 1882. Their children are: Helen M., Catharine D., and Gilbert D. He is a member of the Bigelow M. E. church, and is a republican in his political views.

Clarence Dayton Walden was born at Harrison Mills about three miles southeast of Harrisonville, Ohio, December 30, 1870. His father Charles Walden enlisted as a private in Company A, 39th O. V. I., July 16, 1861 and was discharged July 9, 1865. His grandfather, Richard Walden, was in Captain Hamilton's Company, Company D, 1st O. V. I. in the Mexican War. He enlisted June 1, 1846 at the age of 32 and was discharged June 14, 1847. His mother's maiden name was Harriet Ellen Colegrove, daughter of Peleg Colegrove. His boyhood and youth were spent on the farm where he attended the district school in winter. His father removed to Portsmouth where he had a general store. He remained two years and in 1884 removed to Sciotoville where our subject completed his education in the Sciotoville schools. He spent three and a half years as teacher in the grammar school and five and a half years as teacher in the High School of Sciotoville. He began teaching in 1891 and is at present teaching in the High School at Lucasville. He was appointed County School Examiner in September, 1899. He is a republican and a member of the Wheelersburg Masonic Lodge and also a member of the Sciotoville Knights of Pythias Lodge.

He was married February 27, 1892, to Sarah Purdy, daughter of Jesse Purdy of Sciotoville. They have one daughter, Helen Elnora.

Mr. Walden is a self-made man and has reason to be proud of what he has accomplished. He possesses all of the cardinal virtues and illustrates and honors them in life. He is a diligent and faithful student and a proficient scholar for his years. He has attained the highest success as a teacher. He holds a State High School Life Certificate.

William Seymour Walker

was born in Buffalo, New York, March 18, 1861. His father was David Walker, and his mother was Sarah E. Tyler. They had two children, our subject and a daughter. William attended school in Buffalo between six and eight years, and at the latter age, his father, who was a contractor on public works, moved to Chicago, Illinois. The family remained there until after the great fire in 1871 when they moved to Milwaukee. There William went to school till 1878 when he spent one year in preparing for Brown University at Providence, Rhode Island, but instead of going, went into business. From 1879 to 1887, he was an assistant book-keeper in a hardware house, at Milwaukee.

In 1881 he began to travel for an ink company and among other places visited Portsmouth, Ohio. He was pleased with the place and in 1887, he located there and went into the employment of the Veneer Works then opened by Goldsmith & Rapp. He has remained in Portsmouth and has been connected with that business ever since. He is now the secretary, treasurer, and general manager and has been such since 1900.

He was married August 14, 1889, to Miss Effie Petrie, daughter of James Petrie, a Scotchman, who is now the postmaster at Jasper, Ohio. She is a great-granddaughter of Major Joseph Ashton, a soldier of the Revolution, who has a sketch herein. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have two sons, Paul and Harold Holcomb. Mr. Walker is a Mason and a Modern Woodman. He has already placed himself in the front rank of Portsmouth's business men. He has deserved success and has obtained it. He possesses all of those qualities which are admired and prized by those who value success. He has accomplished much in his chosen business career and bids fair to make a record as one of the most valued men of the city.

Charles Clement Waller

was born February 24, 1869, at Lancaster, Ohio. His father was Henry Woodrow Waller, a native of Guernsey county, Ohio, near Cambridge. His mother was Minerva M. Graybill. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the public schools of Lancaster and afterwards learned the stone business in a quarry operated by his father near Lancaster. With his brothers he came to Rarden in 1895 and became a stockholder in the Rarden Stone Company, organized and incorporated at that time. Since that time he has superintended and managed the operation of its quarry. He is a democrat, but votes for the man as often as for the party. He is a member of the English Lutheran Church at Lancaster, Ohio. He was married October 12, 1893, to Gertrude Schweikert, daughter of Henry C. and Catherine Burke Schweikert of Lancaster, Ohio. Their children are Ora Concorda, age eight, and Gladys Catherine, age five.

FRANCIS MARION WALLER.

Clark William Waller

son of Henry Woodrow Waller and Minerva M. (Graybill) Waller, was born at Lancaster, Fairfield county, Ohio, January 25, 1875. His father was raised near Cambridge, Guernsey county, Ohio. His mother was a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Pence) Graybill. His father enlisted in Company F, 9th O. V. C., August 27, 1863, for three years, and was mustered out with the company July 20, 1865.

Our subject was raised on a farm adjoining Lancaster, attended the public schools and was afterwards employed at a stone quarry operated by his father near Lancaster. He came to Rarden June 15, 1895, and became engaged in the stone business with his brothers Frank M. and Charles C., L. Taylor and others under the name of the Rarden Stone Company, Incorporated. He is a stockholder in the company and is a foreman in the quarry. He is a Democrat and a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, Tribe No. 159, and also of the Knights of Pythias, Lodge No. 203, at Peebles, Ohio. He was elected a member of the Rarden council in 1892. He was married October 1, 1896, to Iva Wamsley, daughter of Harvey and Sarah Wamsley, of Rarden. His children are Mildred and Paul.

Francis Marion Waller

was born September, 5, 1872, at Lancaster, Ohio. His father was Henry Woodward Waller and his mother's name was Minerva M. Graybill. His parents had three sons and one daughter. He received his education in the common schools at Lancaster until nineteen years of age, then he attended Zanesville Business College, at Zanesville, Ohio. He left there in April, 1893, and returned to Lancaster and engaged in work at his father's stone quarry with his other brothers. He remained here until June, 1895. They were handling sandstone for masonry work. They then concluded to change their business to Rarden, Ohio, and have been engaged there ever since. An advertisement of Scioto County stone in a stone journal had called their attention to this locality, and Charles C. came to Rarden to investigate the situation, and the result was that all three located there.

Our subject was married December 28, 1897, to Noline Abbott. She died August 14, 1898. Mr. Waller attends to all the shipping of the Rarden Stone Company, and is secretary of the company. He is a member of the Red Men and Knights of Pythias. He is a republican in his political views, and a member of the English Lutheran church, of Lancaster, Ohio.

George Walsh

was born September 12, 1876, in Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Edmond Walsh, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret O'Brien. They were from county Clare, Ireland, and came to the United States in 1848. Their children were: James R., Bridget, married Wm. Guthrie, deceased; John C., clerk in his brother's store; George, our subject; and Edward K. Our subject attended school at McCulloch, and at the age of twenty-two went west to Menominee, Michigan. After remaining at Menominee furnace, for two years in the Northern Peninsula, he came back to Scioto county, and later went to Pullman, Illinois, and was a brickmaker for six months. Then he went to Indiana and railroaded six months. In 1884 he was a turnpike contractor of Ross county with James R. and John C. Walsh.

He was married May 12, 1886 to Miss Mary Finn, daughter of John Finn. They have the following children living and deceased: Edmond James, Maggie, Annie, Marie, deceased at two years, two months, and Helen. He began the liquor business at Otway February 1, 1886, and has been in it ever since. He is a member of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church at McCulloch. He is a democrat in his political views. Mr. Walsh is a farmer and owns the Albert Dear farm and the Joseph Kelly and the Banks farms in the horse shoe bend in Brush Creek. Mr. Walsh devotes almost all of his attention to farming. He is regarded by his neighbors as an upright and honorable man, who will stand up to every agreement or pledge he makes, and is well liked by those who know him best. He is liberal in all public matters and regarded as a good citizen and a valuable factor in the community.

William Henry Ware

was born in Piketon, Ohio, Feb. 10, 1830. His father, Daniel Ware, was a native of Virginia, and his mother's maiden name was Maria Dunham. Our subject was one of a family of eight children, five sons and three daughters. He attended the public school in Piketon, and at the age of eighteen, he clerked in the store of Ross, Dunham & Co., at Piketon. On Oct. 20, 1852, he came to Portsmouth, on the old stage line conducted by Hawks of Circleville. At that time the stage left at five or six in the evening and arrived in Portsmouth about 10 P. M. On the next day after his arrival he went to work for R. Bell & Co., as a salesman. He remained an employee until February, 1856, when he became a partner in the business. He remained as a partner until 1875, when the firm closed out. Our subject has not been in any regular business since.

He was married on October 12, 1853, to Martha Ann Lancaster of Piketon, O. His children are: Mrs. Anna, wife of John E. Mick of Chillicothe, O.; Ida, wife of Frank H. Davis, of Portsmouth; William H., traveling salesman for the Excelsior Shoe Company of Portsmouth; Lucy, unmarried; Harry L., a salesman for the Excelsior Shoe Company; Francis J., died at the age of two years. He has always been a republican. Since 1875, he has lived a retired life, taking the world easy.

Charles Morton Very Warrenner

was born in London, England, March 16, 1850. His father was John Metham Warrenner, a contractor. His mother's maiden name was Martha Very, daughter of Judge Very. There were five sons and two daughters in the family. Our subject was the third child and the second son. He was brought up in London, England, until he was twenty-two years of age. He attended school in London and received a thorough academical education. He studied veterinary surgery at a school in Westborne, London, England, for four years and graduated in 1871. The same year he came to the United States and located on a farm in Athens county, with an uncle, and remained there five years. He then went to Chester Hill, Morgan county, Ohio, and became a stock dealer, and was in that business until 1890 when he went to Gallipolis and took up veterinary surgery. In 1898, he came to Portsmouth and has been here ever since. He has a hospital at 21 west Eighth street. He was married in 1873 to Phareby Adeline Beasley, daughter of Isaac Beasley, of Athens county. He has three children: his son Arthur B. is a Veterinary Surgeon, in partnership with his father; his daughter Jennie married Otto Lasley of Marietta, O., and his daughter Martha married W. K. Merriman of Gallipolis. His wife died November 12, 1902. He is a republican, a Knight of Pythias, and a member of Aurora Lodge F. & A. M.

Beverly Green Warwick

was born December 25, 1805 in Nelson county, Virginia. He was the son of Nelson Reed Warwick who was born April 6, 1784 in Nelson county, Virginia. He moved from Virginia in 1838 to Chillicothe, Ohio, where he died of flux October 5, 1843. He united with the M. E. church when 19 years old at Nelson C. H., Virginia. He had a good common school education, was a great reader and a good public speaker. He taught school at Bethel church, Nelson county, Virginia, in 1826. In 1827, he came to Augusta county, Virginia and taught school three years near Waynesboro, Virginia, and began the study of medicine with Doctor Abraham Wayland. On September 19, 1833 he was married to Mary Fisher, daughter of Anthony Fisher of Churchville, Virginia. He then moved to Staunton, Virginia, where he taught school four years and continued to study medicine under Doctor T. Reynolds. In 1837, he attended medical lectures at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati, Ohio.

In 1838, he began the practice of medicine at Deerfield, Augusta county, Virginia. In 1839, he moved to Middlebrook, Virginia, and continued the practice of medicine until 1856 when he left Middlebrook and moved with his family to Cincinnati, Ohio. He then attended the Miami Medical College and graduated in March, 1857. In the winter of 1857-8 he attended lectures at the Ohio Medical College and received a diploma from the Ohio College.

In 1850, he was licensed to preach as a local preacher in the Methodist church. In 1857, he was ordained Deacon by Bishop Morris. April 1, 1858, he left Cincinnati and moved to Portsmouth, Ohio. In 1859, he moved to Lucasville, where he practiced medicine for five years. Having poor health he gave up practice and engaged in the drug business and kept a general store. He died June 14, 1880, at Lucasville, Ohio, aged 74 years, 5 months and 14 days. His widow survived him many years and died February 1, 1902, aged 91 years, 11 months and 15 days. His children were: Mrs. Annie Anderson, Maggie Thomas and Dr. John B. Warwick of Lucasville, Ohio. Three sons, Newton, Frank and James are dead. Doctor Beverly Green Warwick was a just man, a good Christian and a model citizen.

John Beverly Warwick, M. D.,

was born at Staunton, Augusta county, Va., July 5, 1834. His father's name was Beverly Green Warwick, and his mother's maiden name was Mary Fisher. He remained in Staunton, Va., until he was two years old, and then moved to Deerfield, Augusta county, Va., where he remained two years, and then moved to Middlebrook, Va. His father was a physician. He attended school in Virginia, until he was twenty years old. He then taught school in Virginia for two years. He left Virginia in 1856, and went to Cincinnati, where he studied medicine. He graduated from the Medical College of Ohio in 1858. He then came to Portsmouth in 1858 and practiced medicine here until 1859, when he located in Lucasville, and has been there ever since.

He entered the 91st O. V. I. as Assistant Surgeon August 19, 1862, for three years. He was promoted to Surgeon, May 23, 1863, and was mustered out with the regiment June 24, 1865. He was appointed Pension Examining Surgeon under Harrison's administration, and served from 1889 to 1893, and was re-appointed in 1897. He was married February 14, 1860, to Sarah Belknap Moulton, daughter of Norman Moulton. They have the following children: Mollie E., wife of Judge John C. Milner; Maggie A., wife of John A. Long, residing at Streator, Ill.; Charles A., a physician at Lucasville, in partnership with his father; Norman Beverly, residing at Denver, Col.; Miss Lou, and Frank, a dentist in Columbus. Mr. Warwick is a Royal Arch Mason.

For forty-three years the Doctor has practiced medicine in Lucasville and vicinity and the wonder is that he is not broken down. There was never a night so dark, a road so long, a rain so hard, or a north wind with sleet and snow so fierce, but what on the call of a patient he would turn out, for the humblest as well as the most influential. He is of a cheery, hopeful disposition and has a hearty handshake which is as good as an electric treatment. He is always, apparently, in a pleasant humor. He is of a sympathetic nature, and encourages his patients to hope for the best. In all the circle of his acquaintances he has bound the hearts of all who know him and have met him to himself, as if by bands of steel. The Doctor could pose as a good patriot, if he could pose at all, for he is one of the right stamp. His love of country carried him into the army and gave it three of the best years of his life. He is prominent in Grand Army circles, and there is never too much he can do for an old comrade. The men of his own regiment, the 91st O. V. I. look to him as children to a father, and the happiest moments of his life are those spent in reunions and the camp-fires of his old comrades in arms. As a citizen, he never shirks from his duties or responsibilities. His influence is always for the best interest of those about him whether in religion, politics or learning. He has the courage of his convictions. In politics, he is a stalwart republican.

Newton Reed Warwick

was born in Augusta county, Virginia, May 29, 1845, and died in Cincinnati, Ohio, February 10, 1898, being 52 years, 8 months and 13 days old. The cause of his death was some form of brain trouble, which had resulted in paralysis. His father was Dr. Beverly Green Warwick and his mother was Mary (Fisher) Warwick. In 1853, on account of his decided views upon slavery, Doctor Warwick moved with his family from the old Virginia home, to Ohio, settling first at Cincinnati, and then in a year or two afterwards, moving to Lucasville, Scioto county. There Newton lived when the war began, and there he volunteered as a private in the 91st O. V. I., and was mustered into the service with the regiment September 7, 1862. In October following he was appointed Commissary Sergeant of the regiment, which position he held until July 6, 1864, when he was promoted to Second Lieutenant and so continued in faithful service till the close of the war, June 25, 1865, participating in all the arduous duties and struggles of his regiment.

He was married to Adelaide Brown, a native of Kentucky, at Lucasville, Ohio, March 22, 1866. Of this happy union there were six children. Two died in infancy. Mary, a teacher in the Cincinnati public schools, died in 1901, aged 34; Beverly G., died in 1894, aged 24, while living in Chicago as Passenger Agent for the Missouri Pacific Railroad; Walter W. and Frank B. are now (1903) living in Cincinnati, practicing law. The widow of our subject also lives in Cincinnati. When the war was over he went into the mercantile business at Lucasville, where he was postmaster from 1865 to 1869. In 1869 he removed to Portsmouth and in 1871 to Council Grove, Kansas, where he carried on a general store until 1874, when he sold out and returned to Ohio, settling in Cincinnati, and accepting the agency of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad.

About 1878 he became agent of the Iron Mountain Route, and represented that line and the Missouri Pacific for twenty years till his death. In this capacity he was well known and most cordially esteemed. He was elected President of the International Association of Traveling Passenger Agents at Minneapolis, Minnesota, in 1886. He never held any public office except that of postmaster at Lucasville. He was a member of the Ohio Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion; of the Grand Army of the Republic; of the Masonic Lodge and Chapter; also a member of the Knights of Pythias; and of the Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, and of the Elks.

He was a fine railroad man, and conducted his business in such a genial, intelligent, straight-forward manner as to make his service highly efficient. He possessed such a cheerful disposition that his presence was a glow of sunshine, and he carried with him such a hearty good will that it was a joy to meet him. Lieutenant Warwick was a popular soldier. He was highly regarded by every member of his regiment. He was a boyish and handsome fellow, but exhibited at all times strong manly traits of character. Uncomplaining and faithful he was always honored by conscientious performance of whatever duty was imposed upon him. His life was honorable. He was one of the most zealous Grand Army and Loyal Legion men. He loved the memories of the war. He was a familiar figure at camp fires and re-unions. Patriotic reminiscences were delightful to his heart. His life was full of sunshine, of gentle words and kindly deeds.

George Henderson Watkins

was born October 17, 1858, at Picketon, Ohio. His father was John H. Watkins, and his mother's maiden name was Sophia Murphy, one of five brothers and two sisters. His father kept a ferry at Picketon, Ohio, for a long time. He was a private in the army and died in the service. He also had a brother who died in the Civil war. When our subject was six months old his parents moved to Zanesville, and resided there until he was nine years old. He attended school while at Zanesville. His father died when he was a child, his mother remarried to Benjamin Lewis, and the family moved on a farm just north of Waverly, and resided there four years. At thirteen years of age, our subject went to Bear Creek, and engaged in the mercantile business as a clerk for Lowman & Allison. He remained with Lowman on Bear Creek until he was twenty years of age, when he opened a store at Clifford, Ohio, for Mr. Lowman and remained there from 1878 until 1886. In the latter year he removed to Wakefield, and there a store was opened under the firm name of Lowman & Watkins. In 1900 he bought out Mr. Lowman, and has been carrying on the store ever since. August 1, 1901, he located his office at Columbus, in the Wyandotte Building. He is a railroad-tie contractor, purchasing ties for several of the railroads. He maintains his residence at Wakefield. He was appointed Superintendent of the Ohio Canal in February, 1898, and holds the office yet.

He was married in January, 1879 to Lilly I. Glaze, daughter of Josiah Glaze. They have three children: Frank L., a physician at Portsmouth; Lou M., a daughter at home, and Nelson M., a son at home.

He has always been a republican, and is a Blue Lodge Mason. His chief characteristics are his sturdy honesty, liberality, progressiveness and loyalty to his friends. He despises hypocrisy and deceit in every form. During a long and eminently successful business career his word has always been regarded as good as his bond, and he has had the confidence and respect of those with whom his business has brought him into contact. While a very earnest political worker, he never permits his political affiliations or prejudice to interfere in his social intercourse with his friends, who are to be found in all parties. Mr. Watkins is regarded as a public spirited citizen. He is always identified with everything that tends to advance or better the condition of his community.

Thomas William Watkins

was born in Clinton, Illinois, October 18, 1857. His father was John C. Watkins, and his mother Ellen LaForgey. His father was a native of Portsmouth. His grandfather, Thomas Watkins, was one of the first settlers in Portsmouth. Thomas left Clinton, Illinois, when a babe and came to Portsmouth. He attended the Portsmouth schools until 1874, and then began to learn the plumbing business with Jones & Burt. He went to Cincinnati and worked at his trade there until 1878. He then came back to Portsmouth, in 1878, and started in business for himself, in 1880, and has been in it ever since. He is located at the southwest corner of Third and Washington streets, and has been there for ten years. He resides at 320, Jackson street, in the Thomas W. Carrie property. He was married in 1872, in Scioto county, to Sarah Stockham, daughter of Aaron Stockham. He has six children: Lettie, Charles, Judith, Thomas A., Harold Wayne, and Sarah. He is a republican. He was at one time Superintendent of the Water Works, and is a member of the Royal Arcanum and Knights of Pythias. He understands his business thoroughly and devotes himself to it.

David Louis Webb

was born March 12, 1842, in Adams county, Ohio. His father was John Webb, and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Lewis. His grandfather, William Webb, was from Germany. His mother was born and reared in Scioto county. What schooling he received was obtained by attending school two years after he was fifteen years of age. His father moved into Scioto county, when he was fourteen years of age, and he has lived in the county ever since. He began life at sixteen years of age by peeling bark and hauling logs. At twenty-one he went to work for himself in Coan & Smith's saw-mill and has been in the lumber business ever since. He was with Coan & Smith three years, with Thomas G. Adamson nine years, eight of which he was foreman. On March 25, 1872, he went into partnership with Henry H. Cuppett in the lumbering business, under the firm name of Cuppett & Webb. This partnership continued for twenty-eight years, when Cuppett sold out to Webb, and the latter continued the business. The partnership was dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Cuppett wishing to retire to his farm on Turkey creek.

When they began business they operated on Turkey creek, and kept the lumber yard in Portsmouth. Our subject moved to Portsmouth in 1885 and started a saw-mill, keeping one on Turkey creek at the same time. The firm established a planing mill on Front street in 1894, and dispensed with the saw-mill in the city. The planing mill was destroyed by fire June 23, 1898, loss estimated at $12,000. September 2, 1898, their saw mill on Turkey creek was destroyed by fire, loss $3,000, with no insurance on either except $1,500. They leased the Portsmouth Planing Mill on Gallia and Campbell Avenue, June 30, 1898, and operated it until December 4, 1901. Mr. Webb who had succeeded Cuppett & Webb in 1900, purchased the mill outright. The firm never failed, although a number of their debtors have failed on them for large sums.

He has been a member of the Christian Church since 1868, and is now a member of the church at Third and Gay streets. He has always been a republican. He was a school director for some time in Nile township, and was elected president of the City Water Works Board in 1900.

He was married December 17, 1867 to Sophia Holt, daughter of David and Jerusha Holt of Nile township. They have five children, four sons and one daughter. His daughter is the wife of Frank Haequard. His sons are David L., John Thomas, Charles Elden and Henry Harrison. All except Charles are with him in the business. David L., is his book-keeper and John Thomas is foreman in the mill. Henry is assistant book-keeper and collector. Charles is a salesman for Ben Davis in the clothing business. Mr. Webb is an Odd Fellow of uniform rank. He is an honest man, if one ever lived. He would lose every dollar he had and go to the poor-house rather than do anything he deemed dishonest or dishonorable. He has been through fires and disasters, but like Job he has always maintained his integrity.

John Frederick Weghorst

was born at Jackson C. H., Ohio, March 23, 1851. He is a son of Frederick Louis and Dora (Caden) Weghorst. His father is a native of Prussia. His mother was a native of Schindberg, Hanover. Our subject had eight brothers and two sisters. Seven of his brothers and both of his sisters are living. His parents moved to Portland when he was two years of age and to Monroe Furnace two years afterwards. After two years residence there they moved to Boone Furnace, Ky., where they lived until 1859. From there they went to Cincinnati, and in 1862 they came to Buena Vista. At the age of twenty-one he went to work for himself as a saw-setter in the stone saw-mill at Buena Vista, and continued to work here until 1876, when he became a driver for the Buena Vista Freestone Co. and he has hauled sand and stone for the company ever since. He was married December 30, 1872, to Anna Margaret Dorn of Buena Vista. He had eleven children: Lena, the wife of William Roth of Buena Vista; William, resides in Pittsburg, Pa., foreman of the Homestead Bridge Works; Sadie, wife of Henry Roth of Buena Vista; Frederick, Hattie, Albert, Etta, Mabel, Carrie, Anna, deceased, and Rufford. He is a republican, a member of the German Presbyterian church and of the Odd Fellows.

Charles Elijah Welch

was born January 5, 1860, in Portsmouth. His father was William Welch and his mother's maiden name was Susan E. Jones. He was reared in the city of Portsmouth, and attended its school until he was thirteen years of age when the family circumstances were such that he went to work. He was engaged in Johnson & Road's hub factory for six years, and worked for the United States Express Company for two years. For eight years he was in the confectionery business with his brother, Ed Welch. In 1890, he started a retail grocery at the corner of Third and Chillicothe, and was there ten years. He then located on the southwest corner of Sixth and Washington streets for one year and for another year on East Fifth street. On January 1, 1902 he opened a retail grocery at 28 Gallia street which he is conducting.

He was married in 1890 to Minnie C. Patton and has had four children. The eldest, Letha is deceased. The surviving children are: Walter, aged eight; Bernice, aged five; and Pauline, aged two. He is a member of the Christian church, of the Knights of Pythias, and of the Royal Arcanum, and

WILLIAM H. WHEELER.

Modern Woodmen. He is one of the live, active, progressive, young business men of the city and has a business of which he is justly proud. The Phoenix arose from its ashes, but he had none to rise from. Everything he is and has is due to his own exertions.

George W. Wells

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, March 12, 1876. His father was Samuel Williams and his mother's maiden name was Martha Clare. At the age of ten years, he was adopted by Richard H. Wells and his wife of Flat, Ohio. He went to school at Flat till he was twenty years of age, and in the year 1894, he attended school, one year, at the Illinois State University at Champaign, Illinois. At the age of twenty, on May 8, 1894, he enlisted in Company G, 22 United States Infantry. He served three years. After he had been in the service three months, he was made a Corporal. In another seven months he was made Second Sergeant and directly afterwards was made First Sergeant. He was in the service two years at Fort Kehoe, Montana, and in Nebraska. He was discharged May, 1897, at Portsmouth, Ohio, while on a furlough. He then went to clerking for J. J. Brushart, and was with him eighteen months. In the year 1899, he engaged in the insurance business, and has been in that ever since. His employment is with the National Protective Society in Detroit. He is district agent for ten counties and an adjuster. His office is at Jackson, Ohio. He is a republican, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a Knight of Pythias.

Napoleon Bonaparte West

was born September 13 1846, in Highland county, Ohio. His mother's maiden name was Hannah Amanda Crawford and his father's name was Isaac Newton West. His father and mother were married in West Union, September 28, 1845. His father was born in Highland county, Ohio. His grandfather, James West, was from Virginia. His father died in Buford, Highland county, in 1852, of that "Fell Destroyer," consumption, leaving his mother with him and a sister, Josephine, born in 1848. His mother took her two children and went to the home of her mother, Mrs. Daniel Matheny, in West Union. Here she fell a victim of the same disease in 1854. James McClanahan was appointed guardian of the two children and he placed them with Thomas Reighley of North Liberty, who reared them.

Our subject enlisted in Company G, 129th O. V. I., July 14, 1863, and served in that regiment until March 8, 1864. He re-enlisted in Company H, 173rd O. V. I., August 31, 1864, and served until June 26, 1865. At the date of his first enlistment, he was of the right age to make a good soldier and did make an excellent one. He knew what was most important to a soldier—he knew how to take care of himself—and for that quality he survived the service to this day. After his return from the army, he removed to Peoria, Illinois, where he resided until 1868, when he went to Manchester and resided there until 1871.

December 31, 1870, he was united in marriage to Louisa A. Little, sister of Capt. W. W. Little, at Manchester. He removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, in March, 1871, where he has since resided. He worked for his brother-in-law, Capt. Little, until 1877, when he went into the Burgess Mill and worked there until 1886, when he went to draying and carting. In politics, he has always been a republican. He has had five children: James P. and Claude, electricians; Anna, George and William. His son Otto died in the Regular Army, a member of the Sixth Infantry.

He prides himself on his honesty and fair dealings and is highly respected by all his acquaintances. He belongs to no organization but the Grand Army. His wife died suddenly on December 7, 1888. He tries to do his part according to the best of his information and ability, and when death calls him, he will have no regrets.

William Harrison Wheeler

was born at Wheelersburg, Ohio, February 14, 1841. His father was Isaac Hastings Wheeler, grandson of Luther and great-grandson of Nathan Wheeler, the Revolutionary soldier. His mother's maiden name was Sarah Burt. His boyhood and youth were spent at Wheelersburg where he received a common school education and worked on the farm. He lived in Wheelersburg until 1861. He enlisted in Company E, 33d O. V. I., September 3, 1861, for three years and was mustered out October 17, 1864. After his return from the army, he began public contracting. He did turnpike work from 1868 until 1871. He built the turnpike from Harrisonville to Sciotoville. He was employed for ten years or more in contract work, bridge masonry in this county. For five years or more, he did contract work in Marion and Clark counties, Ohio. Until about three years before his death, he was engaged in dredging in Illinois and Iowa. After leaving Wheelersburg he lived in Harrisonville until 1873, then he removed to Bonser's Run near Sciotoville and then removed to Sciotoville.

He was married January 21, 1865 to Miss Rhoda Ann Taylor, daughter of James Taylor of Harrison township. They had four children: Nettie Urana; Ida Florence, the wife of G. Frank Friel of Ashland, Kentucky; George Franklin of America, Ohio; Lillian Caroline, wife of James H. Finney of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. Wheeler died November 17, 1896. He was a very strong republican but never held any public office. He was one of the most generous men who ever lived. He endeared himself to his friends and could not do too much for them. He was the soul of honor. His army service destroyed his health and in reality he gave his life to his country. He was as true a patriot as ever lived as much so as his great-grandfather, Nathan Wheeler, who gave seven years service to his country.

Daniel White

was born October 4, 1842, on Little Scioto, Harrison township. His father was Osborne White and his mother Maria Chamberlin, daughter of Anson Chamberlin. His grandfather, Daniel White was born in Vermont and his great-grandfather Abel White was also a native of Vermont. His grandmother was Sarah Osborne from Kentucky. He had two brothers and one sister. His brother, Anson White lives at Cambridge, Iowa, the other brother, Abraham, lives in Texas. His sister, Mrs. Sarah Cooper, the wife of Ezekiel Cooper, lives in Clay Center, Kansas. Daniel White's father owned a farm on Dogwood Ridge where James Cranston now lives.

When our subject was five years old, his father and mother died of fever, within five days of each other. His grandfather then took him to raise. When he was ten years of age he came to Portsmouth and was apprenticed to the jewelry business with H. E. Brown. When he was twelve years of age he was apprenticed to John Clugsten. At that time the craft made all kinds of jewelry and did repairing of all kinds. When he was nineteen years of age, Mr. Clugsten sold out to Abraham Coriell and Daniel White worked for him about eight months. Then he started a store of his own in Wheelersburg and kept it for two months when he took the gold fever and went to Pike's Peak with Eli McLean, William McKinney, John McKinney, Joseph Rogers, Harvey Patton and some others. He was gone eighteen months, but did not return with the gold pieces. When he was in Denver, every other lot was given away and he now wishes he had remained and made his fortune.

When he came back he went to working for Abraham Coriell and was with him for a few months. He then went into partnership with S. S. Doyle in the cooper business at Wilson's Bottom, Kentucky, below Manchester, Ohio. The war came on and the Home Guards robbed and destroyed their business. He then went to Sciotoville and started in the dry goods and grocery business and was there for four months and then went to clerking for Luther Marshall, at Powellsville for two months. Then he came to Portsmouth and started in the confectionery business. He then went into business with Elijah Noel until 1868 when he bought out Noel and conducted it alone. In 1872 he sold out the confectionery business to William E. Hancock and bought out Abraham Coriell and went into the jewelry business with Frank Coriell as Coriell & White. In 1886 he bought out Frank Coriell and since then has conducted the business alone. Since 1890 he has been conducting the business at 74 West Second street.

March 1, 1866 he was married to Eliza Noel. There was one son of that marriage, Frank, in the business with his father. Our subject's wife died in 1868 and he was married again in 1870 to Belle Wilhelm. They have one child, Abraham aged thirty-two. Daniel White is a member of Bigelow M. E. church. He is not a member of any secret orders. He is a good business man, cheerful and agreeable to all, and aims to make the best of everything of this life, as the best preparation for the life to come.

George Washington White

was born January 16, 1856, in Scioto county, on the Little Scioto. His father's name was Nelson White, and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Wilson, daughter of James Wilson. His paternal grandfather was John White. Our subject received a common school education. He has always been a farmer and a contractor. He began business for himself in 1876, as a contractor and farmer. He is a contractor on road work in this county and other counties in the State, building turnpikes and bridge work. In 1887, he went to Montana for one year and engaged in the timber business.

He was married March 9, 1876 to Sarah Neary, daughter of Mathew Neary and a sister of Green Neary, the County Commissioner. They have the following children: Franklin W., married and resides at Harrisonville, is engaged as a painter; Hattie Agnes, at home. Mr. White is a republican in his political views. He is regarded as a useful and valuable citizen. He is highly esteemed by his neighbors. He is in favor of public improvements and progress and is a gentleman whom it is always a pleasure to meet.

Horace White

was born in Meigs county, Ohio, on January 15, 1828. His father was John White, who was born June 15, 1794 and died May 8, 1874. His mother was Silva Wyman, born May 17, 1795 and died April 17, 1874. They are both buried in the White burying ground near Kendall Dever's, Madison township. His father, John White, came to Portsmouth in 1809, a single man. He was a pilot on the Ohio river on keel and flat boats. When he came to Portsmouth, his father, Abel White of New York, came with him. Abel White, the grandfather of our subject, had nineteen children by two marriages. Our subject's father, John White, was from the second marriage, as were the sons: Seth, Abel and Daniel. John White located first in Portsmouth, later at the mouth of Law-son's Run and still later in Meigs county, where our subject was born. John White returned to Scioto county and located at what is now the Wheeler's mills in 1830. He soon after moved to a farm now owned by Warren Canter. He afterwards built the Wallace mills, in 1844, and operated them for eighteen years.

His son, our subject, was the miller. Mr. White says he attended school only ninety days, beginning at the age of fourteen, which comprised the schooling he had and yet he is one of the most intelligent and highly respected citizens in the county. Horace White is about the only "forty-niner" surviving and residing in Scioto county. In the spring of 1849, he with Jefferson Dever, who now resides in Jackson county, and Randolph Lindsey started overland to California. They went to St. Louis by boat and from there they walked through. They started in April, 1849, without teams and were two months on the road. They stopped in Sacramento and went to gardening. Lindsey was so homesick that he returned to the states soon after reaching there. Mr. White worked for forty dollars a month and remained there two years when he started homewards. He came back through Lower California to New Orleans and from there up the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. He saved little or nothing. Mr. White on his return, engaged in milling at Wallace's mills.

He remained as the miller at Wallace's mills until August 7, 1862, when at the age of 34, he enlisted in Company F, 91st O. V. I. He was appointed Corporal June 13, 1865 and was mustered out with the Company June 24, 1865. On his return from the army, he began farming on the farm where he now lives, which was entered by John Dever. Since 1865, he has followed a variety of occupations and has made himself useful in all of them. He has been a farmer and contractor on public works, and if any thing else would offer, he would engage in it, as he has been industrious all his life.

He was married April 2, 1852, to Eliza Pinkerman, a daughter of Charles Pinkerman. Their children are: William H., now in Oregon; Isabel, the wife of Zachariah Dillon of Portsmouth; Lusetta, the wife of Stephen Wells of Struthers, Mahoning county, Ohio; Cornelia, the wife of Rev. David Gow, a Free-Will Baptist minister residing in Crawford county, Pennsylvania; John C. White, Shasta county, California; Ulysses G. White, Elkhorn, Montana; Leroy White lives at Helena Montana; and Lilly, wife of Charles Condon, resides at Riverside, California. The last two were twins.

Horace White and wife are members of the Free-Will Baptist church. In his political views, he is a republican. He has never held any public office except in his township. Mr. White is noted for his agreeable disposition. He sees the best side of every situation and is alway cheerful and contented.

John C. White

was born June 22, 1859, one and a half miles up Brush creek from Otway, Ohio. His father, Paul White, was born in Pennsylvania, December 17, 1817, and came to Ohio with his father, William White, at an early date and settled on Brush creek above Otway. He died March 22, 1882. Elizabeth, his wife, died on February 25, 1862, at the age of thirty-four years, six months. Our subject owns a farm of 396 acres along Brush creek, which occupies his time in its cultivation. He has a handsome family residence and comfortable surroundings. He is a democrat and strong in the faith, very seldom wavering from the straight and narrow way. He was married to Mary L. Newland, daughter of Joseph L. and Josephine (Kendall) Newland, October 21, 1886. Her grandfather was George Kendall, who died February 18, 1855, aged thirty-eight years, five months and four days. He was a son of Samuel Kendall, one of the first settlers in this locality. Their children are Nora V., John L., Bervie O., George W., Edna May, Bertha Edith.

was born June 22, 1834. His father was Daniel C. Withrow who was one of the first settlers in Eastern Pennsylvania near Mercersburg and was of Scotch-Irish lineage. His mother was Sarah Devore, daughter of John Devore, who took part in the battle of New Orleans and was among the missing when the battle was over. Nothing was ever heard of him afterwards. He came from Paris, France, about 1810.

Our subject was born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania. He attended the public schools and Madison College there. His parents took him to Iowa where he lived for five years. He went from McGregor to Montana and clerked for B. B. Harding. While in Montana, he became a Master Mason in Clayton Lodge, No. 70. In the winter of 1857-8 he was summoned to Washington in regard to the Fort Crawford Reservation. Here he saw President Buchanan for the first time. On his return trip from Washington, he stopped in Portsmouth to visit his great-uncle William Salter. While here, B. L. Jefferson of Jefferson & Kepner offered him a situation as clerk at their store on Market street, and he accepted and remained with them until April 15, 1861.

In 1860, he joined a Company of Home Guards under Captain Bailey. When Fort Sumpter was fired on, the Company offered its services to Governor Dennison and was accepted. They were mustered on April 15, 1861, being one of the first companies to respond to the call for three-months troops. Our subject received an injury at Vienna, Virginia. While the troops were being advanced on a railroad train, they were fired on by a battery and the plank on which he was sitting was struck by a cannon ball. He was appointed corporal April 29, 1861, and mustered out with the company, August 1, 1861. He afterwards served as a scout.

He was Justice of the Peace in Greenup county, Kentucky, for one year after the war. He has an interest in the zinc mines in Lewis county, Kentucky, and is field superintendent for the company which owns it. He is a straight republican and holds the Presbyterian faith, though not a member of any church. He is a member of Bailey Post, No. 164, G. A. R., and has been four times a delegate to the state encampment. He is also a member of Aurora Lodge, F. and A. M. of Portsmouth.

He was married to Katharine Bryson, December 25, 1861. He commenced to farm and has followed that occupation all his life. He has seven children, as follows: Elizabeth married William Hillard; Jennie Bell, married Albert Mid-daugh, of Greenup county, Kentucky; Ruby, married Morton Warnock, of the same county; William B.; Lavinia Dugan and Daniel C., are all unmarried and at home. Another, Fannie, is deceased.

Francis Hall Williams, M. D.,

was born at Burlington, Lawrence county, Ohio, February 9, 1859. His father was Isajah H. Williams, and his mother's maiden name was Emily Lefever. He attended the public schools and a private school. In 1880, he began the study of medicine under Dr. C. Hall, of Burlington, Ohio, and attended lectures at the Miami Medical College, at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he graduated March 1, 1883, taking the highest honors of his class. He engaged in the practice of medicine at Burlington, Ohio, and resided there until November, 1896, when he removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, and after a period spent in post-graduate study, he began the practice of medicine in Portsmouth.

He was married September 1, 1886 to Miss Sallie J. Anderson, second daughter of G. W. and Anna H. Anderson, of Portsmouth. They had one child, Donald A., who was born September 17, 1887. Mrs. Williams died October 13, 1901, and the son, Donald died just two weeks later, October 27, 1901. Dr. Williams is regarded among his professional brethren and by the public as one of the ablest physicians in the city.

[This sketch should have appeared under the title of Physicians in Part II, City of Portsmouth, but was received too late and therefore is printed here.]

George Sidney Williams

was born at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1821. Robert Hazelton Williams, his father, was for a time connected with an iron furnace in the Monongahela valley. Coming to Pittsburg, he engaged in business as a grocer and continued in this employment for the rest of his life. The mother of George S., whose maiden name was McDonald, was of Scotch Irish descent, and was known to her contemporaries as a woman of unusual independence and strength of character. George S. Williams had what would be considered quite limited educational advantages, but possessing an accurate memory and a taste for good reading, he was widely informed on business and political topics, and well read in the current literature of his time. When quite young he went into business for himself as a grocer on Smithfield street, Pittsburg. He was burned out in the great fire of Pittsburg in April, 1845, and not having the means to establish himself in business again, he went as clerk to the Caroline furnace in Kentucky, then owned by an older brother, William H. Williams, who was manager at the furnace.

Here Mr. Williams began the training in what was, from that time, the business of his life, the making of charcoal pig-iron. While at this furnace in 1847, Mr. Williams was married to Margaret Crosby Leonard, daughter of Patrick and Laura Crosby Leonard of Pittsburg. Shortly after his marriage, he removed to Kensington Furnace, Pennsylvania, from there to Greenup Furnace, Kentucky, and at the instance of Mr. Allaniah Cole, who was interested in both Greenup and Bloom furnaces, Mr. Williams in 1854, came as manager to Bloom Furnace, Scioto county. In 1857, he came to Scioto Furnace which was his home, with the exception of one year, until his death. In 1860, owing to the depression in the iron business, the Scioto furnace went out of blast, and the year 1861 Mr. Williams spent at Bloom settling up his business there. He then returned to Scioto, the furnace going into blast and continuing in operation during the twenty years which he spent there as manager and member of the firm, long known as L. C. Robinson & Company.

He had the following children: George C., deceased; Blanche, a teacher; Laura at home; Alice married John B. Gray, lives in Wheelersburg; Robert H., at Wellston, unmarried, engineer at the McFarland Coal Co.; Henry, died in 1879, at the age of twenty-seven; Paul Sidney, is book-keeper at the Buckeye Fire Brick Co.

Our subject was always a republican. On April 30, 1881, Mr. Williams died at the home at Scioto Furnace, in which he had spent nearly twenty-five years of his life. His wife died January 7, 1889. Both are buried at Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. Williams was a man of strong convictions, holding decided opinions on all subjects, yet he was very liberal toward all holding differing views. He was exceptionally thoughtful of the welfare and considerate of the rights of others, not only those in his own family, but of those in his employ. Every movement, educational, moral and social, which was for the good of the little furnace community, was of interest to him and had his warm support. He was esteemed and respected as an honorable man and good citizen by all who knew him.

John Edward Williams

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, June 9, 1863, the son of Evan D. Williams and Catharine Edwards, his wife, both of whom were born in Wales. He was one of three brothers. His mother was a daughter of Rev. John Edwards, a Welsh minister. John attended the Portsmouth schools until he was fifteen years of age when he went to work for the late William S. Pattin. He was in his employment until 1882. Then he went into the Drew, Selby Shoe Company, as a laster, and was with them until 1888, when his real life work began. He started the Excelsior Shoe Company, a partnership of twenty-five shoe workers, and he was the head and manager. They started business on the third floor of the building, northwest corner Second and Chillicothe streets, doing all work by hand, making nothing but baby shoes and selling their output of forty pairs per day to the local trade. This arrangement lasted a year, when John Williams bought the others out, being convinced that a successful business could be conducted on a larger scale.

In the spring of 1889, he organized and incorporated The Excelsior Shoe Company taking his two brothers, Grant and Charles in with him. The original capital of $10,000, was paid in during the first year, and the factory was moved to the Stenshorn building on Front street. John E. Williams was made president and has been at the head of the concern ever since. In fact from this year, 1889, the history of Mr. Williams has been that of the Excelsior Shoe Company and vice versa. When that Company started in 1889, it was in a rented building with twenty-five employees and made 150 pairs of youth's shoes per day. In 1892, the Company moved to the old Planing Mill, on the corner of Third and Gay streets, and was there until 1897 when it went into the new building on Gallia, John and Findlay streets, where it has a building built expressly for it, fifty feet wide, two hundred and fifty feet long and five stories high. (See page 608.) Mr. Williams is and has been from the start general manager, and he is the Deus Ex Machina of the concern. For thirteen years, he has devoted himself exclusively to this business and has made a phenomenal success of it.

Mr. Williams was married in May, 1890 to Miss Sarah M. Davies, of Ironton, Ohio, a daughter of James J. Davies. He has had six sons, five of whom are living; Evan Charles, James Davies, John Kilsworth, David Charles and Thomas Edward. In the spring of 1901, Mr. Williams bought the Gaylord place, which he has remodeled into one of the finest houses in the city. He has been an active member of the Second Presbyterian church for twenty-five years. He is a member of the Republican party.

John McDowell Williams

was born February 6, 1847, at Martin's Ferry, Ohio. His father was Samuel A. Williams, and his mother's maiden name was Sidney A. Huston, sister of Capt. Samuel J. Huston. His parents had six children, and he was the fifth child. He received his education in the common schools of Scioto county. His father was a knobbler in the Gaylord Rolling Mill. Our subject learned the carpenter's trade and followed it until six years ago.

He enlisted in the 189th O. V. I., at the age of eighteen as a private, February 18, 1865, for one year, and was mustered out with the Company, September 28, 1865. His father Samuel A. Williams, was in the 73rd O. V. I., Company B. He enlisted as a private, at the age of forty-four, October 19, 1861, for three years, and was discharged November 28, 1862, at Alexandria, Va., on surgeon's certificate of disability. His brother Brooks Williams enlisted in the same company and regiment, at the age of eighteen as a private, November 1, 1861, for three years, and was discharged August 6, 1862 at Clarysville, Md., on surgeon's certificate of disability. His brother Wm. H. Williams, enlisted in the 39th O. V. I., Company A, as a Sergeant, at the age of nineteen, July 16, 1861, for three years. He was appointed Corporal, December 27, 1863; wounded July 22, 1864, in the battle of Atlanta, Ga., appointed Sergeant, June 1, 1865; mustered out July 9, 1865, by order of War Department.

Our subject was married in 1872 to Miss Alice D. Barber, daughter of Uriah and Rachel Barber, and granddaughter of John Barber. They had the following children: Kate S., married W. E. Wood, resides in St. Louis, Mo., and is a railroad fireman; Samuel A., shoemaker in Portsmouth, and a member of Company E, 4th O. V. I., (formerly Co. H. 14th O. N. G.) during the Spanish War; John P., was killed at Geneseo, Ill., in his eighteenth year; Alice D., and Royal A., at home.

John Williams was Councilman from the Sixth ward for two years. He was Chief of the Fire Department for four years, from 1888 to 1892. He was elected Water Works Trustee in 1894, and served three years. He was appointed Deputy State Inspector of Work Shops and Public Buildings May 15, 1896 and held the office until June 15, 1902. He is a republican, and a member of the Second Presbyterian church. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias, and the Masonic Lodge of Portsmouth.

Mr. Williams is a man with whom to become acquainted is to become his friend. He possesses so many excellent qualities of mind and heart, that to know him is to admire him. If he has any fault, it is his modesty. He is not sufficiently self assertive, in his own behalf. When it comes to acting or doing for a friend, he is as bold as a lion. He might be said to belong to his friends more than to himself. He has a high position in the community in the estimation of all who know him. In every relation of life and to society, he conscientiously tries to do his duty and this excellent trait commands admiration. The combination of all excellent qualities makes him a model American citizen.

Captain William Benjamin Williams was born December 20, 1827, in Glamorganshire, Wales. His father was Benjamin Williams and his mother's maiden name was Ann Edwards. He was the eldest of his father's seven children. His parents left Wales and came to the United States when he was twelve years of age. He came in the sailing vessel "Marquis of Bute." They settled in Brady's Bend, Pennsylvania and our subject worked there in the coal-banks for two years and also worked in the rolling-mills of that place. He came to Portsmouth in 1844 and went into the Gaylord rolling mill and was there one year. He then went to Cincinnati and worked in Barrett's mill, near Brighton, and took a furnace there and remained for three years, when he went to Hillman, Tennessee and was there for six months. He returned to Cincinnati and remained there until 1849, then came back to Portsmouth and went to work in charge of a furnace at Gaylord's mill.

He remained in Portsmouth until in 1852, when he was smitten with the gold fever and started for California on April 1, of that year, in a party composed of Stout Barklow, John Sturgeon, David Price, Thomas Williams, Andrew Robinson, William Sidney, Thomas Richardson, William Delaney and Thomas McAuley. They were joined by Captain John Clark, father of Mrs. P. C. Kinney, Leonard Alexander, Giles Thornton, William Morton, Thomas Thompson, and Frank Johnson. They had wagons made in Portsmouth and shipped them to St. Joe, Missouri. They were five months on the way. They worked at the placer mines near Pell River, California. Our subject staid nearly a year and came back by the Panama route. He brought some money home with him.

He went into the mill again in 1853, but in six months was again struck with the gold fever, and went to California, this time by the Panama route and stayed one year. In 1855, he came back to Portsmouth and went into the mill again and worked there until the war broke out. In 1860, he organized a company of militia. On August 7, 1861 he enlisted in Company C, 56th O. V. I. and was made Captain. He was with his company during its entire service until November 14, 1864. He was wounded at the battle of Champion Hill, May 18, 1864. He was shot in the right leg with a minie-ball and the bone was shattered which has lamed him ever since. He reached home December 7, 1864, and went to work in the mill.

Captain Williams had been a whig from 1840, when he cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison, until the Know-Nothing craze came up and has been a Democrat ever since. In 1866, he was a candidate on the Democratic ticket for City Marshal against Calvin J. Stevens. He received 689 votes to 417 for Stevens, majority 72. In 1867, he was again a candidate for the same office against Valentine Burkel. The vote stood Williams 768, Burkel 632, majority 136. In 1868, he was again a candidate and received 815 votes to 635 for Calvin J. Stevens, majority 180. In 1869, he was again a candidate and the vote stood Williams 890, Silas J. Losee 664, majority 226. In 1871, he was again a candidate against William Martin. This year he was defeated and received 818 votes to 938 for Martin. In 1873, he was again a candidate against William Martin and this time defeated him. The vote being 973 for Williams and 918 for Martin, majority 55. This was the least majority Captain Williams ever received. In 1875, he ran for the same office with the same opponent. The vote stood 1,164 for Williams and 998 for Martin, majority 106. In 1877, he ran for the same office and was opposed by John Henneke. He received 1,082 votes to 640 for Henneke, majority 135. In 1879, he was again a candidate for the same office against William Keer. The vote stood Williams 1,102, Keer 1,009, majority 93. In 1881, he made his last race for Marshal. He received 1,165 votes to 1,032 for his opponent, Lee T. Beatty, making a majority of 138.

It will be seen that the republicans tried the Germans, Irish and Americans each one against him, but he was elected every time but once. He was never defeated in the Third ward at any time he was a candidate. He was Deputy United States Marshal from 1884 to 1888. He was Government store-keeper under James W. Newman collector, from 1884 to 1888. He was also store-keeper under McMillen collector, from 1892 to 1896. As a politician, Captain Williams has been very successful. He is in comfortable circumstances, has retired from all work and is trying to live an easy and quiet life. He has an army record of which he may well be proud, and he is respected by all who know him. During the time of the first paving in Portsmouth, he was a member of the Council for four years from the Third Ward and was re-elected a member of Council in 1900, and is still a member of that body.

He was married in March, 1847 to Margaret Edwards, daughter of Rev. John Edwards. Their children were: William who died in infancy; Anne died at the age of eighteen; William H. now in Columbus, Ohio; David; Jerusha died aged seven; Mary Emily and Floyd died in infancy, and a son Oscar died at twenty-two. His first wife died in 1876. He was married the second time to Lydia Sissler. He has three children of that marriage: Benjamin who married Lucy Waller; Mary; and Floyd who is a student at Miami University.

In every relation in life Captain Williams has tried to do his best. No better city Marshal ever held office in the State than he. All the good people admitted this and the rogues all realized it. When he undertook to convict a criminal he did so. With him no guilty man escaped. He was peculiarly fitted for the Marshal's office and the people of Portsmouth thought so and voted so.

William Grant Williams

was born January 2, 1866, in Jackson county, Ohio. His father was Evan D. Williams, and his mother's maiden name was Catharine Edwards, the daughter of Rev. John E. Edwards. His parents had seven children, of whom he was the fifth. Three of these sons survived and the others died in infancy. Grant's father was a farmer in Jackson county, but in 1867 moved to Portsmouth, Ohio, and began work in the Gaylord mill. The son has lived in Portsmouth ever since. He attended the Portsmouth schools until he was fifteen years of age and then he began for himself as a messenger for the Western Union Telegraph Company. He served as such for one year and then became a telegrapher in the general offices of the Scioto Valley Railway Company, in Columbus. He served four years in this capacity and then became Secretary to J. J. Archer, the General Passenger and Freight Agent of the same Railroad Company.

In 1888, he came back to Portsmouth and became vice president of the Excelsior Shoe Company. (See page 608.) He has held that office ever since. He has charge of the sale of the goods and of the cutting department. A full account of the operations of the company will be found under the sketch of his brother, John E. Williams.

Our subject was married January 3, 1894 to Miss Mary Elizabeth Love, daughter of Peter E. Love, of Cabell county, West Virginia. He has three children, sons, as follows: Allen Graves, born February 11, 1895; Forest Love, born May 21, 1897; Paul, born April 4, 1899. Mr. Williams is a republican, a member of the Second Presbyterian church, a member of the Commercial Club and a Mason.

Mr. Williams is a young business man of the ablest type. Quick to act, aggressive, yet judicious and far seeing, a positive character, he possesses the qualities which make him a leader among the Portsmouth captains of industry. He constantly studies his business and is familiar with its slightest detail. His broad views and courageous policies have contributed largely to the unrivalled growth and prosperity of his shoe interests. A brilliant industrial career is before him. In private life, he is public spirited and a valuable citizen in every respect. It is to men like him that Portsmouth owes all that is best in its recent commercial and industrial awakening.

William Henry Williams

was born in Albany, New York, July 4, 1842. His father was William Williams and his mother's maiden name was Delila Hunter. He left New York when he was three years old and was adopted in Portsmouth. He has spent all but eleven years of his life in Portsmouth. He attended school in Portsmouth until 1856 when he commenced to work for J. L. McVey as a clerk and remained there until December 7, 1857 when Mr. McVey died. He then learned the tinner's trade with O'Neill & Hunter and was with them until February, 1861, when he went to Cincinnati and was time keeper at G. W. Ball & Company's foundry. On June 4, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, 39th O. V. I. and was appointed Sergeant on the day he was mustered in. He was promoted to First Sergeant and on December 31, 1862, was promoted to Second Lieutenant. He was made First Lieutenant May 9, 1864. He resigned August 6, 1864. He was in all the battles participated in by the regiment up to and including Atlanta, Georgia. On February 20, 1864, a sword, sash, sword belt, and revolver were presented to him by the citizens of Portsmouth at Connelley's Hall. After his return from the army, he went into the grocery business with Phil Hard. He was in that one year, and then went to Cincinnati and traveled for Wirthlin & Company, flour dealers, until 1872, when he returned to Portsmouth and went into the business of house-painting and has been in it ever since. He belongs to no orders except the G. A. R. He is a republican.

William Henry Williams

was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, October 7, 1854. His father was William B. Williams for so many years City Marshal and his mother was Margaret (Edwards) Williams. They were both natives of Wales. He attended the public schools until the age of seventeen when he entered on a business career. He clerked in John Jones' hat store for one year. Then he went into the Biggs House under Prendergast & Jennings and was there for six years as a clerk. He became proprietor in 1883 and was there for one year. He was a member of the school board in Portsmouth in 1881 and 1883 from the First ward.

In February, 1884, he was appointed Financial Officer of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum under Governor Hoadley and was there for two years. He then went into the American Hotel as one of the firm. In 1891 the firm became Williams and Weakley and so remained until 1897. In 1890, he was elected Financial Officer of the Central Insane Asylum and held that position two years. In 1894, he was appointed Director of Accounts of Columbus. In 1895, he was appointed Director of Public Safety of the city of Columbus, an office corresponding to Chief of Police, and served until 1899. He made the best record for that office the city ever had and achieved a state reputation. He was appointed a trustee of the Athens Hospital for the Insane in 1899 and still holds that office. He was treasurer of the State Democratic Committee in 1896, 1897, and 1900. He was the organizer of the Great Southern Hotel Company and was its president for two years. He became president of the Mercantile Assurety Company in January, 1892.

He was married April 15, 1881, to Emma Jones, daughter of David D. Jones of Portsmouth, Ohio. They have one son, Carl R., who is engaged with the H. C. Warner Shoe Company in Columbus. Mr. Williams is a democrat.

Mr. Williams has extraordinary executive and business ability. He can bring order out of chaos and success out of failure. He has demonstrated this in handling money enterprises since his residence in the city of Columbus. He learned his lessons in Portsmouth and put them into practice in Columbus.

George Williamson

was born April 1, 1830 in Washington township, Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Joseph Williamson and his mother Catherine Schaffer. His father was born March 6, 1776 in New Jersey and was brought to this county when a child. He died July 6, 1849 of an epidemic of cholera. His widow survived until the 16th of December, 1880. His grandfather, Joseph Williamson emigrated from New Jersey. His grandmother Williamson was Martha Feurt, a sister of Peter Feurt and daughter of Joseph Feurt. She died in 1830. Of the children of his father there were John; Elizabeth, married to John Nottingham and living at Marion, Indiana; our subject, George Williamson; William; Christina A., married William Smith; Henry Harrison, deceased; Barbara, married Jacob C. Hibbs; Frank, moved to St. Louis; a sister, Sarah, married to a Mr. Swanson, who soon died. She afterwards married Frank Smith and resides at Cheshire, Ohio.

Our subject attended the common schools of his neighborhood and was raised a farmer. He never followed anything else and has owned his present farm for forty-seven years. He remembers seeing deer and wild turkeys in the woods. The farm he now owns and tills was cleared off in 1840 by Aaron Clark. When our subject became of age, he affiliated himself with the Whig party and then with the Republican. He has been a township trustee and a member of the school board in his district. In 1863 he went with the militia to follow General Morgan under the command of Van B. Hibbs, but was captured by Morgan near Ewington. He enlisted in Co. I of the 140th O. V. I., May 2, 1864, at the age of 34, and served until September 3, 1864.

On March 4, 1865, he married Miss Eliza Catherine Givens, daughter of William Givens. They had eight children: Mary Rena, died June 6, 1868; William Givens, ex-Sheriff of Scioto county, Ohio; John Adam, who cultivates his father's farm and is married to Effie Larkin, daughter of D. V. Larkin; Joseph Carlin, M. D., of Sciotoville, Ohio, married to Blanche Morrison; Dr. Howard Williamson, Dentist, of Portsmouth, Ohio; Sadie, Ellen and Eliza Catherine at home. His wife died March 28, 1870. He was married a second time to Mary Elizabeth Coe, widow of Marion Coe, and daughter of Allen Givens. They were married December 19, 1888. They have one daughter, Bessie.

Mr. Williamson has been for many years a member of the Oldtown Methodist church. He is a good neighbor and a kind friend. He has always strictly attended to his own affairs and found it an excellent way to get along easily and to make and save money. He is devoted to the interests of his family and his children are in turn devoted to him. He is a plain, every-day farmer. He has never had any ambition to be anything else, but by owning good land, by taking care of it and his business, he has acquired a competence for his declining years. For several years he has been an invalid, but is cheerful, contented and happy in the society of his family and his friends. His sons and daughters are a great credit to him and he is happy in their positions and success in the community.

GEORGE WILLIAMSON.

John Adam Williamson

was born at the old homestead of his grandfather in Washington township, January 20, 1872. He is the son of George and Eliza C. (Givens) Williamson. For a more extended account of the family see the sketch of George Williamson above. The boyhood of our subject was spent on the farm and at the district school. He has never followed any business but farming. He now has charge of the home farm, and has three hundred acres under cultivation. He is a Republican and Methodist. He married Effie Larkin, daughter of Delos V. and Sarah M. (Johnson) Larkin, July 19, 1898. They have one child, Margaret Eliza. Mr. Williamson is an industrious, careful young farmer and well thought of in his community.

Joseph C. Williamson, M. D., was born at Dry Run, Washington township, Scioto county, Ohio, December 31, 1874. He is the son of George and Eliza C. (Givens) Williamson. His boyhood and youth were passed on the farm in Washington township. He attended the home school and later spent over two years in the study of the sciences at the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio. He attended the Medical College of Ohio (now the University of Cincinnati) in 1895, from which he graduated in May, 1899, completing a four years' course. He spent the year 1900 in postgraduate work, as Home Physician and Surgeon of St. Mary's Hospital, at Cincinnati. He is now practicing medicine at Sciotoville, where he located in May, 1900. He married Miss Blanche Morrison, daughter of Albert R. and Elizabeth (McMasters) Morrison, October 8, 1901. He is a Republican. He has had a thorough course of medicine and has availed himself of all the advantages it offered. He is a liberal minded gentleman, and anxious to succeed and excel in his profession and will do so. His success is not a problem of the future, but a certainty of the present.

William Givens Williamson

was born March 24, 1869. His father was George Williamson, and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Catherine Givens, a daughter of William Givens, of Nile township. He was reared on his father's farm and attended the public schools. He also attended two terms with Professor Lowes. At the age of twenty-one he went to seek his fortune in the West, and went to Portland, Oregon, in March, 1891, and was there eighteen months. He was a salesman and a shipping clerk for a hardware store. He was married September 14, 1892, in the state of Oregon, to Miss Grace Bateman, the daughter of George Bateman. He returned to Scioto county in 1892, and went to farming on his father's farm and continued that occupation for six years. At the time he was also agent for a machine company.

He was elected Sheriff of Scioto county in November, 1898, and re-elected in 1900. He has the distinction of being the best looking man who was ever elected Sheriff in Scioto county, and also the youngest man. When he told strangers that he was Sheriff of Scioto county they thought he was some boy trying to impose on them. However, Mr. Williamson is a man, every inch of him, as all of his acquaintances know. He has had three children: Sarah Catharine, George Bacon and William Charles, deceased. Mr. Williamson is a republican and has for a number of years been very influential in politics. He is a Mason, a member of the Aurora Lodge, of Solomon Council, Mt. Vernon Chapter and of the Calvary Commandery. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Williamson enjoys the confidence of the business community and fulfills the duties in his important office as faithfully as any man who ever occupied that position. Since the above was written Mr. Williamson's wife died January 30, 1903.

Daniel James Wilson

was born at Loits, Scioto county, Ohio, February 11, 1866. He is the son of David S. and Elizabeth (Oberly) Wilson. His grandmother was Rachael (Storer) Wilson. She died at her home in Nile township, this county, in 1900, at the age of 97. Mr. Wilson is a Republican and a member of the Baptist church.

He was clerk in Madison township in 1897. He married Annie Rickey, daughter of Thomas and Tealina Rickey, April 8, 1896. They reside about one mile south-east of California. Mr. Wilson has been a farmer all his life. His father and mother reside on the home farm near Lois. They are both advanced in life but enjoy good health. Daniel J. Wilson is an industrious, careful farmer, a good neighbor, and has a heart full of human sympathy.

Frederick Arthur Wilson son of David Storer Wilson and Elizabeth (Oberly) Wilson was born on a farm in Madison township, April 14, 1867. His father was born in Adams county, May 27, 1826 and was the son of George Wilson, born in 1799, who came to Adams county from Virginia, about 1814 and died in 1876. His mother was a daughter of Charles and Magdalena Oberly. Charles Oberly died at the age of thirty-five, in 1853, and was the son of John Oberly, a German by birth.

The subject of this sketch was raised on a farm and schooled in the district school until he was sixteen, when he began teaching. He taught in the country schools for eight years and wound up his career as a teacher at California in Pike county, where he was employed two years. From teaching he turned to the lumber business, securing the position of inspector with the W. M. Ritter Lumber Company, at their lumber camp at Panther, West Virginia. Here Mr. Wilson worked for two years acquiring a thorough knowledge of lumber. He then was advanced to salesman in the eastern trade by reason of his merit and served until January 1, 1902, when he was made sales-manager for the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland, at a good salary, which position he still holds. He is thoroughly in touch with market conditions and with the lumber trade in general and is frequently consulted in technical matters of arbitration wherein marked ability and judgement is required. He is industrious and energetic and all the progress he has made has been through his own efforts and his natural ability. He is a republican but takes only a general interest in politics.

He was married November 18, 1886 to Mary Ellen O'Neal, daughter of Samuel and Eliza J. (Keairns) O'Neal. They have but one child, Jennie, born February 9, 1888.

Mr. Wilson is ambitious in his chosen work and by his constant application he has become a first class salesman. He has the confidence of his employers and has made himself indispensable to them. He is possessed of an excellent memory which serves him well at all times.

Jacob Hillyard Windle, M. D.,

was born in Winchester, Virginia, July 8, 1831. His father was Nicholas Hetrick Windle, and his mother's maiden name was Catharine Hillyard. His father and mother were married at Martinsburg, Virginia. His grandfather was John Windle who was born in Germany. His father and mother had twelve children, and our subject was the second child. They came to Monroe county, Ohio with four children: Grafton W., Mary E. Snyder, Anna, wife of William Smith, now deceased; and Dr. Jacob H. They came from Winchester through Wheeling, to Carlyle, in Monroe county. They remained there until June 5, 1847, when they landed in Portsmouth. They started to go to Illinois, but stopped off at Portsmouth, where they found Thomas Davis, a former neighbor. Mr. Davis was then carrying on a glove factory in Portsmouth and was short of hands. Mrs. Windle was an expert glove-maker, and Mr. Davis induced her to stay, to teach his hands how to make gloves, and so the family remained in Portsmouth and the vicinity from 1847 to 1850, and then moved to Adams county, "Bacon Flats." They remained here one year, and then moved to Munn's Run. Our subject bought forty acres of land on Munn's Run of Col. Thaddeus Bennett. In 1852, he went to Greenup county, to Buffalo furnace on a coal contract. In June, 1852, he came to Portsmouth and worked there a while for Mr. Miller on the canal. In 1854, he moved to Greenup county, Kentucky to do business for Col. Thaddeus Bennett. For two years he hauled charcoal to the Gaylord Rolling Mills. After that he was a sub-contractor, making charcoal. He followed that, until 1862, in Kentucky. From 1862 to 1865, he farmed with Frank Reeves, and was engaged in buying horses for the Government. In 1865, he moved to Buckhorn Tannery and remained there until 1867.

He commenced reading medicine in 1857 with Dr. Richard Morton in Kentucky. He had just begun reading medicine with Dr. Morton when the latter died of an overdose of calomel. Our subject then began to read with Dr. Munn of Springville, but he died a short time after. In 1866 and 1867, he began to practice medicine at Buckhorn Tannery. In 1867 he moved to Rarden. In 1869 he formed a partnership with Dr. Penn there, and practiced with him until 1872. From 1872 to 1874, he practiced alone. In 1874, he attended the Eclectic Medical Institute, and in February, 1875 graduated and got a diploma, and he has practiced under that since. He was married in March, 1859 to Sarah A. James from Scioto county, a daughter of Jonathan James. They have the following children: William, Grafton, Sarah Ellen, married Amos Jenkins; Jacob Franklin, Jonathan W., Nicholas H., Serena W., married Alex. Jenkins; Samuel Edmond, died at Latham, Ohio, aged thirty-three years; Zora Noline, deceased at one year; Leota May, married Walter H. Brown, residing at Brad-dock, Pa. Our subject is a democrat in his political views. He is a member of the Christian church.

Captain George Cumberland Winkler

was born in Pickaway county, January 5, 1835. His ancestry will be found in a sketch of John Asher Winkler. Our subject had a common school education. His mother died when he was only two years of age, and his sister Samantha Sperry took him and reared him. His mother gave him into his sister's charge in her dying moments. He spent his boyhood in Perry township, Lawrence county, and when 14 years of age he went to Portsmouth and learned the saddler business under James Salisbury. After a year he worked with a Mr. Barrett in the same business for two years. After that he went to Guyandotte and worked at his trade another year. From there he went to Charleston, West Virginia, and worked six months at his trade. After that he went into the drug business with Dr. Rogers, and was there four years. At the end of that period he went to Cincinnati to take a course at Bartlett's Commercial College.

The War coming on, in August 1861, he assisted in raising Company E of the Thirty-third O. V. I. He was mustered in that regiment September 3, 1861, as a private, and was made Sergeant. On December 8, 1861 he was made Second Lieutenant of the same company. He was made First Lieutenant March 2, 1863 and made Captain of Company I, August 11, 1864, and re-enlisted as a veteran and served until the close of the war. He was mustered out with the Company, July 12, 1865. He was in fifty-three different skirmishes, engagements and battles. He was never wounded. He was never in the hospital during his service, and was always ready for duty. He was in every battle in which the regiment participated, except Perryville at which time he was sick at home.

He was married September 21, 1865 to Mary J. LaCroix, a daughter of Alex. LaCroix. From 1865 to 1868 he was a farmer in Scioto county, Ohio; and from 1868 to 1873 he resided near Topeka, Kansas, and was engaged in farming. In the year 1873 he returned to Scioto county, and has been a farmer in the French Grant, near Haverhill, ever since. He has always been a republican in his political views, and has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1868. During that time he has been treasurer and trustee of that church for a number of years. If there is one distinguishing characteristic of Captain Winkler above another, it is his intense interest in everything he undertakes or does. He was one of the most earnest patriots during the war. His home is filled with memorials of the war. He was a model soldier, like "Chevalier Bayard, without fear or without reproach." No man who ever served in the War of 1861, has a greater love of his Country and its institutions. With Captain Winkler honor and integrity always come first. He is most highly esteemed by all those who know him; and the more intimately they know him, the greater their regard for him.

No sketch of him would be complete without a reference to his wife. She has been his aider and helper in all his good works and no woman in her community does more for the love of God and Humanity than she. The two, husband and wife, are, in their church and in the circle of their acquaintances, workers together for all that is true and good.

Charles Winter

was born in Prussia, Germany, near the Rhine, May 28, 1838. John Winter was his father and his mother's maiden name was Eliza Bauer. His paternal grandfather was in the battle of Waterloo. His boyhood and youth were passed at Koblinz, Germany. Here he received a good school education and learned the blacksmith's trade. He came to America in 1857 and located in Portsmouth. He was a blacksmith from 1862 until 1868, then he engaged in the grocery business and remained in that for fourteen years. Since that time he has been in the shoe and gents furnishing business. He was County Commissioner from 1880 to 1886. He was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth from 1876 to 1880 also from 1896 to 1898. He is a republican and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He has been a member of the German M. E. church since 1869. September 25, 1862, he was married to Margaret Helt, daughter of John Helt of Harrison township. They have eight children: Charles Albert now living in New York; John Wesley at Dayton, Ohio; William A., at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; Fred B. at New York; Bertha E. the wife of Samuel Marting; Clara N. at home; Henry Herman and Mayme C.

was born in Frankfort, Germany, December 24, 1824. His father was Leopold Wise. His parents died at Oxburg, Germany, his father being 96 and his mother 94. He came to this county in 1847 and landed in New York. He located there and began business in clothing and tailoring which he continued until 1859. He then removed to Ironton, Ohio, and commenced the same kind of business, which he continued until 1865. He then removed to Portsmouth and began business of the same kind, and continued in it until 1897, when he retired from business.

He was married in July, 1848 to Mary Deusik, daughter of Max Deusik of Bavaria, Germany. She came to this country in 1848 and located in Portsmouth. They have two children living: Max and Samuel. Max commenced business with his father in 1865. In 1885, he commenced business for himself and continued until 1891, when he retired from the clothing business and organized the Model Shirt Manufacturing Company in which he is engaged at present. Samuel commenced to work for his father in 1892 and in 1897 when his father retired, he became superintendent of the Wise Tailoring Company and still holds that position. Our subject is a republican, a member of Spinza Lodge, No. 108, I. O. B. B. of Cincinnati. He is a member of the Jewish congregation of Portsmouth.

General Oliver Wood

was born in Saratoga county, New York, June 25, 1825. His father was a farmer in good circumstances and gave his son as good an education as the vicinity afforded. Some time before his majority, he removed to Chautauqua county, New York. He was appointed a deputy sheriff when he was only twenty-one years of age. There he married Miss Rhodes, who was the mother of two children: Lester E. Wood, now of New York city, and Emma Wood, who died in 1877. He engaged in the lumber business on the Ohio and Alleghany rivers. In 1852, his wife died and soon after he removed to Portsmouth. In 1855, he married Miss Emily H. Mytinger.

When Sumpter was fired on, he enlisted in Company D, 22nd O. V. I. as a three-months man. On April 22, 1861, five days after his enlistment, he was made First Lieutenant. He served in this company until August 19, 1861. On the 21st of August 1861, he was mustered in Co. B. 22nd O. V. I. as Captain for three years. He was promoted to Major, May 9, 1862. He was made Colonel, September 16, 1862, and was mustered out with the regiment. November 18, 1864. The regiment was originally known as the 13th Missouri, but on May 29, 1862, its designation was changed to the 22nd O. V. I. as it had seven companies from Ohio, one from Illinois and two from Missouri. On December

• GENERAL OLIVER WOOD.

9, 1864, he was appointed Colonel of the Fourth United States Veteran Volunteers by Secretary Stanton, attached to the First Army corps, was ordered to Virginia, and served as colonel until March 1, 1866. On March 5, 1865, he was brevetted Brigadier-General for gallant and meritorious service on the field of battle.

On January 23, 1867, the first Grand Army Post was formed in Portsmouth. Colonel Wood was Post Commander and N. W. Evans was Adjutant.

On March 1, 1867, he was appointed Postmaster at Portsmouth and served as such until December 10, 1873. On March 27, 1869, S. P. Drake stole a march on him and secured the appointment as Postmaster at Portsmouth from President Grant who sent Drake's name to the Senate. General Wood's friends rallied to his support and protested so strongly against the appointment of Drake, that his appointment was withdrawn. On March 1, 1871, there was another effort made to secure the appointment of a different Postmaster, and an election to indicate the sentiments of the patrons of the office was held. The vote resulted as follows: Oliver Wood 428, Milton Kennedy 385, B. P. Holmes 69, J. P. Jack 49, Mrs. E. E. Glidden 42, and C. P. Lloyd 19. General Wood held the office, until 1873, when he was succeeded by Mrs. L. Adair.

In 1873 and 1874, he conducted a hotel in Ironton, Ohio. In 1876 and 1877, he conducted what is now the Arlington Hotel, in Portsmouth. On September 15, 1877, he sold his hotel to A. C. Emory. In March, 1878, he was appointed Indian agent at the Quinault reservation, Washington Territory, and afterwards held a like appointment at Neah Bay three years, until he was succeeded by Mr. Cleveland's appointee in 1885. He then removed to Port Townsend, where he was Probate Judge from 1888-1890 and Police Judge from 1890-1893. In 1890, he was appointed a Circuit Commissioner. In 1883, he assisted in organizing Farragut Post, No. 15, G. A. R., of Port Townsend, Washington, and was one of its first commanders. He was a member of Port Townsend lodge, F. & A. M. He was also a Scottish Rite Mason and an Odd Fellow.

In politics, he was always a republican. He was a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church and a vestryman at the time of his death. He left a wife and five children: Lester E. Wood of New York city, Mrs. Isaac D. O'Neill, Mrs. Robert Lyall, Charles B. and James A. Wood, who reside in Port Townsend, Washington. James A. is now an assistant city editor of the Seattle "Post."

In 1891, General Wood was admitted to the bar in Washington State. He was very highly esteemed as a citizen and the protest against his removal as Postmaster in 1871, was a remarkable tribute to his character and worth. He was a true patriot. As a soldier and officer, he was enthusiastic, brave and wonderfully efficient. He was a most agreeable companion and was the life of the circle in which he moved. He was a man of great sympathies and especially was his sympathy extended to those in distress. He took a great interest in the G. A. R. not only in Portsmouth, but in Port Townsend, Washington. He died on June 25, 1893. His memory is affectionately cherished by all who knew him and especially by his old friends in Scioto county.

Charles Elmore Worley was born February 3, 1857 at Portsmouth, Ohio. His parents were William C. and Mary (Willitt) Worley. His father enlisted in Company I, 140th O. V. I. May 2, 1864, for 100 days and was mustered out with his company September 3, 1864. He spent his boyhood and youth at Friendship, Ohio. He received a common school education. He worked for some time at the cooper's trade. He has always been a republican. He is a member of the M. E. church. He was married February 5, 1878 to Rose Angele, daughter of Andrew Angele, a carriage-maker of Portsmouth, Ohio, who came from Wurtemberg, Germany in 1850. They have six children: William Andrew, Frank, Karl, Marie, Pauline, and Louise.

Robert S. Wynn

Robert S. Wynn was born July 2, 1814, near Chillicothe, Ohio. His father was William Wynn, a native of Bath county, Virginia. His grandfather, Robert Wynn, was from England and was a graduate of Oxford University. He came to Virginia and married a Miss Williams who owned the Warm Springs and had a large estate. His son, William Wynn, located in Ross county soon after the opening of the century. Our subject's mother died when he was ten years of age, leaving Robert and one son William, his brother. At fourteen, he ran away from home and apprenticed himself to the cooper's trade. Contrary to the experience of most boys who ran away from home, he prospered, learned the cooper's trade and afterwards bought out a shop and store in Dayton. He came to Scioto and Pike counties and worked. On the 13th of December, 1841, he married Eliza Reynolds, a daughter of Doctor Albert Reynolds, of Jasper. In 1842, he started a cooper shop in the west end of Portsmouth and became a cooper.

In 1847, Robert Wynn quit the cooper business and went to contracting. He built the Portsmouth grade in front of the city in 1848. He was one of the principal stone contractors in Southern Ohio. He built four bridges across the Scioto river, two at Waverly and two at Chillicothe, Ohio. He built the George Davis distillery, locks and dams for the Ohio Canal and superintended the placing in of the foundations of the bridge across the Ohio at Point Pleasant. He built two of the piers for the same bridge on the West Virginia side. He had the reputation of being one of the best stone foundation builders on the Ohio river. He built and owned the St. Charles Restaurant, in Portsmouth. He did much stone work in West Virginia and Kentucky and trestled and piled the Norfolk & Western railroad from Chillicothe to Ironton. He met great losses in West Virginia but stood up under the burden of debts and paid every dollar in full with interest. He was a brave and strong man under adversity. He was a good and useful citizen and has many monuments of stone standing to his memory.

He has had six children, three of whom died in childhood. Their surviving children are: Eldecka, married first to Leonard Wishon and afterwards to William Turner of the West Side; Eliza, married Emil Revare, now a widow; Albert, living in Piketon, Pike county. Robert Wynn was a well known citizen of Portsmouth. He was jolly and cheery at all times. Adversity never discouraged him, the worse the times, the more cheerful he was. He believed in letting the other man do the worrying. He was a pleasant companion and could do his part in every company in which he found himself. At one time he was a candidate for Commissioner in Pike county on the Democratic ticket and was defeated by only two votes. He was always a democrat and his Democracy was time tried and fire tested. He died December 19, 1885 in Pike county. His widow still survives.

Thomas Thornton Yeager

was born in 1836, in Meigs county, Ohio. His father was Peter Yeager and his mother was Emeline Glover Thornton, a daughter of John H. Thornton. He was the eldest of ten children. His father was a native of Mason county, Virginia, and was a farmer. John H. Thornton had moved to Meigs county with his father and there Peter Yeager met his wife and married her. When our subject was two years old, his father moved to Kentucky, twelve miles above Portsmouth, and lived there until he was seven years of age, when he moved to Portsmouth. Thomas first attended school in Kentucky, going to Jerome B. Valodin. He also went to school in Portsmouth, first to Mrs. Carr and afterwards to A. J. Rikoff.

He left school when fifteen years of age, and went into Doctor Hempstead's office to study medicine. He remained there nine months and then gave up the idea. He then went into Stephenson's book-store and clerked there about one year. From there he went to Patterson's book-binding and worked there for five years. In 1857, he went to Keokuk, Iowa, and started a book-binding. The panic of that year broke up everything in Keokuk, including Yeager. Then he worked at bricklaying for a year and a half in Keokuk. From there he went to Jefferson City, Missouri and laid brick there for about a year. He then tried Fulton, Missouri and took a three million brick contract for the season. He completed the contract and made $500 and returned home in the winter of 1860, with the money, the first he ever saved. In the spring of 1860, he returned to Jefferson City to go to work.

The war fever broke up business and he could get nothing to do. Governor Stewart was drunk and made a speech on the steps of the capitol advising that every Northern man be driven out of the state. Tom concluded to go home as he appeared to have no other alternative. He started a book-binding in Portsmouth and then the war broke out. Yeager played a game of checkers with John D. Wilhelm to determine whether both should go to war, or both stay at home. The game turned out that both should go to war. Both of them enlisted in Company G, First O. V. I. as three months men. Tom got sick in Philadelphia but would not go to the hospital. Doctor Bailey, Captain of the Company, prescribed for him in a barn in the Suffolk Park race course. He advised Tom not to re-enlist as his health was insufficient and he followed this advice.

When he returned from Company G, he engaged for McDowell & McColm on the wharfboat for two years. He was elected wharfmaster April 13, 1863 and served until April, 1866, when he was succeeded by David Gates. Gates only served six months, and Yeager was re-elected until 1872. He owned and conducted a wharfboat purchased from Captain John N. Lodwick, from 1863 to 1866. He had no money to buy but Tom Dugan loaned him $400 and he bought out Lodwick. In 1866, he took Mr. McColm in the business and the firm was McColm & Yeager. This firm continued to do business till 1871, when Yeager bought a third interest with John Dice and Peter Shafer in Maklem's livery stable. They conducted the business from 1872 to 1875. In 1872, he sold out his interest in the wharfboat to James O. Murfin. In 1875, he sold out his interest in the livery business to John W. Lewis. He then went into the mill business on Fifth street with Augustus R. Turley. Yeager & Turley run the mill one year and Turley sold out his half interest to Marshall Anderson. Yeager & Anderson built a roller process mill and it burned down on September 24, 1883. They then purchased the lot where the Frick Mill now stands.

In 1886, he was elected Sheriff of Scioto county. He received 3,151 votes to 2,676 for his competitor, James Skelton, majority 475. In 1886, he was re-elected, receiving 4,042 votes to 3,139 for John C. Bauer, majority 903. In 1840, his grandfather John H. Thornton was Sheriff when William H. Harrison was President. In 1886, our subject was Sheriff when Benjamin Harrison was President. In 1892, he was appointed District Factory Inspector and served three years. In 1898 and 1899, he was a member of the City Council of Portsmouth.

He was married in July, 1869, to Mrs. Ella Fritts, widow of Thomas J. Fritts, who was a daughter of James Simpson. They have one son Thomas Hyatt, aged twenty-two years. He is a Rural Free Delivery mail-carrier, on the route north of Portsmouth and down Munn's Runn. Mr. Yeager is a republican. For ten years, he was chairman of the County Republican Central Committee.

James Henry Yingling

son of Christian Yingling and Martha (Lee) Yingling was born on the old Yingling homestead below Hanging Rock, Ohio, December 31, 1831. (See sketch of Christian Yingling.) He was one of twelve children. He received only a common school education with a course at Bartlett's Commercial College at Cincinnati, Ohio. Though not a public man he takes a great interest in public matters. When the town of Hanging Rock was incorporated, he was elected Clerk of Council and served two years. He has served on the local Board of Education several terms and is much interested in education and is willing to make sacrifices in the cause. He was one of four men to guarantee the expense of a private high school in Green township, in 1899, when the Board of Education refused to establish same and he was the prime mover in the organization. He has advanced ideas on educational matters and is very enthusiastic in his support of them. He regards his work toward founding the first High School in Green township as the crowning act of his public life.

Though rocked in a democratic cradle, he is very liberal in his political views. He is still a democrat but a strong prohibitionist and some times votes that way.

On November 17, 1864 he was married to Eliza C. Bumgarner, a daughter of Daniel Bumgarner, and moved to Scioto county to the place where he now resides. They had three children Thane D., died January 13, 1896, Amy A., married to Joseph McNeil July 26, 1899 and resides near Peebles, Ohio, and Mattie L., died March 28, 1887. His wife died November 22, 1881. On September 5, 1883, he was married to Ruby M. Feurt, daughter of Henry Feurt. By this marriage there were two children: Henry Lloyd and Mary. This wife died April 17, 1890 and he was again married to Mrs. Mary E. Heid, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Rogers of Portsmouth, Ohio, June 17, 1891. By this marriage only one child was born: Margaret, died in infancy. Linnie P. Heid, daughter of Mrs. Yingling by her first marriage, lives with them. Our subject united with the Storm's Creek (now the Ironton) Baptist church when only twelve years old and has never departed from the faith. He is now an active and earnest worker in the Ohio Baptist church and Sunday school.

Mr. Yingling is a man of exemplary habits, kindly disposed towards all men, affectionate in his family relations and endowed with a religious instinct which manifests itself in all his dealings. He is a careful and successful business man and an intensely patriotic citizen. He is a firm believer in the right and belongs to that class of men who will not surrender a principle for the sake of policy.

John Yoakley

the son of John and Susan Ralph (St. John) Yoakley was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, May 27, 1860. His father was organist at All Saints in Portsmouth for thirty-two years and was a composer of music. His grandfather, William Yoakley, was a musician and composer. The Presbyterian Hymnal contains one of his compositions named for himself "Yoakley."

Our subject received his academic training in the Portsmouth public schools. Springing from a musically inclined ancestry, he naturally took to music and his father gave him private instruction until he was eighteen. In 1878, he went to Cincinnati, where he studied under the best professors and reached a high degree of proficiency. He has achieved a wide reputation as a teacher of music and his compositions have the hearty approval of the public. They have been recognized to such an extent that a "Te Deum" in F received its initial rendition at a service for the consecration of a Bishop of the Episcopal church at Richmond, Virginia, and his tune "All Souls" was chosen for the "American Missionary Hymn" for insertion in the Church of England Hymnal. He is regarded as one of the most proficient organists west of the Alleghany Mountains. He is the organist at Christ Church, Cincinnati, and is continually engaged in important musical events occurring in Cincinnati from time to time. The following are some of his published compositions which have received public recognition: For the piano, "Spring," "Polacca," "Gypsy Scene," and "Ideal." For the voice, "Longing," "Beyond the Stars," "Lord forever at thy side," Anthems, "Te Deum" in F, "Jubilate" in F, "Bonum Est" in B flat, "Deus Misereatur" in B flat, "Benedicite" in G and "Te Deum" in B flat.

Our subject is a member of the Episcopal Church. He is a Knight Templar and Scottish Rite Mason. He was married May 17, 1890 to Josephine S. Royse, daughter of Capt. T. S. and Mrs. P. S. Royse. She died September 5, 1892, leaving one son, John Noble.

Levi D. York

was born in Wednesbury, Staffordshire, England, December 20, 1847. His father was Levi York, a stationary engineer, and Mary Ann Dee was the maiden name of his mother. His father died at the age of sixty-three, in England, and his mother in her eightieth year in 1889. He went to an Episcopal church school until he was twelve years old, and after that he attended school from time to time of evenings. He began to learn a trade at the age of twelve years, running a stationary engine. He followed that one year and went into a blacksmith's shop four years. He then went to roll-turning, in the employ of the Patent Shaft & Axle-tree Company, and worked there until he was twenty-six years of age. His brother Thomas, had gone to the United States before the Civil war. He had been in the Navy in that war, and returned home at its close. He gave such a glowing description of this country that our subject determined to come to the United States. His brother James G. had preceded him a few months. In 1868, he came alone, and located at Akron, Ohio. He went into employment there as assistant roll-turner to his brother James G. York for a few months. He then fired a battery of boilers in the Akron rolling mill for three months. After that he had a position as machinist with the Selberling Company, manufacturers of Agricultural Implements.

In April, 1869, he went to Patterson, N. J., as a roll-turner in the Passaic Rolling Mill Company, and remained there until September, 1878. In 1870 he was made superintendent of the plant, and continued until 1878. In September, 1878, he went to United States of Columbia, South America, and was gone for thirteen months. He went there to undertake to erect a blast-furnace and rolling-mill for the Government, but returned before it was completed.

He first landed in Portsmouth the day preceding Thanksgiving in 1879, and continued to reside there until March, 1901, when he transferred his residence to Los Angeles, California. He became the superintendent of the Burgess Steel & Iron Works in the year 1879. At the end of two years he became vice-president; he became president in 1895. He obtained a controlling interest in the business in about 1890. The mill was burned on the sixth of June, 1896, an account of which is given elsewhere. He proposed to build a new mill at Yorktown, and completed it shortly after May, 1899. On July 15, 1900 he disposed of it to a combination of mills. He is president of the Portsmouth Street Railway and Electric Light Company, and has been since 1898.

He married in January, 1870 Miss Ester E. Banker, of Patterson N. J. They had one child, Lillian E., now the wife of Milton Longfellow. His wife died in December, 1870, and he was married September 23, 1872 to Miss Alice L. Watkins, daughter of Jefferson L. Watkins, Esq. They have four children, three daughters and one son. Their eldest daughter, Laura, is the wife of B. Frank Vincent. Their son, Raymond, married a daughter of Hon. A. C. Thompson, Federal Judge, and is in business for himself. Clara, a young lady, and Mary, a little girl, are at home.

Mr. York was naturalized at Patterson, N. J. in 1870. In politics he is a republican. He is one of the largest capitalists in Portsmouth, and is disposed at all times to use his capital and talents for the upbuilding of the town. He is a public-spirited citizen, and no just appeal is ever made to him in vain, either for business or charity.

Jacob Yost

was born March 31, 1846 at Philippsburg, Lorraine, Germany. His parents were Andrew and Louise (Bouldorf) Yost. They came to this country in 1854 and located at Portsmouth. His father was a knobbler at the Gaylord Rolling Mill and died in 1871. Jacob attended school in Germany and after coming to this country attended the schools in Portsmouth and received a common school education. He began working in the Rolling Mill when only ten years of age. At the age of seventeen, he was a puddler, which work he continued until 1887 when he became a heater. He is a republican and a member of the German Lutheran Church.

On September 20, 1868, he was married to Kate Clemens, daughter of Frederick and Mary Clemens. His wife died in July, 1897. They had seven children: Daniel F., Flora E., Emma M., Clemens A., Elinora Philippine, Carrie C., and Walter Jacob.

Mr. Yost is one of those good citizens who wears his heart on his coat sleeve. He is honest to the core, sincere and outspoken on every subject. He could not be guilty of dissimulation. He is very firm in his opinions, but is careful in making them up. If anyone wishes to know his views on any subject, all one has to do is to ask him. He has a horror of debt and owes no man anything. He has accumulated a competence and has given a college education to his two eldest sons, Daniel and Clemens. The former has been practicing law in Boston and the latter after graduating at Bowdoin College, Maine, has become a teacher in Massachusetts.

Philip Zoellner

was born November 22, 1832, at Kassel in Bavaria, Germany. His father's name was Karl Zoellner, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Grimm. He was the youngest of a family of nine children. His parents never came to America, but died in the old country. - His father was a manufacturer of stockings. One brother, Christian Zoellner, came to the United States, and is living in Cincinnati, a watch-maker and machinist. One sister came, Mrs. Margaret Thielman, now deceased. All his other brothers and sisters remained in Germany. He attended the common schools in Bavaria, and the gymnasium. He was apprenticed to a watch-maker at sixteen years of age and served as such four years. He then worked for one year at his trade, and then came to this country. He came to avoid going into the army.

He landed in New York on the 7th day of February, 1852, having been on the ocean forty-two days. He came in a sailing vessel. He remained in New York nine months and worked at his trade. In October, 1852, his sister arrived in New York from Bavaria with two children and her husband was already in Cincinnati. Mr. Zoellner accompanied his sister to Cincinnati, and went to work at his trade and worked there two years. He came to Portsmouth July 7, 1855, in consequence of a correspondence with Daniel Clemens, who had been a neighbor in Kusel. He came on the Bostona, Capt. McLean, master, Cpts. Jack and James Lusk, clerks. He went to work with John Clugsten on Market street, in the jewelry business at the old Abe. Coriell stand, and worked with him two years. On April 1, 1857, he started into business for himself, in the building, No. 135 W. Second street, where he remained until February 15, 1900, when he removed to No. 93 W. Second street.

Mr. Zoellner has always been very industrious, attending to his business and maintaining the strictest integrity. As a consequence he built up a good business and made money. He was married to Miss Mary Scott, daughter of Charles Scott, on July 9, 1857. The children of this marriage are: Albert C., now in business for himself in Portsmouth; Amelia, wife of P. S. Tritscheller; Lena, wife of George Appel of the Gilbert Grocery Co.; Mary, wife of John C. Bauer, of the same firm; Otto, now in business as Otto Zoellner & Brother; Lucy, widow of Dr. August Schliefer; Anna, wife of Otto Stephen of Cincinnati, Ohio; Charles, in partnership with his brother Otto. On May 1, 1899, Mr. Zoellner turned his business over to his two sons Otto and Charles.

August 14, 1862 he enlisted in Company C, 106th O. V. I., and served until March 29, 1863, when he was discharged for disability. He is one of the charter members of the German Beneficial Society of Portsmouth, organized in 1857, and has never drawn a single benefit from the society. He has always been a republican. He was reared a Protestant and is a member of the German Evangelical church. His children were all baptised and confirmed in the same church. He cast his first vote in the second ward in 1858, and has lived and voted in that ward ever since. He resided over his store for twenty-six years, and after that bought the Kehoe residence, which is just north of Dr. Cotton's, where he now resides. He was treasurer of the First German Building Association during its entire existence for nine and one-half years. He has been agent for foreign steamer lines since 1860. He has been a member of the Scioto County Tax Commission for three years, and in 1899 he was elected Land Appraiser for the First and Second wards.

Mr. Zoellner is one of the most substantial citizens of Portsmouth. He is strictly honest and upright in all his dealings, and has the confidence of the entire community. The writer regards him as one of the most fortunate men in the city, for he is surrounded by his entire family, and they are all engaged in gainful employment, doing remarkably well for themselves. He can be justly proud of the records of his sons and sons-in-law, and his daughters are all admirable women.

PIONEER RECORD OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

PORTSMOUTH COUNCIL CHAMBER.

PIONEER RECORD OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

CHAPTER I.

The Virginia Military District and Its Surveyors Congressional Lands in Southern Ohio Indian Trails, Towns, Camps and Pioneer Traces in the Virginia Military District in Southwestern Ohio—The Governor Lucas Mansion in Pike County, O.—The Arcadian Mineral Springs in Adams County—Revolutionary Soldiers.

THE VIRGINIA MILITARY DISTRICT

embraces twenty-two counties and parts of counties in Ohio, lying between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers, and north of the Ohio river. A part of the western boundary is a line drawn from the source of the Scioto river to the source of the Little Miami river, known as Robert's line. It embraces all of the counties of Adams, Brown, Clermont, Highland, Clinton, Fayette, Madison, and Union; and portions of the counties, Scioto; Pike, Ross, Pickaway, Franklin, Delaware, Marion, Hardin, Auglaize, Logan, Champaign, Clark, Green, Warren and Hamilton. The district is said to cover over six thousand five hundred and seventy square miles, and contains over four million acres of land.

In the second charter of Virginia, which was granted on the 23rd day of May, 1609, this territory, with much more, was granted by King James I., of Great Britain to the Treasurer and Company of Virginia, which included "all those lands, countries, and territories, situate, lying, and being, in that part of America called Virginia, from the Point of land, called Cape or Point Comfort, all along the sea coast, to the southward two hundred miles, and all that space and circuit of land, lying from the sea coast of the precinct aforesaid, up into the land, throughout from sea to sea, west, and northwest; and also all the islands, lying within one hundred miles, along the coast of both seas of the precinct aforesaid." Virginia stoutly claimed this land, at all times, by virtue of this charter.

An act of the Legislature of Virginia of October, 1779, 10 vol., Henning's Statutes of Virginia, p. 160, provides for bounties in lands to the officers and soldiers of Virginia in the Revolutionary War, both on Continental and State establishment, and prescribes the quantity each should receive, according to rank. Prior to the passage of this act, Virginia had promised land bounties to her soldiers of both State and Continental establishment, but the quantity was not definitely fixed until the act last referred to. This act does not prescribe from what particular lands the bounties shall be granted. According to this act the "proportions as have been engaged to them" were as follows: A Private, 200 acres; a Non-commissioned Officer, 400 acres; a Subaltern, 2,000 acres; A Captain, 3,000 acres; a Major, 4,000 acres; a Lieutenant Colonel, 4,500 acres; a Colonel, 5,000 acres; a Brigadier General, 10,000 acres; and a Major General, 15,000 acres.

An act of Virginia, in May, 1779, 10 vol. Henning's Statutes, p. 51, prescribed the manner in which officers and soldiers of Virginia, who served either upon the State or Continental establishment, should procure their land warrants. The modus operandi may be briefly described as follows: In case of a commissioned officer, he procured a certificate from his commanding officer that he had served the time prescribed by law, three years, stating his regiment and particular service. Armed with this certificate, the party applied to the nearest court of record in Virginia and by his own affidavit, or otherwise, satisfied the court of the truth of said certificate. Thereupon the Clerk of the court applied to, made a note of the proof on the original certificate and also in his order book, and annually sent a list of such certificates approved, to the Land office of the State, at Richmond.

With the endorsed certificate, the officer or soldier entitled to the bounty applied to the Register of the Land Office of Virginia, who issued him a warrant, under his hand and seal of office, specifying the quantity of land and the rights upon which it was due, authorizing any surveyor qualified by law to lay off and survey the same, and requiring him to make a record thereof.

There was also a provision in the same act, by virtue of which, a party holding original warrants could lay them in one or more surveys, and where the survey or surveys were insufficient to fill the quantity named in the warrant, the party was authorized to exchange the original warrant, or warrants, for others calling for the quantity of land not already entered and divided into quantities, in separate warrants, to suit the party holding the originals. In this way the name "exchange warrant" originated.

The same act also provided that all persons, including foreigners, should have the right to transfer warrants, or certificates of survey of lands.

This statute provided also in regard to surplus in surveys, to the effect that no outside party should be permitted to claim the surplus except during the lifetime of the patentee or grantee, and not then in case any sale or conveyance of the land had been made from the patentee or original grantee. The party seeking to enter or take up the surplus must give one year to the party in possession to perfect his title to the surplus by covering it with a proper survey, on the same, or another warrant, and in the case the patentee could not defeat the claim for surplus by a resurvey or otherwise, he, and none other, could assign it in the tract held by him where he saw fit. The act also provided that a surplus of five per cent should not be regarded.

On the 20th of October, 1783, Virginia ceded all lands owned or claimed by her northwest of the Ohio river, to the United States. This act recited that Congress did on the sixth day of September, 1780, recommend to the several states in the Union, having claims to waste and unappropriated lands in the western country, to cede them to the common benefit of the Union, and that the Commonwealth of Virginia did, on the 2nd day of January, 1781, yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of the said states, all right, title and claim to this territory northwest of the river Ohio. That Congress did by its act of the 13th day of September, 1783, accept the cession; and it was enacted that Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe, delegates to represent the said commonwealth in Congress, should make a conveyance of the same to the United States, which they afterwards did. The act and deed of cession was for the purpose of having states formed out of the territory of not less than one hundred and fifty square miles, or as near thereto as circumstances would admit: and that the states so formed should be distinct republican states, and admitted members of the federal union: having the same rights of sovereignty, freedom and independence, as the other states.

The act further provided that the French inhabitants of the French posts should have their titles confirmed to them, and gave one hundred and fifty thousand acres of land to General George Rogers Clarke, and to the officers and soldiers of his regiment, which was to be laid off in one tract.

There was a condition in the act, that in case the quantity of good lands on the southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of the Cumberland river, and between the Green river and Tennessee river, which had been reserved by law to the Virginia troops, upon continental establishment, should, from the North Carolina line bearing in further upon the Cumberland lands than was expected, prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiency should be made up to the said troops in good lands, to be laid off between the river Scioto and Little Miami, on the northwest side of the river Ohio, in such proportions as have been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia.

That all the lands within the territory so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for, or appropriated to, any of the before mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American army, should be considered as a common fund for the benefit and use of such of the United States as have become, or should become members of the confederation or federal alliance of the said states, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and should be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever. The cession from Virginia was accepted by Congress, March 1, 1784, 1st vol., L. U. S., p. 472.

On the 17th of July, 1788, 1 vol., L. U. S., p. 572, Congress Resolved, That the State of Virginia be requested to inform Congress, whether there has been any deficiency of good lands reserved by the laws of that State on the southeast side of the Ohio, for the Virginia troops on continental establishment, and if so, how much. Afterwards the Legislature of Virginia by a resolution notified Congress that all of it would be required.

By the Act of August 10, 1790, 2 vol., L. U. S., p. 179, Congress opened the district to locations, and authorized the agents of the warrantees to make locations. These were to be entered on a book kept for that purpose. This book was called a Book of Entries. This act also authorized the President of the United States to issue patents; but these patents were to be delivered to the Executive of the State of Virginia, and by him delivered to the grantee.

The Act of May 13, 1800, 3 vol., L. U. S., p. 393, provided that patents might be issued on resolution warrants. There was no limitation under the Law of August 10, 1790, as to when entries should be made and surveys made and returned to the General Land Office; but a number of entries and surveys were made prior to August 10, 1790, and these were made in the counties bordering the Ohio river.

The Act of March 23, 1804, 3 vol., L. U. S., p. 592, provided that "the line run under the direction of the Surveyor General of the United States, from the source of the Little Miami towards the source of the Scioto, and which binds, on the east, the surveys of the lands of the United States, shall, together with its course continued to the Scioto river, be considered and held as the westerly boundary line, north of the source of the Little Miami, of the territory reserved by the State of Virginia, between the Little Miami and Scioto Rivers, for the use of the officers and soldiers of the continental line of that State." There was a provision of the act that the State of Virginia should, within two years after the passage of this act, recognize such line as the boundary of the said territory. This act required, in the second Section, that all officers and soldiers should complete their locations within three years after the passage of the act, return their surveys within five years from the passage of the act. And it provided that such portions of the Virginia Military tract as was not located within the time mentioned, should be released from the claims of the soldiers.

A famous act was passed March 2, 1807, 4 vol., L. U. S., p. 92, which provided that the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, on continental establishment, their heirs or assigns, entitled to bounty lands within the tract reserved by Virginia, between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, for satisfying the legal bounties to her officers and soldiers upon continental establishment, should be allowed a further time of three years, from the 23rd of March next, to complete their locations, and a further time of five years, from the said 23rd of March next, to return their surveys and warrants, or certified copies of warrants, to the office of the Secretary of War. This act had a famous proviso, called "The Proviso of March 2nd, 1807" which read "that no locations, as aforesaid, within the above mentioned tract, shall after the passing of this act, be made on tracts of land, for which patents had previously been issued, or which had been previously surveyed; and any patent which may, nevertheless, be obtained for land located contrary to the provision of this section, shall be considered as null and void." This famous proviso was construed in the case of Jackson vs. Clark, 1st Peters, 666, in which the decision was rendered by the distinguished Chief Justice Marshall.

The time for making locations and returning surveys was extended by Congress from time to time, as follows:

March 16, 1810, 5 and 7 years, 4 U. S. Laws, p. 281.

November 3, 1814, 3 and 5 years, 4 U. S. Laws, p. 714.

February 22, 1815, 2 years, 4 U. S. Laws, p. 805.

April 11, 1818, 3 years, 1 sess., 15 Cong., p. 37.

February 9, 1821, 2 years, 2 sess., 16 Cong., p. 10.

March 1, 1823, 2 and 4 years, 2 sess., 17 Cong., p. 73.

May 20, 1826, 3 and 5 years, vol. 4 G. S., 189.

April 23, 1830, 2 years, vol. 4, G. S., 396.

March 31, 1832, 7 years, vol. 4, G. S., 500.

July 7, 1838, 2 years, vol. 5, G. S., 262.

August 19, 1841, 3 years, vol. 5, G. S., 449.

July 29, 1846, 2 years, vol. 9, G. S., p. 41.

July 5, 1848, 2 years, vol. 9, G. S., 245.

February 20, 1850, 2 years, vol. 9, G. S., 421.

May 27, 1880, 3 years, 2 sess., 46 Cong., p. 143.

Each of these Statutes, except the last, which is only one of construction, substantially re-enacted the proviso of 1807 before referred to.

The Act of March 16, 1810, 4 vol., L. U. S., p. 281, before referred to, re-enacted the proviso of March 2, 1807.

An Act of June 26, 1812, 4 vol., L. U. S., p. 455, provided for three commissioners on the part of the United States, to act with such commissioners as may be appointed by the State of Virginia to establish the westerly boundary line, or rather the line between the head waters of the Little Scioto and Little Miami Rivers.

The commissioners were to be at Xenia on the 5th of October next, and proceed to ascertain, survey, and distinctly mark, the boundary line. There had been a conflict as to the line up to that time, and the commissioners were to employ a surveyor. The act also provided that until the westwardly boundary line of the said reservation should be finally established, by the agreement and consent of the United States and the State of Virginia, the boundary line designated by an act of Congress passed on the twenty-third of March, 1804, should be considered and held as the proper boundary line.

The commissioners on behalf of the United States, ran a line from the source of the Little Miami to the source of the Scioto, and called it Robert's line. The commissioners appointed by Virginia refused to accede to this line, claiming a still larger tract of land, by running from the source of the Scioto a straight line to the mouth of the Little Miami. The line referred to, in an act of March 23, 1804, p. 133, is designated upon our maps as Ludlow's line. This line was run under the authority of the Surveyor General, by virtue of the act of May 10, 1800. The lands west were surveyed into sections and parts of sections. The territory between these lines, embracing a large tract of fertile land, was claimed both by purchase and location, and it became a matter of great importance to the parties, to have established by a judicial decision, the western boundary line of the reservation of Virginia. For this purpose a case was agreed and taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, on error. The cause was decided in 1824, and Robert's line was virtually established. See Doddridge, vs. Thompson, et al. 9 Wheaton 469.

The act of November 3, 1814, before referred to, contained the proviso of March 2, 1807. The same may be said of the Act of February 22, 1815 and the Act of April 11, 1818. The Act of February 9, 1821, and the Act of March 1, 1823, re-enacted the proviso of March 2, 1807.

An Act was passed May 26, 1824, 1 sess., 18 Cong., p. 121, authorizing the President to ascertain the number of acres, and, by appraisement or otherwise, the value thereof, exclusive of improvements, of all such lands, lying between Ludlow's and Robert's lines, in the State of Ohio, agreeable to the principles of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, and to ascertain on what terms the holders will relinquish the same to the United States, and that he report the facts at the commencement of the next session of Congress. The Act of May 20, 1826, above referred to, re-enacted the Proviso of March 2, 1807, but provided in addition that any locations on lands west of Ludlow's line should be void. The last Act extending the time for locations in the Virginia Military District was passed February 20, 1850, Vol. 9 U. S. Statutes, p. 421. This act closed the District to all locations, on the 31st day of December, 1851, and since that time the District has never been open to location.

The Act of August 31, 1852, U. S. Statutes, Vol. 10, p. 143, provided for the relief of an "unsatisfied outstanding warrant," not then located in the United States, in scrip; and this Act was to be deemed in full satisfaction of Virginia Military Land Warrants, and the State of Virginia was required by proper act of the Legislature to relinquish all claims to the lands of the Virginia Military District in the State of Ohio. This was done.

An Act passed December 19, 1854, Vol. 10 U. S. Statutes, p. 98, provided that soldiers who had made entries prior to the 1st of January, 1852, should have two years more to return their surveys and warrants to the General Land Office.

An Act passed March 3, 1855, U. S. Statutes, Vol. 10, p. 701, allowed officers and soldiers of Virginia on the Continental establishment who had made entries in the Virginia Military District, prior to the 1st of January, 1852, two years longer to make and return their surveys and warrants. This Act repealed the Act last referred to.

In 1871, it was supposed by Congress that there was a great quantity of unsurveyed land in the Virginia Military District, and it was commonly called "vacant land." It was supposed to be worthless, or nearly so, and the United States not desiring to be burdened further with it, and it being no longer locatable under the laws of Congress, the Hon. John T. Wilson, then a Representative of the 11th Congressional District, introduced an act into Congress to cede to the State of Ohio, unsold lands in the Virginia Military District. This Act was approved February 18, 1871, and provided "that lands remaining unsurveyed and unsold in the Virginia Military District in the State of Ohio, be, and the same are hereby ceded to the State of Ohio and saved to any bona fide settler, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, by him occupied, by his pre-empting the same in such manner as the State of Ohio might direct. This was conducted through the House by the Hon. John T. Wilson, through the Senate by Senator Thurman. It was supposed to be an innocent act; but it afterwards caused a great deal of trouble. At the time of the passage of this act, it was supposed that if any surveys had been made on these lands, the parties could obtain title and that the surveys would be recognized. That was not only the opinion of laymen in the Virginia Military District, but of lawyers as well. The word "unsold" used in the Act was an improper term, and it should have read "unlocated," as not a foot of land in the District was ever sold, but given away in military bounties.

The State of Ohio ceded this land by an act of the Legislature passed March 26, 1872, to the Trustees of the Ohio State University, and amended the grant on the 3rd of April, 1873, Vol. 70, Ohio Laws. The Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University accepted the grant and began to claim the surplus in the unpatented surveys. It developed that the later surveys in the wild and rough lands invariably contained a large surplus over the amount authorized by the warrant. Sometimes there was four times as much land in the survey as the warrant called for; but this fact could only be determined, by a re-survey of the land. The Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University began to survey unpatented surveys and ascertain the fact of surplus. They thereupon began to file caveats against the patents and against the holders of the surveys; and there arose a conflict between the holders of the unpatented surveys and the Ohio State University. The original locators, who were mostly deputy surveyors, had salved their consciences in the act of March 1, 1784, which required the deficiency in Kentucky and Tennessee to be laid off in good lands. They claimed that the locators in the valleys had got the good lands, and when they located in the hills, they having to take inferior lands, would take a great surplus to make the difference in value; but in returning their surveys the distances between the monuments and the calls were always such that when the contents of the surveys were computed, it would not show a surplus of over five per cent. For instance, a call would often be ten rods, when the real distance between the monuments was twenty rods.

The United States Congress was compelled to construe the act of February 18, 1871, and thereupon it passed the act of May 27, 1880, Vol. 21 U. S.

Laws, p. 142, in which it was recited that the act of February 18, 1871 had no reference to lands which were included in any survey or entry within said district, founded upon military warrants upon continental establishment, and that the true intention and meaning of said act was to cede to the State of Ohio lands not included in any surveys, surveyed or entered or founded upon a military warrant or warrants upon continental establishment. Section 2, provided that all surveys returned to the Land Office on or before March 3, 1857, on entries made before Jan. 1, 1852 on unsatisfied Virginia military continental warrants should be valid. Section 3, gave the officers and soldiers of the Virginia Military District, who had before Jan. 1, 1852, entered a tract within the Virginia Military District, three years from the passage of that act to return their surveys for record to the office of the principal surveyor of the district, and to make and file their surveys at the General Land Office. Section 4 of this act, provided that the act should not effect any land theretofore sold for a valuable consideration by the Board of Trustees of the State University on the authority of the act of February 18, 1871. This act by construction of the courts was considered ineffective.

But Congress was not satisfied, and on August 7, 1882, 22nd Vol. p. 348, passed a law to the effect that any person who had actual open possession in the Virginia Military District of the State of Ohio, under claim of title made in good faith based upon time and entry, of any tract of land within said district, and a record of which was made in the office of the principal surveyor of the Virginia Military District, prior to January 1, 1852, such possession having been continued for twenty years should be deemed to hold an absolute title. Section 2 of said act undertook to repeal so much of the act of February 18, 1871, granting unsold and unsurveyed lands to the State of Ohio, as conflicted with the act of May 27, 1880; but inasmuch as Congress had already granted all its title under the act of February 18, 1871, this act was ineffective and accomplished nothing.

The laymen and the lawyers of the district were entirely taken by surprise by the decision of the Circuit Court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, in the case of Fussel vs. Gregg. That decision was rendered by Judge Mathews, and while it turned out that it was upon the very best authority, the lawyers generally supposed, at that time, that it was to get rid of Jeremiah Hall, of Circleville, who had been in the habit of finding heirs in Virginia, obtaining assignments of their surveys and rights and securing patents, and as the legal title only began from the date of the patent, he would bring a suit in ejectment, never failing to recover in a case where he had obtained a patent in this manner. He astonished the owners of good lands who had been in possession for one hundred years and supposed they had perfect titles. It therefore became necessary to get rid of Jerry Hall and his operations, in the interest of the public. In this case of Fussel vs. Gregg, in the Circuit Court of the United States, the decision was pronounced by Justice Stanley Mathews, who held, that where the surveys had not been returned to the General Land Office, prior to December 31, 1851, they were utterly void, that the locator, or his assigns had forfeited all rights and had no claim as against the Government. That of course left the holders of the warrants to fall back on the scrip law of August 31, 1852, because their warrants were good but their surveys were bad. The decision of the Circuit Court put a quietus on Jerry Hall and his operations; but at the same time it also decided that all lands where the surveys had not been returned to the General Land Office prior to December 31, 1851, belonged to the United States, and passed from the United States to the State of Ohio under the act of February 18, 1871. The case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and was decided there on the 15th day of February, 1885. The case is reported as Fussel vs. Gregg, 113 U. S., 550. The decision came upon the people of the Virginia Military District in Ohio like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky.

The State University went into the Land Office business and undertook to recover all the lands which this decision of February 15 1885, gave it. Wherever the University brought a suit to recover in ejectment a survey which had not been returned to the General Land Office prior to January 1, 1852, it recovered in every instance. The people interested became alarmed, as there was a large quantity of unsurveyed lands in the District. Thereupon they appealed to the Legislature for relief, and on the 14th of March, 1889, that body passed what is known as the "Shinn Law." This act provided that holders of these unpatented surveys, who had occupied themselves, or those under whom they claimed had occupied them for more than twenty-one years, might make application to the Board of Trustees of the University, and obtain a deed on the payment of $2.00, and the State should pay the University $1.00 an acre for their lands. This act was passed on condition that the Board of Trustees of the University should accept it, which it did on the 20th of June, 1889, following.

The act of May 27th, 1880, before referred to, was construed by the Supreme Court of Ohio, in 1882, in the case of Coan vs. Flagg, 38 Ohio State, 156, and again in 1895, the Supreme Court of Ohio, in the case of the Board of Trustees vs. Cuppett, et al, 52 Ohio State, 577, and in Fussell vs. Gregg before mentioned. This decision also construed the act of February 18, 1871 and subsequent acts. This was a settlement of the entire controversy.

The manner of acquiring titles in the Virginia Military District was in substance as follows: A soldier in Virginia would proceed to his County Court armed by the certificate of his superior officer, to the effect that he had rendered the service authorizing the issue of the warrant. He would make proof of his service and identify himself before his County Court, which would issue him a certificate as to the extent of his military service. Armed with this he would proceed to the Virginia Land Office at Richmond, where he would obtain a warrant, authorizing him to locate the quantity of land named in the Virginia Military District. This warrant he would place in the hands of a Deputy Surveyor, who would take it to the Land Office and make an entry in the books of the office, that he proposed to locate so many acres on the warrant issued on account of the service of such a soldier. The Entry recited that he proposed to make the location near a certain survey, or upon a certain stream. After this entry he would proceed upon the land with a Deputy Surveyor, two chain-carriers, a marker and a surveyor's compass, and would make a survey. The Deputy Surveyor would make a written report of this survey, send it to the Virginia Military Land Office, which for a part of the time was at Louisville, Ky., and a part of the time was at Chillicothe, Ohio, where this survey would be recorded and afterwards it was forwarded to Washington with certain certificates by the Principal surveyor. If the papers reached Washington in proper form, a patent was issued.

There was usually a Deputy Surveyor in every county of the Virginia Military District. The first surveyor of the District was Gen. Richard Clough Anderson, who kept his office at Louisville, Ky., and located there as an agent of the Virginia soldiers. He died in October, 1826, and was succeeded by Allen Latham. It was not until the 24th of February, 1829, however, that any surveyor of the Virginia Military District had ever been authorized by law of Congress. On that date the Congress of the United States passed an act creating the office of the Surveyor of the Virginia Military District, and required him to keep his office at Chillicothe. He was authorized to receive all the books, records, etc., relating to the office from the personal representatives of Col. Richard Clough Anderson, deceased, and to take charge of them. The fact of the matter is that the books and papers of Col. Richard Clough Anderson used in locating surveys within the Virginia Military District were his private property. His personal representatives sold the books to Allen Latham, and Latham acted as surveyor, and he sold out his interest to Ebenezer Kendrick of Chillicothe, who was appointed surveyor under the act of February 24, 1829, and held the office until his death in 1885, when his son Samuel was appointed, and surveyed until his death in 1893.

The records of Kendrick's office were purchased by the United States for fifteen thousand dollars, ($15,000) and taken to Washington, D. C. and put in the General Land Office where they remain. This was done by an act approved March 3, 1899, being part of the Appropriation Bill of that date. The act further provided that all holders of outstanding unsatisfied Virginia military warrants should surrender them to the Secretary of the Interior within twelve months from the passage of the act for his action under the scrip law of August 31, 1852, and that all warrants not so presented within twelve months should be forever barred and held invalid.

The Deputy Surveyors in the District were Elias Langham, John O'Bannon, Arthur Fox, Nathaniel Massie, John Beasley, William Lytle, Cadwallader Wallace, Allen Latham, Robert Todd, Benjamin Hough, Joseph Riggs, E. P. Kendrick, James Taylor, Joseph Kerr, James Poage, John Ellison, Jr., John Barrett, William Robe, G. Vinsonhaler and others.

Gen. Richard Clough Anderson, referred to, was appointed principal surveyor of the District by a Board of Officers named in an act of the Virginia Legislature passed in October, 1783. He opened his office in Louisville, Ky., August 1, 1784, but the District was not opened by Congress until August 10, 1790. However, many surveys had been made before that time and returned. The first survey north of the Ohio river was made on the 13th day of November, 1784, in Indiana opposite the mouth of the Wabash river. It was for 1,000 acres on Warrant No. 2,219 and was numbered 5. Lipscomb Noel was marker, M. Oliver and I. Designer were chain carriers. It was dated, Louisville, Ky. The first survey in the Virginia Military District of Ohio, was No. 455 in Scioto county by John O'Bannon, Deputy Surveyor, November 16, 1787.

The first settlement in the Virginia Military District was made in the winter of 1790, at Manchester which was then called Massie's Station. At that time in making surveys, the Deputy Surveyor usually had three assistants. Each Deputy Surveyor was accompanied by six men, which made a mess of seven, and four surveying parties would keep together making the whole party amount to twenty-eight persons. Every man had his prescribed duty to perform. Their operations were conducted in this manner: In front went the hunter, who kept in advance of the surveyor two or three hundred yards, looking for game and prepared to give notice should any danger from Indians threaten. Then followed, after the surveyor, the two chainmen, marker, and pack-horse man with the baggage, who always kept near each other, to be prepared for defense in case of an attack. Lastly, two or three hundred yards in the rear, came a man, called a spy, whose duty it was to keep on the back trail and look out, lest the party in advance might be pursued and attacked by surprise. Each man, the surveyor not excepted, carried his rifle, his blanket, and such other articles as he might stand in need of. On the pack-horse were carried the cooking utensils and such provisions as could be most conveniently taken. Nothing like bread was thought of. Some salt was taken, to be used sparingly. For subsistence, they depended on the game which the woods afforded, procured by their unerring rifles. When night came, the four parties came together and four fires were made for cooking, that is, one for each mess. Around these fires, till sleeping time arrived, the company spent their time in social glee, singing songs and telling stories. When resting time arrived, the chief surveyor would give the signal, and the whole party would leave their comfortable fires, and carrying with them their blankets, their firearms, and their little baggage, walk in perfect silence to two or three hundred yards from their fires. They would then scrape away the snow, and huddle down together for the night. Each mess formed one bed; they would spread down on the ground one-half of the blankets, reserving the other half for covering. They kept their rifles in their arms, and their pouches under their heads for pillows; lying, "spoon fashion," with three heads one way and four the other. When one turned the whole mess turned, or else the close range would be broken, and the cold let in. In this way they lay till broad daylight, no noise and scarcely a whisper being uttered during the night. When it was perfectly light, the chief surveyor would call up two of the men in whom he had the most confidence and send them to reconnoiter, and make a circuit around the fires, lest an ambuscade might be formed by the Indians to destroy the party as they returned to the fires.

In all surveys made between the Spring of 1791 and Wayne's victory in 1794, the surveyor took his life in his hand, and expected the crack of an Indian rifle at any time. There was one large survey two miles south of Locust Grove in Adams county, Ohio, which was made during the Indian War in February, 1793. In the early history of the Virginia Military District there was a great deal of litigation, owing to conflicting surveys, and much legal learning has been accumulated in the Reports, on the doctrine of conflicting titles in the Virginia Military District. Of the lawyers who were prominent in this litigation, there were Vachel Worthington, Sr., of Cincinnati; Allen G. Thurman, of Chillicothe and Columbus; James H. Thompson, of Hillsboro, O.; Benjamin Leonard, of Chillicothe; Edward P. Evans, of Adams county; Hocking H. Hunter of Franklin county, and Henry Fulson Page, of Circleville, Ohio; but the litigation as to conflicting grants in the Virginia Military District have simply become history, as all the lines have been settled.

General Richard Clough Anderson,

Principal Surveyor of the Virginia lands to pay the Continental troops, was born upon his father's estate of "Goldmine," Hanover county, Virginia, January 12, 1750, and died at his country place "Soldier's Retreat," near Louisville, Kentucky, October 6, 1826. Upon the 26th day of January, 1776, he was appointed Captain of the Hanover county Company in the Fifth Virginia Regiment of the Continental Line. In this capacity he took a prominent part in the battle of Trenton, for it was his attack upon the outposts on the night before the general engagement, a movement ordered by General Stephan in direct opposition to General Washington's commands, that led the Hessians to believe they had repulsed the threatened assault and led them to be careless in their watch. Captain Anderson was wounded severely in the engagement at Trenton bridge, which closely followed the battle of Trenton, and General Arthur St. Clair told Judge Yapple that his conduct in this campaign won for Captain Anderson the respect and friendship of General Washington. Captain Anderson served with the Fifth Virginia in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. On the 10th day of February, 1778, he was promoted to be Major of the First Virginia Continental Line. With this command he took part in the battle of Monmouth.

Major Anderson accompanied the Count D'Estaing in the attempt to reduce Savannah and he was severely wounded in the shoulder, during the assault, by a sword thrust from "his friend the enemy" Captain James of the British service, James having been formerly on terms of intimacy with Anderson. Major Anderson was surrendered at Charleston when serving with Scott's brigade, and for nine months suffered many privations, as a prisoner of war. Upon his release he joined General Morgan, and was with him on his retreat through the Carolinas. Upon his arrival at Richmond, he found an order directing him to report to General, the Marquis de Lafayette, as it was supposed that Major Anderson's intimate knowledge of the country would prove of assistance to the Marquis in determining his movements. Major Anderson served for six months on the staff of the Marquis de Lafayette, and then as Lieutenant Colonel of the Sixth Virginia Continental Line and Brigadier General of Virginia Militia, he was directed to report to Governor Nelson of Virginia. There are letters from the Marquis de Lafayette and others in the Cincinnati Art Museum showing the high opinion the Marquis had for the subject of this sketch.

In October, 1783, the Legislature of Virginia passed a law appointing Major Generals Peter Muhlenberg, Charles Scott and George Weden, Brigadier Generals, Daniel Morgan and James Wood, Colonel William Heft, Lieutenant Colonels Stowles, Hopkins, Clarke, Temples and Captains Nathaniel Burwell and Mayo Carrington, a commission to appoint a Surveyor for the Virginia Military District. They appointed Colonel Richard Clough Anderson, and it was under this law that he acted in such office until his death.

The office of the Surveyor of the Virginia Military District was opened July 20, 1784, at the falls of the Ohio, now the City of Louisville. Colonel Anderson was then a pioneer, and with General George Rogers Clarke and other such spirits he did much to open up the Western country. In 1787, Colonel Anderson married a sister of General George Rogers Clarke, and the next year he built a log house ten miles from the falls, and with his wife, a babe, and some negro servants, moved into the wilderness. Here Colonel Anderson could gratify his taste for the chase, but the most fearless would hardly consider "Soldier's Retreat" a very safe refuge. His nearest neighbors, at Linn's Station, were five miles away, and in another direction, but a little further removed, lived Captain Chenoweth. No record has been left of the heedless travelers who fell victims to the murderous redmen of this region, but so wary a backwoodsman as Colonel Linn was killed by a wandering party of Indians within half a mile of Colonel Anderson's house, and the Chenoweth Massacre is one of the noted horrors of those early Kentucky days.

On the 16th day of October, 1826, after a painful illness, borne with characteristic fortitude, Colonel Anderson gave up his life, which, though passed in unceasing labor, and amidst great and constant perils, must be held to have been a happy one. He was at an early age inured to the hardships that the soldier and the pioneer must undergo, and he found pleasure in the excitements of the camp and of the border. Although he never held a political office, his career was a public one, and he was thoroughly respected. He lived long enough to see his children exhibit characters which promised to reflect credit upon him.

He had six sons: Richard twice represented his district in the National Congress, was Minister to the United States of Columbia, and died, greatly regretted, at Cartagena, on his way to the Congress at Panama, as Commissioner; Larz Anderson, of Cincinnati, a scholar and the conscientious steward of his large fortune; General Robert Anderson of Fort Sumpter; William Marshall Anderson, one of the first to cross the Rocky Mountains, and who, when three score years of age, made a scientific journey through Mexico; John Anderson of Chillicothe, and Charles Anderson, who at the risk of his life, made the speech before the secession meeting at San Antonio, in 1861, in favor of sustaining the Union. The five last named children were from a second marriage with Sarah Marshall daughter of William Marshall, of Caroline county, Virginia, a niece of the first wife.

Allen Latham

was born in Lyme, New Hampshire, in March, 1793. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1813 and came to Ohio and was admitted to the bar at New Philadelphia. He then removed to the old State Capitol, Chillicothe, in 1815. He was married to Maria W. Anderson, daughter of Colonel Richard C. Anderson. They had one son who died at the age of twelve years. Allen Latham was the Surveyor of the Virginia Military District from 1826 to 1838 as the representative of Col. Anderson. He was always a democrat. He represented Ross, Pike, Jackson and Hocking counties from 1841 to 1843 in the State Senate. In 1838, he was defeated for Congress by 138 votes. He removed to Cincinnati in 1854 to help out a nephew who was engaged in operating an omnibus line and remained there until his death. He died March 28, 1871.

William Marshall Anderson

was the son of General Richard Clough Anderson. He was born in Jefferson county, Kentucky, in 1807. He was a graduate of Transylvania University in Kentucky. He studied law but never practiced it. When his father died in 1826, he assisted in the Surveyor's office of the Virginia Military District, though it was controlled by Allen Latham as one of the personal representatives of Colonel Richard Clough Anderson, from 1826 to 1838. In 1834, he went overland to Salt Lake and returned. He accompanied a party of trappers. On October 12, 1838 he was temporarily appointed Surveyor of the Virginia Military District in Ohio and permanently appointed January 21, 1839. He served until January, 1848, when he was succeeded by Eleazer P. Kendrick. In 1838, he married Eliza, daughter of Gen. Duncan McArthur and made his home near Chillicothe and later in Pickaway county, where he died in 1881. He was a student all his life. He was an archaeologist and an explorer. In his old age, he made a trip through Mexico to study Aztec antiquities. He at one time owned the "Raven Rock" farm below Portsmouth, now owned by William B. Grice.

Eleazer Porter Kendrick was born in Hanover, New Hampshire, September 16, 1790, the youngest of six brothers. He attended Moore's school at Hanover afterwards Dartmouth College. At eighteen he began teaching school and kept it up three months. What he did from 1808 till 1818 is not reported to us. In the latter year he taught a school in Troy, New York. In 1819, he came to Ohio, at the instance of Allen Latham, an old schoolmate. He opened a shoe store in Chillicothe, but closed it in 1821. He became a Deputy Surveyor under Allen Latham, from 1826 to 1838, and a dealer in Virginia Military Lands and assisted him in the Surveyor's office from time to time until 1847, when he purchased the books and papers of the Anderson estate and on June 14, 1847, was made Surveyor of the Virginia Military District. He held that office until his death, although for the last fifteen years of his life, the duties of the office were discharged by his son, Samuel.

He was a democrat all of his days. He was postmaster at Chillicothe, Ohio, from 1829 to 1841. He was Surveyor of Ross county in 1828, for one term. Allen G. Thurman was a clerk in the Chillicothe postoffice under him, as was Daniel Gregg. He was a communicant and vestryman of St. Paul's P. E. church of Chillicothe. He was senior warden of the church many years. He was president of the Ohio Insurance Company and at one time a director of the Ross County Bank. He was a Mason and a Knight Templar, but demitted long before his death. The last twenty years of his life he spent at his country home on the Milford and Chillicothe turnpike, near Chillicothe, Ohio. He enjoyed the confidence of the public all his life.

He was married in Chillicothe, Ohio, March 20, 1821, to Miss Mary Cissna Beard, who died September 4, 1870. They had seven children, three sons and four daughters. Their son, Andrew D., well known in the Virginia Military District, was born December 31, 1821, and died May 19, 1857. Their son, Samuel, succeeded his father in the office. Mr. Kendrick died April 30, 1885.

Sam Kendrick

the last Principal Surveyor of the Virginia Military District, was born at Chillicothe on December 31, 1829. The sketch of his father, Eleazer Porter Kendrick, precedes this.

Sam Kendrick attended school for a while at Gambier, Ohio, and then studied civil engineering with his father at Chillicothe, and rapidly acquired proficiency in his profession. He was one of the corps of engineers who located the old Cincinnati & Belpre railroad in the early fifties, and while so engaged he met and married, on April 25, 1852, Miss Eliza Wilson, at New Vienna, Ohio.

After his marriage he moved with his wife to Iowa and lived there about five years, and then returned to Chillicothe, where he found employment as Deputy Auditor, under his father, who had meanwhile been elected Auditor of Ross county. In March, 1863, he succeeded his father as Auditor for one term, but was elected to the office again in the fall of 1866, and served as Auditor of Ross county continually until 1871.

Meanwhile his father had made over to him all of the books and papers relating to the records of the lands of the Virginia Military District in Ohio; which records and papers had been held by the courts to be the private property of the Principal Surveyor. After leaving the Auditor's office, Mr. Kendrick devoted himself largely to matters relating to business growing out of the land titles in the Military District; and finally offered to sell the records of his office, first to the State of Ohio, and then to the United States government. It was while in Washington upon the latter business that he died suddenly on January 4, 1893.

Mr. Kendrick was a large man, and in the latter years of his life grew to be somewhat unwieldy in size. He was a man of keen wit, and kindly humor, a genial companion and an entertaining talker. He was fond of all the good things of life, not omitting the intellectual. He was a great reader, a man of strong and retentive memory and thus acquired a large fund of information. He was a man of courteous and popular manners, and very popular as a political leader in Ross county, where he was a long while a prominent member of the Democratic party. His wife and seven children survived him, five sons and two daughters, viz:—Thomas, Sam, Charles, Albert and Robert; Anna, married to John M. Reed; and Fannie.

He was a prominent member of the Masonic orders, and by them his funeral was conducted and his remains interred in beautiful "Grandview" cemetery at Chillicothe.

CONGRESSIONAL LANDS OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

The present system of survey of the public lands was inaugurated by a committee appointed by the Continental Congress consisting of the following delegates: Thomas Jefferson, chairman, Virginia; Hugh Williamson, North Carolina; David Howell, Rhode Island; Elbridge Gerry, Massachusetts; Jacob Real, South Carolina. On the 7th day of May, 1784, the committee reported "An ordinance for ascertaining the mode of locating and disposing of lands in the western territory and for other purposes therein mentioned." This ordinance required the public lands to be divided into "hundreds" of ten geographical miles square and those again to be sub-divided into lots one mile square each to be numbered from 1 to 100 commencing in the northwestern corner and continuing from west to east and from east to west consecutively. This ordinance was considered, debated and amended, and reported to Congress April 26, 1785.

It required the surveyors to divide the said territory into townships of seven miles square by lines running due north and south and others crossing these at right angles. These were to be sub-divided into sections of one mile square or 640 acres and numbered from 1 to 49. This is the first record of the rise of the terms "township" and "section." May 3, 1785, on motion of William Grayson and seconded by James Monroe, this ordinance was amended by making the township "six miles square," but left the number from 1 to 49. An amendment on May 6, 1785, to change the numbers so that a township should contain 36 sections was defeated, but, on May 20, 1785, this ordinance was finally passed providing for townships six miles square containing 36 sections, one mile square. The act of May 18, 1796, amended said ordinance by beginning with number 1 in the northeast section and proceeding west and east alternately through the township with progressive numbers until the thirty-sixth be completed and is the southeast section of said townships. An ordinance for ascertaining the mode of disposing of land in the Western territory, passed May 20, 1785, directs the manner of surveying the territory ceded by individual states.

The surveys of the government lands were commenced in July, 1786, under the management of Thomas Hutchins, the geographer of the United States, who continued in said office until his death in April, 1789, after which the entire management of the surveys devolved upon the Board of the Treasury until the Act of Congress approved May 18, 1796, provided for the appointment of a Surveyor General and directed the survey of the lands northwest of the Ohio river and above the mouth of the Kentucky river. In 1799, the surveys were again placed in charge of a special officer with the title of Surveyor General, according to the above ordinance, and General Rufus Putnam, of Marietta, Ohio, was appointed to this office, which he held until the State of Ohio was admitted into the Union. In 1803, he was succeeded by Jared Mansfield of the United States Military Engineers. But the credit for the present system of surveying the public lands into ranges, townships and sections is due to Hutchins who conceived the idea in 1764.

The first surveys of the Congressional lands in Scioto county was made under the Act of May 18, 1796, which provided that the land not already surveyed should be divided into townships, six miles square, by north and south lines run by the true meridian and six miles apart, called range lines and by parallels or township lines run east and west every six miles, connecting said range lines, making said townships six miles each way. The ranges are six miles wide and are numbered from east to west, from one upward, beginning with No. 1 bordering on the west side of the state line between Ohio and Pennsylvania and increasing westward, while the townships are numbered from one upward, beginning on the Ohio river as a base line and numbering northward consecutively to the south line of the United States Military land whose southwest corner is near Marble Cliff on the Scioto river in Franklin county, northwest of Columbus.

Under this Act one half of the townships surveyed were to be sub-divided into sections, by running through the same, each way, parallel lines at the end of every two miles, and by making a corner on each of said lines at the end of every mile," and it further provided that "the sections shall be numbered respectively, beginning with number one in the northeast and proceeding west and east alternately, through the township, with progressive numbers till the thirty-sixth be completed which will be the one in the southeast corner of said township." This method of numbering sections is still in use, although there have been some improvements adopted in the field work in establishing the meridians and parallels and in sub-dividing the interior of said townships into sections. The intention of the law was to sub-divide the interior of said townships into two mile blocks by running parallel lines north and south and east and west at every two miles from one township line to the other, also from one range line to the other making straight lines clear through the township, but from the topographical records left by those surveyors it appears that they were not so sub-divided, but that each two mile block was surveyed separately.

The Congressional lines within Scioto county lie in ranges 18 to 22 inclusive, and townships 1 to 5, inclusive. The survey of these lands into two mile blocks according to the above act of Congress, was made during the year 1799, by Elias Langham, except perhaps, the eastern part of Madison township, which was surveyed by Levi Whipple. The Act of Congress of February 11, 1805, provided that the townships surveyed and divided into two mile blocks according to the Act of May 18, 1796, should be further sub-divided and that the sub-division into sections, as provided for by said Act of 1796, be made by running straight lines from the mile corners, previously marked, to the opposite corresponding corners, and by marking on each of said lines, intermediate corners, as nearly as possible, equidistant from those two corners that stand on the same line, and in this way, by actual survey, divide the township into sections and quarter sections and mark the half and quarter section corners. The point where these two lines, crossing said two mile blocks at right angles, intersect, will be the true corner to the four sections within said two mile blocks. The sub-division of the lands in Scioto county under the Act of February 11, 1805, was made by James Denny in the year 1805.

The following diagram will clearly illustrate how the land was surveyed and sub-divided under the two acts above referred to. The heavy lines and corners are the boundaries of the two mile blocks as surveyed by Elias Langham, and the finer lines are those surveyed and established by James Denny.

The accompanying diagram will clearly illustrate how the land was surveyed and subdivided under the two acts above referred to. The heavy lines are the boundaries of the two-mile blocks as surveyed by Elias Langham, and the finer lines are those surveyed and established by James Denny.

This will also illustrate the method of numbering the sections within each township.

There is in Scioto county the townships of Bloom, Clay, Harrison, Jefferson, Madison, Porter, Valley, Vernon and Wayne, all of which are composed entirely of Congressional lands as surveyed under the two Acts of Congress noted above.

The Congressional lands in Scioto county were surveyed and sold under the provisions of the Act of May 18, 1796 entitled, "An Act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States in the Territory northwest of the river Ohio, and above the mouth of the Kentucky river." This Act will be found in Vol. 1, page 464 of the General Statutes of the United States. They were to be sold at Pittsburg. The minimum price was two dollars per acre. One twentieth of the purchase money was to be deposited at the time of the sale, one half of the amount was to be paid in thirty days and the remainder in one year. Cash buyers were given a deduction of ten per cent. By the Act of May 10, 1800, Vol. 2 General Statutes, p. 73, a land office was established at

1214 PIONEER RECORD OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

Chillicothe, Ohio, on May 1, 1801. Under this Act the minimum price was $2.00 per acre. One twentieth of the purchase was to be paid down, one half in forty days, one fourth in two years, one fourth in three years and one fourth in four years from sale. Interest at six per cent was to be paid on the deferred payments. The mode of surveying these lands was further regulated by the Act of February 11, 1805, Vol. 2, p. 313, United States Statutes at Large.

The following table will give a synopsis of the original quantities as well as what part of the original or Congressional townships are now contained in each political division, called townships.

INDIAN TRAILS, TOWNS, CAMPS AND PIONEER TRACES IN THE VIRGINIA MILITARY DISTRICT IN SOUTHWESTERN OHIO.

Allen Latham was the son-in-law of General Richard Clough Anderson and when the latter died in October, 1826, came into the custody of all the papers, records, and documents, which the General held relating to the office of Surveyor of the Virginia Military District, which he had held from October, 1783, until his death. Latham had the custody of these books and documents from 1826 to 1838 in which time he made copies of them all and when he surrendered the office and the original books he held on to his copies. These descended through different hands until they reached Daniel Gregg; from him they passed to Dr. Richard G. Lewis, who still holds them.

It occurred to Dr. Lewis to make a map of the Indian Trails, Towns, and Camps and the Pioneer Traces and he called to his assistance Mr. Walter M.

Dawley, C. E. With Mr. Latham's records and papers and from original notes, surveys, and letters of General Nathaniel Massie, William Lyle, John O'Bannon, Duncan McArthur, and Israel Ludlow, he made the map of Indian Trails and Towns herein. The documents used were made between 1785 and 1825. Messrs. Lewis and Dawley used local histories, Howe, Atwater, Scott, Finley, and the lives of Boone, Wetzel, Kenton, Logan, Blue Jacket, Tecumseh, etc. The original map was much larger than the one published herein, and covered the entire northern portion of the state. Messrs. Lewis and Dawley very kindly consented to the publication of a part of their map in this work. To any one reading up the history of the Indian occupation, of the same part of the country, and of the first operations of white men in the same territory, the map is invaluable, as a reference.

The Pioneer Traces, Deer Licks, Bear Wallows and Indian Trails were all referred to in the first Surveys and in this manner were readily traced and verified. For example, Todd's Trace and Todd's War Road were both made in June, 1787. Every Survey made between 1787 and 1797, through which the trace or War Road passed, called for them.

The Indian Trails or paths followed the tops of the dry ridges as much as possible. This was for several reasons. It was the driest ground, and left the least trace of those who passed. It was the most open part of the forest and was free of vines and fallen timber. From the tops of the hills the Indians could observe the smoke of other encampments. The Indians cared nothing for going up and down hill. On the other hand, the Pioneer traces were made along the valleys because the pioneers went horse back, had pack horses, and when after Indians, had flankers out on the adjoining hills. Some of the principal roads in the State, follow and are laid upon the Pioneer traces, which were cleared of timber about four feet wide.

Messrs. Lewis and Dawley in searching for the commencement of the land titles in south-western Ohio, were struck by the numerous references, in the entries and surveys to events, monuments, places and persons connected with the Indian occupation of the country. The reference to Indian towns, villages, camps, cabins, traces, war roads, hunting paths, licks, forts, and battlefields were frequent. From these, the gentlemen passed to history, tale and legend. From the sources named, Messrs. Lewis and Dawley have made the first map of south-western Ohio, of the time they sought to cover.

The Shawnees, Miamis, Delawares, Mingoes, Wyandots, Eries, and Ottawas had towns and villages in southwestern Ohio. There were fragments of other tribes. In contest with the whites, the Shawnees, the Wyandots and the Mingoes were aggressors. The Delawares, Miamis, and Eries were not so hostile, but were sometimes forced to hostility to the Americans, by the French or British. The Shawnees were the most frequently on the war path, while the Wyandots were the best warriors and the Mingoes were the most predatory.

It was not till 1749 that the Colonies of Virginia and Pennsylvania undertook to enter the territory represented on the map. Then the Governors of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia united in clearing a trail for their traders from the forks of the Ohio, nearly due west, crossing the Muskingum and the Scioto to Pickawillany (just north of Piqua) and on toward the Wabash Country of Indiana. The same year French expeditions went from Lake Erie down the Ohio, stopping to plant metal plates at the mouths of the larger tributaries of the Ohio, claiming the territory for the French King. The Zanes and others settled at Wheeling in 1770 and two years later witnessed a flood in the Ohio, equal to the great flood of 1884. Settlements were made in Kentucky about the same time by Boone, Harrod, Bullitt, Taylor and other fearless pioneers. But it was not till after Wayne's Victory in 1794, that the land north-west of the Ohio, began to be settled rapidly. Boone, Kenton, Wetzel, the Poes, McDONALD, the McIntyres, Bowman, Downing and other scouts and hunters, on their expeditions, or during their captivities, saw more and more of the rich Ohio lands and spoke of them wherever they went.

The valleys and plains of the two Miamis afforded good trails from Detroit and the north to the mouth of the Licking river. Each expedition, or hunting party, traveled where it saw best, yet there were certain valleys that were natural pathways, and some of these trails were so much used as to be visible through the forest. The settlements or towns and camps in the north-west, owing to French influence, were more permanent than those in south-western Ohio, which were debatable grounds between the Indians on the north and the Kentuckians south of the Ohio. Logan, Blue Jacket, Tecumseh, Pluggy, Tarke and others located at different points in different years. It was easier to move the cabins and settlements to the game than to carry the game to the towns. Though an Indian town had cleared cornfields and orchards, they would abandon them at any time for better hunting grounds.

The expeditions, raids, and marches are too numerous to mention here. The last and greatest was that of General Anthony Wayne, in 1793, cutting a clear road north from Fort Washington to Fort Jefferson, or in modern terms, from Cincinnati to Greenville, in Darke county. The treaty of Greenville in 1795, did away with the Indian paths and trails, the hunting and war roads, and opened the north-west territory for full settlement.

The Indian paths and trails passed out with the Indians. White men could not and would not use them but the pioneer traces and expeditionary roads are now covered by public highways and paralleled by railroads and trolley lines. The Pioneer trail was the fore runner of the state and county road.

THE GOVERNOR LUCAS MANSION

stands two miles east of Piketon on the Jackson road, in the Beaver valley. The house was built in 1824 and is of brick, hard-burned. The original roof has been removed and it now has a metal roof. The character of the original roof was not ascertained, but was supposed to have been of shingles. The house is of two stories. It faces the south and as one stands in front of it, the west room is the parlor; the hall is in the center and the east room is the sitting room. There is a wing to the north from the east room, two stories high. Next to the roof, there is a water-table. The bricks are projected and set on their corners for three courses.

The windows below have 24 panes; the caps of the windows are of stone, worked with a hammer and chisel. The caps over the parlor or west room project; none of the rest do, but are even with the wall. The front door has panels on the side and in the center, and over the door is a stone, on which is cut the words, "Virtue, Liberty, and Independence." Below the "Liberty" in the center is a five-pointed star; in addition, there are the words "R. Lucas, 1824" under the motto. The floor of the hall and all the floors are of broad oak boards. The stair-way in the hall has two platforms. The parlor has no windows in the end down stairs, but there is a large fireplace with old fashioned cupboards or closets on each side. The walls are 18 inches thick. The foundation is of dressed stone. There is no cellar under the main house, but under the wing, there is a full cellar. The parlor has two front windows and a door leading to a porch in the rear opposite the front windows. The rooms in the main part are about 18 feet square and the ceilings are about 9 feet high.

The sitting room to the east has a double chimney; one fire-place is in the sitting room and one in the room in the rear of it, which may have been used for a bed-chamber. To the right of the chimney in the sitting room is a quaint cupboard reaching from the floor to the ceiling. It has glass doors with six panes of glass in each door. The sitting room has two windows to the east and two to the south. To the left of the fire-place in this room, the door opens into another chamber. Going into that chamber there is one window to the east and a large fire-place with a capacious closet to the left of it. All of the rooms have chair-boards about three feet from the floor, and old fashioned wash-boards above the floors everywhere. North of the chamber and in the rear of the sitting room is a large kitchen. It has a door and a window on each side and the fire-place is the feature of it. The latter is 6 feet wide and 4 feet high. To the right or left, on either side, is an immense closet or cupboard.

Passing out of the large kitchen to the west, there is a two-story porch, open below and weather-boarded above which was built with the house. It is west of the wing and north of the parlor and hall. There is a stair-way in the corner of this porch and the sole use of this stairway was to afford an entrance and passage to the upper chambers in the wing. The upper porch was weather-boarded only on the out-side and had suitable windows. In fact, the only entrance to the upper chambers in the north wing was from this porch.

Each chamber upstairs (there were four of them) had an old fashioned fire-place, but not as large as those down stairs. The doors had from six to eight panels and had old fashioned locks but not a transom in the house. The porch below was originally floored with oak, but is now floored with flagging. A modern addition has been built to the north of the parlor, a wood frame, one story. The timbers forming the porch are all hewed, those sustaining the upper floor of the porch are exposed below, and they are in as good condition as when they were set in place. When this Mansion was finished in 1824, it was undoubtedly the best, finest and most expensive in southern Ohio, and here it was that Governor Lucas entertained his friends in great state. The farm of 437 acres, on which the house was located, is now owned by Peter Vallery, who resides in it with a numerous family.

THE ARCADIAN MINERAL SPRINGS.

These celebrated Springs are situated nineteen miles north from the Ohio river, and four miles south from Mineral Springs station on the Cincinnati, Portsmouth & Virginia Railroad, in a delightful valley, surrounded by scenery the most picturesque and beautiful to be imagined.

The chemical analysis of these waters show them to be very highly charged with gas, and to contain 205.35 grains of solids to the gallon. These are composed of chloride of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of lime, chloride of calcium, chloride of sodium, oxide of iron and iodine.

For the benefit of those seeking the curative properties of this water as well as rest there is a large and commodious hotel with hot and cold baths, and numerous rustic cottages for the accommodation of guests. These Springs afford a sequestered retreat to those seeking respite from the cares of business, or in need of the influence of mountain scenery and climate. The buildings are located with a view to the health and comfort of visitors, at the base of Peach Mountain or "Greasy Hill," which casts a shadow over them at four o'clock in the evening, making the nights cool and pleasant, so that when it is too warm to sleep elsewhere, the tired and careworn can enjoy a refreshing night's rest at this resort.

There is a beautiful chapel on the grounds for the church-going guests, and a commodious amusement hall for the entertainment of those seeking diversion in bowling, billiards, dancing and such recreation.

There are telegraph and telephone connections with the hotel. The present proprietor, S. R. Grimes, a scion of one of the pioneer families of Adams county, is a most affable and accommodating host.

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

WILLIAM DEVER of Amherst county, Virginia, was born in 1763 in Maryland. He enlisted November, 1780, in Lt. Eades' Company for three months. March 1, 1781, he enlisted for four months in Capt. James Dillard's Company, Col. Washington. In June, 1781, he enlisted for three months in Capt. John Lovering's Company. At the expiration of this service he served two months in Captain Montgomery's Company. He was engaged in the siege of Yorktown. At his first enlistment he was an apprentice and ran away from his master to enlist. He applied for pension October 19, 1832, from Buncombe county, North Carolina. His daughter Hannah married William McNelly and their son, John Calvin McNelly, who has a sketch herein, resides near Pinkerman, this county.

JESSE EDWARDS was born April 3, 1754, in the state of Maryland. He enlisted as a soldier of the Revolutionary war, May, 1776, for two months, as a private of Captain William McCalla's Company; Colonel not stated. He enlisted from the state of Pennsylvania and re-enlisted from the same state, July, 1776, for six months, as a private in Captain Thomas Craig's company, Col. Nathaniel Baxter. He enlisted a third time from the state of Virginia,

July 17, 1781, for two months as a private of Captain Beaver's company; Colonel not stated. He was engaged in the battles of Staten Island and Fort Washington, at the latter of which places he was made a prisoner. At the time of his first enlistment, he was a resident of Bucks county, Pa., and at the time of his enlistment, a resident of Loudon county, Va. He applied for a pension October 25, 1832, and at that time resided in Jefferson township, Adams county, Ohio, being at the age of seventy-six years. He obtained a land warrant and exchanged it for land near New York city, which he leased for ninety-nine years. After the Revolution he first came to Kentucky and married a widow by the name of Skilman. She was a slaveholder and they separated and were divorced. He then came to Adams county and married a Miss Beaman. He settled on Scioto Brush creek on the site of the village of Rarden in Adams county, but a re-survey of the county put the place in Scioto county. He reared a large family and his wife died in 1840 at Isma Freeman's near Otway. From that time until his death he made his home with John Edwards, a grandson. His death occurred the second day of November, 1856, at the great age of 101 years, 7 months and 29 days. His descendants made an effort to recover his New York property, but failed on account of being unable to establish their identity.

WILLIAM FORREST, 3d, enlisted in Captain Jeremiah Clough's Company May 27, 1775 for 2 months and 10 days. He was promised a regimental coat but as it was never furnished, he received four dollars instead. In August, 1775, Washington conceived the idea of sending a force to capture Quebec. They were to ascend the Kennebec; go through the woods of Maine to the Chaudiere river and St. Lawrence; then sail down to Quebec. William Forrest 3d, was one of the 1,100 men selected from Poor's and Stark's regiments and sailed September 19, with rations for forty-five days. Benedict Arnold led the expedition. He did not return with the three discouraged Companies who left Arnold October 27th. The rest pushed on and reached Quebec, November 8, 1775. On his return he took part in the battles of Bennington and Stillwater and was discharged September 27, 1777 after the first battle. He re-enlisted in Captain Giles' regiment June 12, 1778 and was discharged at Rhode Island January 6, 1779 but re-enlisted under Captain Giles June 23, 1779. He served through the entire war as a private and without disability. After the close of the war, he received a commission, as he is called in the town records, Ensign, also Lieutenant William Forrest of the State Militia.

He was an ancestor of Mrs. Bessie Hall Titus.

JOHN HAMBLETON was First Lieutenant 13th Virginia, November 16, 1776; regiment designated 9th Virginia September 14, 1778; resigned November 23, 1778. He was an ancestor of Mrs. George O. Newman.

BENJAMIN HOVEY, Sutton, Mass. (late) Capt. Arthur Dugget's (Sutton) Company of Minute men, Colonel Larned's regiment, which marched on the alarm of April 19, 1775. Service 18 days. Roll dated Roxbury Camp.

Also Capt. Bartholomew Woodbury's Company, Colonel Larned's regiment, return for billeting to and from camp; Company marched from Sutton, Douglass and Northbridge, December 9, 1775.

Also Capt. John Towne's Company, Colonel Jonathan Holman's regiment, service 5 days. Roll dated, Providence, January 20, 1777. Sworn to in Worcester county and endorsed on alarm to Rhode Island in December, 1776.

Also Capt. Jeremiah Kingsbery's Company, Colonel Jonathan Holman's regiment. Service 16 days. Mileage to and from camp 80 miles allowed. Roll dated Providence, January 20, 1777. Sworn to in Worcester county, and endorsed "alarm roll."

This Benjamin Hovey was the father of Ruth (Hovey) Tracy, wife of Hon. Uri Tracy of Oxford, New York, the latter being the parents of Samuel Miles Tracy and Charles Oscar Tracy of Portsmouth, Ohio, and of Uri Tracy, Jr. of Oxford, New York. The last named being the father of Charles Packer Tracy and Henry Read Tracy of Portsmouth and of John Bailey Tracy, late Treasurer of Scioto county.

JACOB HURD was in Captain Joshua Hayward's Company which was embodied in Colonel Jonathan Chase's regiment September, 1777. He was the grandfather of Mrs. J. M. G. Smith.

WILLIAM MOORE (VA.) ws a Sergeant in the 3rd Virginia in 1776; Ensign 3d Virginia August 15, 1777; Second Lieutenant October 28, 1777; First Lieutenant ——— 1780, and served to ———. He was an ancestor of Mrs. George O. Newman.

CAPTAIN JAMES MUNN enlisted in 1776 under Col. Shyrook in a Maryland regiment for six months. He was with Washington in the Trenton Campaign, and in the capture of the Hessians. He was so disabled in this campaign that he did not enter the service again until 1778 when he was adjutant of a Pennsylvania Regiment commanded by Col. Griffiths. for one year. In 1779, he served for six weeks as adjutant of Col. Broadhead's Pennsylvania Regiment. In 1781, he served for two and one-half months as a Captain of a Company and in 1782, he served as a Captain for twenty-three days, in Col. Crawford's defeat and was wounded and left in the field. William Brady, a comrade took him up and helped him to escape, carrying him to a place of safety for a short distance and then pulling him on a horse on which he rode out of reach of the enemy. In 1795, Captain Munn moved from Pennsylvania to Limestone, Ky., and in 1796 he located at Alexandria. He set up a hand mill there. He cultivated a field near Alexandria for several years. On one occasion he fell out with Gen. Lucas and called him a coward. Lucas challenged him to a duel and Munn accepted and went to the field. Lucas apologized and they became good friends. He removed to the mouth of Munn's Run to which he gave his name. Then he bought land on Long Run near Oretel's corner where he died on March 11, 1839.

He was Coroner of Scioto county from its organization in 1803, till May 25, 1810, when he resigned with the other county officers, through sympathy with Gen. Lucas. The printed records of the Pension office show that Captain James Munn was placed on the Revolutionary roll January 29, 1821, to relate to March 18, 1809, at $10 per month, for a wound received in 1782. This claim for Revolutionary pension was filed prior to 1814, and his papers were burned when the British burned Washington. The facts above are taken from a retired record made in 1853. He built a two-story log house on his land on Long Run, and died there. He had ten children, James, William, David, John and Solomon, sons, and Margaret, Polly, Nelly, Hannah and Nancy. His second son, William, married Joanna Hitchcock and resided with his father till he died. His grandson, Ira, resided on the same land till his death.

Captain Munn was buried on top of the hill to the northeast of the Oretel residence. To the south of the hill is the Long Run turnpike and to the west is the Blue Run road leading to David McKenzie's. The grave is not marked but is known and the view from it is one of the most extensive in the county.

REUBEN SEARL was a private in Captain Daniel Carlyle's company, and Timothy Bedell's regiment from New Hampshire. He served in January, 1776. He was the grandfather of Judge F. C. Searl, of Portsmouth, Ohio.

ABEL WHITE also was another grandfather of Judge Searl, and was a member of the same company.

JOB ROCKWELL served as a drummer in Captain David Pardee's company, Colonel Thaddeus Crane's regiment of Westchester county, New York Militia, Revolutionary war. His name appears only on a pay roll dated March 1, 1878, with remarks: "1779, March 2, May 3, June 30; Time 1 month, 5 days." He was a grandfather of John A. Winkler, of Haverhill, Ohio.

DANIEL STULL (Md.) 1st Lieutenant, 1st Maryland Battalion of the Flying Camp, June to December, 1776; Captain 7th Maryland, 10th December, 1776 to September 14, 1778, when he resigned. He was the grandfather of Colonel Oscar F. Moore.

CHAPTER II.

SKETCHES OF PROMINENT FAMILIES IN SOUTHERN OHIO.

The Barnes Family.

CAPTAIN JOHN BARNES was a native of England. He came over from England with his parents, two brothers, Joseph and Henry, and a sister, Susannah, who afterwards married William Lucas, the Revolutionary soldier. Captain John Barnes' Revolutionary record will be found on page 202 of this work. The Revolutionary war record of his brother-in-law, William Lucas, will be found on page 209. Joseph Barnes became the inventor of steam navigation as will be read elsewhere herein. Henry Barnes is said to have been a Captain in the Revolutionary War and to have located in Tennessee after its close. The home of the Barnes family in Virginia was near Shepherdstown, in Jefferson county.

JOHN BARNES, the Revolutionary soldier, was shot in the leg and it was broken. While he was laid up with this injury, he made moccasins for the soldiers. His wife's name was Lemon. They were married in Virginia. He died in 1812, in Pike county. He purchased land in the vicinity of Waverly. He had six children: James, who moved to Terra Haute, Ind.; Allen, and William, who lived and died south of Waverly; Joseph, who moved to Flemingsburg, Ky.; Ruhama, a daughter, who lived and died in Virginia.

JOHN BARNES, another of his sons, was born in Jefferson county, Va., Oct. 19, 1774. He came to the northwest territory in 1801, and located in the northwest part of Scioto county. (now Pike county) in 1803. He was out in the war of 1812. He represented Scioto county together with Lawrence and Pike in the Legislature from December 2, 1822 to January 28, 1823. From December 7, 1829, to February 23, 1830, and again from December 2, 1833, until March 3, 1834, he represented Pike and Jackson counties in the Legislature. He died November 3, 1834, on Sunday. On the previous Thursday he had been kicked by a horse and he died from the effects of it. In politics, he was a democrat. At the time of his death, he owned 1,600 acres of land free and clear of all encumbrances. In 1832, he was the second largest tax-payer in Pike county, and his taxes were $11.60.

He married Elizabeth Boydston, a daughter of Pressly Boydston. She was born February 11, 1784, and died January 17, 1859. John Barnes's second wife left a large family of children.

(1). Mary, born March 9, 1804; married James B. Turner, January 29, 1825; died July 22, 1828; (2). Thomas, born September 4, 1806; (3). William, born November 17, 1808; (4). Samuel, born November 16, 1810, married Nancy Price, May 12, 1833; (5). Pressly, born August 14, 1815; (6). Lemon; (7). Isaac Newton, born February 26, 1819, married Mary Sargeant, June 3, 1847; (8). John M., born September 24, 1821, married Nancy Sargeant, November 28, 1849; (9). James E., born July 13, 1824, married Malinda Sefton; (10). Elizabeth Ann, born August 22, 1830.

His youngest daughter is unmarried and makes her home in Piketon. Pressly Boydston emigrated to the Northwest Territory in 1799. His wife's maiden name was Robinson. She died in Berkeley county, Virginia, prior to his emigration.

WILLIAM BARNES, the son of Captain John Barnes, who emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, married Nancy Ann Talbott. Their children were: William Talbott; Lemuel, deceased; Ruhama, deceased; Mary, deceased; John Russell Turner, died at Vienna, June 17, 1861; Eddy C., deceased; James Q., a resident of Salem, Oregon; Elizabeth Ann, deceased; and Thomas Newton.

The Bentley Family.

WILLIAM BENTLEY, Sr., settled in Rhode Island, prior to 1679. His wife's name was Sarah and they died in 1720. They had five children, William, Jr., was the eldest. His home was Kingstown, Rhode Island. He was a currier by trade.

WILLIAM BENTLEY, Jr., born in 1682, married first to Mary Elliott, April 21, 1703, married to Bersheba Lewis, August 1, 1734. He had thirteen children, eight by the first and five by the second marriage. He died 1760. His son George was the second child.

GEORGE BENTLEY, born 1724, married Jane Crum, had eight children. Benjamin was the sixth child.

BENJAMIN BENTLEY, the son of George Bentley, was born August 14, 1757. He married Mary Baldwin, a widow and daughter of his brother Sheshbazzar's wife. He died September 23, 1818. His son Aholiab, was his thirteenth and youngest child.

AHOLIAB BENTLEY, born May 22, 1807, near Sharon, Mercer county, Pennsylvania. (For more complete sketch of Aholiab see pag 904 and 905.)

LINN BENTLEY, his son, has a sketch on page 905.

The Boydston Family.

PRESSLEY BOYDSTON was born in North Carolina, in 1754. He served in the Revolutionary War. He removed to Jefferson county, Virginia. In 1797, he had three married daughters, Katharine, the wife of Samuel Mustard; Nancy Ann, the wife of William Talbott, and Elizabeth, who married John Barnes. He and his daughters and sons-in-law emigrated to the Northwest Territory and settled in what was then Adams county, in the Northwest Territory. He purchased of the government 1,500 acres of land, a part of which is now owned by his granddaughter, Elizabeth A. Barnes. He built him a home on this land in 1803, and it is still standing and occupied. He planted an orchard and some of the trees are yet living. He died on January 13, 1814, from hardships in the war of 1812, having gone out in the general call. His death occurred at Chillicothe, Ohio, and his remains were interred at his home in April, 1814.

The David Brown Family.

The ancestors of this family emigrated from Scotland in 1646, and landed in New England in April of that year. There were eight families in the party. They located in what is now Massachusetts, and made themselves homes in the wilderness, and prepared themselves the best they could for the coming winter. On the 8th of November following their location, a light snow fell. That night the Indians visited the settlement took them by surprise, and massacred the whole company, except one child. The particular Brown, who was the ancestor of this family, had a wife, two daughters and three sons. One of the sons was Daniel, aged eight years, who slipped out of the cabin in the darkness, and hid between the chimney and the cabin. As soon as the Indians had effected their errand they departed, and at daybreak, Daniel Brown crawled out of his hiding place and went into the cabin to find his father, mother, two sisters and two brothers murdered and scalped. The child made his way through the forests to a settlement, and from him,—Daniel Brown—came this family.

Gen. Jacob Brown who was born in New York in 1775, commanded the American troops at Lundy's Lane in 1814, was a grandson of Daniel Brown and the father of Rev. George Brown, D. D. David Brown, a son of Daniel Brown had three sons, Joseph, Amos and David.

DAVID BROWN was born in New York March 24, 1783. He was married to Sallie Hubbard in Massachusetts, and moved to Vermont in 1813. He went back to New York, from whence he came to Scioto county in 1816, and landed at Portsmouth. The Hubbards came from England, and settled in what is now Massachusetts. The first in the line known is Wm. Hubbard, who was born in England in 1621, and came to America in 1630. He was a minister of the Gospel from 1665 to 1703, in Massachusetts. He was the author of a history of New England. Samuel D. Hubbard was born in Connecticut in 1799, and died in 1855. He was a member of President Fillmore's cabinet. He was Postmaster General from 1852 to 1853. The children of David and Sarah Brown are as follows: Ransom, born in 1804; Huldý, who married Ralph Sampson; John H., Royal, father of Milton W. Brown; David B., Franklin B., Nathan; William H., deceased; Joseph J. Brown, now living at Flat P. O., O. David, Sr., died at his home in Pike County January 9, 1849.

The Burr Family. (Fairfield Branch.)

The Burr Coat of Arms is described as follows: Ermine on a Mount, Vert. issuing from park palings, with gate proper, a lion rampant or holding in dexter paw a scimeter, all proper, or two lions rampant, argent, quartering among others. The motto is, "By the name of Burr."

1. JEHUE BURR was born in England, in 1600. He had four sons. Nathaniel No. 7 was his third son. This Jehue Burr came to New England in 1630. He settled first in Roxbury, Massachusetts. In 1632, he was made a freeman. In 1635, he and his wife were members of the church in Roxbury, and he was overseer of the roads between Boston and Roxbury. March 1, 1635, he had a controversy with his neighbor Dumer about the swine spoiling his corn, but it was adjusted by referees. In 1636, he went west to settle. He and the other men went afoot. The women rode horseback. The party located at Springfield, Massachusetts. He and two others bought land of the Indians June 15, 1636, for ten fathoms of wampum, fourteen coats, fourteen hoes, fourteen hatchets, and fourteen knives. He was one of the first settlers of Springfield, Massachusetts. He was the first collector of taxes at Agawam, which was then in Connecticut. In 1644, he removed to Fairfield, Connecticut. In 1645, and 1646, he represented Fairfield in the General Court. In 1660, he was a grand juror. In 1664 and 1668 he was a commissioner for Fairfield. In 1672 he died. There is no record of his marriage or the maiden name of his wife. His grave is unknown. He left four sons.

2. NATHANIEL BURR son of Jehue was born in 1640, and made a freeman in 1664. He was a Representative, October, 1692, March, 1693, February, 1694, and October, 1695. February 16, 1669, he was granted twelve acres, thirty-two rods of land by the town. January 6, 1673, he purchased four parcels of land and was granted fourteen acres by the town. May, 1682, he received a grant of land in the old Indian field and bought five parcels. He had two wives, first, Sarah, daughter of Andrew Ward. His son, John was his third child and the first of his second wife Ann. He died in March, 1712.

3. JOHN BURR was born May, 1673.

4. COL. JOHN BURR of Fairfield died in 1705. His wife was Deborah.

5. JOHN BURR of Fairfield married Catharine Waheman, October 18, 1722.

6. OZIAS BURR was born May 1, 1739, and married Sarah Nichols, January 8, 1764. He had ten children. His son, Ozias the fifth child and third son was born January 13, 1773. This Ozias, 1st, died September 7, 1836. His wife died September 2, 1829, aged eighty-one years.

7. OZIAS BURR was born January 13, 1773. He was married twice, first to Lou Jennings, second to Elizabeth, daughter of Simon Couch of Redding, Connecticut. Erastus Burr was the fourth child. Ozias died August 15, 1845.

8. REV. ERASTUS BURR was born November 15, 1805. He was married to Harriet Griswold, of Worthington, Ohio. Their children are noted under his sketch in this work—p. 666.

The Burr Family. (Hartford Branch.)

1. BENJAMIN BURR was the founder of the Hartford Branch. He was an original settler of Hartford in 1635. His name appears in a land division in 1639. He is supposed to have come with Winthrop's Fleet in 1630. He was the first of his name in Connecticut. In 1693, he had an allotment of six acres. He drew eighteen acres in East Hartford, 1666. He was thrifty and owned several home lots. He died in Hartford, March 3, 1681. A street in Hartford was named for him. His will is dated, January 2, 1677. His wife was Anna Burr. His mother died August 31, 1683.

2. SAMUEL BURR of Hartford was made a freeman in 1658. He was born in England.
3. JONATHAN BURR, of Haddam, Conn., was born March 21, 1713, and was married to Elizabeth Belden, October 29, 1740.
4. JONATHAN BURR of Ludlow, Mass., was born August 3, 1741. He was married to Priscilla Freeman, born September 4, 1745.
5. TIMOTHY BURR of Paris, Oneida county, New York, was born January 19, 1767. He married Hannah Gorham, and died October 23, 1859.
6. JONATHAN BURR of Middletown, Conn., was born in 1769. He was married to Abigail Hubbard, daughter of Nathaniel and granddaughter of George Hubbard, of Middletown. She was born in 1786. He died January 1, 1735.
7. CHARLES BURR, of Madison, Ohio, was born in 1797. He was married to Polly Bester, of Connecticut.
8. HALSEY C. was born in 1841. He is a Banker in Ironton, Ohio.

The Colegrove Family.

For a knowledge of this family we are indebted to "The History and Genealogy of the Colegrove Family in America," published 1894, by William Colegrove, D. D., L.L. D. The name was derived from a grove on the little river Cole in England between Wiltshire and Berkshire. The original grove was near the present hamlet of Coleshill, in Berkshire. The name originated between 500 and 700 years past. There were Colegroves in Woodstock, Oxfordshire. A Colegrove was aid-de-camp to John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, and afterwards the same one was Chief of Police in London. There was a Sir Francis Colegrove. In 1700, William Colegrove, Esq. was proprietor on an estate in Essex, near London, known as Cann Hall. One branch of the family has a Coat of Arms. The shield is surmounted by a crest having a mural crown with cross arrows. On the shield are two red bars across with two arrowheads above and one below. The motto is, "Fidea Constans." It is said of the family that no one ever knew a Colegrove to be afraid of anything.

I. FRANCIS COLEGROVE came from Swansea, Wales, to Warwick, Rhode Island, in 1683. From him all Colegroves in the United States are descended. He came at the age of sixteen and worked his passage as a cabin boy. He was industrious, persevering and upright and he succeeded. These qualities have remained in the Colegrove family, their best inheritance. He was married twice. He had five sons: Eli, Stephen, Francis, John and William, and two daughters, twins. One son and the two daughters were by the second marriage. His first marriage was at twenty-five years, his second at sixty-two years. He lived to the age of ninety, and died in 1759. He was of a lively disposition and fond of joking.

II. FRANCIS, his third son was the ancestor of the Scioto county, Ohio Colegroves. He was from Rhode Island.

III. He had a son JEREMIAH, who had a son (IV) WILLIAM, one of thirteen children, who located in Scioto county, and had thirteen children.

V. His son, PELEG, born 1815 had a daughter. (1) Harriet Ellen, married Charles Walden of Sciotoville. Peleg Colegrove also had a son, (2) John Allen Colegrove who has a sketch herein. Peleg's daughter (3) Lavinia married John Dudit, the father of Alfred S. Dudit of the Hibbs' Hardware Company.

William (IV's) son, WILLIAM HARRISON, born February 24, 1813, had a daughter, (1) Laura who married Charles W. Erlich, of Sciotoville. Her daughter married F. L. Sikes, Probate Judge of Scioto county. The wife of William Harrison Colegrove was Abigail Burt, of Sciotoville, daughter of Benjamin Burt, a Revolutionary soldier, buried in the old cemetery at the east end of the Little Scioto Bridge, near Sciotoville.

The Corson Family.

The name is French originally and the first spelling known is Corssen. They were French Huguenots. The first ancestor in the United States was Cornelius Corssen who came over in 1685, and landed on Staten Island. He obtained a grant of 60 acres of land there. He died in 1693 and his will is on record. He had a son Benjamin, who emigrated to Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1726. He had other sons, Jacob, Christian, Cornelius and Daniel.

The family became Quakers and Doctor Joseph Corson who lived and died in Portsmouth and whose sons: Edward J. and Frank B. M. are residents of Portsmouth, was reared a Quaker.

What follows is taken from "The Corson Family, A History of the Descendants of Benjamin Corson, son of Cornelius Corssen of Staten Island, New York, by Hiram Corson, M. D. of Plymouth Meeting, Pennsylvania."

1. BENJAMIN, the first, was the son of Cornelius, the French emigrant. His wife's name was Nelly, family name lost. Benjamin, the second, born in 1704, was their child.

2. BENJAMIN, the second, was born in 1704, on Staten Island, and settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 1726. He married Maria Suydam in 1741 and they had eight children, of whom Benjamin the third, the eldest, was born March 6, 1743 and married Sarah Dungan.

3. BENJAMIN, the third, born March 6, 1743, married Sarah Dungan in 1761. They had eleven children, of whom Joseph born March 15, 1764 was the second.

4. JOSEPH CORSON was born March 15, 1764. In 1786 he married Hannah Dickinson and had eleven children, of whom Alan Wright born February 2, 1788, and married Mary Egbert, was the eldest. He died April 4, 1834. His wife died December 17, 1810.

5. ALAN WRIGHT CORSON was born February 21, 1788, married Mary Egbert, November 24, 1811 and had seven children, of whom Joseph was the sixth, born January 20, 1821. Alan Wright Corson died June 27, 1882 at the age of ninety-four years, four months and six days.

6. JOSEPH CORSON, M. D., was born January 20, 1821. He married Martha H. Cutler June 29, 1843. He died July 7, 1866. His children were: (1) Edward Jenner born January 13, 1845, grocer in Portsmouth, O. (2) Florence born August 16, 1847. (3) Frank B. M. born February 6, 1855, salesman and stockholder in the Tracy Shoe Co., Portsmouth, O.

The Davidson Family. (Of South Point and Burlington.)

1. WILLIAM DAVIDSON, the First, came to the Colonies before the Revolutionary War, and was killed by Indians.

2. His son, WILLIAM DAVIDSON, the Second, came to the wilds of the North-west Territory from Red Stone near Brownsville, Pennsylvania, by keel-boat down the Monongahela and Ohio rivers in 1799. When he came to Ohio, he was already married to his second wife, Barbara McDole, born in Wales. William was born in 1847, presumably in Ireland, though of Scotch origin. He landed first where Catlettsburg, Kentucky, now stands, but soon crossed the Ohio river and took up land at a point afterward named South Point. He died in 1811 and is buried with his wife, Barbara, at South Point, Ohio, where the inscriptions on their tombstones can yet be easily read. The nine children of the above settled in and around South Point with the exception of the oldest, named Thomas.

3. WILLIAM W., the sixth child of William the Second and Barbara, was for many years Pastor of the Baptist church at South Point and was the father by his first wife, Sarah Short, of Commodore William Funston Davidson and Captain Peyton S. Davidson, pioneer river men on the upper Mississippi and instrumental in building up St. Paul and developing the state of Minnesota. Both these sons amassed fortunes. William W. m. for his second wife, Nancy Lawson Davidson and for his third wife, Levinia Yingling and left thirteen children by his three wives. He was born in Fayette county, Pa., November 6, 1798, just before his father emigrated to Ohio and he died at South Point, October 5, 1883.

The only other son of William the Second, was JOSEPH, born at South Point, December 26, 1806, and died August 16, 1879. He married Jane Bryson and had thirteen children. Most of the living ones still reside in or near South Point.

The children of William, the Second, by his first wife, Rosanna Hutchinson, were all born in Pennsylvania, near Brownsville. They were Comfort, m. McCourtney; John, m. Margaret Armstrong; Lewis, m. Mary Davidson (his cousin); Mary, m. Mark Williams; David, m. Mary Williams.

3. Of these, John and his wife, Margaret Armstrong, came from Red Stone, near Brownsville, Pennsylvania, in 1801, in a keel-boat, just as his father, William the Second, had come in 1799. He settled where Burlington now stands, the extreme southern point of Ohio and took up lands by patent, signed by Presidents Jefferson and Madison. Four of the children of John and Margaret were born in Pennsylvania: (1) Sarah, m. Thomas Kerr; (2) Mary, m. Shryrock; (3) William, m. Hannah Pancake; (4) James, m. Mary Frances Combs. The last three were born in Burlington, (5) John, who married Ruth Bryson; (6) Joseph, m. Maria Thomas; (7) Jeremiah, m. Eliza Corum. When Lawrence county was formed in 1817, John Davidson, father of the above named children, and William Burton gave the land for the court house square, and Burlington was the county seat of Lawrence county from that time till 1853.

4. James Davidson, son of John, and Margaret Armstrong, was about three months old when his father came to Ohio, having been born March 4, 1801, at Red Stone, near Brownsville, Pennsylvania. He died at Burlington, in Lawrence county, Ohio, December 27, 1894. He lived and died upon the same land taken up by his father and at the time of his death was the oldest pioneer in the county. It is believed that he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church when it was first organized in Burlington and it is certain that he was a member in 1829, when he married Mary Frances Combs, who died March 11, 1888. He was of the Scotch Covenanter type, softened by the tenderness of Methodism. His word was as good as his bond. He was a whig, and later a republican. When he was twenty-seven years old, he was commissioned Lieutenant of the First Company in the Second Regiment, Second Brigade and Second Division of the Militia of the State of Ohio, by Governor Allen Trimble, January 19, 1828, to rank as such from October 6, 1827. By the income from his farm and a carding-machine, which he operated for over fifty years, he educated all of his children in the public schools, the home academy which he and a few others established and sustained, and in colleges. Nine children were born to James and Mary Frances Combs. The first and second died in infancy.

(1) Major Jeremiah, (see sketch). (2) John X., born September 4, 1836, died August 22, 1892, at St. Paul, Minn. He was educated in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, and married Susan Lamb. He taught the Ironton High School for many years; later, owned and edited the Ironton Register and was Postmaster. He removed to St. Paul, Minn. at the close of the Civil War and became one of the owners and editors of The Pioneer, now the Pioneer Press, a leading republican paper of the state. He served one or two terms in the State Legislature of Minnesota.

(3) Col. James Hamilton, born January 25, 1839, married Abbey Lamb, in June, 1861. He was educated at the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, and enlisted in 1861 as private in Company B., 14th Kentucky Infantry, and soon became First Lieutenant because of his knowledge of military drill. He led his Company in the engagement of Middle Creek where he captured a Belgian rifle of a rebel. He was promoted to Captain at Cumberland Gap, in 1862. He was commissioned Major of the Forty-ninth Kentucky Infantry, December, 1864. He was mustered out of the service, January 16, 1866, at New Orleans. In 1867, he was admitted to the bar and practiced for many years in cember 23, 1863. He was commissioned Colonel of the 122nd United States Colored Troops, December, 1864. He was mustered out of the service, January 16, 1866, at New Orleans. In 1867, he was admitted to the bar and practiced for many years in St. Paul, Minn., and later in Chicago where he now resides. He is a republican, a member of the Loyal Legion and a Mason and while he has never held public office, he has campaigned in many gubernatorial and presidential elections and is quite an orator.

(4) Margaret Susanna, the only daughter of James Davidson and Mary Frances Combs, was educated first at the Western College, Oxford, Ohio. Later she received the degree of A. M. pro honora, from the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, and the degree of Ph. D. on examination from the Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York. She taught in the village school at Burlington and in the Ironton High School. In 1868, she married Rev. J. D. Fry. The years 1873 and 1874 she spent in Europe. From 1876 to 1890, she was Professor of Belles Lettres in the Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Illinois. In 1890 and 1892 she had charge of the English department of the University of Minnesota. In 1893, she was one of the Judges in the Liberal Art Department of the Chicago World's Fair. She is the author of the book, "A Paradise Valley Girl" and of many newspaper and magazine articles. At present she is the Corresponding Secretary of the National W. C. T. U.

(5) Benjamin Armstrong died young.

(6) Joseph McClain was for many years stationer and book-seller in Ironton. He died October 24, 1899, at Red Wing, Minnesota. He served in the Union Army the last year of the war.

(7) Mighill Dustin, the youngest of James Davidson's children, is a farmer and still lives in Burlington, as do some other descendants of the children of John Davidson, who settled there in 1801.

It will thus be seen that the children and grand-children of William, the Second, of 1799 had much to do with the development of the southern part of Lawrence county.

The Dewey Family.

The ancestor of this family in this county was (1) THOMAS DEWEY who settled in Westfield, Connecticut, about 1639. The line of descent from him is as follows.

2. ISRAEL DEWEY, his third son, baptized September 25, 1645.

3. ISRAEL DEWEY, Jr. resided at Stonington, Connecticut.

4. JABEZ DEWEY, born at Stonington, Connecticut.

5. JOSEPH DEWEY, who resided at Stonington, Connecticut.

6. ISRAEL DEWEY, born at Stonington, Conn., married Abigail Ingraham, November 1789. To them were born: (1) A son, July 13, 1790, and died the same day. (2) Joseph, b. July 4, 1791. (3) Erastus Hyde, b. April 18, 1796. (4) Jesse George, b. June 4, 1799. (5) Abigail, b. October 13, 1801. (6) Warren, b. February 20, 1805, at Sharon, Conn. (7) David, b. at Goben, Conn., February 20, 1808. Of this family Joseph, Erastus Hyde, and Jesse George located at Sinking Springs, in Highland county, Ohio, coming from Conn.

7. JOSEPH DEWEY, born July 4, 1791, married Rosanna P. Tener, May 13, 1809. She was born near Baltimore, Maryland, August 7, 1794. The family of Teners settled near Locust Grove, in Adams county, Ohio, in 1800. Joseph Dewey had the following children: (1) Abigail, b. February 13, 1820. (2) Katharine A., b. February 13, 1823. (3) Caroline M., b. December 16, 1824. (4) Rosanna P., b. December 31, 1826. (5) Israel J., b. June 15, 1829. (6) Joseph W., b. April 15, 1831. (7) Elizabeth M., b. March 22, 1833. (8) Eliza, b. May 6, 1838. Joseph Dewey, No. 7 died at Harrisonville, Scioto county, Ohio, June 3, 1839. His wife died at the same place, January 17, 1877.

8. CATHARINE A., No. 2 above, married Joseph Harvey Stockham. For her children, see under Stockham Family herein.

The Feurt Family.

The earliest ancestor of the Feurt family, of which we have any knowledge, were FRANCIS, the first, and Mary de Feurt, who emigrated from France settling near Princeton, New Jersey. Of their family of thirteen children, we have the lineal descendants of two sons, (1) Francis and (2) Joseph, who, together with their brother (3) Gabriel, Senior, came to Scioto county, Ohio, in 1796, residing for a time, probably a year, at Alexandria. They remained long enough to give their name, Feurt's Run, to the stream now called Carey's Run; but their crops being destroyed by floods, they were forced to seek higher land.

1. FRANCIS FEURT, second, b. 1741, bought land in the French Grant in 1798 from one of the original French settlers to whom the government had granted land in 1795. This land is still in the possession of some of the French Grant branch of the Feurt family. Francis Feurt, the second, was twice married.

1. PETER, his son by the first marriage, was born in 1767, and died in 1846. His family consisted of (1) Mrs. Nancy Boynton, wife of William Boynton of Haverhill, Ohio; (2) Mrs. Martha Coyle, wife of John Coyle; (3) Mrs. Massie Coyle, wife of Jesse Coyle of Wheelersburg; (4) Mrs. Elizabeth McNeal; (5) Denton and (6) Henry all now deceased.

HENRY FEURT (6 above) (1815-1873) married Miss Mary Winkler, born in 1819, and who lives in Haverhill. To them were born eleven children, five of whom died in childhood and (6) Mrs. Ruby M. Yingling of Haverhill who died April 17, 1890, aged 42 years. Five are still living: (7) Henry Clinton and (8) Fred F. of Franklin Furnace; (9) Peter, of Lamar, Missouri; (10) Mrs. Asa F. Boynton of Haverhill and (11) Mrs. George M. Osborn of Portsmouth, Ohio.

2. DANIEL FEURT (1801-1858) was a son of Francis Feurt, (I) by the second marriage, and the father of (1) Daniel H. Feurt of Wheelersburg; (2) Mrs. Dr. C. G. Gray of Ironton, Ohio; (3) Mrs. Dr. Isaac Gray, deceased; (4) James and (5) Dr. William H. Feurt, Mechanicsburg, Ohio.

II. GABRIEL FEURT, Senior, (1749-1824) married Mercy Davison, May 30, 1773. After coming to Ohio, they resided in Chillicothe, Ohio; but for several years before their deaths had made their homes with Gabriel Feurt, Junior, their nephew. They left no family.

III. JOSEPH FEURT, (1751-1806) married Mary Davison (1756-1840) the daughter of George Davison, who had married Mary Warren on March 1, 1750. Joseph Feurt with his wife and eight children came to Scioto county, Ohio, from New Jersey, in 1796. Tradition says he had been a Sergeant in the war of the Revolution. About a year after his arrival at Alexandria, he removed his family to Pond creek, buying land on what was thereafter called "Feurt's Flats" now "Pine Flats" about Lombardville. Here his wife made her home for many years after the death of her husband in 1806, but spent the last years of her life in the home of her son, Gabriel, of Chillicothe Pike, living to the advanced age of 84 years. Their family consisted of (1) Benjamin F. born 1778; (2) Gabriel, (1779-1850); (3) Mrs. Mary Reeves, (1782-1819); (4) George, (1784-1818); (5) Mrs. Susana Noel, wife of Colonel Peter Noel. (They were the parents of the late Joseph F. and Abraham Noel, of Joliet, Ill.). (6) Mrs. Mercy Noel, (1789-1830) wife of Philip Noel, of Pond creek; (7) Bartholomew (1792-1806) and (8) Thomas (1794-1830).

1. BENJAMIN F. FEURT, eldest son of Joseph Feurt, (III) removed in an early day to Lacon, Illinois. His family consisted of six children: (1) Mrs. Levisy Chandler, (2) Mrs. Mary Gapen, (3) Washington Dever Fort (as they spell the name); (4) Mrs. Nancy Dever; and (5) Colonel Greenbury L. Fort, congressman from Illinois, for several years, all late, of Lacon, Ill.

2. Some time in the 40's the widow and children of THOMAS FEURT, who died in 1830, moved to Jamieson, Missouri. The children were (1) Joseph; (2) John; (3) Mrs. Mary Brown, late of Muscatine, Iowa; (4) Thomas; (5) Mrs. Catharine Ford and (6) Gabriel Feurt now living, aged 75 years, in Jamieson, Missouri, the sole representative of his generation in the Feurt family.

3. GABRIEL FEURT, second son of Joseph and Mary Feurt, was born in New Jersey, December 9, 1779, and came to Scioto county with his parents in 1796. He spent some years with his uncle Gabriel in Chillicothe, where he obtained a better education than was usual for the time. He served in the War of 1812. On February 20, 1812, he was married to Lydia Hitchcock, daughter of Caleb Hitchcock, who came at an early age from Connecticut and settled at the mouth of Munn's Run, owning what is now known as New Boston and the Peebles farm. Gabriel Feurt and his brother-in-law, Jacob Noel, entered a large tract of land on the Scioto river about five miles north of Portsmouth. For this and other lands, he was able to pay by following the vocations of surveyor, cooper, and farmer, and by practicing the rigid economy incident to the times; so that, years before his death on September 9, 1850, he owned one of the finest farms in the Scioto valley as the result alone of his labor and that of his wife, a woman of unusually strong character. He served for many years as Justice of the Peace and was most highly respected for his integrity and good judgment. Soon after her husband's death, Mrs. Lydia Feurt moved from the old homestead to Portsmouth, where she died January 10, 1864, aged

71. To Gabriel and Lydia Feurt were born eleven children, all of whom are deceased; (1) Mrs. Isabella Cutler (1813-1838); (2) Bartholomew (1814-1815); (3) John D. (1816-1898); (4) James H. (1818-1894); (5) Mrs. Mary D. Brown (1820-1838); (6) William M. (1822-1841); (7) Gabriel, (1825-1827); (8) Syrene T. (1827-1832); (9) Mrs. Lavinia H. Flint (1829-1876); (10) Benjamin F. (1835-1852) drowned at Chillicothe; (11) Thomas J. 1838-).

MRS. LAVINIA H. FLINT, (9) above, daughter of Gabriel and Lydia Feurt, was among the first of Portsmouth women to receive a college education. She was possessed of an unusually brilliant mind. She was married in 1854, to John F. Flint, an attorney-at-law, and soon after moved to Texas, where they resided permanently. Her death occurred February 6, 1876, in Waco, Texas. Her children were: Miss Mary B., Miss Hallie, Frazier, Monterey, Mexico and John Feurt Flint, late of Waco, Texas.

JAMES HITCHCOCK FEURT, (4) above, the third son of Gabriel and Lydia Hitchcock Feurt, was born on the old homestead on the Chillicothe Pike, March 4, 1818. He received but a country school education; but this was greatly augmented by his having an innate thirst for knowledge which led him to become a great reader of history, science and other branches of study. He followed the vocation of a farmer until 1862, when he sold his portion of the old Feurt farm and came to Portsmouth for better educational advantages for his children. He was twice married. In 1855, he was married to Mrs. Nancy Cockrell Johnson, daughter of Jesse and Anna Marsh Cockrell, early settlers of Scioto county, near Lucasville, Ohio. To James H. Feurt and wife were born three children: (1) Mrs. Mary E. Royse, wife of B. Frank Royse, Portsmouth, Ohio; (2) Mrs. Sarah M. Black, wife of Charles Black, Houston, Texas; and (3) a son who died in infancy. Mrs. Nancy Feurt died March 11, 1864, aged 43 years, and James H. Feurt died September 26, 1894, in Portsmouth.

(This sketch of the Feurt family prepared by Mrs. Frank Royse, wife of B. F. Royse, covers a period of nearly 200 years (1707-1902) taken from two family bibles in her possession, one being 150 and the other 101 years old.)

The Forsythe Family.

ABRAHAM FORSYTHE, Sr., settled two miles south of old Steam furnace, in Adams county. He came from Bath county, Kentucky, about 1815 or 1816, after the furnace was built. He was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. He was the second or third generation from Scotland. Abraham Forsythe, Sr., located one hundred acres and built a home. He bought twenty-five acres of a mill tract. He lived and died on that place, and his wife also died there. They are buried on the old homestead in Adams county and their graves are marked. The following are his children: (1) Samuel. (2) John. (3) Abraham. (4) Jacob; (5) Nancy, married Duncan McFarland, (6) Sally, married Joseph Thompson, and (7) James Forsythe, of Empire furnace.

1. The children of JACOB, (2 above) are: Ann, married Robert Brownlee, and is deceased. Her husband died in the army; Easter, died young; Jane, married Robert Brownlee, and is deceased. Abraham, residing at Rarden; John, residing at Fruit Hurst, Alabama, and William lives near Peebles. Jacob Forsythe is buried at the Baptist Church Brush Creek Cemetery, Meigs township. Jacob Forsythe's farm is the home place. He was born in 1802, in Kentucky, and died in 1874. His wife was Rebecca Chapman, daughter of John Chapman. She was born in 1803, and died in 1886. She is buried in a cemetery in the corner of the farm. Jacob Forsythe was a furnaceman, until he married, and then he became a farmer.

2. The descendants of ABRAHAM (3 above), are: Sarah, married a McCollough, deceased; Margaret, never married, deceased; Elizabeth, married John Campbell, and lives in Vanceburg, Kentucky; James, resides at Rome; John, is now in Iowa, formerly Vanceburg; Polk, lives on the old home place above Rome; Thomas died in infancy; and Abraham, died in Vanceburg a few years ago, and left a family.

3. SAMUEL (1 above), son of Abraham Forsythe, Senior, volunteered in the War of 1812. The British took him prisoner with his brother John, and turned them over to the Indians, who tomahawked Samuel and killed him, and took his scalp. They burned John at the stake.

4. Joseph Thompson, who married SALLY FORSYTHE, daughter of the first Abraham Forsythe, was a prisoner at the same time. He saw Samuel killed with a tomahawk, and John burned at the stake, then he escaped and got home. He lived to be an old man. 5. Jacob Thompson was married to SARAH FORSYTHE before he went into the war. He went in on account of his brother-in-law, and saw them both murdered by the Indians.

7. ORIN BARRON GOULD, the son of Orin B. Gould, Sr., and Lavinia Seeley, his wife, was born at Franklin Furnace, Ohio, January 30, 1863. He has a separate sketch herein.

The Grosvenor Family.

The family name of the Duke of Westminster, the richest peer of England, is Grosvenor. The name is of Norman origin and means "Great Hunter." Some of the early Grosvenors occupied the office of Chief Hunter for the King, hence the name.

The facts herein are taken from "A Brief History of the Allen, Putnam, Hall, Grosvenor and other families. Edited by A. L. Allen and published at Poughkeepsie, New York, January 10, 1895.

1. JOHN GROSVENOR, with Esther, his wife, emigrated from Cheshire, England, in 1680, and settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts. He obtained a grant of lands in Windham county, Connecticut, but never removed there. He died September 27, 1691, in his forty-ninth year. He had six children of whom Ebenezer was the sixth child born.

2. EBENEZER GROSVENOR, son of John Grosvenor, the emigrant, had seven children. His son John, was born May 22, 1711, died in 1808. He settled at Pomfret, Connecticut.

3. JOHN GROSVENOR, son of Ebenezer, married Hannah Dresser, and by her had four sons. His fourth son was Thomas Grosvenor, born September 20, 1744.

4. COLONEL THOMAS GROSVENOR born September 20, 1744, son of John, born May 22, 1711; graduated at Yale College in 1765, and soon after became a lawyer at Pomfret. He was Second Lieutenant, First Company, Third Regiment, Connecticut minute men, whose Colonel was Israel Putnam, afterwards General. On news of the battle of Lexington, his regiment marched to Cambridge, Mass. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and wounded in the right hand. He saw nine British soldiers fall by his rifle. In Trumbull's picture of the battle, his is the figure in the right fore-ground, accompanied by a negro servant. He was promoted to a Captaincy and served at the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, in the retreat from New York and through the Jerseys. He took part at Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. February 6, 1777, he was commissioned Major of the Second Connecticut Regiment and took part in the operations of Washington's army preceding Valley Forge.

On March 13, 1778, he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of Durkee's Regiment and served as such at the battle of Monmouth, June 19, 1778. He commanded the First Connecticut regiment to January 1, 1783, when he retired. He married Ann Munford, and had five children. His son Peter, was born January 25, 1794. Colonel Thomas Grosvenor was a member of the Governor's Council in Connecticut for twenty years. He was Judge of the Probate Court of Windham county, and Chief Justice of its Court of Common Pleas. He died January 11, 1825, in his eighty-first year.

5. PETER GROSVENOR born January 5, 1794, son of Col. Thomas Grosvenor, married Ann Chase, and had four sons. The second was Charles H., born September 20, 1833. His father removed to Athens county, Ohio, in 1838. He was in the War of 1812, and a Major in the militia.

6. GENERAL CHARLES H. GROSVENOR, born September 20, 1833, (he has a separate sketch herein) married Samantha Stewart, December 1, 1858. She died April 2, 1866, leaving a daughter, Mrs. Constance McKee, of Athens, Ohio. General Grosvenor was married May 21, 1867, to Louise H. Currier, and has had two daughters of this marriage: Louise E., now the wife of Phelps Leet, of Portsmouth, and Grace, wife of Dr. Cassius M. Shepherd, of Columbus, Ohio.

The Hurd Family.

1. THE HON. JOHN HURD, was Recorder of Deeds for Grafton county, New Hampshire, 1776. At the same time he was a Judge of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas. He appears to have been a Colonel in the Militia previous to the Revolution. In a letter written by him on September 30, 1777, N. H. State papers Vol. 8, page 700, he states, "I am extremely chagrined that my infirm limbs will not permit me to share in the toils and dangers of the field with my countrymen. I have spared two of my family and sent them with horses and provisions for near a month; one of them, my son, Jacob, though hardly of age sufficient, but a well grown lad of good heart and disposition to supply his father's place." This same Col. John Hurd was one of the Committee of Safety, three in number, who took charge of all scouting parties in July, 1776.

2. JACOB HURD was in Captain Joshua Hayward's Company, Col. Jonathan Chase's Regiment, Revolutionary War in September, 1777. He was born October 11, 1761, died April 23, 1812. He married Hannah Brown, born January 11, 1766, died March 2, 1837. She was the daughter of Timothy Barron, and had thirteen children, as follows: (1) Betsey, born December 18, 1783, married Eben Ricker. (2) Jacob, born August 24, 1785, married Cynthia. (3) John, born August 29, 1787, married Mary Young. (4) Polly, born July 23, 1789, married Charlton Kimball. (5) Nathaniel born April 19, 1791, married Eliza Montgomery. (6) Russell, born June 9, 1795, lived in Pittsburg, Pa. (7) Timothy, born November 22, 1797, married Eliza Patridge. (8) Nancy, born March 9, 1800, died August 9, 1800. (9) Jonathan, born November 24, 1803, married Theresa Rives Vancrook in Wheelersburg, O., died ——. (10) Rebecca, born August 16, 1806, married a Ferguson. (11) Everett, born March 31, 1809, married Hannah Ring. (12) Sally and (13) Moore Russell died very young.

3. JOHN HURD, (No. 3 above) m. Mary Young, sister of Rev. Dan Young. Their children were: (1) Charlotte, b. Sept. 9, 1874, m. Joseph Mills Glidden Smith. (2) Jacob, b. Dec. 25, 1815, m. Elizabeth Clough. (3) Jesse, b. July 1, 1818, m. Catharine Rogers. (4) Mary, b. June 25, 1824, m. Leander Comstock. (5) Josephine, b. Feb. 13, 1826, m. Lewis Tomlinson, Dan Glidden and Cyrus Ellison, in succession.

4. CHARLOTTE HURD, m. Joseph Mills Glidden Smith. Their children were: (1) Joseph Warren, m. Matilda Dodge and Phoebe Hannah. (2) Jacob Hurd, m. Adelaide Hall. (3) Mary Elizabeth, m. James W. Bannon. (4) Josephine Hurd, m. James Orin Murfin.

Timothy Barron, the father of Hannah Barron, the wife of Jacob Hurd, No. 2 above, deserves a more than passing mention. He was born in 1739, in Massachusetts. He married Olive Moore, the widow of Col. Russell, in 1759. She was born in 1730. He died Nov. 7, 1797, aged fifty-eight. She died Oct. 11, 1807, aged seventy-seven, at Bath, N. H. Timothy was an aide to Gen. Russell, in the French and Indian War, in 1757. While a boy, his parents moved to New Hampshire. His father was Timothy Barron, also, who commanded a Company of N. H. Militia at the battle of Bennington, July 16, 1777. His son, Jonathan, was with him and conducted himself with great bravery, although a lad of only fifteen years. This is on the tombstone of Capt. Timothy Barron, Jr. at Bath, N. H. "This stone is placed here by Timothy Barron, of Bath, in memory of his grandsire Capt. Timothy Barron who died Nov. 7, 1797 in the fifty-eighth year of his age. He was one of the first settlers of this town, and the first person interred in this burying ground. He was seized and possessed of the land he was buried on and there is never to be any conveyance from him or his heirs."

JESSE YOUNG HURD, (No. 3 above) born near Lisbon, N. H., in 1818, came to Ohio with his father's family in 1820. He resided at the different furnaces in Scioto county. He married a Miss Rogers of Bloom Furnace. His eldest child was James Murfin Hurd, born August 31, 1843, at Bloom Furnace. He was married to Mary Frances Edmunds, Dec. 8, 1877, at Rahway, N. J. He died July 9, 1891, at Jersey City, N. J. His wife was born March 22, 1852, and died at the New Jersey State Hospital, Mont Plains, N. J., July 29, 1893, of hemorrhage.

Their children were Arthur Lontrel, born March 18, 1880. He attended school at Jersey City, removed to Milwaukee in 1892, and attended school at Jersey City, removed to Milwaukee in 1892, and attended schools there and at the Military Academy at Fairbault, Minn. He clerked five years in Milwaukee for the T. G. Chapman Co. and worked for the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. and the Wisconsin Building & Loan Association. In 1899, he went to Chicago and was employed there till April, 1900, when he shipped in the Navy for four years. He is now on the steamship Yorktown and when last heard from was at Yokohama, Japan.

James Murfin Hurd's second son was Victor, born Nov. 5, 1882. He attended the public schools in Jersey City. He moved to Milwaukee in 1892 and finished school there. He is traveling for C. M. Paine of Milwaukee, Wis.

Irving Hurd, the third son of James Murfin Hurd, was born June 18, 1884. He attended school in Jersey City, N. J., till 1892, and then at Milwaukee, Wis. He is stenographer for the H. W. Johns' Manville Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Another son, Lon R. Hurd, married Fannie Simpson, of Milwaukee, Wis. They had four children, of whom Chester and Edward are deceased. Dorothy and Rodger reside at West Superior, Wis.

Capt. Hurd had three other children, but they are all deceased. In 1848 he made Portsmouth his home and became a master on Steamboats. He followed the river, usually the Mississippi. He died in Portsmouth, in October, 1867, having contracted the yellow fever while on a trip there to recover the remains of his son, Arthur, who had died at Millikin's Bend, Miss., of the same disease.

The King Family.

1. JOHN KING came from County Kent, England, soon after the year 1700, to America, and settled at Boston.

2. His son RICHARD was a Captain under Governor Shirley, in the spring of 1745, in the expedition against Cape Breton. Richard went to Louisburg and was present at the capture of that fortress and the French army there. Richard King settled in Scarboro, Maine, then a province of Massachusetts, and married Isabella Bragdon, of York, Maine.

3. Their oldest child was RUFUS KING, who was born at Scarborough, Maine, March 4, 1755. He attended school at Byfield Academy, Newburyport, Massachusetts, at the age of twelve. At eighteen he entered Harvard College, in August, 1773. He graduated in 1777, and went to Newburyport to study law under Theophilus Parsons. In 1778, he became Aide-de-Camp, with rank of Major, to General Glover, in General Sullivan's expedition to retake Rhode Island from the British. His service was short and in September, 1778, he was discharged with the thanks of General Sullivan, the Commander-in-Chief, the expedition being over and the volunteer part of the army, to which Major King belonged, being disbanded. This brief service was the only military connection of Rufus King with the Revolution. He served his country continuously in other occupations, and died in New York, April 29, 1827.

4. EDWARD KING, the fourth son of Rufus and Mary Alsop King was born in New York, March 13, 1795. He was educated in that city and read law for two years at Mr. Reeves' Law School at Litchfield, Connecticut. He wished to practice in one of the western states, and his father thought it wise that he should pass the last years study in the state in which he proposed to live (Ohio) and so familiarize himself with the modes of practice and become acquainted with the members of the Bar. In May, 1815, Rufus King wrote to Gov. Thomas Worthington, at Chillicothe, asking him to assist in arranging for Edward King's studies and residence in that city and to present him to those who could help him in his profession and to introduce him to social intercourse with their families. This, Governor Worthington promptly agreed to do. Edward left New York for Ohio in October, 1815, and settled at Chillicothe. See his sketch p. 283.

The Lawson Family.

1. The first one of whom we have any account was THOMAS LAWSON, a young man, born and reared in England. He had an excellent education and was of a good family. He accepted the position as steward for an Irish gentleman named Farley and went to Ireland to fulfill the duties of the position. Mr. Farley had a handsome and attractive daughter Hannah and young Thomas Lawson discovered the fact and fell in love with her. She appeared to reciprocate. The parent Farley discovered the situation and at once assumed the role of an indignant father. Young Thomas Lawson eloped with the girl, married her and took ship to America. He was a fine Latin scholar and opened a Latin school in Philadelphia and taught there. He afterward went to York, Pennsylvania and seems to have made money there. He had a son Thomas, who became the ancestor of all the Portsmouth Lawsons and of the Greenup county, Kentucky Lawsons. Tradition has it that the Irish gentleman disinherited his daughter for her conduct in eloping with Thomas Lawson and left what he intended for her to a bachelor brother. This brother decided to give his property to his niece, but could not find her, and for that reason devised the property elsewhere.

2. THOMAS, the son of the Emigrant Thomas was born in 1718 and died October 20, 1795, aged seventy-seven years. He is buried at Alaska in Mineral county, West Virginia. He was brought up at York Pennsylvania. He bought large quantities of land in Hampshire county, Virginia and sent his sons there to locate on it. The second Thomas Lawson was in the Revolutionary War and his record will be found under the title "Revolutionary Soldiers." The following are the children of the second Thomas Lawson, Revolutionary Soldier: (1) William, b. December, 1761. (2) Jacob, b. November, 1763. (3) Catharine. (4) Mary, b. December 21, 1766; m. a Johnson in W. Va. (5) Jane, b. March 31, 1767; m. a Johnson of Va. also. (6) Anna, b. April 14, 1769; m. Samuel Walker of Ky. (7) James, b. March 13, 1770. (8) Elizabeth, b. February 21, 1771; m. a Conner in W. Va. (9) Sarah b. April 26, 1773, m. a Williams in W. Va. (10) Hannah, b. August 19, 1775; m. a McQuillin, in W. Va. (11) Margaret b. May 7, 1777; m. a Burton, of Ky. (12) Thomas, b. April 25, 1779; m. Barbara Earsom. (13) John, b. May 7, 1781. (14) Fannie or Frances, m. a Blue, of W. Va.

3. JOHN married Hannah Blue in Hampshire county, in 1800, and had two children. A daughter Hannah married Moses Mackoy of Greenup county, Kentucky. The other child died in infancy. The first wife died soon after the birth of her second child and he married Catharine Taylor in Hampshire county, Virginia, in 1806. The children of John Lawson's second marriage were: (1) Elizabeth, b. January 20, 1809, m. William Bryson. (2) Mary, b. September 26, 1812, m. Romulus Calver. (3) Jane, b. June 1, 1815, m. Holliday Waring. (4) John Taylor, b. June 13, 1818. (5) Thomas, b. September 5, 1820. (6) Susannah, b. January 16, 1823. (7) William, b. May 10, 1825. (8) Catharine, b. May 24, 1828, m. Robert Johnson.

4. The family of ELIZABETH and William Bryson were: (1) Lawson and (2) James of Mackoy, Kentucky. (3) Catharine married William Withrow. (4) William lives in Sanger, Colorado. (5) Jane Elizabeth, wife of George N. Biggs of Huntington, West Virginia.

The account of William Lawson, the eldest son of Thomas Lawson, the Revolutionary Soldier will be found under this name in the Pioneer Sketches in this work. Thomas Lawson, his brother, was the third settler in Kentucky opposite the mouth of Munn's Run in Ohio. James another brother of William settled in Kentucky adjoining Thomas. One sister married Samuel Walker of Kentucky and another a Burton. Burton has two children Joshua and Hannah, who married Hezekiah Morton.

The Leete Family

can be traced to Gerard Leete who held lands in Morden, Cambridgeshire, in 1209. The family coat of arms is: argent, on a fesse, gules, between two rolls of matches, sable, fired proper, a martlet; or, crest on a ducal coronet, or, an antique lamp, or, fired proper.

1. THOMAS LEETE of Ockington, Cambridgeshire, England, married Maria Slade, of Rushton, Northamptonshire, daughter of Edward Slade. He named two of his sons John. The eldest was John of Dodington, the father of Governor William.

2. JOHN LEETE of Dodington was a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. Desiring to provide for his son, William, he was bred to the law and secured his appointment as Clerk in the Bishop's Court at Cambridge where the Puritans were tried for ecclesiastic offences. William Leete listened to the oppressions and cruelties practiced upon them until he was converted a Puritan to the disgust of his family.

3. GOVERNOR WILLIAM LEETE b. 1612, m. in England, in 1638, to Anne Payne, daughter of Rev. John Payne, of Southhoe. He emigrated to New England and located in New Haven, July 10, 1639. He was a deputy to the General Court from 1643 to 1650. He was magistrate of the town from 1651 to 1658, and Deputy Governor of New Haven from 1658 until 1664 when New Haven was united to Connecticut. From 1664 to 1669 he was assistant of Connecticut. From 1669 to 1676 he was Deputy Governor to the Connecticut Colony. In 1676 he was chosen Governor, which position he retained by continuous re-election until his death in 1683. When elected Governor of Connecticut, he removed to Hartford and died and was buried there. His tomb was lost till 1830 when it was discovered and a new monument erected. He was noted for his integrity and wisdom. He always governed well. He was a marrying man and married three times in the course of his life. He had nine children by his first marriage. His second and third wives were widows when he married them. He was the first Puritan in the family. He died April 16, 1683.

4. ANDREW LEETE, son of Governor Leete, was b. in 1643. He married Elizabeth Jordan June 1, 1669. In 1677 he became Colonial Governor of Connecticut and was re-elected annually until his death. He d. October 31, 1702 and his wife d. March 4, 1701. He secreted the charter of the colony when it was sought to destroy it.

5. WILLIAM LEETE, son of Governor Andrew Leete, b. March 24, 1671 and d. January 26, 1736, aged sixty-five, m. Hannah Stone, daughter of William Stone, of Guilford. She was born July 26, 1678.

6. SOLOMON LEETE, son of the second William Leete, was b. in September, 1722, m. Zipporah Stone, daughter of Samuel Stone and Mercy Rowlee, of Guilford. She died June 25, 1800, aged eighty. He died, aged eighty-one, September 6, 1803.

7. SOLOMON LEETE, son of the above, was b. December 3, 1746, m. Hannah Norton, daughter of Daniel Norton and Sarah Bradley, of Guilford. They removed to Granville, New York and to Tioga county, Pa. He died in 1822, and she died September 22, 1820.

8. URIAH LEETE, son of Solomon, m. in 1815, Mary Ives, daughter of Timothy Ives, of Cambridge, Mass. He had the following children: Betsey Emily, b. February 16, 1816, m. Samuel Chapman, father of Hon. Horace Leete Chapman. She resides in Jackson, Ohio. Horace, b. May 25, 1818, has a sketch herein; Ralph, b. January 12, 1823, m. Harriet E. Hand, has a sketch herein; Timothy J., b. February 11, 1829; Sarah, b. April 11, 1833, m. Walter C. Hood; John R., b. February 22, 1838.

The Lummis Family

came from Lancashire, England in 1690, landing near the Cape of Delaware, settled near Cape May afterwards, and then moved to Cumberland county, New Jersey.

MINOAH LUMMIS was born in 1712, in Cumberland county, N. J., and lived near Cape May. He had four sons, one of whom,

1. PARSONS L., was b. in 1740, and d. at seventy-eight years of age. This one was a private in Captain Richard Howell's Company, 2nd New Jersey Regiment, Revolutionary War. He had three children: Hannah, James and George. His son

2. JAMES was born in 1784 in Cumberland county, N. J., married Elizabeth Woods in 1810, and died in 1860. They had eight children:

3. JOHN WOODS was the oldest. He was born in 1813, in New Jersey, and came to Ohio and married Elizabeth Chaffin, February 4, 1849. Their oldest child,

4. SARAH, now the wife of Simeon E. Evans of Jackson, Ohio, was born March 22, 1851. They have two children living: Arthur L., and John Ernest. [John Wood Lummis and his sons, Shadrach Chaffin and Jacob Wood all have sketches herein.]

The McFarland Family

is traced as far back as the year 1150. Gilchrist, ancestor to the Laird MacFarlane, obtained by grant of his brother Maldwin, Third Earl of Lenox, large landed estates of Arrochar and four islands in Lake Lochlomond in the Highlands of Scotland, the charter for which is confirmed in the records of the privy seal. These estates remained in the possession of the clan MacFarlane for six hundred years.

Maldwin's son and successor was Partholin, (Gaelic for Bartholomew)—which came to be written Pharlan and Pharlane—(Mac., that is, the son of)—MacPharlan, and MacPharlane, which became MacFarlan or McFarlane, and was adopted as the patronymical surname of the clan. The name became McFarland in the Seventeenth Century by the emigration of some of the Scotch to the north of Ireland, where the pronunciation of MacFarlane became gradually changed to McFarland.

The Highland chiefs of the clan bore an active part in the border wars between England and Scotland. Malcolm, Fifth Earl of Lenox supported by his chiefs of his clan, fought for Robert Bruce at the battle of Halidon Hill, and lost his life in defense of his friend and companion.

Robert Bruce was crowned at Scone, Scotland, March 27, 1306. Miss Emma Bell, of Portsmouth, Ohio, is a lineal descendant of Bruce, and has in her possession a piece of heavy silk, part of which formed a dress worn at the coronation of Bruce, by Mrs. Heslet, one of Miss Bell's ancestors. A large silver spoon, once belonging to Bruce, is also owned by a brother of Miss Bell.

Sir John MacFarlane was knighted the evening before the battle of Flodden, and lost his life in that conflict. Andrew MacFarlane, with 500 of his clan opposed Queen Mary's forces at Longside, and was victorious, for which the crest of the clan was conferred upon him on the evening of the battle.

The armorial bearings of the MacFarlane clan are sculptured upon the marble tomb of Margaret Douglas Stuart, Countess of Lenox, in the south aisle of Westminster Abbey, bearing the inscription: "Countess of Lenox, 1577."

The tomb was erected by King James VI. grandson of the countess. She was the mother of Lord Darnley, who married Queen Mary of Scotland.

The Countess of Lenox was married to Mathew Stuart, Eleventh Earl of Lenox, a Scotch noble of the clan MacFarlane, June 15, 1544, and by this alliance became the foundress of the English royal family of Stuart. She was a cousin of Queen Mary of Scotland and Queen Elizabeth of England, and a niece of King Henry VIII.

The Mackoy Family.

The Mackoy family is of Scotch extraction, being descended most probably from the Highland Clan Mackay, which occupied the extreme North of Scotland, and which is said to have had a fighting force at one time of four thousand men at arms.

1. JAMES MACKOY, the first of the name in this country, emigrated to Virginia after the unsuccessful insurrection of the Earl of Mar and settled in King William county, with his widowed mother and two sisters some time prior to 1718. He became a farmer and later, in 1718, married Sarah Gresham, the daughter of Charles and Anna (Lawrence) Gresham, of King and Queen County. Mrs. Gresham was a daughter of John Lawrence and his wife, Mary Townley, of England. The issue of this marriage was two sons, James and John, and two daughters, who married brothers by the name of Mason.

2. JOHN MACKOY, son of James, was born in 1722, and resided in King William County, Virginia, as a farmer. In 1760, he married Martha, daughter of Benjamin Roberts (she was born 1740; died February 22, 1800) and shortly before the Revolution moved with her and his family to the state of Georgia. In November, 1774, he died and his widow returned to Virginia with her children, settling in Campbell county, on the Little Falling river some thirty miles east of Lynchburg, Virginia, where her five children grew to maturity. The youngest of these children was John, born December 25, 1772.

3. JOHN MACKOY, the second, born December 25, 1772, married, January 29, 1795, Lavinia Fuqua, daughter of Captain Moses and Judith (Woodson) Fuqua, of Charlotte county, Virginia. He lived in Campbell county, Virginia, until 1799, when he emigrated westward, settling for a while on the Kanawha river. In 1801, he moved further west and located on a farm in Greenup county, Kentucky, on the bank of the Ohio river about ten miles below the town of Greenup. Here he resided until his death September 28, 1843, rearing a large family of ten children. Of these, John, the fourth child, was born September 8, 1802.

4. JOHN MACKOY, the third, born September 8, 1802, lived in Greenup county, until 1829, starting in life as a clerk in the iron business. In that year he left home and went first to Boone and Grant counties, Kentucky. The year following he located in Covington, Kentucky, and resided there until his death, April 6, 1882, becoming a successful merchant of the place and a citizen prominent in everything pertaining to the advancement and development of the community. He was a member of the first city council, serving ten years; he aided in building the Covington and Lexington turnpike and was a director of the company from 1840 to his death. He was Deputy Clerk of both the Circuit and County courts from 1840 to 1854; he was a director of the Northern Bank of Kentucky, from 1843 to his death, and for more than thirty years was an elder in the First Presbyterian church. On October 25, 1838, he was married to Elizabeth Gravit Hardia, daughter of William Hardia, formerly of Fredericksburg, Virginia, and Elizabeth, his wife, (nee Timberlake) and by her had seven children. The oldest child was William Hardia Mackoy, born November 20, 1839.

5. WILLIAM HARDIA MACKOY, of Covington, Kentucky, was born in that town November 20, 1839. He was educated in the private schools of Covington, and at the University of Virginia, from which he graduated with the degree of Master of Arts. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1866, since which time he has been actively engaged in his profession in the states of Ohio and Kentucky. Having his office in Ohio, his practice is about equally divided between the two states. In 1901, he was elected the first President of the Kentucky State Bar Association. In 1890 and 1891, he was a member of the Kentucky Constitutional Convention, and as such served on the Committees on Corporations and Municipalities, drafting the articles of the Constitution relating to those subjects. Mr. Mackoy was married November 18, 1868, to Margaret Chambers Brent, of Paris, Kentucky, daughter of Hugh Innes Brent and his wife, Margaret, nee Chambers. He has two children now living, Harry Brent Mackoy and Elizabeth Cary Mackoy.

6. HARRY BRENT MACKOY, of Covington, Kentucky, was born July 18, 1874. He received his education in the private schools of Covington, and afterwards at the University of Virginia, and at Yale. He graduated from the latter institution in 1894, and then entered the Law School of the Cincinnati College, from which he received his degree in 1897. He was admitted to the bar before the Supreme Court of Ohio in May, 1897, and in Kentucky the following June. Since that time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in both states. His office is in Cincinnati, but he resides in Covington. He is unmarried.

The Millar Family.

JOHN WILLIAM MILLAR was born in Shenandoah county, Virginia, October 31, 1781. He was brought up to the trade of a tanner. He was of an adventurous spirit and he and his two brothers, Abram and Cornelius Elton, determined to try their fortunes in the northwest territory. Their German ancestors had settled in the valley of Virginia in 1730. John William's father was William Millar, born November 2, 1744. His wife was Elizabeth Ferree, born November 2, 1747. He died in Virginia, October 22, 1790. She died on the Dugan farm in Valley township. William Millar's father was an emigrant from Germany, first to Pennsylvania, and then to Virginia. The location of the Virginia home is now in Warren county, Virginia, formerly Shenandoah.

John W. Millar first visited Kentucky in 1799, and in 1802, he and John I. Vanmeter bought three sections of land, at government price, $2.00 per acre in the Scioto valley. John W. Millar's share was 900 acres. The terms of purchase are stated in the article herein in Congressional lands. John W. Millar died owning the same land and it passed to his son, Abram F. and from him to George B. so that the land has been in the same family since 1802. John W. Millar was a man of great determination, and quick action. As soon as he had secured his land he made up his mind he must have a wife and found a family. He went back to Virginia and there on September 22, 1803, he married Polly Headley, and immediately began his wedding journey to the wilderness of the new state of Ohio, by wagons and on horseback. They crossed the Ohio at Wheeling by fording and went to Zanesville and thence south to their new home. From Chillicothe they had to make their own road. John W. and his wife each rode horseback. His team was driven by his brother-in-law, William Headley. Their wagon was loaded with their household goods brought from Virginia. Polly Headley Millar was born June 7, 1782.

It was in December, 1803, when the bridal party reached their new home. A squatter had built a pole cabin on the land and they took possession of it, and set up their household goods. The first baby came along promptly, as was usual in those days, July 9, 1804. It was a girl named, Elizabeth Elton. She grew to womanhood and married Franklin Reynolds, May 22, 1827. The second child was Sarah N. born September 17, 1805. She married James B. Turner, of Piketon. He died December 9, 1860, in his seventieth year. They had two children, Jane Elizabeth, born November 7, 1830, and John William, born April 29, 1834. Elizabeth married Dr. C. Blaser, October 20, 1850, and had two children, James Turner, born January 20, 1852, and Anna Maria, born February 22, 1854. The third child of John W. Millar was a son, William Headley, born February 28, 1807. The fourth child of John W. Millar, was Maria Minta, born January 13, 1815. She married Gideon Chenoweth, January 27, 1842. The fifth child of John W. Millar, died in infancy, Isaac Newton. The sixth child of John W. Millar was Abram Ferree born May 26, 1818 and died February 23, 1868. He was a well known farmer in Scioto county. He married Harriet F. Peters, March 3, 1840. They had four children: George Bliss Millar, who has a separate sketch herein; Charles William, born November 16, 1844, died September 6, 1863; Elizabeth Reynolds, born November 28, 1846, died in infancy; Franklin Ferre, born August 28, 1850. He married Mary Elizabeth Thomas, and died December 7, 1880, of typhoid fever in Portsmouth, Ohio, leaving no issue. The seventh child of John W. Millar was Charles, born July 18, 1820. He married Rebecca Millar, October 12, 1844.

The strenuous life of the early settlers, the miasma, the discomforts and hardships of the pioneer times, Mrs. Millar, the wife of John W. Millar, could not endure. She died on May 2, 1846, aged forty-three years and eleven months. She was a remarkable woman. The inscription on the grave-stone says, "leaving her disconsolate husband and six children to deplore their irreparable loss. She was a dutiful daughter, an affectionate wife, and prudent mother, a prompt and sincere friend." She was only ill seven days. Her husband had left home in March to go to New Orleans with a flat-boat load of produce and did not reach home till two weeks after her death. John W. Millar survived until January 12, 1857, when he died aged seventy-six years, two months and twelve days. John W. Millar was a well educated man in his time. He was particularly ambitious to keep up with the times and took regularly and carefully read the National Intelligencer, the Ohio State Journal and the old Scioto Gazette. It would be difficult at this time to describe all the qualities of John W. Millar, but with his lands, he transmitted his personal qualities to his son, Abraham F. Millar, who in turn transmitted the character and lands to his son, George Bliss Millar. Those who know the latter, know the qualities of John W. Millar.

The Nash Family.

The name originally was Attenash. When surnames were first given, the then ancestor of the Nash family lived near an ash tree and he was so distinguished as Attenash. The "N" was put in for euphony and after a time the "atte" was dropped and the name became simply "Nash."

The facts given below are taken from a work entitled, "The Nash Family or Records of the Descendants of Thomas Nash of New Haven, Connecticut." 1640. Collected and Compiled by The Rev. Sylvester Nash, A. M., Rector of St. John's Church, Essex, Connecticut. Hartford: Press of Case, Tiffany and Company. 1853.

I. THOMAS NASH. His wife was Margery, a daughter of Nicholas Baker of Hertfordshire, England. He landed at Boston, Massachusetts, July 26, 1637, from the ship Hector, with his wife and five children. He was a gunsmith by trade and in 1638 settled at New Haven, Connecticut. He was from Lancashire, England. He made his will in 1657 and speaks of his old age. In the records of the town, he is spoken of as "Brother Nash." September 1, 1640 he was made a member of the General Court and received the freeman's charge. February 11, 1655, his wife is spoken of as "Goodwife Nash" and she is assigned a seat in the meeting house. In 1651, he was Town Armorer. He had five children. His son Timothy was born in 1626.

II. TIMOTHY NASH commonly called Lieutenant Timothy Nash, was the youngest child of Thomas Nash, the emigrant, and was born in England, in 1626. He was in New Haven December, 1645, when he was fined for being absent from general training. He pleaded that he had to bring home his hay, but his plea was not allowed. He took the Freeman's oath March 4, 1654. He was m. to Rebecca Stone in 1657, the daughter of Rev. Samuel Stone of Hartford. April 23, 1660 he was fined for being absent from town meeting. He was a blacksmith and was one of the first settlers of Hadley, April 18, 1659. He was a Lieutenant in the Militia, then an important office. He represented Hadley in the General Court, 1690, 1691 and 1695. He d. March 13, 1699 in his 73rd year. His wife d. in April, 1709. The Nourse Family.

The ancestry of the Nourse family (sometimes spelled Nurse and Nurs) has been traced back for several generations but lack of data prevents the writer from attempting to go farther than the first of the name in this country. The family is of Norman descent and came to England at the time of the Norman Conquest.

I. FRANCIS NOURSE, b. January 18, 1618, at Yarmouth, Bristol county, England, m. Rebecca Towne, November 22, 1644. He died November 22, 1695. Rebecca Nourse was the first victim of the Salem witchcraft to be brought to trial. She was executed July 19, 1692. A monument to her memory has been erected and dedicated in the family burying ground at Danvers. It is of granite, eleven feet high, finely lettered and polished, and contains the following inscription by John G. Whittier:

"O Christian martyr, who for truth could die,
When all about thee owned the hideous lie!
The world, redeemed from Superstition's sway,
Is breathing freer for thy sake today."

Her sister, Mary Estey, was arrested April 22, tried September 9, and executed September 22, 1692. Another sister, Sarah, was accused but escaped the fate of her sisters.

The old Nourse house at Danvers, Massachusetts is yet standing and a picture of it, as it appeared in Rebecca Nourse's life time is found herein.

The Prescott Family.

The name of Prescott is of Saxon origin, and is composed by the contraction of two Saxon words, "priest" and "cottage," and therefore signifies priest cottage, or priest's house. A metallic coat of mail and armor, such as were worn by ancient Knights, was brought to this country by the emigrant, John Prescott. A coat of arms was conferred upon one of the remote ancestors of the family for his bravery, courage and successful enterprise as a man and as a military officer. It is described in the language of Heraldry by Mr. Burke as follows:

"Sable a chevron between three owls, argent (two in chief, one in base). Crest, a cubit arm, couped, erect, vested, gules. Cuff, ermine, holding in the hand a pitch pot (or hand beacon), sable, fired proper."

The arms of the Prescotts of Dryby in the County of Lincoln, England, and which belong to the descendants of the emigrant, James Prescott, of New Hampshire, are thus described by Mr. Burke, to wit:

"Ermine, a chevron sable—on a chief of the second two Leopard's heads, or crest—out of a ducal coronet or a boar's head and neck ar. bristled of the first."

The first mention of the name found is in the 11th vol., pp. 29, 30, of Thomas Rymer's Foedera, wherein a confirmation of a grant made concerning acqueducts of the City of London by H. de Patershall, treasurer to the King, is addressed to "Magistro Waltero de Prestecote, Vice Cancellario, et al."

The direct lineage of the Prescotts that came to America cannot be traced farther back than the time of Queen Elizabeth, yet it is well known that Prescott was known as an ancient family in the town of Prescott, in the County of Lancashire, England, from which descended James Prescott of Standish, Lancashire, one of the gentlemen of Lancashire, who were required by an order of Queen Elizabeth, dated August, 1564, to keep in readiness horsemen and armor. He married a daughter of Roger Standish, Esq., of Standish, a sister to Ralph Standish.

II. JAMES PRESCOTT m. Alice Molineaux. For his bravery and military prowess and achievements he was created Lord of the Manor of Dryby in Lincolnshire, and had new arms granted to him described above, and was afterwards known as Sir James Prescott. He d. March 1, 1583 leaving a son John, and daughter Anne.

Their children were: Margaret Tracy, teacher in the Portsmouth High School; William Wood, mechanical engineer, Honolulu; Robert Cariton, Secretary and Treasurer of the Portsmouth Foundry and Machine Works; Elizabeth Virginia, kindergarten teacher; and Mary Frances.

The Riggs Family.

The head of the family in this country was (I) EDWARD RIGGS, who was born in England, probably in Lincolnshire or Yorkshire, about 1590, and came to this country, landing at Boston early in the summer of 1633, with his family consisting of his wife Elizabeth, two sons and four daughters. He settled in Roxbury, then a suburb, but now a part of the city of Boston.

II. EDWARD RIGGS, son of Edward, the immigrant, was born in England about 1614, and came to this country with his father. In 1637, he was a sergeant in the Pequot war and greatly distinguished himself for bravery. In 1640, he settled at Milford, Conn., in a location still known as Riggs Hill. Here he built a stockade about his residence, and in his house in 1661, he secreted and protected Whaley and Goff, two of the members of the English Parliament that condemned and executed Charles I, who were being searched for by the emissaries of Charles II along the Connecticut coast. In 1665, he with others from the plantation of Derby, Conn., settled at Newark, New Jersey.

III. EDWARD, son of Edward (II), was born in Roxbury about 1636, and became a large landed proprietor in New Jersey.

IV. JOSEPH, son of Edward (III), was born in Newark, N. J., about 1675, and died there, leaving a large family.

V. GIDEON, son of Joseph (IV), was born at Orange, N. J., in 1713, and died at Morristown, N. J., January 25, 1786. He was an active member and liberal supporter of the Presbyterian church.

VIII. JOSEPH RIGGS, son of Stephen (VII), was born near Amity, Washington county, Pa., July 2, 1796.

The Schafer Family.

SCHAFER is a common name among the Germans. It signifies Shepherd. The Schafer family above referred to, left Wurtemberg, Germany, about 1820, and floated down the Rhine. They took passage at Rotterdam and spent three months on the voyage, owing to their vessel being disabled. Three of the daughters of the family remained in Baltimore, their landing place. The others went overland to the Ohio river, where they obtained flat-boat. The father of the family was Joseph. When they reached Portsmouth, they landed and the father went to work on Aaron Kinney's farm, now a part of the city of Portsmouth.

They were soon able to purchase land on the west side. In three and one-half years after landing in Portsmouth, the eldest son walked to Baltimore to bring out his sisters. He made the trip, one way, in fourteen days. This brother brought his sisters out in a wagon. The younger sister, Catherine, remained in Baltimore five years. She afterwards married Joseph Williamson, and became the mother of George Williamson, of the west side. Joseph Schafer afterwards took his family west and became very wealthy. He lived to be ninety-five years of age. His wife died soon after the family arrived in Portsmouth.

He was one of the founders of the Gallia Academy in 1809. He was an officer of the war of 1812. At one time he was in command of the post at Chillicothe, with six hundred English prisoners in his charge. His wife was Margaret Entsminger, of Virginia, whose father was a Revolutionary soldier.

General John L. Vance's great-grandfather on the paternal side, Samuel English, served in the Revolutionary War as Second Lieutenant of the 5th New York in 1776. He was made First Lieutenant in 1778; retired, 1781.

Alexander Vance was County Auditor and Surveyor of Gallia county; Mayor of Gallipolis for several terms; Justice of the Peace, four terms; member of the Board of Education several terms. He was one of the officers detailed at Vicksburg to survey and construct a canal and it was in this service that he contracted disease which caused his resignation in 1863.

The Vanmeter Family.

came from Bommel in South Holland in New Amsterdam, in 1663. The emigrants were:

I. JAMES GYSTERSIN VANMETEREN and his son aged ten, Kyrn Jan Vanmeteren. The name of the emigrant's wife has not been preserved. He settled in Utrecht, in Kings county.

II. KYRN JANSEN VANMETEREN married Neltje Van Cleef, September 9, 1683. Their children were Jan (John) baptized April 24, 1687, Engelje, Gysbert, Kyrn, Benjamin, Eyda, Joseph, Cyrinius and Janitze.

III. JOHN went to Virginia in 1739 on an exploring expedition and examined the valley of the South branch of the Potomac. The name of his wife has not been preserved. In 1740, he and his four sons, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and John settled in Virginia.

IV. ISAAC VANMETER married and had four children, Henry, Garret, Mary and another daughter who married Jacob Hite and died without issue. He located in Hardy county, Virginia, in 1744. In 1757, he was killed by the Indians outside of the Fort where he resided.

V. GARRET VANMETER was born in New York, in 1732. He married Mrs. Ann Sibley whose maiden name was Ann Markee, in 1756. He was a Colonel of the Militia in the war of the Revolution and intimately acquainted with Gen. George Washington. He had children, Isaac, born, December 10, 1757, Jacob, born May 8, 1764, Ann, born, April 15, 1767.

VI. ISAAC VANMETER, b. 1754, m. Bettie Inskeep and among their children was John Inskeep Vanmeter, No. 7 below. Isaac Vanmeter died December 13, 1837, in Hardy county, Va. A picture and sketch of him is given in "Genealogies and Sketches of Old Families, etc." by Benjamin F. Vanmeter, of Kentucky, published 1901, by John P. Morton and Company, Louisville, Kentucky. Isaac Vanmeter was a strict Presbyterian and a model citizen. He was a member of the Virginia Legislature when it ratified the Federal Constitution.

VII. JOHN INSKEEP VANMETER was b. in Hardy Co., Virginia, February 1798, son of Isaac in No. VI. He attended William and Mary College and afterwards at Princeton, N. J. where he graduated in 1821. He studied law in the celebrated school of Judge Gould, at Litchfield, Conn. and was admitted to the Bar of Virginia in 1824. He commenced the practice of law at Moorefield, Virginia. In the same year he was elected to the House of Delegates from Hardy county. April 11, 1826, he was married to Mary Harness, a daughter of Joseph Harness and took up his residence in Pike county, Ohio, on a farm of 3,000 acres his father had purchased in 1801. From December 5, 1836 to April 3, 1837, he represented Ross, Pike and Jackson counties in the lower house of the Ohio Legislature. From December 4, 1837 to March 19, 1838 he represented the same counties in the House, and from December 3, 1838 to March 18, 1839, he represented the same counties in the Senate. In 1840, he was a Whig Presidential elector from Ohio. From March 4, 1843 to March 4, 1845, he was a member of the 28th Congress for Pike, Jackson, Hocking and Ross counties. In 1855 he removed to Chillicothe where he resided until his death in August, 1875. He had seven children who grew to maturity Elizabeth H., Joseph H., Isaac, John M., Eliza and Sarah twins, and Mary. Of these only John M. and Mary are surviving. Mr. Vanmeter was a whig during this existence of that party, afterwards he acted with the Democratic party. He was a citizen respected and beloved by all who knew him and possessed of all the civic virtues.

VIII. JOHN MARSHALL VANMETER, son of John Inskeep Vanmeter in No. 7 was born in Pike county, Ohio, in September, 1836. He attended the University of Virginia and graduated from Jefferson College, Pa., in 1854. He graduated at the Harvard Law School in 1857 and began the practice of law at Chillicothe the same year. In January, 1861, he married Miss Eliza Irwin Sisson, daughter of Dr. Peleg Sisson. There were three children of this marriage, John I., Eliza I. and Marshall Sisson, who died in young manhood. Mrs. Vanmeter died in 1865. In 1872, Mr. Vanmeter married Miss Susan Cunningham, of Moorefield, Hardy county, W. Va. There were three children of this marriage, William Streit, Mary Harness, and Sally Cunningham. The son died in childhood. From January to October, 1876, Mr. Vanmeter served as Common Pleas Judge of his sub-division by appointment. In 1881, he retired from the practice of the law and devoted his entire attention to his property interests. He conducts his large farm in Pike county and is President of the Savings Bank of Chillicothe, Ohio. In his political views, he is a democrat.

The Waite Family.

The word "Wait" originally spelled "Wayghte" or "Wayte" is derived from the old High German "Wachten"—to keep watch. The original "Waytes" were found in England immediately after the Norman Conquest.

I. RICHARD WAITE, the immigrant ancestor of the Wait family, became a proprietor of Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1637, and resided there many years. From him descended three sons: (1) John, (2) Thomas and (3) Joseph. From Thomas sprung Henry M. Waite, Chief Justice of Connecticut, who was the ancestor of Morrison R. Waite, Chief Justice of the United States. Most, if not all, the grandsons of this immigrant ancestor, were soldiers of the Revolutionary War. Some of these distinguished themselves in the French and Indian War, previously, and history records their sufferings and privations while on the march and in prison.

II. JOSEPH had only one son, named John, who kept the Old Waite Tavern on the Post road, between Boston and Albany which was a famous stopping place for travelers for many years.

III. This JOHN WAITE had seven sons: (1) John, (2) Joseph, (3) Thomas, (4) Benjamin, (5) Richard, (6) William and (7) Jeduthan. Joseph, the second son, entered the Provincial Army in 1754 and has a most interesting history and his fame is proved by the fact that at Springfield, Massachusetts, and Clarendon, Vermont, monuments were erected by the citizens as a token of the esteem in which he was held. Waite river in Vermont received its name on account of some of his daring exploits.

IV. BENJAMIN WAITE, the fourth son of John Waite, and one of the ancestors of the Waite family in Scioto county, enlisted in the French and Indian War, at the age of eighteen, and was in forty engagements during this service. At one time he was captured by Indians and with two others was made to run the gauntlet. Waite being tall and athletic and understanding Indian ways, grabbed a gun from one of the Indians, clubbed his way through and gained his freedom, but the others failed and were badly beaten. Soon after this, came the boundary dispute between the states of New York and New Hampshire and this young man was one of the Green Mountain Boys in that struggle. Following this difficulty came the battles of Lexington and Concord and he with other patriots at once offered their services and he received a commission as Captain and the official records at Washington mention him first as Major and then as Lieutenant Colonel of Waite's Battalion of Vermont Militia, Revolutionary War. Colonel Waite was a patriot of the highest order for at the breaking out of the war he sold all his property for $4,000 in gold and loaned the money to the government, which was repaid him in Continental Currency which was nearly worthless. It is on record that he gave a peddler $1,200 for a half pound of tea and a quarter pound of indigo, so little value was there in this kind of money. The service required of the army of that locality during the war was of the most arduous kind for they had to deal with the cunning of the savage as well as the civilized foes. He was afterwards commissioned as Brigadier General of the Vermont Militia as one of the rewards for his services. His life subsequent to the war is well known in the history of his state and mention is made of the different positions of honor held by him in these after years of his life. The town of Waitsfield was chartered by him and several others and the records of that place show him to have been both a patriot and a Christian. General Wait born February 13, 1736, at Sudbury, Massachusetts, was married to Lois Gilbert, 1767. She was the daughter of Captain Gilbert another one of the heroes of the Revolution. He died 1822 leaving six sons: Ezra, Benjamin, born at Windsor, Vermont, September 11, 1773, Gilbert, Thomas, Joseph and John.

V. BENJAMIN, the second son and the ancestor of the Waits of Scioto county, emigrated to Ohio in the year 1814, coming with his family from Vermont to Pittsburg by wagon. Here a boat was secured and family, teams and household goods were loaded and floated down the Ohio, landing near Portsmouth. He had expected to locate in the Scioto Valley, but on arrival and noting the appearance of the inhabitants and hearing their stories of the malaria, became discouraged and located on the knobs of Porter township and there lived the remainder of his life, giving his best efforts in clearing the land and doing other work in the pioneer line of fitting the wilderness for habitation. Here the family was reared and each took his or her part in the duties of the times. Other employments were often entered into for a season for the purpose of getting a little money which was so scarce in that day. Benjamin Wait built one of the first saw mills in this section and for years his little mill on Ward's Run furnished the only lumber used in that neighborhood. The young men of the family made frequent trips to the salt works of the Kanawha Valley and would remain for months working in order to get a little cash. The father made several trips to New Orleans on flat boats, with some of the sons, to sell produce, floating along, standing watch by turns and selling their load, and boat, too, as best they could, and then making their way back, often the greater part of the way on foot, each trip consuming months of time. Benjamin Wait was married to Lavinia Heaton in 1793 and he died January 8, 1858. His wife died October 7, 1872, aged over ninety-six years. Twelve children were born to them, only two of whom, Benjamin F. and John H., spent nearly their whole lives in this county.

VI. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WAITE lived on a farm in Porter township, at what is now known as Waite's Station. He married Mary Smith, of Kentucky. To them were born: Perlina S. Allen, deceased, Olive A. Hayward of Nebraska, William H. of Iowa, James P., deceased, Abigail Stockham of Scioto county, Joseph B., deceased, Benjamin F. of Nebraska, Lavinia, wife of Captain A. J. Finney of Portsmouth, Jemima Schomberg of Scioto county, Mary, deceased, and Nevada.

John Heaton Waite was born March 22, 1811. He was three years old when he came to Ohio with his father. He was married to Malvina D. Sikes September 12, 1839. Their children were: Isabella Wyeth, deceased, Gilbert D. of Scioto county, Frances W. Leiter of Mansfield, Ohio, Emma W. Avery of St. Albans, Vermont, Sadie S. Holman of Long Dale, Virginia and John W. of Detroit, Michigan.

Paul White's Family.

Paul White was born in Pennsylvania, December 17, 1817. His father died when he was a child. Paul removed to Scioto county when he was a youth. He was married to Elizabeth Walker. They had four children: John and Nancy Ann, who m. Wm. Powell, reside at Young, O.; Drucilla, m. Francis M. Powell, resides near Otway; Elizabeth, m. Frank Morse; resides on Paul White's old home place. His wife died February 25, 1862, and he was married the second time to Serena Powell in 1863. They had two children: Harrison, who resides on the old home place and Laura B., married Dynes Chambers. Paul White was a prosperous farmer, and owned a great body of land on Brush Creek. He was always a democrat in his political views. He was not a church member, but a good citizen. He died in 1882.

The Whitney Family.

The first Whitney was Eustace de Whitney of Flemish descent. Of his mother, Agnes, it is recorded in Domesday Book, "Agnes, widow of Turstin the Fleming, and Sir Eustace, her son, Lord of Whitney, gave to the church of St. Peter, at Gloucester, one hide (120 acres) of land in Pencomb, etc." Some of the early Lords of Whitney were of Welsh descent, one of whom, Sir Peidge Exrog, was a Knight of the Round Table, and "in King Arthur's time he lived at his castle at Cardmore at Cardiganshire." The Robert Whitney of the parliament of the First Elizabeth, 1558-59, received the honorable order of knighthood in the time of the reign of Queen Mary, and his crest was the head of an ox.

I. JOHN WHITNEY was the first Whitney in America. He was the son of Thomas Whitney and Mary Bray, his wife. He was bpt. in St. Margaret's the parish church standing in the shadow of the famous Abbey on the 20th day of July, 1592. He was one of nine children. His mother d. September 25, 1629 and his father died in April, 1637. February 22, 1607 he was apprenticed at the age of fourteen by his father to William Pring of the Old Bailey, London. The latter was a "Freeman" of the Merchant Tailor's Company, then the most famous and prosperous of all the great trade guilds. On March 13, 1614 he became a full-fledged member. He was m. in England to Elinor ———. She was b. 1599 and d. in Watertown, Mass., May 11, 1659. In April, 1635, he registered with his wife and five sons as a passenger in the ship "Elizabeth and Ann, Roger Cooper, Master," which a few weeks afterward, completed her lading and set sail for the New World. He settled in Watertown, Mass., June, 1635. He m. 2d in Watertown, September 29, 1659, Judith Clement. She d. before her husband. He had ten children, of whom Joshua b. July 5, 1635 was the eighth. He was a deacon and original proprietor at Groton, Mass., and dwelt there probably until it was burned by the Indians, during King Philip's war, in the spring of 1676. He returned to Watertown for a few years and d. in 1719. His will is dated April 17, 1713, and proved October 6, 1719. He was buried in the old burying ground in Groton. He served as a soldier in King Philip's war with his son, Joshua Jr. in 1691-2. He had twelve children, of whom William, born February 28, 1678 was the fourth. He d. August 7, 1719.

III. WILLIAM WHITNEY his son was b. in Groton, Mass., February 28, 1678. He resided in Groton until his marriage. He was m. in Chelmsford, March, 1700, to Lydia Perham, b. February 19, 1673; d. in Groton, August 24, 1716; m. 2d in Newton, April 25, 1717, Margaret Mirick, b. 1683. He removed to Plainfield, Connecticut, about 1720, where he afterwards resided. His will is dated October 15, 1751. In 1754 he gave the heirs of his sister Abigail Hutchings some property by deed. He had six children. William born May 5, 1701 was the eldest.

IV. WILLIAM WHITNEY born at Groton, Mass. May 5, 1701. He was m. at Killingly, Conn., July 16, 1723, to Mary Whitmore. He removed to Connecticut when quite young with his parents. Settling in Killingly he resided there until after his marriage, when he moved to Canaan, not far from 1753.

He was a cooper by trade, but followed farming nearly all the latter part of his life. While resident in Killingly in 1728, he was elected a member of the first board of surveyors. William b. February 5, 1725 was the oldest of his three children.

V. WILLIAM WHITNEY b. at Canaan, Connecticut, February 5, 1725; m. at Salisbury, Conn., June 4, 1747, to Arcoucher Dutcher; m. 2d to Jane ———. He was a farmer. He had nine children. Christopher b. September 23, 1751 was the oldest.

VI. CHRISTOPHER WHITNEY b. at Salisbury, Conn., September 28, 1751, where he resided until his majority. He was united in marriage at Sharon, Conn., to Mary Ticknor, of Sharon, Conn., and with his bride was said to be the handsomest couple ever married at that place. Soon after his marriage, the war with Great Britain broke out, and he enlisted in his country's behalf. After the war, with other Continental soldiers, he was paid off in lands; he received a grant of 50 acres of land in the town of Solon, Cortland county, New York. He probably removed there about 1790 or thereabouts from Tinmouth, Vermont, when he moved from Connecticut. He had four children. Ruluff, b. June 25, 1777, was the second.

VII. RULUFF WHITNEY b. at Salisbury, Conn., June 25, 1777, m. at Virgil, New York, about 1800, to Susanna Glenney. He has a sketch herein among the Pioneer Sketches.

CHAPTER III.

BIOGRAPHIES OF SOME OF THE PIONEERS OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

Cornelius Willbank Bailey

was born in the state of Delaware, June 14, 1807 and resided there till he was five years of age. His father was Nathaniel Bailey. His mother's maiden name was Comfort (Prettyman) Bailey, daughter of Shepherd Prettyman. His parents were married in 1798. They had six children of whom our subject was the fourth. He resided in Delaware until the year 1812, when his father came to Scioto county and died there in the year 1815. His mother survived until March 8, 1852 when she died at the age of seventy-three. The first location made by Nathaniel Bailey was two miles north of Portsmouth, near the toll gate. The family traveled from Delaware in a covered wagon to Brownsville, Pa., where they took passage on a flat-boat and came down the Monongahela and Ohio rivers to Portsmouth. His father was a carpenter.

While in Scioto county, he built houses for Philip Noel, Martin Funk, Charles T. Mastin and Joseph Micklethwait. As Cornelius grew up, he followed farming and worked for his uncle John Beauchamp until he arrived at the age of sixteen, when he went to farming on his own account. He attended the schools of the vicinity until he was seventeen years of age. He was the main support of his mother and her family after the death of his father. It was after his father's death that he went to his uncle, John Beauchamp, and he resided with him for about ten years. In 1825, he returned to Scioto county where he resided until 1873, when he went back to Pike county, and spent the remainder of his life.

February 3, 1831, he was married to Eliza Guthrey, a granddaughter of Col. John Guthrey, who came from Pennsylvania, and located on a tract of land now partially covered by Piketon, and lying south of it, extending more than a mile, and including what is known as the Vanmeter farm. Mr. Bailey had born to him seven children. His eldest son, John O. married Minerva Jones, daughter of George Jones, of Clinton, Ohio. They had five children: Sarah Frances, James, Anna, Cornelius W. and John.

Mary Jane married Benjamin H. Johnson, of Piketon. They have two children, William and Eliza.

Cynthia Ellen married Rev. Wilder H. Middleton, who now resides on the old Bailey homestead, in the out-skirts of Piketon. They have two children, William Howard and Arthur Bailey. William Howard is Common Pleas Judge in Pike county.

Frances D. is living in a leasant home in Piketon.

Louisa married Presley T. Talbott, and died December 3, 1871, leaving four children, Charles Clifton, Delbert Warwick, Cornelius Bailey and Louisa.

Mr. Bailey was a member of the Methodist church for fifty years of his life and lived up to it and to all that is taught and believed in that body of Christian people. Mr. Bailey always enjoyed the confidence of his fellow citizens, and was Treasurer of his township for four years. He accumulated quite a fortune. By his own industry and right living, he became owner of over 1,300 acres of land. In 1875, he gave an auto-biography of himself. In it he made these remarks: "I have honestly endeavored all my life, to live as a good citizen, and now, in my old age, can truthfully say that my lines are cast in pleasant places. I have enough of this world's goods to enable me and mine to live comfortably, which we desire to do without abusing. I have never been ambitious for political preferment, but have kept on in the even tenor of a farmer's life, enjoying what I could, and loved peace rather than turmoil."

He states that the first year after he was married, he lived on the Cunningham farm, now known as the Davis farm, in Scioto county. In 1833, he entered into partnership with Lloyd Howard, one of the pioneers of Pike county, and who reared Mr. Bailey's wife. Mr. Howard was his wife's uncle. Mr. Bailey made the first purchase of land, 280 acres near the mill in Pike county. He attributed much of his success to Mr. Lloyd Howard, from whom he learned many valuable lessons, and who contributed very much to his success and prosperity. Mr. Bailey's home on his home farm was built in 1852, and in 1872, he built the comfortable home in Piketon, in which he resided thereafter until his death in 1891. He stated in concluding the subject of himself and wife, "though feeling affliction at times, in the loss of children and near and dear relatives, we have reason to praise God for his goodness to us and ours. We are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and are looking forward to a blissful immortality, when it shall please God to call us to himself." God did call Mr. Bailey Dec. 10, 1891 and his wife Feb. 1, 1894. His life and character in the community were a tower of strength. His counsel was sought by all his friends and it was always valuable. He was a man and a Christian to be looked up to and was looked up to. The life of one like him was better than a sermon every day in the week. It was a sermon which every one who knew him could understand. It was a sermon and benediction combined, and one that a child could appreciate.

Christian Blaser, M. D., was born at Langnau, Canton Berne, Switzerland, February 4, 1823. He left Switzerland at the age of thirteen, and went to Winesburg, Holmes county, Ohio. From there he went to Ross county, where he read medicine with Dr. Jonathan Miesse. He attended Medical College at Philadelphia. He was graduated as a physician in 1846. He located first in Greenfield and then at Sinking Springs. He located at Piketon in 1848, and practiced there and did a banking business till 1860, when he moved to Wilmington, Ohio, and conducted a bank there till 1866. Then he returned to Piketon and remained one year. In 1867, he went to Waverly and engaged in the drug business and the practice of medicine which he continued till 1874, when he gave up the drug business entirely. He continued to practice medicine at Waverly till 1882, when he moved to Columbus, where he retired from all business.

He was married in 1850, to Jane E. Turner, daughter of James B. Turner, a merchant and pork-packer in Piketon, Ohio. James B. Turner's second wife, mother of Mrs. Blaser, was Sarah N. Millar, daughter of John W. Millar. The children of Dr. Blaser were: James Turner Blaser, born January 20, 1852; Anna Maria, born Feb. 24, 1854, wife of Charles E. Bonebrake, of 865 Franklin Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. The wife of our subject was born November 7, 1830, and died March 31, 1891, at Columbus, Ohio. Dr. Blaser was not a member of any church. He was a democrat, and was prominent in Masonry. He died July 23, 1888. He was a first class business man in every respect. As a physician he was wonderfully successful. He seemed to know what to do in any case presented to him, and had the entire confidence of the community, as a business man, to an extent beyond his contemporaries and no man deserved it more.

Luther Martin Beaman was born in Hartland, Connecticut, December 2, 1827. His father was Thomas Beaman. He obtained such education as the schools of his vicinity afforded, and at the age of twenty years, started out to make his own fortune. He came to Ohio, and began by peddling clocks, brass kettles, and other articles much in demand. He was first employed to conduct a country store, at Waterloo, in Lawrence county. He mastered the business at once, and soon afterwards established a like business for himself at Ridgway, in Gallia county. In 1856, he removed his business to Centerville, in Gallia county. He remained there in business until his death. He began in Centerville with a stock of only a few hundred dollars and died worth $300,000. He dealt in farm products and stock. No opportunity to make money ever escaped him. He was naturally adapted to the business of banking, and in 1874, he established a National Bank at Centerville, but this was merely an adjunct to his outside business. The bank had a capital of $50,000 and he held the greater part of its stock. He became a dealer in government and municipal bonds and made extensive purchases and sales. Mr. Beaman was always conservative and safe. The people of his community and county had unlimited confidence in him.

He served as County Commissioner for a time. He represented Gallia county in the Legislature from January 4, 1880, to April 19, 1883. As an evidence of the confidence of his fellow-citizens, it is mentioned that he held the office of Treasurer of his township for a period of about twenty-five years. He was a loyal man during the war. On September 18, 1864, he was made Quartermaster of the 173d Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with the rank of First Lieutenant and served until June 26, 1865. He had the talent and ability to have filled the same position for the entire army of the United States. Mr. Beaman had the faculty of doing everything well, which he undertook, and it never had to be done over again. If he had a humble duty before him, he performed it just as well as though it was the most important. No details of business, or duty, were ever neglected by him. His motto might well have been, "Whatever is worth doing, is worth doing well." Mr. Beaman was never a member of any fraternity or lodge, but managed to be on good terms with every one. He was not a member of any church, but aided those about him. He had the faculty of being a valuable aid and assistant to any body or organization with which he was connected. He was a strong and ardent republican.

His counsel, advice, and assistance was always of great value to his party. His services to his county, as Commissioner and as a legislator were most valuable to it. He could suggest needed reforms, changes, and improvements, and they would be adopted. When adopted, if it fell to him to carry them out, he did so, most successfully and without friction or opposition. His judgment on all subjects was most valuable. He did his own investigating and reasoning, most quietly, but when he reached a conclusion on a subject there was no better and no other. His judgment would be accepted at once as the best. His knowledge on subjects he investigated was most accurate and thorough. He never made any boasts of it, but acted on that intuitive instinct he possessed by nature, and the facts he had acquired by observation and study. He was of the very best type of the sturdy New England Yankee, possessing all those qualities which have made the citizen of the United States known and respected in every part of the world. He would never undertake what he could not do and whatever he did undertake, succeeded, because he would undertake only what he could do. Of course he had a wonderful knowledge of human nature. He not only had it, but utilized his knowledge with the very best results. To have accomplished what he did in a county community where everybody is supposed to know his neighbors affairs, was most remarkable. There are but few instances of this kind.

He was married soon after he came to Ohio to Margaret Kellar, daughter of Abram Kellar and Susan his wife. She survived until August, 1896. They had six children: Fred, the youngest died in infancy; Jessie, the wife of James F. Morgan, died in August, 1884; Parnie, the wife of Dr. Jehu Eakins, died in June, 1897, without issue; Ida B., the wife of Rees W. Thomas, of Jackson, died November 14, 1900. She left six children, Mrs. David Armstrong, Jr., of Jackson; Madge, Helen, Luther Beaman, Stanley, and George. Mr. Beaman left one son, Matere, who resides at Centerville. He married Margaret, the daughter of David D. Morgan, of Centerville, and has one son, David, aged fifteen years. Mr. Beaman died suddenly March 12, 1901, of cancer of the bowels. Since his death, his bank has closed its business. All deposits were paid and the charter surrendered. His career was beneficial to the community in which he dwelt and he aided many worthy men to success.

William Biggs, Senior, was born October 19, 1800, at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, the son of Andrew and Judith (Robertson) Biggs. Andrew Biggs was engaged in business there, keeping a tavern, but failing when his son William, was thirteen years of age, he removed to Greenup county, Kentucky. The son was early thrown upon his own resources, and when quite young carried the mail from the mouth of Big Sandy to Greenup and from Mt. Sterling to the mouth of Big Sandy and return, and by good management soon became a land holder. His farm being heavily timbered, he kept a woodyard on the bank of the Ohio river and also ran a line of keel boats on the Ohio and Big Sandy rivers. He could relate many thrilling incidents of early days. He was a shrewd business man of sterling character, being noted for his keen sense of justice to all men. He became identified with the business interests of Portsmouth about 1850, when he bought a hotel, since called the "Biggs House." Mr. Biggs was a large slave holder until 1862. He was a kind and indulgent master. In the thirties, his slaves would cross the Ohio river, and work in the state of Ohio, but they did not attempt to run away.

He as a whig during the existence of the Whig party and afterwards became a democrat and remained such the remainder of his life. In the last twenty years of his life, he was a member of the Presbyterian church. His wife was Lucy Bragg Davis, daughter of Captain George Naylor Davis, a soldier of the war of 1812. She was also a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Biggs enjoyed good health all of his life. He never had a spell of sickness except in 1868. He was exact in his business methods, and was always prompt about his obligations and arranged his business to pay cash, but at the same time, was lenient and indulgent to those who owed him. He extended the utmost confidence to those in his employ, and they never abused it.

His family consisted of the following children: Andrew, William and Robinson, twins; Thomas; James Davis, of Wurtland, Greenup county, Kentucky; Anna Eliza, who married James Hockaday, both deceased; Susan, who died at the age of eighteen; Romulus, a physician in Greenup, Kentucky; George Nicholas, engaged in business in Huntington, West Virginia; Lucy, wife of Doctor Andrew Beardsley, of Huntington, West Virginia; Samuel, deceased; Lola, deceased wife of Judge William Thompson. Mr. Biggs began with nothing and left a colossal fortune at his death. His wife died June 13, 1889, and he survived until July 24, 1897.

Francis Campbell

was born at Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, January 1, 1792. He was a descendant of Duncan Campbell, of the lineage of the noble branch of Breadalbane, born in Scotland, but removed to Ireland after his marriage in 1612. His son, John Taylor Campbell, lived and died in Ireland, but his son, also named John, emigrated from that country to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, bringing with him his family. Among them was Francis Campbell's grandfather, born in 1692, and also called John. This John was educated in England. He was married and had four children, the youngest of whom, John, was the father of the subject of our sketch. He was born in 1740, and married to Miss Ellen Parker. The eldest brother of our subject was the Rev. John Campbell, so there were five generations in which the same name of John appeared.

Francis Campbell, our subject, obtained but slight schooling in his home, but left there and branched out in the world, determined to be the architect of his own fortune, confident in his success. He went to Baltimore and associated himself with John T. Barr, a prominent merchant there, and remained with him about two years, during which time he developed such attention to business and so much capacity in that direction, that Mr. Barr, who had arranged to establish a general merchandise store at Chillicothe, did so, and gave Mr. Campbell a partnership. The business was conducted under the name of Barr & Campbell, and the latter had sole management and control of the establishment. Their store was opened in 1814, and ultimately Mr. Campbell became one of the most prominent merchants in that part of the state. The business was continued until 1832, when Mr. Barr, who resided in Baltimore, became financially involved. Mr. Campbell had endorsed for him to a large extent and was a great sufferer. He lost all the money he had accumulated to that date.

Mr. Barr then retired from the firm, and two of the brothers of Mr. Campbell, James and Samuel, who had been connected with the business some time previous, were taken into partnership, and the style of the new firm was James P. Campbell & Co. The same business was continued with increased success for seven or eight years when James retired and the firm was then changed to F. & S. D. Campbell, (Francis and Samuel D.), and was continued until 1852, when Francis Campbell retired from active work, although the firm remained in existence for several years after. Mr. Campbell also identified himself with the business enterprises of Chillicothe. He was ever ready to promote the interests of his town. He was a director of the old Chillicothe Bank and the old Valley Bank, subsequently changed to the First National Bank, of which he was one of the projectors and original charterers. He was actively engaged in the organization and construction of the Marietta & Cincinnati railroad and other projects of a public nature.

He was a very large land owner in the city of Portsmouth, and sold fifteen acres just east of Campbell avenue, running from Gallia street to Jackson. He also owned various portions of additions in the city of Portsmouth and did a great deal of business in Portsmouth. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church of Chillicothe. He was a man of great integrity of character and purity of purpose. He was noted for his kindness of heart and affection. He was never married, but resided with his brother, Samuel D., where he died on the 17th of June, 1873.

Franklin Carel

was born in Paris, France, December 16, 1795, the son of Rene and Madelaine (La Roux) Carel. He came with his parents to Gallipolis, Ohio, in 1803. He was named for Benjamin Franklin and had a good education in both English and French, as he was the eldest son. He succeeded his father in the mercantile business, which he successfully pursued for many years. He often walked to Philadelphia to purchase goods for his store, which were brought across the Alleghany Mountains, in big covered wagons, drawn by four or six horses, to Pittsburg, and then loaded on keel boats, or batteaus, and floated to their destination. He and his brother, Virgil, erected the first steam salt mill in Gallia county, also the first iron foundry, which was managed by them for many years. He was also interested in the first saw mill operated in Gallipolis.

He was Justice of the Peace for twenty years and Notary Public for fifteen years, a long time city recorder, township clerk, etc. He was trustee of Gallia Academy for nearly fifty years and treasurer of the Board for thirty years. He was Associate Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Gallia county, from February, 1850, to September 1, 1851. He was a charter member of the Morning Dawn Lodge, F. and A. M. of Gallipolis. He was a man of much ability, and held many important offices. He was noted for his honesty and integrity of character and was widely and prominently known.

He was married in December, 1819, to Miss Rosina Devacht, daughter of Joseph W. Devacht. They had two daughters: Madelaine, the wife of Captain James Newton, a steamboat captain, and Rosina, the wife of David Y. Smithers, also a steamboat captain. He was married a second time to Sallie Whitney, by whom he had six children: Franklin and Charles, both photographers; Mary, the wife of H. Felix Woods, who was engaged as clerk in a large dry goods store; Henry; Josephine, the wife of L. Z. Cadot, who has a separate sketch herein; and Frederick, a printer. Franklin died at the age of thirty-three years and Henry at the age of two years. His third wife was Susan Berthelot. There were no children of this marriage. After a long, useful and busy life, he died on the 13th of April, 1883.

was born in the province of Normandy, in the north of France. He went from there to Paris, where he established a book store and also owned a mill for the manufacture of silk. He was married about the year 1793, to Madelaine La Roux, who came from the south of France. In the year 1803, owing to the disturbed state of France, caused by the Napoleonic wars, he emigrated to the United States. He disposed of his business interests and in the spring of 1803, set sail from Havre for the United States, with his wife and two sons, Franklin and Virgil. They landed at Baltimore, Maryland, after a voyage of fifty-nine days. From there they came overland to Pittsburg. He had letters of introduction to a French family residing there, but being unable to speak English, could not find the family.

He had intended to buy property and settle in Pittsburg, but determined to locate either in Cincinnati, Ohio, or St. Louis, Missouri, which at that time was a French town. He had a flat boat built and he and his family embarked and started down the Ohio. After a voyage of several days, they landed at Gallipolis to buy provisions, but finding the village was a French settlement and everybody speaking the French language, he gave up the idea of going on to Cincinnati, and decided to locate in Gallipolis. He engaged in the mercantile business and carried that on for some years, or until his son, Franklin, became old enough to manage the business, when he retired. Being a man of means, he purchased a large amount of real estate in and about Gallipolis. He had three sons, Franklin and Virgil, born in France, and Aristides, born in this country. His wife died in 1833, and he died March 27, 1843.

Charles Peter Clough

was born March 10, 1849, in Waverly, Ohio. His father was Dr. George Washington Alexander Clough, of Chillicothe, and his mother's maiden name was Sarah M. Steenbergen, one of the Pioneers of Pike county. He was the eldest of the two children of his father's first marriage. Dr. Clough's second wife was Mary McNeal. They had six children. Charles P. received a common school education at Waverly. At the age of nineteen, he became a farmer and lived a mile and a half above Waverly. In 1874, he moved on the Steenbergen farm, just north of Waverly. He was married to Mary Elizabeth Overman, February 19, 1895, the daughter of Henry W. Overman, of near Hillsboro. Her mother was Mary Warne. The children of this marriage are: Sarah, aged seven and Charles Edwin, aged five. Mr. Clough died November 3, 1900, of heart disease. He was a republican and a Knight of Pythias. He was a man of generous build and strong sympathies. He was a man who endeared himself to all who knew him, and was a good neighbor, and a true citizen.

Daniel Lot Davis

was born May 30, 1815, in Cardiganshire, Wales, and came to America 1838. His father was John Lot Davis. His mother died at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on the way from Wales. The family came to this country in 1841. He learned the blacksmith's trade and worked at Ohio, Mt. Vernon and Buckhorn furnaces, in Ohio, and Hopewell and Hunnewell, in Kentucky. In 1850, he located on a farm, in Gallia county, Ohio. He resided there until 1863, when he removed to a farm at Waterloo, Gallia county, Ohio, and resided on it until 1890, when he removed to Cincinnati, and died there in April, 1900. He was married in 1850, in Gallia county, to Elizabeth Morgan, a native of Wales. His children were: David Davis, late Judge of the Hamilton county Court of Common Pleas; Mary A., wife of Charles A. Passmore, of Cincinnati; Richard, died at the age of twenty-seven; Lot born November 8, 1856; Hannah, wife of Fred G. Leimann, of Norwood, Ohio. He had two children to die in infancy. His wife died in 1898. He was a republican and a member of the Welch Congregational church.

Francis D'Hebecourt

was born in Epernay, Province of Champagne, July 28, 1768. When old enough he was placed in a military school in Paris, to fit him for a command in the army. While at school he formed the acquaintance of Napoleon Bonaparte, who was a fellow-student. So close was their intimacy that, when both had graduated with honor and received their grade, Bonaparte as sub-lieutenant of artillery, and D'Hebecourt sub-lieutenant of infantry, they both determined to go to America, and to found a colony. When the two young men were ready to go, the family of Bonaparte persuaded him to remain in Paris, but D'Hebecourt came on, landing in Gallipolis, October 21, 1790, and for several years after, his life was one of constant hardship, and often great danger. He was appointed Captain of a Company, May 6, 1791. He was also appointed the first postmaster of Gallipolis, October 1, 1794, which he held until July 1, 1798. He was married on September 16, 1795, to Felicite Marret. In 1799, our subject was in business in Marietta, but not being successful, removed to New Orleans, in 1802, where he opened a school for young men. He remained here until his death, which occurred on November 22, 1832.

EDWARD DELETOMBE.

Edward Deletombe

was born in Barboursville, Virginia, (now West Virginia) January 14, 1821. His parents were Francis Tuissant Deletombe and Natalie Loyn Deletombe, natives of Lille, France, the former born in 1778 and the latter in 1784. They came to America in 1820, two years after their marriage, accompanied by Marie Pelagie Loyn and Auguste Loyn, sister and brother of Madame Natalie Loyn Deletombe, sailing from Havre for New Orleans, reaching there after a voyage of ninety days. On board ship was one C. W. J. Jerome who was in charge of a party of colonists from France who were to settle in the "French Grant." Discovering that Mons. Deletombe and his brother-in-law were possessed of means, Jerome induced them to join his colony in the El Dorado. On reaching the promised land they found that they had been deceived in the titles of land they had purchased, Mons. Deletombe moved on to Barboursville, Va. where his only child, Edward, subject of this sketch, was born.

In 1823, hearing from the French settlement in Gallipolis, the family moved there, where Mons. Deletombe laid the foundation of a substantial fortune for his son, in the face of many hardships and difficulties in the early years of that settlement, in great contrast to the condition of affluence they had enjoyed in France. Mons. Deletombe was engaged in mercantile business in Gallipolis, and died January 2, 1857 at the age of 73. His wife died July 18, 1856, aged 72. Edward Deletombe was married to Laura M. Steinmann of Lancaster, Ohio, May 14, 1850, and was the father of six children, three sons and three daughters, namely: Clara, Alice, Frank, Charles, Edward and Laura. The sons are deceased; Edward having died in 1870, Frank in 1884 and Charles in 1886. Besides his wife and three daughters who survived him, he also left a grandson, Edward, the only child of his eldest son Frank, who is now the only male representative of the family name.

He continued in the mercantile business established by his father until 1863, when he became President of the First National Bank of Gallipolis, at its organization, which position he held until his death, September 5, 1891. This bank had much to do with the interests and prosperity of the town and through its President became widely known. It was he who first suggested what is now known as the Hocking Valley railroad and through his enterprising efforts which met the interest and co-operation of his friend, Mr. William H. Langley, the road was built. Mr. Deletombe was a man of strong character with a marked individuality that left its impress on all he met. He was distinguished for his sterling qualities of mind and heart and was particularly noted for his friendships which were lasting. Once a friend, always a friend, was an inviolable principle with him and his generous manifestations of sympathy and interest in the welfare of his fellowmen, was through the abundant means he possessed, a source of grateful remembrance in which his name will ever be held. Yet he never did anything for display, and was in every way unostentatious, but was ever ready with open purse and willing heart to aid the needy and unfortunate and further every worthy enterprise.

During the Civil War, he rendered the Government valuable services through the means at his command, having furnished the money to equip the troops for what was known as "Hunter's Raid" in 1863, and at all times proving himself a friend to the soldiers and to his country. His life was in jeopardy in his own town, through upholding fearlessly the principles of a true Union man and a citizen of the Republic, and unarmed, he walked forth in his path of duty as much a hero as if on the battlefield. A friend once said of him, "Once he saw the truth and right, nothing could prevent him from declaring and doing it." His whole character was laid on the foundation of Christian principle. His charities were many, practical and effective. Those who knew him most intimately, loved and revered him most. He was a man of great reserve with strangers, yet with intense feeling and always had the strength and courage of his own convictions.

His memory was simply wonderful. Of dates, events and interesting anecdotes of the early days of Gallipolis, he was an encyclopedia of knowledge. He could enumerate upwards of 600 steam boats which had plied the waters of the Ohio from his childhood, the first one he remembered being the "Mechanic," when he joined the crowd that greeted Lafayette as the boat landed a moment at the wharf with her distinguished passenger in 1825(?). Through his energy ability and constant attention to business, he became wealthy and was at one time the largest tax-payer in Gallia county, owning through inheritance valuable property that was in the family over three-quarters of a century; among it a piece on which stood a log-cabin where the exiled king, Louis Philippe lodged during his brief sojourn there. It is to be regretted that the last years of this remarkable citizen was marked by great suffering from asthmatic troubles and in addition to the loss of his three sons, two of whom having died in early manhood but a few years preceding him, the fortune he had earned should be entirely and suddenly swept away through misplaced confidence in others. He left a wife and three daughters and one grandchild, son of the eldest son, Frank, to bear tribute to his memory, which will live as the memory of all that is noble and just will live, when stone and mortar have crumbled to dust.

Joseph Guillaume Devacht

was born at Inpres, Flanders, in 1763. After he obtained his education, he was employed as a scribe, and at the age of twenty-two he left Flanders and came to Paris, where, during the seven years which intervened between his leaving Flanders and his embarkation for America, he became a very ingenious silversmith. With the other French emigrants, he embarked in one of the ships which sailed for America, February 3, 1790, arriving at Alexandria, May 3. They remained there some time, and he formed such strong attachments to some of the people, and they to him, that he came very near staying there; he did not, however, but came to Gallipolis with the French colony in October, 1790. He opened a silversmith shop there, and his reputation soon became so great he had work from all parts of the country, receiving much delicate work from all the cities. So great was his skill in fixing watches, the people had a saying that in order to make a watch run well, it was only necessary for Devacht to look at it.

In March, 1798, Monsier Devacht married a widow lady of fine education, whose name was Madam Jean Frances Parmentier. She was born in Paris, January 15, 1775. Her first husband died September 15, 1797, and she and our subject were married five months after, Robert Safford, Esquire, of Gallipolis, officiating. They had the following children: Joseph W., an old bachelor; Emile; William D.; Eliza, the wife of Doctor Felix Regnier; Rosina, the wife of Franklin Carel; Virginia, the wife of Julius Regnier; Josephine, the wife of Albert S. Oakes, and mother of the late Mrs. Josephine F. Buskirk of Portsmouth; Fanny, the wife of Captain Jefferson Donnally. Our subject died May 12, 1845, respected by all who knew him. His wife survived him a number of years, dying on January 17, 1856.

Joseph Drouillard

was born at Wellsburg, Virginia, September 1, 1796. He was the son of Pierre Drouillard, a pioneer and Indian trader. His father was a Frenchman and his mother a Kentuckian. There were three children older than Joseph, Drusilla, Hannah, and Simon. When our subject was four years of age, the family moved and settled on the Ohio side of the river, twenty-five miles below Gallipolis, where Millersport now stands, deriving its name from Miller, his grandfather. Here he lived on a farm until the War of 1812, when he went out as Fife Major of a regiment. He volunteered when sixteen years of age at Gallipolis under General Edward Tupper. He afterward received a pension for his service in the War of 1812. He came to Gallipolis after the War of 1812 and was employed in the Clerk's office of Gallia county in 1817. In 1835, he was appointed Clerk of the Common Pleas and Supreme Courts, in place of Francis LeClercq, resigned. He held that office by appointment and election until 1858. He was elected Treasurer of the county in 1827 and served until 1844. He was Treasurer, Auditor and Recorder of the county, at a time when they were embodied in one office. He was Postmaster of Gallipolis from July-1, 1861 to December, 1865.

September 1, 1820 he was married to Sarah Bowen, daughter of Joel Bowen, at Marietta, Ohio. They had nine children: Anthony Wayne, deceased; Susan Miller married James Harper; Harriet married D. S. Ford, and deceased;

Simon Kenton; Christopher Columbus; Emily, widow of Doctor A. L. Norton; Joseph Jr.; James Pierre a graduate of West Point in 1861, who served as aide-camp to General Sykes in the first battle of the Rebellion at Bull's Run and afterwards with General Rosecrans in the Army of the Cumberland till the close of the war; and Marie. Our subject saw Daniel Boone at Millersport and remembered Simon Kenton, at Urbana, in 1834. He was a great fisherman and hunter. He was accustomed for years to make an annual deer hunt in Virginia. He used tobacco from 1840 and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was a Mason for seventy years and a charter member of Morning Dawn Lodge of Gallipolis, Ohio. He died March 10, 1895. He was honored and esteemed by all who knew him.

Major Joseph L. Finley

There is an old brown head-stone in the center of the little village cemetery at West Union, which recites—"Joseph L. Finley was born February 20, 1753, and died May 23, 1839." Most of the people of West Union and of those who have visited the cemetery or passed by have observed the stone, but do not know the story of him who reposes beneath, but we propose now to tell it so that hereafter, so long as this History is preserved, the headstone will suggest its own history. Major Joseph L. Finley was born on the date already given, near Greensburg, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. He was a graduate of Princeton College in the class of 1775. He entered the Revolutionary War on the first day of April, 1776, as a Second Lieutenant in Captain Moorehead's Company, of Miles' Pennsylvania Rifle Regiment, organized under a resolution of Congress on July 15, 1776. He was made a Captain on the 20th day of October, 1777, and his regiment was designated as the 13th Pennsylvania. He was transferred to the 8th Pennsylvania, July 1, 1778, and was made a Major July 20, 1780.

He served until November, 1783, more than two years after the surrender of Cornwallis, and he was seven years and seven months in service in defense of his country. He was in the battle of Long Island on the twenty-seventh of August, 1776, and that of White Plains the September following. He was at the battle of Brandywine in September, 1777; at Germantown, in October of the same year, and he was in the battle of Monmouth on that memorable hot Sunday, June 28, 1778. After that, he was sent with General Broadhead to the western part of Pennsylvania in his expedition against the Indians. He subsequently saw much hard fighting. He lost his left eye in the service and was otherwise much disabled. He emigrated to Adams county in 1815 and settled on Gift Ridge.

His wife was a daughter of Rev. Samuel Blair a noted Presbyterian minister in the early part of the history of that church in this country. She was a woman of much beauty of person and nobility of character, and their daughters were likewise well educated and handsome. She was an aunt of Francis P. Blair, the famous editor of the Globe of Washington, D. C. She was a sprightly woman, full of energy, and while small was considered very handsome. She had the blackest of black eyes; she wrote poetry for the newspapers, and wrote several touching tributes to the memory of deceased friends. Major Finley and his wife were both members of the Presbyterian church of West Union. He was a man of small stature, and in his old age his hair was silvery white. When he and his wife attended church at West Union, during the sermon he always sat on the pulpit steps, as he was somewhat deaf.

He had three daughters and two sons. His daughter, Hannah Finley, was the second wife of Colonel John Lodwick, and the mother of a numerous family. Among her sons were Captain John N., Joseph, Pressley and Lyle Lodwick, and among her daughters were Mrs. Nancy McCabe, Mrs. Eli Kinney and Mrs. J. Scott Peebles. She died in 1827, twelve years before her father. Another daughter, Mary Finley, married John Patterson, once United States Marshal of Ohio, and the father of Mrs. Benjamin F. Coates of Portsmouth, Ohio. She was the mother of seven children. She was married in 1818 and died in 1831. The Hon. Joseph P. Smith, late Secretary of the American Bureau of Republics, was her grandson and Mrs. Chandler J. Moulton of Lucasville her granddaughter.

Major Finley was pensioned under the law of 1818 and stricken from the rolls by the alarm act of 1820, because he had some little property. This action was disgraceful to the Country. He was restored about 1823, on the application of numerous friends. The testimonials in favor of his restoration would make the angels weep. All the commissions he held for his Revolutionary offices are on file among his papers in the Pension office. He was one of the truest of patriots and the best of men, a model for all who should come after him.

Job Foster

was born in Westmoreland county, Virginia May 3, 1756. At the age of 19 he was married to Nancy Craycraft. There were six children of this marriage: John, William, Samuel, Mary, Margaret and Nancy.

On the 6th day of October, 1780, he enlisted for 18 months under Captain Simeon Carpenter in the 9th Va. Reg. commanded by Col. Richard Campbell. The regiment assembled and passed the winter at Winchester, Virginia. In March 1781, it proceeded to Fredericksburg; then to Petersburg, Chesterfield Court-house and then to Guilford county, North Carolina to join the army commanded by Gen. Green, two days after the battle of Guilford N. C. March 15, 1781, and was in pursuit of the enemy under Lord Cornwallis as far as Deepwater. At Camden, South Carolina, he was in the battle of Fort Hales April 15, 1781. His regiment was ordered to the high hills of the Santee in South Carolina where it remained three months. Then it was sent to Fort Thompson for a short time; then to Fort Ninety-six in South Carolina where it was engaged in a number of skirmishes. The regiment was discharged at Saulsbury, North Carolina, January 1, 1782.

Our subject removed to Kentucky a few years after it became a state and settled in Greenup county near old Enterprise furnace. Here his daughter Margaret married Benjamin Barklow. She died in 1827, leaving three sons, William Foster, Stout and Benjamin.

Benjamin Barklow removed to Portsmouth, Ohio, and engaged in the grocery business, located on West Second street where the Second street school building now stands. He died in 1863. At that time he was conducting a grocery on the corner opposite the Second street school building.

Job Foster removed to Jackson county and bought a small farm on which he lived for many years with his son. He applied for a pension in 1819 and gave his age as 64 years. He died about 1856. His widow, Sarah Jane Jeffords, resides in Portsmouth. He was the ancestor of Mrs. Agnes Roe of the same city.

Robert Hamilton

was born November 28, 1795, at Connellsville, Fayette county, Pennsylvania. He was trained to the strictest belief and observances of the Westminster Confession, and it remained with him as the best part of himself all his life. He came to Adams county in 1817, in a flatboat. He landed at the mouth of Ohio Brush creek and walked up the creek to Brush creek furnace, where he engaged as clerk under Archibald Paul, who was then running the furnace. At that time the furnace only run on Sundays. On week days the forge ran to make hollow ware, pots, kettles, stoves, andirons and all kinds of castings. Then a ton of iron was 2,268 pounds and twenty-eight pounds allowed for sandage. The furnace at that time was run by water alone. When the water was low, they had to tramp a wheel to blow off, and the best they could do was to make two or three tons of iron a day.

On the twentieth of July, 1825, Mr. Hamilton was married to Nancy Ellison, daughter of John Ellison. She was a sister of the late William Ellison of Manchester. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Williamson, who signed his name to the certificate, V. D. M., (Verbi Dei Minister), which was the fashion at that time, which translated is "Of the Word of God, Minister." Robert Hamilton was a resident of Adams county until 1828. In that time he laid the foundation of a successful business career. He was diligent in business and of the highest integrity. At that time it was thought a furnace must run on Sundays or the entire charge would be ruined but Mr. Hamilton induced Mr. Paul to try the experiment of a change. It was found the iron produced was just as good. Mr. Hamilton was the first furnaceman in the country who stopped his furnace on Sunday. The old Brush creek furnace was owned by the Ellisons and the Meanses.

In 1828, Robert Hamilton and Andrew Ellison, son of the Andrew Ellison who was captured by the Indians in 1793, under the name of Ellison & Hamilton, built Pine Grove furnace in Lawrence county. Robert Hamilton fired it on January 1, 1829. Four tons a day was its capacity at starting. After he located at Pine Grove Furnace, he became one of the founders of the church at Hanging Rock, and was a ruling elder in it from its organization until his death. His first wife died June 23, 1838, and on February 20, 1839, he was married to Miss Rachel R. Peebles, a daughter of John Peebles and a sister of John G. Peebles of Portsmouth. Our subject's judgment was excellent and he was wonderfully successful in business. He amassed a large fortune of which his widow was largely the almoner. He was respected and esteemed by all who knew him as a man who lived right up to his standard, both in business and in religion. He died September 11, 1856, in his sixty-first year, of a dysentery. His death was a great loss to the business community and to the church. It was almost a calamity, as his influence and methods were of incalculable benefit to those about him. His ashes repose in the beautiful Greenlawn Cemetery, at Portsmouth, Ohio.

His widow, Mrs. Rachel Hamilton, survived until August 27, 1883, when she died, aged eighty-seven years and one month. She was noted for her pious life and good deeds. Her gifts to charities were many, large and continuous, during her whole life, but her gifts by will were also many, large and praiseworthy. She stated in her will, she feared she had not given enough to charitable purposes and therefore she gave her executor, her brother, John G. Peebles, $10,000 for charitable objects to be bestowed in his discretion. Her memory is revered in the entire circle of her acquaintance. The Peebles-Hamilton Reading Rooms at Portsmouth, Ohio, are a monument to her memory.

Captain James Harper

was born November 7, 1819 at Chillicothe, Ohio. His father was James Harper, a Philadelphia Quaker, and his mother was Julia Ann (Wilcox) Harper. She was the daughter of Robert Wilcox, a surgeon in the Revolutionary War and a native of Delaware. James Harper, Senior, came to Gallipolis, in 1825, to take charge of the Gallipolis Free Press, which he published there until 1831. Our subject worked for the Cincinnati Gazette, as a printer, four years. He then went to Louisville, Kentucky, and was there for twelve years on the Louisville Journal with George D. Prentice. On November 27, 1847, at Gallipolis, he was married to Miss Susan N. Drouillard, daughter of Joseph Drouillard, of Gallipolis. Mr. and Mrs. Harper made their home in Louisville, Kentucky, until 1849. In that year, he returned to Gallipolis and bought a half interest in the Gallipolis Journal, and thereafter resided in the town of Gallipolis until his death.

In June, 1850, he became sole owner of the Journal and continued it until December 23, 1863, when he sold out to R. L. Stewart. In November, 1871, he bought one-half interest and held it until 1873, when he sold out to William H. Nash, but after this sale to Mr. Nash, Mr. Harper remained connected with the Journal until 1889, when he retired from all business. During the war, when he was in control of the Journal, the paper was a straight out loyal Union paper. Mr. Harper was a member of the Military Committee of Gallia county, during the entire war and was its chairman. He devoted his entire time to the public good in that period and to the furtherance of the Union cause. He organized a military company and became Captain and served about three months.

Mr. Harper was a whig while the Whig party lasted and then became a republican and never wavered in his allegiance to the party. He was honest and honorable to a fault and an agreeable companion. He had the most pleasing manners. He was a gentleman who stood on his dignity at all times, at the same time he knew how to make himself agreeable to all around him. He was a charter member of the Odd Fellow Lodge of Gallipolis and was buried by that Lodge. He died September 16, 1891. His widow survives.

Captain Samuel Booth Hempstead was born June 18, 1823, in Portsmouth, Ohio, the son of Dr. Giles S. B. Hempstead and Elizabeth Peebles, his wife. He grew up in the city of Portsmouth, and attended its school. He also attended school at Marietta, Ohio, and Washington and Jefferson College in Pennsylvania. He became a steamboat clerk and master and followed that occupation for several years. He was one of the jolliest masters on the Ohio river, and was well acquainted with every one along the river from the mouth of the Kanawha to Cincinnati.

He was married March 12, 1846, to Mary Ann Hamilton, daughter of Robert Hamilton and Nancy Ellison, his wife. The following are his children: Anna Moore, born February 6, 1847; married Isaac Newton Hempstead, March 12, 1867; Margaret Jane, born October 9, 1851 married William F. Walker, November 22, 1877, died April 4, 1899; Elizabeth W., born November 30, 1853 died March 20, 1854. Mary Allen, born March 16, 1855; married Henry Ritter, December 29, 1877, died May 31, 1897. Giles Hamilton, born June 19, 1856; died September 8, 1856. Rosalie Hamilton, born August 3, 1859; married September 11, 1885, to J. P. Gillen. Harriet Hamilton, born October 13, 1861; married May 13, 1885, to A. Tupper Nye.

In the year 1870, Captain Hempstead retired from the river and engaged in the foundry business at Hanging Rock until the time of his death. He was not a member of any church. He was a republican in his politics. He was liked by all who knew him. He was a most pleasing conversationalist and companion and was the life and soul of any circle in which he was associated. He died at Hanging Rock, December 12, 1873. His wife who was born September 6, 1826, died July 6, 1901.

Charles Henking

was born in the city and Canton of St. Gall, Switzerland, in 1808. His father was Charles Henking, a dry goods merchant in St. Gall and Verona, Italy. His mother's maiden name was Henrietta Hettenbach, daughter of Johann Hettenbach, an old merchant of St. Gall. Our subject received a complete academical education in Switzerland, and learned English, French, German, Italian and Spanish. He spent his early life in Switzerland and in Italy. He was eighteen years of age when he came to the United States. He started for Mexico to establish an agency for the sale of cotton goods for his uncle Henry Henking. When he got to New York, he found that his first cargo was lost at sea enroute for Mexico. This discouraged him, he gave up the enterprise and sold his second cargo of manufactured cotton goods which had been made in Switzerland. In New York, he became an agent for a European Syndicate which owned a large body of Virginia land. He went to Union, Monroe county, Virginia, and was there several years. He remained there until the lands were sold. He spent two years in Virginia. He then spent some years after in Philadelphia and Cincinnati, as a book-keeper in different mercantile houses.

He went to New Orleans and while there became acquainted with C. A. M. Damarin. As a result of such acquaintance he went to Portsmouth, and into the house of C. A. M. Damarin as book-keeper. While so employed he became a partner and the firm was Damarin & Henking. On June 4, 1845, he attended the wedding of Abe Buskirk, to Miss Josephine Oakes at the old Devacht home in Gallipolis. He was Buskirk's groomsman and Miss Emily Creuzet was bridesmaid. They met for the first time at the wedding. It was a case of "love at first sight," and they were married the following 3rd of September, 1845. They went to housekeeping in Portsmouth on Second street in the brick residence lately owned by Dr. Lottridge, No. 80 West Second street. Up to this time Mr. Henking had been a gentleman of pleasure. He liked to make money, but spent it for the pleasures it empowered him to enjoy. After his marriage, he settled down securely to business, and was making money in Portsmouth, but his wife was dissatisfied and wanted to live at her former home.

In 1849, he moved to Gallipolis and formed a partnership in the banking business with Col. Peter Kinney, under the firm name of Charles Henking & Co. That continued for about two years, and in 1850, he went to Louisville and was in the banking business there about one year. In 1851, he returned to Gallipolis, engaged in the banking business there and continued it until 1862, when he closed out, and the First National Bank of Gallipolis was formed. In 1852, he formed the firm of Henking, Cadot & Co., wholesale and retail grocery. The firm was Charles Henking, Alfred Henking, a cousin, and John Julius Cadot. They carried on the business until 1857, when Mr. Cadot sold out to his partners who continued under the firm name of C. & A. Henking. In 1867, they sold out to Henking, Allemong & Co., Charles Henking retiring. Our subject then took a tour to Europe and was gone for two years. From his return until his death on March 8, 1875, he was a resident of Gallipolis, but spent a great deal of his time in Europe, Italy and Switzerland, and made numerous journeys there.

His wife died in 1861, and he never re-married. They had the following children: Charles, died in infancy; Florence Adile, born January 31, 1848; Charles William, born August 30, 1851; Henrietta Louise, born November 12, 1855; Joseph Louis, born August 25, 1858; Emily, born June 4, 1861, died in infancy; Florence, married Dr. W. C. H. Needham, October 4, 1870, he died January 12, 1882, and she resides in Gallipolis. His son, Charles W., is the cashier of the Ohio Valley Bank in Gallipolis, and one of the most energetic and enterprising of its citizens.

Mr. Henking was a whig and afterwards a republican. He was a social and affable gentleman of the old school. He was very energetic, had much executive ability and was always successful in business. As a young man he was of a lively disposition and fond of society. His principal business training was received from the late C. A. M. Damarin. He was a good liver, liberal in his views and expenditures. He was of great public spirit, always in favor of public improvements and encouraged them to the extent of his ability. He was one of those peculiar dispositions that whenever he made an acquaintance he made a friend.

William Ingalls.

William Ingalls was born in Glasgow, Scotland. He was honorably connected; his mother's brother was titled Lord Lowe. He was a cabinet maker and when a young man he came to Edinburg and set up in business, in which he was successful. Here he became acquainted with Grizzel Davidson, whom he married and by whom he had twelve children. Five of them died before they left Scotland. Those who lived and came to maturity were: Marion, born in Edinburg, John, born in Philadelphia, William and Grace, born in Bellview, Wood county, Virginia, and James, in Gallipolis, Ohio. They were Presbyterians and raised their family in that faith. They left Scotland about 1784, or 1785. They with a few other families settled in Bellville, Wood county, Virginia. Marion, the eldest child was nine years old when they left Scotland. In March 1792, she married Thomas Gilruth. The marriage was celebrated in Marietta, by old Esquire Tupper, father of General Tupper, who sustained a siege at Fort Meigs during the war of 1812. They had five children, two of whom died in infancy. James, was born January 29, 1793, Mary, born January, 1797, and William, May 24, 1799, in the French Grant, Scioto county, Ohio.

Colonel Henry L. Kline

was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the 25th of October, 1813. His ancestors came from Strasburg, Germany, in 1673, and settled at Baltimore, Maryland. When he was ten years of age, his father's family consisted of his mother, five sons and two daughters. They settled in Ross county, Ohio, not far from Frankfort. They made their journey in wagons. In the following year, his father, who was a miller by trade, took charge of the mill near Chillicothe, and afterward bought the Swearingen place in Buckskin township, Ross county.

Henry L. was at one time Lieutenant Colonel of one of the Ohio Militia companies, hence his title.

In 1833, April 2, he was married to Mary E. McCreary, near Chillicothe, Ohio, granddaughter of Gen. James H. Menary. He died October 9, 1879.

He was a strong Presbyterian and an exemplary Christian. He was a whig when that party was in existence and afterwards a republican. His only son, Peter J. Kline, is a physician of Portsmouth, Ohio. He had one daughter, Rosa M. Kline, who lives at the old homestead.

Francis Le Clercq

was born in the city of La Rochelle on the west coast of France, January 8, 1773. He received a fine education, and was an excellent penman. While at Gallipolis, Ohio, before he was married, he taught school. He made one or more trips to New Orleans. While he was teaching he had as pupils, two girls whom he afterwards married. In 1806, he married Eulalie Columbe Marrel in her 20th year. She died January 12, 1809, at the age of 23 years and 9 days. Nine months later, he married Marie Louise Cadot. After the death of his first wife, he was employed by M. Gervais to survey and lay out Burrsburg, near Haverhill. While surveying there he courted Mlle. Cadot. By his first wife, he had two children, by his second wife, one. For more than 25 years, he was Clerk of the Courts of Gallia county, and was postmaster at Gallipolis, nearly the same length of time. He carried on the business of merchandising and accumulated much money. In politics, he was a whig. In religion, he was nothing; but he was a Freemason. He died November 17, 1837, in his 64th year. He was buried beside his first wife, in the old cemetery at Gallipolis. When she died a willow switch was planted on her grave. In 1855, it was a tree four feet in circumference. He drew lot 91 in the French Grant, but never resided on it.

Adele Suzanna Magnet

was born in Havre, France, March 26, 1787; was five years old when she arrived in Gallipolis, with her mother, after a tedious sea voyage of six months, made memorable to her by the fact that she lost her doll which she had dropped in the ocean. Her father had preceded them by coming with the first colonists. Mrs. Magnet was the eldest of a family of ten daughters, and survived all, being the last survivor of the early colonists. She was married in 1806, to Antoine Rene Magnet, and was the mother of five children, two sons and three daughters, the only one living being Mrs. Louisa Halliday, now in her eighty-third year. Mrs. Magnet was a remarkably well preserved woman, retaining all of her faculties with the exception of hearing, up to the time of her death, March 8, 1887, when within eighteen days of her one hundredth birthday. Possessed of excellent health, and up to her latest years occupying herself chiefly with patch-work, she displayed that perseverance, industry and cheerfulness so characteristic of the French nature and was always an important and tenderly cherished member of the family circle in which she lived, surrounded by several generations of her descendants, which now number eleven grandchildren, sixty-seven great-grandchildren, and forty-seven great-great-grandchildren. It is a notable fact that when she died Mrs. Magnet still had her full set of 32 teeth in perfect state of preservation, being proof of her strong constitution and excellent health. She was a woman most highly respected, of integrity and worth, qualities that have been inherited by her many descendants.

Claudius Romain Menager

was born in 1757. He came from Normandy to this country with the French emigrants, landing at Gallipolis, October 19, 1790. He was married on the 18th of November, 1790, to Mary Bobine, a French lady, who came over with distant relatives in the same boat with him. This was probably the first marriage at Gallipolis. His wife has a picture herein. Mr. Menager was fully six feet high, well developed, with power and capacity for enduring toil and labor far above his associates. He started the business of merchandising at Gallipolis, with a stock which he had brought with him, but having a very meager supply he began looking around for some source from which to replenish it. He soon learned that Benjamin Ives Gilman, of Marietta, was wholesaling merchandise. He made the trip to Marietta, and purchased a stock on six months' credit, contracting to pay for the same in salt at three dollars per bushel, that being then the lowest wholesale price of that article.

His was at this time the only store in the settlement, and was looked upon as quite a mammoth affair and a great convenience. He lost no time in making up a pack to be taken to the Scioto Salt Works, thirty-seven miles distant, to exchange for salt. His goods were considered better than salt, and he found he could trade to good advantage. He took two pack-horses with him to pack the salt to Gallipolis, as in that day there was no other than a hunter's path. After the salt was thus packed to Gallipolis, it was put in a pirogue and two hands pushed it to Marietta, and paid his debt, then purchased again on the same terms. In this way, he kept up his store some years, and as emigrants came into the country a circulating medium of silver enabled the farmers and others to buy his goods and pay for them in cash. During his temporary absences, his wife attended to the store in a very efficient manner, and also to the house and other duties, and to their united efforts their after good fortune may, in a great measure, be attributed.

In addition to the store he entertained travelers and accommodated river men, and he opened a bake shop. In this manner by the joint industry of himself and wife, they soon became wealthy, and were considered by their neighbors as the "richest people in town." He was never known to stoop to a mean act, and was considered by merchants in Philadelphia, and other places where he had commercial intercourse, as a man of sterling integrity, punctual to an hour in the fulfillment of his contracts. It might, in truth, be said he was one of nature's noblemen. He had five children: Mary G. Menager, born in Gallipolis, June 9, 1792, died June 30, 1868; Peter Menager, born in Gallipolis in 1793, and died in Kansas October 20, 1868; Edward S. Menager, born in Gallipolis, September, 1797, and died September 17, 1870; Lewis B. Menager, born in Gallipolis April, 1801, and died at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, June 16, 1875; Roman Menager, born in Gallipolis July 20, 1799, and died January 19, 1888.

Very few men encountered greater difficulties in preparing their families for future usefulness than Mr. C. R. Menager. He gave the main support to a teacher, by which his daughter was qualified for a clerkship in his store, and sent his boys away to school, where each received a good education. He died in Gallipolis, surrounded by his family, on January 17, 1835. His wife survived him a number of years, she being the last but three of the original French emigrants. She died at her daughters, Mrs. Newsom's, in Gallipolis, December 10, 1854.

General James H. Menary

was born near Mifflin, Pennsylvania, June 9, 1760. His ancestors were English, his father being in the city of London at the time of the great earthquake. In 1784, he was married to Miss Mary Blair, a native of Mifflin, Pennsylvania. She was born October 30, 1765 and died at the age of ninety-six years. He was in the Revolutionary War and his record will be found among the Revolutionary Soldiers under that title in this book. After the War of Independence, he with his family, went to Bourbon county, Kentucky. He disliked slavery very much, and in company with General Massie, and twelve other men, he came north, crossing the Ohio river near Manchester. They went to the north fork of Paint Creek, at the place now known as Frankfort, Ross county. This was in the winter of 1792 and 1793. While there, a three day's snow storm came upon them and the snow fell to the depth of eighteen inches. They were compelled to return to their homes after suffering much from cold, hunger and fatigue. One year later, they returned to the Ohio river and had a skirmish with the Indians and one of their number, Mr. Robinson, was fatally wounded and died a few hours afterwards. A Mr. Gilfillian was also wounded.

In the summer of 1796, Mr. Menary located land near the present city of Chillicothe. In December of that year, he brought his wife and children and settled on the bank of the Scioto, three miles below Chillicothe. He afterwards removed to Slate Mills and spent the remainder of his days there. He was a member of the Legislature and represented Ross county in the House in 1810, 1816 and 1817. In 1812, he erected a block-house. It was known as the "Menary Block-house" and was on the present site of the city of Bellefontaine. He died November 29, 1839.

He had a family of seven children: James born in Pennsylvania, December 15, 1786; Alexander born in Pennsylvania, June 20, 1789; Jane born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, August 14, 1792; Richard born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, March 14, 1795; Betsy born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, November 20, 1796.

Jane Menary in her nineteenth year united with the Presbyterian church in Chillicothe. She was married in her twentieth year, in 1812, to James H. McCreary, of Lancaster, Pa. They settled in Ross county, Ohio, on a tract of land adjoining that of her father. They had three children Rebecca born March 30, 1813; James M. born November 11, 1814 and Mary E. born September 1, 1817. Jane McCreary died in her eightieth year, March 15, 1852, at the residence of her son-in-law, Henry L. Kline. Mary E. McCreary is the only one of her children now surviving. She is in her eighty-fourth year. She was married April 2, 1839 to Henry L. Kline of Pennsylvania. He was a Lieutenant Colonel in one of the Ohio Militia regiments. Their eldest son is P. J. Kline, M. D., a resident of Portsmouth.

Governor George Kilbon Nash,

Governor of Ohio, was born on August 14, 1842. His parents were Asa Nash and Electa Nash, nee Branch, both of whom came from Massachusetts, of old New England stock. The family consisted of three sons and two daughters, all of whom are deceased with the exception of the subject of this sketch. Both his parents attained more than three score and ten.

Mr. Nash's early education was given full attention. He took a preparatory course at Hudson, Summit, Ohio and then entered Oberlin College. He enlisted in Company K, 150th O. V. I., May 2, 1864 and served till August 23, 1864. The regiment garrisoned the forts about Washington D. C. during its service. He had typhoid fever in the service but recovered and during the winter of 1864 and spring of 1865, was employed as a school teacher. In April, 1865, he begun the reading of law, and in 1867 passed a successful examination and was admitted to the bar in Franklin county, Ohio. His progress in the legal profession was marked and many honors were achieved by him. In 1870, Mr. Nash was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Franklin county by a handsome majority, and filled that office for four years. So pronounced was the legal acumen and ability displayed by him, that in 1880 he was elected Attorney General of the State, a position to which he was re-elected and near the expiration of the second term he resigned to accept the appointment tendered by Governor Foster, the Judge of the Supreme Court Commission, in the spring of 1883. He served on the Commission until April, 1885. From the latter date he was for over a dozen years in practical retirement.

In November, 1899, he was elected Governor of Ohio by a large plurality of 49,000, and was re-elected in 1901. Governor Nash was married to Mrs. Deshler in 1882. His wife died in October, 1886. There was one daughter of this marriage but she died in childhood, in February, 1897. His two step-children now form his immediate family. Governor Nash is active in fraternal circles, being a member of the Masons, the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and in both public and private life he commands the confidence and warmest regards of all his fellow-men. He has made one of the ablest and most efficient of the long line of distinguished Governors of Ohio.

General Lewis Newsom

was born October 28, 1785, in Lewisburgh, Greenbrier county, Virginia. His father's name was William Newsom, who died December 27, 1812, at the age of fifty-two years. His mother was Margaret (Speece) Newsom, who died September 8, 1833, at the age of sixty-eight years. From 1803 to 1807, he served as an apprentice to the tanner's trade, in Lewisburgh, Va. On June 17, 1807, he located in Gallipolis, Ohio, and started on $500 capital, which he had borrowed from his master, James Withrow. He bought lots at the lower end of Second street, in Gallipolis and built a tannery. He married Gabrielle Menager on January 3, 1810. She was born June 9, 1792, the daughter of Claudius R. Menager and Mary Bobine, his wife. There is a picture of his wife's mother, Mary Bobine Menager in this work. She died June 30, 1868, and her father died January 17, 1835 and her mother died December 10, 1854, at the age of fifty-two. His children were: Junius Lewis, b. December 23, 1810, m. Elizabeth M. Gibbs, July 3, 1833, d. April 2, 1886; Mary, b. June 29, 1813, m. Darius Maxon, March 10, 1831, d. May 1, 1886. She was the mother of Mrs. W. H. Nash, widow of Gen. William H. Nash; Rosina, b. December 1, 1815, m. Augustus LeClercq, November 3, 1831, d. December 18, 1876, in Jacksonville, Florida. She was the mother of Mrs. H. N. Ford, of Gallipolis; James Withrow, b. March 5, 1820, m. Margaret Johnson, November 12, 1844, d. August 6, 1852; Caroline, b. December 11, 1823, m. W. C. Miller, August 15, 1844, d. February 23, 1881;

GOVERNOR GEORGE K. NASH.

Claudius Romaine, b. February 10, 1838, m. Augustus Hale, December 2, 1845, d. June 20, 1849.

Gen. Newsom lacked the advantages of an early education but he appreciated the opportunities about him more than most of his fellow citizens. He was closely identified with all enterprises for the good of the town of Gallipolis. He was one of the promoters of the Gallipolis Academy and a trustee from the time it was organized until his death. He occupied the office of Justice of the Peace many years. He was a man of most excellent judgment. Gen. Lafayette visited Gallipolis in 1825 and he was the principal one of the reception committee and escorted Lafayette about the village of Gallipolis. He owes his title to the State Militia in which organization he took a great interest. He was noted for his abstinence from the use of tobacco and liquors in any form. In his political affiliations, he was first a whig and then a republican. In his religious views he was inclined to the doctrine of the Presbyterian church. While not a member, he attended its services every Sunday. He died March 17, 1876, in his eighty-sixth year, and his death at that advanced age was a great loss to the community in which he dwelt.

Colonel Robert Safford,

a son of Dr. Chellis Safford and Lydia Warner, his wife, of Harwich, Mass., was born July 7, 1768, at Harwich, Mass. He married Catharine Cameron of Gallipolis in 1793. They had four sons and three daughters: John, Jonas, Polly, Lydia, Robert, Nancy and Chellis. In the spring of 1797, he rode horseback to Vermont and visited his mother, whom he had left twelve years before. In 1796 he was Justice of the Peace, and held that office until 1803. He was one of the first trustees of Gallipolis township. He was also one of the first Associated Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of the county under the constitution of 1802, and as such in the absence of Judge Thompson, of Chillicothe he pronounced the sentence of death on the first and only man ever hanged in the county, Jim Lane.

He was appointed Associate Judge of Gallia county on April 6, 1803, re-appointed for a second term on February 15, 1810; on February 18, 1816, he was re-appointed for another term. He was appointed to the fourth term, January 22, 1823. He was a member of the Ninth General Assembly, which met December 3, 1810, adjourned January 3, 1811, at Zanesville, Muskingum county, Ohio. He was in the State Senate representing Gallia and Meigs counties in the Twenty-First General Assembly, which sat from December 1, 1828 until February 12, 1829. He also represented the same counties in the Twenty-Ninth General Assembly, which sat from December 6, 1830 to March 14, 1831. He also sat in the Thirtieth General Assembly as Senator from the same counties. He was a Colonel in the War of 1812. He was Recorder of Gallia county, Ohio. He surveyed the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

It was related that when the party first landed at Gallipolis in October, 1790, to secure the grounds for the expected French, Col. Safford seized a tomahawk and rushed up the bank and cut down a sapling, in order that in after years he might have the reputation and honor of having felled the first tree on the site of Gallipolis. He was a companion of Daniel Boone, and had a tomahawk and axes presented to him by Boone. Daniel Boone at one time visited Gallia county and trapped two years on Raccoon creek with Col. Safford. He had two traps, a large one and a smaller one. The large trap, a wolf or bear trap, was called "Old Isaac," and was presented to Col. Safford, and is now in the possession of his descendants. Col. Robert Safford was, in form, an Apollo, in strength a Hercules. Firm without stubbornness, brave without boast, his deportment insured confidence and was a source of safety to all who trusted him. His step was light, lithe, and elastic; his stride lengthy; his powers of endurance were wonderful in their speed and almost incredible in their endurance. He died July 26, 1863, and was buried in the cemetery at Cemetery Church, about two miles on the Portsmouth Road from Gallipolis.

Thornton William Sargent

was born in Pike county, Ohio, March 19, 1806. His father was Eli Sargent. His mother was Elizabeth Wood, whose father was a native of Kentucky.

Eli Sargent had four sons and four daughters: Lydia, married Conrad Newsom; Mary, married Jacob Sears; Harriet, married Jacob Sears, a cousin to the other Jacob Sears; Elizabeth, married Andrew Guinn; Henry Wood Sargent married Elizabeth Berry; Snowden, married Catharine Berry, and one son died in infancy. Eli Sargent built the first mill in Pike county, the remains of the dam of which can be seen to this day from the N. & W. trains in passing the bend of the Scioto river, near Gregg's Hill. The dam was made of stone. The mill was built prior to 1816, and was a heavy frame structure. The father, Eli Sargent, sold the mill to his son, Thornton, and the latter sold it to Newton Moore. After the sale of the mill to Moore, Thornton W. Sargent bought a farm four miles below Pike-ton.

He married Elizabeth Mustard, daughter of Samuel Mustard, in 1830. They had six children: Samuel Mustard, the eldest, became a physician in Cleveland, Ohio; Elizabeth Catharine, married George C. Rittenour, of Richmonddale, Ross county, Ohio, September 1, 1857, where she now resides; Lydia Ann married James Sargent. Mary Jane died unmarried at the age of fifty-eight, Harriet E. is single and resides on the old homestead, Henry Wood Sargent died unmarried in 1893, at the age of fifty-one years.

Thornton W. Sargent was a farmer from 1836 until his death. His wife died October 9, 1867. He was a whig during the time of the Whig party, and afterwards a republican. He died September 24, 1893. At that date, he owned about 2,250 acres of land, all in the Scioto Valley. He was very liberal to his family and to others. He was one of the public spirited citizens of Pike county, and a tower of strength in the community in which he lived. He subscribed five thousand dollars to the building of the Scioto Valley railroad, now the Norfolk & Western.

Dr. Antoine Francois Saugrain

was born in Paris. He was highly educated, active and courageous. He loved adventure and disregarded hardship. He made one trip to Spanish America prior to 1788. At the latter date he came to America, went from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, started down the river, and was captured by the Indians, but escaped and reached where is now Louisville, Ky. He went up the Ohio river to Pittsburg on an open boat and thence rode to Philadelphia on horseback. He came back with the French Emigrants and landed at Gallipolis. He there married Mlle. Rosalie G. Michau, one of the party who came over with him in the same ship. He made barometers, aerometers and phosphorus lights. He only remained a short time at Gallipolis, and then went to Lexington, Ky., where he resided six years. Then he went to St. Louis, Mo., where he remained the remainder of his life. Mrs. Elise Marie Kennerly was his daughter.

Joseph Prentiss Shaw

was born in New York city, July 1, 1818. His father William Shaw was a native of Massachusetts and his mother Eliza Dewolf of Nova Scotia. They were joined in marriage at Rye, New York, March 29, 1808. From this marriage there were seven children, Joseph P. being the third. His paternal grandfather Stephen Shaw was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. His mother's people were sea captains. Most of his boyhood was passed in New York city, but he was sent as a student to Mr. Fairchild's school in New Jersey. During the Civil War he was engaged in the Provost Marshal's office. He was always an ardent republican, always a Presbyterian and for many years an Elder in the First Presbyterian church of Ironton, Ohio. He came to Ohio when quite a young man and was engaged in a bank in Columbus, afterwards holding the same position in a Cleveland bank. He came to Ironton, Ohio, in 1850, where for many years he owned a drug store, afterwards holding the position of United States Commissioner.

He married Mary D. Perkins, at Marietta, in 1849. Of this marriage there was one son, Douglas, now living in Philadelphia. His wife died in 1853 at Marietta. He married Rebecca Hibbard at her home in New Hampshire in May, 1856. Of this marriage there were five children, four of whom are still living: Mary A., wife of J. C. Adair of Columbus, Ohio, and Nellie of the same place, Lila and Frank H. of Ironton, Ohio. He died peacefully at is home on the evening of May 14, 1900 after a short and sudden illness, at the age of eighty-one years, ten months and thirteen days. So ended a long, honorable, upright Christian life. He is buried at Woodlawn cemetery of Iron-ton, Ohio.

Abel Sherman

was a pioneer of Ohio. In 1794 with a party of adventurers, he had located near the mouth of Olive creek near Marietta. There were seven or eight men and boys in the garrison and they called it Fort Fry. Abel Sherman had with him his wife and two sons. Early in June, 1794, a party of three Indians visited the settlement for the purpose of depredation. One way of bringing the whites into their power was to take possession of their cows, which, during the summer ranged in the woods and found an abundant supply of food from the pea-vine and buffalo clover. The Indians would secure the cows, knowing that their owners would come after them and then they would attempt to waylay them and kill or capture them without danger to themselves. One of the cows taken by this party of Indians belonged to Abel Sherman, then a stout man of nearly 60 years. Against the advice of the other seven of the garrison he determined to go alone and search for his cow.

With his gun on his shoulder he went along the margin of the river about four miles above the neighboring garrison of Waterford thinking they might have fallen in company with the cattle of that settlement. When he reached Waterford he could learn nothing of them. It was now nearing the close of day and his friends urged him to stay all night, thinking it was more than probable that the Indians were watching the path and were the cause of the absence of the cows. Sherman would not listen to this advice but insisted on going home on that evening. He had approached within a quarter of a mile of his home when he found near the mouth of the run, since called Sherman's Run, a patch of ripe May apples. The sight of the fruit tempted him to stop and gather a quantity for the women and children. He had nearly filled the bosom of his hunting shirt when rising up from his stooping posture he saw an Indian within a few steps of him. Instantly he seized his gun, which he had rested beside a tree, raised it to his shoulder, and fired at the Indian in nearly the same instant in which the Indian fired at him. Sherman fell dead with a bullet through his heart, while his own shot broke his adversary's arm near the shoulder. The report of the two discharges was distinctly heard at the little garrison, and his eldest son, Ezra, a man grown, and a fine woodsman instantly said that one of those shots was from his father's gun, a large musket. He at once seized his arms and rushed out in search of his father, although strongly opposed by the men in the garrison, who were aware of the danger. knowing that the Indians never ventured into the settlements alone. Fearless of consequences, in a few minutes, Ezra was on the ground where his father fell and found him dead and his scalp taken off. The Indians had immediately fled, knowing or fearing that pursuit would be made from the garrison.

Some of the particulars of this story were ascertained after the treaty of Greenville, from an Indian who was in the party at the time and came in to trade with the whites. He said the Indians had determined not to fire on a single man, but to make him a prisoner, or else to wait until more than one came out after their cows, but their discovery by Sherman and his prompt action led them to kill him in their own defense. The next day a party of men from the fort at Waterford went up and buried Sherman where he fell. A tombstone was erected with a scalped head rudely carved on it, and that marks the spot where he fell.

Abel Sherman's daughter, Phebe married John Jeffords. He had a son, Ezra Jeffords who married Elizabeth Van Bibber. His daughter Sarah Jane Jeffords married Stout Barklow of Portsmouth.

Charles William Simmons was born January 18, 1811, in Virginia, and was the third child and only son of John Simmons of Virginia, Captain of Virginia Volunteers in the war of 1812, wounded under General Jackson at New Orleans, and who died at Guyan-dotte, Virginia, enroute home. His wife, Sarah McCoy, who was born in Ireland and came to Virginia when seventeen, brought her three children to meet her husband at Guyandotte. After his death and burial there she traded her Virginia possessions for three or four hundred acres of Ohio river bottom land above South Point in Lawrence county afterward known as the Judge Ben Johnson farm, and settled there near three brothers she had not seen since they separated in Ireland. She died at the homestead at the age of eighty-four, in August, 1863, while her grandson, John, was absent in the army, and sleeps alongside of her only boy "Charley," as Mr. Simmons was called by everybody, but his wife and mother. He spent most of his early manhood on the river, making many trips to New Orleans.

At the age of twenty-six he married Phoebe Shattuck, sixteen, who mothered his fourteen children of whom five boys and two girls are still living, John being the eldest. At the age of eighty-two, she is a well preserved, well informed and beautiful old grandmother. She makes her home with her youngest child, Alice, the wife of Honorable Robert M. Switzer, of Gallipolis, Ohio. She was the daughter of Simeon Shattuck born at Windham, Vermont, in 1788, who was the son of Nathaniel Shattuck and Mary Burns, who were married while residents of Massachusetts but began their married life at Windham. Her mother's maiden name was Martha (Patsy) Hull also born at Windham, Conn., September 25, 1788, the third daughter and tenth child of John and Martha Hull, who were relatives of General and Commodore Hull.

Simeon Shattuck and Martha Hull were married at Windham, Conn., where four children were born. Having to sacrifice his farm to pay a debt incurred by indorsing a friend, he brought his family to Ohio. Phoebe, the wife of Charles W. Simmons was the first Ohio child born to them, March 26, 1820, at the Forks of Indian Guyan in Lawrence county, just above what is now the village of Scott Town.

Charles W. Simmons, when not satisfactorily and popularly filling the office of Sheriff, or Treasurer of his county, was township Trustee or Treasurer, and always a school director, and for many years kept the postoffice at his house, which his son Jack named "Willow Wood." It was a neighborhood convenience, and gave his house full of children the advantage of endless reading matter sent to the office as samples in pursuit of subscribers. There were no emoluments attached to this small office, but he was a cherished and trusted neighborhood father, and the people came to him not only for advice about business and trading and sowing and reaping, but the helpless for employment or charity, the ignorant to learn how to vote, and the mothers to know what to name their children, when the vocabulary of names had outrun their biblical list as was not infrequently the case on Symmes' creek in those strenuous days. Mr. Simmons died October 14, 1874, of paralysis, at the homestead, and was buried in the quaint old graveyard near Marion.

Elizabeth Grey Smith,

daughter of Thomas and Mary Bonifield Grey, was born in Maryland, east of Washington, February 2, 1790, and was one of a family of nine children, five sons and four daughters. During President Jefferson's administration, she and her brother Elias were accustomed to carry flowers and strawberries from their home to the Executive Mansion to Mrs. Jefferson. Some time after this, her parents moved to Pennsylvania, where she married Jacob Smith, and they, with their parents, moved to Kentucky, where the three families all lived near each other. Mr. and Mrs. Grey died in Greenup county, Kentucky, Mrs. Grey being one hundred and fourteen years of age at the time of her death, in November, 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Smith continued to live on Tygart creek, in the neighborhood where their parents had lived, until the death of Jacob Smith, August 24, 1835. Two sons and eight daughters were born to them, of whom Mrs. Cynthia Smith Littlejohn was born April 22, 1824 near Liberty, Greenup county. Mrs. Smith died in Jackson county, Ohio, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Serrot, in the year 1880, at the age of ninety years.

General Samuel Russell Thomas

was born at South Point, Lawrence county, Ohio, April 27, 1840. His father was James Thomas, born in Ireland, April 21, 1795. He married Nancy Callahan

GENERAL SAMUEL R. THOMAS.

December 25, 1838 and died February 21, 1843. Nancy Callahan was born near Romeney, Virginia, July 11, 1812 and died September, 1871. Our subject attended the schools in his vicinity and was educated at Marietta. At the age of seventeen, he went into the employment of the Keystone Iron Company as a junior clerk and was there until he was twenty-one.

He was made 1st Lieutenant of Company E, 27th O. V. I. August 6, 1861 and was promoted to Captain of Company H, of the same regiment, March 31, 1862 and was made Lieutenant Colonel of the 63d United States Colored troops, October 2, 1863. He was promoted to Colonel of the 64th regiment, U. S. C. Infantry, November 21, 1863 and he was brevetted Brigadier General, to rank from March 13, 1865, "for faithful and meritorious services." His muster out as Colonel of the 64th U. S. C. Infantry, January 25, 1866 (when the regiment was mustered out) was suspended until January 8, 1867. He was appointed Assistant Commissioner of Bureau of Refugees Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands for the state of Mississippi, May 31, 1865 and relieved April 10, 1866. He was appointed Chief Inspector and A. A. Adjutant-General on the staff of Major General O. O. Howard, May 23, 1866, and remained in this position until mustered out of service January 8, 1867. He served five and a half years continuously and was always ready for duty.

After the war, he went into the employment of General Mendall Churchill, Captain of his Company, in the 27th O. V. I., and who was afterwards made Colonel of the same regiment. In 1872, he removed to Columbus, and was connected with the rolling mills and blast furnaces there. As a resident of Columbus, he was a member of the City Council, and was a banker and manufacturer. He became the leading spirit in developing the coal and iron properties of the Hocking Valley. He was one of the originators and constructors of the Nickel Plate road. He held the same relation to the Ohio Central Railroad from Toledo to Charleston, West Virginia the roads from Columbus to Toledo and from Gallipolis, Springfield and Pomeroy, the Lake Erie & Western, and several other lines. At one time, he accepted the presidency of the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia, the Knoxville & Ohio and the Memphis & Charleston railroads. He afterwards became president of the Cincinnati Southern, and was elected a director in the Richmond & Danville, the Georgia Central and the Richmond & West Point terminal.

While connected with these, he became the leading contractor in building the Croton aqueduct for New York City. Later he was a director in the Northern Pacific railway, and in connection with this company he built the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway and became its president. He was also president of the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago railway, the American Straw Board Company, the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company and the Columbus Gas Light and Heating Company, and was a director in the following: Texas Pacific railway, Knoxville & Ohio railway, New York & New England railway, Southern railway, Pacific Mail Steamship Company, National Linseed Oil Company, the Chase National Bank and in the Manhattan and Metropolitan Trust Company. He was a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He located in New York city in 1881, and engaged in banking there. He was a member of the Union League, Lotus, New York Yacht, New York Athletic, Riding, and the Adirondack League Clubs, the Southern Society, the Loyal Legion, the G. A. R., the Ohio Society and the Ardsley Casino. In May, 1901, his health, previously excellent, gave way and since then he has been confined to his residence at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson. He has traveled over all his own country and has been in Europe many times. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and formerly attended Dr. Hall's church on Fifth Avenue, New York city.

He was married September 18, 1872, to Miss Ann Augusta Porter. She was born May 2, 1847, at Zanesville, Ohio. His children are: Edward R., a resident of New York and president of the Seventh National Bank; Harold E., of Chicago, and Eleanor N., at home with her parents. He was a gentleman of wonderful ability in organizing and carrying on business and of limitless energy. He overtaxed his strength and had to quit. In Southern Ohio, no citizen was more highly esteemed and particularly among the former comrades of the Civil War. Since the above was written, General Thomas died at his home near New York, January 11, 1903.

Christian Yingling

was born in West Pennsylvania, April 24, 1788, and came to Ohio with his father and settled below Hanging Rock, in 1798 on what is known as the Yingling homestead. He was the son of Andrew Yingling, a Revolutionary soldier, whose record will be found under that head. He was married October 18, 1804, to Martha Lee, born in Patrick county, Virginia, August 2, 1795. She was the daughter of Rev. John Lee, the first pastor of Storm's Creek Baptist church, the first Baptist church in that vicinity. Rev. Lee belonged to the family of which General Robert E Lee was a member. She died May 8, 1877. By this marriage twelve children were born: Levina, Peninah, John L., Lucinda, William L., Harriet, Andrew, Daniel, James H., (a sketch of whom is found herein) Martha A., Christian and Robert H. One of these children has been dead over ninety-six years.

Mr. Yingling was a Sergeant in the War of 1812, in Captain John Kelley's Company, 1st Regiment Ohio Militia and served from July 28, to August 11, 1813. His brother John was a Sergeant in John Russell's Company, Independent Regiment, Ohio Militia, War of 1812, from July 28th, to September 19, 1813. Our subject was a farmer, all his life and lived and died on the farm originally owned by him. He died September 12, 1856. Mr. Yingling was industrious, frugal and economical and managed to pay for a quarter section of land which he had located by raising stock and with other products of the farm. He made a few trips to Fredericksburg, Virginia, with droves of hogs. He never had a desire for public office, but preferred the privacy of home to public honors. He was one of the foremost men in establishing schools, good roads and church edifices and was always ready to help in any commendable enterprise that would be for the benefit of the community. He was honest, upright and respected. He was a special friend to boys and old men and had many alterations in his defense of them.

CHAPTER IV.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Colonel John William Barger

was born October 9 1851, near Piketon, Ohio. He comes of a long line of honorable German ancestry. His father was Franklin Barger, his grandfather, Jacob Barger, his great-grandfather, Jacob Barger, and his great-great-grandfather, Philip Barger, who was killed by the Indians in Virginia, in 1700. His great-grandfather, Jacob Barger, was a Revolutionary soldier from Augusta county, Virginia. His mother was Mary Lawrence, daughter of Gabriel Lawrence. John attended the common schools in Pike county and the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, from 1868 until 1870. He then went to Bloomingdale, Illinois, and engaged in the mercantile business. He was there from 1871 to 1872. He came to Portsmouth on September 30, 1872, and entered the employ of J. M. Rumsey & Company, and remained with them until 1875. In 1876, he took up the mercantile business in Piketon with S. C. Sargent, under the firm name of Sargent & Barger and remained there until 1884. In 1875, he was married to Miss Kesiah Corwin, daughter of John Corwin, one of the popular farmers of Pike county. He has always been a republican and was a member of the legislature from Pike county from 1888 to 1890. He was a candidate the second time for the legislature but was defeated. He was a candidate for Governor at the same time Governor Bushnell was nominated. He was known as the "corn-stalk" candidate but did not reach the nomination. Governor Bushnell appointed him aid-de-camp with title of Colonel and he served during both of Bushnell's terms.

Colonel Barger is a man of the most agreeable address, kind and courteous to all and easy of approach. His personal magnetism and pleasant social qualities have made him one of the most popular men in this section of the state. His most striking characteristic is his fidelity to those who have his friendship and faithfulness in their cause. While a man of large business interests, he keeps in touch with local affairs and cordially supports all that goes to conserve the welfare of the people of his county and home.

Captain James Q. Barnes was born at Waverly, Ohio, January 29, 1836, the son of Major General William Barnes, who was the son of Captain John Barnes, a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject's mother was Nancy Ann Talbot. His father served as an Adjutant in the War of 1812. His boyhood days were spent in Waverly and on a farm now owned by Samuel Hibbens. His mother died January 5, 1846, and his father the following day. His brothers, William T. and John R. T., were of sufficient age to take care of themselves, the others were reared by relatives. Our subject lived with his brother William and attended school. He also assisted in his brother's store from time to time. He entered the Ohio Wesleyan University in the fall of 1857, and took a scientific course. He attended school until the war broke out in the spring of 1861.

When his brother, John R. T. Barnes was killed at the battle of Vienna, Virginia, June 17, 1861, he left the University for Washington D. C., and entered the camp of the 1st O. V. I., June 22, 1861, five days after the battle. The faculty sent him a diploma as a scientific graduate. He went to the company with the view of taking his brother's body home, but gave that up and took his part as a member of the company, though he was never mustered as such. He was in the battle of Bull Run without being a regularly enlisted soldier, being simply a volunteer citizen. On October, 15, 1861, at the age of twenty-five years, he entered Company D, of the 73d O. V. I., as First Lieutenant. He was promoted Captain of Company I, September 22, 1862. He was wounded September 29, 1863, at the battle of Lookout Valley, Tennessee, through the right arm with a minie ball. He was mustered out December 30, 1864, by reason of expiration of term of service.

In reality he served until the 5th day of January, 1865, though his mustering out related to December 30, 1864. He was in the following battles: McDowell, Va., Cross Keys, Va., Freeman's Ford, Va., Second battle of Bull Run, Va., Chancellorsville, Va., Gettysburg, Pa., Lookout Valley, Tenn., Resaca, Ga., Cassville, Ga., New Hope Church, Ga., Lost Mountain, Ga., Kenesaw Mountain, Ga., Peach Tree Creek, Ga., Atlanta, Ga., and Savannah, Ga. In addition to this he was in a number of small engagements.

He was appointed Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue in Pike county, Ohio, by Gen. S. H. Hurst, in the fall of 1869, and served until the spring of 1871, when the office was discontinued. He has always been a republican. He and his family belong to the Methodist Episcopal church. He was married October 25, 1865, to Mary Rachel Emmitt, daughter of David and Rebecca Emmitt, of Waverly, Ohio. They had three children: Annie Emmitt, May Elizabeth and Edward Talbott Barnes, all of whom are married. He has four grand-children.

Thomas Ellison Bradbury

was born March 21, 1874, at Kyger, Ohio. His father was Horace Reed Bradbury and his mother's maiden name was Anna Ellison. She was the daughter of James Ellison. Her father and mother were married March 20, 1873. They had two sons: Thomas E. and George Earl, age fifteen. Our subject was educated in the Gallipolis schools and graduated in 1891. He attended the Cincinnati Law School and graduated in 1893, and was admitted to the bar on his birthday, March 21, 1891. He has practiced law in Gallipolis ever since. He was elected City Clerk of Gallipolis in 1895, and held that office until April 10, 1901, when he was elected mayor of Gallipolis. He was appointed Referee in Bankruptcy in 1898, and has held the office since. He was Major of the 17th O. V. I. in the Spanish American War. He was made Major and Ordinance officer in the Ohio Militia June 24, 1900, and still holds that position. On November 25, 1896, he was married to Alice Lupton, daughter of John Lupton. They have one daughter, Alice.

James Buckingham

was born October 22, 1831, at Zanesville, Ohio. His parents were Alvah and Anna (Hale) Buckingham. He was educated at Marietta, Ohio, and Brown University, Rhode Island, leaving the latter place in February, 1852, on account of ill health. A part of the winter of 1852 and 1853 he was in his father's elevator in Chicago. In June, 1854, he invented the cogs placed on the outside of the driving wheels used in all mowing and reaping machines,—but did not patent it. In September, 1863, he removed from his farm at Duncan's Falls, Ohio, where he had lived since April, 1853, to the house in Zanesville, where he was born and here he still resides. He enlisted May 2, 1864 in Company A, 159th O. V. I. and was mustered out with the Company, August 22, 1864.

From February, 1865, to January, 1873, he was a director of the Ohio State Agricultural Society, four years of the time its Treasurer and one year (1872) its President. He was also one of the Trustees of the Central Lunatic Asylum, at Columbus, Ohio, to finish, furnish and open it. He was President of the Zanesville & Ohio River Railroad, from its beginning to completion. He has been interested in farms, ranches and wild lands in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. He was married November 5, 1856, at Chillicothe, Ohio, to Jane P. Wills, who was born October 8, 1832, in Chillicothe, Ohio, the third child of Doctor David and Eliza (Peebles) Wills. They have had five children: Elise Wills, the wife of F. G. Darlington of Zanesville, Ohio; Mary Humphreys, the wife of E. A. Greene of Zanesville, Ohio; Philo Hale, died August 19, 1869; Ellen Wood the wife of William Young, died November 12, 1890; and Julia, the wife of S. M. Pinkerton of Zanesville, Ohio.

Colonel William Edgar Bundy

was born in Jackson county, Ohio, on the site now occupied by the city of Wellston, October 4, 1866. His father, William Sanford Bundy, was wounded while in the service of his country, near Bean Station, Tennessee, as a private soldier, and died from the effects of his wound, January 4, 1867. His mother, Kate Thompson Bundy, was killed in an accident two years later, and their young son was raised and educated by his grandfather, Hon. H. S. Bundy. He graduated from the Ohio University in 1890 as a Bachelor of Arts, and has since attained the degree of Master of Arts. For two years he was editor of the Wellston Argus, and then came to Cincinnati, attended the Law School, and was graduated therefrom in 1890.

During the years 1890 and 1891 he was Secretary of the Board of Elections of Hamilton county. He has been four times elected Solicitor of Norwood, and has a beautiful home in that thriving suburb. Mr. Bundy was Commander of the Ohio Divisions, Sons of Veterans, in 1900, and was Commander-in-Chief of that order for the United States in 1894-5. He has always taken an active and practical interest in politics. In 1898, he was President of the Ohio Republican League, and during that year was appointed United States Attorney for the Southern District of Ohio for a term of four years. Through his own efforts and industry he has attained a leading position at the Hamilton County bar. He was married May 8, 1890 to Miss Eva E. Leedom, daughter of the late Ex-Congressman, John P. Leedom, of Adams county, and they have one son, William Sanford Bundy, named after the child's martyred grandfather.

Major Jeremiah Davidson

was born January 24, 1834, at Burlington, Lawrence county, Ohio. His father was James Davidson, born at Brownsville, Pa., March 4, 1801, and died at Burlington, Ohio, December 27, 1894, aged ninety-three years. His mother's maiden name was Mary Frances Combs, married to his father in 1829. She died March 11, 1888. His parents had nine children of whom six lived to maturity, our subject being the eldest. James Davidson was a farmer and also carried on the wool carding business at Burlington. Jeremiah's grandfather, John Davidson, came to the Northwest Territory in 1801 and settled where Burlington now stands. William Davidson his great-grandfather, had already come to what is now South Point in 1799.

Jeremiah Davidson attended the public schools of his vicinity and from 1850 to 1853 was a student at the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio. From 1854 to 1856 he taught school, and from 1856 to 1867 he was engaged in the book and stationery business in Ironton almost continuously, it being carried on for him by others when he was in the military service. April 22, 1861, the enlistment rolls for volunteer service in the Civil War were opened in Jeremiah's bookstore in Ironton, Lawrence county, and he was the first man to volunteer, which he did in Company E, of the 18th Ohio Infantry. John P. Merrill was Captain, Seth Sutherland was First Sergeant, Richard P. Rifkenberck was Second Sergeant and our subject was the Third Sergeant. Timothy R. Stanley was Colonel of the Regiment and William M. Bolles was Lieutenant Colonel.

The day Jeremiah's time expired, August 28, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Second Virginia Cavalry, of which he was elected Second Lieutenant and afterwards promoted to Captain. His first service was along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. He was in the Lynchburg raid, the two Wythville raids and Sinking Creek raid, where one hundred and fifty prisoners were taken. He helped to drive Jenkins out of Guyandotte and on July 24, 1864, he made a charge in the battle of Winchester which almost cost him his life. He was wounded in the chest, above the left lung, had two horses shot from under him, and while on foot, was shot in the thigh and left on the field for dead. For seven days he was a prisoner in a hut near by, then by the aid of an old negro man he escaped and crawled out to the pine forest the night before the wagons were to come along to take him to Andersonville. He lay in the pine forest for nine days, when he worked his way to the railroad and to his regiment. Col. Powell, of the Second Virginia Cavalry, detailed a sergeant to take him home and spoke of his bravery in the very highest terms, both in public and in private. By order of the War Department, at the request of Governor Dennison of Ohio, he was discharged from the Second Virginia Cavalry, September 7, 1864, to receive a promotion in a new regiment.

He was appointed Major of the 173rd Ohio Infantry, September 21, 1864 and was in the Nashville fight, under Thomas, and in other engagements against Hood. He served until June 28, 1865, thus covering the entire War as follows: In the 18th Ohio Infantry, four months and six days; in the Second Virginia Cavalry, three years and nine days; in the 173rd Ohio, nine months and fourteen days, making a total of four years, one month and twenty-nine days. On retiring from the Army, he engaged in the book and stationery business until 1866, when he was Treasurer of Lawrence county, one year. He retired from that office and continued in the Book and Stationery business from 1868 to 1877. From 1880 to 1883, he was Treasurer of Lawrence county again. At one time no candidate was nominated in opposition to him as County Treasurer. He was a dealer in real estate from 1884 to 1895, and since 1895 he has been secretary and treasurer of the Ironton Gas Company.

Major Davidson was married to Mrs. Clara C. Thomas, October 24, 1867, the widow of Lieutenant E. A. Thomas. She had one son Edward A. Thomas, born October 24, 1864, now engaged in the Lee Hardware Company at Shreveport, Louisiana. Major Davidson has three sons: Fred, born September 24, 1869, engaged in the Lee Hardware Company, at Shreveport, La.; Hugh C., born August 21, 1871, engaged in the Dental Laboratory at New Orleans, La.; James, born August 20, 1873, engaged in the First National Bank at Shreveport, La. Major Davidson is a member of the Lawrence Lodge of Masons and has been for forty years, and a member of the Odd Fellows. He has been a member of the Dick Lambert Post, G. A. R. since the organization of the Grand Army. He is a modest gentleman respected by every one who knows him for his excellent qualities as a man and a citizen. He has been a life-long republican. His Scotch-Irish characteristics have carried him safely over many a hard place in life. People said when he was taken prisoner at Winchester, "If Major Davidson isn't killed, he'll outwit the Rebs and escape," and so he did.

General John Clay Entrekin

was born in Ross county, near Kingston, February 11, 1844. He attended the schools in the vicinity and the Ohio Wesleyan University. On August 12, 1862, at the age of 18, he enlisted for three years in Co. A. of the 114 O. V. I. and was with his regiment the entire time. He was in the battles of Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Siege of Vicksburg, Graham's Plantation, Yellow Bayou and the siege of Fort Blakely, Alabama. He very near escaped honorable wounds, but on April 8, 1865, the very last day of the war, he was wounded twice at Fort Blakely, and was, in consequence, honorably discharged at New Orleans, January, 1865.

After his return to his home, he entered the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware and was graduated in the classical course in 1867. For two years he was engaged in teaching and from 1869 to 1870 he was Professor of Mathematics in the Central Wesleyan College of Warrenton, Missouri. During that time he read law and was admitted to the bar in the Circuit Court of Warren County, Missouri in January, 1870. Directly after he returned to Chillicothe, and in September of that year, he was admitted to the bar of Ross county, Ohio. He began the practice of law in the office of Judge T. A. Minshall, afterwards of the Supreme Bench, and remained there three years, in which time he built up a good business. He has since practiced successfully and has been connected with much of the important litigation which has been conducted in the courts in his part of the state. He has a keen, analytical mind, a comprehensive knowledge of the science of jurisprudence and never loses sight of any point of vantage ground which may advance the interests of his clients.

He has always taken a great interest in political affairs. Even as a boy he was active in the Fremont-Dayton Campaign, and when he attained his majority, he allied himself with the Republican party and voted for Abraham Lincoln in 1864 while stationed at Morgan's Bend, Louisiana.

In January, 1872, he was appointed City Solicitor of Chillicothe to fill a vacancy and was elected to the same office in 1872 and re-elected in 1874 and 1876. He was a candidate for Prosecuting Attorney of Ross county in 1872 before the people, but was defeated by 60 votes, although he ran 200 ahead of his ticket.

In 1875, he was elected to represent Ross county in the House of Representatives to serve two years. He was a candidate for re-election in 1879 but was defeated by a small majority by the Hon. Wm. H. Reed, a very popular democrat. A month later, Senator Allison Brown died and Mr. Entrekin was nominated as his successor in the Sixth Senatorial District and was elected by 1,500 majority over Hon. Milton McCoy. He served two years. In 1885, he was again a candidate for the House of Representatives and was elected by 500 majority over Dr. Nathaniel Potter. During this term he was chosen Speaker of the House. While in the Legislature he voted twice for Hon. John Sherman for United States Senator and for James A. Garfield and Stanley Mathews for the same office. He was twice a candidate for nomination for Congressman in this District, but was defeated. His service in the various official positions to which he has been called has been marked by patriotic devotion to duty and fidelity to the best interests of the people whom he represented, and as one of the law makers of Ohio he has borne a conspicuous and honored part.

Our subject enlisted in the Ohio State Militia on June 8, 1873 as a private in Co. A, but was at once elected Lieutenant of the Company, after which he was elected and commissioned Captain. On June 21, 1876, he was elected Colonel of the 6th Regiment, Ohio National Guards, to which position he was three times re-elected, serving in all fourteen years. During this time, he performed the most arduous and important service for the State in 1878. In 1878 was the time of the great railroad strike at Newark, Ohio, when the military aid was invoked to quell the riotous men. He was called on to defend the City Building and the Music Hall in Cincinnati at the time of the riot when the court-house was destroyed in April, 1884. He had his regiment on the field within ten hours after notification of the trouble had been received. He was also in command of his regiment at the time of the strikes in the Hocking Valley coal regions and in Jackson county. As commander of the 6th Regiment, Ohio National Guards, Col. Entrekin was a prominent factor in suppressing the disturbance. In commanding his troops, he displayed firmness, tempered by justice, power, limited by discretion and force, and force was used only to protect life and property. His course commanded the respect of his troops and the admiration of all, and increased the confidence of the public in the military forces of the country.

In 1892, he was appointed by Gov. McKinley to the position of Judge Advocate General on his staff and re-appointed in January, 1894. He is now on the retired list of military officers of Ohio with rank of Brigadier General. He was appointed by Governor Foraker in November, 1889, a member of the Board of Trustees for the Central State Asylum for the Insane, at Columbus, and served two months, but the Senate refused to confirm any of Governor Foraker's appointments, and his successor was appointed by Governor Campbell.

In the councils of his party, General Entrekin has been very prominent and his opinions have been received with much respect and consideration. He served two years on the Republican State Central Committee, 1882-3, and has served annually as a delegate to the county, District and State Conventions, while for twenty years he has been a member of the Ross County Executive Committee. In 1892, he was elected a delegate from the Eleventh Congressional District to the National Convention at Minneapolis and cast his vote for William McKinley as did all the Ohio Delegates. He was Chairman of the Congressional Convention at Athens, Ohio, which nominated the delegates to represent his district in the Republican National Convention at St. Louis in 1896. He was a very active worker for his party during the last presidential campaign and delivered many addresses in support of the dominant measures of the tariff and sound money.

He is a logical, fluent and forceful speaker and his addresses leave a lasting impression upon his auditors. He served as Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions in the Republican State Convention at Toledo, Ohio, in June, 1897. He was appointed Collector of Internal Revenues for the 11th District of Ohio, by President McKinley in July, 1897, and is still an incumbent of that position. He is a Mason and an Odd Fellow and has passed all the chairs in both lodges. He is a member of the Elks and an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

General Entrekin was married July 15, 1875 at Chillicothe, Ohio, to Mary F. Bethauser. They have two children, Helen G., and John C. Jr., both grown. John C. Jr. is now Deputy Collector under his father in this district.

John A. Eylar,

one of the prominent members of the bar of Waverly, Ohio, is a native of Adams county, having been born at Youngsville, February 16, 1855. He was the fourth son of John Eylar and Ann A. Wilkins, his wife. His paternal grandfather, Joseph Eylar, of Winchester, was an Associate Judge of Adams county from 1835 to 1842. His maternal grandfather, Daniel Putnam Wilkins, was a lawyer of West Union, Ohio, but was born and reared in New Hampshire, the bluest of New England blue blood Yankees. Our subject graduated from the West Union schools, and afterwards took a course in the Adams county Normal Schools. He taught for a time in the West Union schools and read law under John K. Billings. He was admitted to practice law at Portsmouth, April 20, 1876.

He at once located in Waverly for the practice of the law and ever since has resided there. In politics, he has always been a democrat. In 1880, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Pike county, and was re-elected in 1883, serving six years in that office, in which he acquired a reputation for industry, zeal, and ability in his profession. In the time he held the office, he drew no less than four hundred indictments, only one of which was ever held defective. In the same time, he collected and paid into the county treasury more fines and recognizances than any of his predecessors. Since he retired from the Prosecutor's office, he has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession and is retained in all the important litigation of his county. He was one of the attorneys for the defense in the famous case of the State vs. Isaac Smith, indicted for murder in the first degree, of Stephen Skidmore, and distinguished himself in the conduct of that case. He was nominated for Common Pleas Judge in 1883. He was married February 16, 1887 to Lucy, daughter of John R. Douglas, and has four children: Kathleen, Melville Fuller, Alverda Louise and Helen.

In his practice, he first obtains a full knowledge of the facts of the case, both from his client's and his opponent's standpoint. He then investigates the law applicable to each and all theories the court might assume. He goes into Court with all his cases thoroughly prepared as to law and facts, and will not file a case for a client unless he believes the chances for success are largely in his favor. Like the famous Luther Martin, of Maryland, he is "always sure of his evidence." He is naturally eloquent and one of his contemporaries says he is the most eloquent member of the Waverly bar. In his arguments to the jury, he is magnetic. In his arguments to the Court, no point escapes him. He always understands his case fully before bringing it to trial. He is as zealous for a poor client as a rich one. He is of a benevolent disposition and very charitable. He is a brilliant cross-examiner. He conducts a cross-examination rapidly and pleasantly, but always with a denouement in view. Following these principles, he has already established a reputation as a lawyer and bids fair in the course of a ripe experience to be as able as any in the state.

Hon. Joseph Benson Foraker, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was born July 5, 1846, on a farm near Rainsboro, Highland county, Ohio. He enlisted as a private in Company A, Eighty-ninth Regiment O. V. I. on July 14, 1862, with which organization he served until the close of the war, at which time he held the rank of First Lieutenant and brevet Captain. He was graduated from Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, July 1, 1869. He was admitted to the bar and entered upon the practice of law at Cincinnati, Ohio, October 14, 1869. He was elected Judge of the Superior Court of Cincinnati, in April, 1879 and resigned on account of ill health May 1, 1882. He was the Republican candidate for governor of Ohio in 1883, but was defeated. He was elected to that office in 1885 and re-elected in 1887. He was again nominated for governor and defeated in 1889. He was Chairman of the Republican State Convention of Ohio for 1886, 1890, 1896, 1900 and 1901, and a delegate at large from Ohio to the National Republican Conventions of 1884, 1888, 1892, 1896, and 1900. He was Chairman of the Ohio delegation in the conventions of 1884 and 1888, and presented to both of these conventions the name of Hon. John Sherman for nomination for the Presidency. In the conventions of 1892 and 1896 he served as Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, and as such reported the platform each time to the convention. He presented the name of William McKinley to the conventions of 1896 and 1900 for nomination to the Presidency. He was elected United States Senator January 15, 1896, to succeed Calvin S. Brice, and took his seat March 4, 1897. January 14, 1902 he was re-elected to succeed himself in the United States Senate for the term beginning March 4, 1903. [The foregoing is taken from the Congressional Directory.]

Susanna Margaret Davidson Fry

was born in the village of Burlington, Ohio, the daughter of James Davidson, who is sketched herein in the Davidson Family in the Pioneer Record. She was a woman of unusual natural ability. At fourteen years, she had completed all the common schools had for her. She attended the Western College, at Oxford, and graduated at eighteen. After her graduation, she began as a teacher at $15.00 per month, and afterwards taught in the Grammar and High Schools, at Ironton, Ohio. In 1867, she was married to the Rev. James D. Fry, a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan University, and at that time a member of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. In the fall of 1873, she accompanied her husband to Europe, for a years study and travel.

Her first literary production appeared in the Ladies' Repository. The titles were "Ancient and Modern Deaconesses" and "Ancient and Modern Sisterhoods." She furnished letters of travel, history, biography and art from the old world. She is the author of a book entitled "A Paradise Valley Girl." From January, 1876 until June, 1890, Mrs. Fry filled the chair of belles-lettres in the Illinois Wesleyan University, at Bloomington, and during the most of that time was President of one of the best working literary clubs in the state. In 1877 the Ohio Wesleyan University conferred upon her the degree of A. M. She took a non-resident post graduate course with the Syracuse University of Syracuse, New York, and upon examination received the degrees of Ph. D. for work in history, philosophy and aesthetics. In 1891 and 1892 she had charge of English Literature in the University of Minnesota. She was one of the Judges in the Liberal Arts Department at the World's Fair. In 1894 she was elected President of the W. C. T. U. of Minnesota and served two years.

In 1895, she was elected Managing Editor of the Union Signal, which place she held until 1898, when she became Corresponding Secretary of the National W. C. T. U. She is a member of the Philosophical Society of Great Britain. She applies herself with great devotion to everything she undertakes and never lets go of a subject or a situation until she has mastered it. The motto most frequently quoted by her is "This one thing I do." She is now Corresponding Secretary of the National W. C. T. U. and resides at Evanston, Illinois.

General Charles Grosvenor

was born at Pomfret, Windham county, Connecticut, September 20, 1833. An outline of his ancestry will be found under the head of "Grosvenor Family" in the Pioneer Record of this book. His father was Peter Grosvenor and his mother Ann Chase Grosvenor. They removed from Connecticut to Ohio in 1838, locating in Athens county. His father served in the War of 1812 and was raised to the rank of Major of the Militia.

Our subject's early education was acquired in the district schools of Athens county, supplemented by private study. His mother assisted very much in instructing him as a child. He was early thrown upon his own resources and in order to obtain means to further prosecute his studies, he taught school for a number of terms in the various district schools of Athens county. He studied law while teaching school, attending store and working on the farm. He was admitted to the bar in Athens county in 1857 and at once entered upon the active practice of his profession. In 1858, he formed a law partnership with Hon. S. S. Knowles, which lasted until the breaking out of the war. Returning, he went into partnership with S. M. Dana, under the firm name of Grosvenor & Dana. The firm continued for fourteen years. Afterwards he formed a partnership with Jones of Athens and Vorhes at Pomeroy. He has always had a large practice in Southern Ohio and was very successful in civil and criminal cases. He was presidential elector in 1872 on the Grant ticket, and was selected to carry the returns from Ohio to Washington. He was again an elector at large in 1880 and made over seventy speeches in the campaign in five states.

General Grosvenor entered the army as Major of the 18th Ohio Regiment in the three year's service in July, 1861. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel March 16, 1862, and to Colonel April 8, 1865. He was brevetted Brigadier General March 16, 1865, and mustered out with the Regiment October 9, 1865. The regiment was in thirteen different battles and engagements beginning with Bowling Green, Kentucky, February 16, 1862 and ending with Decatur, Alabama, December 27, 1864. At the battle of Nashville, he commanded a brigade and for gallant services in the field, was recommended for promotion by General Steedman. General Thomas said of him: "He has served under my command since November, 1862, and has on all occasions performed his duties with intelligence and zeal." At the close of the war, he returned to Athens and resumed the practice of law.

In 1871, he was nominated for the State Senate, but did not secure an election. In 1873, he was elected to the General Assembly from his county and was on the Committee of Judiciary, Insurance and Revision. In 1875, he was re-elected to the House as a Representative from Athens county and made Speaker of the House. He has great oratorical powers, indefatigable industry and is a most formidable antagonist in debate. He is always called on to make canvasses in the Presidential years in other states.

Our subject was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home of Xenia, Ohio, April, 1880 to April 1888, and President of the Board for 5 years. He was a delegate at large to the National Republican Convention at St. Louis in 1896 and again to the National Republican Convention at Philadelphia in 1900.

He was elected to the 49th, 50th, 51st, 53rd, 54th, 55th and 56th Congresses, and re-elected to the 57th Congress. He is a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, and has been for a number of years; a member of the Committee on Marine and Fisheries.

Hon. Marcus A. Hanna,

President of the Union National Bank of Cleveland, was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, September 24, 1837. His parents Dr. Leonard and Samantha Hanna removed with their family to Cleveland in 1852, where the Doctor became a merchant, being a senior member in a large wholesale firm of Hanna, Garretson & Co.

M. A. Hanna attended the public schools and graduated from the Cleveland High School. At the age of twenty he entered into his father's business. After the decease of his father in 1861, he assumed control of his interest. He continued in the business until 1867, when he entered the firm of Rhodes & Company, successors to Rhodes, Card & Co., the great coal and iron firm of Cleveland, of which firm he is now a senior member. He is largely identified with the vessel transportation, manufacturing and banking interests of Cleveland. In 1872, he organized and equipped the Cleveland Transportation Co., one of the largest on the lakes. Of the Chopin Bolt and Nut Co., one of Cleveland's important manufactures, he is a large share-holder, and is Vice-President of the Hubbell Stove Co., of Buffalo, New York, President of the West Side Street Railway Co., of Cleveland and President of the Herald Publishing Co. of Cleveland. The Union National Bank of Cleveland was organized in February, 1884, and at a meeting of the Directors in March, he was elected its President. This Bank is one of the largest in the State with a Capital of Ten Million Dollars. Its share holders and directors comprise the solid business men and capitalists of Cleveland. In politics, Mr. Hanna is a republican and always takes active part in the more important political moves among the business men of the city. He was married September 27, 1864 to Miss C. Augusta, the estimable daughter of Dan P. Rhodes, Esq., one of Cleveland's foremost men.

Mr. Hanna is a man who stands high in the estimation of his associates for his marked ability, tact, foresight and integrity. He is a man of fine deportment, calm, easy and agreeable manner, of good personal appearance and a courteous gentleman. In his various undertakings he has been uniformly successful. Under his management and presidency the affairs of the various companies have been conducted in a highly satisfactory manner, and have developed and assumed immense proportions. He is a man of versatile and general ability, equally at home in all of his multifarious affairs, whether it be mining, shipping, manufacturing or banking. To the development of her interests as a city, it is to such men as Mr. Hanna that Cleveland is largely indebted. Of her charitable institutions, he is a staunch upholder and liberal donor.

Senator Hanna has always taken an active part in public affairs, but did not become a prominent national figure until he took up the cause of Major McKinley, conducting a preliminary campaign, which resulted in his nomination for the Presidency at St. Louis in 1896. Prior to that time Senator Hanna had been a delegate to two national conventions. In March, 1897, he was appointed by Governor Bushnell to fill the vacancy occasioned in the Senate by the resignation of the Honorable John Sherman to accept a place in President McKinley's cabinet. Mr. Hanna was subsequently elected by the State Legislature to fill Mr. Sherman's unexpired term and for a full term of six years. This will expire March 4, 1905.

Mr. Hanna's career in the Senate has been marked by those same qualities which gave him success in the business world: He has been actively identified with most of the important measures considered by Congress since he entered the Senate. There is scarcely an important piece of legislation of which he has not been an active advocate and a substantial contributor to its success.

Adna Romulus Johnson

was born at Sweet Springs, Missouri, Dec. 14, 1860. His father was Spencer Johnson and his mother's maiden name was Persis Stivers, a daughter of James Stivers of Meigs county, Ohio. His parents had six children and he was next to the youngest. His father died when he was but three years old, and six months later his mother went with the family to Oak Ridge Furnace in Lawrence county, and our subject resided there until he was twenty-one years of age. He then removed to the City of Ironton. He was reared as a farmer and attended the common schools. He never had any education except such as he obtained himself. He was a country school teacher from the age of seventeen to twenty-four and taught continuously every winter, and sometimes the year around. He says that in the year 1884, he taught twelve and one-half months in the year, but he counted the months at four weeks. He began the study of law in 1883, but in 1885 he went to Ann Arbor and took a law course. He graduated from there June 30, 1887. June 1, 1886 he was admitted to the bar in Ohio.

He began practice, but returned to Ann Arbor in the fall of 1886 and remained there until June, 1887. He has been in the practice of law at Ironton ever since. He was Prosecuting Attorney of Lawrence county, from 1890 to 1894. He was married October 16, 1890 to Miss Dora B. Ricketts, a daughter of John Ricketts, deceased. They have two children: Adna Romulus, aged nine and Newton Halsey, aged four. He has always been a republican in his political views.

Mr. Johnson is one of the ablest lawyers of Southern Ohio. He enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice. The confidence which juries of Lawrence county have in him is something wonderful. He possesses the confidence of all the business men of Lawrence county to a remarkable degree. Mr. Johnson dares to do anything in a business venture but is active and is guided by consummate judgment and the highest legal skill. He has been uniformly successful all his life.

Robert Johnson

was born in Patterson's Valley, Hampshire county, Virginia, now Mineral county, West Virginia, October 27, 1824. His father was Joshua Johnson, and his mother was Nancy Sheets, daughter of Frederick Sheets, who built Sheets' mills near Headsville. His father's farm lay in Patterson's valley, seven miles north of the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. His father had twelve children, of whom our subject was the eldest. He worked for his father until he was twenty-two years of age, and then began the world for himself. He had heard of the Ohio Valley and determined to visit it. He came to Greenup county, Kentucky, and became acquainted with the family of John Lawson, who also had emigrated from Hampshire county, Virginia.

He married his daughter, Catharine, November 5, 1850. She was born March 24, 1824. For further particulars as to her ancestry, see the Lawson Family in the Pioneer Record. After his marriage, he returned to Hampshire county, Virginia. He tried farming there, but in 1852 returned to Kentucky, near the vicinity of his wife's home, and rented land. In 1858, he began to purchase land, and has added to his purchases from time to time, till now he has 1,000 acres in the vicinity of his present home. He lived in the north portion of his present farm till 1869, when he removed to his present location.

He and his wife have had six children born to them. Their eldest son, John William, died in 1873 at the age of twenty-one years. Their third child is Mrs. Nancy Sheets, wife of Volney Thompson, of Portsmouth, Ohio. Their fourth child, Joseph Frederick, died in infancy, in 1860. Their daughter, Clara Virginia is the wife of Newton Horr, a resident of Portsmouth, Ohio. Their youngest, Robert Taylor, born in 1865, is a farmer. In his political views, Mr. Johnson is a democrat. Mrs. Johnson is a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are liked, admired and respected by all who know them. They are good citizens and good neighbors. Mr. Johnson is noted for his integrity and fair dealing. He has always kept himself on the credit side of the ledger of life. He has been very successful as a farmer, and he and his good wife are enjoying the fruits of years of toil, and no two persons deserve ease and pleasure in their old age more than they.

Hon. David Warren Jones

is the son of David Jones and Maria Bothwell, and was born in Vinton county, Ohio, October 16, 1855. His great-grandfather, John Potter, was a Captain on one of the New Jersey Continental Regiments of the Revolution. His grandmother, Charlotte Bothwell, was one of the leading pioneer women of Southern Ohio, well known in what is now Vinton county.

He attended the public schools at McArthur until 16 years of age when he was appointed to a cadetship at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, which he entered in June, 1872. He remained there till 1876, when he resigned and began the study of law with his brother the late Homer C. Jones, of McArthur. He was admitted to the bar in 1879, having taught in the public schools at McArthur while studying law. In June, 1880, he located in Gallipolis, Ohio, and began the practice of law. He met with early and marked success, and in 1883, formed a law partnership with Hon. S. A. Nash, as Nash & Jones, which continued until Judge Jones went on the bench in 1897. In 1886, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Gallia county, which office he held for six years, making a fine record. Retiring from the office of Prosecutor, he continued the practice of law, the falling health of his law partner throwing the entire work of the firm upon him. From that time until his elevation to the bench his firm enjoyed a large practice, being engaged in all the important litigation in the county.

In January, 1897, he was appointed by Governor Bushnell Common Pleas Judge to fill the vacancy created by the election of Hon. H. L. Sibley to the Circuit bench. The following summer he was nominated without opposition to fill the remaining year of Judge Sibley's unexpired term, and also the full term following, as the full term would begin before the election of 1898. His work on the bench has been such as to win the esteem and confidence of the entire bar of the sub-division, as is testified by the fact that in April, 1902, he was again nominated without opposition, and as the sub-division has a Republican majority of between 5,000 and 8,000, his nomination is equivalent to an election. He is the first Common Pleas Judge that Gallia county has had since the late Judge Simeon Nash, some fifty years ago.

Judge Jones is a republican in principle and by inheritance, being a son of David Jones, one of the leading old-line whigs in the southern part of the state, and a member of the 35th General Assembly from the counties of Athens and Hocking, and of the 36th General Assembly from Athens and Meigs counties.

Judge Jones is the principal owner of the Gallipolis Journal, the leading Republican paper of Gallia county. He became interested in it in 1890, buying an interest of the late Wm. Nash, who had been the editor and owner for many years. Judge Jones had business and editorial charge of the paper for several years, and still directs its policy, and frequently contributes to its columns.

On June 25, 1889, he was married to Miss Laura R. Shoher, of Gallipolis, by whom he has four children now living. Their happy married life was suddenly interrupted by the death of his wife in child-birth, on July 8, 1900. Judge Jones is highly esteemed by his many acquaintances and friends. He is a hard student and his work on the bench as well as at the bar has been marked by a thorough study of all questions submitted to him; and his trained mind and powers of analysis of all matters has made his career as lawyer and judge highly successful.

Edwin Jones.

of Jackson, Ohio, was born December 11, 1863, in Jefferson township, Jackson county. His father was Eben Jones, and his mother's maiden name was Ann Williams, daughter of Morgan Williams, of Newark, Ohio, a native of Wales. His grandfather was Thomas T. Jones, born in Wales, as was his son Eben; and the latter's wife was also born in Wales. Thomas T. Jones built Jefferson furnace in the early fiftys. He was the largest stock holder in it. He was connected with it for years until 1878, when his active connection ceased. Our subject was educated in the common schools, until he was fifteen years of age. He then went to Buckeye furnace, Jackson county, and was employed in the store for four and one-half years. He was in the insurance business one year in Jackson. In 1886, he went to Springfield, Ohio, and went into the wholesale and retail clothing business, where he remained one year. He returned to Jackson and kept books for the Emma Coal Company for eight years. He then engaged in the coal business for himself, which he still continues.

He is in the Emma, Buckeye and Cornelia Companies. He is general manager of all these companies, and has been in them since 1888. He is the chief owner of the Buckeye Mill & Lumber Co., at Jackson, and has been in that since 1888. He began as a small stock-holder and now owns the chief interest. He is also a stock holder in the Globe Iron Company. He controls 4,100 acres of coal lands in Jackson county, four mines, and three stores. What he has, he has made himself, except a small sum. He thinks good business property is the best investment. In June, 1900, he bought the old Isham House in Jackson, fronting 75 feet on Main. He is building a modern hotel to cover the whole grounds, five stories high.

Our subject was married June 10, 1887, to Lola Williams, daughter of Dr. W. S. Williams, of Centerville, Gallia county, Ohio. They have three children, Donald, Lillian and Dwight. Mr. Jones is a republican, and a member of the Presbyterian church. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias lodge.

He is one of the shrewdest, safest, and ablest business men in Ohio. He is sagacious, far-seeing, energetic, resolute and persistent in the prosecution of whatever he undertakes. He is public-spirited and takes a lively and generous interest in whatever affects his city, county, or state. He is always ready to contribute his money, work and influence to every movement which makes for social improvement and progress. His character is a strong one from any point of view. He is fair and honorable in all contracts with his fellow-men. He employs more men and is developing more coal territory than any operator in his county. He does everything effectively and successfully. His name is ever on the tongues of his fellow-citizens of Jackson, and he is always spoken of in terms of admiration and respect. He has every reason to be proud of the place he holds in the hearts of his fellow-citizens. He is a most useful citizen and will accomplish for his fellow-citizens more than any predecessor or contemporary.

Major Frank Johnston Jones

was born in the city of Cincinnati, April 22, 1838. His father was David Jones and his mother, Elizabeth, daughter of Col. John Johnston, Indian agent of the Northwest Territory and United States Government factor for 45 years at Fort Wayne. His mother was born September 22, 1847, in Fort Wayne. Col. John Johnston was a contemporary with General Lewis Cass and William Henry Harrison.

David Jones was a native of Berks county, Pennsylvania, and died in 1814. He had been a financial agent for the Governor of Pennsylvania. His great-grandfather, Col. John Jones, was a member of the 6th Pennsylvania Infantry Regiment during the Revolutionary War. His father lived to be 81 years old and his mother 71 years old. They died in August and November, 1878. They were members of the Episcopal church. They had thirteen children.

Major Jones' brother, William G. Jones, graduated in 1860, at West Point. He was a Colonel of the 36th O. V. I., and was killed at the battle of Chickamauga. His brother, Charles Davis Jones, graduated at Annapolis Naval Academy, in 1860, and died in 1865, at the close of the war.

Our subject was graduated from Yale College in 1859 and later studied law with the Hon. Rufus King. He enlisted April 19, 1861, as a private in Co. A, 6th O. V. I.; was transferred to the 13th O. V. I. in May, 1861, and made Second Lieutenant of Co. E, January 21, 1861. He was promoted to First Lieutenant of Co. K, January 1, 1862. He was made captain of Co. H, January 1, 1863. He was made Assistant Adjutant General, March 11, 1863. After the battle of Shiloh, he was acting as Assistant Adjutant General on General Rosecrank's staff, Gen. Chittenden's corps. He was captured at the battle of Perryville. He was assigned to duty as Acting Inspector General on the staff of Major McDowell, commanding the 20th Army Corps, Army of the Cumberland on detached service at the battle of Chickamauga, and resigned in 1864. He was brevetted Major at the close of the war. He was admitted to the bar in 1866.

In May, 1866, he was married to Francis Fosdick, daughter of Samuel Fosdick. They have the following children: Anna F., married to E. H. Ernst, Assistant Secretary of the Cincinnati Equitable Insurance Company; Charles Davis Jones, a lawyer with his father; Samuel F., a student of the Medical College, New York; Francis L., and Edward, a graduate of Yale College, in 1901, and is now secretary of the McDonald and Kyle Shoe Company, of Cincinnati.

Major Jones is president of the Little Miami Railroad. He is a director of the Equitable Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, and a director of the Spring Grove Cemetery, of the Cincinnati Street Railroad Company, and a trustee of the University of Cincinnati.

Here is what an intimate friend says of the Major, "Frank Johnson Jones has led a busy, useful life. He has given the best a man can give—himself—to his country, his city, and his church, while much has been given to him, in a most lovable, amiable wife and bright, attractive children, an ideal home. Major Jones served with distinction in the Civil War, in the line and on the staff. His service to his city has been a continuous service, on many boards, the more helpful, as he is a ready speaker and an able writer. He has served his church upwards of a quarter of a century as vestryman and of late years as senior warden. Considering the strenuous life the Major has led, and the year he was born, there is a suspicion, he has located the fountain of youth and years are therefore of no consequence to him, except to extend and accentuate his usefulness."

General Wells S. Jones

was born in Ross county, Ohio, August 3, 1830. His father was Robert Pennibaker Jones, a native of Berkeley county, Virginia. His mother was Nancy Smith, a native of the same county and state. His grandfather, Robert Jones, came to Ross county, in 1810. He was a follower of the Quakers in England. His grandfather Jones married Susannah Pennibaker. She was a native of Berkeley county, Virginia. Her father was a Revolutionary soldier from start to finish, with seven of his sons, two of whom lost their lives in the service. He is said to have built the first house in Martinsburg, Virginia.

Our subject was reared in Ross county and attended the common schools only. His father was a farmer and brought him up as such, and he now owns the farm on which he was reared and on which his father was reared, in Paxton township, Ross county. When our subject was twenty-one years of age, he went to McLean county, Illinois, and engaged in teaching and stock-raising, and made enough money in two years to pay his expenses while studying medicine. He began the study of medicine in 1853, with his brother, Joseph S. Jones, M. D., at Jasper, Ohio. He graduated at Starling Medical College, Columbus, in 1856, and located at Jasper for practice.

He organized the first company in Pike county, for the war, Co. A, of the 53rd O. V. I. He entered the service in that company October 3, 1861. He was appointed Captain the next day and served as such until the 18th of April, 1862, when he was promoted to the Colonelcy of the regiment. He served as Colonel to the end of the war when he was brevetted Brigadier General, March 13, 1865, for gallantry and merit. In the last year of the war he commanded a brigade, the second brigade in the 2nd Division of the 15th Army Corps. He was wounded in the assault on Ft. McAllister, being shot in the breast. He was in the Atlanta campaign and with Sherman to the sea. He was in the Grand Review in Washington. He was mustered out with his regiment August 11, 1865, and returned to Waverly where he has since resided.

He was a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket in the 12th Ohio District, in 1866, but was defeated by Philadelphia Van Trump. In 1867, he was a candidate for State Senator in the Seventh Senatorial District of Ohio, against James Emmitt, but was defeated. Emmitt received 8,145 votes and General Jones received 7,103. He was a Trustee of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum of Ohio, for some years, his original appointment being made by Governor Foster. He was elected a member of the Board of State Public Works in 1885, and re-elected in 1888. He has always been a republican. He is a member of the Methodist church, of the Loyal Legion, the Masons, and the G. A. R.

He was married in 1866, to Miss Elizabeth A. Kinkead, daughter of William M. Kinkead, of Piketon. She died in 1876, and he was married June 20, 1880, to Miss Mary F. Wetmore. They have three children, Robert R. aged 20, teacher; Willard T., aged 18, engaged in the Insurance Department in Columbus, and Mary Catherine, a school girl.

As a soldier, General Jones, had a record for bravery and faithfulness to duty, which was not surpassed during the Civil War. He has always been devoted to his party, and as a republican, he was willing to be a candidate for office when such candidacy meant defeat. He was always willing to uphold the standard of his party under adverse circumstances. He is a gentleman of great business qualifications, active and energetic and a good citizen. He is a student and is largely self-educated. He is a citizen of whom his country may well be proud. He has been true to every duty he assumed and has never disappointed the expectations of his friends in any respect.

Charles H. Ketter

was born January 4, 1853, near Scioto Mills Harrison township Scioto county, Ohio. His father was Henry Ketter and his mother's maiden name was Mary Hormeyer. His parents came from Hanover in Germany, his grandparents on both sides remained in that country. His father was married twice and had ten children. He belonged to the children of the second wife, and was the fifth of the whole number. His father was a farmer. He went to the common schools in Harrison township, and Berea College in 1872, where he remained one year, then he took a course in the Nelson Business College, Cincinnati, O., in 1873 and 1874. In 1874, he located in Ironton, Ohio, and clerked in the furniture store of David Nixon for two years. In 1876, he started in the grocery business at Third and Adams street, and has been in that business ever since. In 1880, he erected the business block at Third and Adams streets, and from that time conducted a wholesale and retail grocery. He conducted the business alone until 1885, when his brother Frank L., was associated with him; since then the firm name has been The C. H. Ketter Grocery Co.

He was a director of the Eagle Iron & Steel Co., and retained that position until 1898 when that company sold out to the Republic Iron & Steel Co. engaged in the clothing business in 1901. He was a member of the Board was incorporated in the fall of 1898. In 1900 he erected the Ketter Block 132 feet square between 2nd and 3rd streets, Ironton Ohio, corner of Adams. He engaged in the clothing business in 1901. He was a member of the Board of Education from 1886 to 1898 and two years of this time he was president. He was elected to the City council of Ironton in 1899 and is President of this body at the present time. He is Treasurer of The Farmers' & Mechanics' Saving, Building & Loan Association and has been for six years past.

He has been a republican all his life. He is a member of Spencer M. E. church, Ironton, O. He was one of the leaders in having the new church built in 1894 and has been a trustee of the church since 1891. He was married first to Rosina Duis, March 4, 1876; there were eight children of this marriage as follows: Lillian M. wife of Harry S. Rea; George D. and Earl W. are with their father in the clothing business in the Ketter Clothing Co.; Harold C. is in the regular army located near Baltimore Md. He enlisted in Co. 40 of Heavy Artillery August, 1901, for three years and has since been promoted to Corporal. Otto E. age seventeen is a student in the Ironton High School. He has three daughters, Helen, Mabel and Gladys, all school girls. His wife Rosina died in 1893. In 1895, he was married to her sister Anna. They had two sons of this marriage, Duis age four, and Bernard age two.

Mr. Ketter is one of the most successful business men of Ironton. He is favorably known to the whole community for his honor, integrity and correct business methods. He is a living power and force in his city and in every organization with which he is connected. When he is connected with a measure or movement its success is assured. He is careful in all his judgments and hence insures the completion of his work before it is begun. When the list of men who have made Ironton is made up, his name will be found near the top of the column.

James Kilbourne

was born in Columbus, Ohio, October 9, 1841. He comes of a family noted for its patriotism and good citizenship. His grandfather, Col. James Kilbourne, was one of Ohio's earliest pioneers, and the first to represent his county in Congress. His father, Lincoln Kilbourne, was the leading merchant of Columbus.

James Kilbourne graduated with high honors at Kenyon College in 1862, and two years later received the degree of Master of Arts. The day after he passed his examination, he enlisted as a Private in the Eighty-Fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, was transferred to the Ninety-Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served with distinction from the beginning to the end of the war, being promoted through the various grades to that of Captain, and being brevetted Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel of the United States Volunteers. During a part of this period Col. Kilbourne served on the staffs of Gen. J. M. Tuttle and Gen. John McArthur. His war record is one of great gallantry. After the close of the war Col. Kilbourne entered the law school of Harvard University, where he graduated in 1868. He was admitted to the bar, but his health having been undermined by his army service he decided on the advice of his physician to take up a more active occupation than law, and entered business with his father.

A few years later he founded the Kilbourne & Jacobs Manufacturing Co., the largest corporation of its kind in the world, and of which he became President and General Manager. He was the Director, and in 1895 was President of the Board of Trade of Columbus. He has been a Director of the Columbus Club and four times its President. He was also one of the earliest Presidents of the Arlington Country Club. He is a Director of the First National Bank, of the Clinton National Bank, of the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo and of the Columbus, Cincinnati & Midland Railways, and of many private business corporations and political and social organizations. For many years he has been President of the Board of Trustees of the Columbus Public Library and largely instrumental in the growth of that institution. He is the President of the Kenyon College Association of Central Ohio, and also President of the Central Ohio Harvard Club. He is a life member of the Ohio Archaeological Society and Vice-President of the Old Northwestern Genealogical Society. His fondness for children and his sympathy for them led him to construct the Columbus Children's Hospital, of which he was President for five years. He is the Vice-President of the Columbus Neighborhood Guild Association, and a member of the Board of Managers of the Associated Charities of Columbus.

As an eloquent, persuasive speaker, Col. Kilbourne is called upon by his party to address the people and has often been urged to serve as a candidate for Mayor, Governor, Congressman and Senator. He was a delegate from the Twelfth Ohio Congressional District to the Democratic National Convention in 1892, and in 1896, and at the Ohio Democratic State Convention, receiving 237 votes for nomination for Governor. He was delegated at large from Ohio to the National Democratic Convention at Kansas city in 1900 and Chairman of the Ohio delegation. He was appointed by Governor Campbell, one of the Commissioners of Ohio, to the Columbus Exposition at Chicago, but was compelled to decline from the stress of business cares. Besides being a member of the Grand Army, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Union Veteran Legion and the Loyal Legion, Col. Kilbourne is the Vice-President of the society of the Army of the Tennessee. At his home also was organized the Columbus Cuban League, which accomplished much in aid of the people of that island. Since its organization, he has been Trustee of the League. When the Spanish-American war broke out, his services were tendered immediately to the Government, and the loyalty of his family was further attested by the offer of three of his sons. Of the sons and grandsons of Col. Kilbourne's father, ten offered their service and seven were in the army, all but one, seeing active foreign service.

Col. Kilbourne is one of the largest employers of labor in Ohio, and his relation with his employees have always been ideal. Neither against him nor the Company managed by him has there ever been brought a suit at law, and never have the wages of any man employed by him been reduced. In 1898, he was appointed a member of the Ohio Centennial Commission, and although the majority of the Commission were republicans, he was by a unanimous vote elected President. He attends the Protestant Episcopal Church and is a Vestryman of St. Pauls. Col. Kilbourne was married October 5, 1869 to Anna B. Wright, eldest daughter of Gen. George B. Wright, and has four children, three sons and one daughter.

John Metz Lawson

was born June 25, 1859, in Greenup county, Kentucky. His father was Jacob Lawson, and his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Rawlins, daughter of John Vanbebbe Rawlins. His grandfather was Thomas Lawson. John M. was reared in Greenup county, Kentucky, near Portsmouth and lived there all his life. He is a farmer by occupation. November 18, 1882, he married Mary H. Gammon, daughter of John Gammon. They have six children: Elmer T., Denver R. G., Ettie, Howard, Grace, and Merle. Mr. Lawson is a democrat, a member of the Southern Methodist church, a member of the Modern Woodmen, Springville Camp.

Hon. Ralph Leete

was born January 12, in Tioga county, Pennsylvania. His lineage is given under the Leete family in the Pioneer Record of this work. His education was in a subscription school first, and then in the public schools in New York, across the line from Pennsylvania. The family fortunes were lost by the father by endorsements for others, and Mr. Leete's father had to begin the world over. Our subject left Potter county, Pa. in 1840 and went to Erie county, Pa. and from there he went to Austinburg, Ashtabula county, Ohio and remained there at a Manual Training School till 1842. In the winter of 1842 and 1843, he taught school at Jersey Shore, Pa. He came down the Ohio in a skiff in 1843 and landed at Louisville, Kentucky. There George D. Prentice, to whom he had letters, sent him back to Ohio. He went to Buckhorn Furnace and taught school. In 1846 he taught at Vernon and then taught at Burlington nearly a year. He was admitted to the bar in February, 1847, at Pomeroy, Ohio and began practicing at Burlington, Ohio, in 1848.

On November 28, 1848, he was married to Miss Harriet E. Hand of Grantham, England, a daughter of William Thomas Hand. He resided at Burlington until 1852, when he removed to Ironton, Ohio. He was Prosecuting Attorney of Lawrence county, Ohio, from 1849 to 1853 and a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1858-1859 and 1868-1869. He was a Trustee of the Ohio State University from 1872 to 1879 and at one time President of the Board. He was originally a "free-soil" democrat. He voted for Polk in 1844, for Van Buren in 1848, for Pierce in 1852, for Buchanan in 1856, for McClellan in 1864, for Seymour in 1868, and in 1872 for Greeley. He was Secretary of the Military Committee of Lawrence county, Ohio, during the Civil War. His wife died July 14, 1879. He remarried November 20, 1880 to Jane Wilmot Bancroft of Wisconsin. She died October 16, 1894. His children are: William Hand Leete, of Lima, Ohio; Edith Ives Hamilton, wife of John Hamilton of Ironton, Ohio; Fred Guilford Leete of Ironton, Ohio; Ralph Herman Leete of Prestonsburg, Floyd county, Kentucky.

Hon. William T. McClintick was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, February 20, 1819. His father was James McClintick, Sr. and his mother was Charity Trimble.

Our subject was educated at the Chillicothe Academy until his fourteenth year. He was then sent to the Ohio University, and from there he went to Augusta College, Kentucky, where he graduated in the summer of 1837. In November of the same year, he entered the law office of Creighton & Bond, a distinguished law firm of his native town. In 1840, at the February term of the old Supreme Court held in Portsmouth, he was admitted to the bar. Theodore Sherer was admitted at the same time. They returned to Chillicothe together and were called into a case then called for trial wherein Wm. S. Murphy and Judge Thurman were opposing counsel, and from that time until Mr. McClintock retired in March, 1890, he has been steadily engaged in his profession.

In 1843, he joined the law firm of Creighton & Green, of Chillicothe and continued with them for one year.

On October 1, 1845, Mr. McClintick was married to Miss Elizabeth M. Atwood, of Harrodsburgh, Ky. Six children were born to them, two of whom survive: Petrea, resides at home with her parents; Anna, wife of Edward W. Strong, an attorney of Cincinnati, Ohio; Elizabeth Atwood married Charles L. Prun, of Albany, New York, in the year 1877. She died in 1884, leaving two daughters now living and unmarried; Elizabeth McClintock and Jane Ann Lansing.

In 1852, he took into partnership Mr. Amos Smith, a nephew and former pupil of Hocking H. Hunter, of Lancaster. This firm continued until July 26, 1888, when it was dissolved. The firm held the most prominent position in the profession in Southern Ohio.

In politics, Mr. McClintick was a whig while that party was in existence, and when the Republican party was organized, he went into that. In 1860, he became general counsel for the Marietta & Cincinnati Railroad Company as re-organized and continued to act as such for that Company and its successors, until his retirement from the bar in 1890. He was president of the Cincinnati & Baltimore Railroad Company in 1868 and remained in that office until 1883 when it was succeeded by the Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore Railroad Company, and he held the office of president from 1876 to 1879.

Mr. McClintick is regarded among his professional brethren as one of the ablest lawyers who ever practiced in Southern Ohio.

Mr. McClintick published in this year 1902, a small volume of poems of which he is the author. They were composed at different times between 1840 and 1902, a period of sixty-two years. The work was only published for private circulation, among his friends, and the volume is gracefully dedicated to his wife to whom he has been married for over sixty-six years. There are fifty-one poems, all of which but one, were composed by himself. The first, "A Winter Scene" was written in Chillicothe in January, 1840. Then his muse was silent till October, 1856, when it produced "Autumn." In 1876, he became a summer poet, and composed "Summer Friends at the Ocean side" at Atlantic City. In August, 1879, he wrote "Lake George" at that famous place. From that time on, most of his poems were composed in his vacations, at well known summer resorts, in the Virginia Mountains, on the Atlantic Coast and along the Great Lakes. Mr. McClintick never did anything in his life, but he did it well. He is a scholar and has always been a student and will be all his life. He was successful as a lawyer and business manager and his efforts on the poetic field is not an exception. Most of his later effusions have been penned at Harbor Point, Michigan. The writer undertook to select a gem of the collection, but they are all so replete with excellences that he could not do it.

Mr. McClintick could not pen an uninteresting thought and the "verses" as he modestly calls them teem with admirable sentiment. Most of them, written in inspiring surroundings breathe the thoughts suggested by the beauties and grandeurs of Nature before the eyes of the poet at the time. Mr. McClintick's friends were at all times endeared to him, but the publication of the verses has given those who admired him for his learning and scholarship, another and stronger claim to their affection. The poetry of his soul has been revealed to them and they now know that their friend heretofore regarded by them as a learned lawyer and a scholar, is a poet as well and has touched their heart strings by the pathos and harmony of his verses.

was born in 1844, the son of William R. McMillin, of Buckeye furnace, Jackson county, Ohio. He was one of a family of fourteen children, of whom six were sons. He was next to the youngest son and was brought up in the vicinity of the furnace. He attended the public schools until he was ten years of age, when he began life on his own account, in working at the furnace. He was always energetic, studious and earnest. He never wasted any of his time, or his physical or mental capital, as a boy, and thought out all matters for himself, and that habit has followed him all his life. As soon as he was able to reason on political matters he worked it out in his own mind that the Republican party was one of correct principles and he became a republican, though at the time of the announcement of his political views as a boy, the family traditions would have led him into the Democratic party, but he adopted the republican faith as a boy.

When the Civil war broke out, he felt it his duty to offer his services to his country, and did so. He enlisted in Company I, 18th O. V. I., in the Three Months' Service, May 6, 1861, and served until August 28, 1861. He gave his age as 18, when in fact he was a year younger. His brother, Murray, next older than himself, enlisted in the same regiment and served with him. On the 1st day of September, 1861, three days after he was discharged from this regiment, he enlisted again in Co. H, 2d West Virginia Cavalry.

His two brothers, Andrew and Murray enlisted in the same company and regiment at the same time he did. Later in the war, two other brothers Milton and Harvey volunteered in the same regiment and when Marion, the youngest, was old enough he enlisted in Co. H, 2nd West Virginia Cavalry, December 1, 1863, and was killed June 23, 1864, by an explosion of a caisson at Cove Gap, Virginia.

Our subject was a fine soldier. He tabooed the use of intoxicating liquors in the service. He could always be depended upon for any duty or service, and the word "fear" was not in his vocabulary. He was made a corporal in his company and afterwards sergeant. He was transferred from Co. H, November 23, 1864, to Company C. He was promoted to Second Lieutenant, December 1, 1864, and appointed Regimental Quartermaster. He served until June 30, 1865. Lieutenant McMillin was wounded near Hagerstown, Maryland, in the fall of 1864. His regiment participated in the Grand Review at Washington, at the close of the war.

Soon after the war, he and Captain Coleman Gillman, of Portsmouth, Ohio, undertook the conducting of a country store, in Gallia county, but the adventure was not a success. He tried the vocation of a commercial salesman but found it was not his forte. He turned his attention to the chemistry of gas and that was the alchemy of his fortune. He was untiring in the study of the methods of manufacturing gas and made himself familiar with the entire business from start to finish. Mr. McMillin is a born organizer and has unmeasurable executive ability. Within the scope of this work, it is impossible to give a sketch of his wonderful career. The people of Southern Ohio remember best his early history and in view of his remarkable record as a youthful patriot, they have always taken a deep interest in his subsequent career. There is no one doing business in New York city in whom more interest is taken in Southern Ohio than the subject of this sketch. He is now a member of the firm of Emerson McMillin & Co., bankers of No. 40 Wall street, New York. This firm is composed of himself and Henry B. Wilson, formerly of Ironton, Ohio. He and Mr. Wilson are among the leading business men of the city of New York. Mr. McMillin is known for his daring and courage in business matters, and for his wonderful insight in commercial affairs. His success has been phenomenal, and all his old friends and especially his soldier friends in Southern Ohio, are proud of his career.

John Means

the eldest son and child of the late Thomas Williamson Means, was born September 21, 1829 at West Union, Adams county, Ohio. His mother was Sarah Ellison, a daughter of John Ellison, Jr. of Buckeye Station. He was named John for his grandfathers, Col. John Means and John Ellison, each of whom were, at different times, members of the legislature from Adams county. At the time of his birth, his father was carrying on a merchandising business in West Union. John Means spent his boyhood at Hanging Rock, and at school at Athens and Marietta, Ohio. He attended the College at Marietta, Ohio, but did not graduate. He left Marietta College in 1848 and soon after became the store-keeper at Ohio Furnace, in Scioto county, then owned by his father and David Sinton. He was afterwards book-keeper for the same furnace. In 1851, he went to Buena Vista Furnace, first as book-keeper and then as manager. In 1855, he removed to Catlettsburg, Kentucky, and in 1857, to Ashland, Kentucky, where he has since resided.

In 1856, he became one of the charterers of the Portsmouth, Big Sandy & Pomeroy Packet Co., better known as the White Collar Line. In 1856, he became a director of the Kentucky Iron, Coal and Manufacturing Company organized to build up the city of Ashland. In the same year he was one of the founders of the Bank of Ashland, which in 1872 became the Ashland National Bank of which he is now the president. In 1856, he was elected one of the trustees of the town of Ashland and continued as such, and as Councilman, for a period of thirty consecutive years. In 1872, he was appointed by the Governor of Kentucky as one of the five commissioners to memorialize Congress to improve the navigation of the Ohio river. Seven other states had similar Boards of five persons for the same object. He was one of the organizers of the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad, Eastern Division, now known as the Ashland Coal & Iron Railway Company. He was one of the firm of Means, Kyle & Company at Hanging Rock, Ohio, owning Ohio, Union and Pine Grove furnaces. In 1873, he took part in organizing the Low Moor Iron Company of Virginia. For some years, he was a director in the Norton Iron Works at Ashland, Ky. He was its treasurer in 1872.

In 1874, he was the Republican candidate for Congress in the Tenth Kentucky District. He has always been a liberal patron of all educational projects and a prominent advocate and supporter of the common school system of the country. While not a member of any church, he has been a liberal supporter of those about him.

He was married first to Harriet E. Perkins, of Marietta, Ohio, October 25, 1834. The children of that marriage are: Thomas Hildreth and Harold of Ashland, Kentucky; Ellison Cooke, of Low Moor, Virginia; Eliza Isabella, wife of W. B. Seaton, of Ashland, Kentucky; Lilian, wife of W. E. Maynard, of Brooklyn, New York and Rosalie, wife of Dr. E. L. Bullard, of Mendota, Wisconsin. Mr. Mean's wife died March 13, 1895, and he was married a second time to Miss Mary P. Seaton, June 3, 1896, daughter of Samuel Seaton, of Greenup, Kentucky.

Col. Douglas Putnam says as follows of Mr. Means: "No man stands higher in his community and wherever he is known, as an all round, reliable man, who can always be depended upon. He is a man of strong opinions and he has always been found upon the side of right and justice. As a citizen, his impress has been felt in his home town in a most vigorous manner. He is a strong believer in education and has made his faith manifest by works, in a late donation of an eligible site, on which has just been erected a large, commodious building for the use of the colored children of the town. His labors, years ago, in laying off and platting the beautiful cemetery of Ashland will be remembered long after he has been laid to rest there. To a friend remonstrating against his labor and exposure in doing this work, his reply was, 'I want to leave something by which I may be remembered when I am gone.' As a public official, his record is one worthy of emulation. In these days, especially, when men shrink from serving on the town councils and other municipal bodies, on account of the sacrifice of time necessary, and the criticism that they will incur. Mr. Means served faithfully for a long term of years, in his town council and his place was never vacant, unless absent from the city, or prevented by illness. No man has a better record as a business man. He is broad in his views, far reaching in his plans, and comprehensive in his decisions. His advice in business and other matters has been of great value and his undertakings crowned with success. He is calm in hours of panic or disappointment and is never unduly elated in times of prosperity, a most admirable equipoise. All his transactions are governed by a just consideration of the rights of others."

Anderson Miller

was born at Millersport, Lawrence county, Ohio, March 12, 1831. His father Robert Miller, was born at the same place. His grandfather, Joseph, came from the South Branch of the Potomac, in Virginia. He was one of the first settlers at Millersport, in Lawrence county. They came to Lawrence county in about 1795. Our subject had four brothers and two sisters. He grew up in Millersport, and went to school but three months. He started at the age of sixteen, and with but twenty-five cents capital, engaged in farming and has been a farmer all his life. He owns a part of the farm which was owned by his great-grandfather.

He married Elizabeth Michline, daughter of Jacob Michline, a blacksmith and gunsmith, and a native of Lewis county, Virginia, in February, 1852. He established the family altar in his household when he was first married and has kept it up ever since. He makes this the chief duty of the day and all else is subordinated to it. No matter how busy a time it might be all employes are called into family worship. They had nine children, five sons and four daughters as follows: Anna, wife of Milton Watson of Labelle, Ohio; Louis W., a Methodist minister, now stationed at Hilliard, Ohio, in the Ohio Conference; Jane, married Robert Eaton, residing at Proctorsville, Ohio; Augusta married James O. Gillett and now resides at Labelle, Ohio; Robert Benton, Attorney of Ironton, Ohio; Rev. William H., a Methodist minister stationed at Portsmouth, Ohio, from 1898 to 1901; Ida married B. F. McConn, living near Proctorsville, Ohio; Kenton, a lawyer in Ironton, Ohio and Cecil See, a lawyer in Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mr. Miller always regretted his want of suitable education and resolved that his sons should not be deprived of that benefit. He sent all five of them to the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio and all graduated there. He did this on the income of a small farm in Lawrence county, Ohio. All his sons and daughters are now living and in good health. He also educated one of the daughters at the Ohio Wesleyan University and gave each one of the others a common school education. He has twenty-one grand children and six deceased. He was a County Commissioner of Lawrence county from 1881 to 1884. He has always been a republican and has been a member of the Methodist Church for forty-five years and also a member of the Official Board of his particular Church all that time. He never was in debt and all his property has always been kept clear. He is a man noted for his charitable and cheerful disposition. He is never idle but always busy; and he gives the most minute attention to all details of his affairs. A man in moderate circumstances like him, who could give five sons a complete education, and have two of them honored and influential ministers and three successful lawyers, deserves to be remembered by posterity.

Robert Benton Miller

was born January 22, 1859 at Millersport, Lawrence county, Ohio. His father was Anderson Miller, who has a sketch herein. He attended the public schools at Millersport until he was twenty years of age. He then went to the Ohio Wesleyan University and graduated there in the classical course in 1884. He studied law in Cincinnati Law School and one year under Mr. Julius Anderson. He was admitted to the bar in October, 1886, and located in Ironton. He remained as a partner with his preceptor one year, then was alone in the law business until 1896, when his brother Kenton went in the partnership with him and the firm assumed the name of Miller & Miller. He was City Solicitor of Ironton from 1889 to 1892. He was Prosecuting Attorney of Lawrence county, Ohio, for one term from 1894 to 1900; and those who know him say that he was one of the ablest men who ever filled the office.

He was married May 4, 1887 to Miss Birdie E. Wilson, daughter of John E. Wilson of Burlington, Ohio. They have four children: Evelyn Gay, aged twelve; Bernard, aged ten; Ruby aged eight and Robert aged six. Mr. Miller is one of the able and forceful members of the bar of Lawrence county. All he does is characterized by earnestness and purpose. He does all his work well and thoroughly. He deserves the success he has achieved and will succeed still further. Such men as he are a power in the community of which he is a part.

Moses Morgan

was born in Jefferson township, Jackson county, Ohio, in September, 1840. His father was Daniel Morgan, a native of Aberystwyth, Wales, and his mother was Catharine Morgan. His parents emigrated to the United States in 1837, having spent ninety days crossing the Atlantic. They settled at Pomeroy, Ohio. His father worked in V. B. Horton's coal mines two years and moved to Jackson county in 1839. From there they moved to Hewitt's Fork, where his father farmed and where both died. They had five children of whom our subject is the eldest.

Moses attended the common schools in the winter, and worked on the farm during the summer. In 1856, he entered the Ohio University at Athens and attended there for two terms, when he became qualified to teach the common school and beginning in 1857 he taught four consecutive years in Scioto county and one year in Jackson county. In 1864, he was store-keeper at Jackson furnace. He enlisted on August 12, 1864 in the 173rd O. V. I. and served as Sergeant Major of the Regiment till December when he was promoted to Second Lieutenant and assigned to Company K. He was mustered out with the regiment in July, 1865. For the next three years, he remained on the farm, teaching in the winter. He then left farming for teaching and taught in Jackson and Lawrence counties.

In 1870, he became book-keeper at Jackson furnace and served one month, when he was elected Manager, which position he held till February, 1872. He then became manager and agent of the Hope Manufacturing Company, at Mason City, West Virginia. He remained with this company for six years, during which time he married Miss Martha L. Jared, daughter of Lemuel Jared, September 29, 1875. In 1878, he became interested in developing coal in Jackson county, and has continued in that. He is also interested in the Iron Furnace and the Fire Brick Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Morgan had five children: Lemuel, who died in childhood; Daniel F., who was educated at the Wooster University at Case School of Applied Science and is chemist of the Star Furnace Company; James W., who was educated at Wooster University and is vice-president and secretary of the Hitt Frisbee Coal Company, at Toledo, Ohio; Katherine, who died in Childhood; and Sarah E. The latter is attending the public schools at Jackson, Ohio. Mr. Morgan is a republican, and a ruling elder of the Presbyterian church.

Colonel Douglas Putnam

was born August 21, 1838, at Marietta, Ohio. His father was Douglas Putnam and his mother Mary Ann Hildreth, daughter of Doctor S. P. Hildreth. His grandfather was David Putnam and great-grandfather Israel and his great-great-grandfather was General Israel Putnam of the Revolutionary War.

He graduated at Marietta College in 1859, and went in to the grocery business in Cincinnati, Ohio, with E. T. Baker. In 1861, he left that and went in the Commissary in the State Service, and in the fall of 1861 became a Paymaster's clerk. At the battle of Shiloh, he was a volunteer aide of General Grant. He entered the military service in the 92nd O. V. I., July 25, 1862, and was made Adjutant. He was promoted to Major, February 1, 1863, at the request of all the Captains of the regiment. He was made Lieutenant Colonel March 22, 1863. He was wounded September 20, 1863 at Chickamauga by a ball which cut out the fleshy part of his leg. He was also wounded three times at Mission Ridge, Tennessee, while going up the hill, and was disabled permanently, so that he was on crutches for one year thereafter from the wounds. He resigned April 11, 1864 because he was unfitted for further service.

After leaving the army, he went to Hope furnace, Vinton county, Ohio, and was manager there until the spring of 1869, when he went to Ashland, Kentucky, where he has been manager of the furnace department of the Ashland Coal & Iron Company ever since. He has been president of that company since 1890. He has been president of the Merchant's National Bank, of Ashland, Kentucky, since September, 1901. The Ashland Iron & Mining Company was organized in October, 1901 and succeeded the manufacturing departments of the Ashland Coal & Iron Company. He has been president of the former since its organization. He is a member of the Cincinnati Commandery of the Loyal Legion, Society of the Army of the Cumberland and also of the Sons of the Revolution of Cincinnati, Ohio. He has been a member of the Presbyterian church and an elder since 1869. For fifteen years he has been a member of the Board of Education and he was a member of the City Council for fifteen years.

He was married January 12, 1864, to Miss Valonia Reppert, daughter of Louis Reppert, of Marietta, Ohio. She died in April, 1900. He has two sons: Lewis R., treasurer of the Ashland Steel Company and secretary of the Ashland Sheet Company; Douglas Gaylord, general superintendent of the Ashland Coal & Iron railroad and general manager of the Mining Company. A friend who knows Mr. Putnam long and well says, "He is a careful reader and good thinker, always an entertaining and agreeable companion. He has always taken great interest in the welfare and advancement of the community wherein he lived as shown by his holding the municipal offices heretofore mentioned, in both of which he was active and influential. He is always earnest and conscientious, holding advanced ideas on any subject he considers. He is diligent, methodical and careful in business, of the strictest integrity, honorable in his dealings and highly respected by all who know him."

George Claypool Rittenour

was born in Ross county, Ohio, March 11, 1825. His father was Jacob Rittenour, born February 15, 1787, in Frederick county, Virginia, and his mother's maiden name was Ann Claypool. His grandfather, Abraham Claypool was from Rockingham county, Virginia. His grandfather, Anthony and his great-grandfather John Rittenour were both of Frederick county, Virginia. John Rittenour emigrated from Germany. Anthony Rittenour settled in Ross county, Ohio, in 1800. He died in 1835, in his eighty-third year. He was a devout and pious Methodist, as was his son, Jacob, who connected with the church at the age of fourteen. He married Ann Claypool, April 3, 1812. He died October 13, 1882 at the age of ninety-five years and eight months. His father located in the Northwest Territory in 1800. Abraham Claypool was a member of the first State Senate, which convened in Ohio, from Ross county. He was also a member of the Senate from Ross county and Franklin also, in the second and third Legislature, 1803 to 1805. He was a member of the Senate at the fifth and sixth Legislative Sessions in 1806 to 1808 representing Ross, Franklin and Highland counties. He was also a member of the House of Representatives from Ross county, at the ninth Legislative Session, in 1810 and 1811.

Jacob Rittenour had four children, of whom James, born May 23, 1813, married Ellen Hempstead, the first time, and George Pancake's widow, the secand time; Margaret, never married; Isaac N., born July 3, 1818, married Sarah Ore; and George C., above. The latter had a common school education and at the age of twenty-two went to selling goods at Richmondale. He sold goods there for three years and then he and his father established a hardware store in Chillicothe, Ohio, and carried on that business, but at the same time George was conducting a farm. He married Elizabeth Sargent, the daughter of Thornton W. Sargent, a Pike county farmer, September 1, 1857. He has had three sons: Thornton Sargent Rittenour, born May 31, 1859, at Richmondale, who was brought up a farmer. He located in Piketon in 1885 on the old Judge Reed place consisting of 700 acres. He married Jennie Norton, daughter of John W. Higby, a nephew to S. N. Higby, and has one son, George Willey, aged sixteen. He is a republican and a member of the Methodist church. James Milton Rittenour was born at Richmondale, October 30, 1861. He married Alberta Norton, who resided near Richmond, Virginia; they have one son, two years of age, George Norton. Henry Francis was born August 8, 1865. He married Eliza Alice De Bolce of Ross county. They have one son five years of age, Everett Francis. They reside in Chillicothe, Ohio.

John Henry Sellers

was born June 1, 1856, on a farm one mile north of Greenfield, Ohio. He is a son of John Henry Sellers, Sr., born June 27, 1821 in Delaware county, Ohio. His mother was Julia Ann Wells. She was born December 12, 1824 at Galena, Ohio. He is the fifth of his father's seven children, five sons and two daughters. His brother William H. H. Sellers enlisted in the Civil War in Company H, 27th O. V. I. and died at Corinth, Mississippi, May 18, 1863. At the age of seventeen, our subject entered Denison University, and was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1879. In 1880, he entered the Citizen's Bank of Greenfield, as messenger, and assistant book-keeper and was promoted through the various positions until he was made Cashier in 1884. He held that position until 1886, when he went to Wellston and started the first bank in that place. He became Cashier. On October 11th of the same year, this bank was closed and the First National was organized. Our subject was made Cashier which position he still holds.

On March 4, 1881, he was married to Miss A. A. Wood, of Leesburg, Ohio. They have two children: Julia May, now in her sophomore year in Denison University and John Paul, aged ten. He has been a member of the Baptist church since a young man and superintendent of the Sunday school for almost twenty years. He has been a member of the Royal Arcanum Grand Council for five years, and has held the position of City School Examiner of Wellston for ten years, and Water Works Trustee for three years.

Rodney Metcalf Stimson was born in Milford, New Hampshire, October 26, 1822. His parents, Phineas Stimson and Rhoda Metcalf, were both born in Ashburnham, Worcester county, Massachusetts, and married there in 1816. Both were children of men who were soldiers in the War of the American Revolution. One of his ancestors, Andrew Stimson, was in Boston as early as 1639, only nine years after the first settlement of the New England Metropolis. He was an Englishman. The Metcalf family also were English. His mother died when he was nine years of age. His first school was a private school, which continued several years, kept by Daniel Russell. In 1840, he began reading Latin—Cicero's Orations. He attended Phillips Academy from 1842 to 1845. On September 13, 1845, he came to Ohio, and entered the Junior class, Marietta College. He graduated on July 29, 1847. In the winter of 1841 and 1842 he taught four common schools, three months each, in New Hampshire; in 1845 and 1846 he taught at Belpre, Washington county, Ohio; in 1847 to 1848 he taught in Pike county; in 1849 and 1850, he taught in Scioto county. He also taught a family school on a cotton plantation, Lowndes county, Mississippi, fifteen months, 1848-49.

He read law and was admitted to the bar at Marietta, in October, 1849. On November 1, 1849, he went to Ironton, Lawrence county, and there pettiforged one law case before a Justice of the Peace, and gained the case. August 1, 1850, he founded the Ironton Register. He edited it twelve years but sold out in 1862, and bought the Marietta Intelligencer and the Marietta Home News, combined the two offices, and issued the first number of the Marietta Register, June 30, 1862. He worked hard for ten years, and in 1872, he had to sell the Register, the regret of his life, owing to hemorrhages of the lungs and threatened consumption.

He was married July 23, 1851, to Miss Juliette B. Hurd, in Ironton. She died January 19, 1861, leaving one son, Milford, who died in Cincinnati in 1890. On October 28, 1862, he married Miss Julia I. Sheppard, at Marietta. They had one child, Elizabeth Gillet, who married a Mr. Corwin, who, with her two children, Julia Stimson and Rodney Stimson Corwin, are living with him.

He was a whig candidate for the Ohio State Senate, District of Lawrence, Gallia, Meigs, and Vinton counties in 1853. He was an Ohio delegate to the first National Republican Convention, which nominated John C. Fremont for the President of the United States, at Philadelphia in June, 1856. He was delegate again for the Marietta district to the National Republican Convention at Chicago, June, 1880, which nominated James A. Garfield for President. He was the Ohio member of the Committee on Resolutions. He was delegate from Washington county to the Ohio State Republican Conventions, between 1862 and 1880, for seventeen times, always without opposition, and was the author of the Ohio Republican State Platform, in 1873, adopted unanimously, without the change of a word. He was elected to the Ohio State Senate, in 1869; re-elected in 1871, and in the Ohio General Assembly in 1872, and 1873, declined the chairmanship of the Finance Committee of the Senate because of physical inability, a position tendered to him without his knowledge or consent. He was Treasurer of the State Republican Committee in the campaigns of 1877 and 1878. He was Presidential Elector of the Marietta District, in 1884.

He was Librarian of the Ohio State Library from 1877 to 1879. He never actively sought any public position. In March, 1881, he became Treasurer and Librarian of Marietta College. He resigned as Librarian in 1892, but still continues as Treasurer. He has been Trustee of Marietta College since 1895. He has given to the College Library his collection of books, Americana, the specialty, and out-of-the-way books, numbering full 20,000 volumes, all in fine condition, only one other collection of the kind equal to it in the Great Mississippi Valley. He is spending the evening of his days in honorable retirement.

Samuel Young Wasson was born November 5, 1841, at Cherry Fork, Adams county, Ohio, the son of Thomas Campbell Wasson and Martha Campbell, his wife. He was reared on his father's farm. He attended the common schools of his district and the North Liberty Academy. He entered Miami University in the fall of 1861, and graduated in 1866. The same summer he went to Gallipolis and he and Captain M. V. B. Kennedy, late of Zanesville, Ohio, purchased the Onderdonk book store and continued the business under the firm name of Wasson & Kennedy. On September 3, 1867, Mr. Wasson was married to Miss Jennie Henderson, of Middletown, Butler county. In 1872, he dissolved partnership with Capt. Kennedy and continued the business alone. In the fall of 1877, he was elected a member of the Ohio House of Representatives from Gallia county, as a republican and served one term. He declined a re-nomination and election, as he had changed his residence to near Middletown, Butler county, where he engaged in farming, and where he continued to reside until 1889, when he removed to Hamilton, Ohio, where he has resided ever since.

He has always been a staunch Presbyterian and was an elder in the church at Gallipolis. On his removal to the city of Hamilton, he and his family connected with the United Presbyterian church in which he is a ruling elder.

Mr. Wasson has a son, Clarence C., a physician in Hamilton, and a daughter, wife of Joseph L. Blair, manager of the Niles Tool Works of Hamilton. Mr. Wasson is fond of reading and study, and keeps abreast of the times. While he would not like to be styled a gentleman of leisure, he has the full command of his own time and devotes himself very largely to work in his church. He is a gentleman of the highest integrity and enjoys the respect and confidence of all who know him. His wife died July 3, 1899. She was a woman of the most estimable character, devoted to her family and good works. Since that time he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Blair.

ADDENDA TO PART IV.

William Quincy Adams

was born July 20, 1827, in Wellsburg, Brooke county, Virginia, where he spent his life until 1854. In that year he located in Cincinnati, and went into the coal business as clerk for A. Buchanan. In 1866, he went into partnership with Mr. Perrine in the same business and continued until 1870. In that year he came to Portsmouth, and went into the fire brick business at Sciotoville with Taylor & Connell. There were two other brick yards there at that time, but in 1873, all were consolidated. In 1877, Mr. Adams withdrew from the firm and engaged in other business, gold hunting, but that was unsuccessful, and in 1879, he went to Logan and started the Hocking Valley Fire Brick Works. In 1881, he returned to Portsmouth and erected The Portsmouth Fire Brick Works.

He was married to Julia A. Connell, a sister of Daniel F. Connell, at Wellsville, Ohio, November 20, 1849. They have four children living: James P., Samuel C., Mrs. Thomas W. Kinney and Mrs. H. C. Turley. In 1885, Mr. Adams was elected a councilman from the Sixth Ward, in the city of Portsmouth, the only public office he ever held. He took a great interest in the welfare of every community in which he resided, and particularly in the city of Portsmouth. He favored every enterprise which was for the public good. He was admired and liked for his social qualities. In his political views, he was originally a democrat, but afterwards a republican. He was a Knight Templar Mason. He died November 12, 1892, of neuralgia of the heart, and his death was a public loss.

Albert Knittel

was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1836. His father was George Edward Knittel. His parents died in Germany. He attended school in Germany until he was fifteen years of age. He came to the United States in 1851, and located in Cincinnati. There he learned the trade of a baker and confectioner with his brother, Anton Knittel. In 1860, he located in Lexington, Kentucky. From July 24, 1861, until October 23, 1862, he served as a member of the Regimental Band of the 28th O. V. I. On his leaving the army, he came to Portsmouth and engaged in temporary work for a few months. He then opened a bakery on the north-west corner of Court and Fourth streets and conducted a prosperous business until April 8, 1883, when he purchased the McDowell family residence at number 63 West Second street, and changed it into a bakery and confectionery, which he conducted with success until his death. The same business has been continued by his family. In 1862, he married Miss Josephine Sutter. There were six children of this marriage: Edward, Frank, Mrs. Frank Graf, Albert, Mary and Rosa. In his political views he was a republican. He was a communicant of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church.

In the summer of 1894, he took a trip to his childhood home in Germany. He returned just five weeks prior to his death, which occurred September 28, 1894, of dropsy of the heart. Mr. Knittel was a model citizen, much devoted to his family. His tastes were quiet and he enjoyed the society of his intimate friends more than any other pleasure. He was a valuable member of the community and devoted himself exclusively to his business.

William Francis Lawson

was born June 3, 1830. He was the son of Manasseh Lawson, and the grandson of William Lawson, one of the pioneers of Portsmouth, who has a sketch on page 762 of this work. He was reared and lived his entire life in Portsmouth, and the real estate he owned and of which he died seized was a part of his grandfather's entry of 454 acres, made in 1801. Mr. Lawson was always a farmer. He was an honorable, conscientious man and his life in all respects was peaceful and quiet. In 1853, he was married to Abigail Burke, who survived him. His children were: Mrs. Della Allen, of Green township; Mrs. Addie Watkins, of Portsmouth, widow of George L. Watkins; Burke Lawson, of Yorktown; Ernest and Floyd, who live at the old homestead; and Mrs. Lulu Gammon, of Ashland, Ky. Mr. Lawson died on the 23rd day of October, 1901, respected by all who knew him.

(1800)

Samuel Groff Miller

was born January 24, 1841, in Columbiana county, Ohio. His father was Samuel Miller and his mother's maiden name was Eunice Peckham. His father was a native of Jefferson county and his mother of Columbiana. He was the fifth of six children. When he was six years old, his father moved to Flat Woods in Jefferson township, Scioto county, Ohio, where he died in 1857. Our subject enlisted July 30, 1862 in Company C, 91 O. V. I. and served until July 24, 1865. After the war, he returned to his home in Jefferson township. On November 22, 1865, he was married to Margaret J. Meek, daughter of Peter Meek. In 1871, he removed to the Gibson place in Pike county, where he remained until 1877. In 1878, he returned to Scioto county. In 1881, he came to Portsmouth and for ten years was an operative in the Johnson Hub & Spoke Factory. Since 1891, he has been engaged in the dairy business. He has a son Charles who conducts a dairy farm on the John Miller Salladay place on the Chillicothe Pike. He has a son, Edward and a daughter Mary, both grown up, at home. He is a member of the Manley M. E. church and is a republican. In all things and at all times he has been a good citizen, self respecting and respected by all his neighbors.
